Tal. Be not dismay'd, fair lady; nor misconstrue
The mind of Talbot as you did mistake
The outward composition of his body.
What you have done hath not offended me;
No other satisfaction do I crave,
But only, with your patience, that we may Taste of your wine and see what cates you have;
For soldiers' stomachs always serve them well.

Count. With all my heart, and think me honoured
To feast so great a warrior in my house.

Exeunt.
argument you held was wrong in you;
whereof I pluck a white rose too.

m. Now, Somerset, where is your argument?

n. Here in my scabbard; meditating that dye your white rose in a bloody red.

m. Meantime your cheeks do counterfeit our roses;
and they look with fear, as witnessing truth on our side.

n. No, Plantagenet, not for fear but anger that thy cheeks
for pure shame to counterfeit our roses, yet thy tongue will not confess thy error.

m. Hath not thy rose a canker, Somerset?

n. Hath not thy rose a thorn, Plantagenet?

m. Ay, sharp and piercing, to maintain his truth;

n. Yet thy consuming canker eats his falsehood.

m. Well, I'll find friends to wear my bleeding roses,
shall maintain what I have said is true,
false Plantagenet dare not be seen.

n. Now, by this maiden blossom in my hand, my thee and thy faction, peevish boy.

m. Turn not thy scorns this way, Plantagenet.

n. Prond Pole, I will, and sorn both him and and thee.

m. I'll turn my part thereof into thy throat.

n. Away, away! good William de la Pole:
grace the yeoman by conversing with him.

m. Now, by God's will, thou wrong'st him, Somerset:

n. grandfather was Lionel, Duke of Clarence,
d son to the third Edward, King of England.

m. A crestless yeoman from so deep a root!

n. He bears him on the place's privilege, not for, not his craven heart, say thus.

m. By him that made me, I'll maintain my words

my plot of ground in Christendom.

n. not thy father, Richard, Earl of Cambridge, treason executed in our late king's days!
by his treason stand'st thou attained, attain'd, and exempted from ancient gentry!
I trespass yet lives guilty in thy blood;
I till thou be restor'd, thou art a yeoman.

m. My father was attached, not attain'd, leant'd to die for treason, but no traitor;
that I'll prove on better men than Somerset, according time once riper'd to my will.

n. your partaker Pole and you yourself,
note you in my book of memory;
courage you for this apprehension:
't is to it well and say you are well warn'd.

m. Ah, thou shalt find us ready for thee still, know us by these colours for thy foes;
shoot my friends in spite of thee shall wear.

n. And, by my soul, this pale and angry rose, ignorance of my blood-drinking hate,
I for ever and my faction wear,
it wither with me to my grave flourish to the height of my degree.

m. Go forward, and be chok'd with thy ambition:

n. farewell until I meet thee next.

m. Have with thee, Pole. Farewell, ambitious Richard.

n. How I am brav'd and must perforce endure it!

War. This blot that they object against your house

shall be wip'd out in the next parliament, Call'd for the truce of Winchester and Gloucester;
and if thou be not then created York,
I will not live to be accounted Warwick.

m. Meantime, in signal of my love to thee,
Against proud Somerset and William Pole,
Will I upon thy party wear this rose.

n. And here I prophesy: this brawl to-day,
Grown to this faction in the Temple garden,
Shall send between the red rose and the white
A thousand souls to death and deadly night.

m. Plan. Good Master Vernon, I am bound to you,
That you on my behalf would pluck a flower,
Ver. In your behalf still will I wear the same.

n. Law. And so will I.

m. Plan. Thanks, gentle sir.

Come, let us four to dinner: I dare say
This quarrel will drink blood another day.

SCENE V.—The Tower of London.

Enter Mortimer, brought in a chair by two Gaolers.

m. Kind keepers of my weak decaying age,
Let dying Mortimer here rest himself.

n. Even like a man now haled from the rack,
So fare my limbs with long imprisonment;
And these grey locks, the pursuivants of death,
Nestor-like aged in an age of care,

m. Arunge the end of Edmund Mortimer.

These eyes, like lamps whose wasting oil is spent,
Wax dim, as drawing to their exigent;
Weak shoulders, overthrown with burdening grief,
And pithless arms, like to a wither'd vine
That droops his sapless branches to the ground:
Yet are these feet, whose strengthless stay is numb.

n. Unable to support this lump of clay,
Swift-winged with desire to get a grave,
As witting I no other comfort have.

m. But tell me, keeper, will my nephew come?

n. First Gaol. Richard Plantagenet, my lord, will come:

we sent unto the temple, unto his chamber,
And answer was return'd that he will come.

m. Mor. Enough; my soul shall then be satisfied.

n. Poor gentleman! his wrong doth equal mine.

m. Since Henry Mowmouth first began to reign,
Before whose glory I was great in arms,
This leathern sequestration have I had:
And even since then hath Richard been obscur'd, Depriv'd of honour and inheritance:

n. But now the arbitrator of despair.

m. Just death, kind umpire of men's miseries,
With sweet enlargement doth dismiss me hence:
I would his troubles likewise were expir'd,
That so he might recover what was lost.

Enter Richard Plantagenet.

m. First Gaol. My lord, your loving nephew now is come.

n. Mor. Richard Plantagenet, my friend, is he come?

m. Plan. Ay, noble uncle, thus ignobly n'sd,
Your nephew, late despis'd Richard, comes.

n. Mor. Direct mine arms I may embrace his neck,
And in his bosom spend my latter gasp.

O! tell me when my lips do touch his cheeks,
That I may kindly give one fainting kiss.
And now declare, sweet stem from York's great stock.
Why didst thou say of late thou wert despis'd?

Plan. First, lean thine aged back against mine arm,
And in that case I'll tell thee my disease.
This day, in argument upon a case,
Some words there grew twixt Somerset and me;
Among which terms he us'd his lavish tongue
And did upbraid me with my father's death:
Which obloquy set bars before my tongue,
Else with the like I had requir'd him.
Therefore, good uncle, for my father's sake,
In honour of a true Plantagenet,
And for alliance sake, declare the cause
My father, Earl of Cambridge, lost his head.

Mor. That cause, fair nephew, that imprison'd me,
And hath detain'd me all my flowing youth
Within a loathsome dungeon, there to pine,
Was cursed instrument of his decease.

Plan. Discover more at large what cause that was,
For I am ignorant and cannot guess.

Mor. I will, if that my fading breath permit,
And death approach not ere my tale be done.
Henry the Fourth, grand-father to this king,
Depos'd his nephew Richard, Edward's son,
The first begotten and the lawful heir
Of Edward king, the third of that descent:
During whose reign the Percy's of the north,
Finding his usurpation most unjust,
Endeavour'd my advancement to the throne.
The reason mov'd these war-like lords to this
Was, for that, young King Richard thus remov'd,
Leaving no heir begotten of his body,
I was the next by birth and parentage;
For by my mother I derived am
From Lionel, Duke of Clarence, the third son
To King Edward the Third; whereas he
From John of Gaunt doth bring his pedigree,
Being but fourth of that heroic line.
But mark: as in this hasty great attempt
They laboured to plant the rightful heir,
I lost my liberty and they their lives.
Long after this, when Henry the Fifth,
Succeeding his father Bolingbroke, did reign,
Thy father, Earl of Cambridge, then deriv'd,
From famous Edmund Langley, Duke of York,
Marrying my sister that thy mother was,
Again in pity of my hard distress
Levied an army, weening to redeem
And have install'd me in the diadem;
But, as the rest, so fell that noble earl,
And was behended. Thus the Mortimers,
In whom the title rested, were suppress'd.

Plan. Of which, my lord, your honour is the last.

Mor. True; and thou seest that I no issue have,
And that my fainting words do warrant death.
Thou art my heir; the rest I wish thee gather:
But yet be wary in thy studious care.

Plan. Thy grave admonishments prevail with me:
But yet methinks my father's execution
Was nothing less than bloody tyranny.

Mor. With silence, nephew, be thou politic:
Strong-fixed is the house of Lancaster,
And like a mountain, not to be remov'd.
But now thy uncle is removing hence,
As princes do their courts, when they are clost.
With long continuance in a settled place.

Plan. O, uncle! would some part of my you years
Might but redeem the passage of your age.

Mor. Thou dost then wrong me, as th' slaughterer doth
Which giveth many wounds when one will k
Morrah, not, except thou sorrow for my good;
Only give order for my funeral:
And so farewell; and fair be all thy hopes,
And prosperous be thy life in peace and war.

Plan. And peace, no war, befall thy parti-soul!
In prison hast thou spent a pilgrimage,
And like a hermit overpass'd thy days.
Well, I will lock his counsel in my breast;
And what I do imagine let that rest.
Keepers, convey him hence; and I myself
Will see his burial better than his life.

Exeunt Gaoler, bearing out body of Mortimer.

Here dies the dusky torch of Mortimer.
Chok'd with ambition of the meaner sort:
And for those wrongs, those bitter injuries,
Which Somerset hath offer'd to my house,
I doubt not but with honour to redress;
And therefore haste I to the parliament,
Either to be restored to my blood,
Or make my ill the advantage of my good.

ACT III.

Flourish. Enter King Henry, Exeter, Gloucester, Warwick, Somerset, and Suffolk; the Bishop of Winchester, Richard Plantagenet, and Others. Gloucester offers to put up a bill; Winchester snarls it, and tears it.

Win. Com'st thou with deep premeditated lines,
With written pamphlets studiously devis'd,
Humphrey of Gloucester? if thou canst acco
Or aught intend'st to lay unto my charge,
Do it without invention, suddenly;
As I with sudden and extemporal speech
Purpose to answer what thou canst object.

Glo. Presumptuous priest! this place commands my patience
Or thou should'st find thou hast dishonour'd
Think not, although in writing I preferr'd
The manner of thy vile outrageous crimes,
That therefore I have forg'd, or am not able Verbatim to rehearse the method of my pen:
No, prelate; such is thy audacious wickedne
Thy lewd, pestiferous, and dissententious pranks
As very infants prattle of thy pride.
Thou art a most pernicious usurer,
Froward by nature, enemy to peace;
Lascivious, wanton, more than well besee
A man of thy profession and degree;
And for thy treachery, what's more manifest
In that thou laid'st a trap to take my life,
As well at London-bridge as at the Tower.
And barding themselves in contrary parts
Do yet so fast at one another's pate,
That many have their giddy brains knock'd out:
Our windows are broke down in every street,
And we for fear compell'd to shut our shops.

Enter, skirishing, the Servingmen of Gloucester and Winchester, with bloody pates.

K. Hen. We charge you, on allegiance to ourself,
To hold your slaughter'd hands and keep the peace.
Pray, uncle Gloucester, mitigate this strife.

First Serv. Nay, if we be forbidden stones,
We'll fall to it with our teeth.

Second Serv. Do what ye dare; we are as resolute.

Skirnish again.

Glo. You of my household, leave this peevish broil,
And set this uncustom'd fight aside.

First Serv. My lord, we know your grace to be a man
Just and upright, and, for your royal birth,
Inferior to none but to his majesty;
And ere that we will suffer such a prince,
So kind a father of the commonweal,
To be disgraced by an inhorn mate,
We and our wives and children all will fight,
And have our bodies slaughter'd by thy foes.

Third Serv. Ay, and the very parings of our nails Shall pitch a field when we are dead.

Glo. Stay, stay, I say!
And if you love me, as you say you do,
Let me persuade you to forbear awhile.

K. Hen. O! how this discord doth afflict my soul.
Can you, my lord of Winchester, behold
My sighs and tears and will not once relent?
Who should be pitiful if you be not?
Or who should study to prefer a peace
If holy churchmen take delight in broils?

War. Yield, my lord protector; yield, Winchester;
Except you mean with obstinate repulse
To slay your sovereign and destroy the realm.
You see what mischief and what murder too
Hath been enacted through your enmity:
Then be at peace, except ye thirst for blood.

Win. He shall submit, or I will never yield.

Glo. Compassion on the king commands me stoop;
Or I would see his heart out ere the priest
Should ever get that privilege of me.

War. Behold, my lord of Winchester, the duke
Hath banish'd moody discontented fury,
As by his smooth'd brows it doth appear:
Why look you still so stern and tragical?

Glo. Here, Winchester, I offer thee my hand.

K. Hen. Fie, uncle Beaufort! I have heard you preach
That malice was a great and grievous sin;
And will not you maintain the thing you teach,
But prove a chief offender in the same?

War. Sweet king! the bishop hath a kindly gird.
For shame, my lord of Winchester, relent!
What! shall a child instruct you what to do?
Win. Well, Duke of Gloucester, I will yield to thee;
Love for thy love and hand for hand I give.
Glou. Aside. Ay; but, I fear me, with a hollow heart.
See here, my friends and loving countrymen,
This token serveth for a flag of truce
Betwixt ourselves and all our followers.
So help me God, as I dissemble not!
Win. Aside. So help me God, as I intend it not!
K. Hen. O loving uncle, kind Duke of Gloucester,
How joyful am I made by this contract!
Away, my masters! trouble us no more;
But join in friendship, as your lords have done.
First Serv. Content: I'll to the surgeon's.
Second Serv. And so will I.
Third Serv. And I will see what physic the tavern affords.

Exeunt Mayor, Servingmen, etc.

War. Accept this scroll, most gracious sovereign,
Which in the right of Richard Plantagenet
We do exhibit to your majesty.
Glou. Well urg'd, my Lord of Warwick: for, sweet prince,
An if your grace mark every circumstance,
You have great reason to do Richard right;
Especially for those occasions
At Eltham-place I told your majesty.
K. Hen. And those occasions, uncle, were of force:
Therefore, my loving lords, our pleasure is
That Richard be restored to his blood.
War. Let Richard be restored to his blood;
So shall his father's wrongs be recompens'd.
Win. As will the rest, so willeth Winchester.
K. Hen. If Richard will be true, not that alone,
But all the whole inheritance I give
That doth belong unto the house of York,
From whence you spring by lineal descent.
Plan. Thy humble servant vows obedience
And humble service till the point of death.
K. Hen. Stoop then and set your knee against my foot;
And, in reguardon of that duty done,
I gird thee with the valiant sword of York:
Rise, Richard, like a true Plantagenet,
And rise created princely Duke of York.
Plan. And so thrive Richard as thy foes may fall!
And as my duty springs, so perish they
That preudge one thought against your majesty!
All. Welcome, high prince, the mighty Duke of York!
Glou. Now will it best avail your majesty
To cross the seas and to be crown'd in France.
The presence of a king engenders love
Amongst his subjects and his royal friends,
As it disanimes his enemies.
K. Hen. When Gloucester says the word, King Henry goes;
For friendly counsel cuts off many foes.
Glou. Your ships already are in readiness.
Flourish. Exeunt all but Exeuter.
Exc. Ay, we may marchin England or in France,
Not seeing what is likely to ensue.
This late dissension grown betwixt the peers
FIRST PART OF KING HENRY VI.

Scene II.]

Alarum. Enter Talbot in an excursion.

Ed. France, thou shalt rue this treason with thy tears, Talbot but survive thy treachery.

Enter Excursions. Enter, from the town, Edmond, brought in sick in a chair. Enter Albott and Burgundy without. Then, enter the walls, Joann, Pucelle, Charles, Bastard of Orleans, Alençon, Reignier, and Others.

Can. Good morrow, gallants! Want ye corn for bread? Ink the Duke of Burgundy will fast fore he'll buy again at such a rate.

Aye, will ye do, good grey-beard? transcend a breach, I run a tilt at death within a chair! Ed. Foul fiend of France, and hag of all despite, compass'd with thy lustful paramours! Comes it thee to taunt his valiant age! I twit with cowardice a man half dead? Aye, I'll have a bount with you again, else let Talbot perish with this shame.

Can. What will you, sir? Yea, Pucelle, hold thy peace; talbot do but thunder, rain will follow. The English whisper together in council. I speed the parliament! who shall be the speaker? Ed. Dare ye come forth and meet us in the field? Joann. Be like your lordship takes us then for fools, try if that our own be ours or no. Ed. I speak not to that railing Hecate, unto thee, Alençon, and the rest; ill ye, like soldiers, come and fight it out! Alen. Signiour, no. Ed. Signiour, hang! base mullets of France! base peasant foot-boys do they keep the walls, dare not take up arms like gentlemen, Joann. Away, captains! let's get us from the walls, or Talbot means no goodness by his looks, do be wi' you, my lord: we came but to tell you at we are here.

Exit. Joann, Pucelle, etc., from the walls. Ed. And there will we be too ere it be long, else reproach be Talbot's greatest fame! ow, Burgundy, by honour of thy house, ciek'd on by public wrongs sustaine'd in France, either to get the town again or die; and I, as sure as English Henry lives, as sure as in this late-betrayed town Great Coeur-de-Lion's heart was buried, So sure I swear to get the town or die.

Bur. My vows are equal partners with thy vows. Ed. But ere we go, regard this dying prince, The valiant Duke of Bedford. Come, my lord, We will bestow you in some better place, Fitter for sickness and for crazy age.

Bed. Lord Talbot, do not so dishonour me; Here will I sit before the walls of Roan, And will be partner of your weal or woe.

Bur. Courageous Bedford, let us now persuade you.

Bed. Not to be gone from hence; for once I read That stout Pendragon in his litter sick Came to the field and vanquished his foes. Methinks I should reviue the soldiers' hearts, Because I ever found them as myself.

Ed. Undaunted spirit in a dying breast! Then be it so: heavens keep old Bedford safe! And now no more ado, brave Burgundy, But gather we our forces out of hand, And set upon our boasting enemy.

Exit all but Bedford and Attendants.

Alarum. Excursions. Enter Sir John Fastolfe and a Captain.

Cap. Whither away, Sir John Fastolfe, in such haste?

Fast. Whither away! to save myself by flight: We are like to have the overthrow again.

Cap. What! will you fly, and leave Lord Talbot?

Fast. Ay, All the Talbots in the world, to save my life.

Exit. Cap. Cowardly knight! ill fortune follow thee!

Exit. Retreat. Excursions. Enter, from the town, Joann, Pucelle, Alençon, Charles, etc., and excit, flying.

Bed. Now, quiet soul, depart when heaven please, For I have seen our enemies' overthrow. What is the trust or strength of foolish man? They that of late were daring with their scoffs Are glad and fain by flight to save themselves. Dies, and is carried in by two in his chair.

Alarum. Re-enter Talbot, Burgundy, and Others.

Ed. Lost, and recover'd in a day again! This is a double honour, Burgundy: Yet heavens have glory for this victory! Bur. War-like and martial Talbot, Burgundy Enshrines thee in his heart, and there erects Thy noble deeds as valour's monument.

Ed. Tal. Thanks, gentle duke. But where is Pucelle now? I think her old familiar is asleep: Now where's the Bastard's braves, and Charles his gleeks? What! all amort? Roan hangs her head for grief That such a valiant company are fled. Now will we take some order in the town, Placing therein some expert officers, And then depart to Paris to the king; For there young Henry with his nobles lie. Bur. What wills Lord Talbot pleaseth Burgundy.

Ed. Tal. But yet, before we go, let's not forget
The noble Duke of Bedford late deceas'd,
But see his exequies fulfill'd in Roan.
A braver soldier never couched lance,
A gentler heart did never swy in court ;
But kings and mightiest potentates must die,
For that's the end of human misery. Exeunt.

Scene III.—The Same. The Plains near Roan.

Enter Charles, the Bastard of Orleans,
Alençon, Joan la Pucelle, and Forces.

Joan. Dismay not, princes, at this accident,
Nor grieve that Roan is so recovered :
Care is no ene, but rather corrosive,
For things that are not to be remedied.
Let frantic Talbot triumph for a while,
And like a peacock sweep along his tail ;
We'll pull his plumes and take away his train
If Dauphin and the rest will be but rul'd.
Cha. We have been guided by thee hitherto,
And of thy cunning had no diffidence :
One sudden foil shall never breed distrust.

Bast. Search out thy wit for secret policies,
And we will make thee famous through the world.

Alen. We'll set thy statue in some holy place,
And have thee reverenced like a blessed saint :
Employ thee then, sweet virgin, for our good.

Joan. Then thus it must be ; this doth Joan devise :
By fair persuasions mix'd with sugar'd words
We will entice the Duke of Burgundy
To leave the Talbot and to follow us.
Cha. Ay, marry, sweetening, if we could do that,
France were no place for Henry's warriors ;
Nor should that nation boast it so with us,
But be extirp'd from our provinces.

Alen. For ever should they be expuls'd from France,
And not have title of an earldom here.

Joan. Your honours shall perceive how I will work
To bring this matter to the wished end.

Drum sounds afar off.
Hark! by the sound of drum you may perceive
Their powers are marching unto Paris-ward.

Here sound an English March. Enter, and pass over at a distance, Talbot and his Forces.

There goes the Talbot, with his colours spread,
And all the troops of English after him.

A French March. Enter the Duke of Burgundy
And Forces.

Now in the rearward comes the duke and his :
Fortune in favour makes him lag behind,
Summon a parley ; we will talk with him.

Trumpets sound a parley.

Cha. A parley with the Duke of Burgundy!
Bur. Who craves a parley with the Burgundy?
Joan. The princely Charles of France, thy countryman.

Cha. Speak, Pucelle, and enchant him with thy words.

Joan. Brave Burgundy, undoubted hope of France!
Stay, let thy humble handmaid speak to thee.
Bur. Speak on ; but be not over-tedious.

Joan. Look on thy country, look on field
France,
And see the cities and the towns defac'd
By wasting ruin of the cruel foe.
As looks the mother on her lowly babe
When death doth close his tender dying eye,
See, see the pining malady of France;
Behold the wounds, the most unnatural
Which thou thyself hast given her woeful breast,
O! turn thy edged sword another way ;
Strike those that hurt, and hurt not those who help.

One drop of blood drawn from thy count' bosom
Should grieve thee more than streams of gore :
Return thee therefore with a flood of tears,
And wash away thy country's stained spots.

Bur. Either she hath bewitch'd me with fair words,
Or nature makes me suddenly relent.

Joan. Besides, all French and France exclaim on thee,
Doubting thy birth and lawful progeny.
Who join'st thou with but with a lordly man
That will not trust thee but for profit's sake,
When Talbot hath set footing once in France
And fashion'd thee that instrument of ill,
Who then but English Henry will be lord,
And thou be thrust out like a fugitive?
Call we to mind, and mark but this for proof
Was not the Duke of Orleans thy foe,
And was he not in England prisoner?
But when they heard he was thine enemy,
They set him free without his ransom paid,
In spite of Burgundy and all his friends,
See then, thou fight'st against thy countr'
And join'st with them will be thy slaughter—
Come, come, return; return, thou wand'ring law
Charles and the rest will take thee in their air
Bur. I am vanquished ; these naughty wo

Joan. Have badder'd me like roaring cannon-shot,
And made me almost yield upon my knees,
Forgive me, country, and sweet countrymen
And, lords, accept this hearty kind embrace
My forces and my power of men are yours.
So, farewell, Talbot; I'll no longer trust the Joan. Aside. Done like a Frenchman; to And turn again!

Cha. Welcome, brave duke! thy friends
Makes as fresh.
Bur. And doth beget new courage in Alen. Pucelle hath bravely play'd her part
And doth deserve a coronet of gold.
Cha. Now let us on, my lords, and join
And seek how we may prejudice the foe. Exeunt.

Enter King Henry, Gloucester, Bishop
Winchester, York, Suffolk, Somerset,
Warwick, Exeter; Vernon, Basset,
Others. To them with his soldiers, Talbot.
Tal. My gracious prince, and honourable pee
Hearing of your arrival in this realm,
I have awhile given truce unto my wars,
do my duty to my sovereign:
Sign whereof, this arm, that hath reclaim’d
Your obedience fifty fortresses,
Velve cities, and seven walled towns of strength,
Side five hundred prisoners of esteem,
Let fall his sword before your highness’ feet;
Kneels.

And with submissive loyalty of heart cribes the glory of his conquest got His sword:
K. Hen. Is this the Lord Talbot, uncle Gloucester, that hath so long been resident in France?
Glou. Yes, if it please your majesty, my liege.
K. Hen. Welcome, brave captain and victorious lord!

Hen I was young, as yet I am not old,
To remember how my father said
Stouter champion never handled sword.
But since we were resolved of your truth,
Our faithful service and your toil in war;
Yet never hast you fisted our reward,
Your reguardon’d with so much as thanks,
Cause till now we never saw your face:
Herefore, stand up; and for these good deserts,
Here create you Earl of Shrewsbury;
And in our coronation take your place.

Flourish. Exeunt all but Vernon and Basset.

Ver. Now, sir, to you, that were so hot at sea,
Ingracing of these colours that I wear
By honour of my noble Lord of York,
’st thou maintain the former words thou spakst?
Bass. Yes, sir; as well as you dare patronage
To envious barking of your saucy tongue
Against my lord the Duke of Somerset.
Ver. Sirrach, thy lord I honour as he is.
Bass. Why, what is he? as good a man as York.
Ver. Hark ye; not so: In witness, take ye that.

Stikes him.

33. Villain, thou know’st the law of arms is such
As who draws a sword, ’tis present death,
Else this blow should branch thy dearest blood;
At I’ll unto his majesty, and crave
May have liberty to venge this wrong;
Then thou shalt see I’ll meet thee to thy cost.
Ver. Well, miscreant, I’ll be there as soon as you;
ud. after, meet you sooner than you would.

Exeunt.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Paris, A Hall of State.

Enter Sir John Fastolfe, Gloucester, Exeter, York, Suffolk, Somerset, Winchester, Warwick, Talbot, the Governor of Paris, and Others.

Glou. Lord bishop, set the crown upon his head.

Win. God save King Henry, of that name the sixth!

Glou. Now, governor of Paris, take your oath,
That you elect no other king but him,
Estem none friends but such as are his friends,
And none your foes but such as shall pretend
Fellow practices against his state:
His shall ye do, so help you righteous God!

Enter Sir John Fastolfe.

Fast. My gracious sovereign, as I rode from Calais,
To haste unto your coronation,
A letter was deliver’d to my hands,
Writ to your grace from the Duke of Burgundy.
Tal. Shame to the Duke of Burgundy and thee!
I vow’d, base knight, when I did meet thee next,
To tear the garter from thy craven’s leg;

Plucks it off.

Which I have done, because unworthily
Thou wast install’d in that high degree.
Pardon me, princely Henry, and the rest:
This dastard, at the battle of Patay,
When but in all I was six thousand strong,
And that the French were almost ten to one,
Before we met or that a stroke was given,
Like to a trusty squire did run away:
In which assault we lost twelve hundred men;
Myself and divers gentlemen beside
Were there surpris’d and taken prisoners.
Then judge, great lords, if I have done amiss;
Or whether that such cowards ought to wear
This ornament of knighthood, yea or no.

Glou. To say the truth, this fact was infamous
And ill becomening any common man,
Much more a knight, a captain and a leader.

Tal. When first this order was ordin’d in my lords:
Knights of the garter were of noble birth,
Valiant and virtuous, full of haughty courage,
Such as were grown to credit by the wars;
Not fearing death, nor shrinking for distress,
But always resolute in most extremes.
He then that is not furnish’d in this sort
Doth but usurp the sacred name of knight;
Profaning this most honourable order,
And should, if I were worthy to be judge,
Be quite degraded, like a hedge-born swain
That doth presume to boast of gentle blood.

K. Hen. Stain to thy countrymen! thou hast’s thy doom.
Be packing therefore, thou that wast a knight:
Henceforth we banish thee on pain of death.

Exit Fastolfe.

And now, my lord protector, view the letter
Sent from our uncle Duke of Burgundy.

Glou. What means his grace, that he hath chang’d his style?

No more but, plain and bluntly, To the King!
Hath he forgot he is his sovereign?
Or doth this churlish superscription
Pretend some alteration in good will?
What’s here? I have, upon especial cause,
Mour’d with compassion of my country’s woe,
Together with the pitiful complaints
Of such as your oppression feeds upon,
Forsaken your pernicious faction
And join’d with Charles, the rightful King of France.
O monstrous treachery! Can this be so,
That in alliance, amity, and oaths,
There should be found such false dissembling guile?

K. Hen. What! dost my uncle Burgundy revolt?
Glou. He doth, my lord, and is become your foe.

K. Hen. Is that the worst this letter doth contain?

Glou. It is the worst, and all, my lord, he writes.
K. Hen. Why then, Lord Talbot there shall talk with him,
And give him chastisement for this abuse.
How say you, my lord? are you not content? 70
Tal. Content, my liege! Yes: but that I am prevented,
I should have begg'd I might have been employ'd.
K. Hen. Then gather strength and march unto him straight:
Let him perceive how ill we brook his treason,
And what offence it is to float his friends.
Tal. I go, my lord; in heart desiring still
You may behold confusion of your foes. Exit.

Enter Vernon and Basset.

Vern. Grant me the combat, gracious sovereign,
Bas. And me, my lord; grant me the combat too!
York. This is my servant: hear him, noble prince! 80
Som. And this is mine: sweet Henry, favour him!
K. Hen. Be patient, lords; and give them leave to speak.
Say, gentlemen, what makes you thus exclaim?
And wherefore crave you combat? or with whom?
Ver. With him, my lord; for he hath done me wrong.
Bas. And I with him; for he hath done me wrong.
K. Hen. What is that wrong whereof you both complain?
First let me know, and then I'll answer you.
Bas. Crossing the sea from England into France,
This fellow here, with envious carping tongue,
Upbraided me about the rose I wear; 91
Saying, the sanguine colour of the leaves
Did represent my master's blushing cheeks,
When stubbornly he did repugn the truth
About a certain question in the law
Argued betwixt the Duke of York and him;
With other vile and ignominious terms:
In confusion of which rude reproach,
And in defence of my lord's worthiness,
I crave the benefit of law of arms. 109
Ver. And that is my petition, noble lord:
For though he seem with forged quint conceit
To set a gloss upon his bold intent,
Yet know, my lord, I was provok'd by him;
And he first took exceptions at this barge,
 Pronouncing that the paleness of this flower
Blew'd the faintness of my master's heart.
York. Will not this malice, Somerset, be left?
Som. Your private grudge, my Lord of York, will out.
Though me'cr so cunningly you smother it, 110
K. Hen. Good Lord! what madness rules in brain-sick men.
When for so slight and frivolous a cause
Such factions emulations shall arise!
Good cousins both, of York and Somerset,
Quiet yourselves, I pray, and be at peace.
York. Let this dissension first be tried by fight,
And then your highness shall command a peace.
Som. The quarrel toucheth none but us alone;
Betwixt ourselves let us decide it then. 119
York. There is my pledge; accept it, Somerset.
Ver. Nay, let it rest where it began at first.
Bas. Confirm it so, mine honourable lord.
had the passions of thy heart burst out,
for we should have seen decipher'd there were an insiduous sprite, more furiously raging broils, an yet can be imagin'd or suppos'd, howsoever, no simple man that sees the jarring discord of nobility, is shouldering of each other in the court,
is factions bandying of their favourites,
it that it doth presage some ill event.
such as when sceptres are in children's hands;
more when envy breeds unkind division:
er ere comes the ruin, there begins confusion.

Scene II. — Before Bourdeaux.

Enter Talbot, with his Forces.

Tal. Go to the gates of Bourdeaux, trumpeter; morn their general unto the wall.

unnepet sounds a parley. Enter, on the walls, the General of the French Forces, and Others.

English John Talbot, captains, calls you forth, swant in arms to Harry King of England;
d thus he would: Open your city gates,
humble to us, call my sovereign yours,
do him homage as obedient subjects,
id I'll withdraw me and my bloody power;
if you frown upon this proffer'd peace,
tempt the fury of my three attendants,
an famine, quartering steel, and climbing fire;
h in a moment even with the earth lay your stately and air-braving towers, sake the offer of their love.

Gen. Thou ominous and fearful owl of death, with nation's terror and their bloody scourg'd pal period of thy tyranny approacheth.
as thou canst not enter but by death;
i, I protest, we are well fortified,
e strong enough to issue out and fight;
retire, the Dauphin, well appointed,
with the snares of war to tangle thee:
either hand thee there are squadron's pitch'd wall thee from the liberty of flight;
no way canst thou turn thee for redress at death doth front thee with apparent spoil, pale destruction meets thee in the face.

in thousand French have ta'en the sacrament save their dangerous artillery no Christian soul but English Talbot.

are there stand'st, a breathing valiant man,
a invincible unconquer'd spirit:
this is the latest glory of thy praise,
that I, thy enemy, due thee willful;
or ere the glass, that now begins to run,
shish the process of his sandy hour,
hese eyes, that see thee now well coloured,
all see thee with' thorn, bloody, pale, and dead.

Drum afar off.
ak! hark! the Dauphin's drum, a warning bell,
ings heavy music to thy timorous soul,
and mine shall ring thy dire departure out.

Exeunt General, etc., from the walls.

Tal. He fables not; I hear the enemy, some light horsemen, and peruse their wings!
ill negligent and heedless discipline;
ow are we park'd and bounded in a pale,
little herd of England's timorous deer,
and did with a yelping kennel of French curs!
be English deer, be then in blood;

Not rascal-like, to fall down with a pinch,
But rather moody-mad and desperate stags,
Turn on the bloody hounds with heads of steel
And make the cowards stand aloof at bay:
Sell every man his life as dear as mine,
And they shall find dear deer of us, my friends,
God and Saint George, Talbot and England's right,
Prosper our colours in this dangerous fight!

Exeunt.

Scene III.—Plains in Gascony.

Enter York, with Forces; to him, a Messenger.

York. Are not the speedy scouts return'd again
That drog'd the mighty army of the Dauphin?
Mess. They are return'd, my lord, and give it out
That he is march'd to Bourdeaux with his power,
To fight with Talbot. As he march'd along,
By your espials were discovered
Two mightier troops than that the Dauphin led,
Which join'd with him and made their march for Bourdeaux.

York. A plague upon that villain Somerset,
That thus delays my promised supply
Of horsemen that were levied for this siege!
Renowned Talbot doth expect my aid,
And I am low'd by a traitor villain
And cannot help the noble chevalier.
God comfort him in this necessity!
If he miscarry, farewell wars in France.

Enter Sir William Lucy.

Lucy. Thou princely leader of our English strength,
Never so needful on the earth of France,
Spur to the rescue of the noble Talbot,
Who now is girdled with a waist of iron
And hemm'd about with grim destruction.
To Bourdeaux, war-like duke! to Bourdeaux, York!

Else, farewell Talbot, France, and England's honour.

York. O God! that Somerset, who in proud heart
Doth stop my cornets, were in Talbot's place;
So should we save a valiant gentleman
By forfeiting a traitor and a coward.
Mad ire and wrathful fury make me weep
That thus we die, while remiss traitors sleep.

Lucy. O! send some succour to the distress'd lord.

York. He dies, we lose; I break my war-like word;

We mourn, France smiles; we lose, they daily get;
All long of this vile traitor Somerset.

Lucy. Then God take mercy on brave Talbot's soul.

And on his son young John, whom two hours since
I met in travel toward his war-like father.
This seven years did not Talbot see his son;
And now they meet where both their lives are done.

York. Alas! what joy shall noble Talbot have
To bid his young son welcome to his grave?

Away! vexation almost stops my breath
That sunder'd friends greet in the hour of death.
Lucy, farewell: no more my fortune can
But curse the cause I cannot aid the man.
Scene IV.—Other Plains in Gascony.

Enter Somerset, with his Army; a Captain of Talbot's with him.

Som. It is too late; I cannot send them now:
This expedition was by York and Talbot
Too rashly plotted: all our general force
Might with a salary of the very town
Be buckled with: the over-daring Talbot
Hath sullied all his gloss of former honour.
By this unheedful, desperate, wild adventure:
York set him on to fight and die in shame,
That, Talbot dead, great York might bear the name.

Cap. Here is Sir William Lucy, who with me
Set from our o'ermatch'd forces forth for aid.

Enter Sir William Lucy.

Som. How now, Sir William! whither were you sent?

Lucy. Whither, my lord? from bought and sold Lord Talbot;
Who, ring'd about with bold adversity,
Cries out for noble York and Somerset,
To beat assailing death from his weak legions:
And whiles the honourable captain there
Drops bloody sweat from his war-wearied limbs,
And, in advantage lingering, looks for rescue,
You, his false hopes, the trust of England's honour,
Keep off albof with worthless emulation.

Let not your private discord keep away
The levied succours that should lend him aid,
While he, renowned noble gentleman,
Yields up his life unto a world of odds:
Orleans the Bastard, Charles, Burgundy,
Alençon, Reignier, compass him about,
And Talbot perisheth by your default.

Som. York set him on; York should have sent him aid.

Lucy. And York as fast upon your grace exchanges;
Swearing that you withhold his levied host
Collected for this expedition.

Som. York lies; he might have sent and had the horse:
I owe him little duty, and less love,
And take foul scorn to fawn on him by sending.

Lucy. The fraud of England, not the force of France,
Hath now entrap'd the noble-minded Talbot.
Never to England shall he bear his life,
But dies, betray'd to fortune by your strife.

Som. Come, go; I will dispatch the horsemen straight:
Within six hours they will be at his aid.

Lucy. Too late comes rescue: he is ta'en or slain,
Scene VI.—A Field of Battle.

Alarum. Excursions, wherein Talbot's Son is hemmed about, and Talbot rescues him.

Tal. Saint George and victory! fight, soldiers, fight! the regent hath with Talbot broke his word, and left us to the rage of France his sword. here is John Talbot? Pause, and take thy breath; gave thee life and resc'd thee from death.

John. O! twice my father, twice am I thy son: life thou gav'st me first was lost and done; l's with thy war-like sword, despite of fate, my determin'd time thou gav'st new date.

Tal. When from the Dauphin's crest thy sword struck fire, warn'd thy father's heart with proud desire bold-fac'd victory. Then leaden age, chicken'd with youthful spleen and war-like rage, eat down Alençon, Orleans, Burgundy, ad from the pride of Gallia resc'd thee. an irreful bastard Orleans, that drew blood from thee, my boy, and had the maidenhood of thy first fight, I soon encountered, ad, interchanging blows, I quickly shed one of his bastard blood; and in disgrace to spoke him thus: 'Contaminated, base misbegotten blood I spil of thine, can and right poor, for that pure blood of mine which thou didst force from Talbot, my brave boy.'

cre, purposing the Bastard to destroy, am in strong resuce. Speak, thy father's care, et thou not weary, John? how dost thou fare? ill thou yet leave the battle, boy, and fly, ow art seal'd the son of chivalry? to, to revenge my death when I am dead; help of one stands me in little stead.

Too much folly is it, well I wot, a hazard all our lives in one small boat. I to-day die not with Frenchmen's rage, morrow I shall die with mickle age: me they nothing gain an if I stay; is but the short'ning of my life one day.

a thee thy mother dies, our household's name, ly death's revenge, thy youth, and England's fame. these and more we hazard by thy stay; these are sav'd if thou wilt fly away.

John. The sword of Orleans hath not made me smart; these words of yours draw life-blood from my heart.

In that advantage, bought with such a shame, to save a paltry life and slay bright fame, before young Talbot from old Talbot fly, he coward horse that bears me fall and die! and like me to the peasant boys of France, to be shame's scorn and subject of mishance! surely, by all the glory you have won, if I fly, I am not Talbot's son: then talk no more of flight, it is no boot; son to Talbot, die at Talbot's foot.

Tal. Then follow thou thy desperate sire of Crete, Thou Icarus. Thy life to me is sweet: If thou wilt fight, fight by thy father's side, And, commendable prov'd, let's die in pride.

Scene VII.—Another Part of the Field.

Alarums. Excursions. Enter Talbot, wounded, supported by a Servant.

Tal. Where is my other life? mine own is gone:
O! where's young Talbot? where is valiant John?
Triumphant death, smear'd with captivity, Young Talbot's valour makes me smile at thee. When he perceiv'd me shrink and on my knee, His bloody sword he brandish'd over me, And like a hungry lion did commence Rough deeds of rage and stern impatience; But when my angry guardant stood alone, Tend'rend my ruin and assail'd of none, Dizzy-eyed fury and great rage of heart Suddenly made him from my side to start Into the clust'ring battle of the French; And in that sea of blood my boy did drench His over-mounting spirit; and there died My Icarus, my blossom, in his pride.

Enter Soldiers, bearing the body of John Talbot.

Serv. O! my dear lord, lo! where your son is borne.

Tal. Thou antick death, which laugh'st us here to scorn, Anon, from thy insulting tyranny, Coupled in bonds of perpetuity.

Two Talbots, winged through the lither sky, In thy despite shall 'scape mortality.

O! thou whose wounds become hard-favour'd death, Speak to thy father ere thou yield thy breath; Brave death by speaking whether he will or no; Imagine him a Frenchman and thy foe.

Poor boy! he smiles, methinks, as who should say, Had death been French, then death had died to-day.

Come, come, and lay him in his father's arms: My spirit can no longer bear these harms.

Soldiers, adieu! I have what I would have, Now my old arms are young John Talbot's grave.

Dies.

Alarums. Exeunt Soldiers and Servant, leaving the two bodies. Enter CHARLES, ALENCON, BURGUNDY, the Bastard of ORLEANS, JOAN LA PUCHELLE, and Forces.

Cha. Had York and Somerset brought rescue in We should have found a bloody day of this.

Bast. How the young whelp of Talbot's, raging-wood, Did fesh his puny sword in Frenchmen's blood! Joam. Once I encounter'd him, and thus I said: 'Thou maiden youth, be vanquish'd by a maid; But with a proud majestic high scorn, He answer'd thus: 'Young Talbot was not born To be the pillage of a giant wench.'

So, rushing in the bowels of the French, He left me proudly, as unworthy fight.

But. Doubtless he would have made a noble knight;
See, where he lies inhearsed in the arms
Of the most bloody nurser of his harms.

Bast. Hew them to pieces, hack their bones asunder,
Whose life was England's glory, Gallia's wonder.

Cha. O, no! forbear; for that which we have fled
During the life, let us not wrong it dead. 59

Enter Sir William Lucy, attended; a French
Herald preceding.

Lucy. Herald, conduct me to the Dauphin's tent,
To know who hath obtain'd the glory of the day.
Cha. On what submissive message art thou sent?

Lucy. Submission, Dauphin! 'tis amereFrench
word;
We English warriors wot not what it means.
I come to know what prisoners thou hast ta'en
And to survey the bodies of the dead.
Cha. For prisoners ask'st thou? hell our prison is,
But tell me whom thou seek'st.

Lucy. But where's the great Alcides of the field,
Valiant Lord Talbot, Earl of Shrewsby?
Created, for his rare success in arms,
Great Earl of Washford, Waterford, and Valence;
Lord Talbot of Goodrig and Urchinfield, Lord Strange of Blackmere, Lord Verdun of Alton,
Lord Cromwell of Wingfield, Lord Furnival of Sheffield,
The thirce-victorious Lord of Falconbridge,
Knight of the noble order of Saint George,
Worthy Saint Michael and the Golden Fleece,
Great marshall to Henry the Sixth
Of all his wars within the realm of France?

Joan. Here is a silly stately style indeed!
The Turk, that two-and-fifty kingdoms hath,
Writes not so tedious a style as this.
Him that thou magnifisest with all these titles
Stinking and fly-blown lies here at our feet.

Lucy. Is Talbot slain, the Frenchmen's only scourge,
Your kingdom's terror and black Nemesis?
O! were mine eyeballs into bullets turn'd,
That I in rage might shoot them at your faces.
O! that I could but call these dead to life,
It were enough to fright the realm of France.
Were but his picture left amongst you here
It would amaze the proudest of you all.
Give me their bodies, that I may bear them hence
And give them burial as becomes their worth.

Joan. I think this uppstart is old Talbot's ghost,
He speaks with such a proud commanding spirit.
For God's sake, let him have 'em; to keep them
here
They would but stink and putrefy the air.

Lucy. I'll bear them hence:
But from their ashes shall be rear'd
A phoenix that shall make all France afeard.
Cha. So we be rid of them, do with 'em what thou wilt.
And now to Paris, in this conquering vein:
All will be ours now bloody Talbot's slain.

Exeunt.
I am to attend upon your lordship's leisure.

Win. Aside. Now Winchester will not submit, I trow, be inferior to the proudest peer.

Charles. This news, my lords, may cheer our drooping spirits:
said the stout Parisians do revolt
and turn again unto the war-like French.

Then march to Paris, royal Charles of France,
d keep not back your powers in dalliance.

Joan. Peace be amongst them if they turn to us;
be, ruin combat with their palaces!

Enter a Scout.

Scout. Success unto our valiant general,
d happiness to his accomplishments!

Cha. What tidings send our scouts? I prithee, speak.

Scout. The English army, that divided was in two parties, is now conjoin'd in one,
d means to give you battle presently.

Cha. Somewhat too sudden, sirs, the warning is;
we will presently provide for them.

Bur. I trust the ghost of Talbot is not there:
w he is gone, my lord, you need not fear.

Joan. Of all base passions, fear is most accurs'd.
mand the conquest, Charles, it shall be thine;
Henry fret and all the world repine.

Then on, my lords; and France be fortunate!

Exeunt.

Scene II.—France. Plains in Anjou.

Enter CHARLES, BURLYNGO, ALÉNOÇ, JOAN la PUCelle, and Forces, Marching.

Cha. These news, my lords, may cheer our drooping spirits:
said the stout Parisians do revolt
d turn again unto the war-like French.
Then march to Paris, royal Charles of France,
d keep not back your powers in dalliance.

Joan. Peace be amongst them if they turn to us;
be, ruin combat with their palaces!

Enter a Scout.

Scout. Success unto our valiant general,
d happiness to his accomplishments!

Cha. What tidings send our scouts? I prithee, speak.

Scout. The English army, that divided was in two parties, is now conjoin'd in one,
d means to give you battle presently.

Cha. Somewhat too sudden, sirs, the warning is;
we will presently provide for them.

Bur. I trust the ghost of Talbot is not there:

Joan. Of all base passions, fear is most accurs'd.
mand the conquest, Charles, it shall be thine;
Henry fret and all the world repine.

Then on, my lords; and France be fortunate!

Exeunt.

Scene III.—The Same. Before Angiers.

Enter EXCURSIONS. Enter JOAN la PUCelle.

Joan. The regent conquers and the Frenchmen fly.
w help, ye charming spells and peripats;
ad ye choice spirits that admonish me give me signs of future accidents:

Thunder.

io speedy helpers, that are substitutes under the lovely monarch of the north, spear and aid me in this enterprise!

Enter Friends.

his speedy and quick appearance argues proof
if your accustomed diligence to me.
now, ye familiar spirits, that are call'd out of the powerful legions under earth, sell me this once, that France may get the field.

They walk; and speak not.

bould me not with silence over-long.
here I was wont to feed you with my blood,
'll pop a member off and give you earnest of a further benefit, so you do condescend to help me now.

They hang their heads.

o hope to have redress? My body shall my recompense if you will grant my suit.

They shake their heads.

Cannot my body nor blood-sacrifice
Entreat you to your wonted furtherance?
Then take my soul; my body, soul, and all,
Before that England give the French the foil.

They depart.

See! they forsake me. Now the time is come
That France must vail her lofty-plumed crest,
And let her head fall into England's lap.
My ancient incantations are too weak,
And hell too strong for me to bucke with:
Now, France, thy glory droopeth to the dust.

Exit.

Alarums. Enter French and English, fighting; JOAN la PUCelle and YORK fight hand to hand. JOAN la PUCelle is taken. The French fly.

York. Damsel of France, I think I have you fast:
Unchain your spirits now with spelling charms,
And try if they can gain your liberty.
A goodly prize, fit for the devil's grace!
See how the ugly witch doth bend her brows,
As if with Circé she would change thy shape.

Joan. Chang'd to a worser shape thou canst not be.

York. O! Charles the Dauphin is a proper man:
No shape but his can please your dainty eye.

Joan. A plaguing mischief light on Charles and thee!
And may ye both be suddenly surpris'd
By bloody hands, in sleeping on your beds!

York. Fell banning hag, enchantress, hold thy tongue!

Joan. I prithee, give me leave to curse awhile.
York. Curse, miscreant, when thou comest to the stake.

Exeunt.

Alarums. Enter SUFFOLK, leading in Lady MARGARET.

Suf. Be what thou wilt, thou art my prisoner.

Gaze on her.

O fairest beauty! do not fear nor fly,
For I will touch thee but with reverent hands.
I kiss these fingers for eternal peace,
And lay them gently on thy tender side.
Who art thou? say, that I may honour thee.

Mar. Margaret my name, and daughter to a king,
The King of Naples, whoseoe'er thou art.

Suf. An earl I am, and Suffolk am I call'd.

Do not offended, nature's miracle,
Thou art allotted to be ta'en by me:
So doth the swan her downy cygnets save,
Keeping them prisoner underneath her wings.
Yet, if this servile usage once offend,
Go and be free again, as Suffolk's friend.

She turns away as going.

O, stay! I have no power to let her pass!

My hand would free her, but my heart says no.
As plays the sun upon the glassy streams,
Twinkling another counterfeit beam,
So seems this gorgeous beauty to mine eyes.
Fain would I woo her, yet I dare not speak:
I'll call for pen and ink and write my mind.

Fie, de la Pole! disable not thyself;
Hast not a tongue? is she not here thy prisoner?
Wilt thou be daunted at a woman's sight?

Ay; beauty's princely majesty is such,
Confound the tongue and makes the senses rough.

Mar. Say, Earl of Suffolk, if thy name be so,
What ransom must I pay before I pass?
For I perceive I am thy prisoner.

Suf. How canst thou tell she will deny thy suit,
Before thou make a trial of her love?

Mar. Why speak'st thou not? what ransom must I pay?

Suf. She's beautiful and therefore to be woo'd;
She is a woman, therefore to be won.

Mar. Wilt thou accept of ransom, yea or no?

Suf. Fond man! remember that thou hast a wife;
Then how can Margaret be thy paramour?

Mar. I were best to leave him, for he will not hear.

Suf. There all is marr'd; there lies a cooling card.

Mar. He talks at random; sure, the man is mad.

Suf. And yet a dispensation may be had.

Mar. And yet I would that you would answer me.

Suf. I'll win this Lady Margaret. For whom?

Why, for my king: tush! that's a wooden thing.

Mar. He talks of wood: it is some carpenter.

Suf. Yet so my fancy may be satisfied,
And peace established between these realms.
But there remains a scruple in that too;
For though her father be the King of Naples,
Duke of Anjou and Maine, yet is he poor,
And our nobility will scorn the match.

Mar. Hear ye, captain! Are you not at leisure?

Suf. It shall be so, disdain they ne'er so much:
Henry is youthful and will quickly yield.

Madam, I have a secret to reveal—

Mar. What though I be enthral'd? he seems a knight,
And will not any way dishonour me.

Suf. Lady, vouchsafe to listen what I say.

Mar. Perhaps I shall be rescu'd by the French;
And then I need not crave his courtesies.

Suf. Sweet madam, give me hearing in a cause—

Mar. Tush! women have been captivate ere now.

Suf. Lady, wherefore talk you so?

Mar. I cry you mercy, 'tis but quid for quo.

Suf. Say, gentle princess, would you not suppose Your bondage happy to be made a queen? in

Mar. To be a queen in bondage is more vile
Than is a slave in base servility;
For princes should be free.

Suf. And so shall you,
If happy England's royal king be free.

Mar. Why, what concerns his freedom unto me?

Suf. I'll undertake to make thee Henry's queen,
To put a golden sceptre in thy hand,
And set a precious crown upon thy head,
If thou wilt condescend to be my—

Mar. What?

Suf. His love.

Mar. I am unworthy to be Henry's wife.

Suf. No, gentle madam; I unworthy am
To woo so fair a dame to be his wife
And have no portion in the choice myself.
How say you, madam, are ye so content?

Mar. An if my father please, I am content.

Suf. Then call our captains and our colours forth!
VER YET TANT WITH LOVE, I SEND THE KING.
SIF. AND THIS WITHEA.
KISSES HER.
War. That for thyself: I will not so presume
Send such peevish tokens to a king.
Exeunt Reignier and Margaret.
SIF. O! Wert thou for myself. But, Suffolk,
Stay;
On may'st not wander in that labyrinth;
Ere Minotaurs and ugly treasons lurk.
Kist Henry with her wondrous praise:
Think thee on her virtues that surmount
D natural graces that extinguish art;
Peat their semblance often on the seas,
At, when thou com'st to kneel at Henry's feet,
On may'st bereave him of his wits with wonder.
Exit.

Enter York, Warwick, and Others.

York. Bring forth that sorceress, condemn'd to burn.

Enter Joaum, the pucielle, guarded; and a Shepherd.

Shep. Ah! Joan, this kills thy father's heart, Outright.
Ve sought every country far and near,
D, now it is my chance to find thee out,
St. I beheld thy time less cruel death?
Joan, sweet daughter Joan, I'll die with thee.
Joan. Decrepit miser! Base ignoble wretch!
D ascended of a gentler blood:
Art no father nor no friend of mine.
Shep. Out, out! My lords, an please you, 'tis not so;
D beget her all the parish knows:
Mother liveth yet, can testify
Was the first fruit of my bachelorship.
War. Graceless! wilt thou deny thy parentage?
York. This argues what her kind of life hath been:
Red and vile; and so her death concludes.
Rep. Fie! Joan, that thou wilt be so obstacle;
Thou know'st art a collop of my flesh;
D for thy sake have I shed many a tear:
My me not, I prithee, gentle Joan.
Joan. Peasant, avanti! You have suborn'd this man,
Purpose to obscure my noble birth.
Shep. 'Tis true I gave a noble to the priest
Emorn that I was wedded to her mother.
Eel down and take my blessing, good my girl.
It thou not stoop? Now cursed be the time
Thy nativity! I would the milk
Mother gave thee when thou suck'dst her breast,
D been a little ratsbane for thy sake!
Else, when thou didst keep my lambs a-field,
Dish some ravenous wolf had eaten thee
St. thou deny thy father, cursed drab?
Burn her, burn her: hanging is too good. Exit. York.
Take her away; for she hath lived too long
Fill the world with vicious qualities.
Joan. First, let me tell you whom you have condemn'd:
D me begotten of a shepherd swain,
Tissu'd from the progeny of kings;
Virtuous and holy; chosen from above,
By inspiration of celestial grace,
To work exceeding miracles on earth.
I never had to do with wicked spirits:
But you, that are polluted with your lusts,
Stain'd with the guiltless blood of innocents,
Corrupt and tainted with a thousand vices,
Because you want the grace that others have,
You judge it straight a thing impossible
To compass wonders but by help of devils.
No, misconceived! Joan of Arc hath been
A virgin from her tender infancy,
Chaste and immaculate in very thought;
Whose maiden blood, thus rigorously offus'd,
Will cry for vengeance at the gates of heaven.
York. Ay, ay: away with her to execution!
War. And hark ye, sirs; because she is a maid,
Spare for no fagots, let there be snow;
Place barrels of pitch upon the fatal stake,
That so her torture may be shortened.
Joan. Will nothing turn your unrelenting hearts?
Then, Joan, discover thine infirmity,
That warranteth by law to be thy privilege.
I am with child, ye bloody homicides:
Murder not then the fruit within my womb,
Although ye hale me to a violent death.
York. Now heaven forfend! the holy maid with child
War. The greatest miracle that e'rye wrought!
Is all your strict preciseness come to this?
York. She and the Dauphin have been juggling:
I did imagine what would be her refuge.
War. Well, go to; we will have no bastards live;
Especially since Charles must father it.
Joan. You are deceipt'd; my child is none of his.
It was Alençon that enjoy'd my love.
York. Ailecon! that notorious Machiavel:
It dies an if it had a thousand lives.
Joan. O! give me leave; I have declaim'd you;
'Twas neither Charles nor yet the duke I nam'd,
But Reigmeir, King of Naples, that prevail'd.
War. A married man: that's most intolerable.
York. Why, here's a girl! I think she knows not well.
There were so many, whom she may accuse.
War. It's sign she hath been liberal and free.
York. And yet, forsooth, she is a virgin pure.
Trumpet, thy words condemn thy brat and thee:
Use no entreaty, for it is in vain.
Joan. Then lead me hence; with whom I leave my curse:
May never glorious sun reflect his beams
Upon the country where you make abode;
But darkness and the gloomy shade of death
Environ you, till mischief and despair
Drive you to break your necks or hang yourselves!
Exit, guarded.

York. Break thou in pieces and consume to ashes,
Thou foul accursed minister of hell!

Enter Cardinal Beauprot, attended.

Car. Lord regent, I do greet your excellency
With letters of commission from the king.
For know, my lords, the states of Christendom,
Mov'd with remorse of these outrageous broils,
Have earnestly implor'd a general peace
Betwixt our nation and the aspiring French;
FIRST PART OF KING HENRY VI.

[ACT I.]

And here at band the Dauphin and his train approacheth to confer about some matter.

York. Is all our travail turn'd to this effect? After the slaughter of so many peers, So many captains, gentlemen, and soldiers, That in this quarrel have been overthrown, And sold their bodies for their country's benefit, Shall we at last conclude effeminate peace? Have we not lost most part of all the towns, By treason, falsehood, and by treachery, Our great progenitors had conquisted? 110 O! Warwick, Warwick, I forebode with grief The utter loss of all the realm of France. War. Be patient, York: if we conclude a peace, It shall be with such strict and severe covenants As little shall the Frenchmen gain thereby.

Enter CHARLES, attended; ALÉNÇON, the Bastard of Orleans, REIGNIER, and Others.

Cha. Since, lords of England, it is thus agreed That peaceful truce shall be proclaim'd in France, We come to be informed by yourselves What the conditions of that league must be. York. Speak, Winchester; for boiling choler The hollow passage of my poison'd voice, By sight of these our baleful enemies. Car. Charles, and the rest, it is enacted thus: That, in regard King Henry gives consent, Of mere compassion and of lenity, To ease your country of distressful war, And suffer you to breathe in fruitful peace, You shall become true liegemen to his crown. And, Charles, upon condition thou wilt swear To pay him tribute, and submit thyself, Thou shalt be plac'd as viceroy under him, And still enjoy thy regal dignity.

Alen. Must be he then as shadow of himself? Adorn his temples with a coronet, And yet, in substance and authority, Retain but privilege of a private man? This proffer is absurd and reasonless. Cha. 'Tis known already that I am possess'd With more than half the Gallian territories, And therein reverence'd for their lawful king: Shall I, for lucrè of the rest unvanquish'd, Detract so much from that prerogative As to be call'd but viceroy of the whole? No, lord ambassador; I'll rather keep That which I have than, coveting for more, Be cast from possibility of all.

York. Insulting Charles! hast thou by secret means Us'd ingratitude to obtain a league, And, now that matter grows to compromise, Stand'st thou afoot upon comparison? Either accept the title thou usurpest, Of benefit proceeding from our king And not of any challenge of desert, Or we will plague thee with incessant wars.

Reig. My lord, you do not well in obstinacy To cavil in the course of this contract; If once it be neglected, ten to one We shall not find like opportunity.

Alen. To say the truth, it is your policy To save your subjects from such massacre And ruthless slaughters as are daily seen By our proceeding in hostility; And therefore take this compact of a truce, Although you break it when your pleasure serves.

War. How say'st thou, Charles! shall condition stand? Cha. It shall; Only reserv'd, you claim no interest In any of our towns of garrison.

York. Then swear allegiance to his majesty As thou art knight, never to disobey Nor be rebellious to the crown of England, Thou, nor thy nobles, to the crown of England So now dismiss your army when ye please; Hang up your ensigns, let your drums be still. For here we entertain a solemn peace. Exe.}

SCENE V.—London. The Palace.

Enter King HENRY, in conference with S. FOLK; GLOUCESTER and EXETER fol- lowing.

K. Hen. Your wondrous rare description, noble earl, Of beauteous Margaret hath astonish'd me: Her virtues graced with external gifts Do breed love's settled passions in my heart And like as rigour of tempestuous gusts Provokes the mightiest hulk against the tide So am I driven by breath of her renown Either to suffer shipwreck, or arrive Where I may have fruition of her love.

Suf. Tush! my good lord, this superficial Is but a preface of her worthy praise: The chief perfections of that lovely dame, Had I sufficient skill to utter them, Would make a volume of enticing lines, Able to ravish any dull conceit: And, which is more, she is not so divine, So full replete with choice of all delights, But with as humble lowliness of mind She is content to be at your command; Command, I mean, of virtuous chaste intent To love and honour Henry as her lord.

K. Hen. And otherwise will Henry ne'er resume. Therefore, my lord protector, give consent That Margaret may be England's royal queen.

Glu. So should I give consent to flatter you, You know, my lord, your highness is betroth'd Unto another lady of esteem; How shall we then dispense with that contract And not deface your honour with reproach? Suf. As doth a ruler with unlawful oaths Or one that, at a triumph having vow'd To try his strength, forsketh yet the lists By reason of his adversary's odds. A poor earl's daughter is unequal odds, And therefore may be broke without offence.

Glu. Why, what, I pray, is Margaret more than that? Her father is no better than an earl, Although in glorious titles he excel. Suf. Yes, my good lord, her father is a king; The King of Naples and Jerusalem; And of such great authority in France As his alliance will confirm our peace, And keep the Frenchmen in allegiance.

Glu. And so the Earl of Armagnac may Because he is near kinsman unto Charles.

Exe. Beside, his wealth doth warrant a liberal dower, Where Reignier sooner will receive than give.
A dower, my lords! disgrace not so your king, that he should be so abject, base, and poor, choose for wealth and not for perfect love. Henry is able to enrich his queen, and not to seek a queen to make him rich: worthless peasants bargain for their wives, market-men for oxen, sheep, or horse. Marriage is a matter of more worth than to be dealt in by attorneyship: of whom we will, but whom his grace affects, must be companion of his nuptial bed; and therefore, lords, since he affects her most, most of all these reasons bindeth us, our opinions she should be preferred. for what is wedlock forced but a hell, page of discord and continual strife? whereas the contrary bringeth bliss, and is a pattern of celestial peace. whom should we match with Henry, being a king, at Margaret, that is daughter to a king? or peerless feature, joined with her birth, proves her fit for none but for a king: or valiant courage and undaunted spirit, more than in women commonly is seen, will answer our hope in issue of a king; or Henry, son unto a conqueror, likely to beget more conquerors, with a lady of so high resolve is fair Margaret he be link'd in love. then yield, my lords; and here conclude with me that Margaret shall be queen, and none but she. K. Hen. Whether it be through force of your report, My noble Lord of Suffolk, or for that My tender youth was never yet attain'd With any passion of inflaming love, I cannot tell; but this I am assur'd, I feel such sharp dissension in my breast, Such fierce alarms both of hope and fear, As I am sick with working of my thoughts. Take, therefore, shipping; post, my lord, to France. Agree to any covenants, and procure That Lady Margaret do vouchsafe to come To cross the seas to England and be crown'd King Henry's faithful and anointed queen. For your expenses and sufficient charge, Among the people gather up a tenth, Be gone, I say; for till you do return I rest perplexed with a thousand cares. And you, good uncle, banish all offence: If you do censure me by what you were, Not what you are, I know it will excuse This sudden execution of my will. And so conduct me, where from company I may revolve and ruminate my grief. Exit. Gloucester. Ay, grief, I fear me, both at first and last. Exeunt Gloucester and Exeter. Suffolk. Thus Suffolk hath prevail'd; and thus he goes, As did the youthful Paris once to Greece; With hope to find the like event in love, But prosper better than the Trojan did. Margaret shall now be queen, and rule the king; But I will rule both her, the king, and realm. Exit.

Scene.—In various Parts of England.

Act I.

Scene I.—London. A Room of State in the Palace.

Flourish of trumpets: then haudboys. Enter, on one side, King Henry, Duke of Gloucester, Salisbury, Warwick, and Cardinal Beaufort; on the other, Queen Margaret, led in by Suffolk; York, Somerset, Buckingham, and Others, following.

Suf. As by your high imperial majesty
I had in charge at my depart for France,
As procurator to your excellence,
To marry Princess Margaret for your grace,
So, in the famous ancient city, Tours,
In presence of the Kings of France and Sicil,
The Dukes of Orleans, Calaber, Bretagne, and Alenson,
Seven earls, twelve barons, and twenty reverend bishops,
I have perform'd my task, and was espous'd:
And humbly now upon my bended knee,
In sight of England and her lordly peers,
Deliver up my title in the queen
To your most gracious hands, that are a substance
Of that great shadow I did represent;
The happiest gift that ever marquess gave,
The fairest queen that ever king receiv'd.
Margaret:
I can express no kinder sign of love
Than this kind kiss. O Lord! that lends a life,
Lend me a heart replete with thankfulness;
For thou hast given me in this beauteous face
A world of earthly blessings to my soul,
If sympathy of love unite our thoughts.
Q. Mer. Great King of England and my gracious lord,
The mutual conference that my mind hath had
By day, by night, waking, and in my dreams
In courtly company, or at my beads,
With you mine alderliest sovereign,
Makes me the bolder to salute my king
With ruder terms, such as my wit affords,
And over-joy of heart doth minister.
SECOND PART OF KING HENRY VI.

K. Hen. Her sight did ravish, but her grace in speech,
Words y-clad with wisdom's majesty,
Dyes me from wondering to weeping joys;
Ch is the fulness of my heart's content.

Q. Mar. We thank you all. Flourish.

Suf. My lord protector, so it please your grace,
We are the articles of contracted peace
Twixt our sovereign and the French King Charles,
Are eighteen months concluded by consent.

Glu. Imprimis, It is agreed between the French Charles and William de la Pole, Marquess of Suffolk, ambassador for Henry King of England, at the said Henry shall espouse the Lady Margaret, and the Duke of Anjou, and the duchy of Anjou and Maine shall be released and delivered to the king her father—

Let the paper fall.

K. Hen. Uncle, how now!

Glu. Pardon me, gracious lord;
One sudden qualm hath struck me at the heart
As dimm'd mine eyes, that I can read no further.

K. Hen. Uncle of Winchester, I pray, read on.

Car. Item, It is further agreed between them, that the duchies of Anjou and Maine shall be released and delivered over to the king her father, and all over the King of England's own proper cost of charges, without having any dovery.

K. Hen. They please us well. Lord marquess, kneel down:
Ere create thee the first Duke of Suffolk, and gird thee with the sword. Cousin of York,
Ere discharge thy grace from being regent of the parts of France, till term of eighteen months
Full expir'd. Thanks, uncle Winchester, successor, York, Buckingham, Somerset, Salisbury, and Warwick;
To thank you all for this great favour done,
An entertainment to my princely queen.

One, let us in, and with all speed provide to see her coronation be perform'd.

Excert KING, QUEEN, and SUFFOLK.

Glu. Brave peers of England, pillars of the state,
You Duke Humphrey must unload his grief,
Your grief, the common grief of all the land.
What? did my brother Henry spend his youth,
His valour, coin, and people, in the wars?
Did he so often lodge in open field,
In winter's cold, and summer's parching heat,
To conquer France, his true inheritance?

And did my brother Bedford toll his wins,
To keep by policy what Henry got?
Have you yourselves, Somerset, Buckingham, brave York, Salisbury, and victorious Warwick, Receiv'd deep scars in France and Normandy?
Or hath mine uncle Beaufort and myself,
With all the learned council of the realm,
Studied so long, sat in the council-house,
Early and late, debating to and fro
How France and Frenchmen might be kept in awe?
And hath his highness in his infancy

Been crown'd in Paris, in despite of foes?
And shall these labours and these honours die?
Shall Henry's conquest, Bedford's vigilance,
Your deeds of war and all our counsel die?
O peers of England! shameful is this league,
Fatal this marriage, cancelling your fame,
Blotting your names from books of memory,
Razing the characters of your renown,
Defacing monuments of conquer'd France,

Undoing all, as all had never been.

Car. Nephew, what means this passionate discourse?

This peroration with such circumstance?
For France, 'tis ours; and we will keep it still.
Glu. Ay, uncle; we will keep it, if we can; But now it is impossible we should.

Suffolk, the new-made duke that rules the roost,
Hath given the duchy of Anjou and Maine Unto the poor King Reignier, whose large style Agrees not with the leanness of his purse.

Sal. Now, by the death of him that died for all,
These counties were the keys of Normandy.
But wherefore weeps Warwick, my valiant son?

War. For grief that they are past recovery:
For, were there hope to conquer them again,
My sword should shed hot blood, mine eyes no tears.

Anjou and Maine! myself did win them both;
Those provinces these arms of mine did conquer:
And are the cities, that I got with wounds.
Deliver'd up again with peaceful words?

Mort Dieu! York.

Glu. For Suffolk's duke, may he be suffocated,
That dims the honour of this war-like isle!
France should have torn and rent my very heart.
Before I would have yielded to this league.
I never read but England's kings have had Large sums of gold and dowries with their wives;
And our King Henry gives away his own,
To match with her that brings no vantages.

Glu. A proper jest, and never heard before,
That Suffolk should demand a whole fifteenth
For costs and charges in transporting her!
She should have stay'd in France, and starv'd in France.

Car. My Lord of Gloucester, now ye grow too hot:
It was the pleasure of my lord the king.

Glu. My lord of Winchester, I know your mind:
'Tis not my speech that you do mislike,
But 'tis my presence that doth trouble ye.
Rancour will out: proud prelate, in thy face
I see thy fury. If I longer stay
We shall begin our ancient bickerings.

Lordlings, farewell; and say, when I am gone,
I prophesied France will be lost ere long. Exit.

Car. So, there goes our protector in a rage.
'Tis known to you he is mine enemy,
Nay, more, an enemy unto you all,
And no great friend, I fear me, to the king.
Consider, lords, he is the next of blood,
And heir apparent to the English crown:
Had Henry got an empire by his marriage,
And all the wealthy kingdoms of the west,
There's reason he should be displeas'd at it.
Look to it, lords; let not his smoothing words
Bewitch your hearts; be wise and circumspect.

What though the common people favour him,
Calling him 'Humphrey, the good Duke of Gloucester,' Clapping their hands, and crying with loud voice
"Jesus maintain your royal excellence!"

With 'God preserve the good Duke Humphrey!'
I fear me, lords, for all this flattering gloss,
He will be found a dangerous protector.

_Buck._ Why should he then protect our sovereign,
He being of age to govern of himself?
_Cousin of Somerset._ Join you with me,
And all together, with the Duke of Suffolk,
We'll quickly hoise Duke Humphrey from his seat.
_Car._ This weighty business will not brook delay;

I'll to the Duke of Suffolk presently.
_Exeunt._

_Som._ Cousin of Buckingham, though Humphrey's pride
And greatness of his place be grief to us,
Yet let us watch the haughty cardinal:
His insolence is more intolerable
Than all the princes in the land beside:
If Gloucester be displac'd, he'll be protector.
_Buck._ Or thou or I, Somerset, will be protector, Despite Duke Humphrey or the cardinal.
_Exeunt BUCKINGHAM and SOMERSET._

_Sal._ Pride went before, ambition follows him,
While these do labour for their own preferment,
Behoves it us to labour for the realm.

I never saw but Humphrey, Duke of Gloucester,
Did bear him like a noble gentleman,
Oft have I seen the haughty cardinal
More like a soldier than a man of the church,
As stout and proud as he were lord of all,
Swear like a ruffian and demean himself.
Unlike the ruler of a commonwealth,

Warwick, my son, the comfort of my age,
Thy deeds, thy plainness, and thy house-keeping,
Hath won the greatest favour of the commons,
Excepting none but good Duke Humphrey:
And, brother York, thy acts in Ireland,
In bringing them to civil discipline,
Thy late exploits done in the heart of France,
When thou wast regent for our sovereign,
Hast made their fear and honour of the people.
Join we together for the public good,
In what we can to bridle and suppress
The pride of Suffolk and the cardinal,
With Somerset's and Buckingham's ambition;
And, as we may, cherish Duke Humphrey's deeds,
While they do tend the profit of the land.

_War._ So God help Warwick, as he loves the land,
And common profit of his country!

_York._ Aside. And so says York, for he hath greatest cause.

_Sal._ Then let's make haste away, and look unto the main.

_War._ Unto the main! O father, Maine is lost!
That Maine which by main force Warwick did win,
And would have kept so long as breath did last:
Main chance, father, you meant; but I meant Maine,
Which I will win from France, or else be slain.

_Exeunt Warwick and Salisbury.

_York._ Anjou and Maine are given to the French;
Paris is lost; the state of Normandy
Stands on a tickle point now they are gone.
SECOND PART OF KING HENRY VI. 485

Enter Hume.

Hume. Jesus preserve your royal majesty! 72
Duch. What say'st thou? majesty! I am but grace.
Hume. But, by the grace of God, and Hume's advice, your grace's title shall be multiplied.
Duch. What say'st thou, man? hast thou as yet conferr'd
With Margery Jourdain, the cunning witch,
And Roger Bolingbroke, the conjurer?
And will they undertake to do me good?
Hume. This they have promised, to show your highness
A spirit rais'd from depth of under-ground,
That shall make answer to such questions 83
As by your grace shall be propounded him.
Duch. It is enough: I'll think upon the questions.
When from Saint Albans we do make return
We'll see these things effected to the full.
Here, Hume, take this reward; make merry, man,
With thy confederates in this weighty cause.

Exit.

Hume. Hume must make merry with the duchess' gold;
Marry and shall. But how now, Sir John Hume!
Seal up your lips and give no words but mum:
The business asketh silent secrecy. 93
Dame Eleanor gives gold to bring the witch:
Gold cannot come amiss, were she a devil.
Yet have I gold flies from another coast:
I dare not say from the rich cardinal
And from the great and new-made Duke of Suffolk;
Yet do I find it so: for, to be plain,
They, knowing Dame Eleanor's aspiring humour,
Have hired me to undermine the duchess
And buzz these conjurations in her brain.
They say 'A crafty knave does need no broker;
Yet am I Suffolk and the cardinal's broker.
Hume, if you take not heed, you shall go near to call them both a pair of crafty knives.
Well, so it stands; and thus, I fear at last
Hume's knavery will be the duchess' wreck,
And her attainture will be Humphrey's fall.
Sort how it will I shall have gold for all. Exit.

SCENE III.—The Same. A Room in the Palace.

Enter three or four Petitioners, Peter, the Armourer's man, being one.

First Petit. My masters, let's stand close: my lord protector will come this way by and by, and then we may deliver our supplcations in the quill.

Second Petit. Marry, the Lord protect him, for he's a good man. Jesu bless him!

Enter Suffolk and Queen Margaret.

Peter. Here a' comes, methinks, and the queen with him. I'll be the first, sure.

Second Petit. Come back, fool! this is the Duke of Suffolk, and not my lord protector.

Suf. How now, fellow! would'st any thing with me?

First Petit. I pray, my lord, pardon me: I took ye for my lord protector.

Q. Mar. To my Lord Protector! Are your sup-plcations to his lordship? Let me see them:
what is thine?
First Pet. Mine is, an't please your grace, against John Goodman, my lord cardinal's man, for keeping my house, and lands, and wife, and all, from me.

Suf. Thy wife too! that's some wrong indeed.

What's yours? What's here! Against the Duke of Suffolk, for enclosing the commons of Melford.

How now, sir knave!

Second Pet. Alas! sir, I am but a poor petitioner of our whole township.

Peter. Against my master, Thomas Horner, for saying that the Duke of York was rightful heir to the crown.

Q. Mar. What sayest thou? did the Duke of York say he was rightful heir to the crown? a

Peter. That my master was? No, forsooth: my master said that he was, and that the king was an usurper.

Suf. Who is there?

Enter Servants.

Take this fellow in, and send for his master with a pursuivant presently. We'll hear more of your matter before the king.

Exeunt Servants with Peter.

Q. Mar. And as for you, that love to be protected

Under the wings of our protector's grace,

Begin your suits anew, and sue to him.

Turn the petition.

Away, base cullions! Suffolk, let them go.

All. Come, let's be gone. Exeunt Petitioners.

Q. Mar. My Lord of Suffolk, say, is this the guise

Is this the fashion in the court of England?

Is this the government of Britain's isle,

And this the royalty of Albion's king?

What! shall King Henry be a pupil still

Under the surly Gloucester's governance?

Am I a queen in title and in style,

And must be made a subject to a duke?

I tell thee, Pole, when in the city Tours

Thou ram'st a tilt in honour of my love,

And stol'st away the ladies' hearts of France,

I thought King Henry had resembled thee

In courage, courtship, and proportion:

But all his mind is bent to holiness,

To number Ave-Maries on his beads;

His champions are the prophets and apostles,

His weapons holy swards of sacred writ,

His study is his tilt-yard, and his loves

Are brazen images of canoniz'd saints.

I would the college of the cardinals

Would choose him pope, and carry him to Rome,

And set the triple crown upon his head:

That were a state fit for his holiness.

Suf. Madam, be patient; as I was cause

Your highness came to England, so will I

In England work your grace's full content.

Q. Mar. Beside the haughty protector, have we Beaufort

The imperious churchman, Somerset, Buckingham, and grumbling York; and not the least of these

But can do more in England than the king.

Suf. And he of these that can do most of all

Cannot do more in England than the Nevils:

Salisbury and Warwick are no simple peers.

Q. Mar. Not all these lords do vex me half so much

As that proud dame, the lord protector's wi'

She sweeps it through the court with trophies

ladies,

More like an empress than Duke Humphry's

wife.

Strangers in court do take her for the queen.

She bears a duke's revenues on her back,

And in her heart she scorcs our poverty.

Shall I not live to be aveng'd on her?

Contemptuous base-born callat as she is,

She vaunted 'mongst her minions 'other day,

The very train of her worst wearing gown

Was better worth than all my father's lands.

Till Suffolk gave two dukedoms for his daughter.

Suf. Madam, myself have lim'd a bush for it,

And plac'd a quire of such enticing birds

That she will light to listen to the lays,

And never mount to trouble you again.

So, let her rest: and, madam, list to me;

For I am bold to counsel you in this.

Although we fancy not the cardinal,

Yet must we join with him and with the lords

Till we have brought Duke Humphrey in disgrace.

As for the Duke of York, this late complain

Will make but little for his benefit:

So, one by one, we'll weed them all at last,

And you yourself shall steer the happy helm.

Sound a hornet. Enter King Henry, York, of Somerset; Duke and Duchess of Gloucester, Cardinal Beaufort, Buckingham, Salisbury, and Warwick.

K. Hen. For my part, noble lords, I care not which;

Or Somerset or York, all's one to me.

York. If York have ill demean'd himself in France,

Then let him be denay'd the regentship.

Som. If Somerset be unworthy of the place

Let York be regent; I will yield to him.

War. Whether your grace be worthy, yea or nay,

Dispute not that: York is the worthier.

Car. Ambitious Warwick, let thy better sence

War. The cardinal's not my better in the field.

Buck. All in this presence are thy better.

War. Warwick may live to be the best of us.

Sal. Peace, son! and show some regard,

Buckingham,

Why Somerset should be prefer'd in this.

Q. Mar. Because the king, forsooth, will be it so.

Glou. Madam, the king is old enough himself;

To give his censure: these are no women's matters.

Q. Mar. If he be old enough, what needs ye grace

To be protector of his excellency?

Glou. Madam, I am protector of the realm

And at his pleasure will resign my place.

Suf. Resign it then and leave thine insolence.

Since thou wert king, as who is king but thou?

The commonwealth hath daily run to wreck

The Dauphin hath prevail'd beyond the seas.

And all the peers and nobles of the realm

Have been as bondmen to thy sovereignty.

Car. The commons hast thou rack'd;

clergy's bags

Are lank and lean with thy extortions.

Som. Thy sumptuous buildings and thy wise attire

SECOND PART OF KING HENRY VI.

Enter MARGERY JOURDAIN, HUME, SOUTH- WELl, and BOLINGBROKE.

Hume. Come, my masters; the duchess, I tell you, expects performance of your promises. Boling. Master Hume, we are therefore provided. Will her ladyship behold and hear our exorcisms?

Hume. Ay; what else? fear you not her courage.

Boling. I have heard her reported to be a woman of an invincible spirit: but it shall be convenient, Master Hume, that you be by her aloft while you are busy below; and so, I pray you, go, in God's name, and leave us.

Exit Hume.

Mother Jourdain, be you prostrate, and grovel on the earth; John Southwell, read you; and let us to work.

Enter DUCHESS aloft, HUME following.

Duch. Well said, my masters, and welcome all. To this gear the sooner the better.

Boling. Patience, good lady; wizards know their times; Deep night, dark night, the silent of the night. The time of night when Troy was set on fire;
The time when screech-owls cry, and ban-dogs howl,
And spirits walk, and ghosts break up their graves,
That time best fits the work we have in hand.
Madam, sit you, and fear not: whom we raise
We will make fast within a hallow'd verge.

Here they do the ceremonies belonging,
And make the circle; Bolingbroke or Southwell reads, Conjuro te, etc.
It thundered and lightens terribly; then the Spirit violeth.

Spir. Adsum.
M. Jourd. Asmuth!
By the eternal God, whose name and power
Thou tremblest at, answer that I shall ask;
For till thou speak thou shalt not pass from hence.

Spir. Ask what thou wilt. That I had said
and done!
Boling. First, of the king: what shall of him become?
Spir. The duke yet lives that Henry shall depose;
But him outlive, and die a violent death.

As the Spirit speaks, Southwell writes the answer.

Boling. What fates await the Duke of Suffolk?
Spir. By water shall he die and take his end.
Boling. What shall befall the Duke of Somerset?
Spir. Let him shun castles:
Safer shall he be upon the sandy plains
Than where castles mounted stand.
Have done, for more I hardly can endure.
Boling. Descend to darkness and the burning lake:
False fiend, avoid!

Thunder and lightning. Spirit descends.

Enter York and Buckingham, hastily, with their Guard.

York. Lay hands upon these traitors and their trash.
Beldam, I think we watch'd you at an inch.
What! madam, are you there? the king and commonwealth
Are deeply indebted for this piece of pains:
My lord protector will, I doubt it not,
See you well guerdon'd for these good deserts.

Duch. Not half so bad as thine to England's king,
Injurious duke, that threatrest where's no cause.

Buck. True, madam, none at all. What call you this?
Away with them! let them be clapp'd up close,
And kept asunder. You, madam, shall with us;
Stafford, take her to thee.

Exeunt above Duchess and Hume, guarded.

We'll see your trinkets here all forthcoming.
All, away! Exeunt Guard, with Southwell, Bolingbroke, etc.

York. Lord Buckingham, methinks you watch'd
her well:
A pretty plot, well chosen to build upon!
Now, pray, my lord, let's see the devil's writ.
What have we here?
The duke yet lives that Henry shall depose;
But him outlive, and die a violent death.

Why, this is just
Aio te, Abaica, Romanus vineare poss.
Well, to the rest:
Tell me what fate awaits the Duke of Suffolk?
By water shall he die and take his end.
What shall betide the Duke of Somerset?
Let him shun castles:
Safer shall he be upon the sandy plains
Than where castles mounted stand.
Come, come, my lords; these oracles Are hardly attain'd, and hardly understood.
The king is now in progress towards Saint Alban's;
With him the husband of this lovely lady:
Thither go these news as fast as horse can carry them:
A sorry breakfast for my lord protector.

Buck. Your grace shall give me leave, your Lord of York,
To be the post, in hope of his reward.
York. At your pleasure, my good lord. We're within there, ho!

Enter a Servingman.
Invite my Lords of Salisbury and Warwick
To sup with me to-morrow night. Away! Exit.
Why, you, my lord; t'like your lordly lord-protectorship.

Mar. And thy ambition, Gloucester.

K. Hen. I prithee, peace, good queen, and whet not on these furious peers; they bless'd are these peacemakers on earth.

Car. Let me be blessed for the peace I make amidst this proud protector with my sword.

Glo. Aside to the Cardinal. Faith, holy uncle, would 'twere come to that!

Car. Aside to Gloucester. Marry, when thou dost.

Glo. Aside to the Cardinal. Make up no factious numbers for the matter; thine own person answer thy abuse.

Car. Aside to Gloucester. Ay, where thou dar'st not peep: an if thou dar'st, is evening on the east side of the grove.

K. Hen. How now, my lords!

Car. Believe me, cousin Gloucester, if not your man put up the fowl so suddenly, I had had more sport. Aside to Gloucester.

Come with thy two-hand sword.

Glo. True, uncle.

Car. Aside to Gloucester. Are ye advis'd? the east side of the grove.

Glo. Aside to the Cardinal. Cardinal, I am with you.

Suf. to the Cardinal. Now, by God's mother, priest, I'll shave your crown or this, or all my fence shall fail.

Car. Aside to Gloucester. Melitus, teipsum—protector, see to 't well, protect yourself.

K. Hen. The winds grow high; so do your stomachs, lords.

Glo.irk some is this music to my heart? seen such strings jar, what hope of harmony? ray, my lords, let me compound this strife.

Enter One, crying 'A miracle!'

Glo. What means this noise? allow, what miracle dost thou proclaim?

One. A miracle! a miracle!

Suf. Come to the king and tell him what miracle.

One. Forsooth, a blind man at Saint Alban's shrine within this half hour hath receiv'd his sight; man that ne'er saw in his life before.

K. Hen. Now, God be prais'd, that to believing souls gives light in darkness, comfort in despair!

Car. Here comes the townsman on procession, to present his highness with the man.

K. Hen. Great is his comfort in this earthly vale, although by his sight his sin be multiplied.

Glo. Stand by, my masters; bring him near the king: his highness' pleasure is to talk with him.

K. Hen. Good fellow, tell us here the circumstance, That we for thee may glorify the Lord.

What! hast thou been long blind, and now restor'd?

Simp. Born blind, an't please your grace.

Wife. Ay, indeed, was he.

Suf. What woman is this?

Wife. His wife, an't like your worship.

Glo. Hadst thou been his mother, thou could'st have better told.

K. Hen. Where went thou born?

Simp. At Berwick in the north, an't like your grace.

K. Hen. Poor soul! God's goodness hath been great to thee:

Let never day nor night unhallow'd pass, But still remember what the Lord hath done.

Q. Mar. Tell me, good fellow, can'st thou here by chance, Or of devotion, to this holy shrine?

Simp. God knows, of pure devotion; being call'd

A hundred times and oftener in my sleep, By good Saint Alban; who said, 'Simpcox, come;

Come, offer at my shrine, and I will help thee.'

Wife. Most true, forsooth; and many time and oft

Myself have heard a voice to call him so.

Car. What! art thou lame?

Simp. Ay, God Almighty help me!

Suf. How cam'st thou so?

Simp. A fall off of a tree.

Wife. A plum-tree, master.

Glo. How long hast thou been blind?

Simp. O! born so, master.

Glo. What! and would'st climb a tree?

Simp. But that in all my life, when I was a youth.

Wife. Too true; and bought his climbing very dear.

Glo. Mass, thou lov'dst plums well, that would'st venture so.

Simp. Alas! master, my wife desir'd some damsons,

And made me climb with danger of my life.

Glo. A subtle knave! but yet it shall not serve.

Let me see thine eyes: wink now; now open them.

In my opinion yet thou seest not well.

Simp. Yes, master, clear as day, I thank God and Saint Alban.

Glo. Say'st thou me so? What colour is this cloak of?

Simp. Red, master; red as blood.

Glo. Why, that's well said. What colour is my gown of?

Simp. Black, forsooth; coal-black as jet.

K. Hen. Why then, thou know'st what colour jet is of?

Suf. And yet, I think, jet did he never see.

Glo. But cloaks and gowns before this day a many.

Wife. Never, before this day, in all his life.

Glo. Tell me, sirrah, what's my name?

Simp. Alas! master, I know not.

Glo. What's his name?

Simp. I know not.
Glou. Nor his?
Simp. No, indeed, master.
Glou. What's thine own name?
Simp. Saundra Simpson, an if it please you, master.
Glou. Then, Saunders, sit there, the liestest knave in Christendom. If thou hadst been born blind, thou might'st as well have known all our names as thus to name the several colours we do wear. Sight may distinguish of colours, but suddenly to nominate them all, it is impossible. My lords, Saint Alban here hath done a miracle; and wouldn't not think his cunning to be great, that could restore this cripple to his legs again!
Simp. O master, that you could! 132
Glou. My masters of Saint Alban's, have you not beaddles in your town, and things called whips?
May. Yes, my lord, if it please your grace.
Glou. Then send for one presently.
May. Sirrah, go fetch the beadle hither straight.
Exit an Attendant.
Glou. Now fetch me a stool hither by and by. Now, sirrah, if you mean to save yourself from whipping, leap me over this stool and run away.
Simp. Alas! master, I am not able to stand alone:
You go about to torture me in vain.
Re-enter Attendant, and a Beadle with a whip.
Glou. Well, sir, we must have you find your legs. Sirrah beadle, whip him till he leap over that same stool.
Reed. I will, my lord. Come on, sirrah; off with your doublet quickly.
Simp. Alas! master, what shall I do? I am not able to stand.
After the Beadle hath hit him once, he leaps over the stool and runs away; and they follow and cry, 'A miracle!'
K. Hen. O God! seest thou this, and bearst so long?
Q. Mar. It made me laugh to see the villain run.
Glou. Follow the knave; and take this drab away.
Wife. Alas! sir, we did it for pure need.
Glou. Let them be whipped through every market-town till they come to Berwick, from whence they came.
Execut Mayor, Beadle, Wife, etc.
Car. Duke Humphrey has done a miracle to-day.
Suf. True; made the lame to leap and fly away.
Glou. But you have done more miracles than I; you made in a day, my lord, whole towns to fly.
Enter BUCKINGHAM.
K. Hen. What tidings with our cousin Buckingham?
Buck. Such as my heart doth tremble to unfold, A sort of naughty persons, lowly bent, Under the countenance and conferency Of Lady Eleanor, the protector's wife: The ringleader and head of all this ront, Have practis'd dangerously against your state, Dealing with witches and with conjurers; 170 Whom we have apprehended in the fact; Raising up wicked spirits from underground, Demanding of King Henry's life and death, And other of your highness' privy council, As more at large your grace shall understand.
Car. And so, my lord protector, by this means Your lady is forthcoming yet at London. This news, I think, hath turn'd your weapons edge;
'Tis like, my lord, you will not keep your ho
Glou. Ambitious churchman, leave to affect my heart: Sorrow and grief have vanquish'd all my powers: And, vanquish'd as I am, I yield to thee. Or to the meanest groom.
K. Hen. O God! what mischiefs work we wicked ones. Heaping confusion on their own heads there.
Q. Mar. Gloucester, see here the tainture thy nest, And look thyself be faultless, thou wert best.
Glou. Madam, for myself, to heaven I do app. How I have lov'd my king and commonweal And, for my wife, I know not how it stands. Sorry I am to hear what I have heard: Noble she is, but if she have forgot Honour and virtue, and convers'd with such As, like to pitch, desile nobility, I banish her my bed and company, And give her as a prey to law and shame, That hath dishonour'd Gloucester's honest man.
K. Hen. Well, for this night we will reposes here: To-morrow toward London back again, To look into this business thoroughly, And call these foul offenders to their answer And poise the cause in justice' equal scales, Whose beam stands sure, whose rightful can prevail.
Flourish. Exeunt.

Enter YORK, SALISBURY, and WARWICK.
York. Now, my good Lords of Salisbury and Warwick,
Our simple supper ended, give me leave
In this close walk to satisfy myself,
In craving your opinion of my title,
Which is infallible, to England's crown.
Suf. My lord, I long to hear it at full.
War. Sweet York, begin; and if thy cause be good,
The Nevils are thy subjects to command.
York. Then thus:
Edward the third, my lords, had seven sons:
The first, Edward the Black Prince, Prince Wales;
The second, William of Hatfield; and the third Lionel Duke of Clarence; next to whom Was John of Gaunt, the Duke of Lancaster;
The fifth was—Edmund Langley, Duke of York.
The sixth was Thomas of Woodstock, Duke Gloucester;
William of Wilt'sor was the seventh and last.
Edward the Black Prince died before his father
And left behind him Richard, his only son,
Who, after Edward the Third's death, reign'd as king;
Till Henry Bolingbroke, Duke of Lancaster,
The eldest son and heir of John of Gaunt,
Crown'd by the name of Henry the Fourth,
Seiz'd on the realm, depos'd the rightful king.
Scene II.

SECOND PART OF KING HENRY VI.

at his poor queen to France, from whence she came,
and to Pumfret ; where, as all you know, unless Richard was murder'd traitorously.

Var. Father, the duke hath told the truth ;
and got the house of Lancaster the crown.

York. Which now they hold by force and not by right ;

Richard, the first son's heir, being dead,
issue of the next son should have reign'd. &

But William of Hatfield died without an heir.

York. The third son, Duke of Clarence, from whose line aim the crown, had issue Philippe, a daughter, who married Edmund Mortimer, Earl of March ;
and had issue, Roger, Earl of March ;
and had issue, Edmund, Anne, and Eleanor.

This Edmund, in the reign of Bolingbroke, I have read, laid claim unto the crown ;
d, but for Owen Glendower, had been king,
and kept him in captivity till he died,
to the rest.

York. His eldest sister, Anne, mother, being heir unto the crown, married Richard, Earl of Cambridge, who was son Edmund Langley, Edward the Third's fifth son.
her I claim the kingdom : she was heir
Roger, Earl of March, who was the son
Edmund Mortimer, who married Philippe, deughter unto Lionel Duke of Clarence.

But the issue of the elder son ceased before the younger, I am king.

War. What plain proceeding is more plain than this?

Henry doth claim the crown from John of Gaunt,
e four son; York claims it from the third.
Lionel's issue fails, his should not reign : fails it not yet, but flourishes in thee, in thy sons, fair slips of such a stock.

in, father Salisbury, kneel we together, and in this private plot be we the first shall salute our rightful sovereign with honour of his birthright to the crown.

Both. Long live our sovereign Richard, England's king!

York. We thank you, lords! But I am not your king ill I be crown'd and that my sword be stain'd with the blood of the house of Lancaster;
and that's not suddenly to be perform'd,
at with advice and silent secrecy.

you as I do in these dangerous days,
link at the Duke of Suffolk's insolence,

at Beaufort's pride, at Somerset's ambition,
at Buckingham and all the crew of them,
ill they have snared the shepherd of the flock,
with virtuous prince, the good Duke Humphrey; is that they seek ; and they in seeking that shall find their deaths, if York can prophesy.

Sal. My lord, break we off ; we know your mind at full.

War. My heart assures me that the Earl of Warwick shall one day make the Duke of York a king.

York. And, Nevil, this I do assure myself : richard shall live to make the Earl of Warwick the greatest man in England but the king.

Exit. SCENE III.—The Same. A Hall of Justice.

Sound trumpets. Enter King HENRY, Queen
MARGARET, GLoucester, YORK, SUFFOLK, and SALISBURY ; the Duchess of GLou-Cester, MARGERY JOURDAIN, SOUTHWELL, HUME, and BOLINGBROKE, under guard.

K. Hen. Stand forth, Dame Eleanor Cobham, Gloucester's wife.

In sight of God and us, your guilt is great:
Receive the sentence of the law for sins
Such as by God's book are adjudg'd to death.
You four, from hence to prison back again ;
From thence unto the place of execution :
The witch in Smithfield shall be burn'd to ashes,

And you three shall be strangled on the gallows.
You, madam, for you are more nobly born,
Despoiled of your honour in your life,

Shall, after three days' open penance done,
Live in your country here in banishment,
With Sir John Stanley, in the Isle of Man.

Duch. Welcome is banishment; welcome were my death.

Glou. Eleanor, the law, thou seest, hath judged thee;
I cannot justify whom the law condemns.

Evacn the DUCHESS and the other Prisoners, guarded.

Mine eyes are full of tears, my heart of grief.
Ah! Humphry, this dishonour in thine age
Will bring thy head with sorrow to the ground.
I beseech your majesty, give me leave to go ;
Sorrow would solace and mine age would ease.

K. Hen. Stay, Humphry, Duke of Gloucester:
ere thou go,
Give up thy staff : Henry will to himself
Protector be; and God shall be my hope,
My stay, my guide, and lantern to my feet.
And go in peace, Humphry, no less belov'd
Than when thou wert protector to thy king.

Q. Mar. I see no reason why a king of years
Should be to be protected like a child.

God and King Henry govern England's realm!
Give up your staff, sir, and the king his realm.

Glou. My staff? here, noble Henry, is my staff,
As willingly do I the same resign
As e'er thy father Henry made it mine ;
And even as willingly at thy feet I leave it
As others would ambitiously receive it.
Farewell, good king! when I am dead and gone,
May honourable peace attend thy throne.

Exit.

Q. Mar. Why, now is Henry king, and Maregaret queen ;

And Humphry Duke of Gloucester scarce himself,
That bears so shrewd a maine : two pulls at once;
His lady banish'd, and a limb lopp'd off;
This staff of honour raught : there let it stand,
Where it best fits to be, in Henry's hand.

Suf. Thus dropes this lofty pine and hangs his sprays;

Thus Eleanor's pride dies in her youngest days,
York. Lords, let him go. Please it your majesty
This is the day appointed for the combat ;
And ready are the appellant and defendant,
The armourer and his man, to enter the lists,
So please your highness to behold the fight.
Q. Mar. Ay, good my lord; for purposely therefore Left I the court to see this quarrel tried.
K. Hen. O' God's name, see the lists and all things fit:
Here let them end it; and God defend the right!
York. I never saw a fellow worse bosted,
Or more afraid to fight, than is the appellant,
The servant of this armourer, my lords.

Enter, on one side, Horner, and his neighbours drinking to him so much that he is drunk; and he enters bearing his staff with a sand-bag fastened to it; a drum before him; at the other side, Peter, with a drum and sand-bag; and Prentices drinking to him.

First Neigh. Here, neighbour Horner, I drink to you in a cup of sack: and fear not, neighbour, you shall do well enough.
Second Neigh. And here, neighbour, here's a cup of charneco.
Third Neigh. And here's a pot of good double beer, neighbour: drink, and fear not your man.

Hor. Let it come, i' faith, and I'll pledge you all;
and a fig for Peter!
First Pren. Here, Peter, I drink to thee; and be not afraid.
Second Pren. Be merry, Peter, and fear not thy master: fight for credit of the prentices.
Peter. I thank you all: drink, and pray for me, I pray you; for I think I have taken my last draught in this world. Here, Robin, an if I die, I give thee my apron; and, Will, thou shalt have my hammer: and here, Tom, take all the money that I have. O Lord, bless me! I pray God, for I am never able to deal with my master, he hath learnt so much fence already.
Sal. Come, leave your drinking and fall to blows. Sirrah, what's thy name?
Peter. Peter, forsooth.
Sal. Peter! What more?
Peter. Thump.
Sal. Thump! then see thou thump thy master well.
Hor. Masters, I am come hither, as it were,
upon my man's instigation, to prove him a knave, and myself an honest man: and touching the Duke of York, I will take my death I never meant him any ill, nor the king, nor the queen:
and therefore, Peter, have at thee with a down-right blow.
York. Dispatch: this knave's tongue begins to double. Sound, trumpets, alarm to the combatants. Alarum. They fight, and PETER strikes down his Master.

Hor. Hold, Peter, hold! I confess, I confess treason. Dies.
York. Take away his weapon. Fellow, thank God, and the good wine in thy master's way.
Peter. O God! have I overcome mine enemies in this presence? O Peter! thou hast prevailed in right.
K. Hen. Go, take hence that traitor from our sight;
For by his death we do perceive his guilt:
And God in justice hath reveal'd to us
The truth and innocence of this poor fellow,
Which he had thought to have murder'd with full.
Come, fellow, follow us for thy reward.
Sound a flourish. Exit.

Scene IV.—The same. A street.

Enter Gloucester and Servingmen, in mourning cloaks.

Glou. Thus sometimes hath the brightest cloud;
And after summer evermore succeeds
Barren winter, with his wrathful nipping cold.
So cares and joys abound, as seasons fleet.
Sirs, what's o'clock?
Serv. Ten, my lord.
Glou. Ten is the hour that was appointed
To watch the coming of my punish'd duchess.
Unearth may she endure the flinty streets,
To tread them with her tender-feeling feet.
Sweet Nell, ill can thy noble mind abrook
The abject people gazing on thy face.
With envious looks, laughing at thy shame,
That erst did follow thy proud chariot whee.
When thou didst ride in triumph through streets.
But soft! I think she comes; and I'll prepare
My tear-stain'd eyes to see her miseries.

Enter the Duchess of Gloucester, in a white sheet, her feet bare, and a taper burning in her hand; Sir John Stanley, a sheriff, and Office.

Serv. So please your grace, we'll take her from the sheriff.

Glou. No, stir not, for your lives; let her pass by.

Duch. Come you, my lord, to see my own shame?
Now thou dost pence too. Look! how thy gaze.
See! the giddy multitude do point,
And nod their heads, and throw their eyes on the Ah! Gloucester, hide thee from their hate looks,
And, in thy closet pent up, rue thy shame,
And ban thine enemies, both mine and thine
Glou. Be patient, gentle Nell; forget this grief.
Duch. Ah! Gloucester, teach me to forget myself;
For whilst I think I am thy married wife,
And thou a prince, protector of this land,
Methinks I should not thus be led along,
Maid'd up in shame, with papers on my back,
And follow'd with a rabble that rejoice
To see my tears and hear my deep-fet groans.
The ruthless flint doth cut my tender feet,
And when I start, the envious people laugh,
And bid me be advised how I tread.
Ah! Humphrey, can I bear this shameful yoke?
Trow'st thou that e'er I'll look upon the world?
Or count them happy that enjoy the sun?
No; dark shall be my light, and night my day.
To think upon my pomp shall be my hell.
Sometime I'll say, I am Duke Humphrey's wife
And her a prince and ruler of the land.
Yet so he ruleth and such a prince he was
As he stood by whilst I, his forlorn duchess,
Was made a wonder and a pointing-stock
To every idle rascal follower.
But be thou mild and blush not at my shame;
Enter a Herald.

Her. I summon your grace to his majesty's daimion, holden at Bury the first of this next nth.

Now. And my consent ne'er ask'd herein before! is close dealing. Well, I will be there, Exit Herald.

Nell, I take my leave; and, Master sheriff, t her penance exceed the king's commision. Sher. An't please your grace, here my com mission stays, d Sir John Stanley is appointed now take her with him to the Isle of Man.
Now. Must you, Sir John, protect my lady here?

Stan. So am I given in charge, may't please your grace.

Now. Entreat her not the worse in that I pray use her well. The world may laugh again if i may live to do you kindness if a do it her: and so, Sir John, farewell. Duch. What! gone, my lord, and bid me not farewell.

Now. Witness my tears, I cannot stay to speak. Exit Gloucester and Servants.

Duch. Art thou gone too? All comfort go with thee!

r none abides with me: my joy is death;
ath, at whose name I oft have been afraid, cause I wished'd this world's eternity. mley, I prithee, go, and take me hence;
are not whitner, for I beg no favour, lv convey me where thou art commanded. Stan. Why, madam, that is to the Isle of Man:
er to be us'd according to your state. Duch. That's bad enough, for I am but reproach:
d shall I then be us'd reproachfully?

Stan. Like to a duchess, and Duke Humphrey's lady:

cording to that state you shall be used. Duch. Sheriff, farewell, and better than I fare, thou hast been conduct of my shame. Sher. It is my office; and, madam, pardon me. Duch. Ay, ay, farewell; thy office is discharg'd.
ue, Stanley, shall we go!

Stan. Madam, your penance done, throw off this sheet,
And go to we to attire you for our journey.
Duch. My shame will not be shifted with my sheet: No; it will hang upon my richest robes,
And show itself, attire me how I can. 19
Go, lead the way; I long to see my prison. Exeunt.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—The Abbey at Bury St. Edmunds.

Sound a sennet. Enter to the Parliament, King Henry, Queen Margaret, Cardinal Beaufort, Suffolk, York, Buckingham, and Others.

K. Hen. I muse my Lord of Gloucester is not come:
'Tis not his wont to be the hindmost man,
Whate'er occasion keeps him from us now.
Q. Mar. Can you not see? or will ye not observe
The strangeness of his alter'd countenance?
With what a majesty he bears himself,
How insolent of late he is become,
How proud, how peremptory, and unlike himself?
We know the time since he was mild and affable,
An if we did but glance a far-off look,
Immediately he was upon his knee,
That all the court admiring him for submission:
but meet him now, and, be it in the morn,
When every one will give the time of day,
He knits his brow and shows an angry eye,
And passeth by with stiff unbowed knee,
Disdaining duty that to us belongs.
Small curs are not regarded when they grin,
But great men tremble when the lion roars;
And Humphrey is no little man in England.
First note that he is near you in descent,
And should you fall, he is the next will mount.
Me seemeth then it is no policy,
Respecting what a rancorous mind he bears,
And his advantage following your decease,
That he should come about your royal person
Or be admitted to your highness' council,
By flattery hath he won the commons' hearts,
And when he please to make commotion,
'Tis to be fear'd they all will follow him.
Now 'tis the spring, and weeds are shallow rooted;
Suffer them now and they'll o'ergrow the garden,
And chose the herbs for want of husbandry.
The reverent care I bear unto my lord
Made me collect these dangers in the duke.
If it be fond, call it a woman's fear;
Which fear if better reasons can supplant,
I will subscribe and say I wrong'd the duke.
My Lord of Suffolk, Buckingham, and York,
Reprove my allegation if you can;
Or else conclude my words effectual.

Suf. Well hath your highness seen into this duke;
And had I first been put to speak my mind,
I think I should have told your grace's tale.
The duchess by his subornation,
Upon my life, began her devilish practices;
Or if he were not privy to those faults,
Yet, by repeating of his high descent,
As next the king he was successive heir,
And such high vaunts of his nobility,
Did instigate the bedlam brain-sick duchess
By wicked means to frame our sovereign’s fall.
Smooth runs the water where the brook is deep,
And in his simple show he harvests treason.
The fox barks not when he would steal the lamb:
No, no, my sovereign; Gloucester is a man
Unsounded yet, and full of deep deceit.

Car. Did he not, contrary to form of law,
Devise strange deaths for small offences done?
York. And did he not, in his protectoryship,
Loye great sums of money through the realm
For soldiers’ pay in France, and never sent it?
By means wherof the towns each day revolted.

Buck. Tut! these are petty faults to faults unknown,
Which time will bring to light in smooth Duke Humphrey.

K. Hen. My lords, at once: the care you have
of us,
To mow down thorns that would annoy our foot,
Is worthy praise; but shall I speak my conscience,
Our kinsman Gloucester is as innocent
From meaning treason to our royal person,
As is the sucking lamb or harmless dove.
The duke is virtuous, mild, and too well given
To dream on evil, or to work my downfall.

q. Mar. Ah! what’s more dangerous than this fond affiance.
Seems he a dove? his feathers are but borrow’d,
For he’s disposed as the hateful raven:
Is he a lamb? his skin is surely lent him,
For he’s inclin’d as is the ravenous wolf.
Who cannot steal a shape that means deceit?
Take heed, my lord; the welfare of us all
Hangs on the cutting short that fraudulent man.

Enter Somerset.

Som. All health unto my gracious sovereign!
K. Hen. Welcome, Lord Somerset. What news
from France?
Som. That all your interest in those territories
Is utterly bereft you; all is lost.

K. Hen. Cold news, Lord Somerset: but God’s will be done!
York. Aside. Cold news for me; for I had hope of France
As firmly as I hope for fertile England.
Thus are my blossoms blasted in the bud,
And caterpillars eat my leaves away;
But I will remedy this gear ere long;
Or sell my title for a glorious grave.

Enter Gloucester.

Glou. All happiness unto my lord the king!
Pardon, my liege, that I have stay’d so long.
Suf. Nay, Gloucester, know that thou art come too soon,
Unless thou wert more loyal than thou art.
I do arrest thee of high treason here.
Glou. Well, Suffolk’s duke, thou shalt not see me blush,
Nor change my countenance for this arrest:
A heart unsettled is not easily daunted.
The purest spring is not so free from mud
As I am clear from treason to my sovereign.
Who can accuse me? wherein am I guilty?
York. ’Tis thought, my lord, that you took bribes of France,
And, being protector, stay’d the soldiers’ pay;
By means whereof his highness hath lost France.
Glou. Is it but thought so? What are they that think it?
I never robb’d the soldiers of their pay,
Nor ever had one penny bribe from France.
So help me God, as I have watch’d the night.
Ay, night by night, in studying good for England.
That doth that e’er I wrested from the king.
Or any grant I heeded to my use.
Be brought against me at my trial-day!
No; many a pound of mine own proper store
Because I would not tax the needy common
Have I dispersed to the garrisons,
And never ask’d for restitution.

Car. It serves you well, my lord, to say so much.
Glou. I say no more than truth, so help me God.
York. In your protectoryship you did devise Strange tortures for offenders, never heard
That England was defam’d by tyranny.

Glou. Why, ’tis well known that, while I was protector,
Pity was all the fault that was in me;
For I should melt at an offender’s tears,
And lowly words were ransom for their fault.
Unless it were a bloody murderer,
Or foul felonious thief that fleec’d poor
sengers,
I never gave them condign punishment.
Murder indeed, that bloody sin, I tortur’d
Above the felon or what trespass else.

Suf. My lord, these faults are easy, quickly answer’d;
But mightier crimes are laid unto your char.
Whereof you cannot easily purge yourself.
I do arrest you in his highness’ name;
And here commit you to my lord cardinal
To keep, until your further time of trial.

K. Hen. My Lord of Gloucester, ’tis my solemn hope
That you will clear yourself from all suspect.
My conscience tells me you are innocent.

Glou. Ah! gracious lord, these days are dangerous.
Virtue is chok’d with foul ambition,
And charity chas’d hence by runcour’s hand.
Foul subornation is predominant,
And equity exil’d your highness’ land.
I know their complot is to have my life;
And if my death might make this island happy,
And prove the period of their tyranny,
I would expend it with all willingness;
But mine is made the prologue to their play
For thousands more, that yet suspect no pet,
Will not conclude their plotted tragedy.
Beaufort’s red sparkling eyes blab his heart’s malice,
And Suffolk’s cloudy brow his stormy hate;
Sharp Buckingham unburdens with his tongue
The envious load that lies upon his heart;
And dogged York, that reaches at the moon
Whose overweening arm I have pluck’d back
By false accuse doth level at my life:
And you, my sovereign lady, with the rest,
Causeless hath laid disgraces on my head,
And with your best endeavours have stirr’d up
My liefest liege to be mine enemy.
Ay, all of you have laid your heads together,
Myself had notice of your conventicles,
And all to make away my guiltless life.
SECOND PART OF KING HENRY VI.

all not want false witness to condemn me,
store of treasons to augment my guilt;
an ancient proverb will be well effected:
staff is quickly found to beat a dog.

Mar. My liege, his railing is intolerable.
hose that care to keep your royal person on treason's secret knife and traitors' rage thus upbraided, chid, and rated at,
the offender granted scope of speech,
will make them cool in zeal of your grace.

Hath he not twit our sovereign lady here inignominious words, though clerkly couch'd, if she had suborned some to swear
all allegations to o'erthrow his state?

Mar. But I can give the loser leave to chide.

low. Far truer speak than meant: I lose, indeed;
shrew the winners, for they play'd me false!
d well such losers may have leave to speak.

Humphrey. He'll wrest the sense and hold us here all day.
d cardinal, he is your prisoner.

Sirs, take away the duke, and guard him sure.

Ah! thus King Henry throws away his crutch fore his legs be firm to bear his body;
us is the shepherd beaten from thy side, d wolves are gnarling who shall gnaw thee first.
that my fear were false; ah! that it were;
good King Henry, thy decay I fear.

Exeunt Attendants with Gloucester.

K. Hen. My lords, what to your wisdoms seemeth best, or undo, as if ourself were here.

2. Mar. What! will your highness leave the parliament?

K. Hen. Ay, Margaret; my heart is drown'd with grief, ose flood begins to flow within mine eyes,
body round engirt with misery,
what's more miserable than discontent?

Uncle Humphrey, in thy face I see map of honour, truth, and loyalty;
yet, good Humphrey, is the hour to come at 'er I prov'd thee false, or fear'd thy faith.
hat lowring star now envies thy estate,
at these great lords, and Margaret our queen, seek subversion of thy harmless life?
never didst them wrong, nor man wrong;
ad as the butcher takes the calf,
binds the wretch, and beats it when it strays, caring it to the bloody slaughter-house;
so, remorseless, have they borne him hence;
ad, as the dam runs lowing up and down,
looking the way her harmless young one went,
can do not long; but wait her darling's loss;
so myself bewails good Gloucester's case with sad unhelpful tears, and with dimm'd eyes after him, and cannot do him good;
mighty are his vowed enemies.

is fortunes I will weep; and 'twixt each groin
'Who's a traitor? Gloucester he is none.'

Exit.

Q. Mar. Fair lords, cold snow melts with the sun's hot beams, emy my lord is cold in great affairs,
so full of foolish pity; and Gloucester's show agues him as the mournful crocodile with sorrow snareth relenting passengers;

Or as the snake, roll'd in a flowering bank,
With shining checker'd slough, doth sting a child
That for the beauty thinks it excellent.

Believe me, lords, were none more wise than I,
And yet herein I judge mine own wit good,
This Gloucester should be quickly rid the world,
To rid us from the fear we have of him.

Car. That he should die is worthy policy;
But yet we want a colour for his death.
'Tis meet he be condemn'd by course of law.

Suf. But in my mind that were no policy:
The king will labour still to save his life;
The commons haply rise to save his life;
And yet we have but trivial argument,
More than mistrust, that shows him worthy death.

York. So that, by this, you would not have him die.

Suf. Ah! York, no man alive so fain as I.

York. 'Tis York that hath more reason for his death.

But, my lord cardinal, and you, my Lord of Suffolk,
Say as you think, and speak it from your souls,
Were't not all one an empty eagle were set
To guard the chicken from a hungry kite,
As place Duke Humphrey for the king's protector?

Q. Mar. So the poor chicken should be sure of death.

Suf. Madam, 'tis true; and were't not madness then
To make the fox surveyor of the fold?
Who, being accus'd a crafty murderer,
His guilt should be but idly posted over
Because his purpose is not executed.
No; let him die, in that he is a fox,
By nature prov'd an enemy to the flock.
Before his chaps be stain'd with crimson blood,
As Humphrey, prov'd by reasons, to my liege.
And do not stand on quillet's how to slay him:
Be it by gius, by snares, by subtily,
Sleeping or waking, 'tis no matter how,
So he be dead; for that is good deceit.
Which mates him first that first intends deceit.

Q. Mar. Thrice noble Suffolk, 'tis resolutely spoke.

Suf. Not resolute, except so much were done;
For things are often spoke and seldom meant:
But that my heart accordeth with my tongue,
Seeing the deed is meritorious,
And to preserve my sovereign from his foe,
Say but the word and I will be his priest.

Car. But I would have him dead, my Lord of Suffolk,
Ere you can take due orders for a priest:
Say you consent and censure well the deed,
And I'll provide his executioner;
I tender so the safety of my liege.

Suf. Here is my hand, the deed is worthy doing.

Q. Mar. And so say I.

York. And I: and now we three have spoke it,
It skills not greatly who impugns our doom.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Great lords, from Ireland am I come again,
To signify that rebels there are up,
And put the Englishmen unto the sword.
Send succours, lords, and stop the rage betime,
Before the wound do grow incurable;
For, being green, there is great hope of help.

Car. A breach that craves a quick expedient stop!

What counsel give you in this weighty cause?

York. That Somerset be sent as regent thither.

'Tis meet that lucky ruler be employ'd;

Witness the fortune he hath had in France.

Som. If York, with all his far-fet policy,

Had been the regent there instead of me,

He never would have stay'd in France so long.

York. No, not to lose it all, as thou hast done.

I rather would have lost my life betimes

Than bring a burden of dishonour home,

By staying there so long till all were lost.

Show me one scar character'd on thy skin:

Men's flesh preserve'd so whole do seldom win.

Q. Mar. Nay then, this spark will prove a raging fire

If wind and fuel be brought to feed it with.

No more, good York; sweet Somerset, be still:

Thy fortune, York, hadst thou been regent there,

Might haply have prov'd far worse than his.

York. What! worse than nought I may, then a sinner take all.

Som. And in the number thee, that wishest shame.

Car. My Lord of York, try what your fortune is.

The uncivil kerns of Ireland are in arms

And temper clay with blood of Englishmen:

To Ireland will you lead a band of men,

Collected choice'ly, from each county some,

And try your hap against the Irishmen?

York. I will, my lord, so please his majesty.

Suf. Why, our authority is his consent,

And what we do establish he confirms:

Then, noble York, take thou this task in hand.

York. I am content; provide me soldiers, lords,

Whiles I take order for mine own affairs.

Suf. A charge, Lord York, that I will see perform'd.

But now return we to the false Duke Humphrey.

Car. No more of him; for I will deal with him

That henceforth he shall trouble us no more.

And so break off; the day is almost spent.

Lord Suffolk, you and I must talk of that event.

York. My Lord of Suffolk, within fourteen days

At Bristol I expect my soldiers;

For there I'll ship them all for Ireland.

Suf. I'll see it truly done, my Lord of York.

Exeunt all but York.

York. Now, York, or never, steel thy fearful thoughts.

And change misdoubt to resolution:

Be that thou hop'st to be, or what thou art

Resign to death; it is not worth the enjoying.

Let pale-fac'd fear keep with the mean-born man,

And find no harbour in a royal heart.

Faster than spring-time showers comes thought on thought,

And not a thought but thinks on dignity.

My brain, more busy than the labouring spider,

Weaves tedious snares to trap mine enemies.

Well, nobles, well; 'tis politicly done,

To send me packing with an host of men:

I fear me you but warm the starved snake,

Who, cherish'd in your breasts, will sting your hearts.

'Twas men I lack'd, and you will give them me:

I take it kindly; yet be well assur'd

You put sharp weapons in a madman's hands.

While I in Ireland nourish a mighty band,

I will stir up in England some black storm

Shall blow ten thousand souls to heaven or hell.

And this fell tempest shall not cease to rage,

Until the golden circuit on my head,

Like to the glorious sun's transparent beam

Do calm the fury of this mad-bred flaw.

And, for a minister of my intent,

I have seduced a headstrong Kentishman,

John Cade of Ashford,

To make commotion, as full well he can,

Under the title of John Mortimer.

In Ireland have I seen this stubborn Cade

Oppose himself against a troop of kerns,

And fought so long, till that his thighs with soil

Were almost like a sharp-qui'd' d'portentine

And, in the end being rescu'd, I have seen

Him caper upright like a wild Morisco,

Shaking the bloody darts as he his bells.

Full often, like a shag-hair'd crafty kern,

Hath he conversed with the enemy,

And undiscover'd come to me again,

And given me notice of their villainies.

This devil here shall be my substitute;

For that John Mortimer, which now is dead,

In face, in gait, in speech, he doth resemble

By this I shall perceive the commons' mind

How they affect the house and claim of Yor.

Say he be taken, rack'd, and tortured,

I know no pain they can inflict upon him

Will make him say I mov'd him to those acts,

Say that he thrive, as 'tis great like he will,

Why, then from Ireland come I with my strength,

And reap the harvest which that rascal sow'd.

For Humphrey being dead, as he shall be,

And Henry put apart, the next for me.

SCENE II.—Bury St. Edmunds. A Room of the Castle.

Enter certain Murderers, hastily.

First Mur. Run to my Lord of Suffolk; let him know

We have dispatch'd the duke, as he commanded.

Second Mur. O! that it were to do. We have we done?

Didst ever hear a man so penitent?

First Mur. Here comes my lord.

Enter Suffolk.

Suf. Now, sirs, have you dispatch'd this thinks?

First Mur. Ay, my good lord, he's dead.

Suf. Why, that's well said. Go, get you my house;

I will reward you for this venturous deed.

The king and all the peers are here at hand,

Have you laid fair the bed? Is all things well?

According as I gave directions?

First Mur. 'Tis, my good lord.

Suf. Away! be gone.

Exeunt Murderers.

Sound trumpets. Enter King Henry, Queen Margaret, Cardinal Beaufort, Somers, Lords, and Others.

K. Hen. Go, call our uncle to our presence straight;

Say we intend to try his grace to-day,

If he be guilty, as 'tis published.

Suf. I'll call him presently, my noble lord.
K. Hen. Lords, take your places; and, I pray you, all, oced no straiter against our uncle Gloucester than from true evidence, of good esteem, 2 to be approv’d in practice culpable.
Q. Mar. God forbid any malice should prevail at faultless may condemn a nobleman! ay God he may acquit him of suspicion! K. Hen. I thank thee, Meg; these words content me much.

Re-enter Suffolk.

now! why look’st thou pale? why tremblest thou?
here is our uncle? what’s the matter, Suffolk?
Suf. Dead in his bed, my lord; Gloucester is dead.
Q. Mar. Marry, God forfend! 20
Car. God’s secret judgment: I did dream to-night a duke was dumb and could not speak a word.

The King swoons.
Q. Mar. How fares my lord? Help, lords! the king is dead.
Som. Rear up his body; wring him by the nose.
Suf. He doth revive again. Madam, be patient.
K. Hen. O heavenly God!
K. Hen. What! doth my Lord of Suffolk comfort me?

He right now to sing a raven’s note, 40 these dismal tune bereft my vital powers, did think he that the chirping of a wren, crying comfort from a hollow breast, in chase away the first-conceived sound? do not thy poison with such sugar’d words; do not thy hands on me; forbear, I say: sir touch affrights me as a serpent’s sting, a baleful messenger, out of my sight! on thy eye-balls murderous tyranny is in grim majesty to fright the world. 50 ask not upon me, for thine eyes are wound’st: at do not go away: come, basilisk, ad kill the innocent gazer with thy sight; or in the shade of death I shall find joy, life but double death, now Gloucester’s dead.
Q. Mar. Why do you rate my Lord of Suffolk thus?
though the duke was enemy to him, et he, most Christian-like, laments his death: nd for myself, foe as he was to me, light liquid tears or heart-offending groans; blood-consuming sighs recall his life, would be blind with weeping, sick with groans, pale as primrose with blood-drinking sighs, all to have the noble duke alive.
that know I how the world may deem of me? or it is known we were but hollow friends: may be judg’d I made the duke away: o shall my name with slander’s tongue be wounded, nd princes’ courts be fill’d with my reproach: his get I by his death. Ay me, unhappy! 70 be a queen, and crown’d with infamy!
K. Hen. Ah! woe is me for Gloucester, wretched man.

Q. Mar. Be woe for me, more wretched than he is.
Q. Mar. dost thou turn away and hide thy face? I am no loathsome leper; look on me.
Q. Mar. art thou, like theadder, waxen deaf? Be poisonous too and kill thy forlorn queen. Is all thy comfort shut in Gloucester’s tomb? Why, then, Dame Margaret was ne’er thy joy: Erect his statua and worship it, 80 and make my image but an alehouse sign.

Was I for this night wreck’d upon the sea,
And twice by awkward wind from England’s bank
Drove back again unto my native clime?
What boded this, but well forewarning wind
Did seem to say ‘Seek not a scorpion’s nest,
Nor set no footing on this unkind shore’?
What did I then, but curs’d the gentle gusts
And he that loes’d them from their brazen caves;
And bid them blow towards England’s blessed shore,
or turn our stern upon a dreadful rock.
Yet Eolus would not be a murderer,
But left that hateful office unto thee:
The pretty-vaulting sea refus’d to drown me,
Knowing that thou wouldest have me drown’d on shore
With tears as salt as sea through thy unkindness:
The splitting rocks cower’d in the sinking sands,
And would not dash me with their sinking sides,
Because thy flinty heart, more hard than they,
Might in thy palace perish Margaret.
As far as I could ken thy chalky cliffs,
When from the shore the tempest beat us back,
I stood upon the hatches in the storm,
And when the dusky sky began to rob
My earnest gaping sight of thy land’s view,
I took a costly jewel from my neck,
A heart it was, bound in with diamonds,
And threw it towards thy land: the sea receive’d it,
And so I wish’d thy body might my heart: 109
And even with this I lost fair England’s view,
And bid mine eyes be packing with my heart,
And call’d them blind and dusky spectacles
For losing ken of Albion’s wished coast.
How often have I tempted Suffolk’s tongue,
The agent of thy foul inconstancy,
To sit and watch me, as Ascanius did
When he to madd’ng Dido would unfold
His father’s acts, concern’d in burning Troy!
Am I not wish’d like her? or thou not false like him?
Aye me! I can no more. Die, Margaret! 120
For Henry weeps that thou dost live so long.

Noise within. Enter Warwick and Salisbury.
The Commons press to the door.

War. It is reported, mighty sovereign,
That good Duke Humphrey traitorously is murder’d
By Suffolk and the Cardinal Beaufort’s means.
The commons, like an angry hive of bees
That want their leader, scatter up and down,
And care not who they sting in his revenge.
Myself have calm’d their sullenful mutiny,
Until they hear the order of his death.
K. Hen. That he is dead, good Warwick, ’tis too true;
But how he died God knows, not Henry.
Enter his chamber, view his branchless corpse,
And comment then upon his sudden death.
SECOND PART OF KING HENRY VI. [ACT 1]

War. That I shall do, my liege. Stay, Salisbury, With the rude multitude till I return.

Exeunt WARWICK and SALISBURY.

K. Hen. O! thou that judgest all things, stay my thoughts, My thoughts that labour to persuade my soul Some violent hands were laid on Humphrey’s life. If my suspect be false, forgive me, God, For judgment only doth belong to thee. 140 Fain would I go to clothe his paly lips With twenty thousand kisses, and to drain Upon his face an ocean of salt tears, To tell my love unto his dumb deaf trunk, And with my fingers feel his hands unfeeling; But all in vain are these mean obsequies, And to survey his dead and earthly image What were it but to make my sorrow greater?

Re-enter WARWICK and Others, bearing GLOUCESTER’S body on a bed.

War. Come hither, gracious sovereign, view this body.

K. Hen. That is to see how deep my grave is made; 153 For with his soul fled all my worldly solace, For seeing him I see my life in death.

War. As surely as my soul intends to live With that dread King that took our state upon him To free us from his Father’s wrathful curse, I do believe that violent hands were laid Upon the life of this thrice-famed duke.

Suf. A dreadful oath, sworn with a solemn tongue!

What instance gives Lord Warwick for his vow? War. See how the blood is settled in his face. Often have I seen a timely-parted ghost, Of ashy semblance, meagre, pale, and bloodless, Being all desecred to the labouring heart; Who, in the conflict that it holds with death, Attracts the same for aidance ‘gainst the enemy; Which with the heart there cools, and ne’er returneth To blush and beautify the cheek again. But see, his face is black and full of blood, His eye-balls further out than when he liv’d, Staring full ghastly like a strangled man; His hair uprear’d, his nostrils stretch’d with struggling;

His hands abroad display’d, as one that grasp’d And tug’d for life, and was by strength subdued. Look! on the sheets his hair, you see, is sticking; His well-proportion’d beard made rough and rugged, Like to the summer’s corn by tempest lodg’d. It cannot be but he was murder’d here; The least of all these signs were probable.

Suf. Why, Warwick, who should do the duke to death?

Myself and Beaufort had him in protection; 180 And we, I hope, sir, are no murderers.

War. But both of you were vow’d Duke Humphrey’s foes, And you, forsooth, had the good duke to keep: ‘Tis like you would not feast him like a friend, And ’tis well seen he found an enemy.

Q. Mar. Then you, belike, suspect these noble men As guilty of Duke Humphrey’s timeless death.

War. Who finds the heifer dead, and blood fresh, And sees fast by a butcher with an axe, But will suspect ’twas he that made the slaughter Who finds the partridge in the puttock’s nest But may imagine how the bird was dead, Although the kite soar with unblooded beak Even so suspicious is this tragedy.

Q. Mar. Are you the butcher, Suffolk? where your knife?

Is Beaufort term’d a kite? where are his talon

Suf. I wear no knife to slaughter sleeping me But here’s a vengeful sword, rusted with ease That shall be scour’d in his rancorous heart That shall stand me with murder’s crimson bade Say, if thou dar’st, proud Lord of Warwickshire! That I am faulty in Duke Humphrey’s death.

Exeunt Cardinal BEAUFORT, SOMERSET, and Other

War. What dares not Warwick, if false Suffolk dare him?

Q. Mar. He dares not calm his contumelious spirit, Nor cease to be an arrogant controller, Though Suffolk dare him twenty thousand times

War. Madam, be still, with reverence may say;

For every word you speak in his behalf Is slander to your royal dignity.

Suf. Blunt-witted lord, ignoble in demeanour If ever lady wrong’d her lord so much, Thy mother took into her blameful bed Some stern untutor’d churl, and noble stock Was grafted with crab-tree slip; whose fruit the art,

And never of the Nevils’ noble race.

War. But that the guilt of murder buckled thee,

And I should rob the deathsmen of his fee, Quitting thee thereby of ten thousand shames And that my sovereign’s presence makes men I would, false murderous coward, on thy knee Make thee beg pardon for thy passed speech, And say it was thy mother that thou meant’s That thou thyself wast born in bastardy: And after all this fearful homage done, Give thee thy hire, and send thy soul to hell, Pernicious blood-sucker of sleeping men!

Suf. Thou shalt be waking while I shed thy blood,

If from this presence thou darst go with me.

War. Away even now, or I will drag thence:

Unworthy though thou art, I’ll cope with the And do some service to Duke Humphrey’s ghost.

Exeunt SUFFOLK and WARWICK

K. Hen. What stronger breasplate than heart untainted!

Thrice is he arm’d that hath his quarrel just, And he but naked, though lock’d up in steel, Whose conscience with injustice is corrupted. A noise within

Q. Mar. What noise is this?

Re-enter SUFFOLK and WARWICK, with their weapons drawn.

K. Hen. Why, how now, lords! your wrathful weapons drawn

Here in our presence! dare you be so bold? Why, what tumultuous clamour have we here?
SECOND PART OF KING HENRY VI.

Come, Warwick, come, good Warwick, go with me;
I have great matters to impart to thee.

Exeunt King Henry, Warwick, Lords, etc.

Q. Mar. Mischance and sorrow go along with you!

Heart's discontent and sour affliction
Be playfellows to keep you company!
There's two of you; the devil make a third!
And threefold vengeance tend upon your steps!
Suf. Cease, gentle queen, these executions,
And let thy Suffolk take his heavy leave.
Q. Mar. Fie, coward woman and soft-hearted wretch!

Hast thou not spirit to curse thine enemy?

Suf. A plague upon them! wherefore should I curse them?

Would curses kill, as doth the mandrake's groan,
I would invent as bitter-searching terms,

As curst, as harsh and horrible to hear,
Deliver'd strongly through my fixed teeth,

With full as many signs of deadly hate,

As lean-f'd Envy in her loathsome cave,

My tongue should stumble in mine earnest words;
Mine eyes should sparkle like the beaten flint;
My hair be fix'd on end, as one distract;
Ay, every joint should seem to curse and ban:
And even now my burden'd heart would break
Should I not curse them. Poison be their drink!
Gall, worse than gall, the daintiest that they taste!
Their sweetest shade a grove of cypress trees!
Their chiefest prospect murdering basilisks!
Their softest touch as smart as lizards' stings!
Their music frightful as the serpent's hiss,
And boding screech-owls make the concert full!

All the foul terrors in dark-seated hell—

Q. Mar. Enough, sweet Suffolk; thou torment'st thyself;

And these dread curses, like the sun 'gainst glass,
Or like an overcharged gun, recoil

And turn the force of them upon thyself.

Suf. You bade me ban, and will you bid me leave?
Now, by the ground that I am banish'd from,
Well could I curse away a winter's night,
Though standing naked on a mountain top,
Where biting cold would never let grass grow,
And think it but a minute spent in sport.

Q. Mar. O! let me entreat thee, cease. Give me thy hand,

That I may dew it with my mournful tears;
Nor let the rain of heaven wet this place,

To wash away my woeful monuments.
O! could this kiss be printed in thy hand,
That thou might'st think upon these by the seal,
Through whom a thousand signs are breath'd for thee.

So, get thee gone, that I may know my grief;
'Tis but surmis'd whilst thou art standing by,
As one that surfeits thinking on a want.
I will repeal thee, or, be well assur'd,

Adventure to be banish'd myself;
And banish'd I am, if but from thee.
Go; speak not to me; even now be gone.
O! go not yet. Even thus two friends condemn'd Embrace and kiss and take ten thousand leaves,
Leather a hundred times to part than die.
Yet now farewell; and farewell life with thee.

Suf. Thus is poor Suffolk ten times banished,
SECOND PART OF KING HENRY VI.

Once by the king, and three times thrice by thee.
'Tis not the land I care for, wert thou thence;
A wilderness is populous enough,
So Suffolk had thy heavenly company:
For where thou art, there is the world itself,
With every several pleasure in the world,
And where thou art not, desolation.
I can no more: live thou to joy thy life;
Myself no joy in nought but that thou liv'st.

Enter VAUX.

Q. Mar. Whither goes Vaux so fast? what news, I prithee?
Vauz. To signify unto his majesty
That Cardinal Beaufort is at point of death;
For suddenly a grievous sickness took him,
That makes him gasp and stare and catch the air,
Blaspheming God, and cursing men on earth.
Sometime he talks as if Duke Humphrey's ghost
Were by his side; sometime he calls the king,
And whispers to his pillow, as to him,
The secrets of his overcharged soul:
And I am sent to tell his majesty
That even now he cries aloud for him.

Q. Mar. Go, tell this heavy message to the king.

Exit VAUX.

Ay me! what is this world! what news are these!
But wherefore grieve I at an hour's poor loss,
Omitting Suffolk's exile, my soul's treasure?
Why only, Suffolk, mourn I not for thee,
And with the southern clouds contend in tears,
Theirs for the earth's increase, mine for my sorrows?

Now get thee hence: the king, thou know'st, is coming;
If thou be found by me thou art but dead.

Suf. If I depart from thee I cannot live;
And in thy sight to die, what were it else
But like a pleasant slumber in thy lap?
Here could I breathe my soul into the air,
As mild and gentle as the cradle-babe.
Dying with mother's dreg between its lips;
Where, from thy sight, I should be raging mad,
And cry out for thee to close up mine eyes,
To have thee with thy lips to stop my mouth:
So shouldst thou either turn my flying soul,
Or I should breathe it so into thy body,
And then it liv'd in sweet Elysium.

To die by thee were but to die in jest;

From thee to die were torture more than death.
O! let me stay, befell what may befall.

Q. Mar. Away! though parting be a fretful corrosive,
It is applied to a deathful wound.
To France, sweet Suffolk: let me hear from thee;
For wheresoe'er thou art in this world's globe,
I'll have an Iris that shall find thee out.

Suf. I go.

Q. Mar. And take my heart with thee.
Suf. A jewel, locked in the wofulst cask
That ever did contain a thing of worth.
Even as a splitd barking souder we;

This way fall I to death.

Q. Mar. This way for me.

Exeunt severaliy.

Enter King Henry, Salisbury, Warwick, and Others. The Cardinal in bed; attendants by him.

Cor. If thou be'st death, I'll give thee England's treasure, Enough to purchase such another island,
So thou wilt let me live, and feel no pain.

K. Hen. Ah! what a sign it is of evil life
Where death's approach is seen so terrible.

War. Beaufort, it is thy sovereign speaks to thee.

Cor. Bring me unto my trial when you will,
Died he not in his bed? where should he die?
Can I make men live when they will or no?
O! torture me no more, I will confess.
Alive again! then show me where he is;
I'll give a thousand pound to look upon him.

War. See how the pangs of death do make him grin.

Sul. Disturb him not; let him pass peaceably.

K. Hen. Peace to his soul! if God's good pleasure be.

Lord cardinal, if thou think'st on heaven's bliss,
Hold up thy hands, may signal of thy hope,
He dies, and makes no sign. O God, forgive him.

War. So bad a death argues a monstrous life.

K. Hen. Forbear to judge, for we are sinners.

Close up his eyes, and draw the curtain close
And let us all to meditation.

Exeunt.

ACT IV.

Scene I.—Kent. The Sea-shore near Dover.

Firing heard at sea. Then enter from a boat Captain, a Master, a Master's Mate, WALT WHITMORE, and Others; with them SUFFOLK disguised, and other gentlemen, prisoners.

Cap. The gaudy, blabbing, and remorseful does
Is crept into the bosom of the sea.

And now loud-howl-ling wolves arouse the jad
That drag the tragic melancholy night;
Who with their drowzy, slow, and flagging win
Clipped men's men's graces, and from their misty ja
Breathe foul contagious darkness in the air.

Therefore bring forth the soldiers of our prize
For whilst our pinnace anchors in the Downs
Here shall they make their ransom on the san
Or with their blood stain this discollour'd shot
Master, this prisoner freely give I thee;
And thou that art his mate make boot of this
The other, Walter Whitmore, is thy share.
first Gent. What is my ransom, master? let me know.

fast. A thousand crowns, or else lay down your head.

date. And so much shall you give, or off goes yours.

app. What! think you much to pay two thousand crowns, do bear the name and port of gentlemen? both the villain’s threats! for die you shall; of lives of those which we have lost in light a counterpoise’d with such a petty sum!

first Gent. I’ll give it, sir; and therefore spare my life.

second Gent. And so will I, and write home for it straight.

Whit. I lost mine eye in laying the prize aboard, SUFFOLK. And therefore to revenge it shall thou die; so should these if I might have my will.

app. Be not so rash; take ransom; let him live.

suf. Look on my George; I am a gentleman, come at what thou wilt, thou shalt be paid.

Whit. And so am I; my name is Walter Whitmore.

w now! why start’st thou? what! doth death affright?

suf. Thy name affrights me, in whose sound is death, running man did calculate my birth,

d told me that by Water I should die:

let not this make thee bloodily-minded;
y name is Gautier, being rightly sounding.

Whit. Gautier or Walter, which it is, I care not;
ver yet did base honour blus our name with our sword we wip’d away the blot: refore, when merchant-like I sell revenge, to be my sword, my arms torn and defac’d, I proclaim’d a coward through the world!

suf. Stay, Whitmore; for thy prisoner is a prince,

Duke of Suffolk, William de la Pole.

Whit. The Duke of Suffolk muffled up in rags!

suf. Ay, but these rags are no part of the duke;
sometime went disguis’d, and why not I?

Cap. But Jove was never slain, as thou shalt be.

suf. Obscure and lowly swain, King Henry’s blood, e honourable blood of Lancaster, ast not shed by such a jaded groomsman thou kisst thy hand and held my stirrup!
reheaded plodding by my foot-cloth mule, thought thee happy when I shook my head?
if often hast thou waited at my cup, from my trenter, kneel’d down at the board, then I have feasted with Queen Margaret! member it and let it make thee crest-fall’n;
and alway this thy abortive pride.

in our voiding lobby hast thou stood duly waited for my coming forth?

hand of mine hath writ in thy behalf, therefore shall it charm thy riotous tongue.

Whit. Speak, captain, shall I stab the forlorn swain?

Cap. First let my words stab him, as he hath me.

suf. Base slave, thy words are blunt, and so art thou,

Cap. Convey him hence, and on our long-boat’s side Strike off his head.

suf. Thou dar’st not for thy own.

Cap. Yes, Pole.

suf. Pole!

Cap. Pool! Sir Pool! lord!

Ay, kennel, puddle, sink; whose filth and dirt

Troubles the silver spring where England drinks.

Now will I dam up this thy yawning mouth

For swallowing the treasure of the realm:

Thy lips, that kiss’d the queen, shall sweep the ground;

And thou that smil’st at good Duke Humphrey’s death,

Against the senseless winds shall grin in vain,

Who in contempt shall hiss at thee again;

And wadded be thou to the hags of hell,

For daring to affy a mighty lord

Unto the daughter of a worthless king,

Having neither subject, wealth, nor diadem.

By devilish policy art thou grown great,

And, like ambitions Sylla, overgord’d

With gobbets of thy mother’s bleeding heart.

By thee Anjou and Maine were sold to France,

The false revolting Normans thorough thee

Disdain to call us lord, and Picardy

Hath slain their governors, surpris’d our forts,

And sent the ragged soldiers wounded home.

The princely Warwick, and the Nevils all,

Whose dreadful swords were never drawn in vain,

As hating thee, are rising up in arms:

And now the house of York, thrust from the crown

By shameful murder of a guiltless king,

And lofty proud encroaching tyranny,

Burns with revenging fire; whose hopeful colours

Advance our half-fac’d sun, striving to shine,

Under the which is writ Invitis nubibus.

The commons here in Kent are up in arms;

And, to conclude, reproach and beggary

Is crept into the palace of our king,

And all by thee. Away! convey him hence.

suf. O! that I were a god, to shoot forth thunder

Upon these paltry, servile, abject drudges.

Small things make base men proud: this villain here,

Being captain of a pinaccle, threatens more

Than Bargulus the strong Illyrian pirate.

Drones suck not eagles’ blood but rob bee-hives.

It is impossible that I should die

By such a lowly vassal as thyself.

Thy words move rage and not remorse in me:

I go of message from the queen to France;

I charge thee waft me safely cross the Channel.

Cap. Walter!

Whit. Come, Suffolk, I must waft thee to thy death.

suf. Gelidus timor occupat artus: it is thee I fear.

Whit. Thou shalt have cause to fear before I leave thee.

What! are ye daunted now? now will ye stoop?

First Gent. My gracious lord, entreat him, speak him fair.

suf. Suffolk’s imperial tongue is stern and rough,

Us’d to command, untaight to plead for favour.

Far be it we should honour such as these

With humble suit; no, rather let my head
Stoop to the block than these knees bow to any Save to the God of heaven, and to my king;
And sooner dance upon a bloody pole
Than stand uncover'd to the vulgar groom.
True nobility is exempt from fear:
More can I bear than you dare execute.

Cap. Hale him away, and let him talk no more.

Suf. Come, soldiers, show what cruelty ye can,
That this my death may never be forgot.
Great men oft die by vile beiizonsians.
A Roman swordman and banditto slave
Murder'd sweet Tully; Brutos bastard hand
Stabb'd Julius Cæsar; savage islanders
Pompey the Great; and Suffolk dies by pirates.

Exit Whitmore and Others with Suffolk.

Cap. And as for these whose ransom we have set,
It is our pleasure one of them depart:
Therefore come you with us and let him go.

Exeunt Whitmore, with Suffolk's body.

Whit. There let his head and lifeless body lie,
Until the queen his mistress bury it. Exit.
First Gent. O barbarous and bloody spectacle!
His body will I bear unto the king:
If he revenge it not, yet will his friends;
So will the queen, that living held him dear.

Exit, with the body.

SCENE II.—Blackheath.

Enter George Bevis and John Holland.

Geo. Come, and get thee a sword, though nade of a lath: they have been up these two days.

John. They have the more need to sleep now then.

Geo. I tell thee, Jack Cade the clothier means to dress the commonwealth, and turn it, and set a new nap upon it.

John. So he had need, for 'tis threadbare.
Well, I say it was never merry world in England
since gentlemen came up.

Geo. O miserable age! Virtue is not regarded in handicraftsmen.

John. The nobility think scorn to go in leather aprons.

Geo. Nay, more; the king's council are no good workmen.

John. True; and yet it is said 'Labour in thy vocation': which is as much to say as, let the magistrates be labouring men; and therefore should we be magistrates.

Geo. Thou hast hit it; for there's no better sign of a brave mind than a hard hand.

John. I see them! I see them! There's Best's son, the tanner of Winingham,

Geo. He shall have the skins of our enemies to make dog's-leather of.

John. And Dick the butcher,

Geo. Then is sin struck down like an ox, and iniquity's throat cut like a calf.

John. And Smith the weaver,

Geo. Argo, their thread of life is spun.

John. Come, come; let's fall in with them.
SECOND PART OF KING HENRY VI.

CODE.

Here's a villain!

Smirch. Has a book in his pocket with red ters in't.

CODE. Nay, then he is a conjurer.

Dick. Nay, he can make obligations, and write art-hand.

CODE. I am sorry for't: the man is a proper

m, of mine honour; unless I find him guilty, shall not die. Come hither, sirrah, I must amine thee. What is thy name?

Clerk. Emmanuel.

Dick. They use to write it on the top of letters, will go hard with you.

CODE. Let me alone. Dost thou use to write name, or hast thou a mark to thyself, like honest plain-dealing man?

Clerk. Sir, I thank God I have been so well ought up that I can write my name.

All. He hath confessed: away with him! he's villain and a traitor.

CODE. Away with him! I say: hang him with pen and ink-horn about his neck.

Exeunt some with the Clerk.

Enter MICHAEL.

Mich. Where's our general?

CODE. Here I am. thou particular fellow.

Mich. Fly, fly, fly! Sir Humphrey Stafford and his brother are hard by, with the king's prces.

CODE. Stand, villain, stand, or I'll fell thee own. He shall be encountered with a man as ood as himself: he is but a knight, is a't?

Mich. No.

CODE. To equal him, I will make myself a night presently.

Kneels. Rise. low have at him!

Exeunt Sir HUMPHREY STAFFORD, and WILLIAM

his Brother, with drum and Forces.

STAFF. Rebellious hinds, the fifth and scum of

Kent,

ark'd for the gallows, lay your weapons down;

ome to your cottages, forsake this grooms;

he king is merciful, if you revolt.

W. STAFF. But angry, wrathful, and inclin'd to blood,

if you go forward: therefore yield, or die.

CODE. As for those Silken-coated slaves, I pass ot:

it is to you, good people, that I speak,

'er whom in time to come I hope to reign;

For I am rightful heir unto the crown.

STAFF. Villain! thy father was a plasterer;

And thou thyself a shewnman, art thou not?

CODE. And Adam was a gardener.

W. STAFF. And what of that?

CODE. Marry, this: Edmund Mortimer, Earl of March.

Married the Duke of Clarence' daughter, did he not?

STAFF. Ay, sir.

CODE. By her he had two children at one birth.

W. STAFF. That's false.

CODE. Ay, there's the question; but I say, 'tis true.

The elder of them, being put to nurse,

Was by a beggar-woman stole away;

And, ignorant of his birth and parentage,

Became a bricklayer when he came to age:

His son am I; deny it if you can.

Dick. Nay, 'tis too true; therefore he shall be king.

SMITH. Sir, he made a chimney in my father's house, and the bricks are alive at this day to testify it; therefore deny it not.

STAFF. And will you credit this base drudge's

words,

That speaks he knows not what?

All. Ay, marry, will we: therefore got ye gone.

W. STAFF. Jack Cade, the Duke of York hath taught you this.

CODE. Aside. He lies, for I invented it myself.

Go to, sirrah; tell the king from me, that for his father's sake, Henry the Fifth, in whose time

boys went to span-counter for French crowns,

I am content he shall reign: but I'll be protector over him.

Dick. And, furthermore, we'll have the Lord

Say's head for selling the dukedom of Maine.

CODE. And good reason; for thereby is England mained, and fain to go with a staff, but that my puissance holds it up. Fellow kings, I tell you that that Lord Say hath gelled the commonwealth, and made it an ennuch; and more than that, he can speak French; and therefore he is a traitor.

STAFF. O gross and miserable ignorance!

CODE. Nay, answer, if you can: the Frenchmen are our enemies; go to then, I ask but this: can he speak that with the tongue of an enemy be a good counsellor, or no?

All. No, no; and therefore we 'll have his head.

W. STAFF. Well, seeing gentle words will not prevail,

Assail them with the army of the king.

STAFF. Herald, away; and throughout every town

Proclaim them traitors that are up with Cade;

That those which fly before the battle ends

May, even in their wives' and children's sight,

Be hang'd up for example at their doors.

And you that be the king's friends, follow me.

Exeunt the two STAFFORDS and Forces.

CODE. And you that love the commons, follow me.

Now show yourselves men; 'tis for liberty.

We will not leave one lord, one gentleman:

Spare none but such as go in clouted shoon,

For they are thrifty honest men, and such

As would, but that they dare not, take our parts.

Dick. They are all in order, and march toward us.

CODE. But then are we in order when we are most cut out of order. Come: march! forward!

Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Another Part of Blackheath.

ALARUMS. The two parties enter, and fight, and both the STAFFORDS are slain.

CODE. Where's Dick, the butcher of Ashford?

Dick. Here, sir.

CODE. They fell before thee like sheep and oxen, and thou behaved'st thyself as if thou had'st been in thine own slaughter-house: therefore thus will I reward thee, the Lent shall be as long again as it is; and thou shalt have a license to kill for a hundred lacking one.

Dick. I desire no more.

Cade. And, to speak truth, thou dost deserve no less. This monument of the victory will I bear; and the bodies shall be dragged at my horse heels till I do come to London, where we will have the mayor’s sword borne before us.

Dick. If we mean to thrive and do good, break open the gaols and let out the prisoners.

Cade. Fear not that, I warrant thee. Come; let’s march towards London.

SCENE IV.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter King Henry, reading a supplication; the Duke of Buckingham, and Lord Say, with him: at a distance, Queen Margaret, mourning over Suffolk’s head.

Q. Mar. Oft have I heard that grief softens the mind, and makes it fearful and degenerate; think therefore on revenge, and cease to weep. But who can cease to weep and look on this? Here may his head lie on my throbbing breast; but where’s the body that I should embrace?

Buck. What answer makes your grace to the rebels’ supplication?

K. Hen. I’ll send some holy bishop to entreat; for God forbid so many simple souls should perish by the sword! And I myself, rather than bloody war shall cut them short, will parley with Jack Cade their general. But stay, I’ll read it over once again.

Q. Mar. Ah! barbary villains, hath this lovely face roll’d like a wandering planet over me, and could it not enforce them to relent, that were unworthy to behold the same?

K. Hen. Lord Say, Jack Cade hath sworn to have thy head.

Say. Ay, but I hope thy highness shall have his.

K. Hen. How now, madam! still lamenting and mourning for Suffolk’s death? I fear me, love, if that I had been dead, thou wouldest not have mourn’d so much for me.

Q. Mar. No, my love; I should not mourn, but die for thee.

Enter a Messenger.

K. Hen. How now! what news? why com’st thou in such haste?

Mess. The rebels are in Southwark; fly, my lord! Jack Cade proclaims himself Lord Mortimer, descended from the Duke of Clarence’s house, and calls your grace usurper openly, and vows to crown himself in Westminster. His army is a ragged multitude of hinds and peasants, rude and merciless; Sir Humphrey Stafford and his brother’s death hath given them heart and courage to proceed. All scholars, lawyers, courtiers, gentlemen, they call false caterpillars, and intend their death.

K. Hen. O graceless men! they know not what they do.

Buck. My gracious lord, retire to Killingworth, until a power be rais’d to put them down.

Q. Mar. Ah! were the Duke of Suffolk now alive, these Kentish rebels would be soon appeas’d.

SCENE V.—The Same. The Tower.

Enter Lord Scales and Others, walking on the walls. Then enter certain Citizens, below.

Scales. How now! is Jack Cade slain?

First Cit. No, my lord, nor likely to be slain for they have won the bridge, killing all that withstand them. The lord mayor craving of your honour from the Tower, to defend the city from the rebels.

Scales. Such aid as I can spare you shall command; but I am troubled here with them myself; the rebels have essay’d to win the Tower. But get you to Smithfield and gather head, and thither I will send you Matthew Goffe; fight for your king, your country, and your lives. And so farewell, for I must hence again.

Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—The Same. Cannon-street.

Enter Jack Cade and his Followers. He strikes his staff on London-stone.

Cade. Now is Mortimer lord of this city. An here, sitting upon London-stone, I charge an command that, of the city’s cost, the pissing conduit run nothing but claret wine this first year of our reign. And now henceforward I shall be treason for any that calls me other than Lord Mortimer.

Enter a Soldier, running.

Sold. Jack Cade! Jack Cade!

Cade. Knock him down there. They kill him Smith. If this fellow be wise, he’ll never call you Jack Cade more: I think he hath a very fair warning.

Dick. My lord, there’s an army gathered to gather in Smithfield.

Cade. Come then, let’s go fight with them. But first, go and set London-bridge on fire, and if you can, burn down the Tower too. Come, let’s away.

Exeunt.
Scene VII.—The Same. Smithfield.

Cade. Away with him! away with him! he speaks Latin.

Say. Hear me but speak, and bear me where you will.

Kent, in the Commentaries Caesar writ,
Is term’d the civil’st place of all this isle:
Sweet is the country, because full of riches;
The people liberal, valiant, active, wealthy;
Which makes me hope you are not void of pity.
I sold not Maine, I lost not Normandy;
Yet, to recover them, would lose my life.  70
Justice with favour have I always done;
Prayers and tears have mov’d me, gifts could never.

When have I aught exacted at your hands,
But to maintain the king, the realm, and you?
Large gifts have I bestow’d on learned clerks,
Because my book preferr’d me to the king,
And seeing ignorance is the curse of God,
Knowledge the wing wherewith we fly to heaven,
Unless you be possess’d with devilish spirits,
You cannot but forbear to murder me:
This tongue hath parley’d unto foreign kings
For your behoof,—

Cade. Tut! when struckest thou one blow in the field?

Say. Great men have reaching hands: oft have I struck
Those that I never saw, and struck them dead.
Geo. O monstrous coward! what! to come behind folks.

Say. These cheeks are pale for watching for your good.

Cade. Give him a box o’ the ear, and that will make ’em red again.

Say. Long sitting, to determine poor men’s causes,
Hath made me full of sickness and diseases.

Cade. Ye shall have a hempen caudle then,
And the help of hatchet.

Dick. Why dost thou quiver, man?

Say. The palsy, and not fear, provokes me.

Cade. Nay, he nods at us; as who should say,
I’ll be even with you: I’ll see if his head will Stand steadier on a pole or no. Take him away
And behead him.

Say. Tell me wherein have I offended most?
Have I affected wealth or honour? speak.

Dick. Why dost thou bear, and so fast sore printing to be used;
Contrary to the king, his crown, and dignity,
Hast built a paper-mill. It will be proved
Thou hast appointed justices of peace,
Call poor men before them about matters they Are not able to answer. Moreover, thou hast put Men in prison; and because they could not read,
Hast hanged them; when indeed only for
Their grace they have been most worthy to live.
O dost ride in a foot-cloth, dost thou not?

Say. What of that?

Cade. Marry, thou oughtest not to let thyself wear a cloak,
When honest men than thine go in their hose and doublets.

Dick. And work in their shirt too; as myself,
Example, that am a butcher.

Say. You men of Kent,—

Dick. What say you of Kent?

Say. Nothing but this: ’tis bona terra, malo genis,
SECOND PART OF KING HENRY VI.

Act IV. Scene VIII.

And therefore yet relent, and save my life.

Cade. Away with him! and do as I command you.

The proudest peer in the realm shall not wear a head on his shoulders, unless he pay me tribute; there shall not a maid be married, but she shall pay to me her maidenhead, ere they have it. Men shall hold of me in capite; and we charge and command that their wives be as free as heart can wish or tongue can tell.

Dick. My lord, when shall we go to Cheapside and take up commodities upon our bills?

Cade. Marr, presently.

All. O! brave.

Re-enter Rebels, with the heads of Lord Say and his Son-in-law.

Cade. But is not this braver? Let them kiss one another, for they loved well when they were alive. Now part them again, lest they consult about the giving up of some more towns in France. Soldiers, defer the spoil of the city until night; for with these borne before us, instead of maces, will we ride through the streets; and at every corner have them kiss. Away!

Scene VIII.—The Same. Southwark.

Alarum. Enter Cade and all his Rabblement.

Cade. Up Fish-street! down Saint Magnus Corner! kill and knock down! throw them into Thames! A parley sounded, then a retreat. What noise is this I hear? Dare any be so bold to sound retreat or parley, when I command them kill?

Enter Buckingham and Old Clifford, with Forces.

Buck. Ay, here they be that dare and will disturb thee.

Know, Cade, we come ambassadors from the king Unto the commons whom thou hast misled; And here pronounce free pardon to them all That will forsake thee and go home in peace.

Clif. What say ye, countrymen? will ye relent And yield to mercy, whilst 'tis offer'd you, Or let a rabble lead you to your deaths? Who loves the king, and will embrace his pardon, Fling up his cap, and say 'God save his majesty!' Who hatest him, and honours not his father, Henry the Fifth, that made all France to quake, Shake he his weapon at us, and pass by.

All. God save the king! God save the king!

Cade. What! Buckingham and Clifford, are ye so brave? And you, base peasants, do ye believe him? will you needs be hanged with your pardons about your necks? Hath my sword therefore broke through London gates, that you should leave me at the White Hart in Southwark! I thought ye would never have given out these arms till you had recovered your ancient freedom; but you are all reprobates and traducers, and delight to live in slavery to the nobility. Let them break your backs with burdens, take your houses over your heads, ravish your wives and daughters before your faces: for me, I will make shift for one, and so, God's curse light upon you all.

All. We'll follow Cade, we'll follow Cade!

Clif. Is Cade the son of Henry the Fifth, That thus you do exclaim you'll go with him Will he conduct you through the heart of France And make the meanest of you earls and dukes? Alas! he hath no home, no place to fly to; Nor knows he how to live but by the spoil, Unless by robbing of your friends and us. We're not a shame, that whilst you live at The fearful French, whom you late vanquish Should make a start o'er seas and vanish y Methinks already in this civil broil I see them lording it in London streets, Crying Viligeo! unto all they meet. Better ten thousand base-born Cades miscar Than you should stoop unto a Frenchman's mercy.

To France, to France! and get what you have lost; Spare England, for it is your native coast. Henry hath money, you are strong and man; God on our side, doubt not of victory.

All. A Clifford! a Clifford! we'll follow the king and Clifford.

Cade. Was ever feather so lightly blown And fro as this multitude? The name of Henry the Fifth hales them to an hundred mischance, and makes them leave me desolate. I see they lay their heads together to surprise me, sword make way for me, for here is no stay. In despite of the devils and hell, have they the very midst of you! and heavens and hell be witness, that no want of resolution in me, only my followers' base and ignominious treason makes me betake me to my heels.

Buck. What! is he fled? go some, and follow him; And he that brings his head unto the king Shall have a thousand crowns for his reward.

Follow me, soldiers: we'll devise a mean To reconcile you all unto the king.

Scene IX.—Kenilworth Castle.

Sound trumpets. Enter King Henry, Queen Margaret, and Somerset, on the terrace.

K. Hen. Was ever king that joy'd an earth throne, And could command no more content than I No sooner was I crept out of my cradle But I was made a king at nine months old: Was never subject long'd to be a king As I do long and wish to be a subject.

Enter Buckingham and Clifford.

Buck. Health and glad tidings to your majesty! K. Hen. Why, Buckingham, is the traitor Cade surprise'd? Or is he but retir'd to make him strong? Enter a number of Cade's Followers, with halterers about their necks.

Clif. He's fled, my lord, and all his powers yield; And humble thus, with halterers on their necks Expect your highness' doom, of life or death K. Hen. Then, heaven, set ope thy everlasting gates, To entertain my vows of thanks and praise! Soldiers, this day have you redeem'd your li-
SECOND PART OF KING HENRY VI.

I show'd how well you love your prince and country:
Time still in this so good a mind,
Henry, though he be unfortunate,
'cure yourselves, will never be unkind;
I so, with thanks and pardon to you all, 20 dismiss you to your several countries.

II. God save the king! God save the king!

Enter a Messenger.

Tell. Please it your grace to be advertised
Duke of York is newly come from Ireland,
With a puissant and a mighty power galloglasses and stout kerns marching hitherward in proud array;
I still proclaimeth, as he comes along,
arms are only to remove from thee
Duke of Somerset, whom he terms a traitor.

I. Hen. Thus stands my state, 'twixt Cade and York distress'd;
e to a ship that, having 'scap'd a tempest,
rightway calm'd, and boarded with a pirate.
now is Cade driven back, his men dispers'd,
now is York in arms to second him.
ay thee, Buckingham, go and meet him,
I ask him what's the reason of these arms.
I him I'll send Duke Edmund to the Tower;
Somerset, we will commit thee this, till his army be dismissed from him.

om. My lord,
yield myself to prison willingly,
unto death, to do my country good.

I. Hen. In any case, be not too rough in terms, he is fierce and cannot brook hard language.

Thick. I will, my lord; and doubt not so to deal all things shall redound unto your good.

I. Hen. Come, wife, let's in, and learn to govern better;
yet may England curse my wretched reign.

Flourish. Exeunt.

SCENE X.—Kent. IDEN'S Garden.

Enter CADE.

Cade. I lie on ambition! lie on myself, that we a sword, and yet am ready to famish;
ese five days have I hid me in these woods and ne'er preached out, for all the country is laid for;
but now am I so hungry, that if I might have ease of my life for a thousand years I could no longer. Wherefore, on a brick wall have climbed into this garden, to see if I can eat , or pick a sallet another while, which is not to ass a man's stomach this hot weather.
If I think this word 'sallet' was born to do me for: many a time, but for a sallet, my in-pan had been eft with a brown bill;
and any a time, when I have been dry and bravely arching, it hath served me instead of a quart
'to drink in; and now the word 'sallet' us serve me to feed on.

Enter IDEN.

Iden. Lord! who would live turbened in the court,
and may enjoy such quiet walks as these?
his small inheritance my father left me entertained me, and worth a monarchy, seek not to wax great by others' waning,
的理想 wealth I care not with what envy:
uffeth that I have maintains my state,
And sends the poor well pleased from my gate.

Cade. Here's the lord of the soil come to seize me for a stray, for entering his ease-simple without leave. All I villain, thou wilt betray me, and get a thousand crowns of the king by carrying my head to him; but I'll make thee eat iron like an ostrich, and swallow my sword like a great pin, ere thou and I part.

Iden. Why, rude companion, whatso'er thou be,
I know thee not; why then should I betray thee?
Is't not enough to break into my garden?
And like a thief to come to rob my grounds,
Climbing my walls in spite of me the owner,
But thou wilt brave me with these saucy terms?

Cade. Brave thee! ay, by the best blood that ever was bronched, and beard thee too. Look on me well: I have cat no meat these five days;
yet, come thou and thy five men, and if I do not leave you all as dead as a door-nail, I pray God
I may never eat grass more.

Iden. Nay, it shall ne'er be said, while England stands,
That Alexander Iden, an esquire of Kent,
Took odds to combat a poor famish'd man.
Oppose thy steadfast-gazing eyes to mine,
See if thou canst outface me with thy looks:
Set limb to limb, and thou art far the lesser;
Hand is but a finger to my fist;
Thy leg a stick compared with this thrummeon;
My foot shall fight with all the strength thou hast;
And if mine arm be heaved in the air
Thy grave is digg'd already in the earth.
As for words, whose greatness answers words,
Let this my sword report what speech forbears.

Cade. By my valour, the most complete champion that ever I heard! Steel, if thou turn the edge, or cut not out the burly-boned clown in chines of beef ere thou sleep in thy sheath,
I beseech God on my knees thou mayest be turned to hobsails.

They fight. Cade falls.
O! I am slain. Famine and no other hath slain me;
let ten thousand devils come against me, and give me but the ten meals I have lost, and I'd defy them all. Wither, garden; and be henceforth a burying-place to all that do dwell in this house, because the unconquered soul of Cade is fled.

Iden. Is't Cade that I have slain, that moustous traitor?
Sword, I will hallow thee for this thy deed,
And hang thee o'er my tomb when I am dead:
Ne'er shall this blood be wiped from thy point,
But thou shalt wear it as a herald's coat,
To emblaze the honour that thy master got.

Cade. Iden, farewell; and be proud of thy victory. Tell Kent from me, she hath lost her best man, and exhort all the world to be cowards; for I, that never feared any, am vanquished
by famine, not by valour.

Iden. How much thou wrong'st me, heaven be my judge.
Die, damned wretch, the curse of her that bare thee!
And as I thrust thy body in with my sword,
So wish I I might thrust thy soul to hell.
Hence will I drag thee headlong by the helms
Unto a dunghill which shall be thy grave;
And there cut off thy most ungracious head;
Which I will bear in triumph to the king,
Leaving thy trunk for crows to feed upon. Exit.
SECOND PART OF KING HENRY VI.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Fields between Dartford and Blackheath.

The King’s camp on one side. On the other, enter York and his army of Irish, with drum and colours.

York. From Ireland thus comes York to claim his right,
And pluck the crown from feeble Henry’s head:
Ring, bells, aloud; burn, bonfires, clear and bright,
To entertain great England’s lawful king.
Ah! saeeta juechestas, who would not buy thee dear?
Let them obey that know not how to rule;
This hand was made to handle nought but gold;
I cannot give due action to my words,
Except a sword or sceptre balance it.
A sceptre shall it have, have I a soul,
On which I’ll toss the flower-de-luce of France.

Enter Buckingham.

Whom have we here? Buckingham, to disturb me?
The king hath sent him, sure: I must dissemble.

Buck. York, if thou meanest well, I greet thee well.
York. Humphrey of Buckingham, I accept thy greeting.
Art thou a messenger, or come of pleasure?

Buck. A messenger from Henry, our dread liege,
To know the reason of these arms in peace;
Or why thou, being a subject as I am,
Against thy oath and true allegiance sworn,
Should’st raise so great a power without his leave,
Or dare to bring thy force so near the court.

York. Aside. Scarce can I speak, my choler is so great:
O! I could hew up rocks and fight with flint,
I am so angry at these abject terms;
And now, like Ajax Telamonius,
On sheep or oxen could I spend my fury.
I am far better born than is the king.
More like a king, more kingly in my thoughts;
But I must make fair weather yet awhile,
Till Henry be more weak, and I more strong.
O Buckingham, I prithee, pardon me,
That I have given no answer all this while;
My mind was troubled with deep melancholy.
The cause why I have brought this army hither
Is to remove proud Somerset from the king,
Seditious to his grace and to the state.

Buck. That is too much presumption on thy part:
But if thy arms be to no other end,
The king hath yielded unto thy demand:
The Duke of Somerset is in the Tower.

York. Upon thine honour, is he prisoner?
Buck. Upon mine honour, he is prisoner.
York. Then, Buckingham, I do dismiss my powers.

Soldiers, I thank you all; disperse yourselves:
Meet me to-morrow in Saint George’s field,
You shall have pay, and every thing you wish.
And let my sovereign, virtuous Henry,
Command my eldest son, my all, my sons,
As pledges of my fealty and love;
I’ll send them all as willing as I live:
Lands, goods, horse, armour, any thing I have,
Is his to use, so Somerset may die.
York. Nay, we shall heat you thoroughly anon.

K. Hen. Why, Warwick, hath thy knee forgot to bow?

Old Salisbury, shame to thy silver hair,
Thou mad misleader of thy brain-sick son!
What! wilt thou on thy death-bed play the ruffian,
And seek for sorrow with thy spectacles!
O! where is faith? O! where is loyalty?
If it be banish'd from the frosty head,
Where shall it find a harbour in the earth?
Wilt thou go dig a grave to find out war,
And shame thine honourable age with blood?
Why art thou old and want'st experience?
Or wherefore dost abuse it, if thou hast it?
For shame! in duty bend thy knee to me,
That bows unto the grave with mickle age.

Sal. My lord, I have consider'd with myself
The title of this most renowned duke;
And in my conscience do repute his grace
The rightful heir to England's royal seat.

K. Hen. Hast thou not sworn allegiance unto me?

Sal. I have.

K. Hen. Canst thou dispense with heaven for such an oath?

Sal. It is great sin to swear unto a sin,
But greater sin to keep a sinful oath.
Who can be bound by any solemn vow
To do a murderous deed, to rob a man,
To force a spotless virgin's chastity,
To reave the orphan of his patrimony,
To wring the widow from her custom'd right,
And have no other reason for this wrong
But that he was bound by a solemn oath?

Q. Mar. A subtle traitor needs no sophister.

K. Hen. Call Buckingham, and bid him arm himself.

York. Call Buckingham, and all the friends
Thou hast,
I am resolv'd for death or dignity.

Clif. The first I warrant thee, if dreams prove true.

War. You were best to go to bed and dream again,
To keep thee from the tempest of the field.

Clif. I am resolv'd to bear a greater storm
Than any thou canst conjure up to-day;
And that I'll write upon thy burgonet,

Might I but know thee by thy household badge.
War. Now, by my father's badge, old Neville's crest,
The rampant bear claw'd to the ragged staff,
This day I'll wear aloft my burgonet,
As on a mountain top the cedar shows
That keeps his leaves in spite of any storm,
Even to affright thee with the view thereof.

Clif. And from thy burgonet I'll rend thy bear,
And tread it under foot with all contempt,
Despite the bear-ward that protects the bear.

Y. Clif. And so to arms, victorious father,
To quell the rebels and their complices.

Rich. Fie! charity! for shame! speak not in spite,
For you shall sup with Jesu Christ to-night.

Y. Clif. Foul stigmatic, that's more than thou canst tell.
Rich. If not in heaven, you'll surely sup in hell.

Exeunt severally.

Scene II.—Saint Alban's.

Marius. Excursions. Enter Warwick.

War. Clifford of Cumberland, 'tis Warwick calls:
And if thou dost not hide thee from the bear,
Now, when the angry trumpet sounds alarm,
And dead men's cries do fill the empty air,
Clifford, I say, come forth and fight with me!
Yield northern lord, Clifford of Cumberland,
Warwick is hoarse with calling thee to arms.

Enter York.

How now, my noble lord! what! all afoot?
York. The deadly-handed Clifford slew my steed;
But match to match I have encounter'd him,
And made a prey for carrion kites and crows
Even of the bonny beast he lov'd so well.

Enter Clifford.

War. Of one or both of us the time is come.
York. Hold, Warwick! seek thee out some other chace,
For I myself must hunt this deer to death.
War. Then, nobly, York; 'tis for a crown thou fight'st.
As I intend, Clifford, to thrive to-day,
It grieves my soul to leave thee unsaill'd. Exit.
Cliff. What seest thou in me, York? why dost thou pause?
York. With thy brave bearing should I be in love,
But that thou art so fast mine enemy.
Cliff. Nor should thy prowess want praise and esteem,
But that 'tis shown ignobly and in treason.
York. So let it help me now against thy sword
As I in justice and true right express it.
Cliff. My soul and body on the action both!
York. A dreadful lay! Address thee instantly.
Cliff. La fin couronne les œuvres.
They fight, and Clifford falls and dies.
York. Thus war hath given thee peace, for thou art still.
Peace with his soul, heaven, if it be thy will! 29 Exit.

Enter Young Clifford.

Y. Cliff. Shame and confusion! all is on the rout:
Fear frames disorder, and disorder wounds
Where it should guard. O war! thou son of hell,
Whom angry heavens do make their minister,
Throw in the frozen bosoms of our part
Hot coals of vengeance! Let no soldier fly:
He that is truly dedicate to war
Hath no self-love; nor he that loves himself
Hath not essentially, but by circumstance,
The name of valour. Seeing his father's body.
O! let the vile world end,
And the premises flames of the last day
Knit earth and heaven together;
Now let the general trumpet blow his blast,
Particulars and petty sounds
To cease! Wast thou ordain'd, dear father,
To lose thy youth in peace, and to achieve
The silver livery of advised age,
And, in thy reverence and thy chair-days thine,
To die in fullman battle? Even at this sight
My heart is turn'd to stone; and while 'tis not
It shall be stony. York not our old men spare.
No more will I their babes: tears virginal
Shall be to me even as the dew to fire;
And beauty, that the tyrant oft reclaims,
Shall to my flaming wrath be oil and flax.
Henceforth I will not have to do with pity;
Meet I an infant of the house of York,
Into as many goblets will I cut it
As wild Medea young Absyrtus did:
In cruelty will I seek out my fame.
Come, thou new ruin of old Clifford's house.
Taking up the bat As did Æneas old Anchises bear,
So bear I thee upon my manly shoulders;
But then Æneas bare a living load,
Nothing so heavy as these woes of mine.

Enter Richard and Somerset, fighting.

Somerset is killed.

Rich. So, lie thou there;
For underneath an alcheon's paltry sign,
The Castle in Saint Alban's, Somerset
Hath made the wizard famous in his death.
Sword, hold thy temper; heart, be wrathful
Priests pray for enemies, but princes kill.

Enter Richard and Somerset, fighting.

Somerset. Three strokes and the issue is clear.
Rich. And I, O Wellington, make thy sword
A deadly lay! And now, my worthy friend,
To give the enemy way, and to secure us
By what we can, which can no more but fly.

Alarum after

If you be ta'en, we then should see the bottle
Of all our fortunes: but if we haply 'scape,
As well we may, if not through your neglect
We shall to London get, where you are lov'd.
And where this breach now in our fortunes may
May readily be stopp'd.

Re-enter Young Clifford.

Y. Cliff. But that my heart's on future chief set,
I would speak blasphemy ere bid you fly;
But fly you must: uncurable discomfit
Reigns in the hearts of all our present parts.
Away, for your relief! and we will live
To see their day and them our fortune give,
Away, my lord, away!

Scene III.—Fields near Saint Alban's.

Alarum. Retreat. Flourish: then enter Youth, Richard, Warwick, and Soldiers, with drums and colours.

York. Of Salisbury, who can report of him
That winter lion, who in rage forgets
Aged contusions and all brush of time,
And, like a gallant in the brow of youth,
Repairs him with occasion? This happy day at itself, nor have we won one foot, Salisbury lost.

My noble father, 6 times to-day I help him to his horse, 6 times brestrid him; thrice I led him off, ended him from any further act: still, where danger was, still there I met him; like rich hangings in a homely house, as his will in his old feeble body. noble as he is, look where he comes.

Enter Salisbury.

l. Now, by my sword, while hast thou fought to-day; se mass, so did we all. I thank you, Richard: knows how long it is I have to live; it hath pleas'd him that three times to-day You have defended me from imminent death. Well, lords, we have not got that which we have: 'Tis not enough our foes are this time fled, beings opposites of such repairing nature. York: I know our safety is to follow them; For, as I hear, the king is fled to London, to call a present court of parliament: Let us pursue him ere the wits go forth. What says Lord Warwick? shall we after them? War. After them! nay, before them, if we can.

Now, by my faith, lords, 'twas a glorious day: Saint Alban's battle, won by famous York, shall be eterniz'd in all age to come.

Sound drums and trumpets! and to London all: And more such days as these to us befall!

Exeunt.

ACT I.

rans. Some Soldiers of York's party break in, then enter the Duke of York, Edward, ichard, Norfolk, Montague, Warwick, and Others, with white roses in their hats.

r. I wonder how the king escap'd our hands. York. While we pursu'd the horsemen of the north, silly stole away and left his men: creat the great Lord of Northumberland, Whose war-like ears could never brook retreat, Cheer'd up the drooping army; and himself, Lord Clifford, and Lord Stafford, all abreast, Charg'd our main battle's front, and breaking in Were by the swords of common soldiers slain.

Edw. Lord Stafford's father, Duke of Buckingham, Is either slain or wounded dangerously; I clefth his beaver with a downright blow: That this is true, father, behold his blood. Showing his bloody sword.

Mont. To York, showing his. And, brother, here's the Earl of Wiltshire's blood, Whom I encounter'd as the battles join'd.
Rich. Speak thou for me, and tell them what I did.

_Somerset's head._
York. Richard hath best deserv'd of all my sons.
But is thine grace dead, my Lord of Somerset?

_Norfolk._ Such hope have all the line of John of Gaunt!
Rich. Thus do I hope to shake King Henry's head.

_War._ And so do I. Victorious Prince of York,
Before I see thee seated in that throne
Which now the house of Lancaster usurps,
I vow by heaven these eyes shall never close.
This is the palace of the fearful king,
And this the regal seat: possess it, York;
For this is thine and not King Henry's heirs'.
York. Assist me then, sweet Warwick, and I will;
For hither we have broken in by force.
Norfolk. We'll assist you; he that flies shall die.
York. Thanks, gentle Norfolk. Stay by me, my lords;
And, soldiers, stay and lodge by me this night.
War. And when the king comes, offer him
no violence,
Unless he seek to thrust you out perforce.

_The Soldiers retire._

_Flourish._ Enter King Henry, Clifford, Northumberland, Westmoreland, Essex, and Others, with red roses in their hats.

_King._ My lords, look where the sturdy rebel sits,
Even in the chair of state! belike he means,
Back'd by the power of Warwick, that false peer,
To aspire unto the crown and reign as king.
Earl of Northumberland, he slew thy father,
And thine, Lord Clifford; and you both have now revenge.
On him, his sons, his favourites, and his friends.

_Northumberland._ If I be not, heavens be reveng'd on me!

_Clifford._ The hope thereof makes Clifford mourn in steel.

_Westmoreland._ What! shall we suffer this? let's pluck him down:
My heart for anger burns; I cannot brook it.

_King._ Be patient, gentle Earl of Westmoreland.

_Clifford._ Patience is for poltroons, such as he:
He durst not sit there had your father liv'd;
My gracious lord, here in the parliament
Let us assail the family of York.

_Warwick._ Well hast thou spoken, cousin: be

_King._ Ah! know you not the city favours us,
And they have troops of soldiers at their back.
_Exc. But when the duke is slain the _King._ Far be the thought of this in Henry's heart,

To make a shambles of the parliament-house.
Cousin of Exeter, frowns, words, and threats.
Shall be the war that Henry means to use,

Thou factious Duke of York, descend thy

_Warwick._ Exeter, thou art a traitor to the crown.

_Warwick._ True, Clifford; and that's Rich.

_Duke of York._

THIRD PART OF KING HENRY VI.

KICH. Sound drums and trumpets, and the king will fly.

YORK. Sons, peace!

HEN. Peace thou! and give King Henry leave to speak.

PLANTAGENET. Shall speak first: hear him, lords;

I be that intervals him shall not live.

HEN. Think'st thou that I will leave my kingly throne, my grand sire and my father sat?

I shall war unpeopled this realm;

and their colours, often borne in France,

I now in England to our heart's great sorrow, thee my winding-sheet. Why faint you, lords?

title's good, and better far than his.

Prove it, Henry, and thou shalt be king.

HEN. Henry the Fourth by conquest got the crown.

ORK. Twas by rebellion against his king.

HEN. Aside, I know not what to say: my title's weak.

me, may not a king adopt an heir?

ORK. What then?

HEN. An if he may, then am I lawful king;

Richard, in the view of many lords,

the crown to Henry the Fourth,

one heir my father was, and I am his.

ORK. He rose against him, being his sovereign,

I made him to resign his crown perforce.

Suppose, my lords, he did it unconstraim'd,

you twere prejudicial to his crown?

ER. No; for he could not so resign his crown that the next heir should succeed and reign.

HEN. Art thou against us, Duke of Exeter?

ER. His is the right, and therefore pardon me.

ORK. Why whisper you, my lords, and answer not?

ER. My conscience tells me he is lawful king.

HEN. All will revolt from me, and turn to him.

PLANTAGENET, for all the claim thou lay' st,

not that Henry shall be so depos'd.

Depos'd he shall be in despite of all.

Thou art deceiv'd: 'tis not thy southern power,

Essex, Norfolk, Suffolk, nor of Kent,

ich makes thee thus presumptuous and proud,

set the duke up in despite of me.

KING Henry, be thy title right or wrong,

d Clifford vows to fight in thy defence:

that ground gape and swallow me alive,

ere I shall kneel to him that slew my father!

HEN. O Clifford! how thy words revive my heart.

ORK. Henry of Lancaster, resign thy crown, at murther you, or what conspire you, lords?

Do right unto this princely Duke of York, will fill the house with armed men,

'ter the chair of state, where now he sits,

ite up his title with usurping blood.

He stamps with his foot, and the Soldiers show themselves.

HEN. My Lord of Warwick, hear me but one word:

me for this my life-time reign as king.

ORK. Confirm the crown to me and to mine heirs,

And thou shalt reign in quiet while thou liv'st.

K. Hen. I am content: Richard Plantagenet,

Enjoy the kingdom after my decease.

Cliff. What wrong is this unto the prince your son?

War. What good is this to England and himself!

WEST. Base, fearful, and despairing Henry!

Cliff. How hast thou injur'd both thyself and ans!

WEST. I cannot stay to hear these articles.

Nor. Nor I.

Cliff. Come, cousin, let us tell the queen these news.

WEST. Farewell, faint-hearted and degenerate

king,

whose cold blood no spark of honour bides.

Nor. Be thou a prey unto the house of York,

And die in bands for this unmanly deed!

Cliff. In dreadful war may'st thou be overcome,

Or live in peace abandon'd and despis'd!

Exit NORTHUMBERLAND, CLIFFORD, and WESTMORELAND.

WAR. Turn this way, Henry, and regard them not.

Exe. They seek revenge and therefore will not yield.

War. Why should you sigh, my lord?

K. Hen. Not for myself, Lord Warwick, but my son,

Whom I unnaturally shall disinherit.

But be it as it may; I here entail

The crown to thee and to thine heirs for ever;

Conditionally, that here thou take an oath

To cease this civil war, and, whilst I live,

To honour me as thy king and sovereign;

And neither by treason nor hostility

To seek to put me down and reign myself.

York. This oath I willingly take and will perform.

Coming from the throne.

War. Long live King Henry! Plantagenet, embrace him.

K. Hen. And long live thou and these thy forward sons!

York. Now York and Lancaster are reconcil'd.

Exe. Accurs'd be he that seeks to make them foes! Senec. The Lords come forward.

York. Farewell, my gracious lord: I'll to my castle.

War. And I'll keep London with my soldiers.

NOR. And I to Norfolk with my followers.

MONT. And I unto the sea from whence I came.

Exit YORK and his Sons, WARWICK,

NORFOLK, MONTAGUE, Soldiers, and Attendants.

K. Hen. And I, with grief and sorrow, to the court.

Enter Queen MARGARET and the Prince of WALES.

Exe. Here comes the queen, whose looks bewray her anger:

I'll steal away.

K. Hen. Exeter, so will I.

Q. MAR. Nay, go not from me; I will follow

thee.

K. Hen. Be patient, gentle queen, and I will stay.

Q. MAR. Who can be patient in such extremes?

Ah! wretched man; would I had died a maid,
And never seen thee, never borne thee son.
Seeing thou hast prov'd so unnatural a father.
Hath he desert't to lose his birthright thus?
Hast thou but lov'd him half so well as I?
Or felt that pain which I did for him once.
Or nourish'd him as I did with my blood,
Thou would'st have left thy dearest heart-blood there,
Rather than have made that savage duke thine heir,
And disinheriteth thee only son.

Prince. Father, you cannot disinherit me.
If you be king, why should not I succeed?
K. Hen. Pardon me, Margaret; pardon me, sweet son.
The Earl of Warwick and the Duke enfore'd me.
Q. Mar. Enforc'd thee! art thou king, and wilt be forc'd?
I shame to hear thee speak. Ah! timorous wretch;
Thou hast undone thyself, thy son, and me;
And given unto the house of York such head
As thou shalt reign but by their sufferance.
To entail him and his heirs unto the crown,
What is it but to make thy sephulchre,
And creep into it far before the time?
Warwick is chancellor and the lord of Calais;
Stern Faulconbridge commands the narrow seas;
The Duke is made protector of the realm;
And yet shalt thou be safe? such safety finds
The trembling lamb environ'd with wolves.
Had I been there, which am a silly woman,
The soldiers should have toss'd me on their pikes
Before I would have granted to that act;
But thou prefer'st thy life before thine honour:
And seeing thou dost, I here divorce myself
Both from thy table, Henry, and thy bed,
Until that act of parliament be repeal'd
Whereby my son is disinherit'd.
The northern lords that have forsworn thy colours
Will follow me, if once they see them spread;
And spread they shall be, to thy foul disgrace,
And utter ruin of the house of York.
Thus do I leave thee. Come, son, let's away;
Our army is ready; come, we'll after them.
K. Hen. Stay, gentle Margaret, and hear me speak.
Q. Mar. Thou hast spoke too much already:
Get thee gone.
K. Hen. Gentle son Edward, thou wilt stay with me?
Q. Mar. Ay, to be murder'd by his enemies.
Prince. When I return with victory from the field
I'll see your grace; till then I'll follow her.
Q. Mar. Come, son, away; we may not linger thus.

K. Hen. Poor queen! how love to me and to her son
Hath made her break out into terms of rage.
Reveng'd may she be on that hateful duke,
Whose haughty spirit, wing'd with desire,
Will cost my crown, and like an empty eagle
Tire on the flesh of me and of my son!
The loss of those three lords torment's my heart:
I'll write unto them and entreat them fair.
Come, cousin; thou shalt be the messenger.

Exec. And I, I hope, shall reconcile them all.

Scene II.—A Room in Sandal Castle, near Wakefield.

Enter Edward, Richard, and Montague.
Rich. Brother, though I be youngest, give me leave.
Edw. No, I can better play the orator.
Mont. But I have reasons strong and force.

Enter York.
York. Why, how now, sons and brother a strife?
What is your quarrel? how began it first?
Edw. No quarrel, but a slight contention.
York. About what?
Rich. About that which concerns your grace and me.
The crown of England, father, which is yours.
Rich. Your right depends not on his life.
Edw. Now you are heir, therefore enjoy it then.
By giving the house of Lancaster to break
It will return you, father, in the end.
York. I took an oath that he should quit his reign.
Edw. But for a kingdom any oath may be broken:
I would break a thousand oaths to reign one year.
Rich. No; God forbid your grace should forsworn.
York. I shall be, if I claim by open war.
Rich. I'll prove the contrary, if you'll me speak.
York. Thou canst not, son; it is impossible.
Rich. An oath is of no moment, being not true.
Before a true and lawful magistrate
That hath authority over him that swears:
Henry had none, but did usurp the place;
Then, seeing 'twas he that made you to depose
Your oath, my lord, is vain and frivolous.
Therefore, to arms! and, father, do the rest.
How sweet a thing it is to wear a crown,
Within whose circuit is Elysium,
And all that poets feign of bliss and joy.
Why do we linger thus? I cannot rest
Until the white rose that I wear be dyed
Even in the lukewarm blood of Henry's heir.
York. Richard, enough; I will be king, or brother, thou shalt to London presently,
And whet on Warwick to this enterprise.
Thou, Richard, shalt to the Duke of Norfolk
And tell him privately of our intent.
You, Edward, shall unto my Lord Cobham,
With whom the Kentish men will willingly
In them I trust; for they are soldiers,
Witty, courtiers, liberal, full of spirit.
While you are thus employ'd, what resteth to me?
But that I seek occasion how to rise.
And yet the king not privy to my drift,
Nor any of the house of Lancaster?

Enter a Messenger.

But, stay: what news? why com'st thou in so post?
Mess. The queen with all the northern earls and lords
Intend here to besiege you in your castle.
She is hard by with twenty thousand men,
And therefore fortify your hold, my lord.
Clif. Had I thy brethren here, their lives and thine
Were not revenge sufficient for me;
No, if I digg’d up thy forefathers’ graves,
And hung their rotten coﬃns up in chains,
It could not shake mine ire, nor ease my heart.
The sight of any of the house of York
Is as a fury to torment my soul:
And till I root out their accursed line,
And leave not one alive, I live in hell.
Therefore—

Lifting his hand.

Rut. O! let me pray before I take my death.
To thee I pray; sweet Clifford, pity me!
Clif. Such pity as my rapier’s point afords.
Rut. I never did thee harm: why wilt thou slay me?
Clif. Thy father hath.

Rut. But twas ere I was born.
Thou hast one son; for his sake pity me.
Lest in revenge thereof, sith God is just,
He be as miserably slain as I.
Ah! let me live in prison all my days;
And when I give occasion of oﬃence,
Then let me die, for now thou hast no cause.
Clif. No cause!

Thy father slew my father; therefore, die.

Stabs him.

Rut. Di faciam landis summa sit iustitia! Dies.
Clif. Plantagenet! I come, Plantagenet!
And this thy son’s blood cleaving to my blade
Shall rust upon my weapon, till thy blood,
Congeal’d with this, do make me wipe oﬀ both.
I am your butt, and I abide your shot.

North. Yield to our mercy, proud Plantagenet.

Clif. Ay, to such mercy as his ruthless arm
     With downright payment show'd us to my father.
     Now Plantagenath hath tumbled from his car,
     And made an evening at the noontide prick.

York. My ashes, as the phoenix, may bring forth
     A bird that will revenge upon you all;
     And in that hope I throw mine eyes to heaven,
     Scouring whate'er you can afflict me with.
     Why come you not? what! multitudes, and fear?

Clif. So cowards fight when they can fly no further;
     So doves do peck the falcon's piercing talons;
     So desperate thieves, all hopeless of their lives,
     Breathe out invective 'gainst the officers.

York. O Clifford! but bethink thee once again,
     And in thy thought o'errun my former time;
     And, if thou canst for blushing, view this face,
     And bite thy tongue, that slanders him with cowardice

Whose frown hath made thee faint and fly ere this.

Clif. I will not bandy with thee word for word,
     But buckle with thee blows, twice two for one.

Drews. Q. Mar. Hold, valiant Clifford! for a thousand causes
     I would prolong awhile the traitor's life.
     Wrath makes him deaf: speak thou, Northumberland.

North. Hold, Clifford! do not honour him so much
     To prick thy finger, though to wound his heart.
     What valour were it, when a cur doth grin,
     For one to thrust his hand between his teeth,
     When he might spurn him with his foot away?
     It is war's prize to take all vantages,
     And ten to one is no impeach of valour.

They boy hands on York, who struggles.

Clif. Ay, ay: so strives the woodcock with the gin.

North. So doth the cony struggle in the net.

York. So triumph thieves upon their conquer'd booty;
     So true men yield, with robbers so o'ermatch'd.

North. What would your grace have done unto him now?

Q. Mar. Brave warriors, Clifford and Northumberland,
     Come, make him stand upon this molehill here,
     That rought at mountains with outstretched arms,
     Ye parted but the shadow with his hand.
     What! was it you that would be England's king?
     Was't you that knitt'd in our parliament,
     And made a preachment of your high descent?
     Where are your mess of sons to back you now?
     The wanton Edward, and the lusty George?
     And where's that valiant crook-back prodigy,
     Dicky your boy, that with his grumbling voice
     Was wont to cheer his dad in mutinies?
     Or, with the rest, where is your darling Rutland?
     Look! York: I stain'd this napkin with the blood
     That valiant Clifford with his rapier's point
     Made issue from the bosom of the boy;
     And if thine eyes can water for his death,
     I give thee this to dry thy cheeks withal.
     Alas! poor York, but that I hate thee deadly,
     I should lament thy miserable state.

I prithee grieve, to make me merry, York.
     What! hath thy thievish heart so parch'd the entrails
     That not a tear can fall for Rutland's death
     Why art thou patient, man? thou should'st
     mad;
     And I, to make thee mad, do mock thee thus
     Stamp, rave, and fret, that I may sing and da

So fled his enemies my war-like father:

See how the morning opes her golden gates,
And takes her farewell of the glorious sun;

Dazzle mine eyes, or do I see three suns?
Three glorious suns, each one a perfect sun;
Not separated with the racking clouds,
But sever'd in a pale clear-shining sky.
See, see! they join, embrace, and seem to kiss,
As if they vow'd some league inviolable:
Now are they but one lamp, one light, one sun.
In this the heaven figures some event.

'Tis wondrous strange, the like yet never heard of.
I think it cites us, brother, to the field,
That we, the sons of brave Plantagenet,
Each one already blazing by our needs,
Should notwithstanding join our lights together,
And over-shine the earth, as this the world.
Whate'er it bodes, henceforward will I bear
Upon my target three fair-shining suns.

Nay, bear three daughters: by your leave I speak it,
You love the breeder better than the male.

Enter a Messenger.

But what art thou, whose heavy looks foretell
Some dreadful story hanging on thy tongue?

Ah! one that was a woeful looker-on
When as the noble Duke of York was slain,
Your princely father and my loving lord.

Speak no more, for I have heard too much.

Environed he was with many foes,
And stood against them, as the hope of Troy
Against the Greeks that would have enter'd Troy.
But Heracles himself must yield to odds;
And many strokes, though with a little axe,
Hew down and fell the hardest-timber'd oak.
By many hands your father was subdu'd;
But only slaughter'd by the irreful arm
Of unfretting Clifford and the queen,
Who crown'd the gracious duke in high despite;
Laugh'd in his face; and, when with grief he wept,
The ruthless queen gave him to dry his cheeks
A napkin steeped in the harmless blood
Of sweet young Rutland, by rough Clifford slain:
And after many scorns, many foul taunts.
They took his head, and on the gates of York
They set the same; and there it doth remain,
The saddest spectacle that e'er I view'd.

Sweet Duke of York! our prop to lean upon,
Now thou art gone, we have no staff, no stay.
O Clifford! boisterous Clifford! thou hast slain
The flower of Europe for his chivalry;
And treacherously hast thou vanquish'd him,
For hand to hand he would have vanquish'd thee.
Now my soul's palace is become a prison;
Ah! would she break from hence, that this my body
Might in the ground be closed up in rest,
For never henceforth shall I joy again,
Never, O! never, shall I see more joy.
Rich. I cannot weep, for all my body's moisture Scarce serves to quench my furnace-burning heart.
Nor can my tongue unload my heart's great burden;
For selfsame wind that I should speak withal
Is kindling coals that fire all my breast,
And burn me up with flames that tears would quench.
To weep is to make less the depth of grief:
Tears then for babes; blows and revenge for me!
Richard, I bear thy name; I'll venge thy death,
Or die renowned by attempting it.

Edw. His name that valiant duke hath left with thee;
His dukedom and his chair with me is left.

Rich. Nay, if thou be that princely eagle's bird,
Show thy descent by gazing 'gainst the sun:
For chair and dukedom, throne and kingdom say:
Either that is thine, or else thou wert not his.

March. Enter Warwick and Montague, with their Army.

War. How now, fair lords! What fare? what news abroad?
Rich. Great Lord of Warwick, if we should recount
Our baleful news, and at each word's deliverance
Stab poniards in our flesh till all were told,
The words would add more anguish than the wounds.

O valiant lord! the Duke of York is slain.

Edw. O Warwick! Warwick! that Plantagenet
Which held thee dearly as his soul's redemption,
Is by the stern Lord Clifford done to death.

War. Ten days ago I drown'd these news in tears,
And now, to add more measure to your woes,
I come to tell you things sith then befallen.
After the bloody fray at Wakefield fought,
Where your brave father breath'd his latest gasp,
Tidings, as swiftly as the posts could run,
Were brought me of your loss and his depart.
I, then in London, keeper of the king,
Must'd my soldiers, gather'd docks of friends,
And very well appointed, as I thought,
March'd toward Saint Alban's to intercept the queen,
Bearing the king in my behalf along;
For by my scouts I was advertised
That she was coming with a full intent
To dash our late decree in parliament,
Touching King Henry's oath and your succession.
Short tale to make, we at Saint Albans met,
Our battles join'd, and both sides fiercely fought:
But whether 'twas the coldness of the king,
Who look'd full gently on his war-like queen,
That robb'd my soldiers of their heated spleen;
Or whether 'twas report of her success;
Or more than common fear of Clifford's rigour,
Who thunders to his captives blood and death,
I cannot judge: but, to conclude with truth,
Their weapons like to lightning came and went;
Our soldiers, like the night-owl's lazy flight,
Or like an idle thrower with a flail,
Fell gently down, as if they struck their friends.
I cheer'd them up with justice of our cause,
With promise of high pay and great rewards:
But all in vain; they had no heart to fight,
And we in them no hope to win the day;
So that we fled: the king unto the queen;
Lord George your brother, Norfolk and my self,
In haste, post-haste, are come to join with you.
For the marches here we heard you were making another head to fight again.

Edw. Where is the Duke of Norfolk, go Warwick?
And when came George from Burgundy to England?

War. Some six miles off the duke is with soldiers:
And for your brother, he was lately sent
From your kind aunt, Duchess of Burgundy
With aid of soldiers to this needful war.

Rich. 'Twas odds, belike, when valiant Warwick flest:
Oft have I heard his praises in pursuit,
But ne'er till now his scandal of retire.

War. Nor now my scandal, Richard, dost thou hear;
For thou shalt know this strong right hand
Can pluck the diadem from faint Henry's head,
And wring the awful sceptre from his fist,
Were he as famous and as bold in war
As he is fam'd for mildness, peace, and prayer.

Rich. I know it well, Lord Warwick; but me not:
'Tis love I bear thy glories makes me speak.
But in this troublous time what's to be done?
Shall we go throw away our coats of steel,
And wrap our bodies in black mourning gown?
Numbering our Ave-Maries with our beads;
Or shall we on the helmets of our foes
Tell our devotion with revengeful arms?
If for the last, say 'Aye,' and to it, lords.

War. Why, therefore Warwick came to you out,
And therefore comes my brother Montague.
Attend me, lords. The proud insulting que
With Clifford and the haught Northumberland:
And of their feather many more proud birds
Have wrought the easy-melting king into a flame;
He swore consent to your succession,
His oath enrolled in the parliament;
And now to London all the crew are gone,
To frustrate both his oath and what beside
May make against the house of Lancaster.
Their power, I think, is thirty thousand strong.
Now, if the help of Norfolk and myself,
With all the friends that thou, brave Earl March,
Amongst the loving Welshmen canst procure
Will but amount to five-and-twenty thousand.

Why, Via! to London will we march again;
And once again beside our foaming steeds
And once again cry 'Charge upon our foes!' But never once again turn back and fly.

Aye, now methinks I hear great Warwick
Ne'er may he live to see a sunny day,
That cries 'Retire,' if Warwick bid him stay.

Edw. Lord Warwick, on thy shoulder will I lay
And when thou fail'st, as God forbid the hour,
Must Edward fall, which peril heaven foretold.

War. No longer Earl of March, but Duke of York:

The next degree is England's royal throne;
For King of England shalt thou be proclaimed.
every borough as we pass along;

4 we no longer dreaming of renown;
5 sound the trumpets, and about our task.

Scene II.—Before York.

mish. Enter King Henry, Queen Margaret, the Prince of Wales, Clifford, and Northumberland, with drums and trumpets.

1 Mar. Welcome, my lord, to this brave
2 town of York.
3 der's the head of that arch-enemy
4 sought to be encompass'd with your crown;
5 not the object cheer your heart, my lord?
6 Hen. Ay, as the rocks cheer them that fear
7 their steep:
8 see this sight, it isk my very soul.
9 hold revenge, dear God! 'tis not my fault,
10 wilfully have I infring'd my vow.
11 Tif. My gracious liege, this too much lenity
12 harmful pity must be laid aside.
13 whom do lions cast their gentle looks?
14 to the beast that would usurp their den.
15 hand is that the forest bear doth lack?
16 his that spoils her young before her face.
17 scapes the lurking serpent's mortal sting?
18 that she sets his foot upon her back.
19 smallest worm will turn being trodden on,
20 doves will peck in safeguard of their brood.
21 obvious York did level at thy crown;
22 on smiling while he knelt his angry bows:
23 but a duke, would have his son a king,
24 raise his issue like a loving sire;
25 on, being a king, bless'd with a goodly son,
26 yield consent to disinherit him,
27 his arg'd thee a most unloving father,
28 reasonable creatures feed their young;
29 though man's face be fearful to their eyes,
30 in protection of their tender ones,
31 hath not seen them, even with those wings
32 which sometime they have us'd with fearful
33 flight,
34 the war with him that climb'd unto their nest,
35 fering their own lives in their young's defence?
36 shame, my liege! make them your precedent;
37 ere it not pity that this goodly boy
38 would lose his birthright by his father's fault,
39 long hereafter say unto his child,
40 What my great-grandfather and grandsire got 41 careless father fondly gave away?
42! what a shame were this. Look on the boy;
43 let his manly face, which promised
44 Successful fortune, steel thy melting heart
45 To hold thine own and leave thine own with him.
46 Hen. Full well hath Clifford play'd the 47 orator,
48 Inferring arguments of mighty force.
49 But, Clifford, tell me, didst thou never hear
50 That things ill got had ever bad success?
51 And happy always was it for that son
52 Whose father for his hoarding went to hell?
53 I'll leave my son my virtuous deeds behind;
54 And would my father had left me no more!
55 For all the rest is held at such a rate
56 As brings a thousand-fold more care to keep 57 Than in possession any jot of pleasure.
58 Ah! cousin York, would thy best friends did
59 know
60 How it doth grieve me that thy head is here.
61 Mar. My lord, cheer up your spirits: our foes
62 are nigh,
63 And this soft courage makes your followers faint.
64 You promis'd knighthood to our forward son;
65 Unsheathe your sword, and dub him presently.
66 Edward, kneel down.
67 Hen. Edward Plantagenet, arise a knight;
68 And learn this lesson: draw thy sword in right.
69 Prince. My gracious father, by your kingly
70 leave,
71 I'll draw it as apparent to the crown,
72 And in that quarrel use it to the death.
73 Clif. Why, that is spoken like a toward prince.

Mess. Royal commanders, be in readiness;

12 Darraign your battle, for they are at hand.
13 Clif. I would your highness would depart the 14 field:
15 The queen hath best success when you are 16 absent.
17 Mar. Ay, good my lord, and leave us to our 21 North. Be it with resolution then to fight.

22 Prince. My royal father, cheer these noble
23 lords,
24 And hearten those that fight in your defence.
25 Unsheathe your sword, good father: cry, 'Saint 26 George!'
27

March. Enter Edward, George, Richard,
28 Warwick, Norfolk, Montague, and Soldiers.

Edw. Now, perjur'd Henry, will thou kneel
29 for grace,
30 And set thy diadem upon my head;
31 Or bide the mortal fortune of the field?
32 Mar. Go, rate thy minions, proud insulting
33 boy!
34 Becomes it thee to be thus bold in terms
35 Before thy sovereign and thy lawful king?
36 Edw. I am his king, and he should bow his 37 knee:
38 I was adopted heir by his consent:
39 Since when, his oath is broke; for, as I hear,
40 Thou, that are king, though he do wear the crown,
41 Have caus'd him, by new act of parliament,
To blot out me, and put his own son in.

Cliff. And reason too:

Who should succeed the father but the son?

Cliff. Ay, crook-back; here I stand to answer thee,

Or any be the proudest of thy sort.

Rich. 'Twas you that kill'd young Rutland, was it not?

Cliff. Ay, and old York, and yet not satisfied.

Rich. For God's sake, lords, give signal to the fight.

War. What say'st thou, Henry, wilt thou yield the crown?

Q. Mar. Why, how now, long-tongu'd Warwick! dare you speak?

When you and I met at Saint Alban's last,

Your legs did better service than your hands.

War. Then 'twas my turn to fly, and now 'tis thine.

Cliff. You said so much before, and yet you fled.

War. 'Twas not your valour, Clifford, drove me thence.

North. No, nor your manhood that durst make you stay.

Break off the parley; for scarce I can refrain

The execution of my big-swoln heart

Upon that Clifford, that cruel child-killer.

Cliff. I slew thy father; call'st thou him a child?

Rich. Ay, like a dastard and a treacherous coward,

As thou dist kill our tender brother Rutland,

But ere sunset I'll make thee curse the deed.

K. Hen. Have done with words, my lords, and hear me speak.

Q. Mar. Defy them then, or else hold close thy lips.

K. Hen. I prithee, give no limits to my tongue:

I am a king, and privileg'd to speak.

Cliff. My liege, the wound that bred this meeting here

Cannot be cur'd by words; therefore be still.

Rich. Then, executioner, unsheathe thy sword.

By him that made us all, I am resolv'd

That Clifford's manhood lies upon his tongue.

Edw. Say, Henry, shall I have my right or no?

A thousand men have broke their fasts to-day,

That 'er shall dine unless thou yield the crown.

War. If thou deny, their blood upon thy head;

For York in justice puts his armour on.

Priner. If that be right which Warwick says is right,

There is no wrong, but every thing is right.

Rich. Whoever got thee, there thy mother stands;

For well I wot thou hast thy mother's tongue.

Q. Mar. But thou art neither like thy sire nor dam,

But like a foul misshapen stigmatic,

Mark'd by the destinies to be avoided.

As venom toads, or lizards' dreadful stings.

Rich. Iron of Naples hid with English gilt,

Whose father bears the title of a king,

As if a channel should be call'd the sea,

Sham'st thou not, knowing whence thou art extragaunt,

To let thy tongue detect thy base-born heart?

Edw. A wisp of straw were worth a thousand crowns,

To make this shameless callat know herself,

Helen of Greece was fairer far than thou,

Although thy husband may be Menelaus;

And ne'er was Agamemnon's brother wronged

By that false woman as this king by thee.

His father revell'd in the heart of France,

And tam'd theking, and made the dauphin to go.

And had he match'd according to his state,

He might have kept that glory to this day;

But when he took a beggar to his bed,

And grac'd thy poor sire with his bridal day.

Even then that sunshine brew'd a shower for h'n

That wash'd his father's fortunes forth of Farn

And heap'd sedition on his crown at home.

For what hath breach'd this tumult but thy pride

Hadst thou been meek our title still had slept

And we, in pitty of the gentle king,

Had slipp'd our claim until another age.

Geo. But when we saw our sunshine made a spring,

And that thy summer bred us no increase,

We set the axe to thy usurping root;

And though the edge hath something hit of selves,

Yet know thou, since we have begun to strike

We'll never leave till we have wewn thee down,

Or bath'd thy growing with our heated blood.

Edw. And in this resolution I defy thee;

Not willing any longer conference,

Since thou deniest the gentle king to speak,

Sound trumpets! let our bloody colours wave

And either victory, or else a grave.

Edw. No, wrangling woman, we'll no longer stay:

These words will cost ten thousand lives to-day.

Exeunt.

SCENE III.—A Field of Battle near Towton.

Alarums. Excursions. Enter WARWICK.

War. Forspent with toil, as runners with a run,

I lay me down a little while to breathe;

For strokes receiv'd, and many blows repaid.

Have robb'd my strong-knit sinews of their strength,

And spite of spite needs must I rest awhile.

Enter EDWARD, crying.

Edw. Smile, gentle heaven! or strike, ungen'd death!

For this world frowns, and Edward's sun clouded.

War. How now, my lord! what hap? will hope of good?

Enter GEORGE.

Geo. Our hap is loss, our hope but sad desp.

Our ranks are broke, and ruin follows us.

What counsel give you? whither shall we fly

Edw. Bootless is flight, they follow us with wings;

And weak we are and cannot shun pursuit.

Enter RICHARD.

Rich. Alas! Warwick, why hast thou withdraw thyself?

Thy brother's blood the thristy earth bath drunk

Breach'd with the steely point of Clifford's lance.
Scene V.—Another Part of the Field.

Alarum. Enter King Henry.

K. Hen. This battle fares like to the morning's war,
When d'ying clouds contend with growing light,
What time the shepherd, blowing of his nails,
Can neither call it perfect day nor night.
Now sways it this way, like a mighty sea
For'd by the tide to combat with the wind;
Now sways it that way, like the self-same sea
For'd to retire by fury of the wind:
Sometime the flood prevails, and then the wind;
Now one the better, then another best;
Both tugging to be victors, breast to breast,
Yet neither conqueror nor conquered:
So is the equal poise of this fell war.
Here on this molehill will I sit me down.
To whom God will, there be the victory!
For Margaret my queen, and Clifford too,
Have chid me from the battle; swearing both
They prosper best of all when I am theene.
Would I were dead! if God's good will were so;
For what is in this world but grief and woe?
O God! methinks it were a happy life,
To be no better than a homely swain;
To sit upon a hill, as I do now,
To carve out dials quaintly, point by point,
Thereby to see the minutes how they run,
How many make the hour full complete;
How many hours bring about the day;
How many days will finish up the year;
How many years a mortal man may live.
When this is known, then to divide the times:
So many hours must I tend my flock;
So many hours must I take my rest;
So many hours must I contemplate;
So many hours must I sport myself;
So many days my eyes have been with young;
So many weeks ere the poor fools will ean;
So many years ere I shall shear the fleece:
So minutes, hours, days, months, and years,
Pass'd over to the end they were created,
Would bring white hairs unto a quiet grave.
Ah! what a life was this; how sweet! how lovely!
Gives not the hawthorn-bush a sweeter shade
To shepherds looking on their silly sheep,
Than doth a rich embroider'd canopy
To kings that fear their subjects' treachery?
O yes! it doth; a thousand-fold it doth.
And to conclude, the shepherd's homely cards,
His cold thin drink out of his leather bottle,
His wonted sleep under a fresh tree's shade,
All which secure and sweetly he enjoys,
Is far beyond a prince's delicates,
His viands sparkling in a golden cup,
His body couch'd in a curious bed,
When care, mistrust, and treason waits upon him.

Alarum. Enter a Son that has killed his Father, with the dead body.

Son. Ill blows the wind that profits nobody.
This man, whom hand to hand I slew in fight,
May be possessed with some store of crowns;
And I, that haply take them from him now,
May yet ere night yield both my life and them.
To some man else, as this dead man doth me.
Who's this? O God! it is my father's face,
Third prood begetting it I that pity, no, 80 awa boy, hadst mine pity, iiio what Whom And Have Be Give For Throw Erroneous, Blown O And The The The Misthink Take The The other one his heart, for- son! The thousand '11 Woes could, give- man's ears, with wouuds, this miserabie with me Not that I fear to stay, but love to go Whither the queen intends. Forward! away Scene VI.—Another Part of the Field.

A loud alarum. Enter Clifford, wounded Clif. Here burns my candle out; ay, here dies, Which, whiles it lasted, gave King Henry lig O Lancaster! I fear thy overthrow More than my body's parting with my soul. My love and fear glued many friends to thee And, now I fall, thy tough cominance melt Impairing Henry, strengthening misprond Ye The common people swarm like summer flies, And whither fly the gnats but to the sun? And who shins now but Henry's enemies? O Phæbus! hadst thou never given consent That Phaeton should check thy fiery steeds Thy burning car never had search'd the earth And, Henry, hadst thou sway'd as kings should Or as thy father and his father did, Giving no ground unto the house of York, They never then had sprung like summer flies I and ten thousand in this luckless realm Had left no mourning widows for our death, And thou this day hadst kept thy chair in peace For what doth cherish weeds but gentle air? And what makes robbers bold but too much lenity! Bootless are plaints, and careless are my wounds No way to fly, nor strength to hold out flight The foe is merciless, and will not pity; For at their hands I have deserv'd no pity. The air hath got into my deadly wounds, And much effuse of blood doth make me faint Come, York and Richard, Warwick and the rest I stabb'd your fathers' bosoms, split my breast. He faints.

Marvin and retreat. Enter Edward, Geo. Richard, Montague, Warwick, and Soli-

Edw. Now breathe we, lords: good fortune bids us pause,
THIRD PART OF KING HENRY VI.

I smooth the frowns of war with peaceful looks. The troops pursue the bloody-minded queen, Sir Edward, call Henry, though he were a king, doth a sail, fill'd with a fretting gust, amand an argosy to stem the waves.

I think, lords, that Clifford was fiiid with them?

Var. No, 'tis impossible he should escape; though before his face I speak the words, or brother Richard mark'd him for the grave; where is he, he's surely dead.

CLIFFORD GROANS AND DIES.

Edge. Whose soul is that which takes her heavy leave?

Edge. See who it is; and, now the battle's ended, friend or foe let him be gently ns'd.

Rich. Revoke that doom of mercy, for 'tis Clifford; so not contented that he lopp'd the branch leaving Rutland when his leaves put forth, he set his murdering knife unto the root on whereon that tender spray did sweetly spring, seen our princely father, Duke of York.

War. From off the gates of York fetch down the head, ur father's head, which Clifford placed there; dead wherewithal, let this supply the room; assue for measure must be answered.

Edge. Bring forth that fatal screech-owl to our house, at nothing sung but death to us and ours:

death shall stop his dismal threatening sound, d his ill-boding tongue no more shall speak.

Attendants bring the body forward.

War. I think his understanding is bereft.

Eke, Clifford; dost thou know who speaks to thee?

Rich. O! I wish he were; and so perhaps he doth: is but his policy to counterfeit, cause he would avoid such bitter taunts high in the time of death he gave our father.

Geo. If so he think'st, vex him with eager words.

Rich. Clifford! ask mercy and obtain no grace.

Edge. Clifford! repent in bootless penitence.

War. Clifford! devise excuses for thy faults.

Geo. While we devise fell fortunes for thy faults, Rich. Thou didst love York, and I am son to York.

Edge. Thou pitied'st Rutland; I will pity thee.

Geo. Where's Captain Margaret, to fence thee now?

War. They mock thee, Clifford: swear as thou wast wont.

Rich. What? not an oath? nay, then the world goes hard then Clifford cannot spare his friends an oath, know by that he's dead; and, by my soul, this right hand would buy two hours' life, so that I in all despite might rail at him, his hand should chop it off, and with the issuing blood

the villain whose unstoned thirst

York and young Rutland could not satisfy.

War. Ay, but he's dead: off with the traitor's head, And rear it in the place your father's stands, And now to London with triumphant march, There to be crowned England's royal king, From whence shall Warwick cut the sea to France, And ask the Lady Bona for thy queen.

So shalt thou sinew both these lands together; And, having France thy friend, thou shalt not dread

The scatter'd foe that hopes to rise again; For though they cannot greatly sting to hurt, Yet look to have them buzz to offend thine ears. First will I see the coronation; And then to Brittany I'll cross the sea, To effect this marriage, so it please my lord.

Edge. Even as thou wilt, sweet Warwick, let it be;

For in thy shoulder do I build my seat, And never will I undertake the thing

Wherein thy counsel and consent is wanting. Richard, I will create thee Duke of Gloucester; And George, of Clarence; Warwick, as ourself, Shall do and undo as he pleaseth best.

Rich. Let me be Duke of Clarence, George of Gloucester, For Gloucester's dukedom is too ominous.

War. Tut! that's a foolish observation: Richard, be Duke of Gloucester. Now to London, To see these honours in possession.

Exeunt.

ACT III.

Enter two Keepers, with cross-bows in their hands.

First Keep. Under this thick-grown brake we'll shroud ourselves;

For through this land anon the deer will come;

And in this covert will we make our stand, Culling the principal of all the deer.

Second Keep. I'll stay above the hill, so both may shoot.

First Keep. That cannot be; the noise of thy cross-bow

Will scare the herd, and so my shoot is lost.

Here stand we both, and aim we at the best:

And, for the time shall not seem tedious, I'll tell thee what befell me on a day

In this self place where now we mean to stand.

Second Keep. Here comes a man; let's stay till he be past.

Enter King HENRY, disguised, with a prayer-book.

K. Hen. From Scotland am I stol'n, even of pure love

To greet mine own land with my wishful sight.

No, Harry, Harry, 'tis no land of thine;

Thy place is fill'd, thy sceptre wrung from thee,

Thy balm wash'd off wherewith thou wast anointed:

No bending knee will call thee Caesar now,

No humble suitors press to speak for right;

No, not a man comes for redress of right:

For how can I help them, and not myself?

First Keep. Ay, here's a deer whose skin's a keeper's foe:

This is the quondam king; let's seize upon him.
K. Hen. Let me embrace thee, sour adversity,
For wise men say it is the wisest course.
Second Keep. Why linger we? let us lay hands upon him.
First Keep. Forbear awhile; we'll hear a little more.
K. Hen. My queen and son are gone to France for aid;
And as I hear, the great commanding Warwick
Is thither gone, to crave the French king's sister
To wife for Edward. If this news be true,
Poor queen and son, your labour is but lost;
For Warwick is a subtle orator.
And Lewis a prince soon won with moving words,
By this account then Margaret may win him,
For she's a woman to be pitied much:
Her sighs will make a battery in his breast;
Her tears will pierce into a marble heart;
The tiger will be mild whiles she doth mourn;
And Nero will be tainted with remorse.
To hear and see her plaints, her brinish tears.
Ay, but she's come to beg; Warwick, to give;
She on his left side craving aid for Henry,
He on his right asking a wife for Edward.
She weeps, and says her Henry is depos'd;
He smiles, and says his Edward is install'd;
That she, poor wretch, for grief can speak no
more:
Whiles Warwick tells his title, smooths the wrong,
Inferreth arguments of mighty strength,
And in conclusion wins the king from her,
With promise of his sister, and what else,
To strengthen and support King Edward's place.
O Margaret! thus 'twill be; and thou, poor soul,
Art then forsaken, as thou went'st forlorn.
Second Keep. Say, what art thou that talk'st of kings and queens?
K. Hen. More than I seem, and less than I was born to:
A man at least, for less I should not be;
And men may talk of kings, and why not I?
Second Keep. Ay, but thou talk'st as if thou wert a king.
K. Hen. Why, so I am, in mind; and that's enough.
Second Keep. But if thou be a king, where is thy crown?
K. Hen. My crown is in my heart, not on my head;
Not deck'd with diamonds and Indian stones,
Nor to be seen; my crown is call'd content;
A crown it is that seldom kings enjoy.
Second Keep. Well, if you be a king crown'd with content,
Your crown and content you must be contented
To go along with us; for, as we think,
You are the king King Edward hath depos'd;
And we his subjects, sworn in all allegiance,
Will apprehend you as his enemy.
K. Hen. But did you never swear, and break an oath?
Second Keep. No, never such an oath; nor will not now.
K. Hen. Where did you dwell when I was King of England?
Second Keep. Here in this country, where we now remain.
K. Hen. I was anointed king at nine months old;
My father and my grandfather were kings,
And you were sworn true subjects unto me.
And tell me then, have you not broke your oath?
First Keep. No.
For we were subjects but while you were king.
K. Hen. Why, am I dead? do I not break a man!
Ah! simple men, you know not what you say.
Look! as I blow this feather from my face,
And as the air blows it to me again,
Obeying with my wind when I do blow,
And yielding to another when it blows,
Commanded always by the greater gust;
Such is the likeness of you common men.
But do not break your oaths; for of that sort
My mild entreaty shall not make you guilty.
Go where you will, the king shall be commanded;
And be you kings: command, and I'll obey.
First Keep. We are true subjects to the king Edward.
K. Hen. So would you be again to Henry,
If he were seated as King Edward is.
First Keep. We charge you, in God's name, and the king's,
To go with us unto the officers.
K. Hen. In God's name, lead; your king's name be obey'd:
And what God will, that let your king perform
And what he will, I humbly yield unto. Exit.

SCENE II.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter King Edward, Gloucester, Clarence, and Lady Grey.

K. Edw. Brother of Gloucester, at Saint Albans field
This lady's husband, Sir Richard Grey, was slain;
His lands then seiz'd on by the conqueror:
Her suit is now to repossess those lands;
Which we in justice cannot well deny,
Because in quarrel of the house of York
The worthy gentleman did lose his life.
Glow. Your highness shall do well to grant her suit;
It were dishonour to deny it her.
K. Edw. It were no less; but yet I'll make pause.
Glow. Aside to Clarence. Yea: is it so?
I see the lady hath a thing to grant,
Before the king will grant her humble suit.
Clar. Aside to Gloucester. He knows no game: how true he keeps the wind!
Glow. Aside to Gloucester. Silence!
K. Edw. Widow, we will consider of your suit:
And come some other time to know our mind.
L. Grey. Right gracious lord, I cannot bring delay:
May it please your highness to resolve me no
And what your pleasure is shall satisfy me.
Glow. Aside to Clarence. Ay, widow? the I'll warrant you all your lands,
An if what pleases him shall please you.
Fight closer, or, good faith, you'll catch a blow.
Clar. Aside to Gloucester. I think he means unless she chance to fall.
Glow. Aside to Clarence. God forbid the for he'll take vantages.
K. Edw. How many children hast thou, widow tell me.
Clar. Aside to Gloucester. I think he means to beg a child of her.
Edw. Nay, whip me then; he'll rather give her two.

Grey. Three, my most gracious lord.

Glou. Give me to CLARENCE. You shall have four, if you'll be rul'd by him.

Edw. T'were pity they should lose their father's lands.

Grey. Most pitiful, dread lord, and grant it then.

K. Edw. Lords, give us leave: I'll try this widow's wit.

Glou. Give me to CLARENCE. Ay, good leave have you; for you will have leave, youth take leave and leave you to the cratch.

GLOUCESTER and CLARENCE stand apart.

K. Edw. Now tell me, madam, do you love your children?

Grey. Ay, full as dearly as I love myself.

K. Edw. And would you not do much to do them good?

Grey. To do them good I would sustain some harm.

Edw. Then get your husband's lands, to do them good.

Grey. Therefore I came unto your majesty.

Edw. I'll tell you how these lands are to be got.

Grey. So shall you bind me to your highness's service.

Edw. What service wilt thou do me, if I give them?

Grey. What you command, that rests in me to do.

Edw. But you will take exception to my boon.

Grey. No, gracious lord, except I cannot do it.

Edw. Ay, but thou canst do what I mean to ask.

Grey. Why, then I will do what your grace commands.

Glou. Give me to CLARENCE. He plies her hard; and much rain wears the marble.

Jar. Give me to GLOUCESTER. As red as fire! nay, then her wax must melt.

Grey. Why stops my lord? shall I not hear my task?

Edw. An easy task: 'tis but to love a king.

Grey. That's soon perform'd, because I am a subject.

Edw. Why then, thy husband's lands I freely give thee.

Grey. I take my leave with many thousand thanks.

Glou. Give me to CLARENCE. The match is made; she seals it with a court'sy.

Edw. But stay thee; 'tis the fruits of love I mean.

Grey. The fruits of love I mean, my loving liege.

Edw. Ay, but, I fear me, in another sense. Is love think'st thou I saw so much to get?

Grey. My love till death, my humble thanks, my prayers: it love which virtue begs and virtue grants.

Edw. No, by my troth, I did not mean such love.

Grey. Why, then you mean not as I thought you did.

Edw. But now you partly may perceive my mind.

Grey. My mind will never grant what I perceive.

Your highness aims at, if I aim aright.

K. Edw. To tell thee plain, I aim to lie with thee.

Grey. To tell thee plain, I had rather lie in prison.

K. Edw. Why, then thou shalt not have thy husband's lands.

Grey. Why, then mine honesty shall be my crown;

For by that loss I will not purchase them.

K. Edw. Therein thou wrong'st thy children mightily.

Grey. Herein your highness wrongs both them and me.

But, mighty lord, this merry inclination

Accords not with the sadness of my suit:

Please you dismiss me, either with 'ay' or 'no.'

K. Edw. Ay, if thou wilt say 'ay' to my request;

No, if thou dost say 'no' to my demand.

Grey. Then, no, my lord. My suit is at an end.

Glou. Give me to CLARENCE. The widow likes him not, she knits her brows.

Clar. Give me to GLOUCESTER. He is the bluntest wooer in Christendom.

K. Edw. Give me to. Her looks do argue her replete with modesty;

Her words do show her wit incomparable;

All her perfections challenge sovereignty:

One way or other, she is for a king;

And she shall be my love, or else my queen.

Say that King Edward take thee for his queen?

Grey. 'Tis better said than done, my gracious lord:

I am a subject fit to jest withal,

But far unfit to be a sovereign.

K. Edw. Sweet widow, by my state I swear to thee

I speak no more than what my soul intends;

And that is, to enjoy thee for my love.

Grey. And that is more than I will yield unto.

I know I am too mean to be your queen,

And yet too good to be your comembine.

K. Edw. You cavil, widow: I did mean, my queen.

Grey. 'Twill grieve your grace my sons should call you father.

K. Edw. No more than when my daughters call thee mother.

Thou art a widow, and thou hast some children;

And, by God's mother, I, being but a bachelor,

Have other some: why, 'tis a happy thing

To be the father unto many sons.

Answer no more, for thou shalt be my queen.

Glou. Give me to CLARENCE. The ghostly father now hath done his shift.

Clar. Give me to GLOUCESTER. When he was made a shriver, 'twas for shift.

Edw. Brothers, you muse what chat we two have had.

Glou. The widow likes it not, for she looks very sad.

K. Edw. You'd think it strange if I should marry her.

Clar. To whom, my lord?

K. Edw. Why, Clarence, to myself.

Glou. That would be ten days' wonder at the least.

Clar. That's a day longer than a wonder lasts.

Glou. By so much is the wonder in extremes.
K. Edw. Well, jest on, brothers: I can tell you both
Her suit is granted for her husband’s lands.

Enter a Nobleman.

Nob. My gracious lord, Henry your foe is taken,
And brought your prisoner to your palace gate.

K. Edw. See that he be convey’d unto the Tower:
And go we, brothers, to the man that took him,
To question of his apprehension.

Widow, go you along. Lords, use her honourably.

Exeunt all but Gloucester.

Glo. Ay, Edward will use women honourably.
Would he were wasted, marrow, bones, and all,
That from his loins no hopeful branch may spring;
To cross me from the golden time I look for!
And yet, between my soul’s desire and me,
The justfal Edward’s title buried,
Is Clarence, Henry, and his son young Edward,
And all the unlook’d for issue of their bodies,
To take their rooms, ere I can place myself:
A cold premeditation for my purpose!
Why then, I do but dream on sovereignty;
Like one that stands upon a promontory,
And spies a far-off shore where he would tread,
Wishing his foot were equal with his eye;
And chides the sea that swells him from thence,
Saying, he’ll lade it dry to have his way:
So do I wish the crown, being so far off,
And so I chide the means that keeps me from it,
And so I say, ’ll cut the causes off,
Flattering me with impossibilities.

My eye’s too quick, my heart overweening too much,
Unless my hand and strength could equal them.
Well, say there is no kingdom then for Richard;
What other pleasure can the world afford?
I’ll make my heaven in a lady’s lap,
And deck my body in gay ornaments,
And witch sweet ladies with my words and looks.
O miserable thought! and more unlikely
Than to accomplish twenty golden crowns.

Why, love foresware me in my mother’s womb:
And, for I should not deal in her soft laws,
She did corrupt frail nature with some bire,
To shrink mine arm up like a wither’d shrub;
To make an envious mountain on my back,
Where sits deformity to mock my body;
To shape my legs of an unequal size;
To disproportion me in every part,
Like to a chaos, or an unlick’d bear-whelp
That carries no impression like the dam.

And am I then a man to be belov’d?

O monstrous fault! to harbour such a thought.
Then, since this earth affords no joy to me
But to command, to check, to o’erbear such
As are of better person than myself,
I’ll make my heaven to dream upon the crown;
And, whiles I live, to account this world but hell,
Until my missap’d trunk that bears this head
Be round impaled with a glorious crown.

And yet I know not how to get the crown,
For many live stand between me and home:
And I, like one lost in a thorny wood,
That rends the thorns and is rent with the thorns,
Seeking a way and straying from the way;
Not knowing how to find the open air,
But toiling desperately to find it out,
Torment myself to catch the English crown:
And from that torment I will free myself,
Or hew my way out with a bloody axe.

Why, I can smile, and murder wiles I smile,
And cry ‘Content’ to that which grieves my heart,
And wet my checks with artificial tears,
And frame my face to all occasions.
I’ll drown more sailors than the mermaid still,
I’ll play more gazers than the basilisk;
I’ll play the orator as well as Nestor,
Deceive more silly than Ulysses could,
And, like a Simon, take another Troy.
I can add colours to the chameleon,
Change shapes with Proteus for advantages
And set the mur’dous Machiavel to school.
Can I do this, and cannot get a crown?
Tut! were it further off, I’ll pluck it down.

Scene III.—France. A Room in the Palace.

Flourish. Enter Lewis the French King, his son BONA, attended: his Admiral, called BOUQUIN.
The King takes his state. Then enter Queen MARGARET, Prince Edward, and the Earl of EY
Lew Sits, and riseth up again.

K. Leu. Fair Queen of England, worthy Margaret,
Sit down with us: it ill befits thy state
And birth that thou should’st stand while I doth sit.

Q. Mor. No, mighty King of France; let Margaret Must strike her sail, and learn awhile to see Where kings command. I was, I must confess,
Great Albion’s queen in former golden days.
But now mischance hath trod my title down
And with dishonour laid me on the ground;
Where I must take like seat unto my fortune
And to my humble seat conform myself.

K. Leu. Why, say, fair queen, whence sprit
This deep despair?

Q. Mor. From such a cause as fills mine eyes
With tears
And stops my tongue, while heart is drown’d in cares.

K. Leu. Whate’er be, be thou stilllikethy
And sit thce by our side.

Yield not thy neck
To fortune’s yoke, but let thy dauntless mind
Still ride in triumph over all mischance.
Be plain, Queen Margaret, and tell thy grief
It shall be eas’d, if France can yield relief.

Q. Mor. Those gracious words revive my drooping thoughts,
And give my tongue-tied sorrow leaves to speak.
Now, therefore, be it known to noble Lewis,
That Henry, sole possessor of my love,
Is of a king become a banish’d man,
And forc’d to live in Scotland a forlorn;
While proud ambitious Edward Duke of York
Usurps the regal title and the seat
Of England’s true-annointed lawful king.
This is the cause that I, poor Margaret,
With this my son, Prince Edward, hence
Am come to crave thy just and lawful aid;
And if thou fail us, all our hope is done.
Scotland hath will to help, but cannot help;
Our people and our peers are both misled.
Our treasure seiz’d, our soldiers put to flight.
And, as thou seest, ourselves in heavy plight.
THIRD PART OF KING HENRY VI.

K. Lev. Renowned queen, with patience calm
The storm,
Where we bethink a means to break it off.

War. The more we stay, the more grows our foe.

K. Lev. The more I stay, the more I'll succour thee.

War. O! but impatience waiteth on true sorrow;
See where comes the breeder of my sorrow.

Enter WARWICK, attended.

K. Lev. What's he approacheth boldly to our presence?

War. Our Earl of Warwick, Edward's greatest friend.

K. Lev. Welcome, brave Warwick! What brings thee to France?

Descending from his state. Queen MARGARET rises.

War. Ay, now begins a second storm to rise;
This is he that moves both wind and tide.
War. From worthy Edward, King of Albion,
Lord and sovereign, and thy vassal friend, to one,
In kindness and unfeigned love,
St to do greetings to thy royal person;
Then to crave a league of amity;
Lastly to confirm that amity
Th' unspotted knot, if thou vouchsafe to grant
To virtuous Lady Bona, thy fair sister,
England's king in lawful marriage.

War. If that go forward, Henry's hope is done.

War. To BONA. And, gracious madam, in our king's behalf,
So commanded, with your leave and favour,
Emblem to kiss your hand, and with your tongue tell the passion of my sovereign's heart;
were fame, late entering at his heedful ears,
A place'd thy beauty's image and thy virtue.

War. King Lewis and Lady Bona, hear me speak,
And answer Warwick. His demand fornot from Edward's well-meaned honest love,
From deceit bred by necessity;
How can tyrants safely govern home,
Less abroad they purchase great alliance? to prove him tyrant this reason may suffice,
If Henry liveth still; but were he dead,
There Prince Edward stands, King Henry's son.
Oh, therefore, Lewis, that by this league and marriage
You draw not on thy danger and dishonour;
Though usurpers sway the rule awhile,
Heavens are just, and times suppresseth wrongs.

Injurious Margaret! prince.

And why not queen? War. Because thy father Henry did usurp, Dethroned no more art prince than she is queen.

Q. Lev. Then Warwick disannuls great John of Gaunt,
Rich did subdue the greatest part of Spain; after John of Gaunt, Henry the Fourth,
Rose wisdom was a mirror to the wisest; after that wise prince, Henry the Fifth,
By his prowess conquered all France; on these our Henry lineally descends.

War. Oxford, how haps it, in this smooth discourse,
You told not how Henry the Sixth hath lost
All that which Henry the Fifth had gotten? Methinks these peers of France should smile at that.

But for the rest, you tell a pedigree
Of threescore and two years; a silly time
To make prescription for a kingdom's worth.

Off. Why, Warwick, canst thou speak against thy lies?
Whom thou obeyest thirty and six years,
And not betray thy treason with a blush?
War. Can Oxford, that did ever fence the right,
Now buckler falsehood with a pedigree?
Off. For shame! leave Henry, and call Edward king.

Off. Call him my king, by whose injurious doom
My elder brother, the Lord Aubrey Vere,
Was done to death? and more than so, my father,
Even in the downfall of his mellow'd years,
When nature brought him to the door of death?
No, Warwick, no; while life upholds this arm,
This arm upholds the house of Lancaster.

War. And I the house of York.

K. Lev. Queen Margaret, Prince Edward, and Oxford,
Vouchsafe at our request to stand aside,
While I use further conference with Warwick.

They stand aloof.

Q. Lev. Heavens grant that Warwick's words
Bewitch him not?

K. Lev. Now, Warwick, tell me, even upon thy conscience,
Is Edward your true king? for I was loath
To link with him that were not lawful chosen.

War. Thereon I pawn my credit and mine honour.

K. Lev. But is he gracious in the people's eye?

War. The more that Henry was unfortunate.

K. Lev. Then further, all dissembling set aside,
Tell me for truth the measure of his love
Unto our sister Bona.

War. Such it seems
As may beseem a monarch like himself.
Myself have often heard him say and swear
That this his love was an eternal plant,
Whereof the root was fixed in virtue's ground,
The leaves and fruit maintaining with beauty's sun,
Exempt from envy, but not from disdain,
Unless the Lady Bona quit his pain.

K. Lev. Now, sister, let us hear your firm resolve.

Bona. Your grant, or your denial, shall be mine.

To WARWICK. Yet I confess that often ere this day,
When I have heard your king's desert recounted,
Mine ear hath tempted judgment to desire.

K. Lev. Then, Warwick, thus: our sister shall be Edward's;
And now forthwith shall articles be drawn
Touching the jointure that your king must make.
Which with her dowry shall be counterpart'd.
Draw near, Queen Margaret, and be a witness
That Bona shall be wife to the English king.

Prince. To Edward, but not to the English king.

Q. Lev. Deceitful Warwick! it was thy device
By this alliance to make void my suit:
Before thy coming Lewis was Henry's friend.

K. Lev. And still is friend to him and Margaret:
But if your title to the crown be weak,
As may appear by Edward's good success,
Then 'tis but reason that I be releas'd
From giving aid which late I promised.
Yet shall you have all kindness at my hand
That your estate requires and mine can yield.

War. Henry now lives in Scotland at his ease,
Where having nothing, nothing can lose.
And as for you yourself, our quondam queen,
You have a father able to maintain you,
And better 'were you troubled than France.

Q. Mar. Peace! impudent and shameless Warwick, peace,

Proud setter up and puller down of kings;
I will not hence, till, with my talk and tears,
Both full of truth, I make King Lewis behold
Thy sly conveyance and thy lord's false love;
For both of you are birds of self-same feather.

A horn sounded within.

K. Lew. Warwick, this is some post to us or thee.

Enter a Post.

Post. My lord ambassador, these letters are for you,
Sent from your brother, Marquess Montague:
These from our king unto your majesty;
And, madam, these for you; from whom I know not.

They all read their letters.

Oxf. I like it well that our fair queen and mistress Smiles at her news, while Warwick frowns at his.

Prince. Nay, mark how Lewis stamps as he were nettled:
I hope all's for the best.

K. Lew. Warwick, what are thy news? and yours, fair queen?
Q. Mar. Mine, such as fill my heart with unhop'd joys.
War. Mine, full of sorrow and heart's discontent.

K. Lew. What! has your king married the Lady Grey?
And now, to soothe your forgery and his,
Sends me a paper to persuade me patience?
Is this the alliance that he seeks with France?
Dare he presume to scorn us in this manner?

Q. Mar. I told your majesty as much before:
This prostheth Edward's love and Warwick's honesty.

War. King Lewis, I here protest, in sight of heaven,
And by the hope I have of heavenly bliss,
That I am clear from this misdeed of Edward's;
No more my king, for he dishonours me;
But most himself, if he could see his shame.
Did I forget that by the house of York
My father came untimely to his death?
Did I let pass the abuse done to my niece?
Did I impale him with the regal crown?
Did I put Henry from his native right?
And am I gurn'd at the last with shame?
Shame on himself! for my desert is honour:
And to repair my honour lost for him,
I here renounce him and return to Henry.
My noble queen, let former grudges pass,
And henceforth I am thy true servitor.
I will revenge his wrong to Lady Bona,
And replant Henry in his former state.

Q. Mar. Warwick, these words have turn'd my hate to love;
And I forgive and quite forget old faults,
And joy that thou becom'st King Henry's friend.

War. So much his friend, ay, his unfeigned friend,
That if King Lewis vouchsafe to furnish us
With some few bands of chosen soldiers,
I'll undertake to land them on our coast,
And force the tyrant from his seat by war.
'Tis not his new-maid bride shall succour him.
And as for Clarence, as my letters tell me,
He's very likely now to fall from him,
For matching more for wanton lust than hor
Or than for strength and safety of our court.

Bona. Dear brother, how shall Bonabe revolve
But by thy help to this distressed queen?

Q. Mar. Renowned prince, how shall Henry live,
Unless thou rescue him from foul despair?

Bona. My quarrel and this English queen's one.

War. And mine, fair Lady Bona, joins yours.

K. Lew. And mine with hers, and thine Margaret's.

Therefore at last I firmly am resolv'd
You shall have aid.

Q. Mar. Let me give humble thanks for a once.

K. Lew. Then, England's messenger, return post,
And tell false Edward, thy supposed king,
That Lewis of France is sending over masque
To revel it with him and his new bride.
Thou seest what's past; go fear thy king with Bona. Tell him, in hope he'll prove a wiser man,
I'll wear the willow garland for his sake.
Q. Mar. Tell him, my mourning weeds are aside,
And I am ready to put armour on.
War. Tell him from me that he hath done wrong,
And therefore I'll uncrown him ere't be long.
There's thy reward: be gone. Exit L. Llewellyn.

But, Warwick, I
And Oxford, with five thousand men,
Shall cross the seas, and bid false Edward bid
And, as occasion serves, this noble queen
And prince shall follow with a fresh supply.
Yet ere thou go, but answer me one doubt:
What pledge have we of thy firm loyalty?
War. This shall assure my constant loyal heart,
That if our queen and this young prince agree,
I'll join mine eldest daughter and my joy
To him forthwith in holy wedlock bands.

Q. Mar. Yes, I agree, and thank you for your motion.

Son Edward, she is fair and virtuous,
Therefore delay not, give thy hand to Warwick,
And, with thy hand, thy faith irrevocable,
That only Warwick's daughter shall be thine.

Prince. Yes, I accept her, for she well deserv'd it;
And here, to pledge my vow, I give my hand.

He gives his hand to Warwick.

K. Lew. Why stay we now? These soldiery shall be levied,
And thou, Lord Bourbon, our high admiral,
Shall waft them over with our royal fleet.
I long till Edward fall by war's mischance,
For mocking marriage with a dame of France.

Exeunt all but Warwick.
Would more have strengthen'd this our common-
'Gainst foreign storms than any home-bred

Host. Why, knows not Montague that of itself
England is safe, if true within itself?

Mont. Yes; but the safer when 'tis back'd with France.

Host. 'Tis better using France than trusting France.

Let us be back'd with God and with the seas
Which he hath given for fence impregnable,
And with their helps only defend ourselves:
In them and in ourselves our safety lies.

Clar. For this one speech Lord Hastings well deserves

To have the heir of the Lord Hungerford.

K. Edw. Ay, what of that? it was my will

And for this once my will shall stand for law.

Glow. And yet methinks your grace hath not done well,

To give the heir and daughter of Lord Scales
Unto the brother of your loving bride:
She better would have fitted me or Clarence;

But in your bride you bury brotherhood.

Clar. Or else you would not have bestow'd the heir

Of the Lord Bonville on your new wife's son,
And leave your brothers to go speed elsewhere.

K. Edw. Alas! poor Clarence, is it for a wife
That thou art malecontent? I will provide thee.
Clar. In choosing for yourself you show'd your judgment,

Which being shallow, you shall give me leave
To play the broker in mine own behalf;
And to that end I shortly mind to leave you.

K. Edw. Leave me, or tarry, Edward will be

king,

And not be tied unto his brother's will.

Q. Eliz. My lords, before it pleas'd his majesty
To raise my state to title of a queen,
Do me but right, and you must all confess
That I was not ignoble of descent;

And meaner than myself have had like fortune.
But as this title honours me and mine,
So your dislikes, to whom I would be pleasing,
Do cloud my joys with danger and with sorrow.

K. Edw. My love, forbear to fawn upon their frowns:

What danger or what sorrow can befal thee,
So long as Edward is thy constant friend,

And their true sovereign, whom they must obey?
Nay, whom they shall obey, and love thee too,

Unless they seek for hatred at my hands;

Which if they do, yet well I keep thee safe,

And they shall feel the vengeance of my wrath.

Glow. Aside. I hear, yet say not much, but think the more.

Enter a Post.

K. Edw. Now, messenger, what letters or what

news

From France?

Post. My sovereign liege, no letters; and few words,

But such as I, without your special pardon,

Dare not relate.

K. Edw. Go to, we pardon thee; therefore, in brief,
Tell me their words as near as thou canst guess them.

What answer makes King Lewis unto our letters?

Post. At my departure these were his very words:

'Go tell false Edward, thy supposed king, That Lewis of France is sending over masquers To revel with him and his new bride.'

K. Edw. Is Lewis so brave? belike he thinks me Henry. But what said Lady Bona to my marriage?

Post. These were her words, utter'd with mild disdain:

'Tell him, in hope he 'll prove a widower shortly, I 'll wear the willow garland for his sake.'

K. Edw. I blame not her, she could ay little less; She had the wrong. But what said Henry's queen? For I have heard that she was there in place.

Post. 'Tell him,' quoth she, 'my mourning weeds are done, And I am ready to put armour on.'

K. Edw. Belike she minds to play the Amazon. But what said Warwick to these injuries?

Post. He, more incens'd against your majesty Than all the rest, discharg'd me with these words: 'Tell him from me that he hath done me wrong, And therefore I 'll uncrown him ere 't be long.'

K. Edw. Ha! durst the traitor breathe out so proud words?

Well, I will arm me, being thus forewarn'd: They shall have wars, and pay for their presumption.

But say, is Warwick friends with Margaret?

Post. Ay, gracious sovereign; they are so linked in friendship, That young Prince Edward marries Warwick's daughter.

Clar. Belike the elder; Clarence will have the younger. Now, brother king, farewell, and sit you fast, For I will hence to Warwick's other daughter; That, though I want a kingdom, yet in marriage I may not prove inferior to yourself.

You that love me and Warwick follow me. Exit CLARENCE, and SOMERSET follows.

Glow. Aside. Not I: My thoughts aim at a further matter; I Stay not for the love of Edward, but the crown.

K. Edw. Clarence and Somerset both gone to Warwick! Yet am I arm'd against the worst can happen, And haste is needful in this desperate case. PEMBROKE and STAFFORD, you in our behalf, Go levy men, and make prepare for war; They are already, or quickly will be landed: Myself in person will straight follow you. Exeunt PEMBROKE and STAFFORD.

But, ere I go, Hastings and Montague, Resolve my doubt. You twain, of all the rest, Are near to Warwick by blood and by alliance: Tell me if you love Warwick more than me? If it be so, then both depart to him; I rather wish you foes than hollow friends: But if you mind to hold your true obedience, Give me assurance with some friendly vow, That I may never have you in suspect.

Mont. So God help Montague as he proves true!

Hast. And Hastings as he favours Edward's cause!

K. Edw. Now, brother Richard, will you stand by us?

Glow. Ay, in despite of all that shall withstand you.

K. Edw. Why so? then am I sure of victory. Now therefore let us hence; and lose no hour Till we meet Warwick with his foreign power.

Exit.

SCENE II.—A Plain in Warwickshire.

Enter WARWICK and OXFORD with French and other Forces.

War. Trust me, my lord, all hitherto well; The common people by numbers swarm to us.

Enter CLARENCE and SOMERSET.

But see where Somerset and Clarence come. Speak suddenly, my lords, are we all friends? Clar. Fear not that, my lord. War. Then, gentle Clarence, welcome to Warwick: And welcome, Somerset: I hold it cowardly To rest mistrustful where a noble heart Hath pawn'd an open hand in sign of love: Else might I think, that Clarence, Edward's brother, Were but a feigned friend to our proceeding. But welcome, sweet Clarence; my daughter shall be thine. And now what rests, but in night's covertur Thy brother being carelessly encamp'd, His soldiers lurking in the towns about, And but attended by a simple guard, We may surprise and take him at our plea. Our scouts have found the adventure very easy: That as Ulysses and stout Diomed With sleight and manhood stole to Rhesus' tent, And brought from thence the Thracian fal steeds, So we, well cover'd with the night's black mantle, At unawares may beat down Edward's guard, And seize himself; I say not, slaughter him, For I intend but only to surprise him. You that will follow me to this attempt, Applaud the name of Henry with your loud huzzas. They all cry 'Henry!' Why, then, let's on our way in silent sort. For Warwick and his friends, God and St. George! Exit.

SCENE III.—King EDWARD'S Camp near Warwick.

Enter three Watchmen, to guard the King's tent.

First Watch. Come on, my masters, each to take his stand:
The king by this is set down to sleep. Second Watch. What! will he not to bed? First Watch. Why, no; for he hath made solemn vow Never to lie and take his natural rest Till Warwick or himself be quite suppress'd. Second Watch. To-morrow then belike shall the day, If Warwick be so near as men report. Third Watch. But say, I pray, what nobbler is that That with the king here resteth in his tent? First Watch. 'Tis the Lord Hastings, the king's chiefest friend.
Thir'd Watch. O! is it so? But why command's the king
At his chief followers lodge in town's about him,
Dost he himself keep in the cold field?
Seco'd Watch. 'Tis the more honour, because More dangerous.
Thir'd Watch. Ay, but give me worship and Quietness;
Ke it better than a dangerous honour.
Warwick knew in what estate he stands,
To be doubted he would waken him.
First Watch. Unless our halberds did shut up
His passage.
Seco'd Watch. Ay; wherefore else guard he
His royal tent,
To defend his person from night-foes?
Enter Warwick, Clarence, Oxford,
Somerset, and Forces.
War. This is his tent; and see where stand
His guards:
Rage, my masters! honour now or never!
I follow me, and Edward shall be ours.
First Watch. Who goes there?
Seco'd Watch. Stay, or thou diest.
Warwick and the rest cry all, 'Warwick!' Warwick!
And set upon the Guard; who fly, crying, 'Arm! arm!' Warwick
And the rest following them.

K. Edw. What fates impose, that men must Needs abide:
It boots not to resist both wind and tide.

Exeunt King Edward, led out:
And Somerset.

Ors. What now remains, my lords, for us to do
But march to London with our soldiers?
War. Ay, that's the first thing that we have to do;
To free King Henry from imprisonmet,
And see him seated in the regal throne. Exeunt.

Scene IV.—London. A Room in the Palace.
Enter Queen Elizabeth and Rivers.
Riv. Madam, what makes you in this sudden change?
Q. Eliz. Why, brother Rivers, are you yet to learn
What late misfortune is befall'n King Edward?
Riv. What! loss of some pitch'd battle against Warwick?
Q. Eliz. No, but the loss of his own royal person.
Riv. Then is my sovereign slain?
Q. Eliz. Ay, almost slain, for he is taken prisoner;
Either betray'd by falsehood of his guard,
Or by his foe surpris'd at unawares:
And, as I further have to understand,
Is new committed to the Bishop of York,
Fell Warwick's brother, and by that our foe.
Riv. These news I must confess are full of grief;
Yet, gracious madam, bear it as you may:
Warwick may lose, that now hath won the day.
Q. Eliz. Tell then fair hope must hinder life's decay:
And I the rather wean me from despair
For love of Edward's offspring in my womb:
This is it that makes me bridie passion,
And bear with mildness my misfortune's cross;
Ay, ay, for this I draw in many a tear,
And stop the rising of blood-sucking sighs,
Lest with my sighs or tears I blast or drown
King Edward's fruit, true heir to the English crown.

Riv. But, madam, where is Warwick then become?
Q. Eliz. I am informed that he comes towards London,
To set the crown once more on Henry's head.
Guess thou the rest; King Edward's friends must down:
But to prevent the tyrant's violence,
For trust not him that hath once broken faith,
I'll hence forthwith unto the sanctuary,
To save at least the heir of Edward's right:
There shall I rest secure from force and fraud.
Come therefore; let us fly while we may fly:
If Warwick take us we are sure to die. Exeunt.

Scene V.—A Park near Middleham Castle
in Yorkshire.
Enter Gloucester, Hastings, Sir William
Stanley, and Others.

Glou. Now, my Lord Hastings and Sir William
Stanley,
Leave off to wonder why I drew you hither,
Into this chiefest thicket of the park.
Thus stands the case. You know my king, my brother,
Is prisoner to the bishop here, at whose hands
He hath good usage and great liberty,
And often but attended with weak guard,
Comes hunting this way to disjoint himself.
I have advertis’d him by secret means
That if about this hour he make this way,
Under the colour of his usual game,
He shall here find his friends with horse and men
To set him free from his captivity.

Enter King Edward and a Huntsman.

Hunt. This way, my lord, for this way lies the game.

K. Edw. Nay, this way, man: see where the huntsmen stand.

Now, brother of Gloucester, Lord Hastings, and the rest,

Stand you thus close, to steal the bishop’s deer?
Glou. Brother, the time and case requireth haste.

Your horse stands ready at the park corner.

K. Edw. But whither shall we then?
Host. To Lynn, my lord; and ship from thence to Flanders.

Glou. Well guess’d, believe me; for that was my meaning.

K. Edw. Stanley, I will requite thy forwardness.

Glou. But wherefore stay we? ’tis no time to talk.

K. Edw. Huntsman, what say’st thou? wilt thou go along?
Hunt. Better do so than tarry and be hang’d.

Glou. Come then, away; let’s ha’ no more ado.

K. Edw. Bishop, farewell: shield thee from Warwick’s frown,
And pray that I may repossess the crown.

Exeunt.

Scene VI.—London. The Tower.

Enter King Henry, Clarence, Warwick, Somerset, young Richmond, Oxford, Montague, Lieutenant of the Tower, and Attendants.

K. Hen. Master lieutenant, now that God and friends
Have shaken Edward from the regal seat,
And turn’d my captive state to liberty,
My fear to hope, my sorrows unto joys,
At our enlargement what are thy due fees?
Lieu. Subjects may challenge nothing of their sovereigns;
But if an humble prayer may prevail,
I then crave pardon of your majesty.

K. Hen. For what, lieutenant? for well using me?
Nay, be thou sure I’ll well requite thy kindness,
For that it made my imprisonment a pleasure;
Ay, such a pleasure as incaged birds
Conceive, when after many moody thoughts
At last by notes of household harmony
They quite forgot their loss of liberty.
But, Warwick, after God, thou sett’st me free,
And chiefly therefore I thank God and thee;
He was the author, thou the instrument.
Therefore, that I may conquer fortune’s spite
By living low, where fortune cannot hurt me,
And that the people of this blessed land
May not be punish’d with my thwarting state,
Warwick, although my head still wear the crown,
I here resign my government to thee,
For thou art fortunate in all thy deeds.

War. Your grace hath still been fam’d or virtuous,
And now may seem as wise as virtuous,
By spying and avoiding fortune’s malice;
For few men rightly temper with the stars
Yet in this one thing let me blame your grace,
For choosing me when Clarence is in place.

Clar. No, Warwick, thou art worthy of a sway,
To whom the heavens in thy nativity
Adjudg’d an olive branch and laurel crown,
As likely to be blest in peace and war;
And therefore I yield thee my thron’ consent.

War. And I choose Clarence only for protestation.

K. Hen. Warwick and Clarence give me to your hands:
Now join your hands, and with your hands in hearts,
That no dissension binder government;
I make you both protectors of this land,
While I myself will lead a private life,
And in devotion spend my latter days,
To sin’s rebuke and my Creator’s praise.

War. What answers Clarence to his sovereign’s will?

Clar. That he consents, if Warwick yield consent;
For on thy fortune I reposè myself.
War. Why then, though loath, yet must content.
We’ll yoke together, like a double shadow
To Henry’s body, and supply his place;
I mean, in bearing weight of government,
While he enjoys the honour and his ease.
And, Clarence, now then it is more than need
Forthwith that Edward be pronounc’d a traitor,
And all his lands and goods be confiscate.

Clar. What else? and that succession be termin’d.

War. Ay, therein Clarence shall not want part.

K. Hen. But, with the first of all your affairs,
Let me entreat, for I command no more,
That Margaret your queen and my son Edw.
Be sent for, to return from France with speed;
For, till I see them here, by doubtful fear
My joy of liberty is half eclips’d.

Clar. It shall be done, my sovereign, with speed.

K. Hen. My Lord of Somerset, what you’ve that
Of whom you seem to have so tender care?
Som. My liege, it is young Henry, Earl of Richmond.

Lays his hand on his head.
If secret pow’rs
Suggest but truth to my divining thoughts,
This pretty lad will prove our country’s bliss.
His looks are full of peaceful majesty,
His head by nature fram’d to wear a crown,
His hand to wield a sceptre, and himself
Likely in time to bless the great realme.
Might much of him, my lords, for this is he Must help you more than you are hurt by me.
Enter a Post.
War. What news, my friend?
Post. That Edward is escaped from your brother, died, as he hears since, to Burgundy.
War. Unsavoury news! but how made he escape?
Post. He was convey’d by Richard Duke of Gloucester d the Lord Hastings, who attended him secret ambush on the forest side, d from the bishop’s huntsmen rescu’d him;
hunting was his daily exercise.
War. My brother was too careless of his charge.
Post. Let us hence, my sovereign, to provide alive for any sore that may betide.

Exeunt all but SOMERSET, RICHMOND, and OXFORD.

Som. My lord, I like not of this flight of Edward’s;
Doubtless Burgundy will yield him help,
and we shall have more wars before ‘tis long.
Henry’s late presaging prophecy
I glad my heart with hope of this young Richmond,
Doth my heart misgivon me, in these conflicts
That may befall him to his harm and ours:
Therefore, Lord Oxford, to prevent the worst,
With we will send him hence to Britanny.
I storm be past of civil enmity.
Def. Ay, for if Edward repose the crown,
Like that Richmond with the rest shall down.
Som. It shall be so; he shall to Britanny. I,
Me, therefore, let’s about it speedily. Exeunt.

Scene VII.—Before York.

Enter King EDWARD, GLOUCESTER, HASTINGS, and Forces.

K. Edw. Now, brother Richard, Lord Hastings, and the rest,
Thus far fortune maketh us amends,
I say that once more I shall interchange
Wan’d state for Henry’s regal crown.
All have we pass’d, and now repass’d the seas;
I brought desired help from Burgundy:
That then remains, we being thus arriv’d
Am Ravensburgh haven before the gates of York.
That we enter, as into our dukedom?
Glow. The gates made fast! Brother, I like not this;
No many men that stumble at the threshold
Well foretold that danger lurks within.
K. Edw. Tush, man! Abodes not must not now
Affright us:
Fair or foul means we must enter in,
Or hitter will our friends repair to us.
Hast. My liege, I’ll knock once more to summon them.

Enter, on the walls, the Mayor of York, and his Brethren.

May. My lords, we were forewarned of your coming,
Shut the gates for safety of ourselves;
now we owe allegiance unto Henry.
K. Edw. But, Master mayor, if Henry be your king,
At Edward at the least is Duke of York.

May. True, my good lord: I know you for a less.
K. Edw. Why, and I challenge nothing but
My dukedom,
As being well content with that alone.
Glow. Aside. But when the fox hath once got
In his nose,
He’ll soon find means to make the body follow.
Hast. Why, Master mayor, why stand you in a doubt?
Open the gates; we are King Henry’s friends.
May. Ay, say you so! the gates shall then be open’d.
Exeunt from above.
Glow. A wise stout captain, and soon persuaded!
Hast. The good old man would fain that all were well,
So twere not long of him; but being enter’d,
I doubt not, I, but we shall soon persuade
Both him and all his brothers unto reason.

Enter the Mayor and two Aldermen.

K. Edw. So, Master mayor: these gates must not be shut
But in the night or in the time of war.
What! fear not, man, but yield me up the keys;
Takes his keys.

For Edward will defend the town and thee,
And all those friends that deign to follow me.

March. Enter MONTGOMERY and Forces.

Glow. Brother, this is Sir John Montgomery,
Our trusty friend, unless I be deceiv’d.
K. Edw. Welcome, Sir John! but why come you in arms?
Mont. Tohelp King Edward in his time of storm,
As every loyal subject ought to do.
K. Edw. Thanks, good Montgomery; but we now forget
Our title to the crown, and only claim
Our dukedom till God please to send the rest.
Mont. Then fare you well, for I will hence again:
I came to serve a king and not a duke.
Drummer, strike up, and let us march away.

A march begun.

K. Edw. Nay, stay, Sir John, awhile; and we’ll debate
By what safe means the crown may be recover’d.
Mont. What talk you of debating? in few words,
If you not here proclaim yourself our king,
I’ll leave you to your fortune, and be gone
To keep them back that come to succour you.
Why shall we fight, if you pretend no title?
Glow. Why, brother, wherefore stand you on nice points?
K. Edw. When we grow stronger, then we’ll make our claim.
Till then, ’tis wisdom to conceal our meaning.
Host. Away with scurrilous wit! now arms must rule.
Glow. And fearless minds climb stearest unto crowns.
Brother, we will proclaim you out of hand;
The blunt thereof will bring you many friends.
K. Edw. Then be it as you will; for ’tis my right,
And Henry but usurps the diadem.
Mont. Ay, now my sovereign speaketh like himself;
And now will I be Edward’s champion.
Hast. Sound, trumpet! Edward shall be here proclaim'd.
Come, fellow-soldier, make thon proclamation.

Gives him a paper. Flourish.

Sold. Edward the Fourth, by the grace of God,
King of England and France, and Lord of Ireland, etc.

Mont. And whose'er gain-ays King Edward's right,
By this I challenge him to single fight.

Throws down his gauntlet.

All. Long live Edward the Fourth!
K. Edw. Thanks, brave Montgomery, and thanks unto you all:
If fortune serve me, I'll requite this kindness.
Now, for this night, let 's harbour here in York,
And when the morning sun shall raise his car
Above the border of this horizon,
We'll forward towards Warwick and his mates;
For well I wot that Henry is no soldier.
Ah! froward Clarence, how evil it beseems thee
To flatter Henry, and forsake thy brother.
Yet, as we may, we'll meet both thee and Warwick.

Come on, brave soldiers: doubt not of the day;
And, that once gotten, doubt not of large pay.

Exeunt.

SCENE VIII.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Flourish. Enter King HENRY, WARWICK, CLA-RENCE, MONTAGUE, EXETER, and OXFORD.

War. What counsel, lords? Edward from Belgia,
With hasty Germans and blunt Hollanders,
Hath pass'd in safety through the narrow seas,
And with histroops doth march amain to London;
And many giddy people flock to him.

K. Hen. Let's levy men, and beat him back again.

Clar. A little fire is quickly trodden out,
Which, being suffer'd, rivers cannot quench.

War. In Warwick-shire I have true-hearted
friends,
Not mutinous in peace, yet bold in war; 10
Those will I musteur up: and thou, son Clarence,
Shalt stir up in Suffolk, Norfolk, and in Kent,
The knights and gentlemen to come with thee:
Thon, brother Montague, in Buckingham,
Northampton, and in Leicestershire, shalt find
Men well inclin'd to hear what thou command'st:
And thou, brave Oxford, wondrous well belov'd
In Oxfordshire, shalt master up thy friends.

My sovereign, with the loving citizens,
Like to his island girl in with the ocean,
Or modest Dian circled with her nymphs,
Shall rest in London till we come to him.
Fair lords, take leave, and stand not to reply.
Farewell, my sovereign.

K. Hen. Farewell, my Hector, and my Troy's true hope.

Clar. In sign of truth, I kiss your highness' hand.

K. Hen. Well-minded Clarence, be thou fortu-unate!

Mont. Comfort, my lord; and so I take my leave.

Oxf. Kissing King Henry's hand. And thus
I seal my truth, and bid adieu.

K. Hen. Sweet Oxford, and my loving Matague,
And all at once, once more a happy farewell
War. Farewell, sweet lords; let's meet Coventry.

Exeunt all but King Henry and Exe.

K. Hen. Here at the palace will I rest awhile,
Cousin of Exeter, what thinks your lordship?
Methinks the power that Edward hath in file
Should not be able to encounter mine.

Exe. The doubt is that he will seduce the re
K. Hen. That's not my fear; my meed he 11

Shout within, 'A Lancaster! a Lancaster! What's this?

Enter King Edward, Gloucester, and Soldiers.

K. Edw. Seize on the shame-fac'd Hen bear him hence,
And once again proclaim us King of England
You are the fount that makes small brooks to flie:
Now stop thy spring; my sea shall suck them flat;
And swell so much the higher by their ebb.
Hence with him to the Tower! let him not spe.

Exeunt some with King Hen.

And, lords, towards Coventry we do go.
Where peremptory Warwick now remains:
The sun shines hot; and, if we use delay,
Cold biting winter mars our hop'd for hay.

Glow. Away betimes, before his forces join.
And take the great-grown traitor unawares;
Brave warriors, march amain towards Covent.

Exe.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Coventry.

Enter, upon the walls, Warwick, the Mayor,
Coventry, two Messengers, and Others.

War. Where is the post that came from val Oxford?

How far hence is thy lord, mine honest felo
First Mess. By this at Dunsmore, march'd hitherward.

War. How far off is our brother Montague
Where is the post that came from Montague
Second Mrs. By this at Dainty, with a puiss.
troop.

Enter Sir John Somerville.

War. Say, Somerville, what says my loving so
And, by thy guess, how nigh is Clarence now Som. At Southam I did leave him with arm forces,
And do expect him here some two hours hence.

Drum heard.
THIRD PART OF KING HENRY VI.

War. Then Clarence is at hand, I hear his drum. Som. It is not his, my lord; here Southam lies: a drum your honour hears marches from Warwick.
War. Who should that be? belike, unlook'd-for friends.
Som. They are at hand, and you shall quickly know.

vtech. Flourish. Enter King Edward, Gloucester, and Forces.

K. Edw. Go, trumpet, to the walls, and sound a parle.

Glou. See how the surly Warwick mans the wall.
War. O unbid spite! is sportful Edward come? were slept our scouts, or how are they seduc'd, at we could hear no news of his repair? 29
K. Edw. Now, Warwick, wilt thou ope the city gates?
War. Nay, rather, wilt thou draw thy forces hence, who set thee up and pluck'd thee down, Warwick patron, and be penitent; thou shalt still remain the Duke of York.
Glou. I thought, at least, he would have said the king; did he make the jest against his will? 30
War. Is not a dukedom, sir, a goodly gift? Glou. Ay, by my faith, for a poor earl to give: I do thee service for so good a gift.
War. 'Twas I that gave the kingdom to thy brother.

K. Edw. Why then 'tis mine, if but by Warwick's gift.
War. Thou art no Atlas for so great a weight: d'you know, Warwick takes his gift again; d'he is my king, Warwick is my subject.
K. Edw. But Warwick's king is Edward's prisoner; d'he gallant Warwick, do but answer this: 40
Glou. Alias! that Warwick had no more forecast, it, whereas he thought to steal the single ten, te king was slily finger'd from the deck.
War. I had rather chop this hand off at a blow, and with the other fling it at thy face, 51
K. Edw. Sain how thou canst, have wind and tide thy friend, his hand, fast wound about thy coal-black hair, all, whilsts thy head is warm and new cut off, rite in the dust this sentence with thy blood:
Glou. 'Tis even so: yet you are Warwick still.

K. Edw. Sain how thou canst, have wind and tide thy friend, his hand, fast wound about thy coal-black hair, all, whilsts thy head is warm and new cut off, rite in the dust this sentence with thy blood:
K. Edw. Sain how thou canst, have wind and tide thy friend, his hand, fast wound about thy coal-black hair, all, whilsts thy head is warm and new cut off, rite in the dust this sentence with thy blood: Wind-changing Warwick now can change no more.

Enter Oxford, with drum and colours.
War. O cheerful colours! see where Oxford comes!

Oxford and his Forces enter the city.
Glou. The gates are open, let us enter too. 60
K. Edw. So other foes may set upon our backs. Stand we in good array; for they, no doubt, will issue out again and bid us battle: If not, the city being but of small defence, We'll quickly rouse the traitors in the same.
War. O! welcome, Oxford, for we want thy help.

Enter Montague, with drum and colours.
Mont. Montague, Montague, for Lancaster! He and his Forces enter the city.
Glou. Thou and thy brother both shall buy this treason Even with the dearest blood your bodies bear.
K. Edw. The harder match'd, the greater victory:
My mind presageth happy gain and conquest.

Enter Somerset, with drum and colours.
Som. Somerset, Somerset, for Lancaster!
He and his Forces enter the cit.
Glou. Two of thy name, both Dukes of Somerset, Have sold their lives unto the house of York; And thou shalt be the third, if this sword hold.

Enter Clarence, with drum and colours.
War. And lo! where George of Carnece sweeps along, Of force enough to bid his brother battle; With whom an upright zeal to right prevails More than the nature of a brother's love.

GLOUCESTER and CLARENCE whisper.
Come, Clarence, come; thou wilt, if Warwick call.
Clav. Father of Warwick, know you what this means? Taking the red rose out of his hat.
Look here, I throw my infancy at thee: I will not ruin my father's house, Who gave his blood to line the stones together, And set up Lancaster. Why, trowst thou, Warwick,
That Clarence is so harsh, so blunt, unnatural, To bend the fatal instruments of war Against his brother and his lawful king? Perhaps thou wilt object my holy oath: To keep that oath were more impolicy Than Jephthah's, when he sacrifice'd his daughter. I am so sorry for my trespass made That, to deserve well at my brother's hands, I here proclaim myself thy mortal foe; With resolution, where-oe'er I meet thee, As I will meet thee if thou stir abroad, To plague thee for thy foul mil-leading me. And so, proud-hearted Warwick, I defy thee, And to my brother turn my blushing cheeks. Pardon me, Edward, I will make amends; And, Richard, do not frown upon my faults, For I will henceforth be no more unconstantly.
K. Edw. Now welcome more, and ten times more belov'd,
Than if thou never hast deserv'd our hate.
Glou. Welcome, good Clarence; this is brother-like.
War. O passing traitor, perjur'd and unjust! K. Edw. What, Warwick, wilt thou leave the town, and fight?
Or shall we beat the stones about thine ears?
War. Alas! I am not coept'd here for defence: 10
I will away towards Barnet presently, and bid thee battle, Edward, if thou dar'st.
K. Edw. Yes, Warwick, Edward dares, and leads the way.

Lords, to the field! Saint George and victory! 15

March. Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A Field of Battle near Barnet.

Alarums, and excursions. Enter King Edward, bringing in Warwick wounded.

K. Edw. So lie thou there: die thou, and die our fear;
For Warwick was a bug that fear'd us all.
Now, Montague, sit fast; I seek for thee,
That Warwick's bones may keep thine company.

Exit.

War. Ah! who is nigh? come to me, friend or foe,
And tell me who is victor, York or Warwick?
Why ask I that? my mangled body shows,
My blood, my want of strength, my sick heart shows
That I must yield my body to the earth,
And, by my fall, the conquest to my foe.
Thus yields the cedar to the axe's edge,
Whose arms gave shelter to the princely eagle,
Under whose shade the ramping lion slept,
Whose top branch overpeer'd Jove's spreading tree
And kept low shrubs from winter's powerful wind.
These eyes, that now are dimm'd with death's black veil,
Have been as piercing as the mid-day sun
To search the secret treasons of the world:
The wrinkles in my brows, now fill'd with blood,
Were liken'd oft to kingly sepultures;
For who liv'd king but I could dig his grave?
And who durst smile when Warwick bent his brow?
Lo! now my glory smear'd in dust and blood;
My parks, my walks, my manors that I had,
Even now forsoke me; and of all my lands
Is nothing left me but my body's length.
Why, what is pomp, rule, reign, but earth and dust?
And, live we how we can, yet die we must.

Enter Oxford and Somerset.

Som. Ah! Warwick, Warwick, wert thou as we are,
We might recover all our loss again.
The queen from France hath brought a puissant power;
Even now we heard the news. Ah! could'st thou fly.
War. Why, then I would not fly. Ah! Montague,
If thou be there, sweet brother, take my hand,
And with thy lips keep in my soul awhile,
Thou lov'st me not; for, brother, if thou didst,
Thy tears would wash this cold congealed blood
That gushes my lips and will not let me speak.
Come quickly, Montague, or I am dead.

Som. Ah! Warwick, Montague hath breath'd his last;
And to the latest gasp cried out for Warwick,
And said 'Commend me to my valiant brother,'
And more he would have said; and more he spoke,
Which sounded like a clamour in a vault,
That mought not be distinguished; but at
I well might hear, deliver'd with a groan,
'O! farewell, Warwick.'
War. Sweet rest his soul! Fly, lords, save yourselves;
For Warwick bids you all farewell, to meet in heaven.

Oauf. Away, away, to meet the queen's great power!

Exeunt, bearing off Warwick.

SCENE III.—Another Part of the Field.

Flourish. Enter King Edward in triumph; Clarence, Gloucester, and the rest.

K. Edw. Thus far our fortune keeps an upward course,
And we are grac'd with wreaths of victory.
But, in the midst of this bright-shining day
I spy a black, suspicious, threatening cloud
That will encounter with our glorious sun,
Ere he attain his easeful western bed:
I mean, my lords, those powers that the que.
Hath rais'd in Gallia, have arriv'd our coast.
And, as we hear, march on to fight with us.
Clar. A little gale will soon disperse that cloud
And blow it to the source from whence it came,
Thy very beams will dry those vapours up,
For every cloud engenders not a storm.

Flourish. Glot. The queen is vait'd thirty thousand strong,
And Somerset, with Oxford, fled to her:
If she have time to breathe, be well assur'd
Her faction will be full as strong as ours.

K. Edw. We are advertised by our loving friends
That they do hold their course toward Tewksbury,
We, having now the best at Barnet field,
Will thither straight, for willingness rides with.
And, as we march, our strength will be augmented in every county as we go along.

Strike up the drum! cry 'Courage!' and away.

Flourish. Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Plains near Tewksbury.

March. Enter Queen MARGARET, Princeward, Somerset, Oxford, and Soldiers.

Q. Mar. Great lords, wise men ne'er sit still their loss,
But cheerly seek how to redress their harms.
What though the mast be now blown overboard?
The cable broke, the holding-anchor lost,
And half our sailors swallowed'd in the flood;
Yet lives our pilot still: 'tis meet that he Should leave the helm and like a fearful lad
With tearful eyes add water to the sea,
And give more strength to that which hath so much
Whiles in his moan the ship splits on the rock,
Which industry and courage might have said! Ah! what a shame, ah! what a fault were't Say Warwick was our anchor; what of that?
And Montague our topmast: what of him?
Our slaughter'd friends the tackles; what of them?
Why, is not Oxford here another anchor?
And Somerset another godly mast?
The friends of France our shrouds and tackling
And, though unskilful, why not Ned and I
For once allow'd the skilful pilot's charge?
Therefore, no more but this: Henry, your sovereign,
Is prisoner to the foe; his state usurp’d,
His realm a slaughter-house, his subjects slain,
His statutes cancel’d, and his treasure spent;
And yonder is the wolf that makes this spoil.
So you fight in justice: then, in God’s name, lords,
Be valiant, and give signal to the fight.

Aurum. Retreat. Excursions. Extant.

SCENE V.—Another Part of the Field.

Flourish. Enter King Edward, Clarence, Gloucester, and Forces; with Queen Margaret, Oxford, and Somerset, Prisoners.

K. Edw. Now here a period of tumultuous broils.

Away with Oxford to Hames castle straight:
For Somerset, off with his guilty head.

Go, bear them hence; I will not hear them speak.

Oxford, guard them, and I’ll not trouble thee with words.

Som. Nor I; but stoop with patience to my fortune.

Exeunt Oxford and Somerset, guarded.

Q. Mar. So part we sadly in this troublous world,
To meet with joy in sweet Jerusalem.

K. Edw. Is proclamation made, that who finds Edward Shall have a high reward, and he life?

Glo. It is: and lo! where youthful Edward comes.

Enter Soldiers, with Prince Edward.

K. Edw. Bring forth the gallant: let us hear him speak.

What! can so young a thorn begin to prick?
Edward, what satisfaction canst thou make
For bearing arms, for stirring up my subjects,
And all the trouble thou hast turn’d me to?

Prince. Speak like a subject, proud ambitious York.

Suppose that I am now my father’s mouth:
Resign thy chair, and where I stand kneel thou,
Whilst I propose the self-same words to thee, Which, traitor, thou wouldst have me answer to.

Q. Mar. Ah! that thy father had been so resolv’d.

Glo. That you might still have worn the petticoat,

And ne’er have stol’n the breech from Lancaster.

Prince. Let Esop fable in a winter’s night;
His currish riddles sort not with this place.

Glo. By heaven, brat, I’ll plague ye for that word.

Q. Mar. Ay, thou wast born to be a plague to men.

Glo. For God’s sake, take away this captive scold.

Prince. Nay, take away this scolding crook-backed rather.

K. Edw. Peace, willful boy, or I will charm your tongue.

Clive. Untutor’d lad, thou art too malapert.

Prince. I know my duty; you are all unfruitful, Lascivious Edward, and thou perjur’d George,
And thou misshapen Dick, I tell ye all
I am your better, traitors as ye are;
And thou usurp’m my father’s right and mine.
K. Edw. Take that, thou likeness of this railer here.
Glo. Sprawlst thou? take that, to end thy agony.
Clar. And there's for twisting me with perjury: Stabs him.
Q. Mar. O! I kill me too.
Glo. Marry, and shall. Offers to kill her.
K. Edw. Hold, Richard, hold! for we have done too much. Glo. Why should she live, to fill the world with words?
Glo. Clarence, excuse me to the king my brother;
I'll hence to London on a serious matter:
Ere ye come there, be sure to hear some news.
Clar. What? what?
Glo. The Tower! the Tower! Exit. 69
Q. Mar. O Ned! sweet Ned! speak to thy mother, boy!
Canst thou not speak? O traitors! murderers!
They that stabb'd Caesar shed no blood at all,
Did not offend, nor were not worthy blane,
If this foul deed were by to equal it:
He was a man; this, in respect, a child;
And men ne'er spend their fury on a child.
What's worse than murderer, that I may name it?
No, no; my heart will burst an if I speak;
And I will speak, that so my heart may burst.
Butchers and villains! bloody cannibals! 70
How sweet a plant have you untimely crop'd?
You have no children, butchers! if you had,
The thought of them would have stirr'd up remorse:
But if you ever chance to have a child,
Look in his youth to have him so cut off:
As, deathsmen, you have rid this sweet young prince!
K. Edw. Away with her! go, bear her hence perforce.
Q. Mar. Nay, never bear me hence, dispatch me here:
Here sheathe thy sword, I'll pardon thee my death.
What! wilt thou not? then, Clarence, do it thou.
Clar. By heaven, I will not do thee so much ease.
Q. Mar. Good Clarence, do; sweet Clarence, do thou do it.
Clar. Didst thou not hear me swear I would not do it?
Q. Mar. Ay, but thou usest to forswear thyself:
'Twas sin before, but now 'tis charity.
What! wilt thou not? Where is that devil's butcher?
Hard-favoured Richard? Richard, where art thou?
Thou art not here: murder is thy aims-deed;
Petitioners for blood thou ne'er putt'st back. 89
Q. Mar. So come to you and yours, as to this prince!
Exit.
K. Edw. Where's Richard gone?
Clar. To London, all in post; and, as I guess,
To make a bloody supper in the Tower.
K. Edw. He's sudden if a thing comes in his head.
Now march we hence: discharge the common
With pay and thanks, and let's away to LoussAnd see our gentle queen how well she far. By this, I hope, she hath a son for me. Exit.

SCENE VI.—London. The Tower.

King Henry is discovered sitting with a in his hand, the Lieutenant attending.

GLOUCESTER.
Glo. Good day, my lord. What! at your so hard?
K. Hen. Ay, my good lord: my lord, I shall say rather;
'Tis sin to slatter; 'good' was little better.'Good Gloucester' and 'good devil' were a
And both preposterous; therefore, not 'lord.'
Glo. Sirrah, leave us to ourselves: we coner.
Exit Lieutenant.
K. Hen. So flies the reckless shepherd of the wolf;
So first the harmless sheep doth yield his flock,
And next his throat unto the butcher's knife.
What scene of death hath Roscius now to
Glo. Suspicion always haunts the guilty man.
The thief doth fear each bush an officer.
K. Hen. The bird that hath been limed bush,
With trembling wings misdoubteth every bough.
And I, the hapless male to one sweet bird,
Have now the fatal object in my eye
Where my poor young was lim'd, was caught
And kill'd.
Glo. Why, what a peevish fool was the Crete,
That taught his son the office of a fowl!
And yet, for all his wings, the fool was drow
Thy father, Minos, that denied our course;
The sun that sear'd the wings of my sweet
Thy brother Edward, and thyself the sea.
Whose envious gulf did swallow up his life.
Ah! kill me with thy weapon, not with words.
My breast can better brook thy dagger's point
Than can my ears that tragic history.
But wherefore dost thou come? is't for my
Glo. Think'st thou I am an executioner?
K. Hen. A persecutor, I am sure, thou art.
If murdering innocents be executing,
Why, then thou art an executioner.
Glo. Thy son I kill'd for his presumption.
K. Hen. Hadst thou been kill'd when thou didst presume,
Thou hadst not liv'd to kill a son of mine.
And thus I prophesy: that many a thousand
Which now mistrust no parcel of my fear,
And many an old man's sigh, and many a wide
And many an orphan's water-standing eye,
Men for their sons', wives for their husband
And orphans for their parents' timeless dear.
Shall rue the hour that ever thou wast born
The owl shriek'd at thy birth, an evil sign;
The night-crow cried, aboding luckless time
Dogs howl'd, and hideous tempest shook the trees;
The raven rook'd her on the chimney's top.
And chattering pies in dismal discord sung
Thy mother felt more than a mother's pain.
And yet brought forth less than a mother's lo
What valiant foemen, like to autumn's corn,
Have we mow'd down in tops of all their pride!
Three Dukes of Somerset, threefold renown'd
For hardy and undoubted champions;
Two Cliffsords, as the father and the son;
And two Northumberlands: two braver men
Ne'er spurr'd their courters at the trumpet's sound;
With them, the two brave bears, Warwick and Montague;
That in their chains fetter'd the kingly lion,
And made the forest tremble when they roar'd.
Thus have we swept suspicion from our seat,
And made our footstool of security.
Come hither, Bess, and let me kiss my boy.
Young Ned, for thee, thine uncles and myself
Have in our armours watch'd the winter's night,
Went all a-foot in summer's scalding heat,
That thou might'st repossess the crown in peace;
And of our labours thou shalt reap the gain.
Glou. Aside. I'll blast his harvest, if your head were laid;
For yet I am not look'd on in the world.
This shoulder was ordain'd so thick to heave;
And heave it shall some weight, or break my back.
Work thou the way, and thou shalt execute.
K. Edw. Clarence and Gloucester, love my lovely queen;
And kiss your princely nephew, brothers both.
Clar. The duty that I owe unto your majesty
I seal upon the lips of this sweet babe.
Q. Eliz. Thanks, noble Clarence; worthy brother, thanks.
Glou. And, that I love the tree from whence thou sprang'st,
Witness the loving kiss I give the fruit.
Aside. To say the truth, so Judas kiss'd his master,
And cried 'all hail!' when as he meant all harm.
K. Edw. Now am I seated as my soul delights,
Having my country's peace and brothers' loves.
Clar. What will your grace have done with Margaret?
Reignier, her father, to the King of France
Hath pawn'd the Sicils and Jerusalem,
And hither have they sent it for her ransom.
K. Edw. Away with her, and waft her hence to France.
And now what rests but that we spend the time
With stately triumphs, mirthful comic shows,
Such as befits the pleasure of the court?
Sound drums and trumpets! farewell sour annoy!
For here, I hope, begins our lasting joy.
Exeunt.

Scene.—England.

Act I.

Scene I.—London. A Street.

Enter Gloucester.

Glo. Now is the winter of our discontent
Made glorious summer by this sun of York;
And all the clouds that lour’d upon our house
In the deep bosom of the ocean buried.
Now our brows bound with victorious wreaths;
Our bruised arms hung up for monuments;
Our stern alarums chang’d to merry meetings;
Our dreadful marches to delightful measures.
Grim-visag’d war hath smooth’d his wrinkled front;
And now, instead of mounting barbed steeds
To fright the souls of fearful adversaries,
He capers nimbly in a lady’s chamber
To the lascivious pleasing of a lute.
But I, that am not shap’d for sportive tricks,
Nor made to court an amorous looking-glass;
I, that am rudely stamp’d, and want love’s majesty
To strut before a wanton ambling nymph;
I, that am curtail’d of this fair proportion,
KING RICHARD III.

I. KING. I am an old man; what mean'st thou, sailor? I beseech thee, follow me.

SAILOR. Upon what cause?

KING. Because my name is George.

GLOUCESTER. Alack! my lord, that fault is none of yours.

KING. Beseech him, by his majesty, that by his disinheritance,

GLOUCESTER. Your name George begins with G,

KING. Tell me, what's the matter, Clarence? I must know.

GLOUCESTER. Yea, Richard, when I know; for I protest

KING. I do not; but, as I can learn,

GLOUCESTER. What, this it is, when men are ruled by women:

KING. Not the king that sends you to the Tower;

GLOUCESTER. Lady Grey his wife, Clarence, 'tis she

KING. Tempts him to this extremity,

GLOUCESTER. It not she and that good man of worship,

KING. Woodville, her brother, that

GLOUCESTER. Made me send Lord Hastings to the Tower,

KING. Whence this present day he is deliver'd?

GLOUCESTER. Are not safe, Clarence; we are not safe.

KING. By heaven, I think there is no man secure

GLOUCESTER. The queen's kindred and night-walking heralds

KING. Strudge betwixt the king and Mistress Shore.

GLOUCESTER. Do ye not what an humble subject

KING. Hastings was to her for his delivery?

GLOUCESTER. Humly complaining to her deity,

KING. 'Tis my lord chamberlain's liberty.

GLOUCESTER. Tell you what; I think it is our way,

KING. We will keep in favour with the king,

GLOUCESTER. Be her men and wear her livery;

KING. Jealous o'er worn widow and herself,

GLOUCESTER. Her brother and all the gentlewomen,

KING. Mighty gossips in our monarchy.

GLOUCESTER. I beseech your graces both to pardon me;

KING. Majesty hath straitly given in charge

GLOUCESTER. At no man shall have private conference,

KING. What degree soever, with his brother.

GLOUCESTER. Even so; an't please your worship,

KING. Brakenbury,

GLOUCESTER. May partake of any thing we say;

KING. Speak no treason, man: we say the king

GLOUCESTER. Wise and virtuous, and his noble queen

KING. Shall struck in years, fair, and not jealous;

GLOUCESTER. Say that Shore's wife hath a pretty foot,

KING. Cherry lip, a bonny eye, a passing pleasing tongue;

GLOUCESTER. The queen's kindred are mad gentlefolks.

KING. I say you, sir? can you deny all this?

GLOUCESTER. With this, my lord, myself have nought
to do.

GLOUCESTER. Naught to do with Mistress Shore! I tell thee, fellow,

KING. That doth naught with her, excepting one,

GLOUCESTER. He doth he do it secretly, alone.
The which will I; not all so much for love
As for another secret close intent,
By marrying her which I must reach unto.
But yet I run before my horse to market: 199
Clarence still breathes; Edward still lives and reigns:
When they are gone, then must I count my gains.

Exit.

SCENE II.—The Same. Another Street.

Enter the corpse of King Henry the Sixth, borne in an open coffin. Gentlemen bearing halberds, to guard it; and Lady Anne as mourner.

Anne. Set down, set down your honourable load,
If honour may be shrouded in a hearse,
Whilst I awhile obsequiously lament
The untimely fall of virtuous Lancaster.
Poor key-cold figure of a holy king!
Pale ashes of the house of Lancaster!
Thou bloodless remnant of that royal blood!
Be it lawful that I invoke thy ghost,
To hear the lamentations of poor Anne,
Wife to thy Edward, to thy slaughter'd son,
Stabb'd by the same selfsame hand that made these wounds!
Lo! In these windows that let forth thy life,
I pour the helpless balm of my poor eyes.
O! cursed be the hand that made these holes;
Cursed the heart that had the heart to do it!
Cursed the blood that let this blood from hence!
More direful hap betide that hated wretch,
That makes us wretched by the death of thee,
Than I can wish to adders, spiders, toads,
Or any creeping venom'd thing that lives!
20
If ever he have child, abortive be it,
Prodigious, and untimely brought to light,
Whose ugly and unnatural aspect
May fright the hopeful mother at the view;
And that be ne'er to his unhappiness!
If ever he have wife, let her be made
More miserable by the death of him
Than I am made by my young lord and thee!
Come, now towards Chertsey with your holy load,
Taken from Paul's to be interred there;
And still, as you are weary of this weight,
Rest you, whilst I lament King Henry's corse.

The Bearers take up the corpse and advance.

Enter Gloucester.

Glou. Stay, you that bear the corse, and set it down.

Anne. What black magician conjures up this fiend,
To stop devoted charitable deeds?

Glou. Villains! set down the corse; or, by Saint Paul,
I'll make a corse of him that disobeys.

First Gent. My lord, stand back, and let the coffin pass.

Glou. Unmann'd dog! stand thou when I command:
Advance thy halberd higher than my breast,
Or, by Saint Paul, I'll strike thee to my foot,
And spurn upon thee, beggar, for thy boldness.

The Bearers set down the coffin.

Anne. What! do you tremble? are you all afraid?
Alas! I blame you not; for you are mortal,
And mortal eyes cannot endure the devil.

Avant! thou dreadful minister of hell;
Thou hast but power over his mortal body,
His soul thou canst not have: therefore, be gone.

Glou. Sweet saint, for charity, be not so curst.

Anne. Foul devil, for God's sake, hence, and trouble us not;
For thou hast made the happy earth thy hell.
Fill'd it with cursing cries and deep exclaim.
If thou delight to view thine heinous deeds,
Behold this pattern of thy butcheries.
O! gentlemen; see, see! dead Henry's wound
Open their congeal'd mouths and bleed afresh—
Blush, blush, thou lump of foul deformity.
For 'tis thy presence that exhales this blood
From cold and empty veins, where no blood dwells:
Thy deed, inhuman and unnatural,
Provokes this deluge most unnatural.
O God! which this blood mad'st, revenge death;
O earth! which this blood drink'st, revenge death;
Either heaven with lightning strike the murderer,
Or earth, gape open wide, and cat him quick.
As thou dost swallow up this good king's blood,
Which his hell-governd arm hath butcheted
Glou. Lady, you know no rules of charity.
Which renders good for bad, blessings for curse:
Anne. Villain, thou know'st no law of God or man:
No beast so fierce but knows some touch of pity,
Glou. But I know none, and therefore am no beast.

Anne. O! wonderful, when devils tell the truth.
Glou. More wonderful when angels are so amiss.
Vouchsafe, divine perfection of a woman,
Of these supposed evils, to give me leave,
By circumstance, but to acquit myself.
Anne. Vouchsafe, diffus'd infection of a man,
For these known evils, but to give me leave,
By circumstance, to curse thy cursed self.
Glou. Fairer than tongue can name thee,
Some patient leisure to excuse myself.
Anne. Fouler than heart can think thee, thou canst make
No excuse current, but to hang thyself.

Glou. By such despair I should accuse myself.
Anne. And by despairing shouldst thou still excuse'd.

For doing worthy vengeance on thyself,
Which didst unworthy slaughter upon others
Glou. Say that I slew them not.

Anne. Then say they were not slain.
But dead they are, and, devilish slave, by the Glou. I did not kill your husband.

Anne. Why, then he is all
Glou. Nay, he is dead; and slain by Edward's hand.

Anne. In thy foul throat thou liest: Que Margaret saw Thy murderous falchion smoking in his blood
The which thou once didst bend against her breast
But that thy brothers beat aside the point.

Glou. I was provoked by her bland rous tongue
Which laid their guilt upon my guiltless shoulder.
Anne. Thou wast provoked by thy bloody min
That never dreamt on aught but butcheries.
Didst thou not kill this king?
Anne. Would they were basilisks, to strike thee dead!
Glon. I would they were, that I might die at once;
For now they kill me with a living death.
These eyes of thine from mine have drawn salt tears,
Sham'd their aspects with store of childish drops;
These eyes, which never shed remorseful tear;
No, when my father York and Edward wept
To hear the piteous moan that Rutland made
When black- fraudulent Clifford shook his sword at him;
Nor when thy war-like father, like a child,
Told the sad story of my father's death,
And twenty times made pause to sob and weep,
That all the standers-by had wet their cheeks,
Like trees bedash'd with rain: in that sad time
My manly eyes did scorn an humble tear;
And what these sorrows could not thence exhale,
Thy beauty hath, and made them blind with weeping.
I never said to friend nor enemy;
My proud heart sue's, and prompts my tongue to speak.
She boon's scornfully at him.
Teach not thy lip such scorn, for it was made
For kissing, lady, not for such contempt.
If thy revengeful heart cannot forgive,
Lo! here I lend thee this sharp-pointed sword;
Which if thou please to hide in this true breast,
And let the soul forth that adores thee,
I lay it naked to the deadly stroke,
And humbly beg the death upon my knee.
He lays his breast open: she offers at it with his sword.
Nay, do not pause; for I did kill King Henry;
But 'twas thy beauty that provoked me.
Nay, now dispatch; 'twas I that stabb'd young Edward;
But 'twas thy heavenly face that set me on.
She lets fall the sword.
Take up the sword again, or take up me.
Anne. Arise, dissembler: though I wish thy death,
I will not be the executioner.
Glon. Then bid me kill myself, and I will do it.
Anne. I have already.
Glon. That was in thy rage:
Speak it again, and even with the word,
This hand, which, for thy love, did kill thy love,
Shall, for thy love, kill a far truer love:
To both their deaths shalt thou be necessary.
Anne. I would I knew thy heart.
Glon. 'Tis figured in my tongue.
Anne. I fear me both are false.
Glon. Then never man was true.
Anne. Well, well, put up your sword.
Glon. Say, then, my peace is made.
Anne. That shall thou know hereafter.
Glon. But shall I live in hope?
Anne. All men, I hope, live so.
Glon. Vouchsafe to wear this ring.
Anne. To take is not to give.
Glon. Look! how this ring encompasseth thy finger,
Even so thy breast encloseth my poor heart;
Wear both of them, for both of them are thine.
And if thy poor devoted servant may
But beg one favour at thy gracious hand,
Thou dost confirm his happiness for ever.
Anne. What is it?
Glow. That it may please you leave these sad

To him that hath more cause to be a mourner,
And presently repair to Crosby-place;
Where, after I have solemnly interred
At Chertsey monastery this noble king,
And wet his grave with my repentant tears,
I will with all expedient duty see you:
For divers unknown reasons, I beseech you,
Grant me this boon.
Anne. With all my heart; and much it joys me too
To see you are become so penitent.
Tressel and Berkeley, go along with me.
Glow. Bid me farewell.
Anne. 'Tis more than you deserve;
But since you teach me how to flatter you,
Imagine I have said farewell already.

Exeunt Lady Anne, Tressel, and Berkeley.
Glow. Sirs, take up the corse.
Gent. Towards Chertsey, noble lord?
Glow. No, to White-Friars; there attend my

Was ever woman in this humour wo'd?
Was ever woman in this humour won?
I'll have her; but I will not keep her long.
What! I, that kill'd her husband and his father,
To take her in her heart's extremest hate;
With curses in her mouth, tears in her eyes,
The bleeding witness of her hatred by;
Having God, her conscience, and these bars
against me,
And I no friends to back my suit withal,
But the plain devil and dissembling looks,
And yet to win her, all the world to nothing!
Ha!
Hath she forgot already that brave prince,
Edward, her lord, whom I, some three months since,

Stab'd in my angry mood at Tewksbury?
A sweeter and a lovelier gentleman,
Fram'd in the prodigality of nature,
Young, valiant, wise, and, no doubt, right royal,
The spacious world cannot again afford:
And will she yet abase her eyes on me,
That crop'd the golden prime of this sweet prince,
And made her widow to a woeful bed?
On me, whose all not equals Edward's moiety?
On me, that halt and am misshapen thus?
My dukedom to a beggarly denier
I do mistake my person all this while:
Upon my life, she finds, although I cannot,
Myself to be a marvellous proper man.
I'll be at charges for a looking-glass,
And entertain a score or two of tailors,
To study fashions to adorn my body:
Since I am crept in favour with myself,
I will maintain it with some little cost.
But first I'll turn you fellow in his grave,
And then return lamenting to my love.
Shine out, fair sun, till I have bought a glass,
That I may see my shadow as I pass.

Scene III.—The Same. A Room in the Palace.
Enter Queen Elizabeth, Lord Rivers, and Lord Grey.
Riv. Have patience, madam: there's no doubt his majesty
Will soon recover his accustomed health.
Grey. In that you brook it ill, it makes me

Therefore, for God's sake, entertain good con-
And cheer his grace with quick and merry words.
Q. Eliz. If he were dead, what would be on me?
Grey. No other harm but loss of such a Q. Eliz. The loss of such a lord includes harms.
Grey. The heavens have bless'd you with goodly son,
To be your comforter when he is gone.
Q. Eliz. Ah! he is young; and his minor
Is put unto the trust of Richard Gloucester—
A man that loves not me, nor none of you.
Riv. Is it concluded he shall be protector?
Q. Eliz. It is determin'd, not concluded
But so it must be if the king miscarry.

Enter Buckingham and Stanley.
Grey. Here come the Lords of Buckingham and Stanley.
Buck. Good time of day unto your royal grace.
Stan. God make your majesty joyful as you have been!
Q. Eliz. The Countess Richmond, good
Lord of Stanley,
To your good prayer will scarcely say amen.
Yet, Stanley, notwithstanding she's your wife,
And loves not me, be you, good lord, assur'd
I hate not you for her proud arrogance.
Stan. I do beseech you, either not believe
The envious slanders of her false accusers;
Or, if she be accus'd on true report,
Bear with her weakness, which, I think, proc'd
From wayward sickness, and no grounded ma-
Q. Eliz. Saw you the king to-day, my Lord
Stanley?
Stan. But now the Duke of Buckingham a
Are come from visiting his majesty.
Q. Eliz. What likelihood of his amendment?
Buck. Madam, good hope; his grace speaks cheerfully.
Q. Eliz. God grant him health! Did you conwith him?
Buck. Ay, madam: he desires to make at-

ment
Between the Duke of Gloucester and his brothers,
And between them and my lord chamberlain.
And sent to warn them to his royal presence
Q. Eliz. Would all were well! But that never be.
I fear our happiness is at the highest.

Enter Gloucester, Hastings, and Dorset.
Glow. They do me wrong, and I will endure it:
Who are they that complain unto the king,
That I, forsooth, am stern and love them not?
By holy Paul, they love his grace but lightly.
That fill his ears with such dissentious rumo-
I had rather be a country servant maid
Than a great queen, with this condition,
To be so baited, scorn'd, and stormed at:
Small joy have I in being England's queen.

Enter Queen MARGARET, behind.

Q. Mar. And lessend be that small, God, I beseech him
Thy honour, state and seat is due to me.

Glo. What! threat ye me with telling of the king?
Tell him, and spare not: look! what I have said
I will avouch in presence of the king:
I dare adventure to be sent to the Tower.
'Tis time to speak; my pains are quite forgot.

Q. Mar. Out, devil! I remember them too well:
Thou kill'dst my husband Henry in the Tower,
And Edward, my poor son, at Tewksbury.

Glo. Ere you were queen, ay, or your husband
king,
I was a pack-horse in his great affairs,
A weeder-out of his proud adversaries,
A liberal rewarder of his friends;
To royalise his blood I spilt mine own.

Q. Mar. Ay, and much better blood than his,
or thine.

Glo. In all which time you and your husband
Grey
Were factious for the house of Lancaster;
And, Rivers, so were you. Was not your husband
In Margaret's battle at Saint Albin's slain?

Let me put in your minds, if you forget,
What you have been ere now, and what you are;
Withal, what I have been, and what I am.

Q. Mar. A murderousovillain, and sotstillthouart.

Glo. Poor Clarence did forsake his father
Warwick,
Ay, and forsware himself, which Jesu pardon!

Q. Mar. Which God revenge!

Glo. Tofigh on Edward's party for the crown;
And for his meed, poor lord, he is mew'd up.
I would to God my heart were flint, like Edward's,
Or Edward's soft and pitiful, like mine:

I am too childish-foolish for this world.

Q. Mar. Hie thee to hell for shame, and leave the world,
Thou cacodemon! there thy kingdom is.

Riv. My Lord of Gloucester, in those busy days
Which here you urge to prove us enemies,
We follow'd then our lord, our lawful king;
So should we you, if you should be our king.

Glo. If I should be! I had rather be a pedlar.
Far be it from my heart the thought thereof!

Q. Eliz. As little joy, my lord, as you suppose
You should enjoy, were you this country's king,
As little joy may you suppose in me
That I enjoy, being the queen thereof.

Q. Mar. A little joy enjoys the queen thereof;
For I am she, and altogether joyless.
I can no longer hold me patient.

Advancing,
Hear me, you wrangling pirates, that fall out
In sharing that which you have pill'd from me!
Which of you trembles not that looks on me?
If not, that, I being queen, you bow like subjects,
Yet that, by you depos'd, you quake like rebels!
Ah! gentle villain, do not turn away.

Glo. Foul wrinkled witch, what mak'st thou in my sight?

Q. Mar. But repetition of what thou hast marr'd;
That will I make before I let thee go.
Glow. Wert thou not banished on pain of death?
Q. Mar. I was; but I do find more pain in banishment.

Then death can yield me here by my abode.
A husband and a son thou ow'st to me; 170
And thou a kingdom; all of you allegiance:
This sorrow that I have by right is yours,
And all the pleasures you usurp are mine.

Glow. The curse my noble father laid on thee.
When thou diest crown his war-like brows with paper,
And with thy scorns drew'st rivers from his eyes;
And then, to dry them, gav'st the duke a clout
Steep'd in the faultless blood of pretty Rutland;
His curses, then from bitterness of soul 179
Denounce'd against thee, are all fallen upon thee;
And God, not we, hath plagu'd thy bloody deed.

Q. Eliz. So just is God, to right the innocent.

Hast. O! 'twas the foulest deed to slay that babe,
And the most merciless that e'er was heard of.
Riv. Tyrants themselves wept when it was reported.
Dor. No man but prophesied revenge for it.
Buck. Northumberland, then present, wept to see it.

Q. Mar. What! were you snarling all before
I came,
Ready to catch each other by the throat,
And turn you all your hatred now on me? 190
Did York's dread curse prevail so much with heaven
That Henry's death, my lovely Edward's death,
Their kingdom's loss, my woeful banishment,
Should all but answer for that peevish brat?
Can curses pierce the clouds and enter heaven?
Why then, give way, dull clouds, to my quick

If not by war, by surfeit die your king,
As ours by murder, to make him a king!
Edward thy son, which now is Prince of Wales,
For Edward my son, which was Prince of Wales,
Die in his youth by like untimely violence! 201
Thyself a queen, for me that was a queen,
Outlive thy glory, like my wretched self!
Long may'st thou live to wall thy children's loss,
And see another, as I see thee now.
Deck'd in thy rights, as thou art stail'd in mine!
Long die thy happy days before thy death;
And after many lengthen'd hours of grief,
Die neither mother, wife, nor England's queen!
Rivers and Dorset, you were standers by,
And so wast thou, Lord Hastings, when my son
Was stabb'd with bloody daggers: God, I pray
him,
That none of you may live your natural age,
But by some unlook'd accident cut off!

Glow. Have done thy charm, thou hateful wither'd bag!
Q. Mar. And leave out thee! stay, dog, for thou shalt hear me.

If heaven have any grievous plague in store
Exceeding those that I can wish upon thee.
O! let them keep it till thy sins be ripe,
And then hurl down their indignation
On thee, the tribune of the poor world's peace.
The worm of conscience still begnaw thy soul!
Thy friends suspect for traitors while thou livest,
And take deep traitors for thy dearest friends!
No sleep close up that deadly eye of thine,

Unless it be while some tormenting dream
Afrights thee with a hell of ugly devils!
Thou elvish-mark'd, abortive, rooting hog!
Thou that wast seal'd in thy nativity
The slave of nature and the son of hell!
Thou slander of thy heavy mother's womb!
Thou loathed issue of thy father's loins!
Thou rag of honour! thou detested—

Glow. Margaret.
Q. Mar. Richard! 210
Glow. Ha!

Q. Mar. I call thee!
Glow. I cry thee mercy then, for I did this
That thou hast call'd me all these bitter names.
Q. Mar. Why, so I did; but look'd for no re

Glow. 'Tis done by me, and ends in 'Margaret Q. Eliz. Thus have you breath'd thy curse against yourself.

Whose deadly web ensnareth thee about?

taught your duty.
Q. Mar. To serve me well, you all should me
do.

Teach me to be your queen, and you my subject;
O! serve me well, and teach yourselves that do.

Dor. Dispute not with her, she is lunatic.

Q. Mar. Peace! Master marquess, you malapert:
Your fire-new stamp of honour is scarce curr't
O! that your young nobility could judge
What 'twere to lose it, and be miserable.
They that stand high have many blasts to smote
them,
And if they fall, they dash themselves to pie.

Glow. Good counsel, marry: learn it, learn marquess.

Dor. It touches you, my lord, as much as

And dallies with the wind, and scorn's the sun.

Q. Mar. And turns the sun to shade; alas! as

Whose bright out-shining beams thy cloudy wind
Hath in eternal darkness folded up.
Your acry buildeth in our acry's nest.

As it was won with blood, lost be it so!

And shamefully my hopes by you are butcher'd.
My charity is outrage, life my shame;
And in that shame still live my sorrow's rag.

Buck. Have done, have done.
Q. Mar. O princely Buckingham! I'll kiss

hand,
How now, my hardy, stout, resolved mates! Are you now going to dispatch this thing? First Murd. We are, my lord; and come to have the warrant, That we may be admitted where he is. Gloo. Well thought upon; I have it here about me. Gives the warrant. When you have done, repair to Crosby-place. But, sirs, be sudden in the execution, Withal obdurate, do not hear him plead; For Clarence is well-spoken, and perhaps May move your hearts to pity, if you mark him. First Murd. Tut, tut! my lord, we will not stand to prate; Talkers are no good doers: be assur'd We go to use our hands and not our tongues. Gloo. Your eyes drop millstones, when fools' eyes fall tears: I like you, lords; about your business straight; Go, go, dispatch. First Murd. We will, my noble lord. Exeunt.

Scene IV. — The Same. The Tower.
Enter Clarence and Brakenbury.

Brak. Why looks your grace so heavily to-day? Clar. O! I have pass'd a miserable night, So full of ugly sights, of ghastly dreams, That, as I am a Christian faithful man, I would not spend another such a night, Though 'twere to buy a world of happy days, So full of di-mal terror was the time.

Brak. What was your dream, my lord? I pray you, tell me.

Clar. Methought that I had broken from the Tower, And was embark'd to cross to Burgundy; And in my company my brother Gloucester. Who from my cabin tempted me to walk Upon the hatches: thence we look'd toward England, And cite'd up a thousand heavy times, During the wars of York and Lancaster That had befall'n us. As we pac'd along Upon the giddy footing of the bat hes, Methought that Gloucester stumbled; and, in falling, Struck me, that thought to stay him, overboard, Into the tumbling billows of the main. Lord, Lord! methought what pain it wastodrown: What dreadful noise of waters in mine ears! What ugly sights of death within mine eyes! Methought I saw a thousand fearful wrecks; A thousand men that fish'd; gnaw'd upon; Wedges of gold, great anchors, heaps of pearl, Inestimable stones, unvalued jewels, All scatter'd in the bottom of the sea, Some lay in dead men's skulls; and in those holes Where eyes did once inhabit, there were cleft. As twere in scorn of eyes, reflecting gems, That wou'd the slimy bottom of the deep, And mock'd the dead bones that lay scatter'd by. Brak. Had you such leisure in the time of death To gaze upon the secrets of the deep? Clar. Methought I had; and often did I strive To yield the ghost; but still the envious flood Kept in my soul, and would not let it forth To find the empty, vast, and wandering air; But smother'd it within my panting bulk,
Which almost burst to belch it in the sea.

Brak. Awak'd you not with this sore agony?

Clar. No, no, my dream was lengthen'd after-life;

O! then began the tempest to my soul.

I pass'd, methought, the melancholy flood,
With that sour ferryman which poets write of,
Unto the kingdom of perpetual night.

The first that there did greet my stranger soul,
Was my great father-in-law, renowned Warwick;
Who cried aloud, 'What scourg' for perjury?

Can this dark monarchy afford false Clarence?

And so he vanished: then came wandering by
A shadow like an angel, with bright hair
Dabbled in blood; and he shriek'd out aloud,
'Clarence is come; false, fleeting, perjur'd Clarence,
That stabb'd me in the field by Tewksbury;
Seize on him! Furies, take him unto torment.'

With that, methought, a legion of foul fiends
Environ'd me, and howled in mine ears.
Such hideous cries, that with the very noise
I trembling wak'd, and for a season after
Could not believe but that I was in hell,
Such terrible impression made my dream.

Brak. Nomarvel, lord, though it alighted on me,
I am afraid, methinks, to hear you tell it.

Clar. O Brakenbury! I have done those things
That now bear evidence against my soul.
For Edward's sake; and see how he requites me.
O God! if my deep prayers cannot appease thee,
But thou wilt be aveng'd on my misdeeds,
Yet execute thy wrath in me alone:
O! spare my guiltless wife and my poor children.
I pray thee, gentle keeper, stay by me;
My soul is heavy, and I fain would sleep.

Brak. I will, my lord. God give your grace good rest!

Sorrow breaks seasons and reposing hours,
Makesthenightmorning, and thenoon-tidenight.
Princes have but their titles for their glories,
An outward honour for an inward toil;
And, for unfit imaginations,
They often feel a world of restless cares:
So that, between their titles and low names,
There's nothing differs but the outward fame.

Enter the two Murderers.

First Murd. Ho! who's here?

Brak. What wouldst thou, fellow? and how can'st thou hit her?

First Murd. I would speak with Clarence, and I came hither on my legs.

Brak. What! so brief?

Second Murd. 'Tis better, sir, than to be tedious.
Let him see our commission, and talk no more.

A paper delivered to Brakenbury, who reads it.

Brak. I am, in this, commanded to deliver
The noble Duke of Clarence to your hands:
I will not reason what is meant hereby,
Because I will be guiltless of the meaning.
There lies the duke asleep, and there the keys.
I'll to the king; and signify to him
That thus I have resigned to you my charge.

First Murd. You may, sir; 'tis a point of wisdom; fare you well.

Exit Brakenbury.

Second Murd. What shall we stab him as he sleeps?

First Murd. No; he'll say 'twas done cowardly, when he wakes.

Second Murd. When he wakes! why food shall never wake till the judgment-day.

First Murd. Why, then he'll say we stab him sleeping.

Second Murd. The urging of that word 'judgment' hath bred a kind of remorse in me.

First Murd. What! art thou afraid?

Second Murd. Not to kill him, having a warrant for it; but to be damned for killing him,
the which no warrant can defend us.

First Murd. I thought thou hadst been resolute.

Second Murd. So I am, to let him live.

First Murd. Back to the Duke of Gloucester tell him so.

Second Murd. I pray thee, stay a while: I,
my holy humour will change; 'twas wise hold me but while one would tell twenty,

First Murd. How dost thou feel thyself?

Second Murd. Some certain drops of conscience yet within me.

First Murd. Remember our reward when deed's done.

Second Murd. 'Zounds! he dies: I had for the reward.

First Murd. Where's thy conscience now?

Second Murd. In the Duke of Gloucester's一大批

First Murd. So when he opens his purse, give us our reward, thy conscience flies out.

Second Murd. 'Tis no matter; let it go:
the few or none will entertain it.

First Murd. What if it come to thee again?

Second Murd. I'll not meddle with it;
I makes a man a coward; a man cannot steal, accuseth him; a man cannot swear, but checkshim; a man cannot lie with his neighbour's wife, but it detects him: 'tis a blushing fast spirit, that mutinies in a man's bosom, fills a man full of obstacles; it made me cannot restore a purse of gold that I found;
I began any man that keeps it; it is turned out towns and cities for a dangerous thing;
every man that means to live well endeavours to trust to himself and live without it.

First Murd. 'Zounds! it is even now at elbow, persuading me not to kill the duke.

Second Murd. Take the devil in thy mind, believe him not: he would insinuate with me
but to make thee sigh.

First Murd. I am strong-framed; he can prevail with me.

Second Murd. Spoke like a tall fellow that specketh his reputation. Come, shall we tothg-thy

First Murd. Take him over the costard in the hills of thy sword, and then throw him the malmsey-butt in the next room.

Second Murd. O excellent device! and in a sop of him.

First Murd. Soft! he wakes.

Second Murd. Strike.

First Murd. No; we'll reason with him.

Clar. Where art thou, keeper? give me a wine.

First Murd. You shall have wine enough, lord, anon.

Clar. In God's name, what art thou?

First Murd. A man, as you are.

Clar. But not, as I am, royal.

First Murd. Nor you, as we are, loyal.

Clar. Thy voice is thunder, but thy looks humble.

First Murd. My voice is now the king’s, my locks mine own.
Cor. How darkly and how deadly dost thou speak?
Why, he, therefore cannot have the hearts to do it.
Clarin. Have I offended you?
First Murd. Offended we you not, but the king.
Cor. I shall be reconcil’d to him again.
Second Murd. Never, my lord; therefore prepare to die.
Cor. Are you call’d forth from out a world of men
slay the innocent? What is my offence?
Cor. Are there the evidences that do accuse me?
at lawful quest have given their verdict up to the frowning judge? or who pronounc’d a bitter sentence of poor Clarence’s death?
Cor. I’m by a certain course of law, threaten me with death is most unlawful.
Cor. Hurl these as you will, as you hope to have redemption Chita dear blood shed for our grievous sins,
at you depart and lay no hands on me;
I doed you undertake is damnable.
First Murd. What we will do, we do upon command.
Second Murd. And he that hath command’d is the king.
Cor. Erroneously sal! the great King of kings in the table of his law command’d at thou shalt do no murder: will you then in his edict and fulfill a man’s heed; for he holds vengeance in his hand, hurl upon their heads that break his law.
Second Murd. And that same vengeance doth he hurl on thee,
false forsaying and for murder too:
and didst receive the sacrament to fight quarrel of the house of Lancaster.
First Murd. And, like a traitor to the name of God,
dist break that vow, and with thy treacherous blade
rip’dst the bowels of thy sovereign’s son.
Second Murd. Whom thou wast sworn to cherish and defend.
First Murd. How canst thou urge God’s dreadful law to us,
then thou hast broke it in such dear degree?
Cor. Alas! for whose sake did I that ill deed?
Cor. Edward, for my brother, for his sake:
sends you not to murder me for this;
or in that sin he is as deep as I.
Cor. God will be avenged for that deed,
I know you yet, he doth it publicly:
he not the quarrel from his powerful arm;
e needs no indirect or lawless course but of those that have offended him.
First Murd. Who made thee then a bloody minister,
then gallant-springing, brave Plantagenet,
at princely novice, was struck dead by thee?
Cor. My brother’s love, the devil, and my rage.

First Murd. Thy brother’s love, our duty, and thy fault,
Provoke us hither now to slaughter thee.
Cor. If you do love my brother, hate not me;
I am his brother, and I love him well.
If you be hir’d for meed, go back again,
And I will send you to my brother Gloucester,
Who shall reward you better for my life.
Than Edward will for tiding of my death.
Second Murd. You are deceiv’d, your brother
Gloucester hates you.
Cor. O, no! he loves me, and he holds me
dear:
Go you to him from me.
Both Murd. Ay, so we will.
Cor. Tell him, when that our princely father
York
Bless’d his three sons with his victorious arm,
And charg’d us from his soul to love each other,
He little thought of this divided friendship:
Bid Gloucester think on this, and he will weep.
First Murd. Ay, millstones; as he lesson’d us to weep.
Cor. O! do not slander him, for he is kind.
First Murd. Right,
As snow in harvest. Thou deceiv’st thyself:
’Tis he that sends us to destroy you here.
Cor. It cannot be; for he bewept my fortune,
And hugg’d me in his arms, and swore, with sobs,
That he would labour my delivery.
First Murd. Why, so he doth, now he delivers
you
From this earth’s thraldom to the joys of heaven.
Second Murd. Make peace with God, for you must die, my lord.
Cor. Have you that holy feeling in thy soul,
To counsel me to make my peace with God,
And art thou yet to thy own soul so blind,
That thou wilt wage with God by murdering me?
O! sirs, consider, they that set you on
To do this deed will hate you for the deed.
Second Murd. What shall we do?
Cor. Relent and save your souls.
First Murd. Relent! ’tis cowardly and womanish.
Cor. Not to relent, is beastly, savage, devilish.
Which of you, if you were a prince’s son,
Being pen’t from liberty, as I am now.
If two such murderers as yourselves came to you,
Would not entreat for life?
My friend, I spy some pity in thy looks;
O! if thine eye be not a flatterer,
Come thou on my side, and entreat for me,
As you would beg, were you in my distress:
A begging prince what beggar pityes not?
Second Murd. Look behind you, my lord.
First Murd. Take that, and brand him.
If all this will not do,
I’ll drown thee in the malmsey-but within.
Exit, with the body.
Second Murd. A bloody deed, and desperately dispatch’d!
How faint, like Pilate, would I wash my hands
Of this most grievous murder.
Re-enter First Murderer.
First Murd. How now! what mean’st thou, that thou help’st me not?
By heaven, the duke shall know how slack thou art.
There wanteth now our brother Gloucester,
To make the perfect period of this peace.
Buck. And, in good time, here comes noble duke.

Enter Gloucester.

Glou. Good morrow to my sovereign king and queen;
And, princely peers, a happy time of day!
K. Edw. Happy, indeed, as we have spent the night.
Gloucester, we have done deeds of charity;
Made peace of enmity, fair love of hate,
Between these swelling wrong-incensed peers.
Glou. A blessed labour, my most sovereign lord.
Among this princely heap, if any here,
By false intelligence, or wrong surmise,
Hold me a foe;
If I unwittingly, or in my rage,
Have aught committed that is hardly borne
By any in this presence, I desire
To reconcile me to his friendly peace:
Tis death to me to be at enmity;
I hate it, and desire all good men’s love.
First, madam, I entreat true peace of you,
Which I will purchase with my dutie service.
Of you, my noble cousin Buckingham,
If ever any grudge were lodg’d between us;
Of you, Lord Rivers, and Lord Grey, of you,
That all without desert have wrong’d on me;
Dukes, earls, lords, gentlemen; indeed, of all
I do not know that Englishman alive
With whom my soul is any jot at odds
More than the infant that is born to-night:
I thank my God for my humiliation.
Q. Eliz. A holy day shall this be kept hereafter:
I would to God all strifes were well compound.
My sovereign lord, I do beseech your highness
To take our brother Clarence to your grace.
Glou. Why, madam, have I offered love for that
To be so flouted in this royal presence?
Who knows not that the gentle duke is dead?
They all start.

You do him injury to scorn his corse,
K. Edw. Who knows not he is dead? I know he is.
Q. Eliz. All-seeing heaven, what a world is this!
Buck. Look I so pale, Lord Dorset, as the rest.
Dor. Ay, my good lord; and no man in thy presence
But his red colour hath forsook his cheeks.
K. Edw. Is Clarence dead? the order we revers’d.
Glou. But he, poor soul, by your first order died
And that a winged Mercury did bear;
Some tardy cripple bare the countermand,
That came too late to see him buried.
God grant that some, less noble and less loyal Nearer in bloody thoughts, but not in blood,
Deserve not worse than wretched Clarence did
And yet go current from suspicion.

Enter Stanley.

Sten. A boon, my sovereign, for my service done!
K. Edw. I pray thee, peace; my soul is full of sorrow.
Sten. I will not rise, unless your highness hear me.
K. Edw. Then speak at once what is it thou demand’st.
The king mine uncle is to blame for it:
God will revenge it; whom I will importune
With earnest prayer; all to that effect.

_Girl._ And so will I.

_Duch._ Peace, children, peace! the king doth love you well:
Incapable and shallow innocents,
You cannot guess who caus'd your father's death.

_Boy._ Grandam, we can; for my good uncle
Gloucester
Told me, the king, provok'd to it by the queen,
Devil's impeachments to imprison him:
And when my uncle told me so, he wept.
And pitied me, and kindly kiss'd my cheek;
Bade me rely on him as on my father,
And he would love me dearly as his child.

_Duch._ Ah! that deceit should steal such gentle shape,
And with a virtuous wizard hide deep vice.
He is my son, ay, and therein my shame,
Yet from my dugs he drew not this deceit.

_Boy._ Think you my uncle did dissemble, grandam?

_Duch._ Ay, boy.

_Boy._ I cannot think it. Hark! what noise is this!

_Enter Queen Elizabeth, distractedly; Rivers and Dorset following her._

_Q. Eliz._ Oh! who shall hinder me to wail and weep,
To chide my fortune, and torment myself?
I'll join with black despair against my soul,
And to myself become an enemy.

_Duch._ What means this scene of rude impatience?

_Q. Eliz._ To make an act of tragic violence:
Edward, my lord, thy son, our king, is dead!
Why grow the branches now the root is wither'd?
Why wither not the leaves that want their sap?
If you will live, lament; if die, be brief,
That our swift-wing'd souls may catch the king's;
Or, like obedient subjects, follow him
To his new kingdom of perpetual rest.

_Duch._ Ah! so much interest have I in thy sorrow
As I had title in thy noble husband.
I have bewept a worthy husband's death,
And liev'd with looking on his images;
But now two mirrors of his princely semblance
Are crack'd in pieces by malignant death,
And I for comfort have but one false glass,
That grieves me when I see my shame in him.
Thou art a widow; yet thou art a mother,
And hast the comfort of thy children left thee:
But death hath snatch'd my husband from mine arms,
And pluck'd two crutches from my feeble limbs,
Clarence and Edward. O! what cause have I,
Thine being but a moiety of my grief,
To overgo thy plaints and drown thy cries.

_Boy._ Good aunt, you wept not for our father's death;
How can we aid you with our kindred tears?
_Girl._ Our fatherless distress was left unmoan'd;
Your widow-colour likewise be unwept.

_Q. Eliz._ Give me no help in lamentation;
I am not barren to bring forth complaints:
All springs reduce their currents to mine eyes.
That I, being govern'd by the watery moon, may send forth plenteous tears to drown the world! Ah! for my husband, for my dear lord Edward! Ah! for our father, for our dear lord Clarence.

Duch. Alas! for both, both mine, Edward and Clarence.

Q. Eliz. What stay had I but Edward? and he's gone.

Chil. What stay had we but Clarence? and he's gone.

Duch. What stays had I but they? and they are gone.

Q. Eliz. Was never widow had so dear a loss.

Chil. Were never orphans had so dear a loss.

Duch. Was never mother had so dear a loss. Alas! I am the mother of these griefs: Their woes are parcel'd, mine are general. She for an Edward weeps, and so do I; I for a Clarence weep, so doth not she: These babes for Clarence weep, and so do I; I for an Edward weep, so do they: Alas! you three on me, threefold distress'd, Pour all your tears, I am your sorrow's nurse, And I will pamper it with lamentation.

Dor. Comfort, dear mother: God is much displeas'd That you take with unthankfulness his doing, In common worldly things 'tis call'd ungrateful With dull unwillingness to repay a debt Which with a bounteous hand was kindly lent; Much more to be thus opposite with heaven, For it requires the royal debt it lent you.

Riv. Madam, bethekn you, like a careful mother, Of the young prince your son: send straight for him; Let him be crown'd; in him your comfort lives. Drown desperate sorrow in dead Edward's grave, And plant your joys in living Edward's throne.

Enter Gloucester, Buckingham, Stanley, Hastings, Ratcliff, and Others.

Glou. Sister, have comfort: all of us have cause To wail the dimming of our shining star; But none can cure their harms by wailing them. Madam, my mother, I do cry you mercy; I did not see your grace: humbly on my knee I crave your blessing.

Duch. God bless thee! and put meekness in thy mind, Love, charity, obedience, and true duty.

Glou. Amen; aside. and make me die a good old man!

That is the butt-end of a mother's blessing; I marvel that her grace did leave it out.

Buck. You cloudy princes and heart-sorrowing peers, That bear this mutual heavy load of moan, Now cheer each other in each other's love: Though we have spent our harvest of this king, We are to reap the harvest of his son. The broken rancour of your high-swoln hearts, But lately splinter'd, knit, and join'd together, Must gently be preserv'd, cherish'd, and kept: Me seemeth good, that, with some little train, Forthwith from Ludlow the young prince be fetched, Hither to London, to be crown'd our king.

Riv. Why with some little train, my Lord of Buckingham?
KING RICHARD III.

553

In him that did object the same to thee:
He was the wretched'st thing when he was young,
So long a-growing and so leisurely,
That, if his rule were true, he should be gracious.

Arch. And so, no doubt, he is, my gracious madam.

Duch. I hope he is; but yet let mothers doubt.

York. Now, by my troth, if I had been remember'd,
I could have given my uncle's grace a flout,
To touch his growth nearer than he touch'd mine.

Duch. How, my young York? I pray thee, let me hear it.

York. Merry, they say my uncle grew so fast
That he could gnaw a crust at two hours old:
'Twas full two years ere I could get a tooth.

Grandam, this would have been a biting jest.

Duch. I pray thee, pretty York, who told thee this?

York. Grandam, his nurse.

Duch. His nurse! why, she was dead ere thou wert born.

York. If 'twere not she, I cannot tell who told me.

Q. Eliz. A parous boy: go to, you are too shrewd.

Arch. Good madam, be not angry with the child.

Q. Eliz. Pitchers have ears.

Enter a Messenger.

Arch. Here comes a messenger. What news?

Q. Eliz. Such news, my lord, as grieves me to unfold.

Q. Eliz. How doth the prince?

Mess. Well, madam, and in health.

Duch. What is thy news then?

Mess. Lord Rivers and Lord Grey are sent to Pomfret,
With them Sir Thomas Vaughan, prisoners.

Duch. Who hath committed them?

Mess. The mighty dukes, Gloucester and Buckingham.

Q. Eliz. For what offence?

Mess. The sum of all I can, I have disclosed:
Why or for what these nobles were committed
Is all unknown to me, my gracious lady.

Q. Eliz. Ay me! I see the ruin of my house.
The tiger now hath seiz'd the gentle hind;
Insulting tyranny begins to jet
Upon the innocent and aweless throne:
Welcome, destruction, death, and massacre!
I see, as in a map, the end of all.

Duch. Accursed and unquiet wrangling days,
How many of you have mine eyes beheld!
My husband lost his life to get the crown,
And often up and down my sons were toss'd,
For me to joy and weep their gain and loss:
And being seated, and domestic broils
Clean over-blown, themselves, the conquerors,
Make war upon themselves; brother to brother,
Blood to blood, self against self; O! preposterous
And frantic outrage, end thy damned spleen;
Or let me die, to look on death no more.

Q. Eliz. Come, come, my boy; we will to sanctuary.

Madam, farewell.

Duch. Stay, I will go with you.

Q. Eliz. You have no cause.

Arch. My gracious lady, go;
And thither bear your treasure and your goods.
For my part, I'll resign unto your grace.
The seal I keep: and so betide to me
As well I tender you and all of yours!
Come; I'll conduct you to the sanctuary.

Exeunt.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—London. A Street.

The Trumpets sound. Enter the Prince of Wales, Gloucester, Buckingham, Cardinal Bourchier, Catesby, and Others.

Buck. Welcome, sweet prince, to London, to your chamber.

Glow. Welcome, dear cousin, my thoughts' sovereign:
The weary way hath made you melancholy.

Prince. No, uncle; but our crosses on the way
Have made it tedious, wearisome, and heavy:
I want more uncles here to welcome me.

Glow. Sweet prince, the untainted virtue of your years
Hath not yet div'd into the world's deceit:
Nor more can you distinguish of a man
Than of his outward show; which, God he knows,
Seldom or never jumpeth with the heart.

Those uncles which you want were dangerous;
Your grace attended to their sugar'd words,
But look'd not on the poison of their hearts:
God keep you from them, and from such false friends!

Prince. God keep me from false friends! but they were none.

Glow. My lord, the mayor of London comes to greet you.

Enter the Lord Mayor and his Train.

May. God bless your grace with health and happy days!

Prince. I thank you, good my lord; and thank you all.

I thought my mother and my brother York:
Would long ere this have met us on the way:
Fie! what a sling is Hastings, that he comes not
To tell us whether they will come or no.

Enter Hastings.

Buck. And in good time here comes the sweating lord.

Prince. Welcome, my lord. What, will our mother come?

Hast. On what occasion, God he knows, not I,
The queen your mother, and your brother York,
Have taken sanctuary: the tender prince
Would fain have come with me to meet your grace,
But by his mother was perforce withheld.

Buck. Fie! what an indirect and peevish course
Is this of hers. Lord cardinal, will your grace Persuade the queen to send the Duke of York
Unto his princely brother presently?

If she deny, Lord Hastings, go with him,
And from her jealous arms pluck him perforce.

Card. My Lord of Buckingham, if my weak oratory
Can from his mother win the Duke of York,
Anon expect him here; but if she be obdurate
To mild entreaties, God in heaven forbid
We should infringe the holy privilege
Of blessed sanctuary! not for all this land
Would I be guilty of so great a sin.

Buck. You are too senseless-obstinate, my lord, Too ceremonious and traditional:
Weigh it but with the grossness of this age,
You break not sanctuary in seizing him.
The benefit thereof is always granted
To those whose dealings have deserve'd the place,
And those who have the wit to claim the place.
Thus prince hath neither claim'd it nor deserve'd:
And therefore, in mine opinion, cannot have:
Then, taking him from thence that is not the
You break no privilege nor charter there.
Oft have I heard of sanctuary men,
But sanctuary children ne'er till now.

Card. My lord, you shall o'er-rule my mien for once.

Come on, Lord Hastings, will you go with it?

Hast. I go, my lord.

Prince. Good lords, make all the speed you may.

Exeunt Cardinal Bourchier, etc.

HAST. Say, uncle Gloucester, if our brother come,
Where shall we sojourn till our coronation?

Glow. Where it seems best unto your royal state.

If I may counsel you, some day or two
Your highness shall repose you at the Tower.
Then where you please, a'd shall be thought most fit
For your best health and recreation.

Prince. I do not like the Tower, of any place.
Did Julius Caesar build that place, my lord?

Buck. He did, my gracious lord, in that beginning;
Which, since, succeeding ages have re-edified

Prince. Is it upon record, or else reported
Successively from age to age, he built it?

Buck. Upon record, my gracious lord.

Prince. But say, my lord, it were not register'd Methinks the truth should live from age to age:
As 'twere retail'd to all posterity,
Even to the general all-ending day.

Glow. Aside. So wise so young, they say, ever live long.

Prince. What say you, uncle?

Glow. I say, without characters, fame lives lor

Aside. Thus, like the formal Vice, Iniquity,
I moralize two meanings in one word.

Prince. That Julius Caesar was a famous man,
With what his valour did enrich his wit,
His wit set down to make his valour live:
Death makes no conquest of this conqueror,
For now he lives in fame, though not in life.
I'll tell you what, my cousin Buckingham,—

Buck. What, my gracious lord?

Prince. An if I live until I be a man,
I'll win our ancient right in France again,
Or die a soldier, as I liv'd a king.

Glow. Aside. Short summers lightly have forward spring.

Enter YORK, HASTINGS, and Cardinal Bourchier.

Prince. Richard of York! how fares our not brother?

York. Well, my dreadful lord; so must I call you now.

Prince. Ay, brother, to our grief, as it is yours.
Too late he died that might have kept that title
Which by his death hath lost much majesty.
KING RICHARD III.

You. How fares our cousin, noble Lord of York?

Ork. I thank you, gentle uncle. O! my lord, I said that idle weeds are fast in growth; prince my brother hath outgrown me far.

You. He hath, my lord.

Ork. And therefore is he idle?

You. O! my fair cousin, I must not say so.

Ork. Then he is more beholding to you than I. You may command me as my sovereign; you have power in me as in a kinsman.

You. I pray you, uncle, give me this dagger. You. My dagger, little cousin! with all my heart.

Prince. A beggar, brother!

Ork. Of my kind uncle, that I know will give; I being but a toy, which is no grief to give.

You. A greater gift than that I'll give my cousin.

Ork. A greater gift! O! that's the sword to it.

You. Ay, gentle cousin, were it light enough.

Ork. O! then, I see, you'll part but with light gifts; weightier things you'll say a beggar nay.

You. It is too weighty for your grace to wear.

Ork. I weigh it lightly, were it heavier.

You. What! would you have my weapon, little lord?

Ork. I would, that I might thank you as you call me.

You. How?

Ork. Little.

Prince. My Lord of York will still be cross in talk.

Ork. Your grace knows how to bear with me.

You. You mean, to bear me, not to bear with me.

Ork. Yes, my brother mocks both you and me.

You. Cause that I am little, like an ape, thinks you that you should bear me on your shoulders.

Ork. With what a sharp-provided wit he reasons!

You. Mitigate the scorn he gives his uncle, prettily and aptly taunts himself; cunning and so young is wonderful.

Ork. My lord, will't please you pass along? Self and my good cousin Buckingham to your mother, to entreat of her meet you at the Tower and welcome you.

You. What! will you go unto the Tower, my lord?

Ork. My lord protector needs will have it so.

You. I shall not sleep in quiet at the Tower.

Ork. Why, what should you fear?

You. Marry, my uncle Clarence's angry ghost: grandam told me he was murder'd there.

Prince. I fear no uncle deads.

You. Nor none that live, I hope.

Prince. An if they live, I hope I need not fear. Come, my lord; and with a heavy heart, nailing on them, go I unto the Tower.

A Sennet. Exeunt all but Gloucester, Buckingham, and Catesby.

Buck. Think you, my lord, this little prating York is not incensed by his subtle mother taunt and scorn you thus oppressibly?

You. Nodoubt, no doubt. O! 'tis a parlous boy; bold, quick, ingenious, forward, capable: He's all the mother's, from the top to toe.

Buck. Well, let them re-t. Come hither, Catesby; thou art sworn As deeply to effect what we intend As closely to conceal what we impart.

You. Thou know'st our reasons urg'd upon the way: What think'st thou! is it not an easy matter To make William Lord Hastings of our mind, For the instalm of this noble duke In the seat royal of this famous isle?

Cates. He for his father's sake so loves the prince,

That he will not be won to aught against him.

Buck. What think'st thou then of Stanley? what will he?

Cates. He will do all in all as Hastings doth.

Buck. Well then, no more but this: go, gentle Catesby,

And, as it were far off, sound thou Lord Hastings, How he doth stand affected to our purpose; And summon him to-morrow to the Tower, To sit about the coronation.

If thou dost find him tractable to us,

Encourage him, and show him all our reasons:

If he be leaden, icy-cold, unwilling,

Be thou so too, and so break off your talk,

And give us notice of his inclination;

For we to-morrow hold divided councils,

Wherein thyself shall highly be employ'd.

Glou. Command me to Lord William: tell him, Catesby,

His ancient knot of dangerous adversaries

To-morrow are let blood at Pomfret-castle;

And bid my lord, for joy of this good news,

Give Mistress Shore one gentle kiss the more.

Buck. Good Catesby, go, effect this business soundly.

Cat's. My good lords both, with all the heed I can.

Glou. Shall we hear from you, Catesby, ere we sleep?

Cates. You shall, my lord.

Glou. At Crosby-place, there shall you find us both. Exit Catesby.

Buck. Now, my lord, what shall we do if we perceive Lord Hastings will not yield to our complots?

Glou. Chop off his head; something we will determine:

And, look, when I am king, claim thou of me The earldom of Hereford, and the moveables Whereof the king my brother stood possess'd.

Buck. I'll claim that promise at your grace's hand.

Glou. And look to have it yielded with all kindness.

Come, let us sup betimes, that afterwards We may digest our complots in some form. Exeunt.

Scene II.—The Same. Before Lord Hastings' House.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, my lord! Knocking.

Hast. Within. Who knocks?

Mess. One from the Lord Stanley.

Enter Hastings.

Hast. What is 't o'clock?
Mess. Upon the stroke of four.

Hast. Cannot thy master sleep these tedious nights?

Mess. So it should seem by that I have to say.

First, he commends him to your noble self. This Hast. And then?

Mess. Then certifies your lordship, that this night He dreamt the boar had raged over his helm;

Besides, he says there are two councils held;

And that may be determined at the one

Which may make you and him to rue at the other.

Therefore he sends to know your lordship's pleasure,

If you will presently take horse with him,

And with all speed post with him toward the north,

To shun the danger that his soul divines.

Hast. Go, fellow, go, return unto thy lord;

Bid him not fear the separated councils:

His honour and myself are at the one,

And at the other is my good friend Catesby;

Where nothing can proceed that toucheth us

Whereof I shall not have intelligence.

Tell him his fears are shallow, wanting instance:

And for his dreams, I wonder he's so simple

To trust the mockery of unquiet slumbers.

To fly the boar before the boar pursues,

Were to incense the boar to follow us

And make pursuit where he did mean: no chase.

Go, bid thy master rise and come to me;

And we will both together to the Tower,

Where, he shall see, the boar will use us kindly.

Mess. I'll go, my lord, and tell him what you say.

Exit.

Enter CATESBY.

Cates. Many good morrows to my noble lord!

Hast. Good morrow, Catesby; you are early stirring.

What news, what news, in this our tottering state?

Cates. It is a reeling world, indeed, my lord;

And I believe will never stand upright

Till Richard wear the garland of the realm.

Hast. How! wear the garland! dost thou mean the crown?

Cates. Ay, my good lord.

Hast. I'll have this crown of mine cut from my shoulders

Before I'll see the crown so foul misplac'd:

But canst thou guess that he doth aim at it?

Cates. Ay, on my life; and hopes to find you forward

Upon his party, for the gain thereof:

And thereupon he sends you this good news,

That this same very day your enemies,

The kindred of the queen, must die at Pomfret.

Hast. Indeed, I am no mourner for that news,

Because they have been still my adversaries;

But, that I'll give my voice on Richard's side,

To bar my master's heirs in true descent,

God knows I will not do it, to the death.

Cates. God keep your lordship in that gracious mind!

Hast. But I shall laugh at this a twelvemonth

hence,

That they which brought me in my master's hate,

I live to look upon their tragedy.

Well, Catesby, ere a fortnight make me older,

I'll send some packing that yet think not on't.

Cates. 'Tis a vile thing to die, my gracious lord,

When men are unprepared and look not for

Hast. O monstrous, monstrous! and so it out

With Rivers, Vaughan, Grey; and so'twill

With some men else, who think themselves as

As thou and I; who, as thou know'st, are due

To princely Richard and to Buckingham.

Cates. The princes both make high account

you;

Aside. For they account his head upon the block;

Hast. I know they do, and I have well deserved.

Enter STANLEY.

Come on, come on; where is your boar-spear, my

Fear you the boar, and go so unprovided?

Stan. My lord, good morrow; good morrow,

Catesby:

You may jest on, but, by the holy rood,

I do not like these several council's, I.

Hast. My lord, I hold my life as dear as you;

And never in my days, I do protest,

Was it so precious to me as 'tis now.

Think you but that I know our state secure

I would be so triumphant as I am!

Stan. The lords at Pomfret, when they ran from London,

Were jocund and supposed their state was safe

And they indeed had no cause to mistrust; but

Yet you see how soon the day d'ercast.

This sudden stab of rancour I misdeal;

Pray God, I say, I prove a needless coward!

What, shall we toward the Tower! the day is up,

Hast. Come, come, have with you. Wot you what, my lord?

To-day the lords you talk of are beheaded.

Stan. They, for their truth, might better wield their heads

Than some that have access'd them wear their

But come, my lord, let's away.

Enter a Pursuant.

Hast. Go on before; I'll talk with this good fellow. Eecent STANLEY and CATESBY

How now, sirrah! how goes the world with th'

Hast. I tell thee, man, 'tis better with men

Than when I met thee last where now we met;

Then was I going prisoner to the Tower,

By the suggestion of the queen's allies; but

Now, I tell thee, keep it to thyself,

This day those enemies are put to death,

And I in better state than e'er I was.

Purs. God hold thee to thy honour's good conté

Purs. God save your lordship!

Enter a Priest.

Priest. Well met, my lord; I am glad to your honour.

Hast. I thank thee, good Sir John, with my heart.

I am in your debt for your last exercise;

Come the next Sabbath, and I will content y

Enter BUCKINGHAM.

Buck. What! talking with a priest, my chamberlain;

Your friends at Pomfret, they do need the priæ

Your honour hath no shriving work in hand.
Hast. I thank his grace, I know he loves me well; 20
But, for his purpose in the coronation,
I have not sounded him, nor he deliver'd
His gracious pleasure any way therein:
But you, my noble lords, may name the time;
And in the duke's behalf I'll give my voice,
Which, I presume, he'll take in gentle part. 29

Enter Gloucester.

Ely. In happy time, here comes the duke himself.

Glon. My noble lords and cousins all, good morrow.

I have been long a sleeper; but, I trust,
My absence doth neglect no great design,
Which by my presence might have been concluded.

Buck. Had you not come upon your cue, my lord,
William Lord Hastings had pronounce'd your part,
I mean, your voice, for crowning of the king.

Glon. Than my Lord Hastings no man might be bolder:
His lordship knows me well, and loves me well.
My lord of Ely, when I was last in Holborn, 31
I saw good strawberries in your garden there;
I do beseech you send for some of them.

Ely. Marry, and will, my lord, with all my heart.

Exeunt.

Glon. Cousin of Buckingham, a word with you.

Takes him aside.

Catesby hath sounded Hastings in our business,
And finds the testy gentleman so hot,
As he will lose his head ere give consent
His master's child, as worshipful he terms it,
Shall lose the royalty of England's throne.

Buck. Withdraw yourself awhile; I'll go with you.

Exeunt Gloucester and Buckingham.

Stan. We have not yet set down this day of triumph.

To-morrow, in my judgment, is too sudden;
For I myself am not so well provided
As else I would be, were the day prolong'd.

Re-enter Bishop of Ely.

Ely. Where is my lord, the Duke of Gloucester?
I have sent for these strawberries.

Hast. His grace looks cheerfully and smooth
this morning:

There's some conceit or other likes him well,
When that he bids good morrow with such spirit.
I think there's never a man in Christendom 41
Can lesser hide his love or hate than he;
For by his face straight shall you know his heart.

Stan. What of his heart perceive you in his face
By any livelihood he show'd to-day?

Hast. Marry, that with no man here he is offended;

For, were he, he had show'd it in his looks.

Re-enter Gloucester and Buckingham.

Glon. I pray you all, tell me what they desire
That do conspire my death with devilish plots
Of damned witchcraft, and that have prevail'd
Upon my body with their hellish charms?

Hast. The tender love I bear your grace, my lord,
Makes me most forward in this princely presence
To doom the offenders, whoseoe'er they be:
I say, my lord, they have deserved death.
Glou. Then be your eyes the witness of their evil.
Look how I am bewitch’d; behold mine arm
Is, like a blasted sapling, wither’d up:
And this is Edward’s wife, that monstrous witch,
Consortcd with that harlot strumpet Shore, 70
That by their witchcraft thus have marked me.

Hast. If they have done this thing, my gracious lord—Glou. If! thon protector of this damned strumpet,
Talk’st thou to me of ‘ifs’? Thou art a traitor:
Off with his head! now, by Saint Paul I swear,
I will not dine until I see the same.

Lovel and Ratcliff, look that it be done:
The rest, that love me, rise and follow me.

Exeunt all but HASTINGS, RATCLIFF and LOWEL.

Hast. Woe, woe for England! not a whit for me;
For I, too fond, might have prevented this. 80
Stanley did dream the boar did raze his helm;
And I did scorn it, and disdain’d to fly.
Three times to-day my foot-cloth horse did stumble,
And started when he look’d upon the Tower,
As loath to bear me to the slaughter-house.
O! now I need the priest that spake to me:
I now repent I told the pursuivant,
As too triumphing, how mine enemies
To-day at Pomfret bloodily were butcher’d,
And myself secure in grace and favour.
O Margaret, Margaret! now thy heavy curse
Is lighted on poor Hastings’ wretched head.

Rat. Come, come, dispatch; the duke would be at dinner:
Make a short shift, he longs to see your head.

Hast. O! momentary grace of mortal men,
Which we more hunt for than the grace of God.
Who builds his hope in air of your good looks,
Lives like a drunken sailor on a mast;
Ready with every nod to tumble down
Into the fatal bowels of the deep.

Lov. Come, come, dispatch; ’tis bootless to exclaim.

Hast. O bloody Richard! miserable England! I prophesy the fearfull’st time to thee
That ever wretched age hath look’d upon.
Come, lead me to the block; bear him my head;
They smile at me who shortly shall be dead.

Exeunt.

SCENE V.—The Same. The Tower Walls.

Enter Gloucester and Buckingham, in rotten armour, marvellous ill-favoured.

Glou. Come, cousin, cast thou quake, and change thy colour,
Murder thy breath in middle of a word,
And then again begin, and stop again,
As if thou wert distraught and mad with terror.
Buck. Tat! Tat! I can counterfeit the deep tragedian,
Speak, and look back, and pry on every side,
Tremble and start at wagging of a straw,
Intending deep suspicion; ghastly looks
Are at my service, like enforced smiles;
And both are ready in their offices,
At any time to grace my stratagems.
But what! is Catesby gone?

Glou. He is; and, see, he brings the mayor along.

Enter the Lord Mayor and CATESBY.

Buck. Lord mayor.

Glou. Look to the drawbridge there!

Buck. Hark! a drat.

Glou. Catesby, o’erlook the walls.

Buck. Lord mayor, the reason we have sent Glou. Look back, defend thee; here are enemys,
Buck. God and our innocency defend a guard us!

Glou. Be patient, they are friends; Ratcliff and Lovel.

Enter LOVEL and RATCLIFF, with HASTING head.

Lov. Here is the head of that ignoble traitor,
The dangerous and unsuspected Hastings.

Glou. So dear I lov’d the man, that I must weep.
I took him for the plainest harmless creature
That breath’d upon the earth a Christian;
Made him my book, wherein my soul records
The history of all her secret thoughts:
So smooth he daub’d his vice with show of virtue,
That, his apparent open guilt omitted,
I mean his conversation with Shore’s wife,
He liv’d from all attainder of suspect.

Buck. Well, well, he was the covent’s shelter traitor
That ever liv’d.

Would you imagine, or almost believe,
Were’t not that by great preservation
We live to tell it, that the subtle traitor
This day had plotted, in the council-house
To murder me and my good Lord of Gloucester.

May. Had he done so?

Glou. What! think you we are Turks or infidels?
Or that we would, against the form of law,
Proceed thus rashly in the villain’s death,
But that the extreme peril of the case,
The peace of England, and our person’s safety
Enforc’d us to this execution?

May. Now, fair beseal you! he deserv’d death;
And your good graces both have well proceed
To warn false traitors from the like attempts;
I never look’d for better at his hands,
After he once fell in with Mistress Shore.

Glou. Yet had we not determin’d he should Until your lordship came to see his end;
Which now the loving haste of these our friens
Something against our meaning, have prevent;
Because, my lord, I would have had you hear
The traitor speak, and timorously confess
The manner and the purpose of his treason;
That you might well have signified the same
Unto the citizens, who haply may Misconstrue us in him, and wail his death.

May. But, my good lord, your grace’s we shall serve,
As well as I had seen and heard him speak:
And do not doubt, right noble princes both,
But I’ll acquaint our duteous citizens
With all your just proceedings in this cause.

Glou. And to that end we wish’d your lordship here,
To avoid the censures of the carping world.

Buck. But since you come too late of our intent
Yet witness what you hear we did intend:
And so, my good lord mayor, we bid farewell.

Exeunt Lord May.

Glou. Go after, after, cousin Buckingham.
The citizens are mum, say not a word.

Glow. Touch’d you the bastardy of Edward’s children?

Buck. I did; with his contract with Lady Lucy,
And his contract by deputy in France;
The insatiate greediness of his desires,
And his enforcement of the city wives;
His tyranny for trifles; his own bastardy,
As being got, your father then in France;
And his resemblance, being not like the duke.

Withal I did infer your lineaments,
Being the right idea of your father,
Both in your form and nobleness of mind;
Laid open all your victories in Scotland,
Your discipline in war, wisdom in peace,
Your bounty, virtue, fair humility;
Indeed, left nothing fitting for your purpose
Untouch’d or slightly handled in discourse;
And when mine oratory drew toward end,
I bade them that did love their country’s good Cry ‘God save Richard. England’s royal king!’

Glow. And did they so?

Buck. No, so God help me, they spake not a word;
But, like dumb statues or breathing stones,
Star’d each on other, and look’d deadly pale.
Which when I saw, I reprehended them,
And ask’d the mayor what meant this wifil
silence:
His answer was, the people were not wont
To be spoke to but by the recorder.
Then he was urg’d to tell my tale again:
‘Thussaith the duke, thus hath the duke infer’d’;
But nothing spake in warrant from himself.
When he had done, some followers of mine own,
At lower end of the hall, hurl’d up their caps,
And some ten voices cried, ‘God save King
Richard!’
And thus I took the vantage of those few,
‘Thanks, gentle citizens and friends,’ quoth I;
‘This general applause and cheerful shout
Argues your wisdom and your love to Richard.’
And even here brake off, and came away.

Glow. What tongueless blocks were they?
Would they not speak?

Buck. Will not the mayor then and his brethren come?

Glow. Go, go, up to the leads! the lord mayor knocks.

Exit Gloucester.

Enter the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Citizens.

Welcome, my lord: I dance attendance here;
I think the duke will not be spoke withal.

Enter from the Castle, Catesby.

Now, Catesby! what says your lord to my request?

Cates. He doth entreat your grace, my noble lord.

To visit him to-morrow or next day.
He is within, with two right reverend fathers, 60
Divinely bent to meditation:
And in no worldly suit would he be mov'd,
To draw him from his holy exercise.

Buck. Return, good Catesby, to the gracious duke:
Tell him, myself, the mayor and aldermen,
In deep designs and matter of great moment,
No less importing than our general good,
Are come to have some conference with his grace.

Cates. I'll signify so much unto him straight.

Exit.

Buck. Ah, ah! my lord, this prince is not an Edward,
He is not lolling on a lewd day-bed,
But on his knees at meditation;
Not dallying with a brace of courtezans,
But meditating with two deep divines;
Not sleeping, to engross his idle body,
But praying, to enrich his watchful soul.
Happy were England, would this virtuous prince
Take on his grace the sovereignty thereof:
But, sure, I fear, we shall not win him to it.

May. Marry, God defend his grace should say us nay!

Buck. I fear he will. Here Catesby comes again.

Re-enter CATESBY.

Now, Catesby, what says his grace?

Cates. He wonders to what end you have assembled
Such troops of citizens to come to him,
His grace not being warn'd thereof before:
My lord, he fears you mean no good to him.

Buck. Sorry I am my noble cousin should Suspect me that I mean no good to him:
By heaven, we come to him in perfect love;
And so once more return, and tell his grace.

Exit CATESBY.

When holy and devout religious men
Are at their beads, 'tis much to draw them thence;
So sweet is zealous contemplation.

Enter Gloucester in a gallery above, between Two Bishops. CATESBY returns.

May. See! where his grace stands 'tween two clergymen.

Buck. Two props of virtue for a Christian prince,
To stay him from the fall of vanity;
And, see, a book of prayer in his hand,
True ornament to know a holy man.
Famous Plantagenet, most gracious prince,
Lend favourable ear to our requests,
And pardon us the interruption
Of thy devotion and right Christian zeal.

Glow. My lord, there needs no such apology;
I do beseech your grace to pardon me,
Who, earnest in the service of my God,
Deferr'd the visitation of my friends.
But, leaving this, what is your grace's pleasure?

Buck. Even that, I hope, which pleaseth God above,
And all good men of this ungodly'd isle.

Glow. I do suspect I have done some offence
That seems disgracious in the city's eye;
And that you come to reprehend my ignorance.

Buck. You have, my lord; would it might please your grace
On our entreaties to amend your fault.

Glow. Else wherefore breathe I in a Christian land?

Buck. Know then, it is your fault that resign
The supreme seat, the throne majestic,
The sceptred office of your ancestors,
Your state of fortune and your due of birth
The lineal glory of your royal house,
To the corruption of a blemish'd stock;
Whiles, in the wildness of your sleepy thought
Which here we waken to our country's good
This noble isle doth want her proper limbs;
Her face defac'd with scars of infamy,
Her royal stock graft with ignoble plants,
And almost should'd in the swallowing gulch
Of dark forgetfulness and deep oblivion.
Which to recure we heartily solicit
Your gracious self to take on you the charg
And kingly government of this your land;
Not as protector, Stewart, substitute,
or lowly factor for another's gain;
But as successively from blood to blood,
Your right of birth, your empery, your own.
For this, consorted with the citizens,
Your very worshipful and loving friends,
And by their vehement instigation,
In this just cause come I to move your grace.

Glow. I cannot tell, if to depart in silence
Or bitterly to speak in your reproof,
Best fitteth my degree or your condition:
If not to answer, you might haply think
Tongue-tied ambition, not replying, yielded
To bear the golden yoke of sovereignty,
Which fondly you would here impose on me.
It to reprove you for this suit of yours,
So season'd with your faithful love to me,
Then, on the other side, I check'd my friend
Therefore, to speak, and to avoid the first,
And then, in speaking, not to incur the last,
Definitively thus I answer you.
Your love deserves my thanks; but my daze
Unmeritable shuns your high request.
First, if all obstacles were cut away,
And that my path were even to the crown,
As the ripe revenue and due of birth,
Yet so much is my poverty of spirit,
So mighty and so many my defects,
That I would rather hide me from my greatness,
Being a barb to break no mighty sea,
Than in my greatness covet to be hid,
And in the vapour of my glory smother'd.
But, God be thank'd, there is no need of me
And much I need to help you, were there none;
The royal tree hath left us royal fruit.
Which, mellow'd by the stealing hours of time
Will well become the seat of majesty,
And make, no doubt, us happy by his reign.
On him I lay that you would lay on me,
The right and fortune of his happy stars;
Which God defend that I should vring from him.

Buck. My lord, this argues conscience in my grace;
But the respects thereof are nice and trivial
All circumstances well considered.
You say that Edward is your brother's son:
So say we too, but not by Edward's wife;
For first was he contract to Lady Lucy,
Your mother lives a witness to his vow,
And afterward by substitute betroth'd
To Bona, sister to the King of France.
se both put off, a poor petitioner, are craz'd mother to a many sons, etzy-waning and distressed widow, n in the afternoon of her best days, le prize and purchase of his wanton eye, 'd the pitch and height of his degree base declension and loath'd bigamy, her, in his unlawful bed, he got s Edward, whom our manners call the prince. e bitterly could I expostulate, 191 e that, for reverence to some alive, ve a sparing limit to my tongue. n, good my lord, take to your royal self proffer'd benefit of dignity; of to bless us and the land withal, to draw forth your noble ancestry m the corruption of abusing times, o a linol true-derived course.

lou. Alas! why would you heap this care on me?

ack. If you refuse it, as in love and zeal, th to depose the child, your brother's son; vell we know your tenderness of heart gentle, kind, effeminate remorse, ch we have noted in you to your kindred, equally indeed to all estates; whether you accept our suit or no, r brother's son shall never reign our king; we will plant some other in the throne, he disgrace and downfall of your house: in this resolution here we leave you.

200

ack. Refuse not, mighty lord, this proffer'd love.

lou. O! make them joyful: grant their lawful suit.

Enter BRACKENBURY.

Buck. Who meets us here? my niece Plantagenet, led in the hand of her kind aunt of Gloucester: Now, for my life, she's wand'ring to the Tower, On pure heart's love to greet the tender princes. Daughter, well met.

Anne. God give your graces both A happy and a joyful time of day!

Q. Eliz. As much to you, good sister! whither away?

Anne. No further than the Tower; and, as I guess, Upon the like devotion as yourselves, To gratulate the gentle princes there.

Q. Eliz. Kind sister, thanks: we'll enter all together.

Enter BRACKENBURY.

And, in good time, here the lieutenant comes. Master lieutenant, pray you, by your leave, How doth the prince, and my young son of York?

Brak. Right well, dear madam. By your patience, I may not suffer you to visit them: The king hath strictly charg'd the contrary.

Q. Eliz. The king! who's that?

Brak. I mean the lord protector.

Q. Eliz. The Lord protect him from that kingly title!

Hath he set bounds between their love and me? I am their mother; who shall bar me from them?

Duch. I am their father's mother; I will see them.

Anne. Their aunt I am in law, in love their mother: Then bring me to their sights; I'll bear thy blame And take thy office from thee, on my peril.

Brak. No, madam, no; I may not leave it so: I am bound by oath, and therefore pardon me.

Enter STANLEY.

Stan. Let me but meet you, ladies, one hour hence, And I'll salute your grace of York as mother, And reverend looker-on, of two fair queens.

To ANNE. Come, madam, you must straight to Westminster,

There to be crowned Richard's royal queen.

Q. Eliz. Ah! cut my lace asunder, That my pent heart may have some scope to beat, Or else I swoon with this dead-killing news.

Anne. Despiteful tidings! O! unpleasing news.
KING RICHARD III.

Dor. Be of good cheer: mother, how fares your grace?
Q. Eliz. O Dorset! speak not to me, get thee gone:
Death and destruction dog thee at th' heels:
Thy mother's name is ominous to children.

If thou wilt outstrip death, go cross the seas,
And live with Richmond, from the reach of hell:
Go, tie thee, tie thee from this slaughter-house,
Lest thou increase the number of the dead,
And make me die the thrall of Margaret's curse,
Nor mother, wife, nor England's counted queen.

Stan. Full of wise care is this your counsel, madam.

Take all the swift advantage of the hours;
You shall have letters from me to my son
In your behalf, to meet you on the way:
Be not ta'en tardy by unwise delay.

Duch. O ill-dispensing wind of misery!
O! my accurs'd womb, the bed of death,
A cockatrice hast thou hatch'd to the world,
Whose unavailing eye is murderous.

Stan. Come, madam, come; I in all haste was sent.

Anne. And I with all unwillingness will go.
O! would to God that the inclusive verge
Of golden metal that must round my brow
Were red-hot steel to sear me to the brain.
Anointed let me be with deadly venom;
And die, ere men can say, God save the queen!
Q. Eliz. Go, go, poor soul, I envy not thy glory;
To feed my humour, wish thyself no harm.

Anne. No! why? When he that is my husband now
Came to me, as I follow'd Henry's corse,
When scarce the blood was well wash'd from his hands,
Which issu'd from my other angel husband,
And that dartsaint which then I weeping follow'd;
O! when, I say, I look'd on Richard's face,
This was my wish: 'Be thou, quoth I, accurs'd,
For making me, so young, so old a widow!
And, when thou weald'st, let sorrow haunt thy bed;
And be thy wife, if any be so mad,
More miserable by the life of thee
Than thou hast made me by my dearlord's death!'
Lo! ere I can repeat this curse again,
Within so small a time, my woman's heart
Grossly grew captive to his honey words,
And prov'd the subject of mine own soul's curse:
Which hitherto hath held mine eyes from rest;
For never yet one hour in his bed
Did I enjoy the golden dew of sleep,
But with his timorous dreams was still awak'd.
Besides, he hates me for my father Warwick,
And will, no doubt, shortly be rid of me.

Q. Eliz. Poor heart, adieu! I pity thy complaining.

Anne. No more than with my soul I mourn for yours.

Dor. Farewell! thou woeful welcomer of glory.

Anne. Adieu! poor soul, that tak'st thy leave of it.

Duch. To Dorset. Go thou to Richmond, and good fortune guide thee!

To Anne. Go thou to Richard, and good angels tend thee!

To Queen Elizabeth. Go thou to sanctuary, and good thoughts possess thee!
I to my grave, where peace and rest lie with me!

Eighty odd years of sorrow have I seen,
And each hour's joy work'd with a week of pain:
Q. Eliz. Stay yet; look back with me to the Tower.
Pity, you ancient stones, those tender babbles!
Whom envy hath immur'd within your wall.
Rough cradle for such little pretty ones!
Rude ragged nurse, old sullen playfellow
For tender princes, use my babies well.
So foolish sorrow bids your stones farewell.

Scene II.—The Same. A Room of State.

Flourish of trumpets. Richard, in pomp, crowns BUCKINGHAM, CATESBY, a Page, and Others.
Buck. My gracious sovereign!
He ascends the throne.

Thus high, by thy assistance,
And thy assistance, is King Richard seated
But shall we wear these glories for a day,
Or shall they last, and we rejoice in them?
Buck. Still live they, and for ever let them.
K. Rich. Ah! Buckingham, now do I in the touch.

To try if thou be current gold indeed:
Young Edward lives: think now what I will speak.

Buck. Say on, my loving lord.
Buck. Why, so you are, my thrice-renowned
K. Rich. Hal! am I king? '"Tis so;'

Buck. True, noble prince.

K. Rich. O bitter consequent,
That Edward still should live! 'True, noble prince.'

Cousin, thou wert not wont to be so dull:
Shall I be plain? I wish the bastards dead
And I would have it suddenly perform'd.
What say'st thou now? speak suddenly, boy!
Buck. Your grace may do your pleasure.

K. Rich. Tut, tut! thou art all ice, thy kingdom freezeeth.
Say, have I thy consent that they shall die?
Buck. Give me some little breath, some piteous dear lord,
Before I positively speak in this:
I will resolve you herein presently.

Cates. Aide. The king is angry: see, he gives his lip.

K. Rich. Descends from his throne. I will reverse with iron-witted fools
And unrespective boys: none are for me
That look into me with considerate eyes.
High-reaching Buckingham grows circumcised Boy!

Page. My lord!

K. Rich. Know'st thou not any whom courting gold
Will tempt unto a close exploit of death?

Page. I know a discontented gentleman,
Whose humble means match not his high spirit:
Gold were as good as twenty orators,
And will, no doubt, tempt him to any thing
K. Rich. What is his name?
KING RICHARD III.

Scene I.—Londontown.

Deep-revolving witty Buckingham more shall be the neighbour to my counsel. Thus, he so long held out with me untir'd, I stop he now for breath? well, be it so.

Enter Stanley.

Now, Lord Stanley! what's the news? You, know, my loving lord, Marquess Dorset, as I hear, is fled Richmond, in the parts where he abides.

Rich. Come hither, Catesby: rumour it abroad that Anne my wife is very grievous sick; till take order for her keeping close, sire me out some mean poor gentleman, on I will marry straight to Clarence, daughter:

Boy is foolish, and I fear not him, on how thou dream'st! I say again, give out with that I have our queen is sick: let it out: for it stands me much upon stop all hopes whose growth may damage me.

Exit CATESBY.

I must be married to my brother's daughter, else my kingdom stands on brittle glass. Order her brothers, and then marry her: certain way of gain! But I am in far in blood that sin will perplex on sin: falling pity dwell not in this eye.

Re-enter Page, with Tyrrel.

Hast thy name Tyrrel, and your most obedient subject.

Rich. Art thou, indeed?

Rich. Dar'st thou resolve to kill a friend of mine?

Rich. Why, there thou hast it: two deep enemies, to my rest, and my sweet sleep's disturbers, that they would have thee deal upon. Rich. Let me have open means to come to them, soon I'll rid you from the fear of them.

Rich. Thou sing'st sweet music. Hark, come hither, Tyrell:

by this token: rise, and lend thine ear.

There is no more but so: say it is done, I will love thee, and prefer thee for it. I will dispatch it straightly. Exit.

Re-enter Buckingham.

Tyr. My lord, I have consider'd in my mind late request that you did sound me in.

Rich. Well, let that rest. Dorset is fled to Richmond.

Rich. I hear the news, my lord.

Rich. Stanley, he is your wife's son; well look unto it.

Rich. My lord, I claim the gift, my due by promise, which your honour and your faith is pawn'd; earldom of Hereford and the moveables rich you have promised I shall possess.

K. Rich. Stanley, look to your wife: if she convey

Letters to Richmond, you shall answer it.

Buck. What says your highness to my just request?

K. Rich. I do remember me, Henry the Sixth Did prophesy that Richmond should be king, When Richmond was a little peevish boy.

A king! perhaps—

Buck. My lord!

K. Rich. How chance the prophet could not at that time Have told me, I being by, that I should kill him?

Buck. My lord, your promise for the earldom,— K. Rich. Richmond! When last I was at Exeter, The mayor in courtesy show'd me the castle, and call'd it Rougemont, at which name I started, Because a bard of Ireland told me once I should not live long after I saw Richmond.

Buck. My lord!

K. Rich. Ay, what's o'clock?

Buck. I am thus bold to put your grace in mind Of what you promis'd me.

K. Rich. Well, but what's o'clock?

Buck. Upon the stroke of ten.

K. Rich. Well, let it strike.

Buck. Why let it strike? K. Rich. Because that, like a Jack, thou keep'st the stroke Between thy begging and my meditation. I am not in the giving vein to-day.

Buck. Why, then resolve me whether you will or no.

Buck. And is it thus? repays he my service With such contempt! made I him king for this! O! let me think on Hastings, and be gone To Brecknock, while my fearful head is on. Exit.

Scene III.—The same.

Enter Tyrrel.

Tyr. The tyrannous and bloody act is done; The most arch deed of piteous massacre That ever yet this land was guilty of. Dighton and Forrest, whom I did suborn To do this piece of ruthless butchery, Albeit they were flesh'd villains, bloody dogs, Melted with tenderness and mild compassion, Wept like to children in their deaths' sad story, 'Oh! thus,' quoth Dighton, 'lay the gentle babes,'

'Thus, thus,' quoth Forrest, 'girdling one another

Within their alabaster innocent arms:

Their lips were four red roses on a stalk, And in their summer beauty kiss'd each other. A book of prayers on their pillow lay; Which once,' quoth Forrest, 'almost chang'd my mind;

But O! the devil'—there the villain stopp'd; When Dighton thus told on: 'We smothered The most replenished sweet work of nature, That from the prime creation e'er she fram'd.' Hence both are gone with conscience and remorse;

They could not speak; and so I left them both, To bear this tidings to the bloody king, Enter King Richard.

And here he comes. All health, my sovereign lord!

K. Rich. Kind Tyrrel, am I happy in thy news?

Tyr. If to have done the thing you gave in charge

Beget your happiness, be happy then,

For it is done.

K. Rich. But didst thou see them dead?

Tyr. I did, my lord.

K. Rich. And buried, gentle Tyrrel?

Tyr. The chaplain of the Tower hath buried them;

But how or in what place I do not know.

K. Rich. Come to me, Tyrrel, soon, at after-supper,

When thou shalt tell the process of their death.

Meantime, but think how I may do thee good, And be inheritor of thy desire.

Farewell till then.

Tyr. I humbly take my leave. Exit.

K. Rich. The son of Clarence have I pent up close;

His daughter meanly have I match'd in marriage;
The sons of Edward sleep in Abraham's bosom, And Anne my wife hath bid this world good night.

Now, for I know the Breton Richmond aims

At young Elizabeth, my brother's daughter, And, by that knot, looks proudly on the crown, To her go I, a jolly thriving woer.

Enter Catesby.

Cates. My lord!

K. Rich. Good or bad news, that thou com'st in so bluntly?

Cates. Bad news, my lord: Morton is fled to Richmond;

And Buckingham, back'd with the hardy Welshmen.

Is in the field, and still his power increaseth.

K. Rich. Ely with Richmond troubles me more near

Than Buckingham and his rash-levied strength. Come; I have learn'd that fearful commenting

Is leaden servitor to dull delay;

Delay leads impotent and smail-pac'd beggary: Then fiery expedition be my wing,

Jove's Mercury, and herald for a king.

Go, master my counsel is my shield;

We must be brief when traitors bare the field.

Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—The Same. Before the Palace.

Enter Queen Margaret.

Q. Mar. So, now prosperity begins to mellow

And drop into the rotten mouth of death. Here in these confines silly have I lurk'd To watch the waning of mine enemies. A dire induction am I witness to, And will to France, hoping the consequence Will prove as bitter, black, and tragical. Withdraw thee, wretched Margaret: who comes here?

Enter Queen Elizabeth and the Duchess of York.

Q. Eliz. Ah! my poor princes, ah! my tender babes, My unblown flowers, new-appearing sweets, But fly I upright, who my 52

If yet your gentle souls fly in the air And be not fix'd in doom perpetual, Hover about me with your airy wings, And hear you mother's lamentation.

Q. Mar. Hover about her; say, that right right Hath din'd your infant morn to aged night.

Duch. So many miseries have cra'd my weep That my woe-wearied tongue is still and me Edward Plantagenet, why art thou dead?

Q. Mar. Plantagenet doth quit Plantagen; Edward for Edward pays a dying debt.

Q. Eliz. Wilt thou, O God! fly from such griefs, And throw them in the entrails of the wolf. When didst thou sleep when such a deed was done?

Q. Mar. When holy Harry died, and my son.

Duch. Dead life, blind sight, poor mortal lig

Woe's scene, world's shame, grave's due by usurp'd,

Brief abstract and record of tedious days, Rest thy unrest on England's lawful earth,

Sitting a Unlawfully made drunk with innocent blood

Q. Eliz. Ah! thou would'st as soon as a grave, As thou canst yield a melancholy seat; Then would I hide my bones, not rest them! Ah! who hath any cause to mourn but I?

Sitting down by Q. Mar. If ancient sorrow be most reverent, Give mine the benefit of seniory, And let my griefs frown on the upper hand. If sorrow can admit society, Sitting down with Tell o'er your woes again by viewing mine: I had an Edward, till a Richard kill'd him; I had a Harry, till a Richard kill'd him; Thou hadst an Edward, till a Richard kill'd him; Thou hadst a Richard, till a Richard kill'd him.

Duch. I had a Richard too, and thou didst kill him;

I had a Rutland too, thou holp'st to kill him.

Q. Mar. Thou hadst a Clarence too, a Richard kill'd him.

From forth the kennel of thy womb hath o'er A hell-hound that doth hunt us all to death That dog, that had his teeth before his eye To worry lambs and lap their gentle blood, That foul defacer of God's handiwork, That excellent grand-tyrant of the earth, That reigns in galled eyes of weeping souls. Thy womb let loose, to chase us to our grave. O! upright, just, and true-disposing God, How do I thank thee that this carnal cur Preys on the issue of his mother's body, And makes her pew-fellow with others' maw.

Duch. O! Harry's wife, triumph not in my woe! God witness with me, I have wept for thee.

Q. Mar. Bear with me; I am hungry for revenge. And now I cloy me with beholding it. Thy Edward he is dead, that kill'd my Edward. Thy other Edward dead, to quit my Edward Young York he is but boot, because both the match not the high perfection of my loss: Thy Clarence he is dead that stabb'd my Edward. And the beholders of this frantic play, Duch. If so, then be not tongue-tied: go with me, And in the breath of bitter words let’s smother My damned son, that thy two sweet sons smother’d. A trumpet heard. The trumpet sounds: be copious in exclaims.

Enter King Richard and his Train, marching.

K. Rich. Who intercepts me in my expedition? Duch. O! she that might have intercepted thee By strangling thee in her accursed womb, From all the slaughters, wretch, that thou hast done.

Q. Eliz. Hid’st thou that forehead with a golden crown, Where should be branded, if that right were right, The slaughter of the prince that ow’d that crown, And the dire death of my poor sons and brothers? Tell me, thou villain slave, where are my children? Duch. Thou toad, thou toad, where is thy brother Clarence, And little Ned Plantagenet, his son?

Q. Eliz. Where is the gentle Rivers, Vaughan, Grey?

Duch. Where is kind Hastings?

K. Rich. A flourish, trumpets! strike alarum, drums!

Let not the heavens hear these tell-tale women Rail on the Lord’s anointed. Strike, I say! Flourish. Alarums.

Either be patient, and treat me fair, Or with the clamorous report of war Thus will I drown your exclamations.

Duch. Art thou my son?

K. Rich. Ay, I thank God, my father, and yourself.

Duch. Then patiently hear my impatience.

K. Rich. Madam, I have a touch of your condition, That cannot brook the accent of reproof. Duch. O! let me speak.

K. Rich. Do then; but I’ll not hear.

Duch. I will be mild and gentle in my words. K. Rich. And brief, good mother; for I am in haste.

Duch. Art thou so hasty? I have stay’d for thee, God knows, in torment and in agony.

K. Rich. And came I not at last to comfort you? Duch. No, by the holy rood, thou know’st it well, Thou canst on earth to make the earth my hell. A grievous burden was thy birth to me; Tetchy and wayward was thy infancy; Thy school-days frightful, desperate, wild and furious;

Thy prime of manhood daring, bold and venturesous; Thy age confirm’d, proud, subtle, sly, and bloody, More mild, but yet more harmful, kind in hatred: What comfortable hour canst thou name That ever grace’d me with thy company?

K. Rich. Faith, none, but Humphrey Hour, That call’d your grace

To breakfast once forth of my company. If I be so disgraceful in your eye, Let me march on, and not offend you, madam. Strike up the drum.

Duch. I prithee, hear me speak.

Duch. Hear me a word;

For I shall never speak to thee again.

K. Rich. So!
Duch. Either thou wilt die by God's just ordainance,
From this war thou turn a conqueror,
Or I with grief and extreme age shall perish
And never more behold thy face again.
Therefore take with thee my most grievous curse;
Which, in the day of battle, tire thee more
Than all the complete armour that thou wear'st!
My prayers on the adverse party fight;
And there the little souls of Edward's children
Whisper the spirits of thine enemies
And promise them success and victory,
Bloody thou art, bloody will be thy end;
Shame serves thy life and doth thy death attend. Exit.

Q. Eliz. Though far more cause, yet much less spirit to curse
Abides in me: I say amen to her. Going.
K. Rich. Stay, madam, I must talk a word with you.
Q. Eliz. I have no more sons of the royal blood
For thee to slaughter: for my daughters, Richard,
They shall be praying nuns, not weeping queens;
And therefore level not to hit their lives.
K. Rich. You have a daughter call'd Elizabeth,
Virtuous and fair, royal and gracious.
Q. Eliz. And must she die for this? O! let her live,
And I'll corrupt her manners, stain her beauty;
Slander myself as false to Edward's bed;
Throw over her the veil of infamy:
So she may live unscarr'd of bleeding slaughter,
I will confess she was not Edward's daughter.
K. Rich. Wrong not her birth; she is a royal princess.
Q. Eliz. To save her life, I'll say she is not so.
K. Rich. Her life is safest only in her birth.
Q. Eliz. And only in that safety died her brothers.
K. Rich. Lo! at their birth good stars were opposite.
Q. Eliz. No, to their lives ill friends were contrary.
K. Rich. All unavoidable is the doom of destiny.
Q. Eliz. True, when avoided grace makes destiny.
My babes were destin'd to a fairer death,
If grace had bless'd thee with a fairer life.
K. Rich. You speak as if that I had slain my cousins.
Q. Eliz. Cousins, indeed; and by their uncle cozen'd
Of comfort, kingdom, kindred, freedom, life.
Whose hand soever lanc'd their tender hearts,
Thy heart all indirectly, gave direction:
No doubt the murderous knife was dull and blunt
Till it was whetted on thy stony-hard heart.
To revel in the entrails of my lamb's,
But that still use of grief makes wild grief tame,
My tongue should to thy ears not name my boys
Till that my nails were anchor'd in thine eyes;
And I, in such a desperate bay of death,
Like a poor bark, of sails and tackling reft,
Rush all to pieces on thy rocky bosom.
K. Rich. Madam, so thrive I in my enterprise
And dangerous success of bloody wars,
As I intend more good to you and yours
Than ever you or yours by me were harm'd.
Q. Eliz. What good is cover'd with the face of heaven,
To be discover'd, that can do me good?
K. Rich. The advancement of your child gentle lady.
Q. Eliz. Up to some scaffold, there to their heads?
K. Rich. Unto the dignity and height of for
The high imperial type of this earth's glory.
Q. Eliz. Flutter my sorrow with report of Tell me what state, what dignity, what he,
Canst thou demise to any child of mine?
K. Rich. Even all I have; ay, and myself and Will I withdraw a child of thine;
So in the Lethes of thy angry soul
Thou drown the sad remembrance of those Which thou supposest I have done to thee.
Q. Eliz. Be brief, lest that the process of kindness
Last longer telling than thy kindness' date.
K. Rich. Then know, that from my soul I thy daughter.
Q. Eliz. My daughter's mother thinks it her soul.
K. Rich. What do you think?
Q. Eliz. That thou dost love my daughter's thy soul:
So from thy soul's love didst thou love thy
brothers;
And from my heart's love I do thank thee for K. Rich. Be not so hasty to confound meaning:
I mean, that with my soul I love thy daughter.
And do intend to make her Queen of England.
Q. Eliz. Well then, who dost thou mean it be her king?
K. Rich. Even he that makes her queen:
else should be?
Q. Eliz. What! thou?
K. Rich. Even so: how think you of it?
Q. Eliz. How canst thou woo her?
K. Rich. That I would learn of
As one being best acquainted with her heart
Q. Eliz. And wilt thou learn of me?
K. Rich. Madam, with all my heart
Q. Eliz. Send to her, by the man that her brothers,
A pair of bleeding hearts; thereon engrave
Edward and York; then haply will she see
Therefore present to her, as sometime Marg
Did to thy father, steep'd in Rutland's blood
A handkerchief, which, say to her, did drain
The purple sap from her sweet brothers' bosom;
And bid her wipe her weeping eyes withal.
If this inducement move her not to love,
Send her a letter of thy noble deeds;
Tell her thou mad'st away her uncle Clarence
Hast by the side of rivers; ay, and for her sake,
Mad'st quick conveyance with her good a Anne.
K. Rich. You mock me, madam; this is the way
To win your daughter.
Q. Eliz. There is no other way;
Unless thou could'st put on some other shap
And not be Richard that hath done all this.
K. Rich. Say that I did all this for love of Q. Eliz. Nay, then indeed she cannot cho but hate thee,
Having bought love with such a bloody spo
K. Rich. Look, what is done cannot be amended:
Q. Eliz. As long as hell and Richard likes of it.
K. Rich. Say, I, her sovereign, am her subject low.
Q. Eliz. But she, your subject, loathes such sovereignty.
K. Rich. Be eloquent in my behalf to her.
Q. Eliz. An honest tale speeds best being plainly told.
K. Rich. Then plainly to tell my loving tale.
Q. Eliz. Plain and not honest is too harsh a style.
K. Rich. Your reasons are too shallow and too quick.
Q. Eliz. O, no! my reasons are too deep and dead;
Too deep and dead, poor infants, in their graves.
K. Rich. Harp not on that string, madam; that is past.
Q. Eliz. Harp on it still shall I till heartstrings break.
K. Rich. Now, by my George, my garter, and my crown,—
Q. Eliz. Profan'd, dishonour'd, and the third usurp'd.
K. Rich. I swear—
Q. Eliz. By nothing; for this is no oath. Thy George, profan'd, hath lost his holy honour; Thy garter, blemish'd, pawn'd his knightly virtue; Thy crown, usurp'd, disgrac'd his kingly glory. If something thou wouldest swear to be believe'd, Swear then by something that thou hast not wrong'd.
K. Rich. Now, by the world,—
Q. Eliz. "Tis full of thy foul wrongs.
K. Rich. My father's death,—
Q. Eliz. Thy life hath it dishonour'd.
K. Rich. Then, by myself,—
Q. Eliz. Thyself is self-misus'd.
K. Rich. Why then, by God,—
Q. Eliz. God's wrong is most of all. If thou hast fear'd to break an oath by him, The unity the king my husband made
Thou hast not broken, nor my brothers died:
If thou hast fear'd to break an oath by him, The imperial metal, circling now thy head, Had grac'd the tender temples of my child, And both the princes had been breathing here, Which now, two tender bedfellows for dust, Thy broken faith hath made the prey for worms. What canst thou swear by now?—
K. Rich. The time to come.
Q. Eliz. That thou hast wrong'd in the time o'erpast;
For myself I have many tears to wash
Hereafter time for time past wrong'd by thee. The children live, whose fathers thou hast slaughtered, Ungovern'd youth, to wail it in their age:
The parents live, whose children thou hast butcher'd,
Old barren plants, to wail it with their age. Swear not by time to come; for that thou hast Misus'd ere us'd, by times ill-us'd o'erpast.
K. Rich. As I intend to prosper, and repent, So thrive I in my dangerous affairs
Of hostile arms! myself myself confound! Heaven and fortune bar me happy hours!
Day, yield me not thy light; nor, night, thy rest! Be opposite all planets of good luck To my proceeding, if, with dear heart's love, Immaculate devotion, holy thoughts,
I tender not thy beauteous princely daughter! In her consists my happiness and thine; Without her, follows to myself, and thee, Herself, the land, and many a Christian soul, Death, desolation, ruin, and decay: It cannot be avoided but by this: It will not be avoided but by this. Therefore, good mother, I must call you so, Be the attorney of my love to her: Plead what I will be, not what I have been; Not my deserts, but what I will deserve: Urge the necessity and state of times, And be not peevish-fond in great designs.

K. Rich. But in your daughter’s womb I bury them:

Where, in that nest of spicery, they will breed
Selves of themselves to your recomforture.

Q. Eliz. Shall I win my daughter to thy will?

K. Rich. And be a happy mother by the deed.

Q. Eliz. I go. Write to me very shortly,

And you shall understand from me her mind. 430

K. Rich. Bear her my true love’s kiss; and so farewell. Exit Queen Elizabeth.

Relenting fool, and shallow changing woman!

Enter Ratcliff; Catesby following.

How now! what news?

Rat. Most mighty sovereign, on the western coast
Rideth a puissant navy; to the shores
Throng many doubtful hollow-hearted friends,
Unarm’d, and unresolv’d to beat them back.
’Tis thought that Richmond is their admiral;
And there they hurl, expecting but the aid
Of Buckingham to welcome them ashore. 440

K. Rich. Some light-foot friend post to the Duke of Norfolk:

Ratcliff, thyself, or Catesby; where is he?

Cates. Here, my good lord.

Cates. I will, my lord, with all convenient haste.

K. Rich. Ratcliff, come hither. Post to Salisbury;

When thou com’st thither, To CATESBY. Dull, unmindful villain,

Why stay’st thou here, and go’st not to the duke?

Cates. First, mighty liege, tell me your highness’ pleasure,

What from your grace I shall deliver to him.

K. Rich. O! true, good Catesby: bid him

levy straight

The greatest strength and power he can make,

And meet me suddenly at Salisbury.

Cates. I go. Exit.

Rat. What, may it please you, shall I do at Salisbury?

K. Rich. Why, what wouldst thou do there before I go?

Rat. Your highness told me I should post before.

Enter STANLEY.

K. Rich. My mind is chang’d. Stanley, what news with you?

Stan. None good, my liege, to please you with the hearing;

Nor none so bad but well may be reported.

What needst thou run so many miles about,

When thou may’st tell thy tale the nearest way?

Once more, what news?

Stan. Richmond is on the sea.

K. Rich. There let him sink, and be the sea on him!

White-liver’d runagate! what doth he there

Stan. I know not, mighty sovereign, but bygins,

K. Rich. Well, as you guess?

Stan. Stirr’d up by Dorset, Buckingham & Morton,

He makes for England, here to claim the crown.

K. Rich. Is the chair empty? is the seat unsway’d?

Is the king dead? the empire unpossess’d?

What heir of York is there alive but we?

And who is England’s king but great York’s heir?

Then, tell me, what makes he upon the seas

Stan. Unless for that, my liege, I cannot guess,

K. Rich. Unless for that he comes to be your liege,

You cannot guess wherefore the Welsh come.

Thou wilt revolt and fly to him I fear.

Stan. No, my good lord; therefore mistrust me not.

K. Rich. Where is the power then to beat him back?

Where be thy tenants and thy followers?

Are they not now upon the western shore,

Safe-conducting the rebels from their ships?

Stan. No, my good lord, my friends are in the north.

K. Rich. Cold friends to me: what do they in the north

When they should serve their sovereign in the west?

Stan. They have not been commanded, mighty king.

Pleaseth your majesty to give me leave,

I’ll muster up my friends, and meet your grace,

Where and what time your majesty shall please.

K. Rich. Ay, ay, thou would’st be gone to join with Richmond:

But I’ll not trust thee.

Stan. Most mighty sovereign,

You have no cause to hold my friendship doubt,

I never was nor never will be false.

K. Rich. Go then and muster men: but let me

Yourson, George Stanley: look your heart be firm

Or else his head’s assurance is but frail.

Stan. So deal with him as I prove true to you.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My gracious sovereign, now in Devonshire

As I by friends am well advertised,

Sir Edward Courtney, and the haughty prelate

Bishop of Exeter, his brother there,

With many more confederates, are in arms.

Enter another Messenger.

Second Mess. In Kent, my liege, the Guildford

are in arms;

And every hour more competitors

Flock to the rebels, and their power grows strer
Enter a third Messenger.

ward Mess. My lord, the army of great Buckingham—Rich. Out on ye, owls! nothing but songs of death!
ward Mess. The news I have to tell your majesty is that by sudden floods and fall of waters, Sir Richard's army is dispersed and scattered; he himself wandered away alone, man knows whither.
Rich. I cry thee mercy: it is my purse to cure that blow of thine. I any well-advised friend proclaimed and to him that brings the traitor in? ward Mess. Such proclamation hath been made, my liege.

Enter a Fourth Messenger.

ward Mess. Sir Thomas Lovell and Lord Marques Dorset, said, my liege, in Yorkshire are in arms: this good comfort bring I to your highness, Breton navy is dispersed 'by tempests'.
mund, in Dorsetshire, sent out a boat to the shore to ask those on the banks "well were his assistants, yea or no; "answer'd him, they came from Buckingham at his party; he, mistrusting them, "sail and made away for Brittany.
Rich. March on, march on, since we are up in arms; to fight with foreign enemies, to beat down these rebels here at home.

Re-enter CATESBY.

jes. My liege, the Duke of Buckingham is taken;
"the best news: that the Earl of Richmond "with a mighty power landed at Milford; wider news, but yet they must be told.
Rich. Away towards Salisbury! while we reason here "battle might be won and lost.
"take order Buckingham be brought to Salisbury; the rest march on with me.

Flourish. Exeunt.

SCENE V.—The Same. A Room in Lord STANLEY's House.

Enter STANLEY and Sir CHRISTOPHER URSWICK.

an. Sir Christopher, tell Richmond this from me: "in the sty of the most bloody boar "George Stanley is franks'd up in hold; "recoil, off goes young George's head;
"fear of that holds off my present aid. "get thee gone: commend me to thy lord, and, say, that the queen hath heartily consented "should espouse Elizabeth her daughter. "tell me, where is princely Richmond now? "At Pembroke or at Ha'ford-west, in Wales.

an. What men of name resort to him?

risi. Sir Walter Herbert, a renowned soldier, Gilbert Talbot, Sir William Stanley, lord, redoubted Pembroke, Sir James Blunt, And Rice ap Thomas, with a valiant crew; And many other of great name and worth: And towards London do they bend their power, If by the way they be not fought withal.
Stan. Well, hec thee to thy lord; I kiss his hand; These letters will resolve him of my mind. Farewell.

EXEUNT.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Salisbury. An open Place.
Enter the Sheriff and Guard, with BUCKINGHAM, led to execution.

Buck. Will not King Richard let me speak with him?
Sher. No, my good lord; therefore be patient.
Buck. Hastings, and Edward's children, Grey, and Rivers, Holy King Henry, and thy fair son Edward, Vaughan, and all that have mis-carried by underworld corrupted foul injustice, If that your moody discontented souls Do through the clouds behold this present hour, Even for revenge mock my destruction!
This is All-Souls' day, fellows, is it not?
Sher. It is, my lord.
Buck. Why, then All-Souls' day is my body's doomsday.
This is the day that, in King Edward's time, I wish'd might fall on me, when I was found False to his children or his wife's allies;
This is the day wherein I wish'd to fall By the false faith of him whom most I trusted; This, this All-Souls' day to my fearful soul Is the determin'd respite of my wrongs.
That high All-Seer which I dallied with Hath turn'd my feigned prayer on my head, And given in earnest what I begg'd in jest. Thus doth he force the swords of wicked men To turn their points on their masters' bosoms: Thus Margaret's curse falls heavy on my neck: 'When he,' quoth she, 'shall split thy heart with sorrow, Remember Margaret was a prophetess.' Come, lead me, officers, to the block of shame; Wrong hath but wrong, and blame the due of blame.

Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A Plain near Tamworth.
Enter, with drum and colours, RICHMOND, OXFORD, Sir JAMES BLUNT, Sir WALTER HERBERT, and Others, with Forces, marching.
Richm. Fellows in arms, and my most loving friends, Bruis'd underneath the yoke of tyranny, Thus far into the bowels of the land Have we march'd on without impediment: And here receive we from our father Stanley Lines of fair comfort and encouragement. The wretched, bloody, and usurping boar, That spoil'd your summer fields and fruitful vines, Swills your warm blood like wash, and makes his trough In your embowell'd bosoms, this foul swine Lies now even in the centre of this isle, Near to the town of Leicester, as we learn: From Tamworth this is but one day's march, In God's name, cheerly on, courageous friends.
To reap the harvest of perpetual peace
By this one bloody trial of sharp war.
Oxf. Every man's conscience is a thousand men,
To fight against this guilty homicide.
Herb. I doubt not but his friends will turn to us.
Blunt. He hath no friends but what are friends for fear.
Which in his dearest need will fly from him.
Richm. All for our vantage: then, in God's name, march.
True hope is swift, and flies with swallow's wings;
Kings it makes gods, and meaner creatures kings.

Exeunt.

Enter, to his tent, King Richard, Norfolk, Ratcliffe, and Catesby.

K. Rich. What is 't o'clock?
Cates. It's supper-time, my lord.

It's nine o'clock.

K. Rich. I will not sup to-night.
Give me some ink and paper.
What, is my beaver easier than it was,
And all my armour laid into my tent?
Cates. It is, my liege; and all things are readiness.

K. Rich. Good Norfolk, he thec to thy charge.
Use careful watch; choose trusty sentinels.
Nor. I go, my lord.

K. Rich. Stir with the lark to-morrow, get Norfolk.

Nor. I warrant you, my lord.

K. Rich. Ratcliffe!

Rat. My lord!

K. Rich. Send out a pursuivant at
To Stanley's regiment; bid him bring his person,
Before sun-rising, lest his son George fall
Into the blind cave of eternal night.
Fill me a bowl of wine. Give me a watch.
Saddle white Surrey for the field to-morrow.
Look that my staves be sound, and not too soft Ratcliff!

Rat. My lord!

K. Rich. Saw'st thou the melancholy
Northumberland?

Rat. Thomas the Earl of Surrey, and him
Much about cock-shot time, from troop to troop
Went through the army, cheering up the soldiery.

K. Rich. So; I am satisfied. Give me a bowl of wine:
I have not that alacrity of spirit,
Nor cheer of mind, that I was wont to have.
Set it down. Is ink and paper ready?
Rat. It is, my lord.

K. Rich. Bid my guard watch; leave me.
Ratcliff, about the mid of night come to my tent. And help to arm me. Leave me, I say.

King Richard retires into his tent. Exeunt.

RICHMOND'S tent opens, and discovers him a his Officers, etc.

Enter STANLEY.

Stan. Fortune and victory sit on thy helm.
Richm. All comfort that the dark night afford
Be to thy person, noble father-in-law!
Tell me, how fares our loving mother?

Stan. I, by attorney, bless thee from thy mother: Who prays continually for Richard's good
So much for that. The silent hours steal on
And flaky darkness breaks within the east.
In brief, for so the season bids us be,
Prepare thy battle early in the morning,
And put thy fortune to the arbitration
Of bloody strokes and mortal-staring war.
I, as I may, that which I would I cannot,
Let fall thy lance: despair, and die!

All. To Richmond. Awake, and think our wrongs in Richard's bosom
Will conquer him: awake, and win the day!

The Ghost of Hastings rises.

Ghost. To King Richard. Bloody and guilty, guilty awake;
And in a bloody battle end thy days!
Think on Lord Hastings: despair, and die! 150
To Richmond. Quiet untroubled soul, awake, awake!
Arm, fight, and conquer, for fair England's sake!

The Ghosts of the two young Princes rise.

Ghosts. To King Richard. Dream on thy cousins smother'd in the Tower:
Let us be lead within thy bosom, Richard,
And weigh thee down to ruin, shame, and death!
Thy nephews' souls bid thee despair, and die!
To Richmond. Sleep, Richard, sleep in peace, and
And wise in joy;
Good angels guard thee from the boar's annoy!
Live, and beget a happy race of kings!
Edward's unhappy sons do bid thee flourish. 160

The Ghost of Lady Anne rises.

Ghost. To King Richard. Richard, thy wife, that wretched Anne thy wife,
That never slept a quiet hour with thee,
Now fills thy sleep with perturbations:
To-morrow in the battle think on me,
And fall thy edgeless sword: despair, and die!
To Richmond. Thou, quiet soul, sleep thou a quiet sleep;
Dream of success and happy victory!
Thy adversary's wife doth pray for thee.

The Ghost of Buckingham rises.

Ghost. To King Richard. The first was I that helped thee to the crown;
The last was I that felt thy tyranny.
O! in the battle think on Buckingham,
And die in terror of thy guiltiness.
Dream on, dream on, of bloody deeds and death:
Painting, despair; despairing; yield thy breath!
To Richmond. I died for hope ere I could lend thee aid:
But cheer thy heart, and be thou not dismay'd:
God and good angels fight on Richmond's side;
And Richard falls in height of all his pride.

The Ghosts vanish. King Richard starts out of his dream.

K. Rich. Give me another horse! bind up my wounds!
Have mercy, Jesu! Soft! I did but dream. 130
O! coward conscience, how dost thou afflicte me.
The lights burn blue. It is now dead midnight.
Cold fearful drops stand on my trembling flesh.
What! do I fear myself? there's none else by:
Richard loves Richard; that is, I am I.
Is there a murderer here? No. Yes; I am:
Then fly: what! from myself? Great reason why;
Lest I revenge. What! myself upon myself?
Alack! I love myself. Wherefore? for any good
That I myself have done unto myself?
O! no: alas! I rather hate myself
For hateful deeds committed by myself.
I am a villain. Yet I lie: I am not.
Fool, of thyself speak well: fool, do not flatter.
My conscience hath a thousand several tongues,
And every tongue brings in a several tale,
And every tale condemns me for a villain.
Perjury, perjury, in the high'st degree;
Murder, stern murder, in the dir'st degree;
All several sins, all us’d in each degree,
Throng to the bar, crying all, ‘Guilty! guilty!’
I shall despair. There is no creature loves me;
And if I die, no soul shall pity me:
Nay, wherefore should they, since that I myself
Find in myself no pity to myself?
Methought the souls of all that I had murder’d
Came to my tent; and every one did threat
To-morrow’s vengeance on the head of Richard.

Enter RATCLIFF.

Rat. My lord!
K. Rich. ‘Zounds! who is there? 219
Rat. Ratcliff, my lord; ’tis I. The early village cock
Hath twice done salutation to the morn;
Your friends are up, and buckle on their armour.
K. Rich. O Ratcliff! I have dream’d a fearful dream.
What thinkst thou, will our friends prove all true?
Rat. No doubt, my lord.
K. Rich. O Ratcliff! I fear, I fear.—
Rat. Nay, good my lord, beno’t afraid of shadows.
K. Rich. By the apostle Paul, shadows to-night
Have struck more terror to the soul of Richard
Than can the substance of ten thousand soldiers
Armed in proof, and led by shallow Richmond.
It is not yet near day. Come, go with me; 222
Under our tents I’ll play the caves-dropper,
To hear if any mean to shrink from me. Exeunt.

RICHMOND wakes. Enter OXFORD and Others.

Lords. Good morrow, Richmond!
Richm. Cry mercy, lords and watchful gentlemen,
That you have ta’en a tardy sluggard here.
Lords. How have you slept, my lord?
Richm. The sweetest sleep, and fairest-boding dreams
That ever enter’d in a drowsy head,
Have I since your departure had, my lords, Methought their souls, whose bodies Richard murder’d,
Came to my tent and cried on victory:
I promise you my heart is very jocund
In the remembrance of so fair a dream.
How far into the morning is it, lords?
Lords. Upon the stroke of four.
Richm. Why, then ’tis time to arm and give direction.

His oration to his soldiers.

More than I have said, loving countrymen,
The leisure and enforcement of the time
Forbids to dwell on; yet remember this,
God and our good cause fight upon our side;
The prayers of holy saints and wronged souls,
Like high-rear’d bulwarks, stand before our faces;
Richard except, those whom we fight against
Had rather have us win than him they follow.
For what is he they follow? truly, gentlemen,
A bloody tyrant and a homicide;
One rais’d in blood, and one in blood establish’d;
One that made means to come by what he hath,
And slaughter’d those that were the means to help him;

A base foul stone, made precious by the foil
Of England’s chair, where he is falsely set;
One that hath ever been God’s enemy.
Then, if you fight against God’s enemy,
God will in justice ward you as his soldiers;
If you do sweat to put a tyrant down,
You sleep in peace, the tyrant being slain;
If you do fight against your country’s foes,
Your country’s fat shall pay your pains the hill.
If you do fight in safeguard of your wives,
Your wives shall welcome home the conqueror.
Then, in the name of God and all these rights Advance your standards, draw your will swords.

For me, the ransom of my bold attempt
Shall be this cold corpse on the earth’s cold face;
But if I thrive, the gain of my attempt
The least of you shall share his part thereof.
Sound, drums and trumpets, boldly and che-fully;
God and Saint George! Richmond and victo-

Exeunt.

Re-enter King Richard, RATCLIFF, Attendance
and Forces.

K. Rich. What said Northumberland as touing Richmond?
Rat. That he was never trained up in arms.
K. Rich. He said the truth: and what is Surrey then?
Rat. He smil’d and said, ‘The better for purpose.’
K. Rich. He was! the right; and so indeed.

Clock strikes.

Tell the clock there. Give me a calendar.
Who saw the sun to-day?
Rat. Not I, my lord.
K. Rich. Then he disdains to shine; for the book
He should have brav’d the east an hour ago:
A black day will it be to somebody.
Ratcliff!
Rat. My lord!
K. Rich. The sun will not be seen to-day.
The sky doth frown and pour upon our army
I would these dewy tears were from the groun d Not shine to-day! Why, what is that to me
More than to Richmond? for the self-same beat
That frowns on me looks sadly upon him.

Enter NORFOLK.

Nor. Arm, arm, my lord! the foe vaunts
the field.
K. Rich. Come, bustle, bustle; carapinhorse.

Call up Lord Stanley, bid him bring his pow-
I will lead forth my soldiers to the plain,
And thus my battle shall be ordered:
My foreward shall be drawn out all in length
Consisting equally of horse and foot;
Our archers shall be placed in the midst:
John Duke of Norfolk, Thomas Earl of Surr
Shall have the leading of this foot and horse.
They thus directed, we will follow
In the main battle, whose prudence or elsei
Shall be well winged with our chiefest horse.
This, and Saint George to boot! What think thou, Norfolk?
For. A good direction, war-like sovereign, I find on my tent this morning.

Giving a scroll.

Rich. Jockey of Norfolk, be not too bold; For Dickon thy master is bought and sold.

ning devised by the enemy, gentlemen; every man to his charge: not our babbling dreams affright our souls; science is but a word that cowards use; an is'ld at first to keep the strong in awe: strong arms be our conscience, swords our law.

ch on, join bravely, let us to 't pell-mell; to heaven, then hand in hand to hell.

His oration to his army.

at shall I say more than I have inferr'd? member whom you are to cope withal; ort of vagabonds, rascals, and runaways, num of Bretons and base lackey peasants, on their o'er-cloyed country vomits forth desperate adventures and assur'd destruction. sleeping safe, they bring to you unrest; having lands, and bless'd with beauteous wives, y would restrain the one, distain the other. I who doth lead them but a paltry fellow, g kept in Bretagne at our mother's cost! ilksope, one that never in his life so much cold as over shoes in snow? 'tis whip these stragglers o'er the seas again; hence these overweening rags of France, so famish'd beggars, weary of their lives; but for dreaming on this fond exploit, want of means, poor rats, had hang'd themselves.

be conquer'd, let men conquer us, not these bastard Bretons, whom our fathers in their own land beaten, bobbd, and thump'd, in record, left them the heirs of shame.

these enjoy our lands? lie with our wives? th' our daughters? Drum afar off.

Hark! I hear their drum. ht, gentlemen of England! fight, bold yeomen! w, archers, draw your arrows to the head! r your proud horses hard, and ride in blood; az the welkin with your broken staves!

Enter a Messenger.

ays Lord Stanley? will he bring his power? fess. My lord, he doth deny to come.

Rich. Off with his son George's head! for, My lord, the enemy is pass'd the marsh: the battle let George Stanley die.

Rich. A thousand hearts are great within my bosom: vance our standards! set upon our foes! ancient word of courage, fair Saint George, pire us with the spleen of fiery dragons! on them! Victory sits on our helmets. Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Another Part of the Field.

alarum. Excursions. Enter NORFOLK and FORCES fighting; to him CATESBY.

ates. Rescue, my Lord of Norfolk! rescue, rescue!

king enacts more wonders than a man, Daring an opposite to every danger:
His horse is slain, and all on foot he fights,
Seeking for Richmond in the throat of death.
Rescue, fair lord, or else the day is lost!

alarum. Enter King RICHARD.

K. Rich. A horse! a horse! my kingdom for a horse!

Cates. Withdraw, my lord; I'll help you to a horse.

K. Rich. Slave! I have set my life upon a cast,
And I will stand the hazard of the die.
I think there be six Richmonds in the field;
Five have I slain to-day instead of him.
A horse! a horse! my kingdom for a horse!

Exeunt.

alarums. Enter King RICHARD and RICHMOND; and exeunt fighting. Retreat and flourish. Re-enter RICHMOND, STANLEY bearing the crown, with divers other Lords, and Forces.

Richm. God and your arms be prais'd, victorious friends; The day is ours, the bloody dog is dead.

Stan. Courageous Richmond, well hast thou acquit thee.

Lo! here, this long-usurped royalty From the dead temples of this bloody wretch Have I pluck'd off, to grace thy brows withal; Wear it, enjoy it, and make much of it.

Richm. Great God of heaven, say amen to all! But tell me, is young George Stanley living?

Stan. He is, my lord, and safe in Leicester town, Whither, if it please you, we may now withdraw us.

Richm. What men of name are slain on either side?

Richm. Inter their bodies as becomes their births:
Proclaim a pardon to the soldiers fled That in submission will return to us; And then, as we have ten' the sacrament, We will unite the white rose and the red: Smile heaven upon this fair conjunction, That long hath frown'd upon their enmity! What traitor bears me, and says not amen? England hath long been mad, and scar'd herself; The brother blindly shed the brother's blood, The father rashly slaughter'd his own son, The son, compell'd, been butcher to the sire: All this divided York and Lancaster Divided in their dire division, O! now, let Richmond and Elizabeth, The true successors of each royal house, By God's fair ordinance conjoin together; And let their heirs, God, if they will be so, Enrich the time to come with smooth-face'd peace, With smiling plenty, and fair prosperous days! Abate the edge of traitors, gracious lord, That would reduce these bloody days again, And make poor England weep in streams of blood! Let them not live to taste this land's increase, That would with treason wound this fair land's peace!

Now civil wounds are stopp'd, peace lives again: That she may long live here, God say amen! Exeunt.

PROLOGUE.
I come no more to make you laugh: things now,
That bear a weighty and a serious brow,
Sad, high, and working, full of state and woe,
Such noble scenes as draw the eye to flow,
We now present. Those that can pity, here
May, if they think it well, let fall a tear;
The subject will deserve it. Such as give Their money out of hope they may believe,
May here find truth too: Those that come to see
Only a show or two, and so agree
The play may pass, if they be still and willing,
I'll undertake may see away their shilling Richly in two short hours. Only they
That come to hear a merry, bawdy play,
A noise of targets, or to see a fellow
In a long woollen coat guarded with yellow,
Will be deceived; for, gentle hearers, know,
To rank our chosen truth with such a show
As foot and fight is, beside forfeiting
Our own brains, and the opinion that we bring,
To make that only true we now intend,
Will leave us never an understanding friend.

Therefore, for goodness' sake, and as you are to
The first and happiest hearers of the town,
Be sad, as we would make ye; think ye see
The very persons of our noble story
As they were living: think ye see them great,
And follow'd with the general throng and sweat
Of thousand friends; then in a moment see
How soon this mightiness meets misery:
And if you can be merry then, I'll say
A man may weep upon his wedding-day.

ACT I.

Enter the Duke of Norfolk at one door; at other, the Duke of Buckingham and the Earl of Abergavenny.

Buck. Good morrow, and well met. How ha' ye done
Since last we saw in France?
Nur. I thank your gra
An untimely ague
'd me a prisoner in my chamber when suns of glory, those two lights of men, in the vale of Andren.

"Twixt Guynes and Arde: then present, saw them salute on horseback; did them, when they lighted, how they clung their embracement, as they grew together; had they, what four thron'd ones could have weigh'd a compounded one?

All the whole time s my chamber's prisoner.

Then you lost view of earthly glory: men might say, this time pomp was single, but now married above itself. Each following day me the next day's master, till the last a former wonders its. To-day the French linquant, all in gold, like heathen gods, e down the English; and to-morrow they Britain India: every man that stood
'd like a mine. Their dwarfish pages were scrubins, all gilt: the madams too, as'd to toil, did almost sweat to bear pride upon them, that their very labour to them as a painting. Now this masque cried incomparable; and the ensuing night
's a fool and beggar. The two kings, in lustre, were now best, now worst, presence did present them; him in eye, 30 him in praise; and, being present both, said they saw but one; and no discern wag his tongue in censure. When these sun's, 40
they phrase 'em, by their heralds'challenge'd able spirits to arms, they did perform thought's compass; that former fabulous now seen possible enough, got credit,
Bevis was believ'd. 50

O! you go far.
As I belong to worship, and affect honour honesty, the tract of every thing by a good discoverer lose some life, haction's self was tongue to. All was royal;
re disposing of it nought rebell'd, gave each thing view; the office did ctly his full function.

Who did guide,
an, who set the body and the limbs
as great sport together, as you guess?
One, certes, that promises no element ch a business.

I pray you, who, my lord?
All this was order'd by the good discretion right reverend Cardinal of York.
The devil speed him! no man's pie is freed his ambitious finger. What had he in these fierce vanities? I wonder such a keech can with his very bulk up the rays o' the beneficial sun, keep it from the earth.

Surely, sir,
e's in him stuff that puts him to these ends;
being not prop'd by ancestry, whose grace ks successors their way, nor call'd upon high feats done to the crown; neither allied

To eminent assistants; but, spider-like,
Out of his self-drawing web, he gives us note,
The force of his own merit makes his way;
A gift that heaven gives for him, which buys
A place next to the king.

I cannot tell
What heaven hath given him: let some graver
Pierce into that; but I can see his pride Peep through each part of him: whence has he that?
If not from hell, the devil is a niggard,
Or has given all before, and he begins
A new hell in himself.

Why the devil,
Upon this French going-out, took he upon him,
Without the privity o' the king, to appoint Who should attend on him! He makes up the file
Of all the gentry; for the most part such
To whom as great a charge as little honour
He meant to lay upon: and his own letter,
The honourable board of council out,
Most fetch him in the papers.

I do know
Kinsmen of mine, three at the least, that have
By this so sicken'd their estates, that never
They shall abound as formerly.

O! many
Have broke their backs with laying manors on'em
For this great journey. What did this vanity
But minister communication of
A most poor issue?

Grievingly I think,
The peace between the French and us not values
The cost that did conclude it.

Every man,
After the hideous storm that follow'd, was
A thing inspir'd; and, not consulting, broke
Into a general prophecy: That this tempest,
Dashing the garment of this peace, abode
The sudden breach on't.

Which is budded out;
For France hath flaw'd the league, and hath attach'd
Our merchants' goods at Bourdeaux.

The ambassador is silenc'd?
Is it therefore

The state takes notice of the private difference
Betwixt you and the cardinal. I advise you,
And take it from a heart that wishes towards
you
Honour and plenteous safety, that you read
The cardinal's malice and his potency
Together; to consider further that
What his high hatred would effect wants not
A minister in his power. You know his nature,
That he's revengeful; and I know his sword
Hath a sharp edge: it's long, and 't may be said,
It reaches far; and where 't will not extend, in Thither he darts it. Bosom up my counsel, You'll find it wholesome. Lo! where comes that rock
That I advise your shunning.
Enter Cardinal Wolsey, the person borne before him, certain of the Guards, and two Secretaries with papers. The Cardinal in his passage fixed his eye on Buckingham, and Buckingham on him, both full of disdain.

Wol. The Duke of Buckingham's surveyor, ha? Where's his examination?

First Secr. Here, so please you.

Wol. Is he in person ready?

First Secr. Ay, please your grace.

Wol. Well, we shall then know more; and Buckingham Shall lessen this big look.

Exeunt Wolsey and Train.

Buck. This butcher's cur is venom-mouth'd, and I Have not the power to muzzle him; therefore best Not wake him in his slumber. A beggar's book Outworths a noble's blood.

Nor. What! are you chaf'd? Ask God for temperance; that's the appliance Only Which your disease requires.

Buck. I read in's looks Matter against me; and his eye revil'd Me, as his abject object: at this instant He bores me with some trick: he's gone to the king; I'll follow and outstare him.

Nor. Stay, my lord, And let your reason with your choleric question What 'tis you go about. To climb steep hills Requires slow pace at first: anger is like A full-hot horse, who being allow'd his way, Self-mettle tires him. Not a man in England Can advise me like you: be to yourself As you would to your friend.

Buck. I'll to the king; And from a mouth of honour quite cry down This Ipswich fellow's insolence, or proclaim There's difference in no persons.

Nor. Be advis'd; Heat not a furnace for your foe so hot That it do singe yourself. We may outrun By violent swiftness that which we run at, And lose by overrunning. Know you not, The fire that mounts the liquor till 't run o'er, In seeming to augment it wastes it? Be advis'd: I say again, there is no English soul More strong to direct you than yourself, If with the sap of reason you would quench, Or but allay, the fire of passion.

Buck. Sir, I am thankful to you, and I'll go along By your prescription; but this top-proud fellow, Whom from the flow of gull I name not, but From sincere motions, by intelligence, And proofs as clear as fountains in July, when We see each grain of gravel, I do know To be corrupt and treasonous.

Nor. Say not 'treasonous.' Buck. To the king I'll say 't, and make my warrant as strong As shore of rock. Attend. This holy fox, Or wolf, or both, for he is equal ravenous As he is subtle, and as prone to mischief As able to perform 't, his mind and place Infecting one another, yea, reciprocally, Only to show his pomp as well in France As here at home, suggests the king our master To this last costly treaty, the interview, That swallow'd so much treasure, and like a Did break i' the rinsing.

Nor. Faith, and so it is.

Buck. Pray give me favour, sir. This can cardinal

The articles o' the combination drew As himself pleas'd; and they were ratified As he cried 'Thus let be,' to as much end As give a crutch to the dead. But our cardinal

Has done this, and 'tis well; for worthy Wol. Who cannot err, he did it. Now this follow, Which, as I take it, is a kind of puppy To the old dam, treason, Charles the emper. Under pretence to see the queen his aunt, For 'twas indeed his colour, but he came To whisper Wolsey, here makes visitation: His fears were, that the interview betwixt England and France might, through their alliance, Breed him some prejudice; for from this latter Peep'd harms that menace'd him. He privy Deals with our cardinal, and, as I trow, Which I do well; for I am sure the emper. Paid ere he promis'd; whereby his suit granted Ere it was ask'd; but when the way was nought, And pav'd with gold, the emperor thus desièd That he would please to alter the king's co-ope And break the foresaid peace. Let the king's head As soon he shall by me, that thus the card. Does buy and sell his honour as he pleases, And for his own advantage.

Nor. I am sorry To hear this of him; and could wish he were Something mistaken in 't.

Buck. No, not a syllab. I do pronounce him in that very shape He shall appear in proof.

Enter BRANDON; a Sergeant-at-Arms before and two or three of the Guard.

Bran. Your office, sergeant; execute it.

Serg. My lord the Duke of Buckingham, and Earl Of Hereford, Stafford, and Northampton, I arrest thee of high treason, in the name Of our most sovereign king.

Buck. Lo you, my lord, The net has fall'n upon me! I shall perish Under device and practice.

Bran. I am sorry To see you ta'en from liberty, to look on The business present. 'Tis his highness' plea You shall to the Tower.

Buck. It will help me not To plead mine innocence, for that dye is o'er Which makes my whitest part black. The news of heaven Be done in this and all things! I obey. O! my Lord Abergavenny, fare you well. Bran. Nay, he must bear you company. ABERGAVENNY. The king Is pleas'd you shall to the Tower, till you know How he determines further.

Aber. As the duke The will of heaven be done, and the kirk's pleasure By me obey'd!

Bran. Here is a warrant from Scene II.—The Council-chamber.

Enter the King leaning on the Cardinal’s shoulder, the Lords of the Council, Sir Thomas Lovell, Officers, and Attendants. A Cardinal places himself under the King’s right side.

K. Hen. My life itself, and the best heart of it, asks you for this great care: I stood the level full-charg’d confederacy, and give thanks you that shok’d it. Let be call’d before us a gentleman of Buckingham’s; in person hear him his confessions justify; point by point the treasons of his master hall again relate.

Kath. Nay, we must longer kneel: I am a sitor.

K. Hen. Arise, and take place by us: half our suit name to us; you have half our power; ther moiety, ere you ask, is given; at your will, and take it.

Kath. Thank your majesty, you would love yourself, and in that love unconsider’d leave your honour, nor dignity of your office, is the point your petition. The spinsters, carders, fullers, weavers, who, Unfit for other life, compell’d by hunger And lack of other means, in desperate manner Daring the event to the teeth, are all in uproar, And danger serves among them.

K. Hen. Taxation! Wherein? and what taxation? My lord cardinal, You that are blam’d for it alike with us, Know you of this taxation?

Wol. Please you, sir, I know but of a single part in aught Pertains to the state; and front but in that file Where others tell steps with me. You know no more than others; but you frame Things that are known alike; which are not wholesome To those which would not know them, and yet must Perforce be their acquaintance. These exactions, Whereof my sovereign would have note, they are Most pestilent to the hearing; and to bear ’em, The back is sacrifice to the load. They say They are devis’d by you, or else you suffer Too hard an exclamation.

K. Hen. Still exaction! The nature of it? In what kind, let’s know, Is this exaction?

Q. Kath. I am much too venturous In tempting of your patience; but am bolden’d Under your promis’d pardon. The subjects’ grief Comes through commissions, which compel from each The sixth part of his substance, to be levied Without delay; and the pretence for this Is nam’d, your wars in France. This makes bold mouths:

Tongues spit their duties out, and cold hearts freeze
Allegiance in them; their curses now Live where their prayers did; and it’s come to pass,
This tractable obedience is a slave
To each incensed will. I would your highness Would give it quick consideration, for There is no primer business.

K. Hen. By my life, This is against our pleasure.

Wol. And for me, I have no further gone in this than by A single voice, and that not pass’d me but By learned approbation of the judges. If I am Tradition’d by ignornant tongues, which neither know My faculties nor person, yet will be
The chronicles of my doing, let me say ’Tis but the fate of place, and the rough brake That virtue must go through. We must not stint Our necessary actions, in the fear

To cope malicious censurers; which ever, As ravenous fishes, do a vessel follow
That is new-trimm’d, but benefit no further Than vainly longing. What we oft do best, By sick interpreters, once weak ones, is Not ours, or not allow’d; what worst, as oft, Hitting a grosser quality, is cried up For our best act. If we shall stand still, In fear our motion will be mock’d or car’d at, We should take root here where we sit, or sit State-statues only.

K. Hen. Things done well,
And with a care, exempt themselves from fear; Things done without example, in their issue Are to be fear'd. Have you a precedent Of this commission? I believe, not any. We must not rend our subjects from our laws, And stick them in our will. Sixth part of each? A trembling contribution! Why, we take From every tree lop, bark, and part o' the timber; And, though we leave it with a root, thus hack'd, The air will drink the sap. To every county Where this is question'd send our letters, with Free pardon to each man that has denied The force of this commission. Pray, look to 't; I put it to your care.

Wol. To the Secretary. A word with you. Let there be letters writ to every shire, Of the king's grace and pardon. The griev'd commons Hardly conceive of me; let it be nois'd That through our intercession this revokement And pardon comes: I shall anon advise you Further in the proceeding. Exit Secretary.

Enter Surveyor.

Q. Kath. I am sorry that the Duke of Buckingham is run in your displeasure.

K. Hen. It grieves many: The gentleman is learn'd, and a most rare speaker, To nature none more bound; his training such That he may furnish and instruct great teachers, And never seek for aid out of himself. Yet see, When these so noble benefits shall prove Not well dispos'd, the mind growing once corrupt, They turn to vicious forms, ten times more ugly Than ever they were fair. This man so complete, Who was enroll'd amongst wonders, and when we, Almost with ravish'd listening, could not find His hour of speech a minute; he, my lady, Hath into monstrous habits put the graces That once were his, and is become as black As if besmear'd in hell. Sit by us; you shall hear, This was his gentleman in trust, of him Things to strike honour sad. Bid him recount The fore-recited practices; whereof We cannot feel too little, hear too much.

Wol. Stand forth; and with bold spirit relate what you, Most like a careful subject, have collected Out of the Duke of Buckingham.

K. Hen. Speak freely. Surv. First, it was usual with him, every day It would infect his speech, that if the king Should without issue die, he'll carry it so To make the sceptre his. These very words I've heard him utter to his son-in-law, Lord Abergavenny, to whom by oath he menac'd Revenge upon the cardinal.

Wol. Please your highness, note This dangerous conception in this point. Not friended by his wish, to his high person His will is most malignant; and it stretches Beyond you, to your friends.

Q. Kath. My learn'd lord cardinal, Deliver all with charity.

K. Hen. Speak on: How grounded he his title to the crown Upon our fall? to this point hast thou heard him At any time speak aught?

Surv. He was brought to By a vain prophecy of Nicholas Hopkins.

K. Hen. What was that Hopkins? Surv. Sir, a Chartreuse His confessor, who fed him every minute With words of sovereignty.

K. Hen. How know'st thou Surv. Not long before your highness spake

France, The duke being at the Rose, within the par Saint Lawrence Poultnay, did of me demand What was the speech among the Londoner Concerning the French journey: I replied, Men fear'd the French would prove perfid To the king's danger. Presently the duke Said, 'twas the fear, indeed; and that he dou 'Twould prove the verity of certain words Spoke by a holy monk; 'that oft,' says he, 'Hath sent to me, wishing me to permit John de la Car, my chaplain, a choice hour To hear from him a matter of some moment Whom after under the confession's seal He solemnly had sworn, that what he spok My chaplain to no creature living but To me should utter, with demure confidence This pausingly ensu'd: Neither the king his heirs, Tell you the duke, shall prosper: bid him To gain the love o' the commonalty: the duke Shall govern England.'

Q. Kath. If I know you well You were the duke's surveyor, and lost office

On the complaint o' the tenants: take good You charge not in your spleen a noble pers And spoil your nobler soul. I say, take he Yes, heartily beseech you.

Surv. On my soul, I'll speak but true I told my lord the duke, by the devil's ill The monk might be deceiv'd; and that 't dangerous for him

To ruminate on this so far, until It forg'd him some design, which, being bel It was much like to do. He answer'd 'Tas it can do me no damage'; adding further, That had the king in his last sickness fail'd The cardinal's and Sir Thomas Lovell's hea Should have gone off.

K. Hen. Ha! what, so rank? Ah there's mischief in this man. Canst thou further?

Surv. I can, my liege.

K. Hen. Proceed.

Surv. Being at Greenw After your highness had reprov'd the duke About Sir William Blomer, --

K. Hen. I remember Of such a time: being my sworn servant, The duke retain'd him his. But on; what he

Surv. 'If,' quoth he, 'I for this had been mit

As, to the Tower, I thought, I would have pl The part my father meant to act upon

The usurper Richard; who, being at Salisbury Madesuit to come in's presence; which ifgran As he made semblance of his duty, would Have put his knife into him.'

II: Now, madam, may his highness live in freedom, his man out of prison?

Koth. God mend all!

Hen. There's something more would out of thee; what say'st thou?

Koth. After 'the duke his father,' with 'the knife,' etch'd him, and, with one hand on his dagger, her spread on 's beast, mounting his eyes, I discharge a horrible oath; whose tenour were he evil us'd, he would outgo another by as much as a performance in irresolute purpose.

Hen. There's his period; etathe his knife in us. He is attach'd;

in present trial: if he may tercy in the law, 'tis his; if none, m not seek 't of us: by day and night!

maitor to the height.

Exeunt.

SCENE III.—A Room in the Palace.

1. Is't possible the spells of France should giggle
2. to such strange mysteries?
3. As far as I see, all the good our English
4. got by the late voyage is but merely
5. two of the face; but they are shred'ed ones;
6. men they hold 'em, you would swear directly
7. very noses had been counsellors
8. sin or Clotharius, they keep state so.
9. They have all new legs, and lame ones:
10. would take it,
11. ever saw 'em pace before, the spavin
12. inhaught reign'd among 'em.
13. Death! my lord,
14. clothes are after such a pagan cut too;
15. here, they've worn out Christendom.

Enter Sir Thomas Lovell.

How now!

ews, Sir Thomas Lovell?

Faith, my lord, of none but the new proclamation clapp'd upon the court-gate.

What's 't for?

The reformation of our travell'd gallants,

of the court with quarrels, talk, and tailors,

'm glad 'tis there; now I would pray

r monseigneur

n an English courtier may be wise, er see the Louvre.

They must either,

run the conditions, leave those remnants and feather that they got in France,

all their honourable points of ignorance

ing thereunto, as fights and fireworks, better men than they can be,

n foreign wisdom; renouncing clean

they have in tennis and tall stockings, ister'd breeches, and those types of travel,

derstand again like honest men:

to their old playfellows: there, I take it,

a, cun privilegio, wear away end of their lewdness, and be laugh'd at.

Sands. 'Tis time to give 'em physic, their diseases

Are grown so catching.

Cham. What a loss our ladies

Will have of these trim vanities!

Lov. Ay, marry,

There will be woe indeed, lords: the whoresons

Have got a speeding trick to lay down ladies;

A French song and a fiddle has no fellow.

Sands. The devil fiddle 'em! I am glad they're going,

For, sure, there's no converting of 'em: now

An honest country lord, as I am, beaten

A long time out of play, may bring his plain-song

And have an hour of hearing; and, by'r lady,

Hold current music too.

Cham. Well said, Lord Sands;

Your colt's tooth is not cast yet.

Sands. No, my lord;

Nor shall not, while I have a stump

Cham.

Whither were you a-going?

To the cardinal's:

Sands.

Your lordship is a guest too.

Cham.

O! 'tis true:

This night he makes a supper, and a great one,

To many lords and ladies; there will be

The beauty of this kingdom, I'll assure you.

Lov. That churchman bears a bounteous mind

indeed,

A hand as fruitful as the land that feeds us;

His dews fall every where.

Cham.

No doubt he's noble:

He had a black mouth that said other of him.

Sands. He may, my lord; has wherewithal:

in him

Sparing would show a worse sin than ill doctrine:

Men of his way should be most liberal;

They are set here for examples.

Cham.

True, they are so;

But few new give so great ones.

My barge stays;

Your lordship shallalong.

Come, good Sir Thomas,

We shall be late else; which I would not be,

For I was spoke to, with Sir Henry Guildford,

This night to be comptrollers.

Sands.

I am your lordship's.

Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—The Presence-chamber in York-Place.

Hautboys. A small table under a state for Cardinal Wolsey, a longer table for the guests; then enter Anne Bulleen and divers Lords, Ladies, and Gentlewomen as guests, at one door; at another door, enter Sir Henry Guildford.

Guild. Ladies, a general welcome from his grace

Salutes ye all: this night he dedicates

To fair content and you.

None here, he hopes,

In all this noble bevy, has brought with her

One care abroad;

he would have all as merry

As, first, good company, good wine, good welcome

Can make good people.

Enter the Lord Chamberlain, Lord Sands, and Sir Thomas Lovell.

O, my lord! you're tardy:

The very thought of this fair company

Clapp'd wings to me.

Cham. You are young, Sir Harry Guildford.

Sands. Sir Thomas Lovell, had the cardinal 10
But half my lay thoughts in him, some of these Should find a running banquet ere they rested,
I think would better please ‘em: by my life,
They are a sweet society of fair ones.

_Lov._ O! that your lordship were but now confessor
To one or two of these.

_Sands._ I would I were;
They should find easy penance.

_Lov._ Faith, how easy?
_Sands._ As easy as a down-bed would afford it.

_Cham._ Sweet ladies, will it please you sit? Sir Harry,
Place you that side, I’ll take the charge of this;
His grace is entering. Nay, you must not freeze;
Two women plac’d together makes cold weather:
My Lord Sands, you are one will keep ‘em waking;
Pray, sit between these ladies.

_Sands._ By my faith,
And thank your lordship. By your leave, sweet
ladies:

_Seats himself between Anne Bullen and another Lady._

If I chance to talk a little wild, forgive me;
I had it from my father.

_Anne._ Was he mad, sir?

_Sands._ O! very mad, exceeding mad; in love
too;
But he would bite none; just as I do now,
He would kiss you twenty with a breath.

_Kisses her._

_Cham._ Well said, my lord.

So, now you’re fairly seated. Gentlemen, the penance lies on you if these fair ladies
Pass away frowning.

_Sands._ For my little cure,
Let me alone.

_Hautboys._ Enter Cardinal Wolsey, attended, and takes his state.

_Wol._ You’re welcome, my fair guests: that noble lady,
Or gentleman, that is not freely merry, Is not my friend: this, to confirm my welcome;
And to you all, good health.

_Drinks._

_Sands._ Your grace is noble;
Let me have such a bowl may hold my thanks,
And save me so much talking.

_Wol._ My Lord Sands, I am beholding to you: cheer your neighbours.
Ladies, you are not merry: gentlemen, Whose fault is this?

_Sands._ The red wine first must rise
In their fair cheeks, my lord; then we shall have ‘em

_Talk us to silence._

_Anne._ You are a merry gamester,

_My Lord Sands._

_Sands._ Yes, if I make my play.

_Here’s to your ladyship; and pledge it, madam,
For’tis to such a thing,—

_Anne._ You cannot show me.

_Sands._ I told your grace they would talk anon.

_Drum and trumpets within; chambers discharged._

_Wol._

_What’s that?_

_Cham._ Look out there, some of ye.

_Exit a Servant._

_Wol._ What war-like voice,

And to what end, is this? Nay, ladies, fear. By all the laws of war you’re privilieg’d.

_Re-enter Servant._

_Cham._ How now! what is ‘t?

_Serv._ A noble troop of straesp
For so they seem: they’ve left their barges landed;
And hither make, as great ambassadors
From foreign princes.

_Wol._ Good lord chamberlains, Go, give ‘em welcome; you can speak the French

And, pray, receive ‘em nobly, and conduct
Into our presence, where this heaven of beauty
Shall shine at full upon them. Some attend.

_Exit the Lord Chamberlain, attended, rise, and tables remove._

You have now a broken banquet; but mend it.
A good digestion to you all; and once more,
I shower a welcome on ye; welcome all.

_Hautboys._ Enter the King and Others as masque habitants like shepherds, ushered by the Lord Chamberlain. They pass directly before the CARDINAL, and gracefully salute him.

A noble company! what are their pleasures?

_Cham._ Because they speak no English, and they pray’d.

To tell your grace: that, having heard by

Of this so noble and so fair assembly
This night to meet here, they could do no

Out of the great respect they bear to beauty.
But leave their flocks; and, under your conduct,

Crave leave to view these ladies, and entre

An hour of revels with ‘em.

_Wol._ Say, lord chamberlain.

They have done my poor house grace; for

I pay ‘em

A thousand thanks, and pray ‘em take pleasures.

_They choose Ladies for the dance._

_KING chooses ANNE BULLEN._

_K. Hen._ The fairest hand I ever touch’d beauty!

Till now I never knew thee. _Music._

_Wol._ My lord!

_Cham._ Your grace?

_Wol._ Pray, tell ‘em thus much from me: There should be one amongst ‘em, by his presence,
More worthy this place than myself; to whom
If I but knew him, with my love and duty, I would surrender it.

_Cham._ I will, my lord.

_Whispers the name._

_Wol._ What say they?

_Cham._ Such a one, they all conspire.

There is indeed; which they would have in grace
Find out, and he will take it.

_Wol._ Let me see it.

_Comes from his chair._

By all your good leaves, gentlemen, here I’ll make My royal choice.

_K. Hen._ Unmasking. Ye have found my _cardinal._

You hold a fair assembly; you do well, lot are a churchman, or, I'll tell you, cardinal, and judge now unhappily.

I. I am glad

Grace is grown so pleasant.

Hen. My lord chamberlain, see, come hither. What fair lady's that?

An't please your grace, Sir Thomas Bullen's daughter, Viscount Rochford, one of her highness' women.

Hen. By heaven, she is a dainty one. Sweetheart, re unmannerly to take you out, not to kiss you. A health, gentlemen! Go round.

Sir Thomas Lovell, is the banquet ready in privy chamber?

Yes, my lord.

Your grace, r, with dancing is a little heated. Your grace, I fear, too much.

There's fresher air, my lord, in next chamber.

Hen. Lead in your ladies, every one. Sweet partner, st not yet forsake you. Let's be merry: my lord cardinal, I have half-a-dozen healths risk to these fair ladies, and a measure ad'em once again; and then let's dream best in favour. Let the music knock it.

Execut, with trumpets.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Westminster. A Street.

Enter two Gentlemen, meeting.

St Gent. Whither away so fast?

Gent. O! God save ye. To the hall, to hear what shall become of great Duke of Buckingham.

St Gent. I'll save you labour, sir. All's now done but the ceremony bringing back the prisoner.

Gent. Were you there?

St Gent. Yes, indeed, was I.

Gent. Pray speak what has happened.

St Gent. You may guess quickly what, and.

Gent. Is he found guilty?

St Gent. Yes, truly is he, and condemned upon't.

St Gent. I am sorry for't.

Gent. So are a number more.

St Gent. But, pray, how pass'd it?

Gent. I'll tell you in a little. The great duke to the bar; where to his accusations led still not guilty, and alleg'd sharp reasons to defeat the law.

King's attorney on the contrary and on the examinations, proofs, confessions, vixers witnesses, which the duke desir'd he brought, viva voce, to his face: which appear'd against him his surveyor; Gilbert Peck his chancellor; and John Car,essor to him: with that devil-monk, sins, that made this mischief.

Second Gent. That was he fed him with his prophecies.

First Gent. The same. All these accus'd him strongly; which he fain would have flung from him, but, indeed, he could not:

And so his peers, upon this evidence, have found him guilty of high treason. Much he spoke, and learnedly, for life; but all was either pitied in him or forgotten.

Second Gent. After all this how did he bear himself?

First Gent. When he was brought again to the bar, to hear his knell rung out, his judgment, he was stirr'd With such an agony, he sweat extremely, and something spoke in choler, ill, and hasty: But he fell to himself again, and sweetly In all the rest show'd a most noble patience.

Second Gent. I do not think he fears death.

First Gent. Sure, he does not; he never was so womanish; the cause he may a little grieve at.

Second Gent. Certainly, the cardinal is the end of this.

First Gent. 'Tis likely, by all conjectures; first, Kildare's attainer, then deputy of Ireland; who remov'd, Earl Surrey was sent thither, and in haste too, lest he should help his father.

Second Gent. That trick of state was a deep envious one.

First Gent. At his return No doubt he will requite it. This is noted, and generally, whoever the king favours, the cardinal instantly will find employment, and far enough from court too.

Second Gent. All the commons hate him perniciously, and, o' my conscience, wish him ten fathom deep: this duke as much love and dote on; call him bounteous Buckingham, the mirror of all courtesy;—

First Gent. Stay there, sir, and see the noble ruin'd man you speak of.

Enter BUCKINGHAM from his arraignment; Tipstaves before him; the axe with the edge towards him; halberds on each side: accompanied with Sir Thomas Lovell, Sir Nicholas Vaux, Sir Walter Sands, and common people.

Second Gent. Let's stand close, and behold him. But All good people, you that thus far have come to pity me, hear what I say, and then go home and lose me. I have this day receiv'd a traitor's judgment, and by that name must die: yet, heaven bear witness, and if I have a conscience, let it sink me, even as the axe falls, if I be not faithful! The law I bear no malice for my death, 't has done upon the premisses but justice; but those that sought it I could wish more Christians: Be what they will, I heartily forgive 'em. Yet let 'em look they glory not in mischief, nor build their evils on the graves of great men; for then my guiltless blood must cry against 'em. For further life in this world I ne'er hope, nor will I sue, although the king have merces more than I dare make faults. You few that lov'd me,
And dare be bold to weep for Buckingham,
His noble friends and fellows, whom to leave
Is only bitter to him, only dying,
Go with me, like good angels, to my end;
And, as the long divorce of steel falls on me,
Make of your prayers one sweet sacrifice,
And lift my soul to heaven. Lead on, o' God's name.

Lov. I do beseech your grace, for charity,
If ever any malice in your heart 80
Were hid against me, now to forgive me frankly.

Buck. Sir Thomas Lovell, I as free forgive you
As I would be forgiven: I forgive all.
There cannot be those numberless offences
'Gainst me that I cannot take peace with: no black envy Shall mark my grave. Command me to his grace;
And, if he speak of Buckingham, pray, tell him
You met him half in heaven. My vows and prayers
Yet are the king's; and, till my soul forsake,
Shall cry for blessings on him: may he live 90
Longer than I have time to tell his years!
Ever belov'd and loving may his rule be!
And when old time shall lead him to his end,
Goodness and he fill up one monument!

Lov. To the water side I must conduct your grace;
Then give my charge up to Sir Nicholas Vaux,
Who undertakes you to your end.

Vaux. Prepare there!
The duke is coming: see the barge be ready;
And fit it with such furniture as suits
The greatness of his person.

Buck. Nay, Sir Nicholas, 100
Let it alone; my state now will but mock me.
When I came hither, I was lord high constable
And Duke of Buckingham; now, poor Edward Bohun:
Yet I am richer than my base accusers,
That never knew what truth meant: I now seal it;
And with that blood will make them one day
groan for't.

My noble father, Henry of Buckingham,
Who first rais'd head against usurping Richard,
Flying for succour to his servant Banister,
Being distress'd, was by that wretch betray'd, 110
And without trial fell: God's peace be with him!
Henry the Seventh succeeding, truly pitying
My father's loss, like a most royal prince,
Restor'd me to my honours, and, out of ruins,
Made my name once more noble. Now his son,
Henry the Eighth, life, honour, name, and all
That made me happy, at one stroke has taken
For ever from the world. I had my trial,
And, must needs say, a noble one; which makes me
A little happier than my wretched father: 120
Yet thus far we are one in fortunes; both Fall by our servants, by those men we lov'd most:
A most unnatural and faithless service!
Heaven has an end in all; yet, you that hear me,
This from a dying man receive as certain:
Where you are liberal of your loves and counsels
Be sure you be not loose; for those you make friends
And give your hearts to, when they once perceive
The least rub in your fortunes, fall away
Like water from ye, never found again
But where they mean to sink ye. All people,
Pray for me! I must now forsake ye; the hour
Of my long weary life is come upon me.
Farewell:
And when you would say something that Speak how I fell. I have done; and God give me!

Exeunt BUCKINGHAM and
First Gent. O! this is full of pity. Sir, it
I fear, too many curses on their heads
That were the authors.
Second Gent. If the duke be guilty
'Tis full of woe; yet I can give you inklings
Of an ensuing evil, if it fall,
Greater than this.
First Gent. Good angels keep it from What may it be? You do not doubt my sir?
Second Gent. This secret is so weighty, require
A strong faith to conceal it.
First Gent. Let me have
I do not talk much.
Second Gent. I am confident:
You shall, sir. Did you not of late days hear
A buzzing of a separation
Between the king and Katharine?
First Gent. Yes, but it held
For when the king once heard it, out of all
He sent command to the lord mayor strait
To stop the rumour, and allay those tongues
That durst disperse it.
Second Gent. But that slander
Is found a truth now; for it grows again
 Fresher than e'er it was; and held for ever
The king will venture at it. Either the dinal,
Or some about him near, have, out of malice
To the good queen, possess'd him with a
That will undo her: to confirm this too,
Cardinal Campeius is arriv'd, and lately;
As all think, for this business.
First Gent. 'Tis the card
And merely to revenge him on the emperor
For not bestowing on him, at his asking,
The archbishoprick of Toledo, this is purposed Second Gent. I think you have hit the but is 't not cruel
That she should feel the smart of this cardinal
Will have his will, and she must fall.
First Gent. 'Tis we
We are too open here to argue this;
Let's think in private more.

EXEUNT.

Scene II. — An Antechamber in the Palace.
Enter the Lord Chamberlain, reading a letter Cham. My lord, The horses you must have for, with all the care I had, I saw well chosen, re and furnished. They were young and hand and of the best breed in the north. When they ready to set out for London, a man of my lord dinal's, by commission and main power, took from me; with this reason: His master would served before a subject, if not before the king; it stopped our mouths, sir.
he will indeed. Well, let him have them: will have all, I think.

am. Good day to both your graces.

How is the king employ'd?

I left him private, of sad thoughts and troubles.

What's the cause?

It seems the marriage with his brother's wife crept near his conscience.

No; his conscience crept near another lady.

'Tis so; is the cardinal's doing, the king-cardinal: blind priest, like the eldest son of fortune, is what he list. The king will know him one day.

Pray God he do! he'll never know himself else.

How holy he works in all his business, with what zeal! for now he has crack'd the league between us and the emperor, the queen's great nephew, lives into the king's soul, and there scatters gers, doubts, wringing of the conscience, and desairs; and all these for his marriage: out of all these to restore the king, counsels a divorce; a loss of her, like a jewel has hung twenty years at his neck, yet never lost her lustre; that loves him with that excellence angels love good men with; even of her, when the greatest stroke of fortune falls, bless the king: and is not this course pious? Heaven keep me from such counsel! Tis most true news are every where; every tongue peaks 'em, every true heart weeps for 't. All that dare into these affairs see this main end, French king's sister. Heaven will one day open king's eyes, that so long have slept upon bold bad man.

And free us from his slavery.

We had need pray, heartily, for our deliverance, his imperious man will work us all up princes into pages. All his honours like one lump before him, to be fashion'd what pitch he please.

For me, my lords, be him not, nor fear him; there's my creed. I am made without him, so I'll stand, the king please; his curses and his blessings ch me alike; they're breath I not believe in, ew him, and I know him; so I leave him him that made him proud, the pope.

Let's in; with some other business put the king in these sad thoughts, that work too much upon him.

lord, you'll bear us company?

Excuse me; king hath sent me otherwhere: besides, you'll find a most unfit time to disturb him: Health to your lordships.

Thanks, my good lord chamberlain. Exit Lord Chamberlain.

NORFOLK opens a folding-door. The KING is discovered sitting and reading pensively.

Suf. How sad he looks! sure, he is much afflicted.

K. Hen. Who's there, ha?

Nor. Pray God he be not angry. K. Hen. Who's there, I say? How dare you thrust yourselves into my private meditations?

Who am I? ha?

Nor. A gracious king that pardons all offences Malice ne'er meant: our breach of duty this way is business of estate; in which we come To know your royal pleasure.

K. Hen. Ye are too bold. Go to; I'll make ye know times of business: Is this an hour for temporal affairs, ha?

Enter WOLSEY and CAMPEIUS.

Who's there? my good lord cardinal? O! my Wolsey,
The quiet of my wounded conscience;
Thou art a care fit for a king. To CAMPEIUS.
You're welcome,
Most learned reverend sir, into our kingdom:
Use us, and it. To WOLSEY. My good lord, have great care I be not found a talker.

Sir, you cannot.

I would your grace would give us but an hour Of private conference.

K. Hen. To NORFOLK and SUFFOLK. We are busy. Go.

Nor. Aside to SUFFOLK. This priest has no pride in him!

Suf. Aside to NORFOLK. Not to speak of; I would not be so sick though for his place: But this cannot continue.

Nor. Aside to SUFFOLK. If it do, I'll venture one have-at-him.

Suf. Aside to SUFFOLK. I another.

Exeunt NORFOLK and SUFFOLK.

Wol. Your grace has given a precedent of wisdom Above all princes, in committing freely Your scruple to the voice of Christendom.
Who can be angry now? what envy reach you? The Spaniard, tied by blood and favour to her, Must now confess, if they have any goodness, The trial just and noble. All the clerks, I mean the learned ones, in Christian kingdoms Have their free voices: Rome, the nurse of judgment.

Invited by your noble self, hath sent One general tongue unto us, this good man, This just and learned priest, Cardinal Campeius, Whom once more I present unto your highness. K. Hen. And once more in mine arms I bid him welcome, And thank the holy conclave for their loves: They have sent me such a man I would have wish'd for.

Cm. Your grace must needs deserve all strangers' loves.
You are so noble. To your highness' hand I tender my commission, by whose virtue, The court of Rome command'g you, my lord Cardinal of York, are join'd with me, their servant,
In the unpartial judging of this business.

K. Hen. Two equal men. The queen shall be acquainted Forthwith for what you come. Where's Gardiner?

Wol. I know your majesty has always lov'd her
So dear in heart, not to deny her that
A woman of less place might ask by law,
Scholars allow'd freely to argue for her.

K. Hen. Ay, and the best she shall have; and my favour
To hym that does best: God forbid else. Cardinal,
Prithée, call Gardiner to me, my new secretary:
I find him a fit fellow. Exit Wolsey.

Re-enter Wolsey, with Gardiner.

Wol. Aside to Gardiner. Give me your hand; much joy and favour to you:
You are the king's now.

Gard. Aside to Wolsey. But to be commanded
For ever by your grace, whose hand has rais'd me.

K. Hen. Come hither, Gardiner. They converse apart.

Cam. My lord of York, was not one Doctor Pace
In this man's place before him?

Wol. Yes, he was.

Cam. Was he not held a learned man?

Wol. Yes, surely.

Cam. Believe me, there's an ill opinion spread then Even of yourself, lord cardinal.

Wol. How! of me?

Cam. They will not stick to say you envied him,
And fearing he would rise, he was so virtuous,
Kept him a foreign man still; which grief'd him,
That he ran mad and died.

Wol. Heaven's peace be with him!
That's Christian care enough: for living mur-murers
There's places of rebuke. He was a fool,
For he would needs be virtuous: that good fellow,
If I command him, follows my appointment:
I will be none so near. Learn this, brother,
We live not to be grip'd by meaner persons.

K. Hen. Deliver this with modesty to the queen.

Exit Gardiner.

The most convenient place that I can think of
For such receipt of learning is Black-Friars;
There ye shall meet about this weighty business.
My Wolsey, see it furnish'd. O my lord!
Would it not grieve an able man to leave
So sweet a bedfellow? But, conscience, conscience!
O! 'tis a tender place, and I must leave her.

Exeunt.

SCENE III.—An Antechamber of the Queen's Apartments.

Enter Anne Bullen and an Old Lady.

Anne. Not for that neither: here's the pang
That pinches:
His highness having liv'd so long with her, and she
So good a lady that no tongue could ever
Pronounce dishonour of her; by my life,
She never knew harm-doing: O! now, after
So many courses of the sun enthron'd,
Still growing in a majesty and pomp, the which
To leave a thousand-fold more bitter than
'Tis sweet at first to acquire, after this pro-
To give her the avanti! it is a pity
Would move a monster.

Old Lady. Hearts of most hard ten-
Melt and lament for her.

Anne. O! God's will; much be
She ne'er had known pomp: though 'tis betemp-
Yet, if that quarrel, fortune, do divorce
It from the bearer, 'tis a sufferance, pangin
As soul and body's severing.

Old Lady. Alas! poor I
She's a stranger now again.

Anne. So much the Must pity drop upon her. Verily,
I swear, 'tis better to be lowly born,
And range with humble lives in content,
Than to be perk'd up in a glistening grief
And wear a golden sorrow.

Old Lady. Our content
Is our best having.

Anne. By my troth and maidenly,
I would not be a queen.

Old Lady. Beshrew me, I was
And venture maidenhead for't; and so would
For all this spice of your hypocrisy.
You, that have so fair parts of woman on;
Have too a woman's heart; which ever yet
Affected eminence, wealth, sovereignty:
Which, to say sooth, are blessings, and which Saving your mincing, the capacity
Of your soft cheveril conscience would receive
If you might please to stretch it.

Anne. Nay, good to Old Lady. Yes, troth, and troth; you not be a queen?

Anne. No, not for all the riches under her Old Lady. 'Tis strange: a three-pence b would hire me,

Old as I am, to queen it. But, I pray you,
What think you of a duchess? have you lien
To bear that load of title?

Anne. No, in truth.

Old Lady. Then you are weakly made. Pl off a little:
I would not be a young count in your way,
For more than bluffing comes to; if your I Cannot vouchsafe this burden, 'tis too weak
Ever to get a boy.

Anne. How you do talk!
I swear again, I would not be a queen
For all the world.

Old Lady. In faith, for little En-
You'd venture an embalming: I myself
Would for Carnarvonshire, although there I'd No more to the crown but that. Lo! com-
here?

Enter the Lord Chamberlain.

Cham. Good morrow, ladies. What we worth to know
The secret of your conference?

Anne. My good
Not your demand; it values not your askin'
Our mistress' sorrows we were pitying.

Cham. It was a gentle business, and becom
The action of good women: there is hope
All will be well.

Anne. Now, I pray God, amen!

Cham. You bear a gentle mind, and heav blessings
ow such creatures. That you may, fair lady, elive I speak sincerely, and high note's all of your many virtues, the king's majesty mends his good opinion of you, and als purpose honour to you no less flowing a Marchioness of Pembroke; to which title IUousand pound a year, annual support of his grace he adds.

I do not know
it kind of my obedience I should tender;
e than my all is nothing, nor my prayers not words duly lallow'd, nor my wishes worth as empty vanities; yet prayers and wishes all I can return. Beseech your lordship, 70 chase to speak my thanks and my obedience, oron a blushing handmaid, to his highness, se health and royalty I pray for.

(3)

Lady,
al not fail to approve the fair conceit king hath of you. Aside. I have perus'd
her well;
ay and honour in her are so mingled that they have caught the king; and who knows yet
from this lady may proceed a gem gluten all this isle? 'Tll to the king, say I spoke with you. Exit.

ne.

My honour'd lord. 80
'd Lady. Why, this it is; see, see!
ve been begging sixteen years in court, yet a courtier beggarly, nor could e pat betwixt too early and too late,
y suit of pounds; and you, O fate!
yry fresh-fish here, fie, fie, fie upon compell'd fortune! have your mouth fill'd up ere you open it.

ne.

This is strange to me.
'd Lady. How tastes it? is it bitter! forty pence, no.
'e was a lady once, 'tis an old story, would not be a queen, that would she not,
'll the mud in Egypt: have you heard it!
ne. Come, you are pleasant.
'd Lady.

With your theme I could ount the lack. The Marchioness of Pembroke!
ousand pounds a year for pure respect!
other obligation! By my life promises more thousand: honour's train ger than his foreskirt. By this time now your back will bear a duchess: say, you not stronger than you were?
ne. Good lady, 100
yourself mirth with your particular fancy, leave me out on 't. Would I had no being, strate to my blood a jot: it faints me think what follows.
queen is comfortless, and we forgetful our long absence. Pray, do not deliver here you've heard to her.
ld Lady.

What do you think me?

Exeunt.

ASAPH; next them, with some small distance, follows a Gentleman bearing the purse, with the great seal, and a cardinal's hat; then two Priests, bearing each a silver cross; then a Gentleman-Usher bare-headed, accompanied with a Sergeant-at-Arms, bearing a silver mace; then two Gentlemen bearing two great silver pillars; after them, side by side, the two Cardinals; two Noblemen with the sword and mace. Then enter the King and Queen and their Trains. The King takes place under the cloth of state; the two Cardinals sit under him as judges. The Queen takes place some distance from the King. The Bishops place themselves on each side the court, in manner of a consistory; below them, the Scribes. The Lords sit next the Bishops. The rest of the Attendants stand in convenient order about the stage.

Wol. Whilst our commission from Rome is read,
Let silence be commanded.

K. Hen.

What's the need?
It hath already publicly been read,
And on all sides the authority allow'd;
You may then spare that time.

Wol.

Be't so. Proceed.
Scribe. Say, Henry King of England, come into the court.

Orier. Henry King of England, come into the court.

K. Hen. Here.

Scribe. Say, Katharine Queen of England, get into the court.

The Queen makes no answer, rises out of her chair, goes about the court, comes to the King, and kneels at his feet; then speaks.

Q. Kath. Sir, I desire you do me right and justice
And to bestow your pity on me; for
I am a most poor woman, and a stranger,
Born out of your dominions; having here
No judge indifferent, nor no more assurance
Or equal friendship and proceeding. Alas! sir
In what have I offended you? what cause
Hath my behaviour given to your displeasure,
That thus you should proceed to put me off
And take your good grace from me? Heaven witness,
I have been to you a true and humble wife,
At all times to your will conformable;
Ever in fear to kindle your dislike,
Yea, subject to your countenance, glad or sorry
As I saw it inclin'd. When was the hour
I ever contradicted your desire,
Or made it not mine too? Or which of your friends
Have I not strove to love, although I knew
He were mine enemy? What friend of mine
That had to him deriv'd your anger, did I Continue in my liking? nay, gave notice
He was from thence discharg'd. Sir, call to mind
That I have been your wife, in this obedience,
Upward of twenty years, and have been blest
With many children by you; if, in the course
And process of this time, you can report,
And prove it too, against mine honour aught,
My bond to wedlock, or my love and duty,
Against your sacred person, in God's name
Turn me away; and let the foul'st contempt
Shut door upon me, and so give me up
To the sharpest kind of justice. Please you, sir,
The king, your father, was reputed for
A prince most prudent, of an excellent
And unmatched wit and judgment: Ferdinand,
My father, King of Spain, was reckn'd one
The wisest prince that there had reign'd by many
A year before: it is not to be question'd
That they had gather'd a wise council to them
Of every realm, that did debate this business,
Who deem'd our marriage lawful. Wherefore
I humbly
Beseech you, sir, to spare me, till I may
Be by my friends in Spain advis'd, whose counsel
I will implore: if not, I, the name of God,
Your pleasure be fulfill'd!

You have here, lady,
And of your choice, these reverend fathers; men
Of singular integrity and learning,
Yea, the elect of the land, who are assembled
To plead your case. It shall be therefore bootless
That longer you desire the court, as well
For your own quiet, as to rectify
What is unsettled in the king.

His grace
Hath spoken well and justly: therefore, madam,
It's fit this royal session do proceed,
And that, without delay, their arguments
Be now produc'd and heard.

To you I speak.

Your pleasure, madam?

Sir,
I am about to weep; but, thinking that
We are a queen, or long have dream'd so, certain
The daughter of a king, my drops of tears
I'll turn to sparks of fire.

Be patient yet.

I will, when you are humble; nay,
Before Or God will punish me. I do believe,
Induc'd by potent circumstances, that
You are mine enemy; and make my challenge
You shall not be my judge; for it is you
Have blown this coal betwixt my lord and me,
Which God's dew quench! Therefore Isay again,
I utterly abhor, yea, from my soul
Refuse you for my judge; whom, yet once more,
I hold my most malicious foe, and think not
At all a friend to truth.

I do profess
You speak not like yourself; who ever yet
Have stood to charity, and display'd the effects
Of disposition gentle, and of wisdom O'topping woman's power. Madam, you do me wrong:
I have no spleen against you; nor injustice
For you or any: how far I have proceeded,
Or how far further shall, is warranted
By a commission from the consistory,
Yea, the whole consistory of Rome. You charge me
That I have blown this coal: I do deny it.
The king is present: if it be known to him
That I gainsay my deed, how may he wound,
And worthily, my falsehood; yea, as much
As you have done my truth. If he know
That I am free of your report, he knows
I am not of your wrong. Therefore in him
It lies to cure me; and the cure is, to Remove these thoughts from you: the words
Before His highness shall speak in, I do beseech
You, gracious madam, to unthink your speech
And to say so no more.

Q. Kath.

My lord, my lord,
I am a simple woman, much too weak
To oppose your cunning. You're meek humble-mouth'd;
You sign your place and calling, in full sear
With meekness and humility; but your heart
Is cram'md with arrogance, spleen, and pride.
You have, by fortune and his highness' favour,
Goneslightly o'er lowest steps, and now are mount'd
Where powers are your retainers, and your will Domestics to you, serve your will as 't please Yourself pronounce their office. I must tell You tender more your person's honour than
Your high profession spiritual; that again
I do refuse you for my judge; and here,
Before you all, appeal unto the pope,
To bring my whole cause 'fore his holiness
And to be judged by him.

She court'sies to the KING, and off.

The queen is obstin
Stubborn to justice, apt to accuse it, and Disdainful to be tried by 't: 'tis not well.
She's going away.

K. Hen.

Call her again.

Crier. Katharine Queen of England, come the court.

Grieth. Madam, you are call'd back.

Q. Kath. What need you note it? pray keep your way:
When you are call'd, return. Now the Lord
They vex me past my patience. Pray you, pass,
I will not tarry; no, nor ever more
Upon this business my appearance make
In any of their courts.

Exeunt QUEEN and her ATTEND.

Go thy ways, Kate:
That man i' the world who shall report her
A better wife, let him in nought be trusted
For speaking false in that: thou art, alone,
If thy rare qualities, sweet gentleness,
Thy meekness saint-like, wife-like government,
Obeying in commanding, and thy parts
Sovereign and pious, else could she speak the
The queen of earthly queens. She's noble
And, like her true nobility, she has Carried herself towards me.

Most gracious
In humblest manner I require your highness
That it shall please you to declare, in heart,
Of all these ears, for where I am robb'd and boi'd
There must I be unloos'd, although not the
At once and fully satisfied, whether ever I Did broach this business to your highness,
Laid any scruple in your way, which might Induce you to the question on't or ever
Have to you, but with thanks to God for so
A royal lady, speak one the least word that may Be to the prejudice of her present state,
Or touch of her good person?

K. Hen.

My lord cardinal,
I do excuse you; yea, upon mine honour,
I free you from 't. You are not to be taugh
That you have many enemies, that know no
Why they are so, but, like to village curs,
But by particular consent proceeded
Under your hands and seals: therefore, go on;
For no dislike i' the world against the person
Of the good queen, but the sharp thorny points
Of my alleged reasons drive this forward.
Prove but our marriage lawful, by my life
And kingly dignity, we are contented
To wear our mortal state to come with her, 230
Katharine our queen, before the primest creature
That's paragon'd o' the world.

Cam. So please your highness,
The queen being absent, 'tis a needful fitness
That we adjourn this court till further day:
Meanwhile must be an earnest motion
Made to the queen, to call back her appeal
She intends unto his holiness.

K. Hen. Aside. I may perceive
These cardinals trifle with me: I abhor
This dilatory sloth and tricks of Rome.
My learn'd and well-beloved servant, Cranmer,
Prithie, return: with thy approach, I know, an
My comfort comes along. Break up the court:
I say, set on. Execut in manner as they entered.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—The Palace at Bridewell. A Room in the QUEEN'S Apartment.

The QUEEN and her Women at work.

Q. Kath. Take thy lute, wench: my soul grows sad with troubles;
Sing, and disperse 'em, if thou canst. Leave working.

SONG.

Orpheus with his lute made trees,
And the mountain tops that freeze,
Bow themselves, when he did sing:
To his music plants and flowers
Ever sprung; as sun and showers
There had made a lasting spring.

Every thing that heard him play,
Even the billows of the sea;
Hang their hearts, and then lay by.
In sweet music is such art,
Killing care and grief of heart
Fall asleep, or hearing, die.

Enter a Gentleman.

Q. Kath. How now!
Gent. An't please your grace, the two great cardinals Wait in the presence.

Q. Kath. Would they speak with me?
Gent. They will'd me say so, madam.

Q. Kath. Pray their graces
To come near.

Exit Gentleman.

Enter Wolsey and CAMPEIUS.

Wol. Peace to your highness!

Q. Kath. Your graces find me here part of a housewife,
I would all, against the worst may happen.
What are your pleasures with me, reverend lords?
Wol. May it please you, noble madam, to withdraw
Into your private chamber, we shall give you
The full cause of our coming.
Q. Kath. Speak it here;
There's nothing I have done yet, o' my conscience,
Deserves a corner: would all other women
Could speak this with as free a soul as I do!
My lords, I care not, so much I am happy
Above a number, if my actions
Were tried by every tongue, every eye saw 'em,
Envy and base opinion set against 'em,
I know my life so even. If your business
Seek me out, and that way I am wife in,
Out with it boldly: truth loves open dealing.
Wol. Tanta est erga te mentis integritas, regina serenissima.—

Q. Kath. O! good my lord, no Latin;
I am not such a truant since my coming,
As not to know the language I have liv'd in:
A strange tongue makes my cause more strange, suspicious.
Pray, speak in English: here are some will
thank you,
If you speak truth, for their poor mistress' sake;
Believe me, she has had much wrong. Lord
cardinal,
The willing'st sin I ever yet committed
May be absolv'd in English.
Wol.
Noble lady,
I am sorry my integrity should breed,
And service to his majesty and you,
So deep suspicion, where all faith was meant.
We come not by the way of accusation,
To taint that honour every good tongue blesses,
Nor to betray you any way to sorrow,
You have too much, good lady; but to know
How you stand minded in the weighty difference Between the king and you; and to deliver,
Like free and honest men, our just opinions
And comforts to your cause.
Cam. Most honour'd madam,
My lord of York, out of his noble nature,
Zeal and obedience he still bore your grace,
Forgotten, like a good man, your late censure
Both of his truth and him, which was too far,
Offers, as I do, in a sign of peace,
His service and his counsel.
Q. Kath. Aside. To betray me.
My lords, I thank you both for your good wills;
Ye speak like honest men, pray God ye prove so!
But how to make ye suddenly an answer,
In such a point of weight, so near mine honour,
More near my life, I fear, with my weak wit,
And to such men of gravity and learning,
In truth, I know not. I was set at work
Among my maids; full little, God knows, looking Either for such men or such business.
For her sake that I have been, for I feel
The last fit of my greatness, good your graces,
Let me have time and counsel for my cause:
Alas! I am a woman, friendless, hopeless.
Wol. Madam, you wrong the king's love with these fears:
Your hopes and friends are infinite.
Q. Kath. In England
But little for my profit. Can you think, lords,
That any Englishman dare give me counsel?
Or be a known friend, 'gainst his highest
pleasure,
Though he be grown so desperate to be hone
And live a subject? Nay, forsooth, my friend,
They that must weigh out my afflictions,
They that my trust must grow to, live not heed.
They are, as all my other comforts, far hence
In mine own country, lords.
Cam. I would your grace
Would leave your griefs, and take my counsel.
Q. Kath. How, s
Cam. Put your main cause into the king protection;
He's loving and most gracious: 'twill be my
Both for your honour better and your cause;
For if the trial of the law o'ertake ye,
You'll part away disgrac'd.
Wol. He tells you right.
Q. Kath. Ye tell me what ye wish for both my ruin.
Is this your Christian counsel? out upon ye!
Heaven is above all yet; there sits a judge
That no king can corrupt.
Cam. Your rage mistakes
Q. Kath. The more shame for ye! holy men thought ye,
Upon my soul, two reverend cardinal virtues
But cardinal sins and hollow hearts I fear ye.
Mend 'em, for shame, my lords. Is this ye comfort?
The cordial that ye bring a wretched lady,
A woman lost among ye, laugh'd at, scorn'd!
I will not wish ye half my miseries,
I have more charity; but say, I warn'd ye:
Take heed, for heaven's sake, take heed, lest once
The burden of my sorrows fall upon ye.
Wol. Madam, this is a mere distraction;
You turn the good we offer into envy.
Q. Kath. Ye turn me into nothing: wo upon
And all such false professors! Would you haven,
If ye have any justice, any pity,
If ye be any thing but churchmen's habits,
Put my sick cause into his hands that hates me
Alas! has banish'd me his bed already,
His love, too long ago. I am old, my lords,
And all the fellowship I hold now with him
Is only my obedience. What can happen
To me above this wretchedness? all your studi
Make me a curse like this.
Cam. Your fears are not
Q. Kath. Have I liv'd thus long, let me speak myself,
Since virtue finds no friends, a wife, a true one
A woman, I dare say without vain-glory,
Never yet branded with suspicion?
Have I with all my full affections
Still met the king? lov'd him next heaven
obey'd him?
Been, out of fondness, superstitions to him?
Almost forgot my prayers to content him?
And am I thus rewarded? 'tis not well, lords,
Bring me a constant woman to her husband,
One that ne'er dream'd a joy beyond his pleasur
And to that woman, when she has done most,
Yet will I add an honour, a great patience.
Wol. Madam, you wander from the good w aim at.
Q. Kath. My lord, I dare not make myself's guilty,
give up willingly that noble title ir master wed me to: nothing but death shall e'er divorce my dignities.

Vol. Pray hear me, Kath. Would I had never trod this English earth, felt the flatteries that grow upon it! have angels' faces, but heaven knows your hearts. as will become of me now, wretched lady? in the most unhappy woman living. I poor wenches, where are now your fortunes? wreck'd upon a kingdom, where no pity, friends, no hope, no kindred weep for me; lost no grave allow'd me. Like the lily, once was mistress of the field and flourish'd, hang my head and perish.

Vol. If your grace bid but be brought to know our ends are honest, I'd feel more comfort. Why should we, good lady, on what cause, wrong you? alas! our places, way of our profession is against it: are to cure such sorrows, not to sow them. goodness' sake, consider what you do; v you may hurt yourself, ay, utterly w from the king's acquaintance by this carriage.

hearts of princes kiss obedience, much they love it; but to stubborn spirits y swell, and grow as terrible as storms. ow you have a gentle, noble temper, not as even as a calm: pray think us se we profess, peace-makers, friends, and servants.

am. Madam, you'll find it so. You wrong your virtues in these weak women's fears: a noble spirit, ours was put into you, ever ca-ts doubts, as false coin, from it. The king loves you; are you lose it not: for us, if you please trust in our business, we are ready use our utmost studies in your service. Kath. Do what ye will, my lords: and pray forgive me have us'd myself unmanfully.

I know I am a woman, lacking wit make a seemly answer to such persons. y do my service to his majesty: has my heart yet; and shall have my prayers ile I shall have my life. Come, reverend fathers, bow your counsels on me: she now begs a little thought, when she set footing here, should have bought her dignities so dear.

Exc. But that you shall sustain more new disgraces With these you bear already.

Sur. I am joyful To meet the least occasion that may give me Remembrance of my father-in-law, the duke, To be reveng'd on him.

Suf. Which of the peers Have uncontemn'd gone by him, or at least Strangely neglected? when did he regard The stamp of nobleness in any person Out of himself?

Cham. My lords, you speak your pleasures. What he deserves of you and me I know; What we can do to him, though now the time Gives way to us, I much fear. If you cannot Bar his access to the king, never attempt Any thing on him, for he hath a witchcraft Over the king in 's tongue.

Nor. O! fear him not; His spell in that is out: the king hath found Matter against him that for ever mars The honey of his language. No, he's settled, Not to come off, in his displeasure.

Sur. Sir, I should be glad to hear such news as this Once every hour.

Nor. Believe it, this is true: In the divorce his contrary proceedings Are all unfolded; wherein he appears As I would wish mine enemy.

Sur. How came His practices to light?

Suf. Most strangely.

Sur. O! how? how?

Suf. The cardinal's letters to the pope miscarried, And came to thee eye o' the king; wherein was read, How that the cardinal did entreat his holiness To stay the judgment o' the divorce; for if It did take place, 'I do,' quoth he, 'perceive My king is tangled in affection to A creature of the queen's, Lady Anne Bullen.' Sur. Has the king this?

Suf. Believe it.

Sur. Will this work?

Cham. The king in this perceives him, how he coasts And hedges his own way. But in this point All his tricks founder, and he brings his physic After his patient's death: the king already Hath married the fair lady.

Sur. Would he had!

Suf. May you be happy in your wish, my lord! For, I profess, you have it.

Sur. Now all my joy

Trace the conjunction!

Suf. My amen to 't!

Nor. All men's!

Suf. There's order given for her coronation: Marry, this is yet but young, and may be left To some ears uncounted. But, my lords, She is a gallant creature, and complete In mind and feature: I persuade me, from her Will fall some blessing to this land, which shall In it be memoriz'd.

Sur. But will the king Digest this letter of the cardinal's?

The Lord forbid!

Nor. Marry, amen!

Suf. No, no;
There be more wasps that buzz about his nose
Will make this sting the sooner. Cardinal
Campeius
Is stole'n away to Rome; hath ta'en no leave;
Has left the cause o' the king unhanded; and
Is posted, as the agent of our cardinal,
To second all his plot. I do assure you
The king cried Ha! at this.

Cham. Now, God incense him,
And let him cry Ha! louder.

Nor. But, my lord,
When returns Cranmer?

Suf. He is return'd in his opinions, which
Have satisfied the king for his divorce,
Together with all famous colleges
Almost in Christendom. Shortly I believe
His second marriage shall be publish'd, and Her coronation. Katharine no more
Shall be call'd queen, but princess dowager, 70
And widow to Prince Arthur.

Nor. This same Cranmer's
A worthy fellow, and hath ta'en much pain
In the king's business.

Suf. He has; and we shall see him
For it an archbishop.

Nor. So I hear.

Suf. 'Tis so.

The cardinal!

Enter Wolsey and Cromwell.

Nor. Observe, observe; he's moody.

Wol. The packet, Cromwell,
Gave't you the king?

Crom. To his own hand, in's bedchamber.

Wol. Look'd he o' the inside of the paper?

Crom. Presently
He did unseal them; and the first he view'd,
He did it with a serious mind; a heed 80
Was in his countenance. You he bade Attend him here this morning.

Wol. Is he ready
To come abroad?

Crom. I think by this he is.

Wol. Leave me awhile. Exit CROMWELL.

Aside. It shall be to the Duchess of Alençon,
The French king's sister: she shall marry her.
Anne Bullen! No; I'll no Anne Bullens for him;
There's more in 't than fair visage. Bullen!
No, we'll no Bullens. Speedily I wish
To hear from Rome. The Marchioness of Pembroke! 90

Nor. He's discontented.

Suf. May be he hears the king
Does what his anger to him.

Suf. Sharp enough,

Lord, for thy justice!

Wol. Aside. The late queen's gentlewoman, a knight's daughter,
To be her mistress' mistress! the queen's queen!
This candle burns not clear: 'tis I must snuff it;
Then out it goes. What though I know her virtuous
And well deserving? yet I know her for A spleeny Lutheran; and not wholesome to
Our cause, that she should lie i' the bosom of 100
Our hard-rul'd king. Again, there is sprung up
An heretic, an arch one, Cranmer; one
Hath crawl'd into the favour of the king,
And is his oracle.

Nor. He is vex'd at something.

Suf. I would 'twere something that would f
the string,
The master-cord on's heart!

Enter the KING, reading a schedule; and LOVE

Suf. The king, the king
K. Hen. What piles of wealth hath he ac mulated
To his own portion! and what expense by the h
Seems to flow from him! How, i' the name thrif
Does he make this together? Now, my lords Saw you the cardinal?

Nor. My lord, we have Stood here observing him; some strange co motion
Is in his brain: he bites his lip and starts;
Stops on a sudden, looks upon the ground,
Then lays his finger on his temple; straight
Spring's out into fast gait; then stops again,
Strikes his breast hard; and anon he casts
His eye against the moon: in most stra postures
We have seen him set himself.

K. Hen. It may well
There is a mutiny in 's mind. This morning
Papers of state he sent me to peruse,
As I requir'd; and wot you what I found
There, on my conscience, put unwittingly?
Forssooth an inventory, thus importing;
The several parcels of his plate, his treasure,
Rich stuffs and ornaments of household, whi
I find at such proud rate that it outspeaks
Possession of a subject.

Nor. It's heaven's will:
Some spirit put this paper in the packet
To bless your eye withal.

K. Hen. If we did think
His contemplation were above the earth,
And fix'd on spiritual object, he should still Dwell in his musings: but I am afraid
His thinkings are below the moon, not worth
His serious considering.

He takes his seat, and whispers LOVE!
who goes to WOLSEY

Wol. Heaven forgive me
Ever God bless your highness!

K. Hen. Good my lord
You are full of heavenly stuff, and bear the ventory
Of your best grace in your mind, the which
You were now running o'er: you have scan time
To steal from spiritual leisure a brief span
To keep your earthly and: sure, in that I deem you an ill husband, and am glad
To have you therein my companion.

Wol. Sir,
For holy offices I have a time; a time
To think upon the part of business which I bear i' the state; and nature does require
Her times of preservation, which performe
I, her frail son, amongst my brethren mortal,
Must give my tendance to.

K. Hen. You have said we Wol. And ever may your highness yoke t gether,
As I will lend you cause, my doing well
With my well saying!

K. Hen. 'Tis well said again;
'tis a kind of good deed to say well: yet words are no deeds. My father lov'd you; aid he did, and with his deed did crown word upon you: since I had my office ye kept you next my heart; have not alone loy'd you where high profits might come home, car'd my present havings, to bestow counties upon you.

ob. Aside. What should this mean?

r. Aside. The Lord increase this business!

Hen. Have I not made you prime man of the state? I pray you tell me at I now pronounce you have found true; if you may confess it, say withal u are bound to us or no. What say you?

l. My sovereign, I confess your royal graces, yr'd on me daily, have been more than could studied purposes requite; which went nd all man's endeavours: my endeavours ever came too short of my desires, i'd with my abilities. Mine own ends been mine so, that evermore they pointed ie good of your most sacred person and profit of the state. For your great graces i'd upon me, poor undeserver, I nothing render but allegiant thanks, rayers to heaven for you, my loyalty, h ever has and ever shall be growing, ceth, that winter, kill it.

Hen. Fairly answer'd; al and obedient subject is an illustrated; the honour of it pay the act of it, as, 't the contrary, onliness is the punishment. I presume as my hand has open'd bounty to you, cart dropp'd love, my power rain'd honour ore an; than any; so your hand and heart, brain, and every function of your power, i, notwithstanding that your bond of duty, ere in love's particular, be more to your friend, than any.

I do profess for your highness' good I ever labour'd than mine own; that am, have, and will be, gh all the world should crack their duty to you throw it from their soul; though perils did nd as thick as thought could make 'em, and ar in forms more horrid, yet my duty, with a rock against the chiding flood, id the approach of this wild river break, stand unshaken yours.

Hen. 'Tis nobly spoken, notice, lords, he has a loyal breast, you have seen him open't. Read o'er this; Giving him papers, after, this; and then to breakfast with appetite you have.

vii. Frowning upon Cardinal Wolsey: the Nobles throng after him, smiling and whispering.

What should this mean?

s sudden anger's this? how have I reap'd it? arsted frowning from me, as if ruin d' from his eyes: so looks the chafed lion the daring huntsman that has gall'd him; Then makes him nothing. I must read this paper; I fear, the story of his anger. 'Tis so: This paper has undone me! 'Tis the account Of all that world of wealth I have drawn together For mine own ends; indeed, to gain the popedom And fee my friends in Rome. 'O negligence! Fit for a fool to fall by: what cross devil Made me put this main secret in the packet. I sent the king? Is there no way to cure this? No new device to beat this from his brains? I know 'twill stir him strongly; yet I know A way, if it take right, in spite of fortune Will bring me off again. What's this? 'To the Pope!'

The letter, as I live, with all the business I writ to 's holiness. Nay then, farewell! I have touch'd the highest point of all my greatness; And from that full meridian of my glory I haste now to my setting: I shall fall Like a bright exhalation in the evening, And no man see me more.

Re-enter the Dukes of Norfolk and Suffolk, the Earl of Surrey, and the Lord Chamberlain.

Nor. Hear the king's pleasure, cardinal: who commands you To render up the great seal presently Into our hands; and to confine yourself To Asher-house, my lord of Winchester's, Till you hear further from his highness.

Wol. Where's your commission, lords? words cannot carry Authority so weightily.

Suf. Who dare cross 'em, Bearing the king's will from his mouth expressly? Wol. Till I find more than will or words to do it, I mean your malice, know, officious lords, I dare and must deny it. Now I feel Of what coarse metal ye are moulded, envy: How eagerly ye follow my disgraces, As if it fed ye! and how sleek and wanton Ye appear in every thing may bring my ruin! Follow your envious courses, men of malice; You have Christian warrant for 'em, and no doubt In time will find their fit rewards. That seal You ask with such a violence, the king, Mine and your master, with his own hand gave me; Bade me enjoy it with the place and honours, During my life; and to confirm his goodness, Tied it by letters-patent: now who'll take it?

Sur. The king, that gave it.

Wol. It must be himself then.

Sur. Thou art a proud traitor, priest.

Wol. Proud lord, thou liest: Within these forty hours Surrey durst better Have burnt that tongue than said so.

Sur. Thy ambition, Thou scarlet sin, rob'd this blessing land Of noble Buckingham, my father-in-law: The heads of all thy brother cardinals, With thee and all thy best parts bound together, Weigh'd not a hair of his. Plague of your policy! You sent me deputy for Ireland, Far from his succour, from the king, from all That might have mercy on the fault thou gav'est him;
Whilst your great goodness, out of holy pity,
Absolv’d him with an axe.

Wol. This and all else
This talking lord can lay upon my credit,
I answer is most false. The duke by law Found his deserts: how innocent I was
From any private malice in his end,
His noble jury and foul cause can witness.
If I lov’d many words, lord, I should tell you
You have as little honesty as honour,
That in the way of loyalty and truth
Toward the king, my ever royal master,
Dare mate a sounder man than Surrey can be,
And all that love his follies.

Sur. By my soul,
Your long coat, priest, protects you; thou shouldst feel
My sword i’ the life-blood of thee else. My lords,
Can ye endure to hear this arrogance?
And from this fellow? If we live thus tamely,
To be thus jaded by a piece of scarlet,
Farewell nobility; let his grace go forward
And dare us with his cap like larks.

Wol. All goodness
Is poison to thy stomach.

Sur. Yes, that goodness
Of gleaning all the land’s wealth into one,
Into your own hands, cardinal, by extortion;
The goodness of your intercepted packets
You writ to the pope against the king; your goodness,
Since you provoke me, shall be most notorious.
My Lord of Norfolk, as you are truly noble,
As you respect the common good, the state
Of our despis’d nobility, our issues,
Who, if he live, will scarce be gentlemen,
Produce the grand sum of his sins, the articles
Collected from his life; I’ll startle you Worse than the sacing bell, when the brown wrench
Lay kissing in your arms, lord cardinal.

Wol. How much, methinks, I could despise
this man,
But that I am bound in charity against it!

Nor. Those articles, my lord, are in the king’s hand;
But, thus much, they are foul ones.

Wol. So much fairer
And spotless shall mine innocence arise
When the king knows my truth.

Sur. This cannot save you:
I thank my memory, I yet remember
Some of these articles; and out they shall.
Now, if you can blush and cry ‘guilty,’ cardinal,
You’ll show a little honesty.

Wol. Speak on, sir;
I dare your worst objections: if I blush,
It is to see a nobleman want manners.

Sur. I had rather want those than my head.
Have at you!
First, that without the king’s assent or knowledge
You wrought to be a legate; by which power
You main’d the jurisdiction of all bishops.

Nor. Then, that in all you writ to Rome, or else
To foreign princes,
Was still inscrib’d; in which you brought the king
To be your servant.

Sur. Then, that without the knowledge
Either of king or council, when you went
Ambassador to the emperor, you made bold
To carry into Flanders the great seal.

Sur. Item, you sent a large commission
To Gregory de Cassado, to conclude,
Without the king’s will or the state’s allowance,
A league between his highness and Ferrara.

Sur. That, out of mere ambition, you hast’d
Your holy hat to be stamp’d on the king’s coat

Sur. Then that you have sent immemorial
substance,
By what means got I leave to your own
science,
To furnish Rome, and to prepare the ways
You have for dignities; to the mere undoing
Of all the kingdom. Many more there are;
Which, since they are of you, and odious,
I will not taint my mouth with.

Cham. O my lord,
Press not a falling man too far; ’tis virtue:
His faults lie open to the laws; let them,
Not you, correct him. My heart weeps to
So little of his great self.

Sur.

Sur. Lord cardinal, the king’s further purpose is,
Because all those things you have done have
By your power legatine within this kingdom
Fall into the compass of a precomunire,
That therefore such a writ be sued against you.
To forfeit all your goods, lands, tenements,
Chattels, and whatsoever, and to be Out of the king’s protection. This is my

Nor. And so we’ll leave you to your meditations
How to live better. For your stubborn answer
About the giving back the great seal to us,
The king shall know it, and, no doubt, at
thank you.
So fare you well, my little good lord cardinal.

Wol. So farewell to the little good you bear!
Farewell! a long farewell, to all my greatness.
This is the state of man: to-day he puts for
The tender leaves of hopes; to-morrow blossoms,
And bears his blushing honours thick upon him,
The third day comes a frost, a killing frost;
And, when he thinks, good easy man, full sure
His greatness is a ripening, nips his root,
And then he falls, as I do. I have ventur’d
Like little wanton boys that swim on bladder.
This many summers in a sea of glory,
But far beyond my depth: my high-blown
At length broke under me, and now has left
Weary and old with service, to the mercy
Of a rude stream, that must for ever hide me
Vain pomp and glory of this world, I hate;
I feel my heart new open’d. O! how wretched
Is that poor man that hangs on princes’ favours,
There is, betwixt that smile we would aspire
That sweet aspect of princes, and their ruin.
More pangs and fears than wars or women had.
And when he falls, he falls like Lucifer,
Never to hope again.

Enter CROMWELL, and stands amazed.

Why, how now, Cromwell!

Crom. I have no power to speak, sir.
What! amaz'd my misfortunes? can thy spirit wonder reat man should decline? Nay, an you weep, a fall'n indeed.

How does your grace? Why, well; so truly happy, my good Cromwell. now myself now; and I feel within me since above all earthly dignities, still and quiet conscience. The king has cur'd me, umbly thank his grace; and from these shoulders, ruin'd pillars, out of pity taken would sink a navy, too much honour: 'tis a burden, Cromwell, 'tis a burden heavy for a man that hopes for heaven. I am glad your grace has made that right use of it. I hope I have: I am able now, methinks, of a fortiitude of soul I feel, endure more miseries and greater far in my weak-hearted enemies dare offer. at news abroad? The heaviest and the worst our displeasure with the king. God bless him! The next is, that Sir Thomas More is chosen chancellor in your place.

That's somewhat sudden: he's a learned man. May he continue in his highness' favour, and do justice truth's sake and his conscience; that his bones, en he has run his course and sleeps in blessings, have a tomb of orphans' tears wept on 'em! it more! That Cranmer is return'd with welcome, all'd lord archbishop of Canterbury. That's news indeed.

Last, that the Lady Anne, in the king hath in secrecy long married, a day was view'd in open as his queen, going to chapel; and the voice is now about her coronation. There was the weight that pull'd me down. O Cromwell! king has gone beyond me: all my glories that one woman I have lost for ever. sun shall ever usher forth mine honours, rild again the noble troops that waited on my smiles. Go, get thee from me, Cromwell; a poor fall'n man, unworthy now or thy lord and master: seek the king; sun, I pray, may never set! I have told him at and how true thou art: he will advance thee; little memory of me will stir him, how his noble nature, not to let hopeful service perish too. Good Cromwell, Nec him not: make use now, and provide thine own future safety.

O my lord! I then leave you? must I needs forgo Good, so noble, and so true a master?

Bear witness all that have not hearts of iron, With what a sorrow Cromwell leaves his lord. The king shall have my service; but my prayers For ever and for ever shall be yours. Cromwell, I did not think to shed a tear In all my miseries; but thou hast for'd me, Out of thy honest truth, to play the woman. Let's dry our eyes: and thus far hear me, Cromwell;

And, when I am forgotten, as I shall be, And sleep in dull cold marble, where no mention Of me more must be heard of, say, I taught thee, Say, Wolsey, that once trod the ways of glory, And sounded all the depths and shoals of honour, Found thee a way, out of his wreck, to rise in; A sure and safe one, though thy master miss'd it. Mark but my fall, and that that ruin'd me. Cromwell, I charge thee, stinging away ambition: By that sin fell the angels; how can man then, The image of his Maker, hope to win by 't? Love thyself last: cherish those hearts that hate thee;

Corruption wins not more than honesty. Still in thy right hand carry gentle peace, To silence envious tongues: be just and fear not. Let all the ends thou aim'st at be thy country's, Thy God's, and truth's: then if thou fall'st, O Cromwell! Thou fall'st a blessed martyr. Serve the king; And,—prithee, lead me in:

There take an inventory of all I have, To the last penny: 'tis the king's: my robe And my integrity to heaven is all I dare now call mine own. O Cromwell, Cromwell! Had I but serv'd my God with half the zeal I serv'd my king, he would not in mine age Have left me naked to mine enemies.

Good sir, have patience. So I have. Farewell The hopes of court! my hopes in heaven do dwell.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—A Street in Westminster.

Enter two Gentlemen, meeting.

First Gent. You're well met once again. Second Gent. So are you.

First Gent. You come to take your stand here, and behold The Lady Anne pass from her coronation? Second Gent. 'Tis all my business. At our last encounter The Duke of Buckingham came from his trial.

First Gent. 'Tis very true: but that time offer'd sorrow;

This, general joy.

Second Gent. 'Tis well: the citizens, I am sure, have shown at full their royal minds, As, let 'em have their rights, they are ever forward, In celebration of this day with shows, Pageants, and sights of honour.

First Gent. Never greater; Nor, I'll assure you, better taken, sir.

Second Gent. May I be bold to ask what that contains, That paper in your hand?

First Gent. Yes; 'tis the list
Of those that claim their offices this day
By custom of the coronation.
The Duke of Suffolk is the first, and claims
To be high-steward; next, the Duke of Norfolk,
He to be earl marshal: you may read the rest.

Second Gent. I thank you, sir: had I not known those customs,
I should have been beholding to your paper.
But, I beseech you, what's become of Katharine,
The princess dowager? how goes her business?

First Gent. That I can tell you too. The archbishop Of Canterbury, accompanied with other
Learned and reverend fathers of his order,
Held a late court at Dunstable, six miles off
From Amphilph, where the princess lay; to which
She was often cited by them, but appear'd not:
And, to be short, for not appearance and
The king's late scruple, by the main assent
Of all these learned men she was divorc'd,
And the late marriage made of none effect:
Since which she was remov'd to Kimbolton,
Where she remains now sick.

The trumpets sound: stand close, the queen is coming.

Hautboys.

THE ORDER OF THE CORONATION.
A lively flourish of trumpets.

1. Two Judges.
2. Lord Chancellor, with the purse and mace before him.
3. Choristers, singing.
4. Mayor of London, bearing the mace. Then, Garter in his coat of arms, and on his head a gold copper crown.
5. Marquess Dorset, bearing a sceptre of gold:
   on his head a demi-coroal of gold. With him, the Earl of Surrey, bearing the rod of silver with the dove, crowned with an earl's coronet.
Collars of SS.
6. Duke of Suffolk, in his robe of estate, his coronet on his head, bearing a long white wand, as high-steward. With him, the Duke of Norfolk, with the rod of marshalship, a coronet on his head. Collars of SS.
7. A canopy borne by four of the Cinque-ports;
   under it, the Queen in her robe; in her hair richly adorned with pearl, crowned. On each side her, the Bishops of London and Winchester.
8. The old Duchess of Norfolk, in a coronal of gold, wrought with flowers, bearing the Queen's train.
9. Certain Ladies or Countesses, with plain circlets of gold without flowers.
   They pass over the stage in order and state.

Second Gent. A royal train, believe me. These
   I know;
Who's that that bears the sceptre?
First Gent. Marquess Dorset.
And that the Earl of Surrey with the rod.
Second Gent. A bold brave gentleman. That should be
The Duke of Suffolk?
First Gent. 'Tis the same; high-steward.
Second Gent. And that my Lord of Norfolk?
First Gent. Yes.
Second Gent. Heaven bless thee!

Looking on the Queen.

Thou hast the sweetest face I ever look'd on Sir, as I have a soul, she is an angel;
Our king has all the Indies in his arms,
And more and richer, when he strains to
lady:
I cannot blame his conscience.

First Gent. They that
The cloth of honour over her, are four baron
Of the Cinque-ports.
Second Gent. Those men are happy; and are all are near her.
I take it, she that carries up the train
Is that old noble lady, Duchess of Norfolk.
First Gent. It is; and all the rest are counts Second Gent. Their coronets say so. These stars indeed;
And sometimes falling ones.

First Gent. No more of the Exit Procession, and then a great flour of trumpets.

Enter a third Gentleman.

God save you, sir! Where have you been broiling?

Third Gent. Among the crowd 't the Abbey where a finger
Could not be wedg'd in more: I am stifled
With the mere rankness of their joy.

Second Gent. You
The ceremony?
Third Gent. That I did.
First Gent. How was it?
Third Gent. Well worth the seeing.
Second Gent. Good sir, speak it to Third Gent. As well as I am able. The stream
Of lords and ladies, having brought the que
To a prepar'd place in the choir, fell off
A distance from her; while her grace sat down
To rest awhile, some half-an-hour or so,
In a rich chair of state, opposing freely
The beauty of her person to the people.
Believe me, sir, she is the goodliest woman
That ever lay by man: when the people
Had the full view of, such a noise arose
As the shrill notes make at sea in a stiff tempe.
So loud, and to as many tunes: hats, cloaks,
Doublets, I think, flew up; and had their far
Been loose, this day they had been lost.

joy
I never saw before. Great-bellied women,
That had not half a week to go, like rams
In the old time of war, would shake the pro
And make 'em reel before 'em. No man liv
Could say 'This is my wife' there; all were wor
So strangely in one piece.

Second Gent. But what follow'd?
Third Gent. At length her grace rose, with modest pace Came to the altar; where she kneel'd, saint-like Cast her fair eyes to heaven and pray'd devoutly
Then rose again and bow'd her to the people.
When by the archbishop of Canterbury
She had all the royal makings of a queen:
As holy oil, Edward Conessor's crown,
The rod, and bird of peace, and all such embers
Laid nobly on her: which perform'd, the chri
With all the choicest music of the kingdom,
Together sung Te Deum. So she parted, i with the same full state pae'd back again York-place, where the feast is held.

Sir.

I must no more call it York-place, that’s past;

since the cardinal fell, that title’s lost;

now the king’s, and call’d Whitehall.

I know it;

’tis so lately alter’d that the old name

resih about me.

What two reverend bishops

re those that went on each side of the queen?

Stokesley and Gardiner; the one,

of Winchester,

vly prefer’d from the king’s secretary;

other, London.

de no great lover of the archbishop’s,

a virtuous Crammer.

All the land knows that:

never, yet there’s no great breach; when it comes,

man will find a friend will not shrink from

him.

Who may that be, I pray you?

Thomas Cromwell;

an in much esteem with the king, and truly worthy friend. The king made him master of the jewel house,

one, already, of the privy council.

He will deserve more.

Yes, without all doubt,

ye, gentlemen, ye shall go my way, which the court, and there ye shall be my guests:

nothing I can command. As I walk thither, tell ye more.

You may command us, sir.

Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Kimbolton.

Katharine, Dowager, sick; led between Griffith and Pattlece.

How does your grace?

O Griffith! sick to death;

eggs, like laden branches, both to the land,

fig to leave their burden. Reach a chair:

now, methinks, I feel a little ease.

Then you will tell me, Griffith, as thou ledd’st me, t’the great child of honour, Cardinal Wolsey,

dead?

Yes, madam; but I think your grace, of the pain you suffer’d, gave no ear to’t.

Pithe. Prithee, good Griffith, tell me how he died:

ell, he stapp’d before me, happily

my example.

Well, the voice goes, madam;

after the stout Earl Northumberland

est him at York, and brought him forward, man sorely tainted, to his answer, fell sick suddenly, and grew so ill

could not sit his mule.

Ah! poor man.

At last, with easy reads, he came to

Leicester;

ld in the abbey, where the reverend abbot,

all his covent, honourably receiv’d him:

whom he gave these words: ‘O! father abbot;

old man, broken with the storms of state,

Is come to lay his weary bones among ye;

Give him a little earth for charity.’

So went to bed, where eagerly his sickness

Purs’d him still; and three nights after this,

About the hour of eight, which he himself

Foretold should be his last, full of repentance,

Continual meditations, tears, and sorrows,

He gave his honours to the world again,

His blessed part to heaven, and slept in peace.

Kath. So may he rest; his faults lie gently on him!

Yet thus far, Griffith, give me leave to speak him,

And yet with charity. He was a man

Of an unbounded stomach, ever ranking

Himself with princes; one, that by suggestion

Tied all the kingdom; simony was fair-play;

His own opinion was his law; ’t he presence

He would say untruths, and be ever double

Both in his words and meaning. He was never,

But where he meant to ruin, pitiful:

His promises were, as he then was, mighty;

But his performance, as he is now, nothing:

Of his own body he was ill, and gave

The clergy ill example.

Noble madam,

Men’s evil manners live in brass; their virtues

We write in water. May it please your highness

To hear me speak his good now?

Kath. Yes, good Griffith;

I were malicious else,

This cardinal,

Though from an humble stock, undoubtedly

Was fashion’d to much honour from his cradle.

He was a scholar, and a ripe and good one;

Exceeding wise, fair-spoken, and persuading;

Lofty and sour to them that lov’d him not;

But to the 22 men that sought him sweet as summer.

And though he were unsatisfied in getting,

Which was a sin, yet in bestowing, madam,

He was most princely. Ever witness for him

Those twins of learning, that he rais’d in you,

Ipswich and Oxford! one of which fell with

him,

Unwilling to outlive the good that did it;

The other, though unfinished, yet so famous,

So excellent in art, and still so rising,

That Christendom shall ever speak his virtue.

His overthrow heap’d happiness upon him;

For then, and not till then, he felt himself,

And found the blessedness of being little:

And, to add greater honours to his age

Than man could give him, he died fearing God.

Kath. After my death I wish no other herald,

No other speaker of my living actions,

To keep mine honour from corruption,

But such an honest chronicler as Griffith.

Whom I most hated living, thou hast made me,

With thy religious truth and modesty,

Now in his ashes honour. Peace be with him!

Patience, be near me still; and set me lower:

I have not long to trouble thee. Good Griffith,

Cause the musicians play me that sad note

I nam’d my knell, whilst I sit meditating

On that celestial harmony I go to.

Sad and solemn music.

Grif. She is asleep: good wench, let’s sit down quiet,

For fear we wake her: softly, gentle Patience.
The Vision. Enter, solemnly tripping one after another, six Personages, clad in white robes, wearing on their heads garlands of boys, and golden wands on their faces; branches of boys or palm in their hands. They first congoe unto her; then dance; and, at certain changes, the first two hold a garland over her head; at which the other four make reverent courtly: then the two that held the garland deliver the same to the other next two, who observe the same order in their changes, and holding the garland over her head: which done, they deliver the same garland to the last two, who likewise observe the same order: at which, as it were by inspiration, she makes in her sleep signs of rejoicing, and holdeth up her hands to heaven: and so in their dancing vanish, carrying the garland with them. The music continues.

Kath. Spirits of peace, where are ye? are ye all gone,
And leave me here in wretchedness behind ye?
Grif. Madam, we are here.
Kath. It is not you I call for:
Saw ye none enter since I slept?
Grif. None, madam.
Kath. No? Saw you not, even now, a blessed troop Invite me to a banquet; whose bright faces
Cast thousand beams upon me, like the sun?
They promised me eternal happiness,
And brought me garlands, Griffith, which I feel
I am not worthy yet to wear: I shall, assuredly.
Grif. I am most joyful, madam, such good dreams
Possess your fancy.
Kath. Bid the music leave,
They are harsh and heavy to me. Music ceases.
Pat. Do you note
How much her grace is alter'd on the sudden?
How long her face is drawn? how pale she looks,
And of an earthly cold? Mark her eyes!
Grif. She is going, wench. Pray, pray.
Pat. Heaven comfort her!

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. An't like your grace,—
Kath. You are a saucy fellow: so
Deserve we no more reverence?
Grif. You are to blame,
Knowing she will not lose her wondred greatness,
To use so rude behaviour: go to; kneel.
Mess. I humbly do entreat your highness' pardon;
My haste made me unmannerly. There is staying
A gentleman, sent from the king, to see you.
Kath. Admit him entrance, Griffith: but this fellow
Let me ne'er see again.

Exit Griffith and Messenger.

Re-enter Griffith, with Capucius.

If my sight fail not,
You should belord ambassador from the emperor,
My royal nephew, and your name Capucius.
Cap. Madam, the same; your servant.
Kath. O my lord!
The times and titles now are alter'd strangely
With me since first you knew me. But, I pray you,
What is your pleasure with me?
Cap. Noble lady,
First, mine own service to your grace; the
The king's request that I would visit you;
Who grieves much for your weakness, and by Sends you his princely commendations,
And heartily entreats you take good comfort
Kath. O! my good lord, that comfort comes too late;
'Tis like a pardon after execution:
That gentle physic, given in time, had cur'd;
But now I am past all comforts here but pray
How does his highness?
Cap. Madam, in good heart.
Kath. So may he ever do! and ever flour.
When I shall dwell with worms, and my own Banish'd the kingdom. Patience, is that let,
I caus'd you write yet sent away?
Pat. No, madam.

Giving it to Katharine
Kath. Sir, I most humbly pray you to deliver
This to my lord the king.
Cap. Most willing, madam.
Kath. In which I have commended to goodness
The model of our chaste loves, his yo daughter:
The dews of heaven fall thick in blessings her!
Beseecing him to give her virtuous breeding
She is young, and of a noble modest nature,
I hope she will deserve well,—and a little
To love her for her mother's sake, that lov'd
Heaven knows howdearly. My next poor pet
Is, that his noble grace would have some pity
Upon my wretched women, that so long
Have follow'd both my fortunes faithfully:
Of which there is not one, I dare avow,
And now I should not lie, but will deserve,
For virtue, and true beauty of the soul,
For honesty, and decent carriage,
A right good husband, let him be a noble;
And, sure, those men are happy that shall have
'em,
The last is, for my men: they are the poore:
But poverty could never draw 'em from me:
That they may have their wages duly paid, and
And something over to remember me by:
If heaven had pleas'd to have given me long life
And able means, we had not parted thus.
These are the whole contents: and, good lord,
By that you love the dearest in this world,
As you wish Christian peace to souls departed, Stand these poor people's friend, and urge
king
To do me this last right.
Cap. By heaven, I will,
Or let me lose the fashion of a man!
Kath. I thank you, honest lord. Remem
me
In all humility unto his highness:
Say his long trouble now is passing
Out of this world; tell him, in death I ble
him,
For so I will. Mine eyes grow dim. Farew.
My lord, Griffith, farewell. Nay, Patience,
You must not leave me yet: I must to bed;
in more women. When I am dead, good wench, me be us’d with honour: straw me over h maiden flowers, that all the world may know is a chaste wife to my grave: embalm me, lay me forth: although unqueen’d, yet like een, and daughter to a king, inter me.
no more. _Exeunt, leading _KATHARINE._

ACT V.

SCENE I.—London. A Gallery in the Palace.

1. GARDINER, Bishop of Winchester, a Page with a torch before him, met by _Sir THOMAS OVELL._

1r. It’s one o’clock, boy, is’t not?

2r. It hath struck.

3r. These should be hours for necessities, for delights; times to repair our nature

h comforting repose, and not for us waste these times. Good hour of night, Sir

Thomas! Ither so late?

4r. Came you from the king, my lord?

4r. I did, Sir Thomas; and left him at primero

i the Duke of Suffolk.

4r. I must to him too, o’re he go to bed. I’ll take my leave.

4r. Not yet, Sir Thomas Lovell. What’s the mater!

9ems you are in haste: an if there be great offence belongs to t, give your friend

u touch of your late business: affairs, that walk

ney spirits do, at midnight, have em a wilder nature than the business

y seeks dispatch by day.

6r. My lord, I love you, durst commend a secret to your ear

h weigher than this work. The queen’s in y say, in great extremity; and fear’d

‘ill with the labour end.

1r. The fruit she goes with ay for heartily, that it may find a don time, and live: but for the stock, Sir

Thomas, ish it grubb’d up now.

9r. Methinks I could

s the amen; and yet my conscience says
's a good creature, and, sweet lady, does se our better wishes.

1r. But, sir, sir,

r me, Sir Thomas: you’re a gentleman me own way: I know you wise, religious;

, let me tell you, it will ne’er be well,

ill not, Sir Thomas Lovell, take ‘t of me,

1r. Cranmer, Cromwell, her two hands, and she, ep in their graves.

otr. Now, sir, you speak of two a most remark’d i’ the kingdom. As for

Cromwell,

side that of the jewel house, is made master

the rolls, and the king’s secretary; further,

sir,

Stands in the gap and trade of more preferments,

With which the time will load him. The archbishop

Is the king’s hand and tongue; and who dare

speak

One syllable against him?

_Gar._ Yes, yes, Sir Thomas,

There are that dare; and I myself have ventur’d to speak my mind of him: and indeed this day,

Sir, I may tell it you, I think I have Insens’d the lords o’ the council that he is,

For so I know he is, they know he is,

A most arch heretic, a pestilence

That does infect the land: with which they mov’d

Have broken with the king; who hath so far

Given ear to our complaint, of his great grace

And princely care, foreseeing those fell mischiefs

Our reasons laid before him, hath commanded

To-morrow morning to the council-board

He be convened. He’s a rank weed, Sir

Thomas,

And we must root him out. From your affairs

I hinder you too long: good night, Sir Thomas!

_Lov._ Many good nights, my lord. I rest your servant. _Exeunt_ GARDINER _and Page._

_Enter the KING and SUFFOLK._

_K. Hen._ Charles, I will play no more to-night;

My mind’s not on’t; you are too hard for me.

_Suf._ Sir, I did never win of you before.

_K. Hen._ But little, Charles;

Nor shall not when my fancy’s on my play.

_Den._ Now, Lovell, from the queen what is the news?

_Lov._ I could not personally deliver to her

What you commanded me, but by her woman

I sent your message; who return’d her thanks

In the greatest humbleness, and desir’d your

highness

Most heartily to pray for her,

_K. Hen._ What say’st thou, ha?

To pray for her! what! is she crying out?

_Lov._ So said her woman; and that her sufferance made

Almost each pang a death.

_K. Hen._ Alas! good lady.

_Suf._ God safely quit her of her burden, and _with gentle travail, to the gladding of

Your highness with an heir!_ K. Hen._ The midnight, Charles;

Prithie, to bed; and in thy prayers remember

The estate of my poor queen. Leave me alone;

For I must think of that which company

Would not be friendly to.

_Suf._ I wish your highness

A quiet night; and my good mistress will Remember in my prayers.

_K. Hen._ Charles, good night. _Exit SUFFOLK._

_Enter Sir ANTHONY DENNY._

_Well, sir, what follows?_ Den._ Sir, I have brought my lord the archbishop,

As you commanded me.

_K. Hen._ Ha! Canterbury?

_Den._ Ay, my good lord.

_K. Hen._ 'Tis true: where is he, Denny?

_Den._ He attends your highness’ pleasure.
K. Hen. Bring him to us. Exit DENNY.

Lov. Aside. This is about that which the bishop spake:
I am happily come hither.

Re-enter DENNY, with CRANMER.

K. Hen. Avoid the gallery. LOVELL seems to stay.

Ha! I have said. Be gone.

What! Except LOVELL and DENNY.

Cran. I am fearful. Wherefore frowns he thus?

'Tis his aspect of terror: all's not well.

K. Hen. How now, my lord! You do desire to know
Wherefore I sent for you.

Cran. Kneeling. It is my duty

To attend your highness' pleasure.

K. Hen. Pray you, arise,
My good and gracious lord of Canterbury.
Come, you and I must walk a turn together;
I have news to tell you: come, come, give me your hand.

Ah! my good lord, I grieve at what I speak,
And am right sorry to repeat what follows.
I have, and most unwillingly, of late
Heard many grievous, I do say, my lord,
Grievous complaints of you; which, being consider'd,

Have mov'd us and our council, that you shall
This morning come before us; where, I know,
You cannot with such freedom purge yourself,
But that, till further trial in those charges
Which will require your answer, you must take
Your patience to you, and be well contented.
To make your house our Tower: you a brother
of us.

It suits we thus proceed, or else no witness
Would come against you.

Cran. Kneeling. I humbly thank your highness;
And am right glad to catch this good occasion
Most thoroughly to be winnow'd, where my chaff
And corn shall fly asunder; for I know
There's none stands under more calumnious tongues
Than I myself, poor man.

K. Hen. Stand up, good Canterbury: Thy truth and thy integrity is rooted
In us, thy friend: give me thy hand, stand up;
Prithee, let's walk. Now, by my hollidame,
What manner of man are you? My lord, I look'd
You would have given me your petition, that I should have ta'en some pains to bring together
Yourself and your accusers; and to have heard you,

Without endurance, further.

Cran. Most dread liege,
The good I stand on is my truth and honesty:
If they shall fail, I, with mine enemies,
Will triumph o'er my person; which I weigh not,
Being of those virtues vacant. I fear nothing
What can be said against me.

K. Hen. Know you not
How your state stands in the world, with the whole world?
Your enemies are many, and not small; their practices

Must bear the same proportion; and not ever
The justice and the truth o' the question carries
The due o' the verdict with it. At what end
Might corrupt minds procure knaves as corn?
To swear against you? such things have been done.

You are potently oppos'd, and with a malice
As of great size. Woe you of better luck,
I mean in perjur'd witness, than your master.
Whose minister you are, whiles here he liv'd.

Upon this naughty earth? Go to, go to;
You take a precipice for no leap of danger,
And wool your own destruction.

Cran. God and your majesty Protect mine innocence! or I fall into
The trap is laid for me.

K. Hen. Be of good cheer;
They shall no more prevail than we give way,
Keep comfort to you; and this morning see
You do appear before them. If they shall chance,

In charging you with matters, to commit you,
The best persuasions to the contrary
Fail not to use, and with what vehemency
The occasion shall instruct you: if entreaty
Will render you no remedy, this ring
Deliver them, and your appeal to us
There make before them. Look! the good weeps;

He's honest, on mine honour. God's b' Enter CRANMER.

Cran. He has strangle.

His language in his tears.

Enter an old Lady.

Gent. Within. Come back: what mean ye?

Old Lady. I'll not come back; the tidings that I bring
Will make my boldness manners. Now, go,
Angels
Fly o'er thy royal head, and shade thy person
Under their blessed wings!

K. Hen. Now, by thy love
I guess thy message. Is the queen deliver'd
Say, ay? and of a boy,

Old Lady. Ay, ay, my liege;
And of a lovely boy: the God of heaven
Both now and ever bless her! 'tis a girl,
Promises boys hereafter. Sir, your queen Desires your visitation, and to be Acquainted with this stranger: 'tis as like y
As cherry is to cherry.

K. Hen. Lovell!

Re-enter LOVELL.

Lov. Sir!

K. Hen. Give her an hundred marks. I'll the queen.

Old Lady. An hundred marks! By this lig
I'll ha' more.

An ordinary groom is for such payment: I will have more, or scold it out of him. Said I for this the girl was like to him? I will have more, or else unsay 't; and now, While it is hot, I'll put it to the issue. Exec
SCENE II.—The Lobby before the Council-Chamber.

Pursuivants, Pages, etc., attending.

Enter CRANMER.

CRAN. I hope I am not too late; and yet the gentleman that was sent to me from the council, pray'd me make great haste. All fast? what means this? Ho!
so waits there?

Enter Keeper.

KEEP. Sure, you know me?

CRAN. Yes, my lord; yet I cannot help you.

KEEP. Why? My grace must wait till you be call'd for.

CRAN. Enter Doctor BUTTS.

BUTTS. Sir, Iam this a piece of malice. I am glad that they speak so happily: the king is not used to it presently. Exit.

CRAN. This is Butts, the king's physician. As he pass'd along,
I saw him set his eyes upon me.

CRAN. Why is this, my grace? I should have be call'd for.

BUTTS. If the king's pleasure were to be fulfill'd, and I attend with patience.

CRAN. Enter the KING and BUTTS at a window above.

BUTTS. I'll show your grace the strangest sight,—
H. Hen. What's that, Butts? Butts. I think your highness saw this many a day.
H. Hen. Body o' me, where is it?

BUTTS. There, my lord: the high promotion of his grace of Canterbury; who holds his state at door, among pursuivants, yes, and footboys.
K. Hen. Ha'! 'tis he, indeed.

SWEL. 'Tis the honour they do one another?

H. Hen. Swell there's one above 'em yet. I thought they had part so much honesty among 'em, least good manners, as not to suffer man of his place, and so near our favour, danceattendsion their lordships' pleasures, and at the door too, like a post with packets.

BUTTS. Holy Mary, Butts, there's knavery: 't's alone, and draw the curtain close;
shall hear more anon.

SCENE III.—The Council-Chamber.

Enter the Lord Chancellor, the Duke of Suffolk, the Duke of Norfolk, the Earl of Surrey, the Lord Chamberlain, Gardiner, and Cromwell. The Chancellor places himself at the upper end of the table on the left hand; a seat being left void above him, as for the Arch Bishop of Canterbury. The rest seat themselves in order on each side. Cromwell at the lower end, as secretary. Keeper at the door.

CHAN. Speak to the business, Master secretary: by are we met in council?

Crom. Please your honours, The chief cause concerns his grace of Canterbury.

Gar. Has he had knowledge of it?

Crom. Yes. Nor. Who waits there? Keep. Without, my noble lords?

Gar. Yes. Keep. My lord archbishop; And has done half-an-hour, to know your pleasures.

CHAN. Let him come in.

Keep. Your grace may enter now.

CRANMER enters, and approaches the council-table.

CHAN. My good lord archbishop, I'm very sorry To sit here at this present and behold That chair stand empty: but we all are men, 10 In our own natures frail, and capable Of our flesh; few are angels: out of which frailty And want of wisdom, you, that best should teach us, Have misdemean'd yourself, and not a little, Toward the king first, then his laws, in filling The whole realm, by your teaching and your chaplains,
For so we are inform'd, with new opinions, Divers and dangerous; which are hersies, And, not reform'd, may prove pernicious. 19 Gar. Which reformation must be sudden too,
My noble lords; for those that tame wild horses Face' em not in their hands to make 'em gentle, But stop their mouths with stubborn bits, and spur 'em,
Till they obey the manage. If we suffer,
Out of our easiness and childish pity To one man's honour, this contagious sickness, Farewell all physic: and what follows then? Commotions, uproars, with a general taint Of the wholestate: as, of late days, our neighbours, The upper Germany, can dearly witness, Yet freshly pitied in our memories.

CRAN. My good lords, hitherto, in all the progress Of my life and office, I have laboured;
And with no little study, that my teaching And the strong course of my authority Might go one way, and safely; and the end Ever to do well: nor is there living,
I speak it with a single heart, my lords,
A man that more detests, more stirs against,
Both in his private conscience and his place, 29 Of defacers of a public peace, than I do.
Pray heaven the king may never find a heart With less allegiance in it! Men that make Envy and crooked malice nourishment
Dare bite the best. I do beseech your lordships
That in this case of justice, my accusers,
Be what they will; may stand forth face to face,
And freely urge against me.

SUF. Nay, my lord,

Gar. That cannot be: you are a councillor,
And by that virtue no man dare accuse you. 39 Gar. My lord, because we have business of more moment,
We will be short with you. 'Tis his highness' pleasure,
And our consent, for better trial of you,
From hence you be committed to the Tower; Where, being but a private man again,
You shall know many dare accuse you boldly.
More than, I fear, you are provided for,
Cron. Ah! my good lord of Winchester, I thank you;
You are always my good friend: if your will pass,
I shall both find your lordship judge and juror,
You are so merciful. I see your end; 61
'Tis my undoing: love and meekness, lord,
Become a churchman better than ambition:
Win straying souls with modesty again,
Cast none away. That I shall clear myself,
Lay all the weight ye can upon my patience,
I make as little doubt, as you do conscience
In doing daily wrongs. I could say more,
But reverence to your calling makes me modest.

Gar. My lord, my lord, you are a sectary; 70
That's the plain truth: your painted gloss discover,
To mention that understand you, words and weakness.
Crom. My lord of Winchester, you are a little,
By your good favour, too sharp; men so noble,
However faulty, yet should find respect
For what they have been: 'tis a cruelty
To load a falling man.

Crom. Good Master secretary,
I cry your honour mercy; you may, worst
Of all this table, say so.

Gar. Why, my lord?
Crom. Do not I know you for a favourer 89
Of this new sect! ye are not sound.

Crom. Not sound?
Gar. Not sound, I say.
Crom. Would you were half so honest!
Men's prayers then would seek you, not their fears.
Gar. I shall remember this bold language.
Crom. Do. Remember your bold life too.

Cham. This is too much;
Forbear, for shame, my lords.
Gar. I have done.

Cham. Then thus for you, my lord: it stands agreed,
I take it, by all voices, that forthwith
You be convey'd to the Tower a prisoner; 89
There to remain till the king's further pleasure
Be known unto us. Are you all agreed, lords?
All. We are.

Cran. Is there no other way of mercy,
But I must needs to the Tower, my lords?
Gar. What other
Would you expect? you are strangely troublesome,
Let some o' the guard be ready there.

Enter Guard.

Cran. For me?
Must I go like a traitor thither?
Gar. Receive him,
And see him safe i' the Tower.
Cran. Stay, good my lords;
I have a little yet to say. Look there, my lords;
By virtue of that ring I take my cause
Out of the grimes of cruel men, and give it 100
To a most noble judge, the king my master.

Cham. This is the king's ring.

Sur. 'Tis no counterfeit.

Suf. 'Tis the right ring, by heaven! I told ye all.

When we first put this dangerous stone a-rolling,
I would fall upon ourselves.

Nor. Do you think, my lords, The king will suffer but the little finger

Of this man to be vex'd?

Cham. 'Tis now too certain.
How much more is his life in value with him
Would I were fairly out on 't!

Crom. My mind gave me
In seeking tales and informations
Against this man, whose honesty the devil
And his disciples only envy at,
Ye blew the fire that burns ye: now have at ye.

Enter the King, frowning on them; he takes his seat.

Gar. Dread sovereign, how much are we bound to heaven
In daily thanks, that gave us such a prince;
Not only good and wise, but most religious:
One that in all obedience makes the church
The chief aim of his honour; and, to strength
That holy duty, out of dear respect,
His royal self in judgment comes to hear
The cause betwixt her and this great offender.

K. Hen. You were ever good at sudden condonements,
Bishop of Winchester; but now, I come not
To hear such slatternly now, and in my present
They are too thin and bare to hide offences.
To me you cannot reach; you play the spank
And think with wagging of your tongue to win
But, whatsoe'er thou tak'st me for, I'm sure
Thou hast a cruel nature and a bloody.

To CRANMER. Good man, sit down. Now I see the proudest
He, that dares most, but wag his finger at
By all that's holy, he had better starve
Than but once think this place becomes thee.

Sur. May it please your grace,

K. Hen. No, sir, it does not please me
I had thought I had had men of somestanding
And wisdom of my council; but I find none,
Was it discretion, lords, to let this man,
This good man, few of you deserve that title,
This honest man, wait like a lousy footboy
At chamber-door? and one as great as you ar
Why, what a shame was this! Did my commission
Bid ye so far forget yourselves? I gave ye Power as he was a counsellor to try him,
Not as a groom. There's some of ye, I see,
More out of malice than integrity.
Would try him to the utmost, had ye mean;
Which ye shall never while I live.

Cham. Thus far
My most dread sovereign, may it like your grace
To let my tongue excuse all. What was pur-Concerning his imprisonment, was rather.
If there be faith in men, meant for his trial
And fair purgation to the world, than malice,
I'm sure, in me.

K. Hen. Well, well, my lords, respect him,
Take him, and use him well; he's worthy of
I will say thus much for him, if a prince
May be beholding to a subject, I Am, for his love and service, so to him.
Make me no more ado, but all embrace him;
Be friends, for shame, my lords! My lord of Canterbury,
I have a suit which you must not deny me;
That is, a fair young maid that yet wants baptism
You must be godfather, and answer for her.
KING HENRY VIII.

Scene IV.—The Palace Yard.

Enter Porter and his Man.

Port. You'll leave your noise anon, ye rascals; you take the court for Paris-garden! ye rude es, leave your gaping.

Man. Good Master porter, I belong to the yard. You belong to the gallows, and be hanged, gue! Is this a place to roar in? Fetch me a crab-tree staves, and strong ones: these at switches to 'em. I'll scratch your heads: must be seeing christenings! Do you look for cakes here, you rude rascals? I'll be no patient; sir, ye patient: 'tis as much impossible, as we sweep 'em from the door with cannons, cutter 'em, as 'tis to make 'em sleep day-day morning; which will never be, may as well push against Paul's as stir 'em. How got they in, and be hang'd?

An' alas! I know not; how gets the tide in? such as one sound cudgel of four foot, see the poor remainder, could distribute, so no spare, sir.

You did nothing, sir.

An' I am not Samson, nor Sir Guy, nor Colbrand, now 'em down before me; but if I spared any had a head to hit, either young or old, or she, cuckold or cuckold-maker, me ner' hope to see a chine again; a that I would not for a cow, God save her! Thikin. Do you hear, Master porter?

Port. I shall be with you presently, good sir puppy. Keep the door close, sirrah.

Man. What would you have me do?

Port. What should you do, but knock 'em in by the dozens? Is this Moorfields to ter in? or have we some strange Indian with great tool come to court, the women so be-
KING HENRY VIII.

Scene V.—The Palace.
Enter Trumpets, sounding; then two Aldermen, the Lord Mayor, Garter, Cranmer, the Duke of Norfolk, with his marshal's staff, the Duke of Suffolk, two Noblemen bearing great standing-bowls for the christening-gifts; then four Noblemen bearing a canopy, under which the Duchess of Norfolk, godmother, bearing the child richly habited in a mantle, etc., train borne by a Lady: then follows the Marchioness of Dorset, the other godmother, and Ladies. The troop pass once about the stage, and Garter speaks.

Gart. Heaven, from thy endless goodness, send prosperous life, long, and ever happy, to the high and mighty princess of England, Elizabeth!

Flourish. Enter the King and Train.

Cran. Kneeling. And to your royal grace, and the good queen,
My noble partners, and myself, thus pray:
All comfort, joy, in this most gracious lady,
Heaven ever laid up to make parents happy,
May hourly fall upon ye!
K. Hen. Thank you, good lord archbishop:
What is her name?
Cran. Elizabeth.
K. Hen. Stand up, lord.
The King kisses the Child.
With this kiss take my blessing: God protect thee!
Into whose hand I give thy life.
Cran. Amen.
K. Hen. My noble gossips, ye have been too prodigal:
I thank ye heartily: so shall this lady
When she has so much English.
Cran. Let me speak, sir,
For heaven now bids me; and the words I utter
Let none think flattery, for they'll find 'em truth.
This royal infant, heaven still move about her!
Though in her cradle, yet now promises
Upon this land a thousand thousand blessings,
Which time shall bring to ripeness: she shall be,
But few now living can behold that goodness,
A pattern to all princes living with her,
And all that shall succeed: Saba was never
More covetous of wisdom and fair virtue
Than this pure soul shall be: all princely graces,
That mould up such a mighty piece as this is,
With all the virtues that attend the good,
Shall still be doubled on her; truth shall nurse her;
Holy and heavenly thoughts still counsel her;
She shall be lov'd and fear'd; her own shall bless her;
Her foes shake like a field of beaten corn,
And hang their heads with sorrow; good grows with her.
In her days every man shall eat in safety
Under his own vine what he plants; and sing
The merry songs of peace to all his neighbours,

God shall be truly known; and those about
From her shall read the perfect ways of hon;
And by those claim their greatness, not by lie:
Nor shall this peace sleep with her; but as w,
The bird of wonder dies, the maiden phoebe;
Her ashes new create another heir,
As great in admiration as herself,
So shall she leave her blessedness to one.
When heaven shall call her from this cloud:
Darkness,
Who, from the sacred ashes of her honour,
Shall star-like rise, as great in fame as she:
And so stand fix'd. Peace, plenty, love, terror,
That were the servants to this chosen infant:
Shall then be his, and like a vine grow to his:
Wherever the bright sun of heaven shall shine,
His honour and the greatness of his name
Shall be, and make new nations; he shall flow,
And, like a mountain cedar, reach his brand
To all the plains about him; our children
Shall see this and bless heaven.

K. Hen. Thou speakest wrong.
Cran. She shall be, to the happiness of England,
An aged princess; many days shall see her,
And yet no day without a deed to crown it.
Would I had known no more! but she must be,
She must, the saints must have her, yet a vine.
A most unspotted lily she shall pass
To the ground, and all the world shall mourn:
K. Hen. O lord archbishop!
Thou hast made me now a man: never, bel
This happy child, did I get any thing.
This oracle of comfort has so pleas'd me,
That, when I am in heaven, I shall desire
To see what this child does, and praise my Mr.
I thank ye all. To you, my good lord may
And your good brethren, I am much behold,
I have receiv'd much honour by your presence
And ye shall find me thankful. Lead the lords:
Ye must all see the queen, and she must thank,
She will be sick else. This day, no man thi
Has business at his house; for all shall stay.
This little one shall make it holiday.

EpiLOGUE.

'Tis ten to one this play can never please
All that are here: some come to take their case,
And sleep an act or two; but those, we fear,
We have frightened with our trumpets; 'tis else.
They'll say 'tis naught: others, to hear the cit
Ambush'd extremely, and to cry 'That's witty'
Which we have not done neither: that, I fear,
All the expected good we're like to hear
For this play, at this time, is only in
The merciful construction of good women;
For such a one we show'd 'em: if they smile
And say 'twould do, I know, within a while
All the best men are ours; for 'tis ill hap
If they hold when their ladies bid 'em clap.

DRAMATIS PERSONAE.

RIAM, King of Troy.

ELenus,
ARGANELON, a bastard Son of Priam.
NEANAS, NTENOR,

ANDARUS, Uncle to Cressida.
AMEMNON, the Grecian General.
ENELAUS, his Brother.

Trojan and Greek Soldiers, and Attendants.

SCENE.—Troy, and the Grecian Camp before it.

PROLOGUE.

Troy there lies the scene. From isles of Greece, princes orgulous, their high blood chaf'd,
To the port of Athens sent their ships, right with the ministers and instruments
To land: sixty and nine, that were crownets regal, from the Athenian bay forth: and their row is made ravish'd Troy, within whose strong immures hasten'd Helen, Menelaus' queen, want Paris sleeps; and that's the quarrel.
Tended they come,
The deep-drawing barks do there disgorge
war-like fraughtage: now on Dardan plains fresh and yet unbruised Greeks do pitch brave pavilions: Priam's six-gated city, and Tymbria, Helius, Cletus, Trojan, Antenorides, with massy staples corresponsive and fulfilling bolts, up the sons of Troy.

Expectation, tickling skittish spirits
one and other side, Trojan and Greek, as all on hazard. And hither am I come prologue armed, but not in confidence author's pen or actor's voice, but suited like conditions as our argument, tell you, fair beholders, that our play ups o'er the variant and firstlings of those broils, running in the middle; starting thence away
what may be digested in a play.

or find fault; do as your pleasures are:
so good or bad, 'tis but the chance of war.

ACT I.

Enter Troilus armed, and Pandaralus.

Tro. Call here my varlet, I'll unarm again:
Why should I war without the walls of Troy,
That find such cruel battle here within?
Each Trojan that is master of his heart,
Let him to field; Troilus, alas! hath none.

Pan. Will this gear ne'er be mended?

Tro. The Greeks are strong, and skilful to their strength,
Fierce to their skill, and to their fierceness valiant;

But I am weaker than a woman's tear,
Tamer than sleep, fonder than ignorance,
Less valiant than the virgin in the night,
And skilless as unpractic'd infancy.

Pan. Well, I have told you enough of this:

for my part, I'll not meddle nor make no further.
He that will have a cake out of the wheat must needs tarry the grinding.

Tro. Have I not tarried?

Pan. Ay, the grinding; but you must tarry the bolting.

Tro. Have I not tarried?

Pan. Ay, the bolting; but you must tarry the leavening.

Tro. Still have I tarried.

Pan. Ay, to the leavening; but here's yet in the word 'hereafter' the kneading, the making of the cake, the heating of the oven, and the TROILUS AND CRESSIDA.

Scene I.—The Camp.

Exit Pandarus. An alarum.

TROILUS. Pray, you speak no more to me! I will leave all as I found it, and there end.

Exit Pandarus.

TROILUS. Peace, you ungracious clamours! per rude sounds!

Fools on both sides! Helen must needs be!
When with your blood you daily paint her til
I cannot fight upon this argument;
It is too starv’d a subject for my sword.
But Pandarus,—O gods! how do you plague me!
I cannot come to Cressid but by Pandar;
And he’s as tetchy to be woo’d to woo.
As she is stubborn-chaste against all suit.
Tell me, Apollo, for thy Daphne’s love,
What Cressid is, what Pandar, and what we her bed is India; there she lies, a pearl;
Between our Ilium and where she resides.
Let it be call’d the wild and wandering flood.
Ourself the merchant, and this sailing Pand;
Our doubtful hope, our convoy and our bark.

ALARUM. Enter Æneas.

ÆNEAS. How now, Prince Troilus! wheref not a-field?

TROILUS. Because not there; this woman’s ans sorts,
For womanish it is to be from thence.
What news, Æneas, from the field to-day?

ÆNEAS. That Paris is returned home, and ha

TROILUS. By whom, Æneas?

ÆNEAS. Troilus, by Menelaus.

TROILUS. Let Paris bleed: ’tis but a scar to see Paris is gor’d with Menelaus’ horn. Alarum.

ÆNEAS. Hark! what good sport is out of to-
do.

TROILUS. Better at home, if ‘would I might’ w
may,

But to the sport abroad; are you bound thil

ÆNEAS. In all swift haste.

TROILUS. Come, go we then together.

Exit.

SCENE II.—The Same. A Street.

Enter Cressida and Alexander.

CRESSIDA. Who were those went by?

ALEX. Queen Hecuba and Helen.

CRESSIDA. And whither go they?

ALEX. Up to the eastern tow.

Whose height commands as subject all the w

To see the battle. Hector, whose patience I
Is, as a virtue, fix’d, to-day was mov’d;
He chid Andromache, and struck his armour.
And, like as there were husbandry in war,
Before the sun rose he was harness’d light.
And to the field goes he; where every flower
Died, as a prophet, weep what it foresaw
In Hector’s wrath.

CRESSIDA. What was his cause of anger?

ALEX. The noise goes, this: there is ame
the Greeks
A lord of Trojan blood, nephew to Hector;
They call him Ajax.

CRESSIDA. Good; and what of him?

ALEX. They say he is a very man per se,

And stands alone.

CRESSIDA. So do all men; unless they are drun sick, or have no legs.

ALEX. This man, lady, hath robbed many be of their particular additions: he is as vali baking; nay, you must stay the cooling too, or you may chance to burn your lips.

TROILUS. Patience herself, what goddess e’er she be,

That she would have the dinner rise a tine I do.

At Pram’s royal table do I sit;
And when fair Cressid comes into my thoughts,—

So, traitor! when she comes! When is she thence!

PAN. Well, she looked yesternight fairer than ever I saw her look, or any woman else.

TROILUS. I was about to tell thee: when my heart,

As wedged with a sigh, would rive in twain,

Lest Hector or my father should perceive me,

I have, as when the sun doth light a storm.

Buried this sigh in wrinkle of a smile;

But sorrow, that is couched in seeming gladness,

Is like that mirthful face turns to sudden sadness.

Pan. An her hair were not somewhat darker than Helen’s, well, go to, there were no more comparison between the women: but for my part, she is my kinswoman; I would not, as they term it, praise her; but I would somebody had heard her talk yesterday, as I did: I will not dispraise your sister Cassandra’s wit, but—

TROILUS. O Pandarus! I tell thee, Pandarus.—

When I do tell thee, there my hopes lie drown’d;

Reply not in how many fathoms deep

They lie indrench’d. I tell thee I am mad

In Cressid’s love: thou answer’st, she is fair;

Pour’st in the open ulcer of my heart

Her eyes, her hair, her cheek, her gait, her voice;

Handlest in thy discourse, O! that her hand,

In whose comparison all whites are ink,

Writing their own reproach; to whose soft seizure

The cygnet’s down is harsh, and spirit of sense
Hard as the palm of ploughman: this thou tell’st me,

As true thou tell’st me, when I say I love her;

But, saying thus, instead of oil and balm,

Thou lay’st in every gash that love hath given me

The knife that made it.

PAN. I speak no more than truth.

TROILUS. Thou dost not speak so much.

PAN. Faith, I’ll not meddle in’t. Let her be as she is: if she be fair, ’tis the better for her;

an she be not, she has the mends in her own hands.

TROILUS. Good Pandarus, how now, Pandarus!

PAN. I have had my labour for my travail;

ill-thought on of her, and ill-thought on of you:

gone between, and between, but small thanks for my labour.

TROILUS. What! art thou angry, Pandarus! what
with me?

PAN. Because she’s kin to me, therefore she’s not so fair as Helen: an she were not kin to me, she would be as fair on Friday as Helen is on Sunday. But what care I? I care not an she were a black-a-moor; ’tis all one to me.

TROILUS. Say I she is not fair?

PAN. I do not care whether you do or no,

She’s a fool to stay behind her father: let her to the Greeks; and so I’ll tell her the next time I see her. For my part, I’ll meddle nor make no more i’ the matter.

PAN. Pandarus,

TROILUS. Not I.

TROILUS. Sweet Pandarus,— troilus how you there for she his good yes, 401 100605 he when i he why, poor not and 141 queen hex. ’a??.

res. Who comes here?

ler. Madam, your uncle Pandarus.

Enter Pandarus.

res. Hector’s a gallant man.

tex. As may be in the world, lady.

’an. What’s that? what’s that?

res. Good morrow, uncle Pandarus.

tex. Good morrow, cousin Cressid. What do talk of? Good morrow, Alexander. How you, cousin? When were you at Ilion?

’an. This morning, uncle.

’an. What were you talking of when I came? is Hector armed and gone ere ye came to m? Helen was not up, was she?

res. Hector was gone, but Helen was not up.

’an. Even so; Hector was stirring early.

’an. That were we talking of; and of his anger.

’an. Was he angry?

’an. So he says here.

’an. True, he was so; I know the cause too: I lay about him to-day, I can tell them that: there’s Troilus will not come far behind; let them take heed of Troilus, I can tell at that too.

’an. What! is he angry too?

’an. Who, Troilus? Troilus is the better man in two.

’an. O Jupiter! there’s no comparison.

’an. What! not between Troilus and Hector? you know a man if you see him?

’an. Ay, if I ever saw him before and knew

’an. Well, I say Troilus is Troilus.

’an. Then you say as I say; for I am sure he not Hector.

’an. No, nor Hector is not Troilus in some grees.

’an. ’Tis just to each of them; he is himself.

’an. Himself! Alas! poor Troilus, I would were.

’an. So he is.

’an. Condition, I had gone bare-foot to India.

’an. He is not Hector.

’an. Himself! no, he’s not himself. Would were himself: well, the gods are above; time ist friend or end. Well, Troilus, well, I would heart were in her body. No, Hector is not a tier man than Troilus.

’an. Excuse me.

’an. He is elder.

’an. Pardon me, pardon me.

’an. ‘Th other’s not come to’t; you shall tell me another tale when th’ other’s come to’t. Hector shall not have his wit this year.

’an. He shall not need it if he have his own.

’an. Nor his qualities.

’an. No matter.

’an. Nor his beauty.

’an. ’Twould not become him; his own’s better.

’an. You have no judgment, niece: Helen herself swore th’ other day, that Troilus, for a brown favour, for so ’tis I must confess, not brown neither,—

’an. No, but brown.

’an. Faith, to say truth, brown and not brown.

’an. To say the truth, true and not true.

’an. She prais’d his complexion above Paris.

’an. Why, Paris hath colour enough.

’an. So he has.

’an. Then Troilus should have too much: if she praised him above, his complexion is higher than his: he having colour enough, and the other higher, is too flaming a praise for a good complexion. I had as lief Helen’s golden tongue had commended Troilus for a copper nose.

’an. I swear to you, I think Helen loves him better than Paris.

’an. Then she’s a merry Greek indeed.

’an. Nay, I am sure she does. She came to him th’ other day into the compassed window, and, you know, he has not past three or four hairs on his chin,—

’an. Indeed, a tapster’s arithmetic may soon bring his particulars therein to a total.

’an. Why, he is very young; and yet will he, within three pound, lift as much as his brother Hector.

’an. Is he so young a man, and so old a lifter?

’an. But to prove to you that Helen loves him: she came and puts me her white hand to his cloven chin—

’an. Juno have mercy! how came it clien?

’an. Why, you know, ’tis dimpled. I think his smiling becomes him better than any man in all Phrygia.

’an. O! he smiles valiantly.

’an. Does he not?

’an. O! yes, an ’twere a cloud in autumn.

’an. Why, go to then. But to prove to you that Helen loves Troilus,—

’an. Troilus will stand to the proof, if you’ll prove it so.

’an. Troilus! why, he esteems her no more than I esteem an addle egg.

’an. If you love an addle egg as well as you love an idle head, you would eat chickens? the shell.

’an. I cannot choose but laugh, to think how she tickled his chin: indeed, she has a marvelous white hand, I must needs confess,—

’an. Without the rack.

’an. And she takes upon her to spy a white hair on his chin.

’an. Alas! poor chin; many a wart is richer.

’an. But there was such laughing: Queen Hecuba laughed that her eyes ran o’er.

’an. With millstones.

’an. And Cassandra laughed.

’an. But there was more temperate fire under the pot of her eyes: did her eyes run o’er too?

’an. And Hector laughed.

’an. At what was all this laughing?
Pan. Marry, at the white hair that Helen spied on Troy's chin.

Cres. An't had been a green hair, I should have laughed too.

Pan. They laughed not so much at the hair as at his pretty answer.

Cres. What was his answer?

Pan. Quoth she, 'Here's but two-and-fifty hairs on your chin, and one of them is white.'

Cres. This is her question.

Pan. That's true; make no question of that. 'Two-and-fifty hairs,' quoth he, 'and one white: that white hair is my father, and all the rest are his sons.' 'Jupiter!' quoth she, 'which of these hairs is Paris my husband?' 'The forked one,' quoth he; 'pluck't out, and give it him.' But there was such laughing, and Helen so blushed, and Paris so chafed, and all the rest so laughed, that it passed.

Cres. So let it now, for it has been a great while going by. Pan. Well, cousin, I told you a thing yesterday; think on't.

Cres. So I do.

Pan. I'll be sworn 'tis true: he will weep you, an' twere a man born in April.

Cres. And I'll spring up in his tears, an' twere a nettle against May. A retreat sounded.

Pan. Hark! they are coming from the field. Shall we stand up here, and see them as they pass toward Ilium: good niece, do; sweet niece Cressida.

Cres. At your pleasure. Pan. Here, here; here's an excellent place: here we may see most bravely. I'll tell you then all by their names as they pass by, but mark Troylus above the rest.

Cres. Speak not so loud.

ÆNEAS passes over. Pan. That's Æneas: is not that a brave man? he's one of the flowers of Troy, I can tell you: but mark Troylus; you shall see anon.

Cres. Who's that?

ANTENOR passes over. Pan. That's Antenor: he has a shrewd wit, I can tell you; and he's a man good enough: he's one of the soundest judgments in Troy, whosoever, and a proper man of person. When comes Troylus? I'll show you Troylus anon: if he see me, you shall see him nod at me.

Cres. Will he give you the nod?

Pan. You shall see.

Cres. If he do, the rich shall have more.

HECTOR passes over. Pan. That's Hector, that, that, look you, that; there's a fellow! Go thy way, Hector! There's a brave man, niece. O brave Hector! Look how he looks! there's a countenance! Is not a brave man?

Cres. O! a brave man.

Pan. Is a' not? It does a man's heart good. Look you what hacks are on his helmet! look you yonder, do you see? look you there: there's no jesting; there's laying on; take't off who will, as they say: there be hacks!

Cres. Be those with swords?

Pan. Swords! any thing, he cares not; an the devil come to him, it's all one: by God's lic does one's heart good. Yonder comes Pr; yonder comes Paris.

PARIS passes over. Look ye yonder, niece; 'tis not a gallant too, 'tis not? Why, this is brave now. I said he came harn home to-day? he's not he, why, this will do Helen's heart good now. Would I could see Troylus now! You shall Troylus anon.

HELENUS passes over. Cres. Who's that?

Pan. That's Helenus. I marvel where Tro is. That's Helenus. I think he went not fo to-day. That's Helenus.

Cres. Can Helenus fight, uncle?

Pan. Helenus? no. Yes, he'll fight indifferent well. I marvel where Troylus is. Hark! you not hear the people cry 'Troylus'? Hele is a priest.

Cres. What sneaking fellow comes yonder.

TROYLUS passes over.

Pan. Where? yonder? that's Delphobus. Troylus! there's a man, niece! Hem! Br Troylus! the prince of chivalry!

Cres. Peace! for shame, peace!

Pan. Mark him; note him. O brave Troylus! Look well upon him, niece: look you how sword is bloodied, and his helm more hard than Hector's; and how he looks, and how goes. O admirable youth! he ne'er saw the and-twenty. Go thy way, Troylus, go thy way. Had I a sister were a grace, or a daughter goddess, he should take his choice. O admirable man! Paris? Paris is dirt to him; a I warrant, Helen, to change, would give an to boot.

Cres. Here come more.

Soldiers pass over.

Pan. Asses, fools, do!s! chaff and bran, cl and bran! porridge after meat! I could l and die f' the eyes of Troylus. Ne'er look, no look; the eagles are gone: crows and da crows and daws! I had rather be such a n as Troylus than Agamemnon and all Greece.

Cres. There is among the Greeks Achilles better man than Troylus.

Pan. Achilles! a drayman, a porter, a va camel.

Cres. Well, well.

Pan. 'Well, well!' Why, have you any c creation? have you any eyes? Do you know w' a man is? Is not birth, beauty, good sha discourse, manhood, learning, gentleness, vir youth, liberality, and so forth, the spice and s that season a man?

Cres. Ay, a minced man: and then to be ba with no date in the pie, for then the man's dat out.

Pan. You are such a woman! one knows at what ward you lie.

Cres. Upon my back, to defend my bell upon my wit, to defend my wiles; upon my secr, to defend mine honesty: my mask defend my beauty; and you, to defend all the
at all these wards I lie, at a thousand ches.

So, say one of your watches.

Nay, I'll watch you for that; and that's of the chiefest of them too: if I cannot what I would not have hit, I can watch for telling how I took the blow; unless it past hiding, and then it's past watching.

You are such another!

Enter Troilus's Boy.

Sir, my lord would instantly speak with at your own house; there he unarms

Good boy, tell him I come. Exit Boy.

I'll be with you, niece, by and by.

To bring, uncle?

Ay, a token from Troilus.

By the same token, you are a bawd.

Exit Pandarus.

ds, vows, gifts, tears, and love's full sacrifice, offers in another's enterprise;
more in Troilus thousand-fold I see in the glass of Pandar's praise may be.

I hold off. Women are angels, wooing:
I's won are done; joy's soul lies in the doing;
she belov'd knows nought that knows not prize the thing ungain'd more than it is:

she was never yet that ever knew so sweet as when desire did sue.

before this maxim out of love I teach:

venement is command; ungain'd, beseech:

though my heart's content firm love doth bear,

sighing of that shall from mine eyes appear.

Exeunt.

Enter Agamemnon, Nestor, Ulysses, Menelaus, and Others.

Princes, grief hath set the jaundice on your cheeks?

ample proposition that hope makes ds, designs begun on earth below

in the veins of actions highest rear'd;

notes, by the conflux of meeting sap,

the sound pine and divert his grain live and errant from his course of growth.

princes, is it matter new to us

we come short of our suppose so far afterseven years' siege yet Troy walls stand;

every action that hath gone before,

where we have record, trial did draw and thwart, not answering the aim,

that unbodied figure of the thought

I gave't surmised shape. Why then, you princes,

you with cheeks abash'd behold our works,

think them shames? which are indeed

the protractive trials of great Jove.

To find persistent constancy in men:
The fineness of which metal is not found
In fortune's love; for then the bold and coward
The wise and fool, the artist and unread,
The hard and soft, seem all affin'd and kin:
But, in the wind and tempest of her frown,

Distinction, with a broad and powerful fan,

Puffing at all, winnows the light away;

And what hath mass or matter, by itself

Lies rich in virtue and unmingled.

Nest. With due observance of thygod-likescat,

Great Agamemnon, Nestor shall apply

Thy latest words. In the reproof of chance

Lies the true proof of men: the sea being smooth,

How many shallow bauble boats dare sail

Upon her patient breast, making their way

With those of nobler bulk!

But let the ruffian Boreas once enrage

The gentle Thetis, and anon behold

The strong-ribb'd bark through liquid mountains cut.

Bounding between the two moist elements,

Like Persus' horse: where's then the saucy boat

Whose weak untimber'd sides but even now

Co-rival'd greatness? Either to harbour fled,

Or made a toast for Neptune. Even so

Both valour's show and valour's worth divide

In storms of fortune; for in her rayand brightness

The herd hath more annoyance by the breeze

Than by the tiger; but when the splitting wind

Makes flexible the knees of knotted oaks,

And flies fled under shade, why then, the thing

of courage,

As rous'd with rage, with rage doth sympathize,

And with an accent tun'd in self-same key,

Retorts to chiding fortune.

Ulyss. Agamemnon,

Thou great commander, nerve and bone of Greece,

Heart of our numbers, soul and only spirit,

In whom the tempers and the minds of all

Should be shut up, hear what Ulysses speaks.

Besides the applause and approbation

The which, To AGAMEMNON most mighty for thy place and sway,

To NESTOR. And thou most reverend for thy stretch'd-out life,

I give to both your speeches, which were such

As Agamemnon and the hand of Greece

Should hold up high in brass; and such again

As venerable Nestor, hatch'd in silver,

Should with a bond of air, strong as the axletree

On which heaven rides, knit all the Greekish

ears

To his experience'd tongue, yet let it please both,

Thou great, and wise, to hear Ulysses speak.

Agam. Speak, Prince of Ithaca; and be't of less express

That matter needless, of importless burden,

Divide thy lips, than we are confident,

When rank Thersites opes his mastick jaws,

We shall hear music, wit, and oracle.

Ulyss. Troy, yet upon his basis, had been down,

And the great Hector's sword had lack'd a master,

But for these instances.

The specialty of rule hath been neglected:

And, look, how many Grecian tents do stand

Hollow upon this plain, so many hollow factions.

When that the general is not like the hive

To whom the foragers shall all repair,

What honey is expected? Degree being vizarded,
The unworlist shows as fairly in the mask.
The heavens themselves, the planets, and this centre
Observe degree, priority, and place,
Insisture, course, proportion, season, form,
Office, and custom, in all line of order:
And therefore is the glorious planet Sol
In noble eminence enthron'd and spher'd
Amidst the other; whose med'cinal eye
Corrects the ill aspects of planets evil,
And posts, like the commandment of a king,
Sans check to good and bad: but when the planets in evil mixture to disorder wander,
What plague, and what portents, what mutiny,
What raging of the sea, shaking of earth,
Commotion in the winds, frights, changes, horrors,
Divert and crack, rend and doracinate
The unity and married calm of states
 Quite from their fixture! O! when degree is shak'd,
Which is the ladder to all high designs,
The enterprise is sick. How could communities,
Degrees in schools, and brotherhoods in cities,
Peaceful commerce from dividable shores,
The primogenitive and due of birth,
Prerogative of age, crowns, sceptres, laurels,
But by degree, stand in authentic place?
Take but degree away, unturn that string,
And, hark! what discord follows; each thing
meets
In mere oppugnacy: the bounded waters
Should lift their bosoms higher than the shores,
And make a sop of all this solid globe:
Strength should be lord of imbecility,
And the rude son should strike his father dead:
Force should be right; or rather, right and wrong,
Between whose endless jar justice resides,
Should lose their names, and so should justice too.
Then every thing includes itself in power,
Power into will, will into appetite;
And appetite, an universal wolf,
So doubly seconded with will and power,
Must make perform an universal prey,
And last eat up himself. Great Agamemnon,
This chaos, when degree is suffocate,
Follows the choking.
And this neglect of degree it is
That by a pace goes backward, in a purpose
It hath to climb. The general's disdain'd
By him one step below, he by the next,
That next by him beneath; so every step,
Examined by the first pace that is sick
Of his superior, grows to an envious fever
Of pale and bloodless emulation:
And 'tis this fever that keeps Troy on foot,
Not her own sinews. To end a tale of length,
Troy in our weakness lives, not in her strength.

Neat. Most wisely hath Ulysses here discover'd
The fever whereof all our power is sick.
Agam. The nature of the sickness found,
Ulysses,
What is the remedy?

Ulyss. The great Achilles, whom opinion crowns
The stout and the foremost of our host,
Having his ear full of his airy fame,
Grows dainty of his worth, and in his tent
Lies mocking our designs. With him Patro
Upon a lazy bed the livelong day
Breaks scurril jests,
And with ridiculous and awkward action,
Which, slanderer, he imitation calls,
He pagents us. Sometime, great Agamem
Thy topless deputation he puts on,
And, like a strutting politician, whose conceit
Lies in his horseman, and doth think it rich
To hear the wooden dialogue and sound
'Twixt his stretched foot and the sward,
Such to-be-pitied and o'er-wrested seeming
He acts thy greatness in: and when he spea,
'Tis like a chime a-mending; with terms squard,
Which, from the tongue of roaring Ty dropped,
Would seem hyperboles. At this fusty stuff
The large Achilles, on his press'd bed lolling
From his deep chest laughs out a loud appla Cries 'Excellent! 'tis Agamemnon just.
Now play me Nestor; hem, and stroke
beard,
As he being dress'd to some oration.'
That's done; as near as the extremest ends
Of parallels, as like as Vulcan and his wife,
Yet god Achilles still cries 'Excellent!
'Tis Nestor right. Now play him me, Patro, Arming to answer in a night alarm.'
And then, forsooth, the faint defects of age
Must be the scene of mirth; to cough and
And with a palsy-fumbling on his goter,
Shake in and out the rivet; and at this spot
Sir Valour dies; cries 'O! enough, Patro,
Or give me ribs of steel; I shall split all
In pleasure of my spleen.' And in this fash
All our abilities, gifts, natures, shapes,
Severs and generals of grace exact,
Achievements, plots, orders, preventions,
Excitements to the field, or speech for truce
Success or loss, what is or is not, serves
As stuff for these two to make paradoxes.

Nest. And in the imitation of these twain
Who, as Ulysses says, opinion crowns
With an imperial voice, many are infect.
Ajax is grown self-will'd, and bears his head
In such a rein, in full as proud a place
As broad Achilles; keeps his tent like him
Makes factious feasts; rails on our state
Bold as an oracle, and sets Thersites,
A slave whose gall coins slanders like a min
To match us in comparisons with dirt;
To weaken and discredit our exposure,
How rank soever rounded in with danger.

Ulyss. They tax our policy, and call cowardice;
Count wisdom as no member of the war;
Forestall prescience, and esteem no act
But that of hand: the still and mental part
That do contrive how many hands shall stri
When fitness calls them on, and know measure
Of their observant toil the enemies' weight,
Why, this hath not a finger's dignity.
They call this bed-work, mappery, closet-wa
So that the man that batters down the wall,
For the great swing and rudeness of his pole
They place before his hand that made engine,
those that with the fineness of their souls reason guide his execution. 210

Vest. Let this be granted, and Achilles' horse kes many Thetis' sons. A tucket.

Enter *Aeneas.

*Agam. What would you 'fore our tent? *En. Is this great Agamemnon's tent, I pray you?

*Agam. Even this. *En. May one, that is a herald and a prince, a fair message to his kingly ears? *Agam. With surety stronger than Achilles' arm re all the Greekish heads, which with one voice I Agamemnon head and general.

*En. Fair leave and large security. How may stranger to those most imperial looks ow them from eyes of other mortals?

*Agam. How! *En. Ay; sk, that I might waken reverence, I bid the cheek be ready with a blush dest as morning when she coldly eyes youthful Phoebus. ich is that god in office, guiding men? *En. Is this the high and mighty Agamemnon?

*Agam. This Trojan scorns us; or the men of Troy ceremonious courtiers.

*En. Courtiers as free, as de风尚, unarm'd, bending angels; that's their fame in peace: when they would seem soldiers, they have galls, of arms, strong joints, true swords; and, Jove's accord, being so full of heart. But peace, *Aeneas! sce, Trojan! lay thy finger on thy lips. *En. Worthiness of praise distains his worth, *En. But the praise'd himself bring the praise forth: what the repining enemy commends, a breath fame blows; that praise, sole pure, transcends.

*Agam. Sir, you of Troy, call you yourself *Aeneas?

*En. Ay, Greek, that is my name.

*Agam. What's your affair, I pray you?

*En. Sir, pardon; 'tis for Agamemnon's ears.

*Agam. He hears not privately that comes from Troy.

*En. Nor from Troy come not to whisper him:

rung a trumpet to awake his ear,

set his sense on the attentive bent,

then to speak.

*Agam. Speak frankly as the wind: 't is not Agamemnon's sleeping hour;

It thon shalt know, Trojan, he is awake,

Tell's thee so himself.

*En. Trumpet, blow loud, of thy brass voice through all these lazy tents; I every Greek of mettle, let him know, that Troy means fairly shall be spoke aloud.

Trumpet sounds.

*En. have great Agamemnon, here in Troy; Prince call'd Hector, Priam is his father, so in this dull and long-continued truce rustily grown: he bade me take a trumpet, to this purpose speak: Kings, princes, lords!

If there be one among the fair'est of Greece That holds his honour higher than his ease, That seeks his praise more than he fears his peril,

That knows his valour, and knows not his fear, That loves his mistress more than in confession, With truant vows to her own lips he loves, And dare avow her beauty and her worth 279

In other arms than hers,—to him this challenge. Hector, in view of Trojans and of Greeks, Shall make it good, or do his best to do it, He hath a lady, wiser, fairer, truer, Than ever Greek did compass in his arms; And will to-morrow with his trumpet call, Midway between your tents and walls of Troy, To rouse a Grecian that is true in love:

If any come, Hector shall honour him; If none, he'll say in Troy when he retires, The Grecian dames are sunburnt, and not worth The splinter of a lance. Even so much.

*Agam. This shall be told our lovers, Lord *Aeneas:

If none of them have soul in such a kind, We left them all at home: but we are soldiers; And may that soldier a mere recreant prove, That means not, hath not, or is not in love! If then one is, or hath, or means to be, That one meets Hector; if none else, I am he.

*Nest. Tell him of Nestor, one that was a man When Hector's grandsire suck'd: he is old now; But if there be not in our Grecian host One noble man that hath one spark of fire To answer for his love, tell him from me. I'll hide my silver beard in a gold beaver, And in my vantbrace put this wither'd brawn; And, meeting him, will tell him that my lady Was fairer than his grandam, and as chaste As may be in the world: his youth in flood, I'll pawn this truth with my three drops of blood.

*En. Now heavens forbid such scarcity of youth!

*Ulyss. Amen.

*Agam. Fair Lord *Aeneas, let me touch your hand;

To our pavilion shall I lead you first. Achilles shall have word of this intent; So shall each lord of Greece, from tent to tent: Yourself shall feast with us before you go, And find the welcome of a noble foe.

*Ulyss. Nestor!

*Nest. What says Ulysses?

*Ulyss. I have a young conception in my brain; Be you my time to bring it to some shape.

*Nest. What is 't?

*Ulyss. This 'tis:

Blunt wedge'd rive hard knots: the seeded pride That hath to this maturity blown up In rank Achilles must or now be cropp'd, Or, shedding, breed a nursery of like evil, To overbulk us all.

*Nest. Well, and how?

*Ulyss. This challenge that the gallant Hector sends,

However it is spread in general name, Relates in purpose only to Achilles.

*Nest. The purpose is perspicuous even as substance,

Whose grossness little characters sum up: And, in the publication, make no strain,
But that Achilles, were his brain as barren
As banks of Libya, though, Apollo knows,
’Tis dry enough, will, with great speed of judgment.
Ay, with celerity, find Hector’s purpose
Pointing on him.

Ulyss. And wake him to the answer, think you?

Nest. Yes, ‘tis most meet: whom may you else oppose,
That can from Hector bring his honour off,
If not Achilles? Though ‘tis he sportful combat,
Yet in the trial much opinion dwells;
For here the Trojans taste our dear’st repug
With their fin’st palate: and trust to me, Ulysses,
Our imputation shall be oddly pois’d
In this wild action; for the success,
Although particular, shall give a scantling
Of good or bad unto the general;
And in such indexes, although small pricks
To their subsequent volumes, there is seen
The baby figure of the giant mass
Of things to come at large. It is suppos’d
He that meets Hector issues from our choice;
And choice, being mutual act of all our souls,
Makes merit her election, and doth boil,
As ‘twere from forth us all, a man distill’d
Out of our virtues; who miscarrying,
What heart receives from hence the conquering part,
To steel a strong opinion to themselves?
Which entertain’d, limbs are his instruments,
In no less working than are swords and bows
Directive by the limbs.

Ulyss. Give pardon to my speech:
Therefore ‘tis meet Achilles meet not Hector.
Let us like merchants show our foulest wares,
And think perchance they’ll sell; if not,
The lustre of the better yet to show
Shall show the better. Do not consent
That ever Hector and Achilles meet;
For both our honour and our shame in this
Are dogg’d with two strange followers.

Nest. I see them not with my old eyes: what are they?

Ulyss. What glory our Achilles shares from Hector,
Were he not proud, we all should wear with him:
But he already is too insolent;
And we were better parch in Afric sun
Than in the pride and salt scorn of his eyes.
Should he scape Hector fair: if he were foil’d,
Why then we did our main opinion crush
In taint of our best man. No; make a lottery;
And by device let blockish Ajax draw
The sort to fight with Hector: among ourselves
Give him allowance as the worthier man,
For that will physic the great Myrmidon
Who broils in loud applause; and make him fall
His crest that prouter than blue Iris bends.
If the dull brainless Ajax come safe off,
We’ll dress him up in voices: if he fail,
Yet go we under our opinion still
That we have better men. But, hit or miss,
Our project’s life this shape of sense assumes:
Ajax employ’d plucks down Achilles’ plumes.

Nest. Ulysses,
Now I begin to relish thy advice;
And I will give a taste of it forthwith
To Agamemnon: go we to him straight.
Two ours shall tame each other: pride alone
Must tarre the mastiffs on, as ‘twere their bo.

Ere.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—A Part of the Grecian Camp.

Enter Ajax and Thersites.

Ajax. Thersites!

Thers. Agamemnon, how if he had boils? if all over, generally?

Ajax. Thersites!

Thers. And those boils did run? say so:
not the general run then? were not that botchy core?

Ajax. Dog!

Thers. Then would come some matter from him:
I see none now.

Ajax. Thou bitch-wolf’s son, canst thou hear? Feel then.

Thers. The plague of Greece upon thee, thou mongrel beef-witted lord!

Ajax. Speak then, thou vineyardist! speak: I will beat thee into handsomeness.

Thers. I shall sooner rail thee into wit holiness: but I think thy horse will sooner an oration than thou learn a prayer without bones:
Thou canst strike, canst thou? a red murrally thy jade’s tricks!

Ajax. Toadstool, learn me the proclamatic

Thers. Dost thou think I have no sense, thou striketh me thus?

Ajax. The proclamatic!

Thers. Thou art proclaimed a fool, I think.

Ajax. Do not, porpentine, do not: my finger itch.

Thers. I would thou didst itch from head to foot, and I had the scratching of thee; I would make thee the loathsomest scab in Greece. Wilt thou art forth in the incursions, thou striketh slow as another?

Ajax. I say, the proclamatic!

Thers. Thou grimblest and railest every body on Achilles, and thou art as full of envy at greatness as Cerberus is at Proserpina’s beauty, thy, that thou harkest at him.

Ajax. Mistress Thersites!

Thers. Thou should’st strike him.

Ajax. Cobloaf!

Thers. He would pun thee into shivers with fist, as a sailor breaks a biscuit.

Ajax. You whoreson cur! Beating

Thers. Do, do.

Ajax. Thou stool for a witch!

Thers. Ay, do, do; thou sodden-witted loath hast no more brain than I have in my elbows; an assinego may tutor thee, thou scatter good; thou art here but to trash Troja; and thou art bought and sold among those any wit, like a barbarian slave. If thou use beat me, I will begin at thy heel, and tell with thy art by inches, thou thing of no bowels, the Ajax. You dog!

Thers. Thou scurrvy lord!

Ajax. You cur! Beating

Thers. Mars his idiot! do, rudeness; camel; do, do.
Enter Achilles and Patroclus.

Achil. There's for you, Patroclus.

Achil. What! with me too, Thersites?

Chil. There is's for you, Patroclus.

Chil. Why, when now, Ajax! wherefore do thus? How now, Thersites! what's the 21 ter, man?

Chil. You see him there, do you?

Chil. Ay; what's the matter?

Chil. Nay, look upon him.

Chil. So I do; what's the matter?

Chil. Nay, but regard him well.

Chil. "Well!" why, so I do.

Chil. But yet you look not well upon him;

Achil. What? I know that, fool.

Chil. Ay, but that fool knows not himself.

Chil. Therefore I beat thee.

Chil. Lo, lo, lo, lo, what modicum of wit he 22 ers! his evasions have ears thus long. I have Achil. bed his brain more than he has beat my 23 es: I will buy nine sparrows for a penny, and Chil. What?

Chil. Nay, good Ajax.

Chil. Has not so much wit—

Chil. Nay, I must hold you.

Chil. As will stop the eye of Helen's needle, Chil. Peace, fool! I would have peace and quietness, but

Chil. fool will not: he there; that he; look you

Achil. O thou damned cur! I shall—

Chil. Will you set your wit to a fool's?

Chil. No, I warrant you; for a fool's will I

Exit. 31

Achil. Good words, Thersites.

Chil. What? is the quarrel?

Chil. I bade the vile owl go learn me the Chil. of the proclamation, and he raises upon me.

Chil. I serve thee not.

Chil. Well, go to, go to.

Chil. I serve here voluntary.

Chil. Your last service was sufferance, 'twas volun-

Chil. tary; no man is beaten voluntary:

Chil. x was here the voluntary, and you as under Chil. impress. E'en so; a great deal of your wit too in Chil. your sinews, or else there be liars. Hector

Chil. ill have a great catch if he knock out either

Chil. your brains: a' were as good crack a fasting

Chil. with no kernel.

Chil. What! with me too, Thersites?

Chil. There's Ulysses, and old Nestor, whose Chil. was mouldy ere your grandsires had nails on

Chil. toes, yoke you like draught-oxen and make

Chil. plough up the wars.

Chil. What, what?

Chil. Yes, good sooth: to, Achilles! to, to! to! 32

Chil. I shall cut out your tongue.

Chil. 'Tis no matter; I shall speak as much

Chil. thou afterwards.

Chil. No more words, Thersites; peace!

Chil. I will hold my peace when Achilles' ch bids me, shall I?

Scene II.—Troy. A Room in Priam's Palace.

Enter Priam, Hector, Troilus, Paris, and Helenus.

Pri. After so many hours, lives, speeches spent,

Pri. Thus once again says Nestor from the Greeks:

Pri. 'Deliver Helen, and all damage else,

Pri. As honour, loss of time, travail, expense,

Pri. Wounds, friends, and what else dear that is con-

Pri. sum'd

Pri. In hot digestion of this cormorant war,

Pri. Shall be struck off.' Hector, what say you to't?

Hect. Though no man lesser fears the Greeks

Hect. than I,

Hect. As far as toucheth my particular,

Hect. Yet, dread Priam,

Hect. There is no lady of more softer bowels,

Hect. More spongy to suck in the sense of fear,

Hect. More ready to cry out 'Who knows what follows,'

Hect. Than Hector is. The wound of peace is surety,

Hect. Surety secure; but modest doubt is call'd

Hect. The beacon of the wise, the tent that searches

Hect. To the bottom of the worst. Let Helen go:

Hect. Since the first sword was drawn about this

Hect. question,

Hect. Every tithe soul, 'mongst many thousand dismies,

Hect. Hath been as dear as Helen; I mean, of our:

Hect. If we have lost so many tenth of ours,

Hect. To guard a thing not ours nor worth to us,

Hect. Had it our name, the value of one ten,

Hect. What merit's in that reason which denies Hect. The yielding of her up?

Tro. Fie, fie! my brother,

Tro. Weigh you the worth and honour of a king

Tro. So great as our dread father in a scale

Tro. Of common ounces? will you with counters sum

Tro. The past proportion of his infinite?

Tro. And buckle in a waist most fathomless

Tro. With spans and inches so diminutive

Tro. As fears and reasons! fie, for godly shame!

Hel. No marvel, though you bite so sharp at

Hel. reasons,

Hel. You are so empty of them. Should not our father

Hel. Bear the great sway of his affairs with reasons,

Hel. Because your speech hath none that tells him so?

Tro. You are for dreams and slumbers, brother

Hel. priest;

Tro. You fur your gloves with reason. Here are your

Tro. reasons:
You know an enemy intends you harm;
You know a sword employ'd is perilous,
And reason files the object of all harm;
Who marvels then, when Helenus beholds
A Grecian and his sword, if he do set
The very wings of reason to his heels,
And fly like chidden Mercury from Jove,
Or like a star disord'd? Nay, if we talk of reason,
Let's shut our gates and sleep: manhood and honour
Should have bare-hearts, would they but fat their thoughts
With this cramm'd reason: reason and respect
Make livers pale and lusthoothd deject.

Hect. Brother, she is not worth what she doth cost
The holding.

Tro. What is aught but as 'tis valued?

Hect. But value dwells not in particular will;
It holds his estimate and dignity
As well wherein 'tis precious of itself
As in the prizer. 'Tis mad idolatry
To make the service greater than the god;
And the will dotes that is inclinable
To what infectiously itself affects,
Without some image of the affected merit.

Tro. I take to-day a wife, and my election
Is led on in the conduct of my will;
My will enkindled by mine eyes and ears,
Two traded pilots 'twixt the dangerous shores
Of will and judgment. How may I avoid,
Although my will distaste what it elected,
The wife I chose? there can be no evasion
To blench from th'is and to stand firm by honour.
We turn not back the silks upon the merchant
When we have soil'd them, nor the remainder we do not throw in unrespective sink
Because we now are full. It was thought meet
Paris should do some vengeance on the Greeks:
Your breath of full consent bellied his sails;
The seas and winds, old wranglers, took a truce
And did him service: he touch'd the ports'desir'd,
And for an old aunt whom the Greeks held captive.
He brought a Grecian, whose youth and freshness
Wrinkles Apollo's, and makes stale the morning.
Why keep we her? the Grecians keep our aunt;
Is she worth keeping? why, she is a pear,
Whose price hath launch'd above a thousand ships,
And turn'd crown'd kings to merchants.
If you'll avouch 'twas wisdom Paris went:
As you must needs, for you all cried 'Go, go';
If you'll confess he brought home noble prize,
As you must needs, for you all clapp'd your hands
And cried 'Indescribable!' why do you now
The issue of your proper wisdoms rate,
And do a deed that Fortune never did,
Beggar the estimation which you priz'd?
Richer than sea and land? O! theft most base,
That we have stoll'n what we do fear to keep;
But thieves unworthy of a thing so stoll'n,
That in their country did them that disgrace
We fear to warrant in our native place.

Cas. Within. Cry, Trojans, cry!

Pri. What noise? what shriek?

Tro. 'Tis our mad sister, I do know her voice.
Enter Patroclus.

Patr. Who's there? Thersites! Good Thersites, come in and rail.

Ther. If I could have remembered a guilt counterfeit, thou would'st not have slipped out of my contemplation: but it is no matter; thyself upon thyself! The common curse of mankind, folly and ignorance, be thine in great revenue! heaven bless thee from a tutor, and discipline come not near thee! Let thy blood be thy direction till thy death! then if she that lays thee out says thou art a fair corpse, I'll be sworn and sworn upon 'tis never shroud any but lazers. Amen. Where's Achilles?

Patr. What! art thou devout? wast thou in prayer?

Ther. Ay; the heavens hear me!

Enter Achilles.

Achil. Who's there?

Patr. Thersites, my lord.

Achil. Where, where? Art thou come? Why, my cheese, my digestion, why hast thou not served thyself in to my table so many meals? Come, what's Agamemnon?

Ther. Thy commander, Achilles. Then tell me, Patroclus, what's Achilles?

Patr. Thy lord, Thersites. Then tell me, I pray thee, what's thyself?

Ther. Thy knower, Patroclus. Then tell me, Patroclus, what art thou?

Patr. Thou may'st tell that knowest. Achilles! O! tell, tell.

Ther. I'll decline the whole question. Agamemnon commands Achilles; Achilles is my lord; I am Patroclus' knower; and Patroclus is a fool.

Patr. You rascal!

Ther. Peace, fool! I have not done.

Achil. He is a privileged man. Proceed, Thersites.

Ther. Agamemnon is a fool; Achilles is a fool; Thersites is a fool; and, as aforesaid, Patroclus is a fool.

Achil. Derive this, come.

Ther. Agamemnon is a fool to offer to command Achilles; Achilles is a fool to be commanded of Agamemnon; Thersites is a fool to serve such a fool; and Patroclus is a fool positive.

Patr. Why am I a fool?

Ther. Make that demand to the Creator. It suffices me thou art. Look you, who comes here?
Achil. Patroclus, I'll speak with nobody.

Come in with me, Thersites.

THER. Here is such patchery, such juggling,
And such knavery! All the argument is a cuckold
And a whore; a good quarrel to draw emulous Factions and bleed to death upon. Now, the Dry serpigo on the subject! and war and lechery
Confound all!

Exit. 92

Enter AGAMEMNON, ULYSSES, NESTOR,
DIOMEDES, and AJAX.

AGAM. Where is Achilles?

PATR. Within his tent; but ill dispos'd, my lord.

AGAM. Let it be known to him that we are here.

He shent our messengers; and we lay by
Our appartenances, visiting of him:
Let him be told so; lest perchance he think
We dare not move the question of our place,
Or know not what we are.

PATR. I shall say so to him. Exit. 90

ULYS. We saw him at the opening of his tent:
He is not sick.

AJAX. Yes, lion-sick, sick of proud heart: you May call it melancholy if you will favour the Man; but, by my head, 'tis pride: but why, why?
Let him show us a cause. A word, my lord.

Takes AGAMEMNON aside.

NEST. What moves Ajax thus to bay at him?

ULYS. Achilles hath inveigled his foe from NEST. Who, Thersites?

ULYS. He.

NEST. Then will Ajax lack matter, if he have lost his argument.

ULYS. No, you see, he is his argument that has his argument, Achilles.

NEST. All the better; their fraction is more our wish than their faction: but it was a strong composure a fool could disunite.

ULYS. The amity that wisdom knits not folly may easily untie. Here comes Patroclus. 100

NEST. No Achilles with him?

Re-enter PATROCLUS.

ULYS. The elephant hath joints, but none for courtesy: his legs are legs for necessity, not for flexure.

PATR. Achilles bids me say, he is much sorry,
If any thing more than your sport and pleasure
Did move your greatness and this noble state
To call upon him; he hopes it is no other
But for your health and your digestion sake,
An after-dinner's breath.

AGAM. Hear you, Patroclus; 120
We are too well acquainted with these answers:
But his evasion, wing'd thus swift with scorn,
Cannot outfly our apprehensions.
Much attribute he hath, and much the reason
Why we ascribe it to him; yet all his virtues,
Not virtuously on his own part beheld,
Do in our eyes begin to lose their gloss,
Yea, like fair fruit in an unwholesome dish,
Are like to rot untasted. Go and tell him,
We come to speak with him; and you shall not

If you do say we think him over-proud
And under-honest, in self assumption greater Than in the note of judgment; and worthier than himself.

Here tend the savage strangeness he puts on,
Disguise the holy strength of their command.
And underwrite in an observing kind
His humorous predominance; yea, watch
His petitious lunes, his ebbs, his flows, as if
The passage and whole carriage of this action
Rode on his tide. Go tell him this, and add
That if he hold his price so much,
We'll none of him; but let him, like an eng
Not portable, lie under this report:
'Bring action hither, this cannot go to war.'
A stirring dwarf we do allowance give
Before a sleeping giant: tell him so.

PAIR. I shall; and bring his answer present

AGAM. In second voice we'll not be satisfied.
We come to speak with him. Ulysses, enter

Exit ULYSSES.

AJAX. What is he more than another?

AGAM. No more than what he thinks he is.

AJAX. Is he so much? Do you not think Thinks himself a better man than I am?

AGAM. No question.

AJAX. Will you subscribe his thought, and he is?

AGAM. No, no noble Ajax; you are as still as valiant, as wise, no less noble, much more gentle, and altogether more tractable.

AJAX. Why should a man be proud? I doth pride grow? I know not what pride is.

AGAM. Your mind is the clearer, Ajax; your virtues the fairer. He that is proud up himself: pride is his own glass, his trumpet, his own chronicle: and what praises itself but in the deed, doverts the duty in the praise.

AJAX. I do hate a proud man, as I hate engendering of toads.

NEST. Aside. Yet he loves himself: is't strange?

Re-enter ULYSSES.

ULYS. Achilles will not to the field to-morn.

AGAM. What's his excuse?

ULYS. He doth rely on no
But carries on the stream of his dispose.
Without observance or respect of any,
In will peculiar and in self-admission.

AGAM. Why will he not upon our fair request
Untent his person and share the air with us?

ULYS. Things small as nothing, for requisite sake only,
He makes important: possessed he is with Greatness.
And speaks not to himself but with a pride
That quarrels at self-breath: imag'd worth
Holds in his blood such soul and hot discount.
That 'twixt his mental and his active parts
Kingdom'd Achilles in commotion rages
And batters 'gainst itself: what should I say?
He is so plaguy proud that the death-token Cry 'No recovery.'

AGAM. Let Ajax go to him.

Dear lord, go you and greet him in his tent:
'Tis said he holds you well, and will be led
At your request a little from himself.

ULYS. O Agamemnon! let it not be so.

We'll consecrate the step; that Ajax makes
When they go from Achilles: shall the proud
That bastes his arrogance with his own scan
And never suffers matter of the world
er his thoughts, save such as do revolve
I ruminate himself, shall he be worshipp'd that we hold an idol more than he?
This thrice-worthy and right valiant lord
Or not so stale his palm, nobly acquir'd;
by my will, asubjugate his merit,
amply titled as Achilles is,
go to Achilles:
were to enlard his fat already pride
I add more coals to Cancer when he burns entertaining great Hyperion.
Lord go to him! Jupiter forbid, say in thunder 'Achilles, go to him.'
'est. Aside. O! this is well; he rubs the vein of him.
'io. Aside. And how his silence drinks up this applause!
'ax. If I go to him, with my armed fist pash him o'er the face.
'am. No, no! you shall not go.
'ax. An a' be proud with me, I'll pheze his pride me go to him.
lys. Not for the worth that hangs upon our quarrel.
'ax. A paltry, insolent fellow!
'est. Aside. How he describes himself!
'ax. Can he not be sociable?
'lys. Aside. The raven chides blackness.
'ax. I'll let his humours blood.
'am. Aside. He will be the physician that uld be the patient.
'ax. An all men were o' my mind,—
'lys. Aside. Wit would be out of fashion.
'ax. 'A should not bear it so, 'a should eat reds first: shall pride carry it!
'est. Aside. An 'twould, you'd carry half.
'lys. Aside. 'A would have ten shares.
'ax. I will knead him; I'll make him supple.
'am. Aside. He's not yet through warm:
he him with praises; pour in, pour in; his ition is dry.
'ax. To Agamemnon. My lord, you feed too much on this dislike.
est. Our noble general, do not so.
'ax. You must prepare to fight without Achilles.
'lys. Why, 'tis this naming of him does him arm.
'e is a man—but 'tis before his face;
'll be silent.
est. Wherefore should you so?
'est. Is not emulous, as Achilles is.
'lys. Know the whole world, he is as valiant.
'ax. A whoreson dog, that shall palter thus with us!
uld he were a Trojan!
est. What a vice were it in Ajax now,—
'lys. If he were proud,—
' Dio. Or covetous of praise,—
'lys. Ay, or surly borne,—
' Dio. Or strange, or self-affected—
'lys. Thank the heavens, lord, thou art of sweet composure;
use him that got thee, shethatgave thee suck:
'd be thy tutor, and thy parts of nature
rice-fam'd, beyond all erudition;
the that disciplin'd thine arms to fight,
Mars divide eternity in twain,
give him half: and, for thy vigour, ll-bearing Milo his addition yield
To sinewy Ajax. I will not praise thy wisdom,
Which, like a bourn, a pale, a shore, confines
Thy spacious and dilated parts: here's Nestor,
Instructed by the antiquary times,
He must, he is, he cannot but be wise;
But pardon, father Nestor, were your days
As green as Ajax' and your brain so temper'd,
You should not have the eminence of him,
But be as Ajax.
Axax. Shall I call you father?
Nest. Ay, my good son.
 Dio. Be rul'd by him, Lord Ajax.
Ulyss. There is noorrying here; the heart
Achilles
Keeps thicket. Please it our great general
To call together all his state of war;
Fresh kings are come to Troy: to-morrow
We must with all our main of power stand fast:
And here's a lord,—come knights from east to west,
And call their flower, Ajax shall cope the best.
Agam. Go we to council. Let Achilles sleep:
Light boats sail swift, though greater hulks draw deep.
Exeunt.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Troy. Priam's Palace.
Enter Pandarus and a Servant.

Pan. Friend! you! pray you, a word: do not you follow the young Lord Paris?
Serv. Ay, sir, when he goes before me
Pan. You depend upon him! I mean.
Serv. Sir, I do depend upon the Lord.
Pan. You depend upon a noble gentleman;
I must needs praise him.
Serv. The Lord be praised!
Pan. You know me, do you not?
Serv. Faith, sir, superficially.
Pan. Friend, know me better. I am the Lord Pandarus.

Serv. I hope I shall know your honour better.
Pan. I do desire it.
Serv. You are in the state of grace.
Pan. Grace! not so, friend; honour and lordship are my titles.
Music within.
What music is this?
Serv. I do but partly know, sir: it is music in parts.

Pan. Know you the musicians?
Serv. Wholly, sir.
Pan. Who play they to?
Serv. To the hearers, sir.
Pan. At whose pleasure, friend?
Serv. At mine, sir, and theirs that love music.
Serv. Who shall I command, sir?
Pan. Friend, we understand not one another
I am too courtly, and thou art too cunning. At whose request do these men play?
Serv. That's to 't, indeed, sir. Marry, sir, at the request of Paris my lord, who's there in person; with him the mortal Venus, the heart-blood of beauty, love's invisible soul.
Pan. Who, my cousin Cressida?
Serv. No, sir, Helen: could you not find out that by her attributes?
Pan. It should seem, fellow, that thou hast not seen the Lady Cressida. I come to speak with Paris from the Prince Troilus: I will make a complimental assault upon him, for my business.

Serr. Sudden business: there’s a stewed phrase, indeed.

Enter Paris and Helen, attended.

Pan. Fair be to you, my lord, and to all this fair company! fair desires, in all fair measure, fairly guide them! especially to you, fair queen! fair thoughts be your fair pillow!

Helen. Dear lord, you are full of fair words.

Pan. You speak your fair pleasure, sweet queen. Fair prince, here is good broken music.

Par. You have broke it, cousin; and, by my life, you shall make it whole again: you shall piece it out with a piece of your performance. Nell, he is full of harmony.

Pan. Truly, lady, no.

Helen. O, sir!

Pan. Rude, in sooth; in good sooth, very rude.

Par. Well said, my lord! Well, you say so in fits.

Pan. I have business to my lord, dear queen. My lord, will you vouchsafe me a word?

Helen. Nay, this shall not hedge us out: we’ll hear you sing, certainly.

Pan. Well, sweet queen, you are pleasant with me. But, marry, thus, my lord: my dear lord and most esteemed friend, your brother Troilus,—

Helen. My Lord Pandarus; honey-sweet lord,—

Pan. Go to, sweet queen, go to: commends himself most affectionately to you.

Helen. You shall not bob us out of our melody: if you do, our melancholy upon your head!

Pan. Sweet queen, sweet queen! that’s a sweet queen, I’faith.

Helen. And to make a sweet lady sad is a sour offence.

Par. Nay, that shall not serve your turn; that shall it not, in truth. In! Nay, I care not for such words; no, no. And, my lord, he desires you, that if the king call for him at supper, you will make his excuse.

Helen. My Lord Pandarus,—

Pan. What says my sweet queen, my very very sweet queen?

Par. What exploit’s in hand? where sups he to-night?

Helen. Nay, but, my lord,—

Pan. What says my sweet queen? My cousin will fall out with you. You must not know where he sups.

Par. I’ll lay my life, with my disposer Cressida.

Pan. No, no, no such matter; you are wide.

Come, your disposer is sick.

Par. Well, I’ll make excuse.

Pan. Ay, good my lord. Why should you say Cressida? no, your poor disposer’s sick.

Par. I spy.

Helen. Why, this is kindly done.

Pan. My niece is horribly in love with a thing you have, sweet queen.

Helen. She shall have it, my lord, if it be not my Lord Paris.

Pan. He! no, she’ll none of him; they are twain.

Helen. Falling in, after falling out, may in them three.

Pan. Come, come, I’ll hear no more of it! I’ll sing you a song now.

Helen. Ay, ay, prithee now. By my true sweet lord, thou hast a fine forehead.

Pan. Ay, you may, you may.

Helen. Let thy song be love: this love undo us all. O Cupid, Cupid, Cupid!

Pan. Love! ay, that it shall, i’ faith.

Par. Ay, good now, love, love, nothing love.

Pan. In good truth, it begins so. So

Love, love, nothing but love, still more!

For, O! love’s bow

Shoots buck and doe:

The shaft confounds,

Not that it wounds,

But tickles still the sore.

These lovers cry O! O! they die!

Yet that which seems the wound to

Doth turn O! O! to ha! ha! ha!

So dying love lives still:

O! O! a while, but ha! ha! ha!

O! O! groans out for ha! ha! ha!

Heigh-ho!

Helen. In love, i’ faith, to the very tip of nose.

Pan. He eats nothing but doves, love; that breeds hot blood, and hot blood begets thoughts, and hot thoughts beget hot deeds and hot deeds is love.

Pan. Is this the generation of love? hot blood, hot thoughts, and hot deeds? Why, they vipers: is love a generation of vipers? So lord, who’s a-field to-day?

Par. Hector, Deiphobus, Helenus, Anteus and all the gallantry of Troy: I would fain bide, armed to-day, but my Nell would not have it. How enforces my brother Troilus went not?

Helen. He hangs the lip at something: know all, Lord Pandarus.

Pan. Not I, honey-sweet queen. I long hear how they sped to-day. You’ll remem your brother’s excuse?

Par. To a hair.

Pan. Farewell, sweet queen.

Helen. Command me to your niece.

Pan. I will, sweet queen.

A retreat sound.

Par. They’re come from field: let us Priam’s hall

To greet the warriors. Sweet Helen, I mwoo you

To help enarm our Hector: his stubborn buck

With these your white enchanting fingers touch.

Shall more obey than to the edge of steel

Or force of Greekish sinews; you shall more

Than all the island kings,—disarm great Hector.

Helen. ’Twill make us proud to be his serv.

Paris;

Yea, what he shall receive of us in duty

Gives us more palm in beauty than we have,

Yea, overshines oursel.

Par. Sweet, above thought I love thee.

Exeunt.
Enter Troilus.

'Troilus. How now! where's thy master? at my sin Cressida's?

Joy. No, sir; he stays for you to conduct him her.

Enter Troilus.

'Troilus. O! here he comes. How now, how now!

'Sirrah, walk off.

'Troilus. Have you seen my cousin?

'Sirrah. No, Pandarus: I stalk about her door, the strange soul upon the Stygian banks ying for waftage. O! be thou my Charon, I give me swift transference to those fields ere I may walk in the lily-beds pos'd for the deserver. O gentle Pandarus! in Cupid's shoulder pluck his painted wings, I fly with me to Cressid.

'Troilus. Walk here i' the orchard. I'll bring her straight.

Enter Pandarus.

'Troilus. She's making her ready; she'll come sight: you must be witty now. She does so, and fetches her wind so short, as if she frayed with a sprite: I'll fetch her. It is a prettiest villain: she fetches her breath so as a new-ta'en sparrow.

'Exit.

'Troilus. Even such a passion doth embrace my bosom:

'Troilus. My heart beats thicker than a feverous pulse; all my powers do their bestowing lose, es vassalage at unawares encountering eye of majesty.

Re-enter Pandarus with Cressida.

'Exit.

'Troilus. Come, come, what need you blush? me's a baby. Here she is now: swear the 'ns now to her that you have sworn to me, at are you gone again? you must be watched you be made tame, must you? Come your y's, come your ways; an you draw backward, I'll put you i' the fills. Why do you not speak her? Come, draw this curtain, and let 's see r picture. Alas the day! how lown you are offend daylight; an 'twere dark, you'd close her. So, so; rub on, and kiss the mistress. Iw now! a kiss in fee-farm! build there, cener; the air is sweet. Nay, you shall it your hearts out ere I part you. The falcon she tercel, for all the ducks i' the river: go to.

'Troilus. You have bereft me of all words, lady. 'Pan. Words pay no debts, give her deeds; she'll bereave you o' the deeds too if she call your activity in question. What! billing again! Here's 'In witness whereof the parties interchangeably'—Come in, come in: I'll go get a fire.

'Exit. 62

Cressida. Will you walk in, my lord?

'Troilus. O Cressida! how often have I wished me thus.

Cressida. Wished, my lord! The gods grant,— O my lord!

'Troilus. What should they grant? what makes this pretty abruption? What too curious dregs espies my sweet lady in the fountain of our love?

Cressida. More dregs than water, if my fears have eyes.

'Troilus. Fears make devils of cherubins; they never see truly.

Cressida. Blind fear, that seeing reason leads, finds safer footing than blind reason stumbling without fear: to fear the worst oft cures the worse.

'Troilus. O! let my lady apprehend no fear: in all Cupid's pageant there is presented no monster.

Cressida. Not nothing monstrous neither!

'Troilus. Nothing but our undertakings; when we vow to weep seas, live in fire, eat rocks, tame tigers; thinking it harder for our mistress to devise imposition enough than for us to undergo any difficulty imposed. This is monstruous in love, lady, that the will is infinite, and the execution confined; that the desire is boundless, and the act a slave to limit.

Cressida. They say all lovers swear more performance than they are able, and yet reserve an ability that they never perform; vowing more than the perfection of ten and discharging less than the tenth part of one. They that have the voice of lions and the act of hares, are they not monsters?

'Troilus. Are there such? such are not we. Praise us as we are tasted, allow us as we prove; our head shall go bare till merit crown it. No perfection in reversion shall have a praise in present: we will not name desert before his birth, and, being born, his addition shall be humble. Few words to fair faith: Troilus shall be such to Cressid, as what envy can say worst shall be a mock for his truth; and what truth can speak truer not truer than Troilus.

Cressida. Will you walk in, my lord?

Re-enter Pandarus.

Pan. What! blushing still? have you not done talking yet?

Cressida. Well, uncle, what folly I commit I dedicate to you.

Pan. I thank you for that: if my lord get a boy of you, you'll give him me. Be true to my lord: if he flinch, chide me for it.

'Troilus. You know now your hostages; your uncle's word, and my firm faith.

Pan. Nay, I'll give my word for her too. Our kindred, though they be long ere they are wood, they are constant being won: they are burrs, I can tell you; they will stick where they are thrown.

Cressida. Boldness comes to me now, and brings me heart.

Prince Troilus. I have loved you night and day. For many weary months.

'Troilus. Why was my Cressid then so hard to win?
Cres. Hard to seem won; but I was won, my lord,
With the first glance that ever—pardon me—
If I confess much you will play the tyrant.
I love you now; but not, till now, so much
But I might master it: in faith, I lie; 130
My thoughts were like unbridled children, grown
Too headstrong for their mother. See, we fools!
Why have I blabb'd? who shall be true to us
When we are so unsecret to ourselves?
But, though I lov'd you well, I wou'd you not;
And yet, good faith, I wish'd myself a man,
Or that we women had men's privilege
Of speaking first. Sweet, bid me hold my tongue;
For in this rapture I shall surely speak
The thing I shall repent. See, see! your silence,
Cunning in dumbness, from my weakness draws
My very soul of counsel. Stop my mouth. 140
Tro. And shall, albeit sweet music issues thence.
Pan. Pretty, 't faith.
Cres. My lord, I do beseech you, pardon me;
'Twas not my purpose thus to beg a kiss:
I am asham'd: O heavens! what have I done?
For this time will I take my leave, my lord.
Tro. Your leave, sweet Cressid!
Pan. Leave! an you take leave till to-morrow morning.— 151
Cres. Pray you, content you.
Tro. What offends you, lady?
Cres. Sir, mine own company.
Tro. You cannot shun yourself.
Cres. Let me go and try.
I have a kind of self resides with you;
But an unkind self, that itself will leave,
To be another's fool. Where is my wit?
I would be gone, I speak not what.
Tro. Well know they what they speak that speak so wisely.
Cres. Perchance, my lord, I show more craft
Than love,
And fell so roundly to a large confession,
To angle for your thoughts: but you are wise,
Or else you love not, for to be wise and love
Exceeds man's might; that dwells with gods above.
Tro. O! that I thought it could be in a woman,
As if it can I will presume in you,
To feed for aye her lamp and flames of love;
To keep her constancy in plight and youth,
Outliving beauty's outward, with a mind
That doth renew swifter than blood decays:
Or that persuasion could but thus convince me,
That my integrity and truth to you
Might be afronted with the match and weight
Of such a winnow'd purity in love;
How were I then uplifted! but, alas!
I am as true as truth's simplicity,
And simpler than the infancy of truth.
Cres. In that I'll war with you.
Tro. O virtuous fight!
When right with right wars who shall be most right.
True swains in love shall in the world come Agree their truths with Troilus: when their crimes,
Full of protest, of oath, and big compare,
Want similés, truth tir'd with iteration,
As true as steel, as plantage to the moon,
As sun to day, as turtle to her mate,
As iron to adamant, as earth to the centre,
Yet, after all comparisons of truth,
As truth's authentick author to be cited,
As true as Troilus' shall crown up the verse,
And sanctify the numbers.
Cres. Prophet may you?
If I be false, or swerve a hair from truth,
When time is old and hath forgot itself,
When waterdrops have worn the stones of Th:
And blind oblivion swallow'd cities up,
And mighty states characterless are grant'd
To dusty nothing, yet let memory,
From false to false, among false maids in love
Upbraid my falsehood! when they've said false
As air, as water, wind, or sandy earth,
As fox to lamb, as wolf to heifer's calf,
Pard to the kind, or stepdame to her son,
Yea, let them say, to stick the heart of falsehe
As false as Cressid.'
Pan. Go to, a bargain made; seal it, seal!
I'll be the witness. Here I hold your hand, sir, my cousin's. If ever you prove false one another, Since I have taken such pains to be you together, let all pitiful goers-between called to the world's end after my name;
them all Pandars; let all constant men Troilusses, all false women Cressids, and brokers-between Pandars! say, amen.
Tro. Amen.
Cres. Amen.
Pan. Amen. Whereupon I will show yo' chamber with a bed; which bed, because it is not speak of your pretty encounters, press in death: away!
And Cupid grant all tongue-tied maidens beds,
Bed, chamber, Pandar to provide this gear.

Scene III.—The Grecian Camp.

Enter Agamemnon, Ulysses, Diomedes, Nestor, Ajax, Menelaus, and Calchas.

Cal. Now, princes, for the service I have to you,
The advantage of the time prompts me alon;
To call for recompense. Appear it to your minds That through the sight I bear in things to come; I have abandon'd Troy, left my possession, Incurr'd a traitor's name; expos'd myself, From certain and possess'd conveniences, To doubtful fortunes; sequestering from me That time, acquaintance, custom, and condition Made tame and most familiar to my nature; And here, to do you service, am become As new into the world, strange, unacquainted. I do beseech you, as in way of taste, To give me now a little benefit, Out of those many register'd in promise, Which, you say, live to come in my behalf. Agam. What would'st thou of us, Troj?
makes demand.

Cal. You have a Trojan prisoner, call'd Antenor. Yesterday took: Troy holds him very dear. Oft have you, often have you thanks therefor. Desir'd my Cressid in right great exchange, Whom Troy hath still denied; but this Antenor I know is such a wrest in their affairs That their negotiations all must slack, Wanting his manage; and they will almost Give us a prince of blood, a son of Priam,
TROILUS AND CRESSIDA.

Enter ACHILLES and PATROCLUS, before their Tent.

Ulyss. Achilles stands i' the entrance of his tent:
use it our general to pass strangely by him, if he were forgot; and, princes all, negligent and loose regard upon him: all come last. 'Tis like he'll question me by such unpleasing eyes are bent on him: a, I have derision medicable use between your strangeness and his pride, igh his own will shall have desire to drink. may do good: pride hath no other glass show itself but pride, for supple knees'd arrogance and are the proud man's fees.

Ulyss. We'll execute your purpose, and put on form of strangeness as we pass along: 81 to each lord, and either grieve him not else disdainfully, which shall shake him more if not look'd on. I will lead the way.

cchil. What! comes the general to speak with me? I know my mind; I'll fight no more 'gainst Troy.

Ulyss. What says Achilles? would he aught with us?

cchil. Would you, my lord, aught with the general?

Ulyss. No.

Ulyss. Nothing, my lord.

Ulyss. The better.

Exit AGAMEMNON and NESTOR.

cchil. Good day, good day.

cchil. What! does the euckold scorn me?

jux. How now, Patroclus!

cchil. Good morrow, Ajax.

jux. Ha?

cchil. Good morrow.

jux. Ay, and good next day too. Exit.

cchil. What mean these fellows? Know they not Achilles?

Ulyss. They pass by strangely: they were us'd to bend, send their smiles before them to Achilles; come as humbly as they us'd to creep holy altars.

cchil. What! am I poor of late? certain, greatness, once fell out with fortune, fall out with men too: what the declin'd is, shall as soon read in the eyes of others feel in his own fall; for men, like butterflies, flew not their mealy wings but to the summer, I not a man, for being simply man,

Hath any honour, but honour for those honours That are without him, as place, riches, and favour,

Prizes of accident as oft as merit: Which when they fall, as being slippery standers,
The love that lean'd on them as slippery too,
Doth one pluck down another, and together Die in the fall. But 'tis not so with me: Fortune and I are friends: I do enjoy
At ample point all that I did po-sess, Save these men's looks; who do, methinks, find out Something not worth in me such rich beholding As they have often given. Here is Ulysses: I'll interrupt his reading.

How now, Ulysses?

Ulyss. Now, great Thetis' son! Achil. What are you reading? Ulyss. A strange fellow here

Writes me:

That man, how dearly ever parted,
How much in having, or without, or in,
Cannot make boost to have that which he hath,
Nor feels not what he owes but by reflection;
As when his virtues shining upon others
Heat them, and they retort that heat again
To the first giver.

Achil. This is not strange, Ulysses. The beauty that is borne here in the face
The bearer knows not, but commends itself To others' eyes; nor doth the eye itself.
That most pure spirit of sense, behold itself, Not going from itself; but eye to eye oppos'd Salutes each other with each other's form;
For speculation turns not to itself.
Till it hath travell'd, and is married there Where it may see itself. This is not strange at all.

Ulyss. I do not strain at the position, It is familiar, but at the author's drift;
Who in his circumstance expressly proves That no man is the lord of any thing, Though in and of him there be much consisting,
Till he communicate his parts to others:
Nor doth he of himself know them for aught
Till he behold them form'd in the applause Where they're extended; who, like an arch, reverberates

The voice again, or, like a gate of steel
Fronting the sun, receives and renders back His figure and his heat. I was much wrapt in this; And apprehended here immediately

The unknown Ajax.

Heavens, what a man is there! a very horse;
That has he knows not what. Nature, what things there are,
Most abject in regard, and dear in use!
What things, again most dear in the esteem, And poor in worth! Now shall we see to-morrow,

An act that very chance doth throw upon him, Ajax renown'd. O heavens! what some men do, While some men leave to do.

How some men creep in skittish fortune's hall, Whiles others play the idiots in her eyes!
How one man eats into another's pride, While pride is fastening in his wantonness!
To see these Grecian lords! why, even already They clap the lubber Ajax on the shoulder.
As if his foot were on brave Hector's breast,

And great Troy shrinking.

Achil. I do believe it; for they pass'd by me
As misers do by beggars, neither gave to me

Good word nor look: what! are my deeds forgot?

Ulyss. Time hath, my lord, a wallet at his back,
Wherein he puts alms for oblivion,
A great-six'd monster of ingratiations:
Those scraps are good deeds past; which are devour'd
As fast as they are made, forgot as soon
As done: perseverance, dear my lord,
Keeps honour bright: to have done is to hang Quite out of fashion, like a rusty mail
In monumental mockery. Take the instant
way;
For honour travels in a strait so narrow
Where one but goes abreast: keep then the path;
For emulation hath a thousand sons
That one by one pursue: if you give way,
Or hedge aside from the direct forthright,
Like to an enter'd tide they all rush by
And leave you hindmost;
Or, like a gallant horse fall'n in first rank,
Lie there for pavement to the abject rear, O'errun and trampled on: then what they do in present,
Though less than yours in past, must o'ertop
yours;
For time is like a fashionable host,
That slightly shakes his parting guest by the
hand,
And with his arms outstretched, as he would fly,
Grasps in the corner: welcome ever smiles,
And farewell goes out sighing. O! let not virtue seek Remuneration for the thing it was;
For beauty, wit,
High birth, vigour of bone, desert in service,
Love, friendship, charity, are subjects all
To envious and calumniating time.
One touch of nature makes the whole world kin,
That all with one consent praise new-born gawds,
Though they are made and moulded of things past,
And give to dust that is a little gilt
More laud than gilt o'er-dusted.
The present eye praises the present object:
Then marvel not, thou great and complete man,
That all the Greeks begin to worship Ajax;
Since things in motion sooner catch the eye
Than what not stirs. The cry went once on thee,
And still it might, and yet it may again,
If thou would'st not entomb thyself alive,
And case thy reputation in thy tent;
Whose glorious deeds, but in these fields of late,
Made emulous missions 'mongst the gods them-

Achil. Of this my privacy.

I have strong reasons.

Ulyss. But 'gainst your privacy
The reasons are more potent and heroical.
'Tis known, Achilles, that you are in love
With one of Priam's daughters.

Achil. Ha! known!

Ulyss. Is that a wonder?
The providence that's in a watchful state
Knows almost every grain of Plutus' gold,

Finds bottom in the uncomprehensive deeps Keeps place with thought, and almost, like gods,
Does thoughts unveil in their dumb cradles.
There is a mystery, with whom relation
Durst never meddle, in the soul of state,
Which hath an operation more divine
Than breath or pen can give expressure to.
All the commerce that you have had with Troy
As perfectly is ours as yours, my lord;
And better would it fit Achilles much
To throw down Hector than Polyxena;
But it must grieve young Pyrrhus now
home,
When fame shall in our islands sound

And all the Greekish girls shall tripping sin
'Great Hector's sister did Achilles win,
But our great Ajax bravely beat down him,'
Farewell, my lord: I as your lover speak;
The fool slides o'er the ice that you shall break.

Patr. To this effect, Achilles, have I me-
you.

A woman impudent and mannish grown
Is not more loath'd than an effeminate man
In time of action. I stand condemn'd this:
They think my little stomach to the war
And your great love to me restrains you thus:
Sweet, rouse yourself; and the weak war

Shall from your neck unloose his amorous fangs;
And, like a dew-drop from the lion's mane,
Be shuck to air.

Achil. Shall Ajax fight with Hector?

Patr. Ay; and perhaps receive much hon-
by him.

Achil. I see my reputation is at stake;
My fame is shrewdly gor'd.

Patr. O! then beware
Those wounds heal ill that men do give th-

Omission to do what is necessary
Seals a commission to a blank of danger;
And danger, like an aque, subtly taints
Even then when we sit idly in the sun.

Achil. Go call Thersites hither, sweet
troilus:
I'll send the fool to Ajax and desire him
To invite the Trojan lords after the combat
To see us here unarm'd. I have a won-longing,
An appetite that I am sick withal,
To see great Hector in his weeds of peace;
To talk with him and to behold his visage,
Even to my full of view. A labour sav'd!

Enter Thersites.

Ther. A wonder!

Achil. What?

Ther. Ajax goes up and down the field, ask-for himself.

Achil. How so?

Ther. He must fight single to-morrow with Hector, and is so prophetically proud of heroical cudgelling that he raves in say-nothing.
TROILUS

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Troy. A Street.

Enter, at one side, AENEAS, and Servant with a torch; at the other, PARIS, DEIPHIBUS, ANTENOR, DIOMEDES, and Others, with torches.

Par. See, ho! who is that there?

Dei. It is the Lord Aeneas.

Aeneas. Is the prince there in person?

Had I so good occasion to lie long
As you, Prince Paris, nothing but heavenly business

Should rob my bed-mate of my company.

Par. A valiant Greek, Aeneas; take his hand:
Witness the process of your speech, wherein
You told how Diomed, a whole week by days,
Did haunt you in the field.

Aene. Health to you, valiant sir; during all question of the gentle truce;
But when I meet you arm'd, as black defiance
As heart can think or courage execute.

Dio. The one and other Diomed embraces.
Our bloods are now in calm, and, so long, health!
But when contention and occasion meet,
By Jove, I'll play the hunter for thy life
With all my force, pursuit, and policy.

Aene. And thou shalt hunt a lion, that will fly
With his face backward. In humane gentleness,
Welcome to Troy! now, by Anchises' life,
Welcome, indeed! By Venus' hand I swear,
No man alive can love in such a sort
The thing he means to kill more excellently.

Dio. We sympathize. Jove, let Aeneas live,
If to my sword his fate be not the glory,
A thousand complete courses of the sun!
But, in mine emulous honour, let him die,
With every joint a wound, and that to-morrow!

Aene. We know each other well.

Dio. We do; and long to know each other worse.

Par. This is the most despiteful gentle greeting,
The noblest hateful love, that e'er I heard of.
What business, lord, so early?

Aene. I was sent for to the king; but why, I know not.

Par. His purpose meets you; 'twas to bring this Greek
To Calchas' house, and there to render him,
For the enfeebled Antenor, the fair Cressid.

Let's have your company; or, if you please,
Haste there before us. I constantly do think,
Or rather, call my thought a certain knowledge,
My brother Troilus lodges there to-night:
Rouse him and give him note of our approach,
With the whole quality wherefore: I fear
We shall be much unwelcome.

Aene. That I assure you

Troilus had rather Troy were born to Greece
Than Cressid born from Troy.

Par. There is no help;
The bitter disposition of the time
Will have it so. On, lord; we'll follow you.

Aene. Good morrow, all.

Par. And tell me, noble Diomed; faith, tell me true,
Even in the soul of sound good-fellowship,
Who, in your thoughts, merits fair Helen most, Myself or Menelaus?

Dio.
Both alike:
He merits well to have her that doth seek her, Not making any scruple of her solire, With such a hell of pain and world of charge, And you as well to keep her that defend her, Not palating the taste of her dishonour, With such a costly loss of wealth and friends: He, like a puling cuckold, would drink up a thee and dregs of a flat tamed piece; You, like a lecher, out of whorsho loins Are pleas'd to breed out your inheritors: Both merits pois'd, each weighs nor less nor more;
But he as he, the heavier for a whore.

Par.
You are too bitter to your countryman.
Dio.
She's bitter to her country. Hear me, Paris:
For every false drop in her bawdy veins A Grecian's life hath sunk; for every scruple Of her contaminated carrion weight A Trojan hath been slain. Since she could speak, She hath not given so many good words breath As for her Greeks and Trojans suffer'd death.

Par.
Fair Diomed, you do as chapmen do, Dispraise the thing that you desire to buy; But we in silence hold this virtue well, We'll but commend what we intend to sell. Here lies our way.

Exeunt.

Scene II.—The Same. Court of Pandarus's House.

Enter Troilus and Cressida.

Tro.
Dear, trouble not yourself: the morn is cold.
Cres.
Then, sweet my lord, I will call mine uncle down;
He shall unbolt the gates.

Tro.
Trouble him not; To bed, to bed: sleep kill those pretty eyes, And give as soft attachment to thy senses As infants' empty of all thought!

Cres.
Good morrow then.

Tro.
I prithee now, to bed.
Cres.
Are you aware of me?

Tro. O Cressida! but that the busy day, Wuk'd by the lark, hath rous'd the ribald crows, And dreaming night will hide our joys no longer, I would not from thee.

Cres.
Night hath been too brief.

Tro.
Beshear the witch! with venomous wights she stays As tediously as hell, but flies the grasps of love With wings more momentary-swift than thought. You will catch cold, and curse me.

Cres.
Prithee, tarry: You men will never tarry. O foolish Cressid! I might have still held off, And then you would have tarried. Hark! there's one up.

Pan.
Within. What! 's all the doors open here?
Tro.
It is your uncle.

Cres.
A pestilence on him! now will he be mocking: I shall have such a life!

Enter Pandarus.

Pan.
How now, how now! how go maid's heads?
Here, you maid! where's my cousin Cressid
Cres.
Go hang yourself, you naughty mock-uncle!
You bring me to do—and then you flout me.
Pan.
To do what? to do what? let her what: what have I brought you to do?
Cres.
Come, come; beshear your head you'll ne'er be good,
Nor suffer others.

Pan.
Ha, ha! Alas, poor wretch! a capoccia! hast not slept to-night? would not, a naughty man, let it sleep? a bighearted him!

Knocking within.

Cres.
Did not I tell you? Would he knock'd o' the head!

Who's that at door? good uncle, go and see My lord, come you again into my chamber: You smile and mock me, as if I meant naught.

Tro.
Ha, ha!
Cres.
Come, you are deceiv'd, I think of such thing.

Knocking within.

How earnestly they knock! Pray you, come I would not for half Troy have you seen her.

Exeunt Troilus and Cressida.

Pan.
Who's there! what's the matter? You beat down the door! How now! what's the matter?

Enter Æneas.

Æne.
Good morrow, lord, good morrow.
Pan.
Who's there? my Lord Æneas! By troth, I knew you not: what news with you early?

Æne.
Is not Prince Troilus here?
Pan.
Here! what should he do here?
Æne.
Come, he is here, my lord; do not do him: It doth import him much to speak with me.

Pan.
Is he here, say you? 'tis more the know, I'll be sworn: for my own part, I care in late. What should he do here?

Æne.
Who? nay, then: come, come, ye do him wrong ere you're ware. You'll be true to him, to be false to him. Do not know of him, but yet go fetch him hither;

Re-enter Troilus.

Tro.
How now! what's the matter?
Æne.
My lord, I scarce have leisure to say you, My matter is so rash: there is at hand Paris your brother, and Delphobus, The Grecian Diomed, and our Antenor Deliv'd to us; and for him forthwith, Ere the first sacrifice, within this hour, We must give up to Diomedes' hand The Lady Cressida.

Tro.
Is it concluded so?

Æne.
By Priam and the general state of Tr. They are at hand and ready to effect it.

Tro.
How my achievements mock me! I will not meet them: and, my Lord Æneas, We met by chance; you did not find me here.

Æne.
Good, good, my lord; the secret's nature Have not more gift in taciturnity.

Exeunt Troilus and Æneas.
TROILUS AND CRESSIDA.

Scene IV.—The Same. A Room in Pandarus’s House.

Enter Pandarus and Cressida.

Pan. Be moderate, be moderate.

Cres. Why tell you me of moderation? The grief is fine, full, perfect, that I taste, And violenst in a sense as strong As that which causeth it: how can I moderate it? If I could temporize with my affection, Or brew it to a weak and colder palate, The like allayment could I give my grief: My love admits no qualifying dross; No more my grief, in such a precious loss.

Enter Troilus.

Pan. Here, here, here he comes. Ah! sweet ducks.

Pan. What a pair of spectacles is here! Let me embrace too. O heart, as the goodly saying is,— —O heart, heavy heart,

Why sigh’st thou without breaking?

where he answers again,

Because thou canst not case thy smart
By friendship nor by speaking.

There was never a truer rime. Let us cast away nothing, for we may live to have need of such a verse: we see it, we see it. How now, lambs!

Tro. Cressid, I love thee in so strain’d a purity, That the bless’d gods, as angry with my fancy, More bright in zeal than the devotion which Cold lips blow to their deities, take thee from me.

Cres. Have the gods envy?

Pan. Ay, ay, ay, ay; ’tis too plain a case.

Cres. And is it true, that I must go from Troy?

Tro. A hateful truth.

Cres. What! and from Troilus too?

Tro. From Troy and Troilus.

Cres. Is it possible?

Tro. And suddenly; where injury of change Puts back leave-taking, justles roughly by All time of pause, rudely begulges our lips Of all rejoindure, forcibly prevents Our lock’d embrasures, strangles our dear vows Even in the birth of our own labouring breath. We two, that with so many thousand sighs Did buy each other, must poorly sell ourselves With the rude brevity and discharge of one. Injurious time now with a robber’s haste Crams his rich thievry up, he knows not how: As many farewell as be stars in heaven, With distinct breath and consign’d kisses to them, He fumbles up into a loose adieu, And scants us with a single famish’d kiss, Distasting with the salt of broken tears.

Aine. Within. My lord, is the lady ready?

Tro. Hark! you are call’d: some say the Genius so.

Cres. ‘Come!’ to him that instantly must die. Bid them have patience; she shall come anon.

Pan. Where are my tears? rain, to lay this wind, or my heart will be blown up by the root!

Cres. I must then to the Grecians?

Tro. No remedy.
Cres. A woeful Cressid 'mongst the merry Greeks!
When shall we see again?
Tro. Hear me, my love. Be thou but true of heart,— Cres. I true! how now! what wicked deem is this?
Tro. Nay, we must use expostulation kindly,
For it is parting from us:
I speak not 'be thou true,' as fearing thee,
For I will throw my glove to Death himself,
That there's no maculation in thy heart;
But 'be thou true,' say I, to fashion in
My sequent protestation; be thou true,
And I will see thee.
Cres. O! you shall be expos'd, my lord, to dangers
As infinite as imminent; but I'll be true.
Tro. And I'll grow friend with danger. Wear this sleeve.
Cres. And you this glove. When shall I see you?
Tro. I will corrupt the Grecian sentinels,
To give thee nightly visitation.
But yet, be true,
Cres. O heavens! 'be true' again!
Tro. Hear why I speak it, love:
The Grecian youths are full of quality;
Their loving well compos'd with gift of nature,
Flowing and swelling o'er with arts and exercise:
How novelties may move, and parts with person,
Alas! a kind of godly jealousy,
Which, I beseech you, call a virtuous sin,
Makes me afeard.
Cres. O heavens! you love me not.
Tro. Die I a villain then?
In this I do not call your faith in question
So mainly as my merit: I cannot sing,
Nor heel the high lavolt, nor sweeten talk,
Nor play at subtile games; fair virtues all,
To which the Grecians are most prompt and pregnant:
But I can tell that in each grace of these
There lurks a still and dumb-discoursive devil
That tempts most cunningly. But be not tempted.
Cres. Do you think I will?
Tro. No.
But something may be done that we will not:
And sometimes we are devils to ourselves
When we will tempt the frailty of our powers,
Presuming on their changeful potency.
Aene. Within. Nay, good my lord,—
Tro. Come, kiss; and let us part.
Par. Within. Brother Troilus!
Tro. Good brother, come you hither;
And bring Aeneas and the Grecian with you.
Cres. My lord, will you be true?
Tro. Who, I? alas! it is my vice, my fault:
Whiles others fish with craft for great opinion,
I with great truth catch mere simplicity;
Whilst some with cunning gild their copper crowns,
With truth and plainness I do wear mine bare.
Fear not my truth; the moral of my wit
Is 'plain and true'; there's all the reach of it.

Enter Aeneas, Paris, Antenor, Deiphobus, and Diomedes.

Welcome, Sir Diomed! Here is the lady
Which for Antenor we deliver you:

At the port, lord, I'll give her to thy hand,
And by the way possess thee what she is.
Entreat her fair; and, by my soul, fair Gree,
If e'er thou stand at mercy of my sword.
Now Cressid, and thy life shall be as safe
As Pram is in Ilion.

Dio. Fair Lady Cressid, So please you, save the thanks this prince expe,
The lustre in your eye, heaven in your cheek
Pleads your fair usage; and to Diomed
You shall be mistress, and command him who
Tro. Grecian, thou dost not use me courteous.
To shame the seal of my petition to thee.
In praising her: I tell thee, lord of Greece.
She is as far high-soaring o'er thy praises
As thou unworthy to be call'd her servant.
I charge thee use her well, even for my chieftain,
For, by the dreadful Pluto, if thou dost not Though the great bulk Achilles be thy guard,
I'll cut thy throat.

Dio. O! be not mov'd, Prince Troilus.
Let me be privileng'd by my place and messengers
To be a speaker free; when I am hence,
I'll answer to my lust; and know you, lord,
I'll nothing do on charge: to her own worth
She shall be priz'd; but that you say 'be,'
I'll speak it in my spirit and honour, 'no.'
Tro. Come, to the port. I'll tell thee, Dion.
This brave shall oft make thee to hide thy Lady,
give me your hand, and, as we walk,
To our own selves bend we our needful talk.

Execut Troilus, Cressida, Diomedes. Trumpet sounds.

Par. Hark! Hector's trumpet.

Aene. How have we spent this morning?
The prince must think me tardy and remiss
That swore to ride before him to the field.
Par. 'Tis Troilus' fault. Come, come, to ride with him.

Dei. Let us make ready straight.

Aene. Yea, with a bridegroom's fresh alacrity.
Let us address to tend on Hector's heels:
The glory of our Troy doth this day lie
On his fair worth and single chivalry.

Scene V.—The Grecian Camp. Lists set on.

Enter Ajax, armed; Agamemnon, Achilles, Patroclus, Menelaus, Ulysses, Nestor and Others.

Agam. Here art thou in appointment fit and fair,
Anticipating time with starting courage.
Give with thy trumpet a loud note to Troy,
That dreadful Ajax; that the appalled air
May pierce the head of the great combatant
And hale him hither.

Ajax. Thou, trumpet, there's my punch
Now crack thy lungs, and split thy brazen pi
Blow, villain, till thy thready bias cheek
Outswell the colic of puff'd Aquilon.
Come, stretch thy chest, and let thy eyes sp
blood;
Thou blow'st for Hector. Trumpet sounds.

Ulyss. No trumpet answers.

Achil. 'Tis but early day.

Agam. Is not yond Diomed with Caleb's daughter?

Ulyss. 'Tis he, I ken the manner of his ga rises on the toe; that spirit of his aspiration lifts him from the earth.

Enter Diomedes, with Cressida.

Cam. Is this the Lady Cressida?

Troil. Even she.

Cam. Most dearly welcome to the Greeks, sweet lady.

Est. Our general doth salute you with a kiss. /lyss. Yet is the kindness but particular; were better she were kiss'd in general.

Est. And very courteously: I'll begin. much for Nestor, Chil. I'll take that winter from your lips, fair lady:

Illes bids you welcome.

En. I had good argument for kissing once.

At. But that's no argument for kissing now; thus popp'd Paris in his hardiment, parted thus and your argument. /lyss. O deadly gall, and theme of all our corns! which we lose our heads to gild his horns.

At. The first was Menelaus' kiss; this, mine: nucke kisses you.

En. O! this is trim.

At. Paris and I kiss evermore for him.

En. I'll have my kiss, sir. Lady, by your leave.

Es. In kissing, do you render or receive?

At. Both take and give.

Es. I'll make my match to live, kiss you take is better than you give; before no kiss.

En. I'll give you boot; I'll give you three for one.

Es. You're an odd man; give even, or give none.

En. An odd man, lady! every man is odd.

Es. No, Paris is not; for you know 'tis true, you are odd, and he is even with you.

En. You fillip me 'o' the head.

Es. No, I'll be sworn.

Es. It were no match, your nail against his horn.

1. sweet lady, beg a kiss of you?

2. You may.

3. I do desire it.

Es. Why, beg then.

Es. Why then, for Venus' sake, give me a kiss, Helen is a maid again, and his. 50 I am your debtor; claim it when 'tis due.

Es. Never's my day, and then a kiss of you.

Es. Lady, a word: I'll bring you to your father.

Diomedes leads out Cressida.

Est. A woman of quick sense.

Es. Fie, fie upon her!

Es. Her language in her eye, her cheek, her lip, her foot speaks; her wanton spirits look out very joint and motive of her body. These encouterers, so glib of tongue, give a coasting welcome ere it comes, wide unclasp the tables of their thoughts very tickling reader, set them down slutish spoils of opportunity daughters of the game. Trumpet within.

1. The Trojans' trumpet.

Tam. Yonder comes the troop.

for HECTOR, armed; AENEAS, TROILUS, and other Trojans, with Attendants.

Tm. Hail, all you state of Greece! what shall be done to him that victory commands! or do you purpose

A victor shall be known? will you the knights Shall to the edge of all extremity Pursue each other, or shall be divided By any voice or order of the field?

Hector bade ask.

Aem. Which way would Hector have it?

Aeneas. He cares not; he'll obey conditions.

Achilles. 'Tis done like Hector; but securely done, A little proudly, and great deal disgracing The knight oppos'd.

Aeneas. If not Achilles, sir,

What is your name?

Achilles. If not Achilles, nothing.

Aeneas. Therefore Achilles; but, what'eer, know this:

In the extremity of great and little, Valour and pride excel themselves in Hector; The one almost as infinite as all,

The other blank as nothing. Weigh him well, And that which looks like pride is courtesy. This Ajax is half made of Hector's blood:

In love whereof half Hector stays at home; Half heart, half hand, half Hector comes to seek This blended knight, half Trojan, and half Greek. Achilles. A maiden battle then? O! I perceive you.

Re-enter Diomedes.

Aem. Here is Sir Diomed. Go, gentle knight, Stand by our Ajax: as you and Lord Æneas Consent upon the order of their fight, 90 So be it; either to the uttermost, Or else a breath: the combatants being kin Half stints their strife before their strokes begin.

Ajax and Hector enter the lists.

Ulysses. They are oppos'd already.

Aem. What Trojan is that same that looks so heavy?

Ulysses. The youngest son of Priam, a true knight;

Not yet mature, yet matchless; firm of word, Speaking in deeds and deedless in his tongue; Not soon provok'd nor being provok'd soon calm'd:
His heart and hand both open and both free; For what he has he gives, what thinks he shows; Yet gives he not till judgment guide his bounty, Nor dignifies an impure thought with breath.

Manly as Hector, but more dangerous;

For Hector, in his blaze of wrath, subscribes To tender objects; but he in heat of action Is more vindicative than jealous love.

They call him Troilus, and on him erect A second hope, as fairly built as Hector.

Thus says Æneas; one that knows the youth Even to his inches, and with private soul Did in great Ilion thus translate him to me.

Alarum. Hector and Ajax fight.

Aem. There are in action.

Nest. Now, Ajax, hold thine own!

Troilus, Hector thou sleepest; awake thee!

Ajax. His blows are well dispos'd: there, Ajax!

Dio. You must no more.

Trum. Trumpets cease.

Aeneas. Princes, enough, so please you.

Ajax. I am not warm yet; let us fight again.

Dio. As Hector pleases.

Hec. Why, then will I no more,
Thou art, great lord, my father's sister's son. 130
A cousin-german to great Priam's seed;
The obligation of our blood forbids
A gory emulation 'twixt us twain.
Were thy communion Greek and Trojan so
That thou could'st say 'This hand is Grecian all,
And this is Trojan; the sinews of this leg
All Greek, and this all Troy; my mother's blood
Runs on the dexter cheek, and this sinister
Bounds in my father's; 'by Jove multiform,
Thou should'st not bear from me a Greekish member Wherein my sword had not impressed made
Of our rank feud. But the just gods gainsay
That any drop thou borrow'dst from thy mother,
My sacred aunt, should by my mortal sword
Be drain'd! Let me embrace thee, Ajax:
By him that thunders, thou hast lusty arms;
Hector would have them fall upon him thus:
Cousin, all honour to thee!

Ajax. I thank thee, Hector:
Thou art too gentle and too free a man:
I came to kill thee, cousin, and bear hence
A great addition earned in thy death.

Hec. Not Neoptolemus so mirable,
On whose bright crest Fame with her lowest eyes
Cries 'This is he!' could promise to himself
A thought of added honour torn from Hector.

Aene. There is expectance here from both the sides,
What further you will do.

Hec. We'll answer it;
The issue is embracement: Ajax, farewell.

Ajax. If I might in entreaties find success,
As seld I have the chance, I would desire
My famous cousin to our Grecian tents.

Dido. 'Tis Agamemnon's wish, and great Achilles
Doth long to see unarm'd the valiant Hector.

Hec. Envies, call my brother Troilus to me,
And signify this loving interview
To the expecters of our Trojan part;
Desire them home. Give me thy hand, my cousin;
I will go eat with thee and see your knights.

Ajax. Great Agamemnon comes to meet us here.

Hec. The worthiest of them tell me name by name;
But for Achilles, mine own searching eyes
Shall find him by his large and portly size.

Agam. Worthy of arms! as welcome as to one
That would be rid of such an enemy;
But that's no welcome: understand more clear,
What's past and what's to come is strew'd with husks
And formless ruin of oblivion:
But in this extant moment, faith and truth,
Strain'd purely from all hollow bias-drawing,
Bids thee, with most divine integrity,
From heart of very heart, great Hector, welcome.

Hec. I thank thee, most imperious Agamemnon.

Agam. To Troilus. My well-fam'd lord of Troy, no less to you.

Men. Let me confirm my princely brother's greeting:
You brace of war-like brothers, welcome hither.

Hec. Who must we answer?

Aene. The noble Menelaus.

Hec. O! you, my lord? by Mars his guilt lends thanks!
Mock not that I affect the untraded oath;
Your quondam wife sweats still by Venus' ghast.
She's well, but bade me not commend her to you.

Men. Name her not now, sir; she's a dear theme.

Hec. O! pardon; I offend.

Nest. I have, thou gallant Trojan, seen oft,
Labouring for destiny, make cruel way Through ranks of Greekish youth: and I I seen thee,
As hot as Perseus, spur thy Phrygian steed,
And seen thee scorning forfeits and subduing
When thou hast hung thy advanced sword
th' air,
Not letting it decline on the declin'd;
That I have said to some my standers by
'Lo! Jupiter is yonder, dealing life,
And I have seen thee pause and take thy breath
When that a ring of Greeks have hemm'd the Like an Olympian wrestling: this have I seen
But this thy countenance, still lock'd in ste
I never saw till now. I knew thy grandsire
And once fought with him: he was a soul
good;
But, by great Mars, the captain of us all,
Never like thee. Let an old man embrace th
And, worthy warrior, welcome to our tents.

Aene. 'Tis the old Nestor.

Hec. Let me embrace thee, great old chorom
That hast so long walk'd hand in hand with

time:
Most reverend Nestor, I am glad to clasp th

Nest. I would my arms could match thee contention,
As they contend with thee in courtesy.

Hec. I would they could.

Nest. Ha!
By this white beard, I'd fight with thee to morrow.
Well, welcome, welcome! I have seen the tim

When we have here her base and pillar by u Hec. I know your favour, Lord Ulisses, we Uliss. Ah! sir, there's many a Greek and Trojan de
Since first I saw yourself and Dionys
In Ilion, on your Greekish embassy.

Uliss. Sir, I foretold you then what we ensu
My prophecy is but half his journey yet;
For yonder walls, that pertly front your tow
Yond towers, whose wanton tops do bus clounds,
Must kiss their own feet.

Hec. I must not believe ye,
There they stand yet, and modestly I think.
The fall of every Phrygian stone will cost
A drop of Grecian blood: the end crowns al
And that old common arbitrator, Time,
Will one day end it.

Uliss. So to him we leave it.
Most gentle and most valiant Hector, welco
After the general, I beseech you next
To feast with me and see me at my tent.

Achil. I shall forestall thee, Lord Uliss,

Now, Hector, I have fed mine eyes on thee;
TROILUS

Is this Achilles?

Stand fair, I pray thee: let me look on thee.

Nay, I have done already.

Tell me, you heavens, in which part of his body I may give the local wound a name, I make distinct the very breach whereon Hector's great spirit flew. Answer me, heavens!

It would discredit the bless'd gods, proud man, answer such a question. Stand again: ask'st thou to catch my life so pleasantly to prenominate in nice conjecture ere thou wilt hit me dead?

I tell thee, yea.

Wert thou the oracle to tell me so, not believe thee. Hencethfore guard thee well, I'll not kill thee there, nor there, nor there; by the forge that stieth Mars his helm, kill thee every where, yea, o'er and o'er.

wisest Grecians, pardon me this bragg; insolence draws folly from my lips; I'll endeavour deeds to match these words, may I never—

Do not chafe thee, cousin: you, Achilles, let these threats alone, accident and purpose bring you to't: may have every day enough of Hector, you have stomach. The general state, I fear, scarce entreat you to be odd with him.

I pray you, let us see you in the field; have had peltins wars since you refuse'd Grecians' cause.

Dost thou entreat me, Hector? morrow do I meet thee, fell as death; night all friends.

Thy hand upon that match.

First, all you peers of Greece, go to my tent; ere in the full convive we: afterwards, Hector's leisure and your bounties shall occur together, severally entreat him.

loud the tabourines, let the trumpets blow,
at this great soldier may his welcome know.

Enter all but TROILUS and ULYSSES.

My Lord Ulysses, tell me, I beseech you, what place of the field doth Calchas keep?

At Mencius' tent, most princely Troilus: Diomed doth feast with him to-night; so neither looks on heaven nor on earth, gives all gaze and bent of amorous view the fair Cressid.

Shall I, sweet lord, be bound to you so much,

After we part from Agamemnon's tent, To bring me thither?

You shall command me, sir. As gentle tell me, of what honour was This Cressida in Troy? Had she no lover there That wails her absence?

A mock is due. Will you walk on, my lord? She was belov'd, she lov'd; she is, and doth: But still sweet love is food for fortune's tooth.
An oath that I have sworn. I will not break it:
Fall, Greeks; fail, fame; honour or go or stay;
My major vow lies here, this I'll obey.
Come, come, Thersites, help to trim my tent; so
This night in banqueting must all be spent.
Away, Patroclus!

Exit Achilles and Patroclus.

Ther. With too much blood, and too little brain, these two may run mad; but if with too much brain and too little blood they do, I'll be aurer of madmen. Here's Agamemnon, an honest fellow enough, and one that loves quails, but he has not so much brain as ear-wax: and the goodly transformation of Jupiter there, his brother, the bull, the primitive statue, and oblique memorial of cuckold; a thifty shoeing-horn in a chain, hanging at his brother's leg.—to what form but that he is, should wit larded with malice and malice forced with wit turn him to? To an ass, were nothing: he is both ass and ox; to an ox, were nothing: he is both ox and ass. To be a dog, a mule, a cat, a fitchew, a toad, a lizard, an owl, a puttock, or a herring without a Roe, I would not care; but to be Menelaus! I would conspire against destiny. Ask me not what I would be, if I were not Thersites, for I care not to be the louse of a lazar, so I were not Menelaus. Hey-day! spirits and fires!

Enter Hector, Troilus, Ajax, Agamemnon, Ulysses, Nestor, Menelaus, and Diomedes, with lights.

Agam. We go wrong; we go wrong.

Ajax. No, yonder 'tis.

There. There, where we see the lights.

Hect. I trouble you.

Ajax. No, not a whit.

Ulyss. Here comes himself to guide you.

Re-enter Achilles.

Achil. Welcome, brave Hector; welcome, princes all.

Agam. So now, fair prince of Troy, I bid good night.

Ajax commands the guard to tend on you.

Hect. Thanks and good night to the Greeks' general.

Men. Good night, my lord.

Hect. Good night, sweet Lord Menelaus.

Ther. Sweet draught: 'sweet' quoth a! sweet sink, sweet sewer.

Achil. Good night and welcome both at once to those That go or tarry.

Agam. Good night.

Exit Agamemnon and Menelaus.

Achil. Old Nestor tarries; and you too, Diomed, Keep Hector company an hour or two.

Dio. I cannot, lord; I have important business,
The tide whereof is now. Good night, great Hector.

Hect. Give me your hand.

Ulyss. Aside to Troilus. Follow his torch; he goes to Calchas' tent.

I'll keep you company.

Tro. Sweet sir, you honour me.

Hect. And so, good night.

Exit Diomedes; Ulysses and Troilus following.

Achil. Come, come; enter my tent.

Ereunt Achilles, Hector, Ajax and Nest.

Ther. That same Diomed's a false-hear- rogue, a most unjust knife; I will no more trust him when he leers than I will a serp when he hisses. He will spend his mouth, a promise, like Brabbler the hound; but whl he performs, astronomers foretell it: it is digous, there will come some change: the borrow of the moon when Diomed keeps word. I will rather leave to see Hector, th not to dog him: they say he keeps a Tro dram, and uses the traitor Calchas' tent after. Nothing but lechery! all incontin varlets!

Exit.

Scene II.—The Same. Before Calchas' Tent.

Enter Diomedes.

Dio. What, are you up here, ho? speak.

Cal. Within. Who calls?

Dio. Diomed. Calchas, I think. Where's your daughter?

Cal. Within. She comes to you.

Enter Troilus and Ulysses, at a distance after them, Thersites.

Ulyss. Stand where the torch may not cover us.

Enter Cressida.

Tro. Cressid comes forth to him.

Dio. How now, my charge.

Cres. Now, my sweet guardian! Hark! word with you.

Whisp. Tro. Yea, so familiar!

Ulyss. She will sing any man at first sight.

Ther. And any man may sing her, if she take her cleft; she's noted.

Dio. Will you remember?

Cres. Remember! yes.

Dio. Nay, but do then;
And let your mind be coupled with your word.

Tro. What should she remember?

Ulyss. List!

Cres. Sweet honey Greek, tempt me not to folly.

Ther. Rognery!

Dio. Nay, then,—

Cres. I'll tell you what,—

Dio. Foh! foh! come, tell a pin: you are sworn.

Cres. In faith, I cannot. What would you have me do?

Ther. A juggling trick,—to be secretly ope.

Dio. What did you swear you would best on me?

Cres. I prithee, do not hold me to mine oath;Bid me do any thing but that, sweet Greek.

Dio. Good night.

Tro. Hold, patience!

Ulyss. How now, Trojan!

Cres. Diomed.

Dio. No, no; good night: I'll be your foe no more.

Tro. Thy better must.

Cres. Hark! one word in your ear.

Tro. O plague and madness
Troilus come,
120 I did sweare patience.
Cressida You shall not have it, Diomed; faith, you shall not;
I'll give you something else.
Troilus I will have this. Whose was it?
Cressida 'Tis no matter.
Troilus Come, tell me whose it was.
Cressida Twas one's that lov'd me better than you will.
But, now you have it, take it.
Troilus Whose was it?
Cressida By all Diana's waiting-women round,
And by herself, I will not tell you whose.
Troilus To-morrow will I wear it on my helm,
And grieve his spirit that dares not challenge it.
Troilus Wert thou the devil, and worst it on thy horn,
It should be challeng'd.
Cressida Well, well, 'tis done, 'tis past: and yet it is not:
I will not keep my word.
Troilus Why then, farewell; Thou never shalt mock Diomed again.
Cressida You shall not go: one cannot speak a word
But it straight starts you.
Troilus I do not like this fooling.
Cressida Nor I, by Pluto: but that that likes not me Pleases me best.
Troilus What shall I come? the hour?
Cressida Ay, come:—O Jove!—
Do come:—I shall be plag'ud.
Troilus Farewell till then.
Cressida Good night: I prithee, come.
Exit Diomedes.
Troilus, farewell! one eye yet looks on thee,
But with my heart the other eye doth see.
Ah! poor our sex; this fault in us I find,
The error of our eye directs our mind.
What error leads must err. O! then conclude Minds sway'd by eyes are full of turpitude.
Exit.
Cressida
Ther. A proof of strength she could not publish more,
Unless she said 'My mind is now turn'd whore.'
Ulysses All's done, my lord.
Troilus It is.
Ulysses Why stay we then?
Troilus To make a recordation to my soul
Of every syllable that here was spoke.
But if I tell how these two did co-act,
Shall I not lie in publishing a truth?
Sith yet there is a credence in my heart,
An esperanee so obstinately strong,
That doth invert the attest of eyes and ears,
As if those organs had deceptive functions,
Created only to calumniate.
Was Cressid here?
Ulysses I cannot conjure, Trojan.
Troilus She was not, sure.
Ulysses Most sure she was.
Troilus Why, my negation hath no taste of madness.
Ulysses Nor mine, my lord: Cressid was here but now.
Troilus Let it not be believ'd for womanhood! Think we had mothers; do not give advantage To stubborn critics, apt, without a theme, For depravation, to square the general sex
By Cressid's rule: rather think this not Cressid.

Ulyss. What hath she done, prince, that can soil our mothers! 130

Tro. Nothing at all, unless that this were she. Ther. Will he swagger himself out on his own eyes?

Tro. This she? no; this is Diomed's Cressida.

If beauty have a soul, this is not she;
If souls guide vows, if vows be sanctimon'y,
If sanctimon'y be the gods' delight,
If there be rule in unity itself,
This is not she. O madness of discourse,
That cause sets up with and against thyself;
Bi-fold authority! where reason can revolt 140
Without perdition, and loss assume all reason
Without revolt: this is, and is not, Cressid.
Within my soul there doth proceed a fight
Of this strange nature that a thing inseparable
Divides more wider than the sky and earth;
And yet the spacious breadth of this division
Admits no orifice for a point as subtle
As Ariachne's broken woof to enter.

Instance, O instance! strong as Pluto's gates;
Cressid is mine, tied with the bonds of heaven:
Instance, O instance! strong as heaven itself;
The bonds of heaven are slipp'd, dissolv'd, and loos'd; 152
And with another knot, five-finger-tied,
The fragments of her faith, arts of her love,
The fragments, scraps, the bits and greasy relics
Of her o'er-eaten faith, are bound to Diomed.

Ulyss. May worthy Troilus be half attach'd
With that which here his passion doth express?

Tro. Ay, Greek; and that shall be divulged well
In characters as red as Mars his heart

Infam'd with Venus; never did young man fancy
With so eternal and so fix'd a soul.

Hark, Greek: as much as I do Cressid love,
So much by weight hate I her Diomed;
That sleeve is mine that he'll bear in his helm;
Were it a casque compos'd by Vulcan's skill,
My sword should bite it. Not the dreadful spot
Which shipmen do the hurricane call,
Constring'd in mass by the almighty sun,
Shall dizzy with more emolour Neptune's ear
In his descent than shall my prompt sword
Falling on Diomed.

Ther. He'll tickle it for his concupiscence.

Tro. O Cressid! O false Cressid! false, false, false!
Let all untruths stand by thy stained name,
And they'll seem glorious.

Ulyss. O! contain yourself;
Your passion draws ears hither.

Enter Aeneas.

Aene. I have been seeking you this hour, my lord.

Hector, by this, is arming him in Troy:
Ajax, your guard, stays to conduct you home.

Tro. Have with you, prince. My courteous lord, adieu.

Farewell, revolted fair! and, Diomed,
Stand fast, and wear a castle on thy head!

Ulyss. I'll bring you to the gates.

Tro. Accept distracted thanks.

Exit Troilus, Aeneas, and Ulysses.

Ther. Would I could meet that rogue Diomed!

I would croak like a raven; I would bow down my bode. Patroclus will give me any thing for the intelligence of this whorse: the parrot will not do more for an almond than he to commodius drahis. Lechery, lechery; still, and lechery: nothing else holds fashion, burning devil take them!

Scene III.—Troy. Before Priam's Palace.

Enter Hector and Andromache.

And. When was my lord so much ungen-temper'd,
To stop his ears against admonishment? Unarm, unarm, and do not fight to-day.

Hect. You train me to offend you; get you by all the everlasting gods, I'll go! And. My dreams will, sure, prove ominous the day.

Hect. No more, I say.

Enter Cassandra.

Cas. Where is my brother Hect.

And. Here, sister; arm'd, and bloody in intents, Consort with me in loud and dear petition;
Pursue we him on knees; for I have dreamed Of bloody turbulence, and this whole night
Hath nothing been but shapes and forms of slaughter.

Cas. O! 'tis true.

Hect. Ho! bid my trumpet sound.

Cas. No notes of sally, for the heavens, so my brother.

Hect. Be gone, I say: the gods have been with me swear.

Cas. The gods are deaf to hot and peevish voice;
They are polluted offerings, more abhor'd Than spotted liars in the sacrifice.

And. O! be persuaded: do not count it ful.
To hurt by being just: it is as lawful,
For we would give much, to use violent the And rob in the behalf of charity.

Cas. It is the purpose that makes strong vow;
But vows to every purpose must not hold.

Unarm, sweet Hector.

Hect. Hold you still, I say, Mine honour keeps the weather of my fate:
Life every man holds dear; but the dearer the Holds honour far more precious-dear than.

Enter Troilus.

How now, young man! mean'st thou to to-day?

And. Cassandra, call my father to persuasion.

Hect. No, faith, young Troilus; doff thine harness, youth;
I am to-day 't the vein of chivalry:
Let grow thy sinews till their knots be strung
And tempt not yet the brushes of the war.

Andromache. Unarm thee, go, and doubt thou not, brave! I'll stand to-day for thee and me and Troy.

Tro. Brother, you have a vice of mercy in you Which better fits a lion than a man.

Hect. What vice is that, good Troilus? do for it.

Tro. When many times the captive Greece...
TROILUS AND CRESSIDA.

Pri. Farewell; the gods with safety stand about thee!

Exeunt severally PRIAM and HECTOR.

Tro. They are at it; hark! Proud Diomed, believe,
I come to lose my arm, or win my sleeve.

Enter PANDARUS.

Pan. Do you hear, my lord? do you hear?
Tro. What now?
Pan. Here's a letter come from yond poor girl.
Tro. Let me read.

Pan. A whoreson ti-ick, a whoreson rascally tisick so troubles me, and the foolish fortune of this girl; and what one thing, what another, that I shall leave you one of these days: and I have a rheum in mine eyes too, and such an ache in my bones that, unless a man were cursed, I cannot tell what to think on't. What says she there?

Tro. Words, words, mere words, no matter from the heart;
The effect doth operate another way.

Tearing the letter.

Go, wind to wind, there turn and change together.

My love with words and errors still she feeds,
But edifies another with her deeds.

Exeunt severally.

SCENE IV.—Plains between Troy and the Grecian Camp.

Alarums. Excursions. Enter THERSITES.

THERSITES. Now they are clapper-clawing one another; I'll go look on. That dissembling abominable varlet, Diomed, has got that same scurry doting foolish young knave's sleeve of Troy there in his helm: I would fain see them meet; that that same young Trojan ass, that loves the whore there, might send that Greekish whore-masterly villain, with the sleeve, back to the dissembling luxurious drab, of a sleeveless errand. O the other side, the policy of those crafty swearing rascals, that stale old mouse-eaten dry cheese, Nestor, and that same dog-fox, Ulysses, is not proved worth a blackberry: they set me up, in policy, that mongrel cur, Ajax, against that dog of as bad a kind, Achilles; and now is the cur dog-pronder than the cur Achilles, and will not arm to day; wherein the Grecians begin to proclaim barbarism, and policy grows into an ill opinion. Soft! here comes sleeve, and t' other.

Enter DIOMEDES, TROILUS following.

Tro. Fly not; for should'st thou take the river Styx, I would swim after.

Dio. Thou dost miscall retire; I do not fly, but advantageous care Withdrew me from the odds of multitude.

Have at thee!

Ther. Hold thy where, Grecian! now for thy where, Trojan; now the sleeve! now the sleeve!

Exeunt TROILUS and DIOMEDES, fighting.
Enter Hector.

Hect. What art thou, Greek? art thou for Hector's match?
Art thou of blood and honour?
Ther. No, no; I am a rascal; a scurvy railing knave; a very filthy rogue.
Ther. God-a-mercy, that thou wilt believe me; but a plague break thy neck for frightening me! What's become of the wenching rogues? I think they have swallowed one another: I would laugh at that miracle; yet, in a sort, lechery eats itself. I'll seek them. Exit.

Scene V.—Another Part of the Plains.

Enter Diomedes and a Servant.

Dio. Go, go, my servant, take thou Troilus' horse; Present the fair steed to my Lady Cressid: Fellow, commend my service to her beauty; Tell her I have chastis'd the amorous Trojan, And am her knight by proof.
Serv. I go, my lord. Exit.

Enter Agamemnon.

Agam. Renew, renew! The fierce Polydamas Hath beat down Menon; bastard Margareon Hath Dorens prisoner, And stands colossus-wise, waving his beam, Upon the passed corse of the kings Epistrophus and Cælius; Polyxenes is slain; Amphilochus, and Thoas, deadly hurt; Patroclus ta'en, or slain; and Palamedes Sore hurt and bruised; the dreadful Sagittary Appals our numbers: haste we, Diomed, To reinforcement, or we perish all.

Enter Nestor.

Nest. Go, bear Patroclus' body to Achilles; And bid the snall-pac'd Ajax arm for shame. There is a thousand Hectors in the field: Now here he fights on Galathe his horse, And there lacks work; anon he's there afoot, And there they fly or die, like scaled sculls Before the belching whale; then is he yonder, And there the strawy Greeks, ripe for his edge, Fall down before him, like the mower's swath: Here, there, and every where, he leaves and takes, Dexterity so obeying appetite That what he will he does; and does so much That proof is call'd impossibility.

Enter Ulysses.

Ulyss. O! courage, courage, princes; great Achilles Is armimg, weeping, cursing, vowing vengeance: Patroclus' wounds have rous'd his drowsy blood, Together with his mangled Myrmidons, That noseless, handless, hack'd and chipp'd, come to him, Crying on Hector. Ajax hath lost a friend, And fouls at mouth, and he is arm'd and at it, Roaring for Troilus, who hath done to-day Mad and fantastic execution, Engaging and redeeming of himself With such a careless force and forceless care As if that luck, in very spite of cunning, Bade him win all.

Enter Ajax.

Ajax. Troilus! thou coward Troilus! In Dio. Ay, there, the Nest. So, so, we draw together.

Enter Achilles.

Achill. Where is this Hector? Come, come, thou boy-queller, show thy face. Know what it is to meet Achilles angry: Hector! where's Hector! I will none but Hector! Exit.

Scene VI.—Another Part of the Plains.

Enter Ajax.

Ajax. Troilus, thou coward Troilus, show head!

Enter Diomedes.

Enter Hector.

Heet. Yea, Troilus! O! well fought, youngest brother.

Enter Achilles.

Achill. Now do I see thee. Ha! Have at thee! Hector! Heet. Pause, if thou wilt. Achill. I do disdain thy courtesy, proud Troilus, Be happy that my arms are out of use: My rest and negligence befriended thee now, But thou anon shalt hear of me again; Till when, go seek thy fortune. Heet. Fare thee well! I would have been much more a fresher man Had I expected thee. How now, my brother.

Re-enter Troilus.

Tro. Ajax hath ta'en Aeneas; shall it be? No, by the flame of yonder glorious heaven, He shall not carry him: I'll be ta'en too, Or bring him off. Fate, hear me what I say I reck not though thou end my life to-day.

Enter One in swarthy armour.

Heet. Stand, stand, thou Greek; thou art goody mark. No! wilt thou not? I like thy armour well; I'll fresh it, and unlock the rivets all, But I'll be master of it. Wilt thou not, be abide? Why then, fly on, I'll hunt thee for thy hide. Exeunt.
TROILUS AND CRESSIDA.

Scene VII.—Another Part of the Plains.

Enter Achilles, with Myrmidons.

Chil. Come here about me, you my Myrmidons; what I say. Attend me where I wheel: if not a stroke, but keep yourselves in breath: when I have the bloody Hector found, pale him with your weapons round about; fittest manner execute your aims. How me, sirs, and my proceedings eye: decreed Hector the great must die. Exeunt.

Enter Menelaus and Paris, fighting: then Therites.

Ther. The cuckold and the cuckold-maker are it. Now, bull! now, dog! 'Lo, Paris, 'tis! my double-henned sparrow! 'Lo, Paris! The bull has the game: ware horns, ho! Exeunt Paris and Menelaus.

Enter Margarelon.

Mar. Turn, slave, and fight. 13

Ther. I am a bastard too; I love bastards: I a bastard begot, bastard instructed, bastard mind, bastard in value, in every thing illegitimate. One bear will not bite another, and therefore should one bastard? Take heed, the unrefined most ominous to us: if the son of a whore, he tempts judgment. Rewell, bastard.

Mar. The devil take thee, coward! Exeunt.

Scene VIII.—Another Part of the Plains.

Enter Hector.

Hect. Most putrefied core, so fair without, goodly armour thus hath cost thy life. is my day's work done? I'll take good breath:

sword; thou hast thy fill of blood and death. Puts off his helmet, and lays his sword aside.

Enter Achilles and Myrmidons.

Achil. Look, Hector, how the sun begins to set; ugly night comes breathing at his heels: en with the vail and darkening of the sun, close the day up, Hector's life is done.

Hect. I am unarmed; forgo this vantage, Greek. Achil. Strike, fellows, strike! this is the man I seek. HECTOR falls. 10

Ilion, full thou next! now, Troy, sink down! lies thy heart, thy sinews, and thy bone! Myrmidons, and cry you all amain, hilles hath the mighty Hector slain.

A retreat sounded.

Achil. The dragon wing of night o'erspreads the earth, stickler-like, the armies separates, half-sup'd sword, that frankly would have fed, with this dainty bit, thus goes to bed. Sheathe's his sword. Come, tie his body to my horse's tail; Along the field I will the Trojan trail. Exeunt.

Scene IX.—Another Part of the Plains.

Enter Agamemnon, Ajax, Menelaus, Nestor, Diomedes, and Others, marching. Shouts within.

Dio. The bruit is, Hector's slain, and by Achilles. Ajax. If it be so, yet bragless let it be; Great Hector was a man as good as he.

Agam. March patiently along. Let one be sent To pray Achilles see us at our tent. If in his death the gods have us befriended, Great Troy is ours, and our sharp wars are ended. Exeunt, marching.

Scene X.—Another Part of the Plains.

Enter Æneas and Trojan Forces.

Æne. Stand, ho! yet are we masters of the field. Never go home; here starve we out the night. Enter Troilus.

Tro. Hector is slain.

All. Hector! The gods forbid! Tro. He's dead; and at the murderer's horse's tail, In beastly sort, dragg'd through the shameful field. Frown on, you heavens, effect your rage with speed!

Sit, gods, upon your thrones, and smile at Troy! I say, at once let your brief plagues be mercy, And linger not our sure destructions on!

Æne. My lord, you do discomfort all the host. Tro. You understand me not that tell me so: I do not speak of flight, of fear, of death, But dare all imminence that gods and men Address their dangers in. Hector is gone: Who shall tell Priam so, or Hecuba? Let him that will a screech-owl be call'd Go in to Troy, and say there Hector's dead: There is a word will Priam turn to stone, Make wells and Niobes of the maidens and wives, Cold statues of the youth; and, in a word, Scare Troy out of itself. But march away: Hector is dead; there is no more to say. Stay yet. You vile abominable tents, Thusly proud fight upon our Phrygian plains, Let Titan rise as early as he dare, I'll through and through you! And, thou great-six'd coward, No space of earth shall sunder our two hastes: I'll haunt thee like a wicked conscience still, That mouldeth goblins swift as frenzies thoughts. Strike a free march to Troy! with comfort go: Hope of revenge shall hide our inward woe. Exeunt Æneas and Trojan Forces.

As Troilus is going out, enter, from the other side, Pandarus.

Pan. But hear you, hear you! Tro. Hence, broker-lackey! ignomy and shame Pursue thy life, and live aye with thy name! L

Exit.

Pan. A goodly medicine for mine aching bones! O world! world! world! thus is the poor agent despised. O traitors and bawds, how earnestly are you set a-work, and how ill requited! why should our endeavour be so loved, and the performance so loathed? what verse for it? what instance for it? Let me see:

Full merrily the humble-bee doth sing, Till he hath lost his honey and his sting; And being once subdued in armed tail, Sweet honey and sweet notes together fail.

Good traders in the flesh, set this in ye painted cloths.

As many as be here of pandar’s hall, Your eyes, half out, weep out at Pandar’s fall; Or, if you cannot weep, yet give some groans, Though not for me, yet for your aching bones. Brethren, and sisters, of the hold-door trade, Some two months hence my will shall here made:

It should be now, but that my fear is this, Some galled goose of Winchester would kiss. Tll then I'll sweat, and seek about for cases; And at that time bequeath you my diseases.

SCENE.—Rome and the neighbourhood; Corioli and the neighbourhood; Antium.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Rome. A Street.

Enter a company of mutinous Citizens, with staves, clubs, and other weapons.

First Cit. Before we proceed any further, hear me speak.

All. Speak, speak.

First Cit. You are all resolved rather to die than to famish?

All. Resolved, resolved.

First Cit. First, you know Caius Marcius is chief enemy to the people.

All. We know’t, we know’t.

First Cit. Let us kill him, and we’ll have corn at our own price. Is ’t a verdict?

All. No more talking on ’t; let it be done.

Away, away!

Second Cit. One word, good citizens.

First Cit. We are accounted poor citizens, the patricians, good. What authority surfeits on would relieve us. If they would yield us but the superfluity, while it were wholesome, we might guess they relieved us humanely; but they think we are too dear: the leanness that afflicts us, the object of our misery, is as an inventory to particularize their abundance; our sufficiency is a gain to them. Let us revenge this with our pikes, ere we become rakes; for the gossh know I speak this in hunger for bread, not thirst for revenge.

Second Cit. Would you proceed especial against Caius Marcius?

All. Against him first: he’s a very dog to commonalty.

Second Cit. Consider you what services he has done for his country?

First Cit. Very well; and could be content to give him good report for ’t, but that he paid himself with being proud.

Second Cit. Nay, but speak not maliciously.

First Cit. I say unto you, what he hath done falsely, he did it to that end: though set conciliated men can be content to say it for his country, he did it to please his mother and to be partly proud; which he is, even the altitude of his virtue.

Second Cit. What he cannot help in his nation you account a vice in him. You must in any way say he is covetous.

First Cit. If I must not, I need not be barned of accusations: he hath faults, with surplus, tire in repetition.

Shouts with at shouts are these? The other side o' the risen: why stay we prating here? to Capitol!
Ut. Come, come.
First Cit. Soft! who comes here?

Enter Menenius Agrippa.

Second Cit. Worthy Menenius Agrippa; one thath has always loved the people.
First Cit. He's one honest enough: would all rest were so!

Ten. What work's, my countrymen, in hand?
where go you hats and clubs? The matter? Speak,
I pray you.

First Cit. Our business is not unknown to the state; they have had inking this fortnight at we intend to do, which now we'll show in deeds. They say poor suitors have strong whisks: they shall know we have strong arms

Ten. Why, masters, my good friends, mine honest neighbours,
you undo yourselves?
First Cit. We cannot, sir; we are undone already.

Ten. I tell you, friends, most charitable care for the patricians of you. For your wants, suffering in this dearth, you may as well be at the heaven with your staves as lift them
unst the Roman state, whose course will on way it takes, cracking ten thousand curbs more strong link asunder than can ever bear in your impediment. For the dearth, gods, not the patricians, make it, and kneel to them, not arms, must help. Alack!
are transported by calamity
there where more attends you; and you slander heins of the state, who care for you like fathers,
on you curse them as enemies.

First Cit. Care for us! True, indeed! They cared for us yet: suffer us to famish, and storehouses cramped with grain; make acts for usury, to support usurers: repeal daily wholesome act established against the rich,
I provide more piercing statutes daily to chain and restrain the poor. If the wars eat us up, they will; and there's all the love they have to us.

Men. Either you must afflict yourselves wondrous malicious, be accus'd of folly. I shall tell you prettiest tale: it may be you have heard it;
t, since it serves my purpose, I will venture state 'tis a little more.

First Cit. Well, I'll hear it, sir; yet you must think to fob off our disgrace with a tale;
at, 'tisn't please you, deliver.

Men. There was a time when all the body's members
did against the belly; thus accus'd it:
at only like a gulf it did remain midst o' the body, idle and unactive, ill cupboarding the viand, never bearing ke labour with the rest, where the other instruments
d see and hear, devise, instruct, walk, feel, ad, mutually participate, did minister

Unto the appetite and affection common
Of the whole body. The belly answer'd,—
First Cit. Well, sir, what answer made the belly?
Men. Sir, I shall tell you. With a kind of smile,
Which ne'er came from the lungs, but even thus,
For, look you, I may make the belly smile
As well as speak, it tauntingly replied
To the discontented members, the mutinous parts
That envied his receipt; even so most fitly
As you malign our senators for that
They are not such as you.

First Cit. Your belly's answer? What!
The kingly-crowned head, the vigilant eye,
The counsellor heart, the arm our soldier,
Our steed the leg, the tongue our trumpet,
With other muniments and petty helps
In this our fabric, if that they—

Men. What then?
Fare me this fellow speaks! What then? what then?
First Cit. Should by the cormorant belly be restrain'd,
Who is the sink o' the body,—
Men. Well, what then?
First Cit. The former agents, if they did complain,
What could the belly answer?
Men. If you'll bestow a small, of what you have little,
Patience awhile, you'll hear the belly's answer,
First Cit. Ye're long about it.
Men. Note me this, good friend;
Your most grave belly was deliberate,
Not rash like his accusers, and thus answer'd:
'Twas true it, my incorporate friends,' quoth he,
That I receive the general food at first,
Which you do live upon; and fit it is,
Because I am the store-house and the shop
Of the whole body: but, if you do remember,
I send it through the rivers of your blood,
Even to the court, the heart, to the seat o' the brain;
And, through the cranks and offices of man,
The strongest nerves and small inferior veins
From me receive that natural competency Whereby they live. And though that all at once,
You, my good friends,—this says the belly,
mark me—
First Cit. Ay, sir; well, well.
Men. 'Though all at once cannot
See what I do deliver out to each,
Yet I can make my audit up, that all
From me do back receive the flour of all,
And leave me but the bran.' What say you to't?
First Cit. It was an answer. How apply you this?
Men. The senators of Rome are this good belly,
And you the mutinous members; for examine
Their counsels and their cares, digest things rightly
Touching the weal o' the common, you shall find
No public benefit which you receive
But it proceeds or comes from them to you,
And no way from yourselves. What do you think,
You, the great toe of this assembly?
First Cit. I the great toe? Why the great toe?
Men. For that, being one o' the lowest, basest, poorest, Of this most wise rebellion, thou go’st foremost: Thou rascal, that art worst in blood to run, Lead'st first to win some vantage. But make you ready your stiff hats and clubs: Rome and her rats are at the point of battle;

Enter CAIUS MARCIUS.

The one side must have bale. Hail, noble Marcius! Mar. Thanks. What's the matter, you dissentious rogues? That, rubbing the poor itch of your opinion, to make yourselves scabs?

First Cit. We have ever your good word. Mar. He that will give good words to thee will flatter Beneath abhorring. What would you have, you curs, That like nor peace nor war? the one affrights you. The other makes you proud. He that trusts to you, Where he should find you lions, finds you hares; Where foxes, geese: you are no surer, no, Than is the coal of fire upon the ice, or hailstone in the sun. Your virtue is To make him worthy whose offence subdues him, And curse that justice did it. Who deserves greatness Deserves your hate; and your affections are A sick man’s appetite, who desires most that Which would increase his evil. He that depends Upon your favours; swims with fins of lead, And hews down oaks with rushes. Hang ye! Trust ye?

With every minute you do change a mind, And call him noble that was now your hate, Him vile that was your garland. What’s the matter, That in these several places of the city You cry against the noble senate, who, Under the gods, keep you in awe, which else Would feed on one another! What’s their seeking?

Men. For corn at their own rates: whereof, they say, The city is well stord.

Mar. Hang 'em! They say! They'll sit by the fire, and presume to know What's done in the Capitol: who's like to rise, Who thrives, and who declines; side factions, and give out. Conjugal marriages; making parties strong, And feasting such as stand not in their liking, Below their cobbled shoes. They say there's grain enough! Would the nobility lay aside their ruth, And let me use my sword, I'd make a quarry With thousands of these quarter'd slaves, as high As I could pick my lance.

Men. Nay, these are almost thoroughly persuaded;

For though abundantly they lack discretion, Yet are they passing cowardly. But, I beseech you, What says the other troop?

Mar. They are dissolved: hang 'em!

They said they were an-hungry; sigh'd for proverbs: That hunger broke stone walls; that dogs must eat That meat was made for mouths; that the grave sent not Corn for the rich men only. With these shrill They vented their complaining; which be answer'd, And a petition granted them, a strange one. To break the heart of generosity, And make bold power look pale, they th' their caps As they would hang them on the horns of the moon, Shouting their emulation. Men. What is granted the Mar. Five tribunes, to defend their vulgar wisdoms, Of their own choice: one's Junius Brutus, Sicinius Velutus, and I know not—'Sdeath! The rabble should have first unroof'd the cit. Ere so prevail'd with me; it will in time Win upon power, and throw forth greater then For insurrection's arguing.

Men. This is strange. Mar. Go; get you home, you fragments!

Enter a Messenger, hastily.

Mess. Where's Caius Marcius?

Mar. Here: what is the matter? Mess. The news is, sir, the Volscians are in arms, Mar. I am glad on't; then shall we h' me to vent Our musty superfluity. See, our best elders.

Enter COMINIUS, TITUS LARTIUS, and other Senators; JUNIUS BRUTUS and SCIINI VELUTUS.

First Sen. Marcius, 'tis true that you hastily told us;

The Volscians are in arms.

Mar. They have a lede. Tullus Aufidius, that will put you to it. I sin in envying his nobility, And were I any thing but what I am, I would wish me only he.

Com. You have fought together.

Mar. We were half to the world by the east and he Upon my party, I'd revolt, to make Only my wars with him: he is a lion That I am proud to hunt.

First Sen. Then, worthy Marcius Attend upon Cominius to these wars.

Com. It is your former promise.

Mar. Sir, it is; And I am constant. Titus Lartius, thou Shalt see me once more strike at Tullus' face What art thou stuff? stand't out?

Tit. No, Caius Marcius, I'll lean upon one crutch and fight with t'oth Ere stay behind this business.

Men. O! true bred. First Sen. Your company to the Capitol, where I know Our greatest friends attend us.

Tit. To COMINIUS. Lead you on! To MARCIUS. Follow Cominius; we must follow you; Right worthy you priority.
Noble Marcius!

First Sen. To the Citizens. Hence! To your homes! be gone.

Mar. Nay, let them follow: the Volscs have much corn; take these rats thither.

gnaw their garners. Worshipful mutiners, your valour puts well forth; pray, follow.

Second Senators, COMINIUS, MARCIUS, TITUS, and MENERIUS. Citizens steal away.

Was ever man so proud as this Marcius? He has no equal.

When we were chosen tribunes for the people—

Mark'd you his lip and eyes?

Benock the modest moon. The present wars devour him; he is grown proud to be so valiant.

Such a nature, bred with good success, disdains the shadow which he treads on at noon. But I do wonder: insolence can brook to be commanded by Cominius.

Fame, at which he aims, whom already he's well grac'd, can not be held nor more attain'd than by place below the first; for what miscarries will be the general's fault, though he perform the utmost of a man; and giddy censure I then cry out of Marcius, 'O! if he bore the business.'

Besides, if things go well, you, that so sticks on Marcius, shall his demerits rob Cominius.

All Cominius's honour are to Marcius, through Marcius earn'd them not; and all his faults Marcius shall be honour'd, though indeed he merit not.

Let's hence and hear the dispatch made; and in what fashion, or short by his singularity, he goes on his present action.

Let's along. Exit.

These three lead on this preparation.

Whither 'tis bent: most likely 'tis for you:

Consider of it.

First Sen. Our army's in the field.

We never yet made doubt but Rome was ready

To answer us.

Aunf. Nor did you think it folly

To keep your great pretences veil'd till when they needs must show themselves; which in the hatching, it seem'd, appear'd to Rome. By the discovery we shall be shorten'd in our aim, which was, to take in many towns ere almost Rome should know we were afoot.

Second Sen. Noble Anfidius,

Take your commission; tie you to your bands;

Let us alone to guard Corioli:

If they set down before's, for the remove

Bring up your army; but I think you'll find they've not prepar'd for us.

Aunf. O! doubt not that; I speak from certainties. Nay, more; some parcels of their power are forth already, and only hitherward. I leave your honours

If we and Caius Marcius chance to meet,

'Tis sworn between us we shall ever strike till one can do no more.

All. The gods assist you!

Aunf. And keep your honours safe!

First Sen. Farewell.

Second Sen. Farewell.

All. Farewell.

Exit.

Enter Volumnia and Virgilia. They set them down on two low stools and sew.

Vol. I pray you, daughter, sing; or express yourself in a more comfortable sort. If my son were my husband, I should freelier rejoice in that absence wherein he won honour than in the embraces of his bed where he would show most love. When yet he was but tender-bodied and the only son of my womb, when youth with comeliness pluck'd all gaze his way, when for a day of kings' entreaties a mother should not sell him an hour from her beholding. I, considering how honour would become such a person, that it was no better than picture-like to hang by the wall, if renown made it not stir, was pleased to let him seek danger where he was like to find fame. To a cruel war I sent him; from whence he returned, his brows bound with oak. I tell thee, daughter, I sprang not more in joy at first hearing he was a man-child than now in first seeing he had proved himself a man.

Vir. But had he died in the business, madam; how then?

Vol. Then his good report should have been my son; I therein would have found issue. Hear me profess sincerely: had I a dozen sons, each in my love alike, and none less dear than thine and my good Marcius, I had rather had eleven die nobly for their country than one voluptuously surfeit out of action.

Enter a Gentlewoman.

Gent. Madam, the Lady Valeria is come to visit you.
Vir. Beseech you, give me leave to retire myself.

Vol. Indeed, you shall not.

Methinks I hear hither your husband's drum,
See him pluck Aufidius down by the hair,
As children from a bear, the Volsces shunning him:

Methinks I see him stamp thus, and call thus:
'Come on, you cowards! you were got in fear,
Though you were born in Rome.'

His bloody brow
With his mail'd hand then wiping, forth he goes,
Like to a harvest-man that's task'd to mow.
Or all or lose his hire.

Vir. His bloody brow! O Jupiter! no blood.

Vol. Away, you fool! it more becomes a man
Than gilt his trophy: the breasts of Hecuba,
When she did suckle Hector, look'd not lower Than Hector's forehead when it spit forth blood
At Grecian swords, contemning. 'Tell Valeria
We are fit to bid her welcome.'

Exit Gentlewoman.

Re-enter Gentlewoman, with VALERIA and an Usher.

Vol. My ladies both, good day to you.

Vol. Sweet madam.

Vir. I am glad to see your ladyship.

Vol. How do you both? you are manifest housekeepers. What are you sewing here? A fine spot, in good faith. How does your little son?

Vir. I thank your ladyship; well, good madam.

Vol. He had rather see the swords and hear a drum, than look upon his schoolmaster.

Vol. 'O my word, the father's son; I'll swear 'tis a very pretty boy. O' my troth, I looked upon him o' Wednesday half an hour together; he has such a confirmed countenance. I saw him run after a gilded butterfly; and when he caught it, he let it go again; and after it again; and over and over he comes, and up again; caught it again; or whether his fall enraged him, or how 'twas, he did set his teeth and tear it; O! I warrant, how he mocked it.

Vol. One on 's father's moods.

Val. Indeed, la, 'tis a noble child.

Vir. A crack, madam.

Vol. Come, lay aside your stitchery; I must have you play the idle huswife with me this afternoon.

Vir. No, good madam; I will not out of doors.

Vol. Not out of doors!

Vol. She shall, she shall.

Vir. Indeed, no, by your patience; I will not over the threshold till my lord return from the wars.

Vol. Fie! you confine yourself most unreasonably. Come; you must go visit the good lady that lies in.

Vir. I will wish her speedy strength, and visit her with my prayers; but I cannot go thither.

Vol. Why, I pray you?

Vir. 'Tis not to save labour, nor that I want love.

Val. You would be another Penelope; yet, they say, all they shespun in Ulysses' absence did but fill Ithaca full of moths. Come, would your cambric were sensible as your fin that you might leave pricking it for pity. Co you shall go with us.

Vir. No, good madam, pardon me; indeed will not forth.

Val. In truth, la, go with me; and I'll you excellent news of your husband.

Vir. O! good madam, there can be none.

Val. Verily. I do not jest with you; I came news from him last night.

Vir. Indeed, madam?

Val. In earnest, 'tis true; I heard a sent speak it. Thus it is: the Volsces have an a forth; against whom Cominius the general gone, with one part of our Roman power; ye lord and Titus Lartius are set down before city Corioli; they nothing doubt prevailed to make it brief wars. This is true, on honour; and so, I pray, go with us.

Vir. Give me excuse, good madam; I obey you in every thing hereafter.

Vol. Let her alone, lady: as she is now will but disease our better mirth.

Vol. In troth, I think she would. Fare well then. Come, good sweet lady. Prithee, Virginia, turn thy solemnness out o' door, and along with us.

Vir. No, at a word, madam; indeed I not. I wish you much mirth.

Val. Well then, farewell.

Exeunt.

Scene IV.—Before Corioli.

Enter, with drum and colours, MARCIUS, TRI LARTIUS, Captains, and Soldiers. To the Messenger.

Mar. Yonder comes news: a wager they ha met.

Lart. My horse to yours, no.

Mar. 'Tis done.

Lart. Agre.

Mar. Say, has our general met the enemy?

Mess. They lie in view, but have not spoke yet.

Lart. So the good horse is mine.

Now, Mars, I prithee, make us quick in work.
That we with smoking swords may march for

To help our fielded friends! Come, blow a blast.

A parley sounded. Enter, on the walls, two Senators, and Others.

Tullus Aufidius, is he within your walls?

First Sen. No, nor a man that fears you but he,

That's less than a little. Drums off.

Hark! our drum Are bringing forth our youth: we'll break o

First Sol. Foolhardiness! not I.

Second Sol. Nor I.

MARCIUS is shut in.

Third Sol. See, they have shut him in.

All. To the pot, I warrant him.

Alarum continues.

Re-enter Titus Lartius.

Lart. What is become of Marcus?

All. Slain, sir, doubtless.

First Sol. Following the fliers at the very heels, then he enters; who, upon the sudden, opp’d-to their gates; he is himself alone, answer all the city.

Lart. O noble fellow! so sensibly outdare his senseless sword, d, when it bows, stands up. Thou art left, Marcus:

A carbuncle entire, as big as thou art,

Were not so rich a jewel. Thou wast a soldier

Even to Cato’s wish, not fierce and terrible

Only in strokes; but, with thy grim looks and

The thunder-like percussion of thy sounds,

Thou mad’st thine enemies shake, as if the world

Were feverous and did tremble.

Re-enter MARCIUS, bleeding, assaulted by the enemy.

First Sol. Look! sir.

Lart. O! ’tis Marcus: Let’s fetch him off, or make remain alike. 62 They fight, and all enter the city.

Enter certain Romans, with spoils.

First Rom. This will I carry to Rome.

Second Rom. And I this.

Third Rom. A murrain on’t! I took this for silver.

Alarum continues still afar off.

Enter MARCIUS and TITUS LARTIUS, with a trumpet.

MAR. See here these movers that do prize their hours

At a crack’d drachm! Cushions, leaden spoons, Irons of a doit, doublets that hangmen would Bury with those that wore them, these base slaves, Ere yet the fight be done, pack up. Down with them!

And hark, what noise the general makes! To him! There is the man of my soul’s hate, Anfidius, to Piercing our Romans: then, valiant Titus, take Convenient numbers to make good the city, Whilst I, with those that have the spirit, will haste to help Cominius.

Lart. Worthy sir, thou bleed’st; Thy exercise hath been too violent

For a second course of fight.

MAR. Sir, praise me not; My work hath yet not warm’d me: fare you well: The blood I drop is rather physical Than dangerous to me: to Anfidius thus I will appear, and fight.

Lart. Now the fair goddess, Fortune, Fall deep in love with thee; and her great charms Misguide thy opposers’ swords! Bold gentleman, Prosperity be thy page!

MAR. Thy friend no less Than those she placeth highest! So, farewell.

Lart. Thou worthiest Marcus!

Exeunt.

Scene VI.—Near the Camp of Cominius.

Enter Cominius and Forces, as in retreat.

Com. Breathe you, my friends: well fought; we are come off

Like Romans, neither foolish in our stands, Nor cowardly in retire: believe me, sirs,

We shall be charg’d again. Whiles we have struck,
By interims and conveying gusts we have heard
The charges of our friends. Ye Roman gods!
Lead their successes as we wish our own,
That both our powers, with smiling fronts encountering,
May give you thankful sacrifice.

Enter a Messenger.

Thy news!

Mess. The citizens of Corioli have issued,*
And given to Lartius and to Marcius battle:
I saw our party to their trenches driven,
And then I came away.

Com. Though thou speak'st truth,
Methinks thou speakest not well. How long is't since?

Mess. Above an hour, my lord.

Com. 'Tis not a mile; briefly we heard their drums:
How could'st thou in a mile confound an hour,
And bring thy news so late?

Mess. Spies of the Volscians
Here came in chase, that I was forc'd to wheel
Three or four miles about; else had I, sir, 20
Half an hour since brought my report.

Enter MARCIUS.

Who's yonder,
That does appear as he were flay'd? O gods!
He has the stamp of Marcius, and I have Before-time seen him thus.

Mar. Come I too late?

Com. The shepherd knows not thunder from a tabor
More than I know the sound of Marcius's tongue
From every meaner man.

Mar. Come I too late?

Com. Ay, if you come not in the blood of others,
But mantled in your own.

Mar. O! let me clip ye
In arms as sound as when I woo'd, in heart 30
As merry as when our nuptial day was done,
And tapers burn'd to bedward.

Com. Flower of warriors,
How is't with Titus Lartius?

Mar. As with a man busied about decrees:
Condemning some to death, and some to exile;
Ransoming him, or pitying, threatening the other;
Holding Corioli in the name of Rome,
Even like a fawning greyhound in the leash,
To let him slip at will.

Com. Where is that slave Which told me they had beat you to your trenches?

Where is he? Call him hither.

Mar. Let him alone;
He did inform the truth: but for our gentlemen,
The common file,—a plague! tribunes for them!
Themone sides shunn'd the cat as they did budge
From masts worse than they.

Com. But how prevail'd you?

Mar. Will the time serve to tell? I do not think.

Where is the enemy? are you lords o' the field?
If not, why cease you till you are so?

Com. Marcius, we have at disadvantage fought,
And did retire to win our purpose.

Mar. How lies their battle? know you on which side?

They have plac'd their men of trust?

Com. As I guess, Marcius.
Their bands i' the vaward are the Antiates,
Of their best trust; o'er them Aufidius,
Their very heart of hope.

Mar. I do beseech you,
By all the battles wherein we have fought,
By the blood we have shed together, by the vows
We have made to endure friends, that ye

Set me against Aufidius and his Antiates;
And that you not delay the present, but
Filling the air with swords advanc'd and dar

And baths applied to you, yet dare I never

That best can aid your action.

Mar. Those are the
That most are willing. If any such be here,
As it were sin to doubt, that love this pain't
When in you see me smear'd; if any fear
Lesser his person than an ill report;
If any think brave death outweighs bad life,
And that his country's dearer than himself;
Let him, alone, or so many so minded,
Wave thus, to express his disposition,
And follow Marcius.

They all about and waxe their swords; take b up in their arms, and cast up their ee
O! me alone! Make you a sword of me!
If these shows be not outward, which of you
But is four Volscians? none of you but is Able to bear against the great Aufidius
A shield as hard as his. A certain number, Though thanks to all, must I select from a
the rest
Shall bear the business in some other fight,
As cause will be obey'd. Please you to mark
And four shall quickly draw out my commar
Which men are best inclin'd.

Com. March on, my fellow
Make good this ostentation, and you shall Divide in all with us.

SCENE VII.—The Gates of Corioli.

TITUS LARTIUS, having set a guard upon Cori going with drum and trumpet toward COMONI and CAIUS MARCIUS, enters with a LIEUTENANT a party of Soldiers, and a Scout.

LART. So; let the ports be guarded; keep ye duties,
As I have set them down. If I do send, dispa
Those centuries to our aid; the rest will ser
For a short holding: if we lose the field,
We cannot keep the town.

LIEU. Fear not our care, s
LART. Hence, and shut your gates upon us.
Our guider, come; to the Roman camp con
us.

SCENE VIII.—A Field of Battle between the Rom and the Volscian Camps.

ALARUM. Enter from opposite sides MARCIUS and AUFIDIIUS.

MAR. I'll fight with none but thee; for I hate thee
Worse than a promise-breaker.
We hate alike: Afric owns a serpent I abhor
She thy fame and envy. Fix thy foot.

Var. Let the first bulger die the other's slave,
And the gods doom him after!

If I fly, Marcins,
look me like a hare.

Var. Within these three hours, Tullius,
I fought in your Coriolanus,
did what work I pleas'd: 'tis not my blood
Here thou seest me mask'd: for thy revenge
Crown up thy power to the highest.

Wert thou the Hector
At was the whip of your brag'd progeny,
On should'st not 'scape me here.

They fight, and certain Volscus come to the Aid of Aufidius.

In the name of the noble, and not valiant, you have sham'd me
Your condemned seconds.

EXECUT FIGHTING, ALL DRIVEN BY MARCIUS.

SCENE IX.—The Roman Camp.

vrum. A retreat sounded. Flourish. Enter, at ~side, Cominius and Romans; on the other side,
Marcius, with his arm in a scarf, and other Romans.

Com. If I should tell thee o'er this thy day's work,
'Wert not believe thy deeds: but I'll report it
Here senators shall mingle tears with smiles,
Here great patricians shall attend and shrug,
End his ambition; where ladies shall be frightened,
Gladly quak'd, hear more; where the dull
Tribunes,
It with the sly plebeians, hate thine honour,
Say, against their hearts,
Thank the gods our Rome hath such a soldier!
I am'st thou to a morel of this feast,
Dung fully din'd before.

Ter Titus Lartius, with his power, from the pursuit.

Cor. O general,
Be the stead, we the caparison:
Thon beheld—

Cor. Pray now, no more: my mother
Has a charter to extol her blood,
She does praise me grieves me. I have done
You have done; that's what I can; induc'd
You have been; 'tis for your country:
That has but effect'd his good will Overta'en mine act.

Com. You shall not be a
Grave of your deserving; Rome must know
A value of her own: 'twere a concealment
As a thief, no less than a traducement,
Hide your doings; to silence that,
Dich, to the spire and top of praises vouch'd,
Uld seem but modest. Therefore, I beseech you,
Sign of what you are, not to reward
At you have done, before our army hear me.

Var. I have some wounds upon me, and they Smell hear themselves remember'd.

Com. Should they not,
Ill might they fester 'gainst ingratitude,
I tent themselves with death. Of all the horses,

Whereof we have ta'en good, and good store,
Of all
The treasure, in this field achieved and city,
We render you the tenth; to be ta'en forth,
Before the common distribution,
At your only choice.

Mar. I thank you, general;
But cannot make my heart consent to take
A bribe to pay my sword: I do refuse it;
And stand upon my common part with those
That have beheld the doing.

A long flourish. They all cry, 'Marcius! Marcius!' Cast up their caps and lances.

Cominius and Lartius stand bare.

May these same instruments, which you profane,
Never sound more! When drums and trumpets shall I the field prove flatterers, let courts and cities be Made all of false-fac'd soothing!

When steel grows soft as the parasite's silk,
Let him be made a covert for the wars!
No more, I say! For that I have not wash'd
My nose that bled, or foid some debile wretch,
Which, without note, here's many else have done,
You shout me forth
In acclamations hyperbolical;
As if I loved my little should be dictated
In praises sauc'd with lies.

Com. Too modest are you;
More cruel to your good report than grateful
To us that give you truly. By your patience,
If 'gainst yourself you be incess'd, we'll put you,
Like one that means his proper harm, in manacles,
Then reason safely with you. Therefore, be it known,
As to us, to all the world, that Caius Marcius
Wears this war's garland; in token of the which,
My noble steed, known to the camp, I give him,
With all his trim belonging; and from this time,
For what he did before Corioli, call him,
With all the applause and clamour of the host,
CAIUS MARCIUS CORIOLANUS! Bear
The addition nobly ever!

All. Caius Marcins Coriolanus!

Flourish. Trumpets sound, and drums.

Cor. I will go wash;
And when my face is fair, you shall perceive
Whether I blush or no: howbeit, I thank you,
I mean to stride your steed, and at all times
To undercrust your good addition
To the fairness of my power.

Com. So, to our tent;
Where, ere we do repose us, we will write
To Rome of our success. You, Titus Lartius, Must to Corioli back: send us to Rome
The best, with whom we may articulate,
For their own good and ours.

Lart. I shall, my lord.

Cor. The gods begin to mock me. I, that now
Refus'd most princely gifts, am bound to beg
Of my lord general.

Com. Take it; 'tis yours. What is't?

Cor. I sometime lay here in Corioli
At a poor man's house; he us'd me kindly:
He cried to me; I saw him prisoner;
But then Aufidius was within my view,
And wrath o'erwhelm'd my pity: I request you to give my poor host freedom.

Com. O! well begg'd.
Were he the butcher of my son, he should Be free as is the wind. Deliver him, Titus.

Lart. Marcius, his name?

Cor. By Jupiter! forgot. 20

I am weary; yea, my memory is tir'd.

Have we no wine here?

Com. Go we to our tent:
The blood upon your visage dries; 'tis time
It should be look'd to: come.

Exeunt.

SCENE X.—The Camp of the Volsces.

A Flourish. Cornets. Enter TULLUS AUFIDIOUS, bloody, with two or three Soldiers.

Auf. The town is ta'en!

First Sold. 'Twill be deliver'd back on good condition.

Auf. Condition!

I would I were a Roman; for I cannot,
Being a Volsce, be that I am. Condition!

What good condition can a treaty find
'I the part that is at mercy? Five times, Marcius,
I have fought with thee; so often hast thou beat me,

And 'would'st do so, I think, should we encounter
As often as we eat. By the elements, 19

If e'er again I meet him beard to beard,
He's mine, or I am his: mine emulation

Hath not that honour in't it had; for where
I thought to crush him in an equal force,

True sword to sword, I'll potch at him some way
Or wrath or craft may get him.

First Sold. He's the devil.

Auf. Bolder, though not so subtle. My valour's poison'd

With only suffering stain by him; for him
Shall fly out of itself. Nor sleep nor sanctuary,

Being naked, sick, or fare nor capitol, 20

The prayers of priests, nor times of sacrifice,

Embarcements all of fury, shall lift up

Their rotten privilege and custom 'gainst

My hate to Marcius. Where I find him, were it
At home, upon my brother's guard, even there,

Against the hospitable canon, would I

Wash my fierce hand in heart. Go you to the city;

Learn how 'tis held, and what they are that must

Be hostages for Rome.

First Sold. Will not you go?

Auf. I am attended at the cypress grove: I pray you,

'Tis south the city mills, bring me word thither

How the world goes, that to the pace of it

I may spur on my journey.

First Sold. I shall, sir. Exeunt.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Rome. A public Place.

Enter MENENIUS, SICINIUS, and BRUTUS.

Men. The augurer tells me we shall have news to-night.

Bru. Good or bad?

Men. Not according to the prayer of the people, for they love not Marcius.

Sic. Nature teaches beasts to know their friends.

Men. Pray you, who does the wolf love?

Sic. The lamb.

Men. Ay, to devour him; as the hungry beasts would the noble Marcius.

Bru. He's a lamb indeed, that baa like a beast.

Men. He's a bear indeed, that lives like a lamb.

You two are old men: tell me one th'

that I shall ask you.

Sic, Bru. Well, sir.

Men. In what enormity is Marcius poor in th'

you two have not in abundance?

Bru. He's poor in no one fault, but stol with all.

Sic. Especially in pride.

Bru. And topping all others in boasting.

Men. This is strange now: do you two know how you are censured here in the city, I me of us o' the right-hand file? do you?

Sic, Bru. Why, how are we censured?

Men. Because you talk of pride now,— you not be angry?

Sic, Bru. Well, well, sir; well.

Men. Why, 'tis no great matter; for a little thief of occasion will rob you of a deal of patience: give your dispositions the rei and be angry at your pleasures; at the least you take it as a pleasure to you in being so. Y blame Marcius for being proud?

Bru. We do it not alone, sir.

Men. I know you can do very little alone;

your helps are many, or else your actions wo grow wondrous single: your abilities are infant-like for doing much alone. You talk pride: O! that you could turn your eyes to the napes of your necks, and make

but an inter

survey of your good selves. O! that you con

Bru. What then, sir?

Men. Why, then you should discover a br of unmeriting, proud, violent, testy magistral alias fools, as any in Rome.

Sic, Menenius, you are known well enough.

Men. I am known to be a humorous patri tone and one that loves a cup of hot wine with a drop of allying Tiber in't; said to be somet imperfect in favouring the first complaint; ha and tender-like upon too trivial motion; one th

converses more with the buttoc of the mi with than with the forehead of the morning.

I think I utter, and spend my misuse in my bre

Meeting two such weals-men as you are, I can call you Lygourges, if the drink you give and though I must be content to bear with th

you see this in the map of my microcosm, follo

it that I am known well enough too! What ha can your bisson conspecuncties glean out of character, if be known well enough too?

Bru. Come, sir, come, we know you well eno

Men. You know neither me, yourselves, i any thing. You are ambitious for poor knay caps and legs: you wear out a good wholes forenoon in hearing a cause between an orch wife and a fosset-seller, and then rejourn t controversy of three-pence to a second day audience. When you are hearing a mata between party and party, if you chance to pinched with the colic, you make faces li Brutus and Sicinius go aside.

Inter Volumnia, Virgilia, and Valeria.

Now, my as fair as noble ladies, and the on, were she earthly, no nobler, whither do I follow your eyes so fast?

Vol. Honourable Menenius, my boy Marcius proaches; for the love of Juno, let’s go.

Men. Ha! Marcius coming home?

Vol. Ay, worthy Menenius; and with most spurious approbation.

Men. Take my cap, Jupiter, and I thank thee.

Vol. O! Marcius coming home!

Men. A letter for me! It gives me, an estate seven years’ health; in which time I will be a lip at the physician: the most sovereign prescription in Galen is but empiric, and, this preservative, of no better report than horse-drench. Is he not wounded? he was not to come home wounded.

Vir. O! no, no, no.

Vol. O! he is wounded! I thank the gods!

Men. So do I too, if it be not too much,ings a victory in his pocket? The wounds come him.

Vol. On’s brows, Menenius; he comes the third time home with the oaken garland.

Men. Has he disciplined Aufidius soundly?

Vol. Titus Lartius writes they fought together, but Aufidius got off.

Men. And ‘twas time for him too, I’ll warrant, a that: an he had stayed by him I should have been so fiducial for all the chests to rolli, and the gold that’s in them. Is the state possessed of this?

Vol. Good ladies, let’s go. Yes, yes, yes; a sonate has letters from the general, wherein he gives my son the whole name of the war. He hath in this action undone his former deeds doubly.

Vol. In troth there’s wondrous things spoke of him.

Men. Wondrous! ay, I warrant you, and not without his true purchasing.

Vir. The gods grant them true!

Vol. True! pow, wow.

Men. True! I’ll be sworn they are true.

Where is he wounded? To the Tribunes. God save your good worshippes! Marcius is coming home: he has more cause to be proud. Where is he wounded?

Vol. I the shoulder and i the left arm: there will be large cicatrizes to show the people when he shall stand for his place. He received in the repulse of Tarquin seven hurts i the body.

Men. One i the neck, and two i the thigh, there’s nine that I know.

Vol. He had, before this last expedition, twenty-five wounds upon him.

Men. Now it’s twenty-seven: every gash was an enemy’s grave.

A shout and flourish.

Hark! the trumpets.

Vol. These are the ushers of Marcius: before he carries noise, and behind him he leaves tears:

Death, that dark spirit, in’s nervous arm doth lie; Which, being advance’d, declines, and then men die.

A Sennet. Trumpets sound. Enter COMINUS and TITUS LARTIUS; between them, CORIOLANUS, crowned with an oaken garland; with Captains, Soldiers, and a Herald.

Her. Know, Rome, that all alone Marcius did fight

Within Corioli gates: where he hath won,

With fame, a name to Caius Marcius; these

In honour follows Coriolanus.

Welcome to Rome, renowned Coriolanus!

Flourish.

All. Welcome to Rome, renowned Coriolanus!

Cor. No more of this; it does offend my heart:

Pray now, no more.

Con. Look, sir, your mother!

Cor. You have, I know, petition’d all the gods

For my prosperity.

Kneels.

Vol. Nay, my good soldier, up;

My gentle Marcius, worthy Caius, and

By deed-achieving honour newly nam’d,—

What is it? Coriolanus must I call thee?

But, O! thy wife—

Cor. My gracious silence, hail!

Would’st thou have laugh’d had I come collin’d home,

That weep’st to see me triumph? Ah! my dear,

Such eyes the widows in Corioli wear,

And mothers that lack sons.

Men. Now, the gods crown thee!

Cor. And live you yet? To VALERIA. O my sweet lady, pardon.

Vol. I know not where to turn: O! welcome home;

And welcome, general; and ye’re welcome all.

Men. A hundred thousand welcomes: I could weep,
And I could laugh; I am light, and heavy.
Welcome!
A curse begin at very root on 's heart
That is not glad to see thee! You are three
That Rome should dote on; yet, by the faith of men,
We have some old crab-trees here at home that will not Be grafted to your relish. Yet welcome, warriors!
We call a nettle but a nettle, and
The faults of fools but folly.

Cor. Menenius, ever, ever.
Her. Give way there, and go on!
Cor. To VOLUMNIA and VIRGINIA. Your hand, and yours:
Ere in our own house I do shade my head,
The good patricians must be visited;
From whom I have receiv'd not only greetings,
But with them change of honours.

Vol. I have liv'd in
To see inherited my very wishes,
And the buildings of my fancy; only
There's one thing wanting, which I doubt not but Our Rome will cast upon thee.

Cor. Know, good mother,
I had rather be their servant in my way
Than sway with them in theirs.

Vol. On, to the Capitol!
Flourish. Cornets. Exeunt state, as before.
The Tribunes remain.

Bru. All tongues speak of him, and the bleared sights
Are spectacled to see him; your prattling nurse
Into a rapture lets her baby cry
While she chats him; the kitchen malkin pins
Her richest lockram 'bout her reechy neck,
Clambering the walls to eye him: stalls, bulks, windows,
Are smoother'd up, leads fill'd, and ridges hord'd
With variable complexions, all agreeing
In earnestness to see him: sold-shown flamens
Do press among the popular throngs, and puff
To win a vulgar station: our veil'd dames
Commit the war of white and damask
In Their nicely-gawled checks, to the wanton spoil
Of Phoebus' burning kisses: such a pother
As if that whatsoever god who leads him
Were silly crept into his human powers,
And gave him graceful posture.

Sic. On the sudden,
I warrant him consul.

Bru. Then our office may,
During his power, go sleep.

Sic. He cannot temperately transport his honours
From where he should begin and end, but will Lose those he hath won.

Bru. In that there's comfort.

Sic. Doubt not the commoners, for whom we stand,
But they upon their ancient malice will Forget with the least cause these his new honours,
Which that he'll give them, make I as little question
As he is proud to do't.

Bru. I heard him swear,
Were he to stand for consul, never would he

Appear 'i the market-place, nor on him put
The napless vesture of humility;
Nor, showing, as the manner is, his wounds
To the people, beg their stinking breaths.

Sic. 'Tis right.

Bru. It was his word. Oh! he would in it rather
Than carry it but by the suit o' the gentry to him
And the desire of the nobles.

Sic. I wish no bet
Than have him hold that purpose and to put In execution.

Bru. 'Tis most like he will.

Sic. It shall be to him then as our good will
A sure destruction.

Bru. So it must fall out
To him or our authorities. For an end,
We must suggest the people in what hatred
He still hath held them; that to's power
Would have made them mules, silen'd their pleasures
Disproportioned their freedoms; holding them
In human action and capacity.
Of no more soul nor fitness for the world
Than camels in the war; who have their prov'd
Only for bearing burdens, and sore blows
For sinking under them.

Sic. This, as you say, suggest
At some time when his soaring insolence
Shall reach the people, which time shall not wait
If he be put upon 't; and that's as easy
As to set dogs on sheep, will be his fire
To kindle their dry stubble; and their blaze
Shall darken him for ever.

Enter a Messenger.

Bru. What's the matter,
Mess. You are sent for to the Capitol. I thought That Marcus shall be consul.
I have seen the dumb men thronch to see him, a
The blind to hear him speak: matrons flaunt their gloves,
Ladies and maids their scarfs and handkerchee.
Upon him as he pass'd; the nobles bended.
As to Jove's statue, and the commons made
A shower and thunder with their caps a-shouts:
I never saw the like.

Bru. Let's to the Capitol;
And carry with us ears and eyes for the time,
But hearts for the event.

Sic. Have with you. Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. The Capitol.

Enter two Officers, to lay cushions.

First Off. Come, come; they are almost here.
How many stand for consulships?
Second Off. Three, they say; but 'tis thought of every one Coriolanus will carry it.

First Off. That's a brave fellow: but he vengeance proud, and loves not the common people.

Second Off. Faith, there have been many gentry men that have flattered the people, who not loved them; and there be many that they ha loved, they know not wherefore: so that, if th they know not why, they hate upon no

ter a ground. Therefore, for Coriolanus ter to care whether they love or hate him isest the true knowledge he has in his osition; and out of his noble carelessness hem plainly see't.

first Off. If he did not care whether he had love or no, he waved indifferently 'twixt ning them neither good nor harm; but he s their hate with greater devotion than they render it him, and leaves nothing undone may fully discover him their opposite,
, to seem to affect the malice and displeasure
he people is as bad as that which he dislikes, latter them for their love.

second Off. He hath deserved worthily of his try; and his ascent is not by such easy rees as those who, having been supple and eous to the people, bonneted, without any her deed to have them at all into their es-ion and report; but he hath so planted his ours in their eyes, and his actions in their rts, that for their tongues to be silent, and confess so much, were a kind of ingrateful ry; to report otherwise, were a malice, that, ing itself the lie, would pluck reproof and ake from every ear that heard it.

first Off. No more of him ; he's a worthy man:
ke way, they are coming.

Enter, with Lectors before them, COMI-US the Consul, Menenius, Coriolanus, any other Senators, Sicinius and Brutus.
the Senators take their places; the Tribunes take reirs also by themselves.

len. Having determin'd of the Voisces, and send for Titus Lartius, it remains,
the main point of this our after-meeting, gratify his noble service that thus stood for his country : therefore,
please you,
 reverence and grave elders, to desire present consul, and last general well-found successes, to report ittle of that worthy work perform'd Caius Marius Coriolanus, whom met here both to thank and to remember honours like himself.

Sen. Speak, good Cominius; we nothing out for length, and make us think her our state's defective for requital we to stretch it out. To the Tribunes.
Masters o' the people,
do request your kindest ears, and after,
loving motion toward the common body,
yield what passes here.

e we are convened a pleasing treaty, and have hearts nable to honour and advance

theme of our assembly.

Which the rather shall be blest to do, if he remember nder value of the people than hath hereto priz'd them at.

That's off, that's off;
ould your rather had been silent. Please you ear Cominius speak?

Most willingly;
yet my caution was more pertinent an the rebuke you give it.

Men. He loves your people;
but tie him not to be their bedellow.
Worthy Cominins, speak.

Coriolanus rises, and offers to go away.
Nay, keep your place.

first Sen. Sit, Coriolanus; never shame to hear What you have nobly done.

Cor. Your honours' pardon:
I had rather have my wounds to heal
Than hear say how I got them.

Sir, I hope
My words dischend you not.

Cor. No, sir: yet oft,
When blows have made me stay, I fled from
words.

You sooth'd not, therefore hurt not. But your people,
I love them as they weigh.

Men. Pray now, sit down.

Cor. I had rather have one scratch my head
i' the sun
When the alarum were struck than idly sit
To hear my nothings monster'd.

Men. Masters o' the people,
Your multiplying spawn how can he flatter,
That's thousand to one good one, when you now
see
He had rather venture all his limbs for honour
Than one on's ears to hear it? Proceed, Cominius.

Com. I shall lack voice: the deeds of Coriolanus
Should not be utter'd feebly. It is held
That valour is the chiefest virtue, and Most dignifies the haver: if it be,
The man I speak of cannot in the world
Be singly counterpois'd. At sixteen years,
When Tarquin made a head for Rome, he fought
Beyond the mark of others; our then dictator,
Whom with all praise I point at, saw him fight,
When with his Amazonian chin he drove
The bristled lips before him. He bestrid
An o'er-press'd Roman, and I' the consul's view
Slew three opposers : Tarquin's self he met,
And struck him on his knee: in that day's feats,
When he might act the woman in the scene,
He prov'd best man i' the field, and for his meed
Was brow-bound with the oak. His pupil age
Man-enter'd thus, he wax'd like a sea,
And in the brunt of seventeen battles since He hurl'd all swords of the garland. For this last
Before and in Corioli, let me say,
I cannot speak him home: he stopp'd the fillers,
And by his rare example made the coward
Turn terror into sport: as weeds before
A vessel under sail, so men obey'd.
And fell below his stem: his sword, death's
stamp,
Where it did mark, it took; from face to foot
He was a thing of blood, whose every motion
Was tim'd with dying cries: alone he enter'd
The mortal gate of the city, which he painted
With shunless destiny; aidless came off,
And with a sudden reinforcement struck
Corioli like a planet. Now all's his:
When by and by the din of war 'gan pierce
His ready sense; then straight his doubled spirit
Re-quicken'd what in flesh was fatiguate.

And to the battle came he; where he did Run reeking o'er the lives of men, as if
'Twere a perpetual spoil; and till we call'd
Both field and city ours, he never stood
To ease his breast with panting.

Men. Worthy man!

First Sen. He cannot but with measure fit the honours
Which we devise him.

Com. Our spoils he kick'd at,
And look'd upon things precios as they were
The common muck o' the world: he covets less
Than misery itself would give; rewards
His deeds with doing them, and is content
To spend the time to end it.

Men. He's right noble:

Let him be call'd for.

First Sen. Call Coriolanus.

Off. He doth appear.

Re-enter Coriolanus.

Men. The senate, Coriolanus, are well pleas'd
To make thee consul.

Cor. I do owe them still
My life and services.

Men. It then remains
That you do speak to the people.

Cor. I do beseech you,
Let me o'erleap that custom, for I cannot
Put on the gown, stand naked, and entreat them,
For my wounds' sake, to give their suffrage
please you

That I may pass this doing.

Sic. Sir, the people
Must have their voices; neither will they bate
One jot of ceremony.

Men. Put them not to't:
Pray you, go fit you to the custom, and Take to you, as your predecessors have,
Your honour with your form.

Cor. It is a part
That I shall blush in acting, and might well
Be taken from the people.

Bru. Mark you that?

Cor. To brag unto them, thus I did, and thus;
Show them the unaching scars which I should hide,
As if I had receiv'd them for the hire
Of their breath only!

Men. Do not stand upon't.
We recommend to you, tribunes of the people,
Our purpose to them; and to our noble consul
Wish we all joy and honour.

Sen. To Coriolanus come all joy and honour!

Flourish. Exeunt all but Sicinius and Brutus.

Bru. You see how he intends to use the people.
Sic. May they perceive'st intent! He will require them,
As if he did contend what he requested
Should be in them to give.

Bru. Come; we'll inform them
Of our proceedings here: on the market-place
I know they do attend us. Exeunt.

Scene III.—The Same. The Forum.

Enter several Citizens.

First Cit. Once, if he do require our voices, we ought not to deny him.

Second Cit. We may, sir, if we will.

Third Cit. We have power in ourselves to it, but it is a power that we have no power do; for if he show us his wounds, and tell his deeds, we are to put our tongues into the wounds and speak for them; so, if he tell us noble deeds, we must also tell him our no acceptance of them. Ingratitude is monstro and for the multitude to be ingratitude were make a monster of the multitude; of the win we being members, should bring ourselves to monstrous members.

First Cit. And to make us no better thoug of, a little help will serve; for once we st up about the corn, he himself stuck not to o us the many-headed multitude.

Third Cit. We have been called so of man not that our heads are some brown, some bl some auburn, some bald, but that our wits so diversely coloured: and truly I think if our wits were to issue out of one skull, th would fly east, west, north, south; and th sentence of one direct way should be at once all the points o' the compass.

Second Cit. Think you so? Which way do judge my wit would fly?

Third Cit. Nay, your wit will not so soon as another man's will; 'tis strongly wedged in a blockhead; but if it were at liberty,'twould, sure, southward.

Second Cit. Why that way?

Third Cit. To lose itself in a fog; when being three parts melted away with rotten de the fourth would return, for conscience sake help to get thee a wife.

Second Cit. You are never without your trie you may, you may.

Third Cit. Are you all resolved to give yo voices! But that's no matter, the greater pu aries it. I say, if he would incline to people, there was never a worthier man.

Enter Coriolanus in a gown of humility, an Menenius.

Here he comes, and in the gown of humilit mark his behaviour. We are not to stay all gether, but to come by him where he stan by ones, by twos, and by threes. He's to m his requests by particulars; wherein every of us has a single honour, in giving him his own voices with our own tongues: therefore follow me, and I will direct you how you shall
by him.

All. Content, content. Exeunt Citizens.

Men. O sir, you are not right: have you no known

The worthiest men have done't!

Cor. What must I say
'I pray, sir,'—Plague upon't! I cannot bring
My tongue to such a pace. 'Look, sir, my wound
I got them in my country's service, when
Some certain of your brethren roar'd and ran
From the noise of our own drums.'

Men. O me! the gods
You must not speak of that: you must des them
To think upon you.

Cor. Think upon me! Hang 'em
I would they would forget me, like the virtu
Which our divines lose by 'em.

Men. You'll mar
Re-enter two Citizens.

So, here comes a brace.

Know the cause, sir, of my standing here.

first Citt. We do, sir; tell us what hath brought you to 't.

second Citt. Your own desert!

third Citt. Ay, not mine own desire.

first Citt. How not your own desire?

second Citt. No, sir; 'twas never my desire yet to bleed the poor with begging.

first Citt. You must think, if we give you any g, we hope to gain by you.

second Citt. Well then, I pray, your price o' the commodity?

first Citt. The price is, to ask it kindly.

third Citt. Kindly! Sir, I pray, let me ha' t: I wounds to show you, which shall be yours private. Your good voice, sir; what say?

second Citt. You shall ha' t, worthy sir.

third Citt. A match, sir. There's in all two worthy es begged. I have your alms: adieu.

first Citt. But this is something odd.

second Citt. An 'twere to give again,—but 'tis matter.

Exeunt the two Citizens.

Re-enter two other Citizens.

or. Pray you now, if it may stand with you of your voices that I may be consul, I have the customary gown.

third Citt. You have deserved nobly of your country, and you have not deserved nobly.

or. Your enigma?

third Citt. You have been a scoundrel to her sisters, you have been a rod to her friends; have not indeed loved the common people.

or. You should account me the more virtuous, I have not been common in my love. I will, flatter my sworn brother the people, to earn earner estimation of them; 'tis a condition account gentle: and since the wisdom of their choice is rather to have my hat than my rust, I will practise the insinuating nod, and off to them most counterfeith; that is, sir, will counterfeit the bewitchment of some salar man, and give it bountiful to the decent. Therefore, beseech you, I may be consul.

fourth Citt. We hope to find you our friend, I therefore give you our voices heartily.

third Citt. You have received many wounds your country.

or. I will not seal your knowledge with winging them. I will make much of your voices, so trouble you no further.

both Citt. The gods give you joy, sir, heartily! Exeunt.

The dust on antique time would lie unswept, And mountainous error be too highly heap'd For truth to o'erpeer. Rather than fool it so, Let the high office and the honour go To one that would do thus, I am half through; The one part suffer'd, the other will I do.

Re-enter three other Citizens.

Here come more voices.

Your voices: for your voices I have fought;
Watch'd for your voices; for your voices bear Of wounds two dozen odd; battles thrice six
I have seen and heard of; for your voices have Done many things, some less, some more: your voices:

Indeed, I would be consul.

Fifth Cit. He has done nobly, and cannot go without any honest man's voice.

Sixth Cit. Therefore let him be consul. The gods give him joy, and make him good friend to the people!

All. Amen, amen.

God save thee, noble consul! Exeunt Citizens.

Cor. Worthy voices!

Re-enter Menenius, with Brutus and Sicinius.

Men. You have stood your limitation; and the tribunes Endue you with the people's voice: remains
That, in the official marks invested, you
Anon do meet the senate.

Cor. Is this done?

Sic. The custom of request you have discharged:

The people do admit you, and are summoned to meet anon, upon your approbation.

Cor. Where? at the senate-house?

Sic. There, Coriolanus.

Cor. May I change these garments?

Sic. You may, sir.

Cor. That I'll straight do; and, knowing myself again,

Repair to the senate-house.

Men. I'll keep you company. Will you along?

Brutus. We stay here for the people.

Sic. Fare you well.

Exeunt Coriolanus and Menenius.

He has it now; and by his looks, methinks, 'Tis warm at's heart.

Brutus. With a proud heart he wore His humble weeds. Will you dismiss the people?

Re-enter Citizens.

Sic. How now, my masters! have you chose this man?

First Cit. He has our voices, sir.

Brutus. We pray the gods he may deserve your loves.

Second Cit. Amen, sir. To my poor unworthy notice, He mock'd us when he begg'd our voices.

Third Cit. Certainly, he flouted us downright.

First Cit. No, 'tis his kind of speech; he did not mock us.

Second Cit. Not one amongst us, save yourself, but says

He us'd us scornfully: he should have show'd us His marks of merit, wounds receiv'd for his country.

Sic. Why, so he did, I am sure.
No, no; no man saw 'em.

Third Cit. He said he had wounds, which he could show in private;
And with his hat, thus waving it in scorn,
'I would be consul,' says he: 'aged custom,
But by your voices, will not so permit me;
Your voices therefore.' When we granted that,
Here was, 'I thank you for your voices, thank you;
Your most sweet voices: now you have left your voices
I have no further with you.' Was not this mockery?

Sic. Why, either were you ignorant to see't,
Or, seeing it, of such childish friendliness
To yield your voices?

Bru. Could you not have told him
As you were lesson'd, when he had no power,
But was a petty servant to the state,
He was your enemy, ever spake against
Your liberties and the charters that you bear
I' the body of the weal; and now, arriving
A place of potency and sway o' the state,
If he should still malignantly remain
Fast foe to the plebeii, your voices might Be curses to yourselves? You should have said
That as his worthy deeds did claim no less Than what he stood for, so his gracious nature
Would think upon you for your voices and Translate his malice towards you into love,
Standing your friendly lord.

Sic. Thus to have said,
As you were fore-adviz'd, had touch'd his spirit
And tried his inclination; from him pluck'd Either his gracious promise, which you might,
As cause had call'd you up, have held him to;
Or else it would have gall'd his surly nature,
Which easily endures not article
Tying him to aught; so, putting him to rage,
You should have ta'n on the advantage of his choler,
And pass'd him unselected.

Bru. Did you perceive
He did solicit you in free contempt
When he did need your loves, and do you think
That his contempt shall not be bruising to you
When he hath power to crush? Why, had your bodies
No heart among you? or had you tongues to cry
Against the rectorship of judgment?

Sic. Have you
Ere now denied the asker? and now again
Of him that did not ask, but mock, bestow
Your sud-for-tongues?

Third Cit. He's not confirm'd; we may deny him yet.

Second Cit. And will deny him:
I' ll have five hundred voices of that sound.

First Cit. I twice five hundred and their friends to piece 'em.

Bru. Get you hence instantly, and tell those friends,
They have chose a consul that will from them take
Their liberties; make them of no more voice
Than dogs that are as often beat for barking
As therefore kept to do so.

Sic. Let them assemble;
And, on a safer judgment, all revoke
Your ignorant election. Enforce his pride,
And his old hate unto you; besides, forget not
With what contempt he wore the humble weed;

How in his suit he scorn'd you; but your lo
Thinking upon his services, took from you
The apprehension of his present portance,
Which most glibingly, ungravely, he did fast
After the inveterate hate he bears you.

Bru. A fault on us, your tribunes; that we labo
No impediment between, but that you must Cast your election on him.

Sic. Say you chose
More after our commandment than as guide
By your own true affections; and that your min
Pre-occupied with what you rather must do
Than what you should, made you against

To voice him consul: lay the fault on us.

Bru. Ay, spare us not. Say we read lectu
to you,
How youngly he began to serve his country,
How long continued, and what stock he spheld
The noble house o' the Marcians, from who came
That Ancus Marcius, Numa's daughter's son
Who, after great Hostilius, here was king;
Of the same house Publius and Quintus were
That our best water brought by conduits hith
And Censorinus that was so surnam'd;
And nobly named so, twice being censor,
Was his great ancestor.

Sic. One thus descend
That hath beside well in his person wrought
To be set high in place, we did commend
To your remembrances: but you have found
Scaling his present bearing with his past,
That he's your fixed enemy, and revoke
Your sudden approbation.

Bru. Say you ne'er had done
Harp on that still, but by our putting on;
And presently, when you had drawn your number
Repair to the Capitol.

All. We will so: almost a Repent in their election. Exeunt Citize

Bru. Let them go on;
This mutiny were better put in hazard
Than stay, past doubt, for greater.
If, as his nature is, he fall in rage
With their refusal, both observe and answer
The vantage of his anger.

Sic. To the Capitol:
Come, we'll be there before the stream o' people;
And this shall seem, as partly 'tis, their own,
Which we have goaded onward. Exeunt

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Rome. A Street.

Cornets. Enter Coriolanus, Menenius, Minnius, Titus Larthius, Senators and Pat cians.

Cor. Tullius Aufidius then had made new hen Lvat. He had, my lord; and that it was whi caus'd
Our swifter composition.

Cor. So then the Volsces stand but as at fr Ready, when time shall prompt them, to ma road

Upon's again,
They are worn, lord consul, so we shall hardly in our ages see ir banners wave again.

Saw you Aufidius?

On safe-guard he came to me; and did curse
inst the Volscs, for they had so vilely
ded the town: he is retir'd to Antium.

Spoke he of me?

He did, my lord.

How? what?

How often he had met you, sword to sword;
t of all things upon the earth he hated person most, that he would pawn his fortunes hopeless restitution, so he might call'd your vanquisher.

At Antium lives he?

I wish I had a cause to seek him there, propose his hatred fully. Welcome home.

Enter Sicinius and Brutus.

old! these are the tribunes of the people,
tongues o' the common mouth: I do despise them;
they do prank them in authority
inst all noble suffrance.

Pass no further.

Ha! what is that?

It will be dangerous to go on: no further.

What makes this change?

The matter?

Hath he not pass'd the noble and the common?

Cominius, no.

Have I had children's voices?

Tribunes, give way; he shall to the market-place.

The people are incensed against him.

Stop, old will fall in broil.

Are these your herd?

t these have voices, that can yield them now,
I straight declare their tongues? What are your offices?

being their mouths, why rule you not their teeth?

you not set them on?

Be calm, be calm.

It is a purpos'd thing, and grows by plot, curb the will of the nobility:
fer't, and live with such as cannot rule ever will be rul'd.

Call 't not a plot: 40 people cry you mock'd them, and of late,

en corn was given them gratis, you repin'd;
and the suppliants for the people, call'd them flatterers, foes to nobleness.

Why, this was known before.

Not to them all.

Have you inform'd them sithence?

How! I inform them.

You are like to do such business.

Not unlike,
ch way, to better yours.

Why then should I be consul? By yond clouds,

Let me deserve so ill as you, and make me
Your fellow tribune.

You show too much of that
For which the people stir: if you will pass
To where you are bound, you must inquire your
way,
Which you are out of, with a gentler spirit;
Or never be so noble as a consul,
Nor yoke with him for tribune.

Men.

Let's be calm.

Com. The people are abus'd; set on. This paltering

Becomes not Rome, nor has Coriolanus

Deserv'd this so dishonour'd rub, laid falsely
I' the plain way of his merit.

Cor.

This was my speech, and I will speak 't again—

Men. Not now, not now.

First Sen. Not in this heat, sir, now.

Cor. Now, as I live, I will. My nobler friends,
I crave their pardons:

For the mutable, rank-scented many, let them

Regard me as I do not flatten, and

Therein behold themselves: I say again,
In soothing them we nourish 'gainst our senate

The cockle of rebellion, insolence, sedition,

Which we ourselves have plough'd for, sow'd,

and scatter'd.

By mingling them with us, the honour'd number;

Who lack not virtue, no, nor power, but that
Which they have given to beggars.

Men. Well, no more.

First Sen. No more words, we beseech you.

Cor. How! no more!

As for my country I have shed my blood,

Not fearing outward force, so shall my lungs

Coin words till their decay against those measles,

Which we disdain should tetter us, yet sought

The very way to catch them.

You speak o' the people

As if you were a god to punish, not

A man of their infirmity.

Sic. 'Twere well

We let the people know 't.

Men. What, what? his choler?

Cor. Choler!

Were I as patient as the midnight sleep,

By Jove, 'twould be my mind.

Sic. It is a mind

That shall remain a poison where it is,

Not poison any further.

Shall remain!

Hear you this Triton of the minnows? mark you

His absolute 'shall'?

Com. 'Twas from the canon.

Cor. 'Shall!'

O good but most unwise patricians! why,

You grave but reckless senators, have you thus

Given Hydra here to choose an officer,

That with his peremptory 'shall,' being but

The horn and noise o' the monster's, wants not

To say he'll turn your current in a ditch,

And make your channel his? If he have power,

Then vail your ignorance; if none, awake

Your dangerous lenity. If you are learned,

Be not as common fools; if you are not,

Let them have cushions by you. You are plebeians

If they be senators; and they are no less,
When, both your voices blended, the great'st taste
Most palates theirs. They choose their magis-
And such a one as he, who puts his 'shall,'
His popular 'shall,' against a graver bench
Than ever frown'd in Greece. By Jove himself!
It makes the consuls base; and my soul aches
To know, when two authorities are up,
Neither supreme, how soon confusion
May enter 'twixt the gap of both and take
The one by the other.

Com. Well, on to the market-place.

Cor. Whoever gave that counsel, to give forth
The corn o' the storehouse gratis, as 'twas us'd
Sometimes in Greece,—

Men. Well, well; no more of that.

Cor. Though there the people had more abso-
I say, they nourish'd disobedience, fed
The ruin of the state.

Bru. Why, shall the people give
One that speaks thus their voice?

Cor. I'll give my reasons,
More worthier than their voices. They know the corn
Was not our recompense, resting well assur'd.
Their mutinies and revolts, wherein they show'd
Most valour, spoke not for them. The accusation
Which they have often made against the senate,
All cause unborn, could never be the motive
Of our so frank donation. Well, what then?
How shall this bisson multitude digest
The senate's courtesy? Let deeds express What's like to be their words: 'We did request
it;
We are the greater poll, and in true fear
They gave us our demands.' Thus we debase
The nature of our seats, and make the rabble
Call our cares fears; which will in time break ope
The locks o' the senate, and bring in the crows
To peck the eagles.

Men. Come, enough.

Bru. Enough, with over-measure.

Cor. No, take more: may
What may be sworn by, both divine and human,
Seal what I end withal! This double worship,
Where one part does disdain with cause, the other
Insult without all reason; where gentry, title,
Wisdom,
Cannot conclude but by the yea and no
Of general ignorance,—it must omit
Real necessities, and give way the while
To unstable sightness; purpose so barr'd, it follows
Nothing is done to purpose. Therefore, beseech
you,
You that will be less fearful than discreet,
That love the fundamental part of state
More than you doubt the change on't, that prefer
A noble life before a long, and wish
To jump a body with a dangerous physic
That's sure of death without it, at once pluck out
The multitudinous tongue; let them not lick
The sweet which is their poison. Your dishon-
Manges true judgment, and bereaves the state
Of that integrity which should become it,
Not having the power to do the good it would
For the ill which doth control it.'

Bru. Has said enough.

Cor. Has spoken like a traitor, and shall ans
As traitors do.

Cor. Thou wretch! despite o'erwhelm the
What should the people do with these br-
On whom depending, their obedience fails
To the greater bench. In a rebellion,
When what's not meet, but what must be, is
Then were they chosen: in a better hour,
Let what is meet be said it must be meet,
And throw their power i' the dust.

Bru. Manifest treason!

Sic. This a consul in

Bru. The ediles, ho!

Enter an Edile.

Sic. Let him be apprehend

Edile. Call the people;

Sic. Edile, in whose name mys-
Attach thee as a traitorous innovator,
A foe to the public weal: obey, I charge thee
And follow to thine answer.

Cor. Hence, old go
Senators. We'll surety him.

Com. Aged sir, hands off
Cor. Hence, rotten thing! or I shall shake bones
Out of thy garments.

Sic. Help, ye citizens!

Re-enter the Edile, with Others, and a rabble of Citizens.

Men. On both sides more respect.

Sic. Here's he that would take from you your power.

Bru. Seize him, ediles!

Citizens. Down with him!—down with him!

Senators. Weapons!—weapons!—weapons!

They all hustle about Coriolanus, cry
Tribunes!—Patricians!—Citizens!—What, ho!
Sicinius!—Brutus!—Coriolanus!—Citizens!
Peace! Peace! Peace!—Stay!—Hold!—Pea
Men. What is about to be? I am out of breath
Confusion's near; I cannot speak. You, tribus
To the people! Coriolanus, patience!

Speak, good Sicinius.

Sic. Hear me, people; peace
Citizens. Let's hear our tribune:—Peace!

Speak, speak, speak.

Sic. You are at point to lose your liberties
Marcius would have all from you; Marcuis,
Whom late you have nam'd for consul.

Men. Fie, fie, fie
This is the way to kindle, not to quench.

First Sen. To unbuild the city and to lay all fl
Sic. What is the city but the people?

Tru. The people are the city.

Bru. By the consent of all, we were establis
The people's magistrates.

Citizens. You so remain,

Men. And so are like to do.
CORIOLANUS.

[Scene 1]

That is the way to lay the city flat; bring the roof to the foundation, bury all, which yet distinctly ranges, eaps and piles of ruin.

This deserves death.

Therefore lay hold of him; to him the rock Tarpeian, and from thence destruction cast him.

Ediles, seize him! Tribunes, Yield, Marcius, yield!

Hear me one word; such you, tribunes, hear me but a word.

Be that you seem, truly your country’s friend, temperately proceed to what you would violently redress.

Sir, those cold ways, seem like prudent helps, are very poisonous are the disease is violent. Lay hands upon him, bear him to the rock.

No; I’ll die here. Drawing his sword.

re’s some among you have beheld me fighting:
be try upon yourselves what you have seen me.

Down with that sword! Tribunes, withdraw awhile.

Lay hands upon him.

Help Marcius, help, that be noble; help him, young and old!

Down with him!—down with him! In this mutiny, the Tribunes, the Ediles, and the People, are beat in.

Go, get you to your house; be gone, away! will be naught else.

Get you gone.

Stand fast: have as many friends as enemies.

Shall it be put to that?

The gods forbid!

rithae, noble friend, home to thy house; we to use to cure this cause.

For’tis a sore upon us: a cannot tent yourself: be gone, beseech you.

Come, sir, along with us.

I would they were barbarians, as they are, ough in Rome litter’d, not Romans, as they are not, ough calv’d i’ the porch of the Capitol,—

Be gone; not your worthy rage into your tongue; the time will owe another.

On fair ground could beat forty of them.

I could myself keep up a brace o’ the best of them; yea, the two tribunes.

But now ’tis odds beyond arithmetic; at manhood is call’d foolery when it stands against a falling fabric. Will you hence, fare the tag return? whose rage doth rend

Like interrupted waters and o’erbear
What they are us’d to bear.

I’ll try whether my old wit be in request With those that have but little: this must be patch’d

With cloth of any colour.

Nay, come away.

EXECUT CORIOLANUS, COMINIUS, and Others.

First Pat. This man has mar’d his fortune. Men. His nature is too noble for the world: He would not flatter Neptune for his trident, Or Jove for’s power to thunder. His heart’s his mouth:

What his breast forges, that his tongue must vent;

And, being angry, does forget that ever
He heard the name of death. A noise within.

Here’s goody work!

Second Pat. I would they were a-bed! Men. I would they were in Tiber! What the vengeance!

Could he not speak ’em fair?

Re-enter BRUTUS and SICINIUS, with the rubble.

Sic. Where is this viper

That would depopulate the city and

Be every man himself?

Men. You worthy tribunes,—

Sic. He shall be brought down the Tarpeian rock
With rigorous hands: he hath resisted law, And therefore law shall scorn him further trial Than the severity of the public power, Which he so sets at nought.

First Cit. He shall well know The noble tribunes are the people’s mouths, And we their hands.

Citizens. He shall, sure on’t.

Men. Sic. Sir, sir,—

Men. Do not cry havoc, where you should but hunt

With modest warrant.

Sic. Sir, how comes ’t that you

Have holp to make this rescue?

As I do know the consul’s worthiness, So can I name his faults.

Sic. Consul! what consul?

Men. The Consul Coriolanus.

Bru. He a consul!

Citizens. No, no, no, no, no.

Men. If, by the tribunes’ leave, and yours, good people, I may be heard, I would crave a word or two, Which shall turn you to no further harm Than so much loss of time.

Sic. Speak briefly then;

For we are peremptory to dispatch This viperous traitor. To eject him hence Were but one danger, and to keep him here Our certain death; therefore it is decreed He dies to-night.

Men. Now the good gods forbid That our renowned Rome, whose gratitude Towards her beloved children is enroll’d In Jove’s own book, like an unnatural dam Should now eat up her own!

Sic. He’s a disease that must be cut away.
Men. O! he's a limb that has but a disease; Mortal to cut it off; to cure it easy. What has he done to Rome that's worthy death? Killing our enemies, the blood he hath lost, Which, I dare vouch, is more than that he hath, By many an ounce, he dropp'd it for his country; And what is left, to lose it by his country, Were to us all, that do 't and suffer it, A brand to th' end o' the world.

Sic. This is clean kam.

Bru. Merely awry; when he did love his country It honour'd him. Men. The service of the foot Being once gangren'd, is not then respected For what before it was. Bru. We'll hear no more. Pursue him to his house, and pluck him thence, Lest his infection, being of catching nature, Spread further.

Men. One word more, one word, This tiger-footed rage, when it shall find The harm of unscann'd swiftness, will, too late, Tie leaden punds to 's heels, Proceed by process; Lest parties, as he is belov'd, break out, And sack great Rome with Romans.

Bru. If it were so,—

Sic. What do ye talk? Have we not had a taste of his obedience? Our rediles smote? ourselves resisted? Come! Men. Consider this: he has been bred in the wars Since he could draw a sword, and is ill school'd In bol'd language; meal and bran thrown 310 He throws without distinction. Give me leave, I'll go to him, and undertake to bring him Where he shall answer, by a lawful form, In peace, to his utmost peril.

First Sen. Noble tribunes, It is the humane way: the other course Will prove too bloody, and the end of it Unknown to the beginning.

Sic. Noble Memenius, Be you then as the people's officer. Masters, lay down your weapons.

Bru. Go not home. Sic. Meet on the market-place. We'll attend you there: Where, if you bring not Marcius, we 'll proceed In our first way.

Men. I'll bring him to you. To the Senators. Let me desire your company. He must come, Or what is worst will follow.

First Sen. Pray you, let's to him. Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. A Room in CORIOLANUS'S House.

Enter CORIOLANUS and Patricians.

Cor. Let them pull all about mine ears; present me Death on the wheel, or at wild horses' heels; Or pile ten hills on the Tarpeian rock. That the precipitation might down stretch Below the beam of sight; yet will I still Be thus to them.

First Pat. You do the nobler.

Cor. I muse my mother Does not approve me further, who was wont To call them woollen vassals, things created To buy and sell with groats, to show bare head In congregations, to yawn, be still, and won When one but of my ordinance stood up To speak of peace or war.

Enter VOLUMNIA.

I talk of you: Why did you wish me milder? Would you have me False to my nature? Rather say I play The man I am.

Vol. 0! sir, sir, sir, I would have had you put your power well Before you had worn it out.

Cor. Let go.

Vol. You might have been enough the man you are With striving less to be so: lesser had been The thwarings of your dispositions if You had not show'd them how ye were dispair Ere they lack'd power to cross you.

Cor. Let them be.

Vol. Ay, and burn too.

Enter MENENIUS and Senators.

Men. Come, come; you have been too rough something too rough; You must return and mend it.

First Sen. There's no remedy. Unless, by not so doing, our good city Cleave in the midst, and perish.

Vol. Pray be counsel I have a heart of mettle apt as yours, But yet a brain that leads my use of anger To better vantage.

Men. Well said, noble woman. Before he should thus stoop to the herd, but

The violent fit o' the time craves it as physic For the whole state, I would put mine armour Which I can scarcely bear.

Cor. What must I do.

Men. Return to the tribunes.

Cor. Well, what then? what the Men. Repent what you have spoke.

Cor. For them! I cannot do it to the god Must I then do't to them?

Vol. You are too absolute Though therein you can never be too noble, But when extremities speak. I have heard you say, Honour and policy, like unsever'd friends, I' the war do grow together: grant that, a tell me,

In peace what each of them by the other lost That they combine not there.

Cor. Tush, tush!

Men. A good demar Vol. If it be honour in your wars to seem The same you are not, which, for your best end You adopt your policy, how is it less or worse That it shall hold companionship in peace With honour, as in war, since that to both It stands in like request?

Cor. Why force you this

Vol. Because that now it lies you on to speak To the people; not by your own instruction, Nor by the matter which your heart promptsye with such words that are but rooted in tongue, though but bastards and syllables allowance to your bosom's truth.

Prithee
It
Do them, although speak all
you but vowth of much blood.

I
old dissemble with my nature where fortunes and my friends at stake requir'd ould do in so honour: I am in this,
wife, your son, these senators, the nobles;
you will rather show our general louts
you can frown than spend a fawn upon 'em, the inheritance of their loves and safeguard that want might ruin.

Noble lady! I go with us; speak fair; you may salve so, what is dangerous present, but the loss that is past.

I prithee now, my son, to them, with this bonnet in thy hand;
thus far having stretch'd it, here be with knee bussing the stones, for in such business on is eloquence, and the eyes of the ignorant learned as the ears, waving thy head, ch often, thus, correcting thy stout heart, umble as the ripest mulberry will not hold the handling: or say to them, art their soldier, and being bred in broils not the soft way which, thou dost confess,
e for thee to use as they to claim,
sking their good loves; but thou wilt frame self, forsooth, hereafter theirs, so far hou hast power and person.

This but done,
as she speaks, why, their hearts were yours;
yhey have pardons, being ask'd, as free words to little purpose.

I prithee now,
and be rul'd; although I know thou hadst rather ow thine enemy in a fiery gulf flatter him in a bower. Here is Cominius.

Enter Cominius.

om. I have been i' the market-place; and,
sir, 'tis fit
make strong party, or defend yourself almness or by absence: all's in anger.
en. Only fair speech.

I think 'twill serve if he there to frame his spirit.

He must, and will.
I thee now, say you will, and go about it.
or. Must I go shew them my unbarb'd conscience?
it I with base tongue give my noble heart that it must bear? Well, I will do't: we were there but this single plot to lose, smould of Marcus, they must should grind it
I throw 't against the wind. To the marketplace!
I have put me now to such a part which never all discharge to the life.

om. Come, come, we'll prompt you.
ol. I prithee now, sweet son, as thou hast said praises made thee first a soldier, so, have my praise for this, perform a part hast not done before.

Well, I must do't.
I' the right and strength o' the commons,' be it either
For death, for fine, or banishment, then let them,
If I say fine, cry 'fine'; if death, cry 'death';
Insisting on the old prerogative
And power i' the truth o' the cause.

\textit{AEd.} I shall inform them.

\textit{Bru.} And when such time they have begun to cry,
Let them not cease, but with a din confus'd
Enforce the present execution
Of what we chance to sentence.

\textit{AEd.} Very well.

\textit{Sic.} Make them be strong and ready for this hint,
When we shall hap to give'them.

\textit{Bru.} Go; about it. \textit{Exit AEdile.}

Put him to choler straight. He hath been us'd
Ever to conquer, and to have his worth
Of contradiction: being once chaf'd, he cannot Be rein'd again to temperance; then he speaks
What's in his heart; and that is there which looks
With us to break his neck.

\textit{Sic.} Well, here he comes.

\textbf{Enter Coriolanus, Menenius, Cominius, Senators, and Patricians.}

\textit{Men.} Calmly, I do beseech you.

\textit{Cor.} Ay, as an ostler, that for the poorest piece
Will bear the knave by the volume. The honor'd gods
Keep Rome in safety, and the chairs of justice
Supplied with worthy men! plant love among us!
Throng our large temples with the shows of peace,
And not our streets with war!

\textbf{First Sen.} Amen, amen.

\textbf{Men.} A noble wish.

\textbf{Re-enter AEdile, with Citizens.}

\textbf{Sic.} Draw near, ye people.

\textit{AEd.} List to your tribunes. Audience: peace I say.

\textit{Cor.} First, hear me speak.

\textit{Sic., Bru.} Well, say. Peace, ho!

\textit{Cor.} Shall I be charg'd no further than this present?

\textit{Must all determine here?}

\textit{Sic.} I do demand,
If you submit to the people's voices,
Allow their officers, and are content
To suffer lawful censure for such faults
As shall be prov'd upon you?

\textit{Cor.} I am content.

\textit{Men.} Lo! citizens, he says he is content:
The war-like service he has done, consider;
Upon the wounds his body bears, which show
Like graves i' the holy churchyard.

\textit{Cor.} Scratches with briers;
Scars to move laughter only.

\textit{Men.} Consider further,
That when he speaks not like a citizen,
You find him like a soldier: do not take
His rougher accents for malicious sounds.
But, as I say, such as become a soldier,
Rather than envy you.

\textit{Com.} Well, well; no more.

\textit{Cor.} What is the matter
That being pass'd for consul with full voice
I am so dishonour'd that the very hour
You take it off again?

\textit{Sic.} Answer to us.

\textit{Cor.} Say then: 'tis true, I ought so.

\textit{Sic.} We charge you, that you have consent to take
From Rome all season'd office, and to wind
Yourself into a power tyrannical;
For which you are a traitor to the people.

\textit{Cor.} How! traitor!

\textit{Men.} Nay, temperately; your prompt
The fires i' the lowest hell fold-in people!

Call me their traitor! Thou injurious tribune,
Within thine eyes sat twenty thousand deal.
In thy hands clutch'd as many millions, in Thy tongue lying both numbers, I would saw 'Thou liest' unto thee with a voice as free
As I do pray the gods.

\textit{Sic.} Mark you this, people.

\textit{Citizens.} To the rock! —To the rock with him.

\textit{Sic.} Per

We need not put new matter to his charge;
What you have seen him do, and heard him say,
Beating your officers, cursing yourselves,
Opposing laws with strokes, and here defying
Those whose great power must try him; even
So criminal and in such capital kind,
Deserves the extremest death.

\textit{Bru.} But since he will Serv'd well for Rome,—

\textit{Cor.} What do you prate of serv
\textit{Bru.} I talk of that, that know it.

\textit{Cor.} You!

\textit{Men.} Is this the promise that you made my mother?

\textit{Com.} Know, I pray you,—

\textit{Cor.} I'll know no futur
Let them pronounce the steep Tarpeian deal
Vagabond exile, flaying, pent to linger
But with a grain a day, I would not buy
Their mercy at the price of one fair word,
Nor check my courage for what they can give
To have 't with saying 'Good morrow.'

\textit{Sic.} For that he
As much as in him lies, from time to time
Envied against the people, seeking means
To pluck away their power, as now at last Given hostile strokes, and that not in the press
Of dreaded justice, but on the ministers
That do distribute it; in the name o' the people.
And in the power of us the tribunes, we,
Even from this instant, banish him our city,
In peril of precipitation
From off the rock Tarpeian, never more
To enter our Rome gates: 'tis the people's name
I say it shall be so.

\textit{Citizens.} It shall be so.—It shall be so.—

He's banish'd, and it shall be so.

\textit{Com.} Hear me, my masters, and my comm

friends,—

\textit{Sic.} He's sentence'd; no more hearing.

\textit{Com.} Let me spe
I have been consul, and can show for Rome
Her enemies' marks upon me. I do love
My country's good with a respect more tend
More holy and profound, than mine own life.
Coriolanus.

Exeunt Coriolanus, Cominius, Menenius, Senators, and Patricians.

Id. The people's enemy is gone, is gone! 121

Exeunt. Our enemy is banish'd!—He is gone!—Hoo! hoo!

They all shout, and throw up their caps. 122

Go, see him out at gates, and follow him, 123

I will follow you, with all despite; 123

Exeunt.

ACT IV.

Scene I.—Rome. Before a Gate of the City.

Enter Coriolanus, Volumnia, Virgilia, Menenius, Cominius, and several young Patricians.

Cor. Come, leave your tears: a brief farewell: the beast many heads butts me away. Nay, mother, ere is your ancient courage! you were us'd ay extremities was the trier of spirits; t common chances common men could bear; t when the sea was calm all boats alike w'd mastership in floating; fortune's blows, en most struck home, being gentle, wounded, cravesoble cunning: you were us'd to load me with precepts that would make invincible heart that comm'd them. 123

O heavens! O heavens!

Volumnia, I prithee, woman,—

Nay, Volumnia, I prithee, woman.—

Now the red pestilence strike all trades in Rome.

Occupations perish!

What, what, what! 124

all be lov'd when I am lack'd. Nay, mother,

Resume that spirit, when you were wont to say, If you had been the wife of Hercules, Six of his labours you'd done, and sav'd Your husband so much sweat. Cominius, Drop not; adieu. Farewell, my wife! my mother! 125

I'll do well yet. Thou old and true Menenius, Thy tears are saltier than a younger man's, And venomous to thine eyes. My sometime general, I have seen thee stern, and thou hast oft beheld Heart-hardening spectacles; tell these sad women 'Tis fond to wail inevitable strokes As 'tis to laugh at 'em. My mother, you wot well My hazards still have been your solace; and Believe 't not lightly, though I go alone, Like to a lonely dragon, that his fen 125

Makes fear'd and talk'd of more than seen, your son Will or exceed the common or be caught With cautelous baits and practice. Vol. My first son, Whither wilt thou go? Take good Cominius With thee awhile; determine on some course, More than a wild exposure to each chance That starts i' the way before thee. Cor. O the gods! 126

Com. I'll follow thee a month, devise with thee Where thou shalt rest, that thou may'st hear of us, And we of thee: so if the time thrust forth A cause for thy repeal, we shall not send O'er the vast world to seek a single man, And lose advantage, which doth ever cool I' the absence of the needer. Cor. Thou hast years upon thee; and thou art too full Of the wars' surfeits, to go rove with one That's yet unbruised: bring me but out at gate. Come, my sweet wife, my dearest mother, and My friends of noble touch, when I am forth, Bid me farewell, and smile. I pray you, come. While I remain above the ground you shall hear from me still; and never of me aught But what is like me formerly.

Men. That's worthily As any ear can hear. Come; let's not weep. If I could shake off but one seven years From these old arms and legs, by the good gods, I'd with thee every foot.

Cor. Give me thy hand.

Come.

Exeunt.

Scene II.—The Same. A Street near the Gate.

Enter Sicinius, Brutus, and an Edile.

Sic. Bid them all home; he's gone, and we'll no further. The nobility are vex'd, whom we see have sided In his behalf.

Brut. Now we have shown our power, Let us seem humbler after it is done Than when it was a-doing.

Sic. Bid them home;
Say their great enemy is gone, and they Stand in their ancient strength.

_Cor._ Dismiss them home. _Exit_ _Edile._

_Enter_ _Volumnia, Virgilia,_ and _Menenius._

Here comes his mother.

_Sic._ Let’s not meet her.

_Cor._ Why?

_Sic._ They say she’s mad.

_Cor._ They have ta’en note of us; keep on your way.

_Vol._ O! ye’re well met. The hoarded plague
Of what lies heavy to t’.

Men. You have told them ho
And, by my troth, you have cause. You’ll
With me?

_Vol._ Anger’s my meat; I sup upon myself,
And so shall starve with feeding. Come, let’s
Leave this faint puling and lament as I do,
In anger, Juno-like. Come, come, come.

Men. Fie, fie, fie! _Exit._

SCENE III.—A Highway between _Rome_ and _Antium._

_Enter_ _Rome_ and a _Volscian_ _Vol._

_Rom._ I know you well, sir, and you know
Your name I think is Adrian.

_Vol._ It is so, sir: truly, I have forgot you.

_Rom._ I am a _Rome_ ; and my services
As you are, against ’em. Know you me yet?

_Vol._ _Nicanor_? No.

_Rom._ The same, sir.

_Vol._ You had more beard when I last saw you; but your favour is well approved by your Tongue. What’s the news in _Rome_? I have Note from the _Volscian_ state to find you there:
You have well saved me a day’s journey.

_Rom._ There hath been in _Rome_ strange surrections: the people against the senatorial Patricians, and nobles.

_Vol._ Hath been! Is it ended then? It
State thinks not so; they are in a most like preparation, and hope to come upon us in the heat of their division.

_Rom._ The main blaze of it is past, but a thing would make it flame again. For nobles receive so to heart the banishment that worthy _Coriolanus_, that they are in a readiness to take all power from the people to pluck from them their tribunes for ever.
This lies glowing. I can tell you, and is as mature for the violent breaking out.

_Vol._ _Coriolanus_ banished!

_Rom._ Banished, sir.

_Vol._ You will be welcome with this intention, _Nicanor_.

_Rom._ The day serves well for them now.
Have heard it said, the fittest time to corrupt man’s wife is when she’s fallen out with his husband. Your noble _Tullus Aufidius_ will app well in these wars, his great opposer, _Coriolan_ being now in no request of his country.

_Vol._ He cannot choose. I am most fortunate thus accidentally to encounter you: you had ended my business, and I will merrily accompany you home.

_Rom._ I shall, between this and supper, I most strange things from _Rome_; all tend to the good of their adversaries. Have you army ready, say you?

_Vol._ A most royal one: the centurions a irregular, a number distinctly billeted, already in entertainment, and to be on foot at an hour warning.

_Rom._ I am joyful to hear of their rash-ness, and am the man, I think, that shall them in present action. So, sir, heartily we met, and most glad of your company.

_Vol._ You take my part from me, sir; I have the most cause to be glad of yours.

_Rom._ Well, let us go together. _Exit._
Enter Coriolanus.

into Coriolanus, in mean apparel, disguised and muffled.

or. A goodly city is this Antium. City, I that made thy widows: many an heir these fair edifices 'fore my wars. 'e I heard groan and drop: then know me not, t that thy wives with spits and boys with stones my battle slay me.

Enter a Citizen.

Save you, sir.

it. And you.

or. Direct me, if it be your will, are great Aufidius lies. Is he in Antium?
't. He is, and feasts the nobles of the state this house this night.

or. Which is his house, beseech you? 10

it. This, here before you.

or. Thank you, sir. Farewell. Exit Citizen.

orld! thy slippery turns. Friends now fast sworn, the double bosoms seem to wear one heart, hour's, whose bed, whose meal, and exercise, still together, who twin, as 'twere, in love, marial, shall within this hour, a dissension of a doit, break out, tender enmity: so, fallest foes, yet passions and whose plots have broke their sleep. ake the one the other, by some chance, 20 a trick not worth an egg, shall grow dear friends interjoin their issues. So with me: thr-place hate I, and my loves upon enemy town. I'll enter: if he slay me, go, fair justice; if he give me way, to his country service. Exit.

Enter Coriolanus.

or. A goodly house; the feast smells well; but I hear not like a guest.

Re-enter the First Servant.

or. What would you have, friend? once are you? Here's no place for you: go to the door. Exit.

or. I have deserv'd no better entertainment, eing Coriolanus.

Re-enter Second Servant.

cond Serv. Whence are you, sir? Has the er his eyes in his head, that he gives entrance to his companions? Pray, get you out.

Second Serv. Are you so brave? I'll have you talked with anon.

Exit.

Enter a Third Servant. Re-enter the First.

Third Serv. What fellow's this?

First Serv. A strange one as ever I looked on: I cannot get him out o' the house: prithee, call my master to him.

Third Serv. What have you to do here, fellow? Pray you, avoid the house.

Cor. Let me but stand; I will not hurt your hearth.

Third Serv. What are you?

Cor. A gentleman.

Third Serv. A marvellous poor one.

Cor. True, so I am.

Third Serv. Pray you, poor gentleman, take up some other station here; there's no place for you; pray you, avoid: come.

Cor. Follow your function; go, and batten on cold bits. Pushes him away.

Third Serv. What! will you not! Prithee, tell my master what a strange guest he has here.

First Serv. And I shall.

Third Serv. Where dwellest thou?

Cor. Under the canopy.

Third Serv. Under the canopy!

Cor. Ay.

Third Serv. Where's that?

Cor. 'Tis the city of kites and crows.

Third Serv. 'Tis the city of kites and crows! What an ass it is! Then thou dwellest with daws too?

Cor. No; I serve not thy master.

Third Serv. How, sir! Do you meddle with my master?

Cor. Ay; 'tis an honester service than to meddle with thy mistress. Thou prat'st, and prat'st: serve with thy trencher. Hence! Beats him away.

Enter Aufidius and the First Servant.

Auf. Where is this fellow?

First Serv. Here, sir: I'd have beaten him like a dog, but for disturbing the lords within.

Auf. Whence comest thou? what would'st thou? thy name?

Why speak'st not? speak, man: what's thy name?

Cor. Unmuffling. If, Tullus, not yet thou know'st me, and, seeing me, dost not think me for the man I am, necessity Commands me name myself.

Auf. What is thy name?

Servants retire.

Cor. A name unmusical to the Volscians' ears, and harsh in sound to thine.

Auf. Say, what's thy name? Thou hast a grim appearance, and thy face bears a command in't; though thy tackle's torn, thou show'st a noble vessel. What's thy name?

Cor. Prepare thy brow to frown. Know'st thou me yet?

Auf. I know thee not. Thy name?
Cor. My name is Caius Marcius, who hath done
To thee particularly, and to all the Volscs,
Great hurt and mischief; thereto witness may
My surname, Coriolanus: the painful service,
The extreme dangers, and the drops of blood
Shed for my thankless country, are requited
But with that surname; a good memory,
And witness of the malice and displeasure
Which thou should'st bear me: only that name remains;

The cruelty and envy of the people,
Permitted by our dastard nobles, who
Have all forsook me, hath devour'd the rest;
And suffer'd me by the voice of slaves to be Whoop'd out of Rome. Now this extremity
Hath brought me to thy hearth; not out of hope, Mistake me not, to save my life; for if
I had fear'd death, of all the men t' the world
I would have 'voided thee; but in mere spite,
To be full quit of those my banishers,
Stand I before thee here. Then if thou hast
A heart of wreak in thee, that will revenge
Thine own particular wrongs and stop those mains
Of shame seen through thy country, speed thee straight,
And make my misery serve thy turn: so use it,
That my revengeful services may prove
As benefits to thee, for I will fight Against my canker'd country with the spleen
Of all the under fiends. But if so be Thou dar'st not this, and that to prove more fortunes
Thou'r'rt tir'd, then, in a word, I also am
Longer to live most weary, and present
My throat to thee and to thy ancient malice;
Which not to cut would show thee but a fool,
Since I have ever follow'd thee with hate,
Drawn tuns of blood out of thy country's breast,
And cannot live but to thy shame, unless
It be to do thee service.

Auf. O Marcius, Marcius!

Each word thou hast spoke hath weeded from
my heart
A root of ancient envy. If Jupiter
Should from yond cloud speak divine things,
And say 'Tis true,' I'd not believe them more Than thee, all noble Marcius. Let me twine Mine arms about that body, where against
My grained ash an hundred times hath broke,
And scarr'd the moon with splinters: here I clip
The anvil of my sword, and do contest
As hotly and as nobly with thy love
As ever in ambitions strength I did Contend against thy valour. Know thou first,
I lov'd the maid I married; never man
Sigh'd truer breath; but that I see thee here,
Thou noble thing! more dances my rapt heart
Than when I first my wedded mistress saw Bestride my threshold. Why, thou Mars! I tell thee,
We have a power on foot; and I had purpose
Once more to hew thy target from thy brow,
Or lose mine arm for't. Thou hast beat me out
Twelve several times, and I have nightly since Dreamt of encounters 'twixt thyself and me;
We have been down together in my sleep,

Unbuckling helms, listing each other's throes,
And wak'd half dead with nothing. Woe
Marcius,
Had we no quarrel else to Rome, but that
Thou art thence banish'd, we would muster
From twelve to seventy, and pouring war
Into the bowls of ungrateful Rome,
Like a bold flood o'er-bear. O! come; go
And take our friendly senators by the hand.
Who now are here, taking their leaves of me,
Who am prepar'd against your territories,
Though not for Rome itself.

Cor. You bless me, go.

Auf. Therefore, most absolute sir, if it will have
The leading of thine own revenge, take
The one half of my commission; and set do
As best thou art experience'd, since thou know Thy country's strength and weakness, thine own ways;
Whether to knock against the gates of Rom
Or rudely visit them in parts remote,
To fright them, ere destroy. But come in:
Let me commend thee first to those that shal
Say yea to thy desires. A thousand welcome
And more a friend than e'er an enemy;
Yet, Marcius, that was much. Your ha:
most welcome!

Exeunt CORIOLANUS and AUFIDUS.

First Serv. Here's a strange alteration!

Second Serv. By my hand, I had thought have strucken him with a cudgel; and yet mind gave me his clothes made a false rep
of him.

First Serv. What an arm he has! He turn me about with his finger and his thumb, as would set up a top.

Second Serv. Nay, I knew by his face t
there was something in him: he had, sir, a k of face, methought,—I cannot tell how to be
it.

First Serv. He had so; looking as it were would I were hanged but I thought there more in him than I could think.

Second Serv. So did I, I'll be sworn. H simply the rarest man i' the world.

First Serv. I think he is; but a greater sol than he you wot on.

Second Serv. Who? my master!

First Serv. Nay, it's no matter for that.

Second Serv. Worth six on him.

First Serv. Nay, not so neither; but I take to be the greater soldier.

Second Serv. Faith, look you, one cannot how to say that: for the defence of a town general is excellent.

First Serv. Ay, and for an assault too.

Re-enter Third Serv'ngman.

Third Serv. O slaves! I can tell you new news, you rascals.

First and Second Serv. What, what, who let's partake.

Third Serv. I would not be a Roman, of ations; I had as lieve be a condemned man
First and Second Serv. Wherefore? wheref
Third Serv. Why, he's here he that was wont thwack our general, Caius Marcius.

First Serv. Why do you say 'thwack a general'?
Enter Menenius. Is this Menenius? 10

Sic. 'Tis he, 'tis he. O! he is grown most kind Of late. Hail, sir! 20

Men. Hail to you both! Sic. Your Coriolanus is not much miss'd But with his friends: the commonwealth doth stand, And so would do, were he more angry at it. Men. All's well; and might have been much better, if He could have temporiz'd. 30

Enter three or four Citizens.

Citizens. The gods preserve you both! Sic. Good den, our neighbours. 20

Bru. Good den to you all, good den to you all. First Cit. Ourselves, our wives, and children, on our knees, Are bound to pray for you both. Sic. Live, and thrive! 30

Bru. Farewell, kind neighbours: we wish'd Coriolanus Had lov'd you as we did. Sic. Now the gods keep you! 40

Sic. Enter Citizens. Sic. This is a happier and more comely time Than when these fellows ran about the streets Crying confusion.

Bru. Caius Marcius was A worthy officer i' the war; but insolent, O'ercome with pride, ambitious past all thinking, Self-loving,— Sic. And affecting one sole throne, Without assistance. 50

Men. I think not so. Sic. We should by this, to all our lamentation, If he had gone forth consul, found it so. Bru. The gods have well prevented it, and Rome Sits safe and still without him.

Enter an Edile.

Ad. Worthy tribunes, There is a slave, whom we have put in prison. Reports, the Volscs with two several powers Are enter'd in the Roman territories, And with the deepest malice of the war Destroy what lies before 'em. 60

Men. 'Tis Aufidius, Who, hearing of our Marcius' banishment, Thrusts forth his horns again into the world; Which were insheld when Marcius stood for Rome, And durst not once peep out. Sic. Come, what talk you of Marcius?
Go see this rumourer whipp'd. It cannot be!
The Volsces dare break with us.

Men. Cannot be! We have record that very well it can.
And three examples of the like have been Within my age. But reason with the fellow,
Before you punish him, where he heard this,
Lest you shall chance to whip your information,
And beat the messenger who bids beware
Of what is to be dreaded.

Sic. I know this cannot be.

Bru. Not possible.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The nobles in great earnestness are going
All to the senate-house: some news is come
That turns their countenances.

Sic. 'Tis this slave. Go whip him 'fore the people's eyes: his raising;
Nothing but his report.

Mess. Yes, worthy sir, the slave's report is seconded; and more,
More fearful, is deliver'd.

Sic. What more fearful?

Mess. It is spoke freely out of many mouths,
How probable I do not know, that Marcus,
Join'd with Ausidius, leads a power 'gainst Rome,
And vows revenge as spacious as between
The young'st and oldest thing.

Sic. This is most likely! Good Marcus home again.

Men. This is unlikely:
He and Ausidius can no more alone
Than violentest contrariety.

Enter another Messenger.

Mess. You are sent for to the senate:
A fearful army, led by Caius Marcius,
Associated with Ausidius, rages
Upon our territories; and have already O'erborne their way, consum'd with fire, and took What lay before them.

Enter Cominius.

Com. O! you have made good work.

Men. What news? what news?

Com. You have help to ravish your own daughters, and
To melt the city leads upon your pates,
To see your wives dishonour'd to your noses.—

Men. What's the news? what's the news?

Com. Your temples burned in their cement,
And your franchises, whereon you stood, confin'd
Into an auger's bore.

Men. Pray now, your news!
You have made fair work, I fear me. Pray, your news?

If Marcius should be join'd with Volscians,—

Com. He is their god: he leads them like a thing
Made by some other deity than Nature,
That shapes man better; and they follow him,
Against us brats, with no less confidence

Than boys pursuing summer butterflies,
Or butchers killing flies.

Men. You have made good we
You, and your apron-men; you that stood Upon the voice of occupation and
The breath of garlic-eaters!

Com. He will shake Your Rome about your ears.

Men. As Hercules
Did shake down mellow fruit. You have in

Bru. But is this true, sir?

Com. Ay; and you'll look
Before you find it other. All the regions
Do smilingly revolt; and who resists
Are mock'd for valiant ignorance,
And perish constant fools. Who is 't can blast
Your enemies, and his, find something in him

Men. We are all undone unless
The noble man have mercy.

Com. Who shall ask
The tribunes cannot do 't for shame; the people
Deserve such pity of him as the wolf

Does of the shepherds: for his best friend, they Should say, 'Be good to Rome,' they chuse him even

As those should do that had deserv'd his hate
And therein shew'd like enemies.

Men. 'Tis true
If he were putting to my house the brand
That should consume it, I have not the face
To say, 'Beseech you, cease.' You have many fair hands,
You and your crafts! you have crafted fair

Com. You have brought
A trembling upon Rome, such as was never
So incapable of help.

Sic. Bru. Say not we brought it?

Men. How! Was it we? We lov'd him; I like beasts
And cowardly nobles, gave way unto yon collectors,
Who did hoot him out o' the city.

Com. But I fe
They'll roar him in again. Tullius Ausidius,
The second name of men, obeys his points
As if he were his officer: desperation
Is all the policy, strength, and defence,
That Rome can make against them.

Enter a troop of Citizens.

Men. Here come the clast
And is Ausidius with him? You are they
That made the air unwholesome, when you o
Your stinking greasy caps in hooting at Coriolanus' exile. Now he's coming;
And not a hair upon a soldier's head
Which will not prove a whip: as many coxcombs
As you throw caps up will he tumble down,
And pay you for your voices. 'Tis no matter
If he could burn us all into one coal,
We have deserv'd it.

Citizens. Faith, we hear fearful news.

First Cit. For mine own part
When I said banish him, I said 'twas pity.

Second Cit. And so did I.

Third Cit. And so did I; and, to say the true

ACT VI.

CORIOLANUS.

Will be as rash in the repeal as hasty
To expel him thence. I think he'll be to Rome
As is the esprey to the fish, who takes it
By sovereignty of nature. First he was A noble servant to them, but he could not Carry his honours even; whether 'twas pride,
Which out of daily fortune ever taints
The happy man; whether defect of judgment,
To fail in the disposing of those chances
Which he was lord of; or whether nature,
Not to be other than one thing, not moving
From the casque to the cushion, but commanding peace
Even with the same austerity and garb
As he control'd the war; but one of these,
As he hath spices of them all, not all,
For I dare so far free him, made him fear'd,
So hated, and so banish'd: but he has a merit
To choke it in the utterance. So our virtues
Lie in the interpretation of the time;
And power, unio its itself commendable,
Hath not a tomb so evident as a chair
To extol what it hath done.
One fire drives out one fire; one nail, one nail;
Rights by rights falter, strengths by strengths do fail.
Come, let's away. When, Caius, Rome is thine,
Thou art poor'st of all; then shortly art thou mine.

Exeunt.

ONE VII.—A Camp at a small distance from Rome.

Enter AUPIDIIUS and his Lieutenant.

f. Do they still fly to the Roman?
 w. I do not know what witchraft's in aim, but soldiers use him as the grace fore meat, talk at table, and their thanks at end;
you are dark'd in this action, sir, by your own.

f. I cannot help it now, as by using means, I lance the foot of design. He bears himself more proudlier, to my person, than I thought he would;
first I did embrace him; yet his nature
's no changeling, and I must excuse

w. Yet I wish, sir, for your particular, you had not borne the action of yourself, or else we had left it solely.

f. I understand thee well; and be thou sure, he shall come to his account, he knows not
I can urge against him. Although it seems, so he thinks, and is no less apparent
a vulgar eye, that he bears all things fairly, shows good husbandry for the Volscian state,
's dragon-like, and does achieve as soon raw his sword; yet he hath left undone which shall break his neck or hazard mine, or we come to our account.

w. Sir, I beseech you, think you he'll carry Rome?

f. All places yield to him ere he sits down:
the nobility of Rome are his;
and senators and patricians love him too;
tribunes are no soldiers; and their people

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Rome. A public Place.

Enter MENENIUS, COMINUS, SICINIUS, BRUTUS,
and Others.

Men. No, I 'll not go: you hear what he hath said
Which was sometime his general; who lov'd him
In a most dear particular. He call'd me father:
But what o' that? Go, you that banish'd him;
A mile before his tent fall down, and knee
The way into his mercy. Nay, if he coy'd
To hear Cominius speak, I'll keep at home.

Com. He would not seem to know me.

Men. Do you hear?

Com. Yet one time he did call me by my name.

I urg'd our old acquaintance, and the drops
That we have bled together. Coriolanus
Would not answer to; forbad all names;
He was a kind of nothing, titleless,
Till he had forg'd himself a name o' the fire
Of burning Rome.

Men. Why, so: you have made good work!
A pair of tribunes that have rack'd for Rome,
To make coals cheap: a noble memory!

Com. I minded him how royal 'twas to pardon
When it was less expected: he replied,
It was a bare petition of a state
To one whom they had punish'd

Men. Very well.

Com. Could he say less?

Com. I offer'd to awaken his regard For's private friends: his answer to me was,
He could not stay to pick them in a pile
Of noisome musty chalk: he said 'twas folly
For one poor grain or two to leave unburnt,
And still to nose the offence.
Men. For one poor grain or two!
I am one of those: his mother, wife, his child,
And this brave fellow too, we are the grains: 30
You are the musty chaff, and you are smelt
Above the moon. We must be burnt for you.
Sic. Nay, pray, be patient: if you refuse your aid
In this so never-needed help, yet do not Upbraid's with our distress. But, sure, if you Would be your country's pleader, your good tongue,
More than the instant army we can make,
Might stop our countryman.
Men. No; I'll not meddle.
Sic. Pray you, go to him.
Men. What should I do? 39
Bru. Only make trial what your love can do
For Rome, towards Marcius.
Men. Well; and say that Marcius
Return me, as Cominius is return'd,
Unheard; what then?
But as a discontented friend, grief-shot
With his unkindness! say 'tis so?
Sic. Yet your good will Must have that thanks from Rome, after the measure
As you intended well.
Men. I'll undertake it:
I think he'll hear me. Yet, to bite his lip,
And hum at good Cominius, much unhearts me.
He was not taken well; he had not din'd: 50
The veins unfil'd, our blood is cold, and then
We pout upon the morning; are unapt
To give or to forgive; but when we have stuff'd
These pipes and these conveyances of our blood
With wine and feeding, we have suppler souls
Than in our priest-like fasts: therefore, I'll watch him.
Till he be dieted to my request,
And then I'll set upon him.
Bru. You know the very road into his kindness,
And cannot lose your way.
Men. Good faith, I'll prove him, 60
Speed how it will. I shall ere long have knowledge
Sic. Not?
Com. I tell you he does sit in gold, his eye
Red as 'twould burn Rome, and his injury
The gazer to his pity. I kneel'd before him;
'Twas very faintly he said 'Rise'; dismiss'd me
Thus, with his speechless hand: what he would do,
He sent in writing after me; what he would not,
Bound with an oath to yield to his conditions:
So that all hope is vain 70
Unless his noble mother and his wife,
Who, as I hear, mean to solicit him
For mercy to his country. Therefore let's hence,
And with our fair entreaties haste them on.

Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Volscian Camp before Rome.
The Guards at their stations.
Enter to them MENENIUS.
First Guard. Stay! Whence are you?
Second Guard. Stand! and go back.
Men. You guard like men; 'tis well; but, by your leave,
I am an officer of state, and come
To speak with Coriolanus.
First Guard. From whence?
Men. From Rome.
First Guard. You may not pass; you must Turn: our general
Will no more hear from thence.
Second Guard. You'll see your Rome embroiled
With fire before
You'll speak with Coriolanus.
Men. Good my friend,
If you have heard your general talk of Rome
And of his friends there, it is lots to blanks.
My name hath touch'd your ears: it is Menenius.
First Guard. Be it so; go back: the virtue
Of your name
Is not here passable.
Men. I tell thee, fellow.
Thy general is my lover: I have been
The book of his good acts, whence men read
His fame unparalleled, haply amplified;
For I have ever verified my friends,
Of whom he's chief, with all the size that we Would without lapsing suffer: nay, somet
Like to a bowl upon a subtle ground,
I have tumbled past the throw, and in his path
Have almost stamp'd the leasing. Therel.
Fellow,
I must have leave to pass.
First Guard. Faith, sir, if you had told many lies in his behalf as you have uttered we in your own, you should not pass here; though it were as virtuous to lie as to change. Therefore go back.
Men. Prithhee, fellow, remember my name, Menenius, always factionary on the party of the general.
Second Guard. Howsoever you have been lair, as you say you have, I am one that, tel true under him, must say you cannot p
Therefore go back.
Men. Has he dined, canst thou tell? for would not speak with him till after dinner.
First Guard. You are a Roman, are you?
Men. I am, as thy general is.
First Guard. Then you should hate Rome he does. Can you, when you have pushed your gates the very defender of them, and a violent popular ignorance, given your en your shield, think to front his revenges with easy groans of old women, the virginal palm your daughters, or with the palsied interces of such a decayed dotant as you seem to Can you think to blow out the intended fire the city is ready to flame in with such weak br as this? No, you are deceived; therefore, be to Rome, and prepare for your execution:
are condemned, our general has sworn you of reprieve and pardon.
Men. Sirrah, if thy captain knew I were he would use me with estimation.
Second Guard. Come, my captain knows not.
Men. I mean thy general.
First Guard. My general cares not for y back, I say: go, lest I let forth your half-blood; back; that's the utmost of y having: back.
Men. Nay, but, fellow, fellow,— Enter Coriolanus and Aufidius.

v. What's the matter?

Cor. Now, you companion, I'll say an errand: you shall know now that I am in estimation; you shall perceive that a Jack guardant not office from me to my son Coriolanus; guess, by my entertainment with him, if thou dost not the state of hanging, or of some more long in spectroctophilia, and crueler suffering; behold now present, and swoon what's to come upon thee. To Coriolanus, glorious gods sit in hourly synod about thy peculiar prosperity, and love thee no worse than thy old father Menenius does! O my son! son! thou art preparing fire for us; look, here's water to quench it. I was hardly led to come to thee; but being assured none myself could move thee, I have been blown of your gates with sighs, and conjure thee from Arden Rome, and thy petitionary country. The gods assure thy wrath, and the drags of it upon this varlet here; this, like a block, hath denied my access to thee.

v. Away!

Cor. How! away!

w. Wife mother, child, I know not. My affairs servanted to others: though I owe revenge properly, my remission lies Volscian breasts. That we have been familiar, rate forgetfulness shall poison, rather a pity note how much. Therefore, be gone: ears against your suits are stronger than gates against my force. Yet, for I love thee, this along; I write it for thy sake, would have sent it. Another word, Menenius, I not hear thee speak. This man, Aufidius, my belov'd in Rome: yet thou behold'st! You keep a constant temper.

Gives a paper.

Exeunt Coriolanus and Aufidius.

1st Guard. Now, sir, is your name Menenius?

cond Guard. 'Tis a spell, you see, of much er. You know the way home again?

1st Guard. Do you hear how we are shent keeping your greatness back?

cond Guard. What cause, do you think, I to swoon?

en. I neither care for the world, nor your al: for such things as you, I can scarce k there's any, ye're so slight. He that hath ill to die by himself fears it not from another, your general do his worst. For you, be that are, long; and your misery increase with age! I say to you, as I was said to, Away!

Exit.

1st Guard. A noble fellow, I warrant him.

cond Guard. The worthy fellows is our: the rock, the oak not to be wind-shaken.

Exeunt.

Scene III.—The Tent of Coriolanus.

Enter Coriolanus, Aufidius, and Others.

v. We will before the walls of Rome tomorrow down our host. My partner in this action,

You must report to the Volscian lords, how plainly I have borne this business.

Auf. Only their ends You have respected; stopp'd your ears against The general suit of Rome; never admitted A private whisper, no, not with such friends That thought them sure of you.

Cor. This last old man, Whom with a crack'd heart I have sent to Rome, Lov'd me above the measure of a father;

Nay, godded me indeed. Their latest refuge Was to send him; for whose old love I have, Though I show'd sourly to him, once more offer'd The first conditions, which they did refuse, And cannot now accept, to grace him only That thought he could do more. A very little I have yielded to; fresh embassies, and suits, Nor from the state, nor private friends, hereafter Will I lend ear to. Shout within.

Ha! what shout is this?

Shall I be tempted to infringe my vow In the same time 'tis made? I will not.

Enter, in mourning habits, Virgilia, Volumnia, leading young Marcius, Valeria, and Attendants.

My wife comes foremost; then the honour'd mould Wherein this trunk was fram'd, and in her hand The grandchild to her blood. But out, affliction! All bond and privilege of nature, break! Let it be virtuous to be obstatute. What is that court'sy worth? or those doves' eyes, Which can make gods forsworn? I melt, and am not Of stronger earth than others. My mother bows; As if Olympus to a molehill should In supplication nod; and my young boy Hath an aspect of intercession. which Great nature cries, 'Deny not.' Let the Volscs Plough Rome, and harrow Italy; I'll never Be such a gosling to obey instinct, but stand, As if a man were author of himself And knew no other kin.

Vir. My lord and husband!

Cor. These eyes are not the same I wore in Rome.

Vir. The sorrow that delivers us thus chang'd Makes you think so.

Cor. Like a dull actor now, I have forgot my part, and I am out, Even to a full disgrace. Best of my flesh, Forgive my tyranny; but do not say For that 'Forgive our Romans.' O! a kiss Long as my exile, sweet as my revenge. Now, by the jealous queen of heaven, that kiss I carried from thee, dear, and my true lip Hath virgin'd it e'er since. You gods! I prate, And the most noble mother of the world Leave unsalted. Sink, my knee, I the earth; Kneels.

Of thy deep duty more impression show Than that of common sons.

Vol. O! stand up bless'd; Whilst, with no softer cushion than the flint, I kneel before thee, and unproperly Show duty, as mistaken all this while Between the child and parent. Kneels.

Cor. What is this?
Your knees to me! to your corrected son!
Then let the pebbles on the hungry beach
Fillip the stars; then let the mutinous winds
Strike the proud cedars against the fiery sun, Murd ring impossibility, to make
What cannot be, slight work.

Vol. Thou art my warrior; I holp to frame thee. Do you know this lady?
Cor. The noble sister of Publlica.

Vol. This is a poor epitome of yours,
Which by the interpretation of full time
May show like all yourself.

Cor. The god of soldiers, 79
With the consent of supreme Jove, inform Thy thoughts with nobleness; that thou may'st prove
To shame unvulnerable, and stick i' the wars
Like a great sea-mark, standing every flaw,
And saving those that eye thee!

Vol. Your knee, sirrah.
Cor. That's my brave boy!
Vol. Even he, your wife, this lady, and myself,
Are suitors to you.
Cor.

Vol. I beseech you, peace;
Or, if you'd ask, remember this before:
The thing I have forsworn to grant may never
Be held by you denials. Do not bid me 81
Dismiss my soldiers, or capitulate
Again with Rome's mechanics: tell me not Wherein I seem unnatural: desire not
To alloy my rages and revenges with Your colder reasons.

Vol. O! no more, no more;
You have said you will not grant us any thing;
For we have nothing else to ask but that
Which you deny already: yet we will ask;
That, if you fail in our request, the blame
May hang upon your hardness. Therefore, hear us.

Cor. Aufidius, and you Volscce, mark; for we'll Hear nought from Rome in private. Your request?

Vol. Should we be silent and not speak, our remitment
And state of bodies would bewray what life
We have led since thy exile. Think with thyself
How more unfortunate than all living women Are we come hither: since that thy sight, which should
Make our eyes flow with joy, hearts dance with comforts,
Constrains them weep, and shake with fear and
sorrow;
Making the mother, wife, and child, to see
The son, the husband, and the father, tearing His country's bowels out. And to poor we Thine enmity's most capital: thou barr'st us
Our pravers to the gods, which is a comfort
That all but we enjoy; for how can we, Alas! how can we for our country pray,
Whereto we are bound, together with thy victory,
Whereto we are bound? Alack! or we must lose
The country, our dear nurse, or else thy person,
Our comfort in the country. We must find in An evident calamity, though we had
Our wish, which side should win; for either thou

Must, as a foreign recreant, be led
With manacles through our streets, or else
Triumphantly tread on thy country's ruin,
And bear the palm for having bravely shed
Thy wife and children's blood. For myself, s

Rather to show a noble grace to both parts
Than seek the end of one, thou shalt no soon
March to assault thy country than to tread,
Trust to 't thou shalt not, on thy mother's will
That brought thee to this world.

Viv. Ay, and mi
That brought you forth this boy, to keep your Living to time.

Boy. A' shall not tread on me:
I'll run away till I am bigger, but then I'll fig
Cor. Not of a woman's tenderness to be,
Requires nor child nor woman's face to see.
I have sat too long.

Vol. Nay, go not from us then
If it were so, that our request did tend
To save the Romans, thereby to destroy
The Volscce whom you serve, you might o' demi us,
As poisonous of your honour: no; our suit
Is, that you reconcile them: while the Volse
May say 'This mercy we have show'd';
Romans,
'This we receiv'd'; and each in either side
Give the all-hail to thee, and cry 'Be bless'd For making up this peace!' Thou know great son,
The end of war's uncertain; but this certain
That, if thou conquer Rome, the benefit
Which thou shalt thereby reap is such a man Whose repetition will be dogg'd with curses; Whose chronicle thus writ: 'The man who noble,
But with his last attempt he wip'd it out,
Destroy'd his country, and his name remains
To the ensuing age abhor'd.' Speak to a son!
Thou hast affected the fine strains of honour,
To imitate the graces of the gods;
To tear with thunder the wide cheeks o' the
And yet to charge thy sulphur with a bolt
That should but rive an oak. Why dost thou speak?
Think'st thou it honourable for a noble man
Still to remember wrongs? Daughter, spe
you:
He cares not for your weeping. Speak the
boy:
Perhaps thy childishness will move him more Than can our reasons. There's no man in t world
More bound to his mother; yet here he let prate
Like one i' the stocks. Thou hast never in th
life
Show'd thy dear mother any courtesy;
When she, poor hen! fond of no second brook
Has clock'd thee to the wars, and safely home
Loaden with honour. Say my request's unjust
And spur me back; but if it be not so,
Thou art not honest and the gods will plag thee,
That thou restrain'st from me the duty which mother's part belongs. He turns away:

's surname Coriolanus 'longs more pride to our prayers. Down: an end;
is the last: so we will home to Rome, die among our neighbours. Nay, behold's, boy, that cannot tell what he would have,

reason our petition with more strength thou hast to deny 't. Come, let us go.

then I'll speak a little.

O mother, mother! have you done? Behold! the heavens do

What a victory have we won?

A true one, in my stead, would you have heard

I was mov'd withal.

I dare be sworn you were:
sir, it is no little thing to make eyes to sweat compassion. But, good sir, peace you'll make; advise me: for my part,
not to Rome, I'll back with you; and pray
you, to me in this case. O mother! wife!
I am glad thou hast set thy mercy and thy honour
in thee: out of that I'll work for a former fortune.

Scene IV.—Rome. A public Place.

Enter Menenius and Sicinib.

See you yond coign o' the Capitol, yond stone?

Why, what of that?

If it be possible for you to displace it your little finger, there is some hope the of Rome, especially his mother, may all with him. But I say there is no hope, our throats are sentenced and stay upon ion.

Is it possible that so short a time can the condition of a man?

There is difference between a grub and a butterfly; yet your butterfly was a grub. This Marcius is grown from man to dragon: he has wings; he's more than a creeping thing.

He loved his mother dearly.

Men. So did he me; and he no more remembers his mother now than an eight-year-old horse. The tarts of his face sour ripe grapes: when he walks, he moves like an engine, and the ground shrinks before his treading: he is able to pierce a corset with his eye; talks like a knell, and his hum is a battery. He sits in his state, as a thing made for Alexander.
What he bids be done is finished with his bidding. He wants nothing of a god but everty and a heaven to throne in.

Sic. Yes, mercy, if you report him truly.

Men. I paint him in the character. Mark what mercy his mother shall bring from him:
there is no more mercy in him than there is milk in a male tiger; that shall our poor city find: and all this is long of you.

Sic. The gods be good unto us!

Men. No, in such a case the gods will not be good unto us. When we banished him, we respected not them: and, he returning to break our necks, they respect not us.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Sir, if you'd save your life, fly to your

The plebeians have got your fellow-tribune,
And hale him up and down; all swearing, if
The Roman ladies bring not comfort home,
They'll give him death by inches.

Enter another Messenger.

Sic. What's the news?

Mess. Good news, good news! the ladies have prevail'd,
The Volscians are dislodg'd, and Marcius gone.
A merrier day did never yet greet Rome,
No, not the expulsion of the Tarquins.

Sic. Friend,
Art thou certain this is true? is it most certain?

Mess. As certain as I know the sun is fire:
Where have you lurd that you make doubt of it?
Ne'er through an arch so hurried the blown tide,
As the recomforted through the gates. Why,
hark you!

Trumpets and hautboys sounded, and drums beaten, all together. Shouting also within.
The trumpets, sackbutts, psalteries, and fifes,
Tabors, and cymbals, and the shouting Romans,
Make the sun dance. Hark you! A shout within.

Men. This is good news:

I will go meet the ladies. This Volumnia
Is worth of consuls, senators, patricians,
A city full; of tribunes, such as you,
A sea and land full. You have pray'd well to-day:
This morning for ten thousand of your throats
I'd not have given a doit. Hark! how they joy.

Music still, with shouts.

Sic. First, the gods bless you for your tidings; next,

Accept my thankfulness.

Mess. Sir, we have all

Great cause to give great thanks.

Sic. They are near the city?

Mess. Almost at point to enter.
Coriolanus.

Sic.  We will meet them,
And help the joy.  Going.

Enter the Ladies, accompanied by Senators, Patricians, and People.  They pass over the stage.

First Sen. Behold our patrones, the life of Rome!
Call all your tribes together, praise the gods, And make triumphant fires; strew flowers before them: Unshout the noise that banish'd Marcus; 70 Repeat him with the welcome of his mother; Cry 'Welcome, ladies, welcome!'
All.  Welcome, ladies, Welcome!  A flourish with drums and trumpets. Exeunt.

Scene V.—Antium.  A public Place.

Enter Tullus Aufidius, with Attendants.

Auf.  Go tells the lords o' the city I am here: Deliver them this paper: having read it, Bid them repair to the market-place; where I, Even in theirs and in the commons' ears, Will vouch the truth of it.  Him I accuse The city ports by this hath enter'd, and Intends to appear before the people, hoping To purge himself with words: dispatch.

Exeunt Attendants.

Enter three or four Conspirators of Aufidius's faction.

Most welcome!  First Con.  How is it with our general?  Even so.  As with a man by his own alms empfoison'd, 10 And with his charity slain.
Second Con.  Most noble sir, If you do hold the same intent wherein You wish'd us parties, we'll deliver you Of your great danger.
Auf.  Sir, I cannot tell:
We must proceed as we do find the people.
Third Con.  The people will remain uncertain whilst 'Twixt you there's difference; but the fall of either Makes the survivor heir of all.
Auf.  I know it; And my pretext to strike at him admits A good construction.  I rais'd him, and I pawn'd Mine honour for his truth: who being so heighten'd, 21 He water'd his new plants with dews of flattery, Seducing so my friends; and, to this end, He bow'd his nature, never known before But to be rough, unwavayable, and free.
Third Con.  Sir, his stoutness When he did stand for consul, which he lost By lack of stooping;—
Auf.  That I would have spoke of: Being banish'd for t, he came unto my hearth; Presented to my knife his throat: I took him; Made him joint-servant with me; gave him way In all his own desires; nay, let him choose 32 Out of my files, his projects to accomplish, My best and freshest men; serv'd his designments In mine own person; holp to reap the fame Which he did end all his; and took some part To do myself this wrong: till, at the last, I seem'd his follower, not partner, and He wagg'd me with his countenance, as if I had been mercenary.

First Con.  So he did, my lord The army marvell'd at it; and, in the last, When he had carried Rome, and that we lost For no less spill than glory,—

Auf.  There was For which my sinews shall be stretch'd upon A few drops of women's rheum, which as As cheap as lies, he sold the blood and hate Of our great action: therefore shall he die, And I'll renew me in his fall.  But, hark! Drums and trumpets sound, with shouts of the Pe.

First Con.  Your native town you enter'd a post; And had no welcomes home; but he return'd Splitting the air with noise.
Second Con.  And patient to Whose children he hath slain, their base the fear With giving him glory.
Third Con.  Therefore, at your vant Ere he express himself, or move the people With what he would say, let him feel your wish We will second.  When he lies along, After your way his tale pronounc'd shall be His reasons with his body.
Auf.  Say no more: Here come the lords.

Enter the Lords of the city.

Lords.  You are most welcome home.
Auf.  I have not deserv'd But, worthy lords, have you with heed peru What I have written to you?  Lords.  We have.
First Lord.  And grieve to hear What faults he made before the last, I think Might have found easy fines; but there to re Where he was to begin, and give away The benefit of our levies, answering us With our own charge, making a treaty when There was a yielding, this admits no excuse.
Auf.  He approaches: you shall hear him.

Enter Coriolanus, with drum and colours a crowd of Citizens with him.

Cor.  Hall, lords! I am return'd your soldi No more infected with my country's love Than when I parted hence, but still subsist Under your great command.  You are to know That prosperously I have attempted and With bloody passage led your wars even to The gates of Rome.  Our spoils we have brought home Do more than counterpose a full third part of The charges of the action.  We have made peace With no less honour to the Antilates Than shame to the Romans; and we have deliver, Subscribed by the consuls and patricians, Together with the seal o' the senate, what We have compounded on.
Auf.  Read it not, noble lord But tell the traitor in the highest degree He hath abus'd your powers.
Tr. Traitor! How now!

Ay. Ay, traitor, Marcius!

Marcius!

Marcius! Ay, Marcius, Caius Marcius. Dost thou think grace thee with that robbery, thy stol'n name Coriolius? heads and lords o' the state, peradventure 90 has betray'd your business, and given up, certain drops of salt, your city Rome, 'tis your city,' to his wife and mother; taking his oath and resolution like rist of rotten silk, never admitting fasel o' the war, but at his nurse's tears whom'd and roar'd away your victory, it pages blush'd at him, and men of heart youd wondering each at other.

Hear'st thou, Mars?

Name not the god, thou boy of tears.

No more. Measureless liar, thou hast made my heart great for what contains it. Boy! O slave! lon me, lords, 'tis the first time that ever us forc'd to scold. Your judgments, my grave lords, give this cur the lie: and his own notion, bears my stripes impress'd upon him; that bear my beating to his grave, shall join hrust the lie unto him.

Peace, both, and hear me speak. Cut me to pieces, Volscics: men and lads, all your edges on me. Boy! False hound! have writ your annals true, 'tis there, us, like an eagle in a dove-cote, I ter'd your Volscians in Corioli: I did it. Boy!

Why, noble lords, you be put in mind of his blind fortune, sh was your shame, by this unholy braggart, your own eyes and ears!

Let him die for 't. The People. Tear him to pieces.—Do it only.—He killed my son.—My daughter,—killed my cousin Marcus.—He killed my er.

Second Lord. Peace, ho! no outrage: peace! The man is noble and his fame folds in This orb o' the earth. His last offences to us Shall have judicious hearing. Stand, Aufidius, And trouble not the peace.

O! that I had him, With six Aufidiuses, or more, his tribe, To use my lawful sword.

Insolent villain! Aufidius and the Conspirators draw, and kill CORIOLANUS, who falls: Aufidius stands on his body.

Hold, hold, hold, hold! My noble masters, hear me speak.

First Lord. O Tullius! Second Lord. Thou hast done a deed whereat valour will weep.

Third Lord. Tread not upon him. Masters all, be quiet. Put up your swords. My lords, when you shall know, as in this rage, Provok'd by him, you cannot, the great danger Which this man's life did owe you, you'll rejoice That he is thus cut off. Please it your honours To call me to your senate, I'll deliver Myself your loyal servant, or endure Your heaviest censure.

First Lord. Bear from hence his body; And mourn you for him. Let him be regarded As the most noble corse that ever herald Did follow to his urn.

Second Lord. His own impatience Takes from Aufidius a great part of blame. Let's make the best of it.

My rage is gone, And I am struck with sorrow. Take him up: Help, three o' the chiefest soldiers; I'll be one. Beat thou the drum, that it speak mournfully; Trail your steel pikes. Though in this city he Hath widow'd and unchilded many a one, Which to this hour bewail the injury, Yet he shall have a noble memory. Assist.

Exeunt, bearing the body of CORIOLANUS. A dead march sounded.
TITUS ANDRONICUS.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

Saturninus, Son to the late Emperor of Rome, and afterwards declared Emperor.
Bassianus, Brother to Saturninus, in love with Lavinia.
Titus Andronicus, a noble Roman, General against the Goths.
Marcus Andronicus, Tribune of the People, and brother to Titus.
Lucius, Quintus, Martius, sons to Titus Andronicus.
Publius, Son to Marcus Andronicus.

Sempronius, Caius, kinsmen to Titus.
Valentine, Emilius, a noble Roman.
Alarbus, Demetrius, sons to Tamora.
Chiron, Aaron, a Moor, beloved by Tamora.
A Captain, Tribune, Messenger, and Clown.
Goths and Romans.
Tamora, Queen of the Goths.
Lavinia, Daughter to Titus Andronicus.
A Nurse, and a black Child.

Senators, Tribunes, Officers, Soldiers, and Attendants.

SCENE—I.—Rome, and the Country near it.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Rome.

The Tomb of the Andronicis appearing. The Tribunes and Senators aloft; and then enter Saturninus and his Followers at one door, and Bassianus and his Followers at the other, with drum and colours.

Sat. Noble patricians, patrons of my right,
Defend the justice of my cause with arms;
And, countrymen, my loving followers,
Plead my successive title with your swords:
I am his first-born son, that was the last
That wore the imperial diadem of Rome;
Then let my father's honours live in me,
Nor wrong mine age with this indignity.

Bass. Romans, friends, followers, favourers of my right.

If ever Bassianus, Caesar's son,
Were gracious in the eyes of royal Rome,
Keep then this passage to the Capitol,
And suffer not dishonour to approach
The imperial seat, to virtue consecrate,
To justice, continence, and nobility;
But let desert in pure election shine,
And, Romans, fight for freedom in your choice.

Enter Marcus Andronicus, aloft, with the crown.

Marc. Princes, that strive by factions and by friends
Ambitiously for rule and empery,

Know that the people of Rome, for whom stand
A special party, have by common voice,
In election for the Roman empery,
Chosen Andronicus, surnamed Pius,
For many good and great deserts to Rome:
A nobler man, a braver warrior,
Lives not this day within the city walls:
He by the senate is accited home
From weary wars against the barbarous Goth,
That, with his sons, a terror to our foes,
Hath yok'd a nation strong, train'd up in arms
Ten years are spent since first he undertook
This cause of Rome, and chastised with arms
Our enemies' pride: five times he hath return'd
Bleeding to Rome, bearing his valiant sons
In coffins from the field;
And now at last, laden with honour's spoils,
Returns the good Andronicus to Rome,
Renowned Titus, flourishing in arms.
Let us entreat, by honour of his name,
Whom worthily you would have now succeed,
And in the Capitol and senate's right,
Whom you pretend to honour and adore,
That you withdraw you and abate your strength,
Dismiss your followers, and, as suitors should Plead your deserts in peace and humbleness.

Sat. How fair the tribune speaks to calm our thoughts!

Bass. Marcus Andronicus, so I do affy
In thy uprightness and integrity,
And so I love and honour thee and thine,
Thy noble brother Titus and his sons,
Nor we disturb'd with prodigies on earth.

Tit. I give him you, the noblest that survives
The eldest son of this distressed queen.

T am. Stay, Roman brethren! Gracious conqueror, Victorious Titus, rue the tears I shed,
A mother's tears in passion for her son:
And if thy sons were ever dear to thee,
O! think my son to be as dear to me.

Sufficeth not that we are brought to Rome,
To beautify thy triumphs and return,
Captive to thee and to thy Roman yoke;
But must my sons be slaught'rd in the streets
For valiant doings in their country's cause?
O! if to fight for king and commonweal
Were piety in thine, it is in these.

Andronicus, stain not thy tomb with blood:
Wilt thou draw near the nature of the gods?
Draw near them then in being merciful;
Sweet mercy is nobility's true badge:
Thrice-noble Titus, spare my first-born son.

Tit. Patient yourself, madam, and pardon me.
These are their brethren, whom you Goths beheld Alive and dead, and for their brethren slain
Religiously they ask a sacrifice:
To this your son is mark'd, and die he must,
To appease their groaning shadows that are gone.

Luc. Away with him! and make a fire straight;
And with our swords, upon a pile of wood,
Let's hew his limbs till they be clean consum'd.

Exeunt LUCIUS, QUINTUS, MARTIUS, and MUTIUS, with ALARBUS.

Tam. O cruel, irreligious piety!
Chi. Was ever Scythia half so barbarous?
Dem. Oppose not Scythia to ambitious Rome.

Alarbus goes to rest, and we survive
To trouble under Titus' threatening look,
Then, madam, stand resolv'd; but hope withal,
The self-same gods that arm'd the Queen of Troy
With opportunity of sharp revenge
Upon the Thracian tyrant in his tent,
May favour Tamora, the Queen of Goths,
When Goths were Goths, and Tamora was queen,
To quit the bloody wrongs upon her foes.

Re-enter LUCIUS, QUINTUS, MARTIUS, and MUTIUS, with their swords bloody.

Luc. See, lord and father, how we have perform'd
Our Roman rites. Alarbus' limbs are lopp'd,
And entrails feed the sacrificing fire,
Whose smoke, like incense, doth perfume the sky.
Rome's most noble heart to inter our brethren,
And with loud laurums welcome them to Rome.

Tit. Let it be so; and let Andronicus
Make this his latest farewell to their souls.

Trumpets sounded, and the coffin laid in the tomb.

In peace and honour rest you here, my sons;
Rome's readiest champions, repose you here in rest,
Secure from worldly chances and mishaps!
Here lurks no treason, here no envy swells,
Here grow no damned drugs, here are no storms,
No noise, but silence and eternal sleep.
In peace and honour rest you here, my sons!

Enter LAVINIA.

Lav. In peace and honour live Lord Titus long;
My noble lord and father, live in fame!
Lo! at this tomb my tributary tears
I render for my brethren's obsequies;
And at thy feet I kneel, with tears of joy
Shed on the earth for thy return to Rome.
O! bless me here with thy victorious hand,
Whose fortune Rome's best citizens applaud.

Tit. Kind Rome, that hast thus lovingly reserv'd
The cordial of mine age to glad my heart!
Lavinia, live; outlive thy father's days,
And fame's eternal date, for virtue's praise!

Enter Marcus Andronicus and Tribunes; re-enter Saturninus, Bassianus, and Others.

Marc. Long live Lord Titus, my beloved brother,
Gracious triumpfer in the eyes of Rome!

Tit. Thanks, gentle tribune, noble brother Marcus.

Marc. And welcome, nephews, from successful wars,
You that survive, and you that sleep in fame!
Fair lords, your fortunes are alike in all,
That in your country's service drew your swords;
But safer triumph is this funeral pomp,
That hath aspir'd to Solon's happiness,
And triumphs over chance in honour's bed.
Titus Andronicus, the people of Rome,
Whose friend in justice thou hast ever been,
Send thee by me, their tribune and their trust,
This palliation of white and spotless hue;
And name thee in election for the empire,
With these our late-deceased emperor's sons:
Be candidatus then, and put it on,
And help to set a head on headless Rome.

Tit. A better head her glorious body fits
Than his that shakes for age and feebleness.
What should I don this robe, and trouble you?
Be chosen with proclamations to-day,
To-morrow yield up rule, resign my life,
And set abroad new business for you all?
Rome, I have been thy soldier forty years,
And led my country's strength successfully,
And buried one-and-twenty valiant sons,
Knighted in field, slain manfully in arms,
In right and service of their noble country.
Give me a staff of honour for mine age,
But not a sceptre to control the world!
Upright he held it, lords, that held it last.

Marc. Titus, thou shalt obtain and ask the empery.

Sat. Proud and ambitious tribune, canst thou tell?

Tit. Patience, Prince Saturninus.

Sat. Romans, do me right:
Patricians, draw your swords, and sheathe them not Till Saturninus be Rome's emperor.
Andronicus, would thou wert shipp'd to hell,
Rather than rob me of the people's hearts!

Luc. Proud Saturnine, interrupter of the good
That noble-minded Titus means to thee!

Tit. Content thee, prince: I will restore to thee
The people's hearts, and wean them from themselves.

Bass. Andronicus, I do not flatter thee,
But honour thee, and will do till I die:
My faction if thou strengthen with thy friends,
I will most thankfull be; and thanks to men
Of noble minds is honourable meed.

Tit. People of Rome, and noble tribunes here,
I ask your voices and your suffrages:
Will you bestow them friendly on Andronicus?
Tribunes. To gratify the good Andronicus
And gratefully his safe return to Rome,
The people will accept whom he admits.

Tit. Tribunes, I thank you; and this I make,
That you create your emperor's eldest son,
Lord Saturnine; whose virtues will, I hope,
Reflect on Rome asTitan's rays on earth,
And ripen justice in this commonweal:
Then, if you will elect by my advice,
Crown him, and say Long live our emperor.

Marc. With voices and applause of every Patrician and plebeian, we create Lord Saturninus Rome's great emperor,
And say Long live our Emperor Saturnine.

Sat. Titus Andronicus, for thy favours done
To us in our election this day,
I give thee thanks in part of thy deserts,
And will with deeds requite thy gentleness:
And for an onset, Titus, to advance
Thy name and honourable family,
Lavinia will I make my empress,
Rome's royal mistress, mistress of my heart,
And in the sacred Pantheon her espouse.
Tell me, Andronicus, doth this motion please thee?

Tit. It doth, my worthy lord; and in this man
I hold me highly honour'd of thy grace:
And here in sight of Rome to Saturnine,
King and commander of our commonweal,
The wide world's emperor, do I consecrate
My sword, my chariot, and my prisoners;
Presents well worthy Rome's imperious lord.
Receive them then, the tribute that I owe,
Mine honour's ensigns humbled at thy feet.

Sat. Thanks, noble Titus, father of my life
How proud I am of thee and of thy gifts
Rome shall record, and when I do forget
The least of these unspeakable desert,
Romans, forget your fealty to me.

Tit. To TAMORA. Now, madam, are you
Soner to an emperor;
To him that, for your honour and your state,
Will use you nobly and your followers.

Sat. A goodly lady, trust me; of the hue
That I would choose, were I to choose anew.
Clear up, fair queen, that cloudy countenance
Though chance of war hath wrought this chan of cheer,
Thou com'st not to be made a scorn in Rome
Princely shall be thy usage every way.
Rest on my word, and let not discontent
Daunt all your hopes: madam, he comforts you
Can make you greater than the Queen of Goth;
Lavinia, you are not displeas'd with this!

Lav. Not I, my lord; sith true nobility
Warrants these words in princely courtesy.

Sat. Thanks, sweet Lavinia. Romans, let us go:
Ransomless here we set our prisoners free:
Proclaim our honours, lords, with trump and drum.

Bass. Lord Titus, by your leave, this maid mine.

Tit. How, sir! Are you in earnest then, my lord?
She will a handmaid be to his desires,
A loving nurse, a mother to his youth.

Sat. Ascend, fair queen, Pantheon. Lords, accompany

Your noble emperor, and his lovely bride,
Sent by the heavens for Prince Saturnine,
Whose wisdom hath her fortune conquered.
There shall we consummate our spousal rites.

Execute all but TITUS.

Tit. I am not bid to wait upon this bride.
Titus, when wert thou wont to walk alone,
Dishonour'd thus, and challenged of wrongs?

Re-enter MARCUS, LUCIUS, QUINTUS, and MARTIUS.

Marc. O! Titus, see; O! see what thou hast done;
In a bad quarrel slain a virtuous son.

Tit. No, foolish tribune, no; no son of mine,
Nor thou, nor these, confederates in the deed
That hath dishonour'd all our family:
Unworthy brother, and unworthy sons!

Luc. But let us give him burial, as becomes;
Give Mutius burial with our brethren.

Tit. Traitors, away! he rests not in this tomb.
This monument five hundred years hath stood,
Which I have sumptuously re-edified:
Here none but soldiers and Rome's servitors
Repose in fame; none basely slain in brawls.
Bury him where you can; he comes not here.

Marc. My lord, this is impiety in you.
My nephew Mutius' deeds do plead for him;
He must be buried with his brethren.

Quint. Mart. And shall, or him we will accompany.

Tit. 'And shall!' What villain was it spoke that word?

Quint. He that would vouch it in any place but here.

Tit. What! would you bury him in my despite?

Marc. No, noble Titus; but entreat of thee
To pardon Mutius, and to bury him.

Tit. Marcus, even thou hast struck upon my crest,
And, with these boys, mine honour thou hast wounded:
My foes I do repute you every one;
So, trouble me no more, but get you gone.

Marc. He is not with himself; let us withdraw.

Quint. Not I, till Mutius' bones be buried.

MARCUS and the Sons of TITUS kneel.

Marc. Brother, for in that name doth nature plead,

Quint. Father, and in that name doth nature speak;

Tit. Speak thou no more, if all the rest will speed.

Marc. Renowned Titus, more than half my soul,

Luc. Dear father, soul and substance of us all.—

Marc. Suffer thy brother Marcus to inter

His noble nephew here in virtue's nest,
That died in honour and Lavinia's cause.
Thou art a Roman; be not barbarous:
The Greeks upon advice did bury Ajax
That slew himself; and wise Laertes' son
Did graciously plead for his funerals.

Let not young Mutius then, that was thy joy,
Be barr'd his entrance here.

Tit. Rise, Marcus, rise.
The dismalst day is this that e'er I saw,
To be dishonour'd by my sons in Rome!
Well, bury him, and bury me the next,
Mutius is put into the tomb.

Luc. There lie thy bones, sweet Mutius, with thy friends,
Till we with trophies do adorn thy tomb.

All. Kneeling. No man shed tears for noble Mutius.
He lives in fame that died in virtue's cause.

TIT. I know not, Marcus; but I know it is:
Whether by device or no, the heavens can tell.
Is she not then beholding to the man
That brought her for this high good turn so far?
Yes, and will nobly him remunerate.

Flourish. Re-enter, from one side, SATURNINUS, attended; TAMORA, DEMETRUS, CHIRON, and AARON; from the other, BASSIANUS, LAVINIA, and Others.

Sat. So, Bassianus, you have play'd your prize:
God give you joy, sir, of your gallant bride! 400 Bass. And you of yours, my lord! I say no more,
Nor wish no less; and so I take my leave.

Sat. Traitor, if Rome have law or we have power,
Thou and thy faction shall repent this rape.

Bass. Rape call you it, my lord, to seize my own,
My true-betrothed love and now my wife?
But let the laws of Rome determine all;
Meanwhile I am possess'd of that is mine.

Sat. 'Tis good, sir; you are very short with us;
But, if we live, we'll be as sharp with you. 490
Bass. My lord, what I have done, as best I may,
Answer I must and shall do with my life.
Only thus much I give your grace to know:
By all the duties that I owe to Rome,
This noble gentleman, Lord Titus here,
Is in opinion and in honour wrong'd;
That, in the rescue of Lavinia,
With his own hand did slay his youngest son,
In zeal to you and highly mov'd to wrath
To be controul'd in that he frankly gave;
Receive him then to favour, Saturnine,
That hath express'd himself in all his deeds
A father and a friend to thee and Rome.

Tit. Prince Bassianus, leave to plead my deeds:
'Tis thou and those that have dishonour'd me
Rome and the righteous heavens be my judge,
How I have lov'd and honour'd Saturnine!

Tam. My worthy lord, if ever Tamora
Were gracious in those princely eyes of thine,
Then hear me speak indifferently for all;
And at my suit, sweet pardon what is past.

Sat. What, madam! be honour'd openly,
And basely put it up without revenge?

Tam. Not so, my lord; the gods of Rome forfend
I should be author to dishonour you!
But on mine honour dare I undertake
For good Lord Titus' innocence in all,
Whose fury not dissembled speaks his griefs.
Then, at my suit, look graciously on him;
Lose not so noble a friend on vain suppose,
Nor with sour looks afflict his gentle heart.

Aside to Saturninus. My lord, be rul'd by me, be won at last;

Dissemble all your griefs and discontent:
You are but newly planted in your throne;
Lest then the people, and patricians too,
Upon a just survey, take Titus' part,
And so supplant you for ingratitude.
Which Rome reputes to be a heinous sin,
Yield at entreats, and then let me alone.
I'll find a day to massacre them all,
And rage their faction and their family,
The cruel father, and his traitorous sons,
To whom I sued for my dear son's life;
And make them know what 'tis to let a que
Kneel in the streets and beg for grace in vain.
Aloud. Come, come, sweet emperor; or Andronicus;
Take up this good old man, and cheer the h
That dies in tempest of thy angry frown.

Sat. Rise, Titus, rise; my empress prevail'd.

Tit. I thank your majesty, and her, my lord.
These words, these looks, infuse new life in These, Titus, I am incorporated in Rome,
A Roman now adopted happily,
And must advise the emperor for his good.
This day all quarrels die, Andronicus;
And let it be mine honour, good my lord,
That I have reconcile'd your friends and you.
For you, Prince Bassianus, I have pass'd
My word and promise to the emperor,
That you will be more mild and tractable,
And fear not, lords, and you, Lavinia,
By my advice, all humbled on your knees,
You shall ask pardon of his majesty.

Luc. We do; and vow to heaven and to highness,
That what we did was mildly, as we might,
Tendering our sister's honour and our own.

Marc. That on mine honour here I do protest.

Sat. Away, and talk not; trouble us no more.

Tam. Nay, nay, sweet emperor, we must be friends:
The tribune and his nephews kneel for grace,
I will not be denied; sweet heart, look back.

Sat. Marcus, for thy sake, and thy brother here,
And at my lovely Tamora's entreats,
I do remit these young men's heinous faults
Stand up.

Lavinia, though you left me like a churl,
I found a friend, and sure as death I swore
I would not part a bachelor from the priest.

Come; if the emperor's court can feast twobrick
You are my guest, Lavinia, and your friends.
This day shall be a love-day, Tamora.

Tit. To-morrow, an it please your majesty
To hunt the panther and the hart with me,
With horn and hound we'll give your grace a bon jour.

Sat. Be it so, Titus, and grammarcy too.

Trumpets. Exit.

ACT II.

Enter AARON.

AAR. Now climbeth Tamora Olympus' top,
Safe out of fortune's shot; and sits aloft,
Secure of thunder's crack or lightning flash.
Advance'd above pale envy's threatening reach when the golden sun salutes the morn, 10 having gilt the ocean with his beams, pays the zodiac in his glistening coat, overlooks the highest-peeking hills;

amara.

her wit doth earthly honour wait,
15 virtue stoops and trembles at her frown,
Aaron, arm thy heart, and fit thy thoughts mount aloft with thy imperial mistress, mount her pitch, whom thou in triumph long prisoner held, fetter'd in amorous chains, swift bound to Aaron's charming eyes is Prometheus tied to Caucasus.

y with slavish weeds and servile thoughts!
be bright, and shine in pearl and gold,
gait upon this new-made emperor.

beit, said I? to warrant with this queen, goddess, this Semiramis, this nymph, siren, that will charm Rome's Saturnine, see his shipwreck and his commonwealths, what storm is this?

Demetrius and Chiron, braving.

Chiron, thy years want wit, thy wit wants edge, manners, to intrude where I am grace'd, may, for aught thou know'st, affected be.

Demetrius, thou dost overween in all,
in so this, to bear me down with braves.
not the difference of a year or two as me less gracious or thee more fortunate:
as able and as fit as thou arte,
and to deserve my mistress' grace;
that my sword upon thee shall approve,

plead my passions for Lavinia's love.
Clubs, clubs! these lovers will not keep the peace.

Why, boy, although our mother, undiv'd,
you a dancing-rapier by your side,
such a desperate gown, to threaten your friends?

have your lath glued within your sheath
you know better how to handle it.
Meanwhile, sir, with the little skill I have,
still shalt thou perceive how much I dare.

Ay, boy, grow ye so brave! They draw.

Why, how now, lords! the emperor's palace dare you draw mainain such a quarrel openly?
well I wot the ground of all this grudge:

would not for a million of gold cause were known to them it most concerns;

would your noble mother for much more fareshon'd in the court of Rome.

Chame, put up.

Not I, till I have sheath'd rapier in his bosom, and withal those reproachful speeches down his throat he hath breath'd in my dishonour here.

For that I am prepar'd and full resolv'd, spoken coward, that thunder'st with thy tongue,
with thy weapon nothing darst perform!

Away, I say!
by the gods that war-like Goths adore, petty brabble will undo us all.

lords, and think you not how dangerous to jet upon a prince's right?

is Lavinia then become so loose,

Or Bassianus so degenerate,
That for her love such quarrels may be broach'd
Without controlment, justice, or revenge?
Young lords, beware! an should the empress know
This discord's ground, the music would not please.

Chi. I care not, I, knew she and all the world:
I love Lavinia more than all the world.

Dem. Youngling, learn thou to make some meaner choice:
Lavinia is thine elder brother's hope.

Aar. Why, are ye mad? or know ye not in Rome
How furious and impatient they be,
And cannot brook competitors in love?
I tell you, lords, you do but plot your deaths
By this device.

Chi. Aaron, a thousand deaths
Would I propose, to achieve her whom I love.

Aar. To achieve her! how?

Dem. Why mak'st thou it so strange?
She is a woman, therefore may be woo'd;
She is a woman, therefore may be won;
She is Lavinia, therefore must be lov'd.

What, man I more water glideth by the mill
Than wots the miller of; and easy it is
Of a cut loaf to steal a shive, we know:
Though Bassianus be the emperor's brother,
Better than he have worn Vulcan's badge.

Aar. Aside. Ay, and as good as Saturninus may.

Dem. Then why should he despair that knows to court it

With words, fair looks, and liberality!
What! hast thou not full often struck a doe,
And borne her cleanly by the keeper's nose?

Aar. Why, then, it seems, some certain snatch or so
Would serve your turns.

Chi. Ay, so the turn were serv'd.

Dem. Aaron, thou hast hit it.

Aar. Would you had hit it too!
Then should not we be tir'd with this ado.
Why, hark ye, hark ye! and are you such fools
To square for this? would it offend you then
That both should speed?

Chi. Faith, not me.

Dem. Nor me, so I was one.

Aar. For shame, be friends, and join for that you jar:
'Tis policy and stratagem must do
That you affect; and so must you resolve,
That what you cannot as you would achieve,
You must perforce accomplish as you may.
Take this of me: Lucrece was not more chaste
Than this Lavinia, Bassianus' love.
A speedier course than lingering languishment
Must we pursue, and I have found the path.
My lords, a solemn hunting is in hand;
There will the lovely Roman ladies troop:
The forest walks are wide and spacious,
And many unfrequented plots there are Fitted by kind for rape and villany:
Single you thither then this dainty doe,
And strike her home by force, if not by words;
This way, or not at all, stand you in hope.
Come, come; our empress, with her sacred wit
To villany and vengeance consecrate,

Will we acquaint with all that we intend;
And she shall file our engines with advice,
That will not suffer you to square yourselves,
But to your wishes' height advance you both.
The emperor's court is like the house of Fame;
The palace full of tongues, of eyes, of ears:
The woods are ruthless, dreadful, deaf, and dull;
There speak, and strike, brave boys, and take your turns;
There serve your lurs, shadow'd from heaven's eye,
And revel in Lavinia's treasury.

Chi. Thy counsel, lad, smells of no cowardice.

Dem. Sit fas out nefas, till I find the stream
To cool this heat, a charm to calm these fits,
Per Styga, per manes vehor.

Exeunt.

Scene II.—A Forest.

Enter Titus Andronicus, with Hunters, etc.,
Marcus, Lucius, Quintus, and Martius.

Tit. The hunt is up, the morn is bright and grey,
The fields are fragrant and the woods are green.
Uncouple here and let us make a bay,
And wake the emperor and his lovely bride,
And rouse the prince and ring a hunter's peal,
That all the court may echo with the noise.
Sons, let it be your charge, as it is ours,
To attend the emperor's person carefully:
I have been troubled in my sleep this night,
But dawning day new comfort hath inspir'd.

A cry of hounds, and horns winded in a peal.

Enter Saturninus, Tamora, Bassianus, Lavina, Demetrius, Chiron, and Attendants.

Many good morrows to your majesty;
Madam, to you as many and as good:
I promised your grace a hunter's peal.
Sat. And you have rung it lustily, my lords;
Somewhat too early for new-married ladies.
Bass. Lavinia, how say you?

Lav. I say, no;
I have been broad awake two hours and more.
Sat. Come on then; horse and chariots let us have,
And to our sport. To Tamora. Madam, now shall ye see Our Roman hunting.

Marc. I have dogs, my lord,
Will rouse the proudest panther in the chase,
And climb the highest promontory top.
Tit. And I have horse will follow where the game
Makes way, and run like swallows o'er the plain.
Dem. Chiron, we hunt not, we, with horse nor hound,
But hope to pluck a dainty doe to ground.

Exeunt.

Scene III.—A lonely Part of the Forest.

Enter Aaron, with a bag of gold.

Aar. He that had wit would think that I had none,
To bury so much gold under a tree,
And never after to inherit it.
Let him that thinks of me so abjectly
Know that this gold must coin a stratagem,
Which, cunningly effected, will beget
A very excellent piece of villany:
And so repose, sweet gold, for their unrest
Hides the

That have their aims out of the empress' clasp.

Enter Tamora.

Tam. My lovely Aaron, wherefore look'st sad
When every thing doth make a gleeful bough
The birds chant melody on every bush,
The snake lies rolled in the cheerful sun,
The green leaves quiver with the cooling wind
And make a chequer'd shadow on the ground.
Under their sweet shade. Aaron, let us sit,
And, whilst the babbling echo mocks the hunt,
Replying shrilly to the well-tun'd horns,
As if a double hunt were heard at once,
Let us sit down and mark their yelping notes
And after conflict, such as was suppos'd
The wandering prince and Dido once enjoy'd.
When with a happy storm they were surpriz'd.
And curtain'd with a counsel-keeping cave,
We may, each wraithed in the other's arms,
Our pastimes done, possess a golden slumber.
While hounds and horns and sweet melody
Be unto us as is a nurse's babe song.
Of lullaby to bring her babe asleep.

Aar. Madam, though Venus govern,
Vesta's desires,
Saturn is dominator over mine;
What signifies my deadly-standing eye,
My silence and my cloudy melancholy,
My fleecy of woolly hair that now uncurls
Even as an adder when she doth unroll
To do some fatal execution?
No, madam, these are no venereal signs:
Vengeance is in my heart, death in my hand.
Blood and revenge are hammering in my breast.
Hark, Tamora, the empress of my soul,
Which never hopes more heaven than rest thee,
This is the day of doom for Bassianus;
His Philomel must lose her tongue to-day;
Thy sons make pillage of her chastity,
And wash their hands in Bassianus' blood.
Seest thou this letter? take it up, I pray thee;
And give the king this fatal-plotted scroll.
Now question me no more; we are espied
Here comes a parcel of our hopeful booty,
Which dreads not yet their lives' destruction.

Tam. Ah! my sweet Moor, sweeter to meet life.

Aar. No more, great empress; Bassianus comes:
Be cross with him; and I'll go fetch thy so
To back thy quarrels, whatsoe'er they be.

Enter Bassianus and Lavina.

Bass. Whom have we here? Rome's ruler,
Unfurnish'd of her well-becoming troop?
Or is it Dian, habited like her,
Who hath abandoned her holy groves,
To see the general hunting in this forest?

Tam. Scurvy controller of our private steps
Had I the power that some say Dian had,
Thy temples should be planted presently
TITUS ANDRONICUS.

Tam. Give me thy poniard; thou shalt know, my boys, your mother’s hand shall right your mother’s wrong.

Dem. Stay, madam; here is more belongs to her:
First thrust the corn, then after burn the straw.
This minion stood upon her chastity,
Upon her nuptial vow, her loyalty,
And with that painted hope she braves your mightiness:
And shall she carry this unto her grave?

Chi. An if she do, I would I were an eunuch.
Drag hence her husband to some secret hole,
And make his dead trunk pillow to our lust.

Tam. But when ye have the honey ye desire,
Let not this wasp outlive, us both to sting.

Chi. I warrant you, madam, we will make that sure.

Come, mistress, now performe we will enjoy
That neo-preserved honesty of yours.

Lav. O Tamora! thou bear’st a woman’s face,—

Tam. I will not hear her speak; away with her!

Lav. Sweet lords, entreat her hear me but a word.

Dem. Listen, fair madam: let it be your glory
To see her tears; but be your heart to them
As unrelenting flint to drops of rain.

Lav. When did the tiger’s young ones teach the dam?
O! do not learn her wrath; she taught it thee;
The milk thou suck’dst from her did turn to marble;
Even at thy teat thou hadst thy tyranny.
Yet every mother breeds not sons alike:

To Chiron. Do thou entreat her show a woman pity.

Chi. What! wouldst thou have me prove myself a bastard?

Lav. ‘Tis true the raven doth not hatch a lark:
Yet have I heard, O! could I find it now, the lion mov’d with pity did endure
To have his princely paws par’d all away.
Some say that ravens foster forlorn children,
The whilst their own birds famish in their nests:

O! be to me, though thy hard heart say no,
Nothing so kind, but something pitiful.

Tam. I know not what it means; away with her!

Lav. O! let me teach thee: for my father’s sake,
That gave thee life when well he might have slain thee,
Be not obdurate, open thy deaf ears.

Tam. Hadst thou in person ne’er offended me,
Even for his sake am I pitless.
Remember, Iours, I pour’d forth tears in vain
To save your brother from the sacrifice;
But fierce Andronicus would not relent:
Therefore, away with her, and use her as you
will:
The worse to her, the better lov’d of me.

Lav. O Tamora! be call’d a gentle queen,
And with thine own hands kill me in this place;
For ’tis not life that I have begg’d so long;
Poor I was slain when Bassianus died.
TAM. What beg'st thou then? fond woman, let me go.

LAV. 'Tis present death I beg; and one thing more
That womanhood denies my tongue to tell.
O! keep me from their worse than killing lust,
And tumble me into some loathsometh pit,
Where never man's eye may behold my body:
Do this, and be a charitable murderer.

TAM. So should I rob my sweet sons of their fee:
No, let them satisfy their lust on thee.

DEM. Away! for thou hast stay'd us here too long.

LAV. No grace! no womanhood! Ah! beastly creature,
The blot and enemy to our general name.

Confusion fall—
CHI. Nay, then I'll stop your mouth. Bring thou her husband:
This is the hole where Aaron bid us hide him.

DEMETRIUS into the pit; then exeunt DEMETRIUS and CHIRON, dragging off LAVINIA.

TAM. Farewell, my sons: see that you make her sure.
Ne'er let my heart know merry cheer until all the Andronicis be made away.
Now will I hence to seek my lovely Moor,
And let my spleenful sons this truss deflower.

Exit.

Re-enter AARON, with QUINTUS and MARTIUS.

AAR. Come on, my lords, the better foot before:
Straight will I bring you to the loathsometh pit
Where I espied the Panther fast asleep.

QUINT. My sight is very dully whate'er it bodes.

MART. And mine, I promise you: were't not for shame,
Well could I leave our sport to sleep awhile.

Palls into the pit.

QUINT. What! art thou fall'n? What subtle hole is this,
Whose mouth is cover'd with rude-growing briers,
Upon whose leaves are drops of new-shed blood
As fresh as morning dew distill'd on flowers?
A very fatal place it seems to me.

SPEAK, brother, hast thou hurt thee with the fall?

MART. What! O brother! with the dismall'st object hurt
That ever eye with sight made heart lament.

AAR. Aside. Now will I fetch the king to find them here,
That he thereby may give a likely guess
How these were they that made away his brother.

Exit.

MART. Why dost not comfort me, and help me out
From this unhallow'd and blood-stain'd hole?

QUINT. I am surprised with an uncouth fear;
A chilling sweat o'er-runs my trembling joints:
My heart suspects more than mine eye can see.

MART. To prove thou hast a true-divining heart,
Aaron and thou look down into this den.
And see a fearful sight of blood and death.

QUINT. Aaron is gone; and my compassionate heart
Will not permit mine eyes once to behold
The thing whereat it trembles by surmise.
O! tell me how it is; for ne'er till now
Was I a child, to fear I know not what.

MART. Lord Bassianus lies embrewed here.
All on a heap, like to a slaughter'd lamb,
In this detested, dark, blood-drinking pit.

QUINT. If it be dark, how dost thou know 'tis he?

MART. Upon his bloody finger he doth write
A precious ring, that lightens all the hole,
Which, like a taper in some monument,
Doth shine upon the dead man's earthy cheek.
And shows the ragged entrails of this pit:
So pale did shine the moon on Pyramus
When he by night lay bath'd in maiden biet.
O brother! help me with thy fainting hand,
If fear hath made thee faint, as me it hath,
Out of this fell devouring receptacle,
As hateful as Cocytus' misty mouth.

QUINT. Reach me thy hand, that I may thee out;
Or, wanting strength to do thee so much good,
I may be pluck'd into the swallowing worm
Of this deep pit, poor Bassianus' grave.

MART. I have no strength to pluck thee to the brink.

MART. Nor I no strength to climb without thy help.

QUINT. Thy hand once more; I will not fail again,
Till thou art here aloft, or I below.

THOU canst not come to me: I come to thee.

Exit.

Re-enter AARON, with SATURNIUS.

SAT. Along with me: I'll see what hole is this,
And what he is that now is leap'd into it.
Say, who are thou that lately didst descend
Into this gaping hollow of the earth?

MART. The unhappy son of old Andronicus
Brought hither in a most unhappy hour,
To find thy brother Bassianus dead.

SAT. My brother dead! I know thou dost jest:
He and his lady both are at the lodge,
Upon the north side of this pleasant chase;
'Tis not an hour since I left him there.

MART. We know not where you left him alive;

SAT. But, out, alas! here have we found him dead.

Re-enter TAMORA, with ATTENDANTS; TITUS ANDRONICUS, and LUCIUS.

TAM. Where is my lord the king?

SAT. Here, Tamora; though grieved with ing grief.

TAM. Where is thy brother Bassianus?

SAT. Now to the bottom dost thou search and wound:
Poor Bassianus here lies murdered.

TAM. Then all too late! I bring this fatal woe.

Giving a let

The complect of this timeless tragedy;
And wonder greatly that man's face can fold
In pleasing smiles such murderous tyranny.

SAT. An if we miss to meet him handsomely,
Sweet huntsman, Bassianus 'tis we mean,
Do thou so much as dig the grave for him:
Thou know'st our meaning. Look for thy reward.
TITUS ANDRONICUS.

ELEVEN.

long the nestles at the elder-tree which overshares the mouth of that some pit where we decrees to bury Bassianus:
this, and purchase us thy lasting friends.

Tamora! was ever heard the like?
is the pit, and this the elder-tree.
sir, if you can find the huntsman out at should have murder'd Bassianus here.

Tamora, now answer my that by I should never-heard-of torturing pain for them.

What! are they in this pit? O wondrous thing!

w easily murder is discovered!

Tit. High emperor, upon my feeble knee this boon with tears not lightly shed;
slain was this fault of my accursed sons, cursed, if the fault be prov'd in them,—
at. If it be prov'd! you see it is apparent.

Tam. Am. Andronicus himself did take it up.
at. I did, my lord; yet let me be their bail;
by my fathers' reverend tomb, I vow shall be ready at your highness' will answer their suspicion with their lives.
at. Thou shalt not bail them: see thou follow me.

bring the murder's body, some the murderers:

them not speak a word; the guilt is plain;
by my soul, were there worse end than death,
tend upon them should be executed.

Tam. Andronicus, I will entreat the king;
not thy sons, they shall do well enough.

Come Lucius, come; stay not to talk with them.

Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Another part of the Forest.

r DEMETRIUS and CHIRON, with LAVINIA, visiting; her hands cut off, and her tongue cut.

em. So, now go tell, an if thy tongue can speak, twas that cut thy tongue and ravish'd thee.

Write down thy mind, bewray thy meaning so;

if thy stumps will let thee play the scribe.

d. See, how with signs and tokens she can scrawl.

r. Go home, call for sweet water, wash thy hands.

em. She hath no tongue to call, nor hands to wash;
so let's leave her to her silent walks.

An 'twere my case, I should go hang myself.

em. If thou hadst hands to help thee knit the cord.

Exeunt DEMETRIUS and CHIRON.

Enter MARCUS.

arc. Who's this? my niece, that flies away so fast!

And, a word; where is your husband?

If I do dream, would all my wealth would wake me!
If I do wake, some planet strike me down,
That I may slumber in eternal sleep!

Speak, gentle niece, what stern ungentle hands have lopp'd and hew'd and made thy body bare
Of her two branches, those sweet ornaments, Whose circling shadows kings have sought to sleep in,
And might not gain so great a happiness

As have thy love? Why dost not speak to me?
Alas! a crimson river of bloody blood,
Like to a bubbling fountain stirr'd with wind,
Doth rise and fall between thy rosey lips,
Coming and going with thy honey breath.

But, sure, some Teres hath deflower'd thee,
And, lest thou shouldst detect him, cut thy tongue.

Ah! now thou turn'st away thy face for shame;

and, notwithstanding all this loss of blood,
As from a conduit with three issuing spouts,

Yet do thy cheeks look red as Titian's face,

Blushing to be encounter'd with a cloud.

Shall I speak for thee? shall I say 'tis so?

O! that I knew thy heart; and knew the beast,
That I might rail at him to ease my mind.

Sorrow concealed, like an oven stopp'd,

Doth burn the heart to cinders where it is.

Fair Philomela, she but lost her tongue,

And in a tedious sampler sew'd her mind:

But, lovely niece, that mean is cut from thee;

A craftier Teres hast thou met withal,

And he hath cut those pretty fingers off,

That could have better sew'd than Philomela.

O! had the monster seen those lily hands

Tremble, like aspen-leaves, upon a lute,

And make the silken strings delight to kiss them,

He would not then have touch'd them for his life;

Or had he heard the heavenly harmony

Which that sweet tongue hath made,

He would have dropp'd his knife, and fell asleep

As Cerberus at the Thracian poet's feet.

Come, let us go, and make thy father blind;

For such a sight will blind a father's eye:

One hour's storm will drown the fragrant meads;

What will whole months of tears thy father's eyes:

Do not draw back, for we will mourn with thee:

O! could our mourning case thy misery.

Exeunt.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Rome. A Street.

Enter Senators, Tribunes, and Officers of Justice, with MARTIUS and QUINTUS, bound, passing on to the place of execution: TITUS going before, pleading.

Tit. Hear me, grave fathers! noble tribunes, stay!

For pity of mine age, whose youth was spent
In dangerous wars, whilst you securely slept;
For all my blood in Rome's great quarrel shed:
For all the frosty nights that I have watch'd;
And for these bitter tears, which now you see
Filling the aged wrinkles in my cheeks;

Be pitiful to my condemned sons,

Whose souls are not corrupted as 'tis thought.
For two-and-twenty sons I never wept,
Because they died in honour's lofty bed:
For these, these, tribunes, in the dust I write
Throwing himself on the ground.
My heart's deep languor and my soul's sad tears,
Let my tears stain the earth's dry appetite;
My sons' sweet blood will make it shame and blush.

Exeunt Senators, Tribunes, etc., with the Prisoners.

O earth! I will befriend thee more with rain,
That shall distil from these two ancient urns,
Than youthful April shall with all his showers:
In summer's drought I'll drop upon thee still;
In winter with warm tears I'll melt the snow,
And keep eternal spring-time on thy face,
So thou refuse to drink my dear sons' blood.

Enter LUCIUS, with his sword drawn.
O reverend tribunes! gentle aged men!
Unbind my sons, reverse the doom of death;
And let me say, that never wept before,
My tears are now prevailing orators.

Luc. O noble father, you lament in vain:
The tribunes hear you not, no man is by;
And you recount your sorrows to a stone.
Titi. Ah! Lucius, for thy brothers let me plead.
Grave tribunes, once more I entreat of you,—
Luc. My gracious lord, no tribune hears you speak.

Titi. Why, 'tis no matter, man: if they did hear,
They would not mark me, or if they did mark,
They would not pity me, yet plead I must,
And bootless unto them.
Therefore I tell my sorrows to the stones,
Who, though they cannot answer my distress,
Yet in some sort they are better than the tribunes,
For that they will not intercept my tale.
When I do weep, they humbly at my feet
Receive my tears, and seem to weep with me;
And were they but attired in grave weeds,
Rome could afford no tribune like to these.
A stone is soft as wax, tribunes more hard than stones;
A stone is silent, and offendeth not,
And tribunes with their tongues doom men to death.
Rise.
But wherefore stand'st thou with thy weapon drawn?
Luc. To rescue my two brothers from their death;
For which attempt the judges have pronounc'd
My everlasting doom of banishment.
Titi. O happy man! they have befriended thee.
Why, foolish Lucius, dost thou not perceive
That Rome is but a wilderness of tigers?
Tigers must prey; and Rome affords no prey
But me and mine: how happy art thou then,
From these devourers to be banished!
But who comes with our brother Marcus here?

Enter Marcus and Lavinia.

Marc. Titus, prepare thy aged eyes to weep;
Or, if not so, thy noble heart to break:
I bring consuming sorrow to thine age.
Titi. Will it consume me? let me see it then.
Marc. This was thy daughter.

Titi. Why, Marcus, so she is.

Titi. Faint-hearted boy, arise, and look upon her.
Speak, my Lavinia, what accursed hand
Hath made thee handless in thy father's eye?
What fool hath added water to the sea,
Or brought a faggot to bright-burning Træ?
My grief was at the height before thou camest.
And now, like Nilus, it disdaineth bounds.
Give me a sword, I'll chop off my hands by
For they have fought for Rome, and all in it.
And they have nurs'd this woe, in feeding
In bootless prayer have they been held up
And they have serv'd me to effectless use.
Now all the service I require of them
Is that the one will help to cut the other.
'tis well, Lavinia, that thou hast no hands.
For hands, to do Rome service, are but va.

Luc. Speak, gentle sister, who hath made thee?

Marc. O! that delightful engine of her thought
That blabb'd them with such pleasing eloquence,
Is torn from forth that pretty hollow cage.
Where, like a sweet melodious bird, it sung
Sweet varied notes, enchanting every ear.
Luc. O! say thou for her, who hath done thee deed?

Marc. O! thus I found her, straying in the park,
Seeking to hide herself, as doth the deer
That hath receiv'd some unaccusing wound.
Titi. It was my dear; and he that wounded
Hath hurt me more than had he kill'd me.
For now I stand as one upon a rock
Environ'd with a wilderness of sea,
Who marks the waxing tide grow wave by wave
Expecting ever when some envious surge
Will in his brinish bowls swallow him.
This way to death my wretched sons are slain.
Here stands my other son, a banish'd man
And here my brother, weeping at my wo.
But that which gives my soul the greatest pain
Is dear Lavinia, dearer than my soul.
Had I but seen thy picture in this plight
It would have maddened me: what shall I do?
Now I behold thy lively body so!
Thou hast no hands to wipe away thy tears.
Nor tongue to tell me who hath martyr'd thee.
Thy husband he is dead, and for his death
Thy brothers are condemn'd, and dead by law!
Look! Marcus: ah! son Lucius, look on her.
When I did name her brothers, then fresh
Stood on her cheeks, as doth the honey-bee,
Upon a gather'd fly almost wither'd.

Marc. Perchance she weeps because they are her husband;
Perchance because she knows them innocence.
Titi. If they did kill thy husband, then be joyous.
Because the law hath ta'en revenge on them.
Ne, no, they would not do so foul a deed.
Witness the sorrow that their sister makes.
Gentle Lavinia, let me kiss thy lips;
Or make some sign how I may do thee ease.
Shall thy good uncle, and thy brother Lucius,
And thou, and I, sit round about some fire
Looking all downwards, to behold our cheer.
How they are staid? as meadows yet not
With miry slime left on them by a flood?
And in the fountain shall we gaze so long
Till the fresh taste be taken from that clear
And made a brine-pit with our bitter tears.
Or shall we cut away our hands, like thee?
Or shall we bite our tongues, and in dumbs
Pass the remainder of our hateful days?
Tit. Come hither, Aaron; I’ll deceive them both:
Lend me thy hand, and I will give thee mine.
Aar. Aside. If that be call’d deceit, I will be honest,
And never, whilst I live, deceive men so:
But I’ll deceive you in another sort,
And that you’ll say ere half an hour pass.

Cuts off Titus’s hand.

Re-enter Lucius and Marcus.

Tit. Now stay your strife; what shall be is dispatched.

Good Aaron, give his majesty my hand:
Tell him it was a hand that warded him
From thousand dangers; bid him bury it;
More hath it merited; that let it have.
As for my sons, say I account of them
As jewels purchas’d at an easy price;
And yet dear too, because I bought mine own.

Aar. I go, Andronicus; and for thy hand

Look by and by to have thy sons with thee.

Aside. Their heads, I mean. O! how this villany
Doth fat me with the very thoughts of it.
Let fools do good, and fair men call for grace,
Aaron will have his soul black like his face.

Exit.

Tit. O! here I lift this one hand up to heaven,
And bow this feeble ruin to the earth:
If any power pities wretched tears,
To that I call. To Lavinia. What! wilt thou kneel with me?
Do then, dear heart; for heaven shall hear our prayers,
Or with our sighs we’ll breathe the welkin dim,
And stain the sun with fog, as sometime clouds
When they do hug him in their melting bosoms.

Marcus. O! brother, speak with possibilities,
And do not break into these deep extremes.

Tit. Is not my sorrow deep, having no bottom?
Then be my passions bottomless with them.

Marcus. But yet let reason govern thy lament.

Tit. If there were reason for these miseries,
Then into limits could I bind my woes.
When heaven doth weep, doth not the earth o’erflow?
If the winds rage, doth not the sea wax mad,
Threat’ning the welkin with his big-swoln face?
And wilt thou have a reason for this coil?
I am the sea; hark! how her sighs do blow;
She is the weeping welkin, I the earth:
Then must my sea be moved with her sighs;
Then must my earth with her continual tears
Become a deluge, overflow’d and drown’d;
For why my bowels cannot hide her woes,
But like a drunkard must I vomit them.
Then give me leave, for losers will have leave to ease their stomachs with their bitter tongues.

Enter a Messenger, with two heads and a hand.

Mess. Worthy Andronicus, ill art thou repaid
For that good hand thou sent’st the emperor.
Here are the heads of thy two noble sons,
And here’s thy hand, in scorn to thee sent back:
Thy griefs their sports, thy resolution mock’d;
As Thy hand, till my heart is cold and numb.
Ah! now no more will I control thy tears.
Gnawing with thy teeth; and be this dismal sight
The closing up of our most wretched eyes!
Now is a time to storm; why art thou still?
Why dost thou laugh? it fits not with this hour.
Why, have I not another tear to shed:
Besides, this sorrow is an enemy,
And would usurp upon my watery eyes,
And make them blind with tributary tears:
Then which way shall I find Revenge’s cave?
For these two heads do seem to speak to me,
And threat me I shall never come to bliss
Till all these mischief be return’d again
Even in their throats that have committed them.
Come, let me see what task I have to do.
You heavy people, circle me about,
That I may turn me to each one of you,
And swear unto my soul to right your wrongs.
The vow is made. Come, brother, take a head;
And in this hand the other will I bear.
Lavinia, thou shalt be employed in these things:
Bear thou my hand, sweet wench, between thy teeth.
As for thee, boy, go get thee from my sight;
Thou art an exile, and thou must not stay:
Hie to the Goths, and raise an army there;
And if you love me, as I think you do,
Let’s kiss and part, for we have much to do.

Exit TITUS, MARCUS, and LAVINIA.

Luc. Farewell, Andronicus, my noble father;
The woefull’st man that ever liv’d in Rome.
Farewell, proud Rome; till Lucius come again,
He leaves his pledges dearer than his life.
Farewell, Lavinia, my noble sister;
O! would thou wert as thou before hast been;
But now nor Lucius nor Lavinia lives
But in oblivion and hateful griefs.
If Lucius live, he will require your wrongs,
And make proud Saturnine and his emperor
Beg at the gates like Tarquin and his queen.
Now will I to the Goths, and raise a power,
To be reveng’d on Rome and Saturnine.

Scene II.—The Same. A Room in Titus’s House.
A Banquet set out.

Enter Titus, Marcus, Lavinia, and your Lucius, a Boy.

Tit. So, so; now sit; and look you eat no more Than will preserve just so much strength in
As will revenge these bitter woes of ours.
Marcus, unknit that sorrow-wreathen bow:
Thy niece and I, poor creatures, want our hair,
And cannot pass in our ten-fold grief
With folded arms. This poor right hand of me
Is left to tyrannize upon my breast;
And when my heart, all mad with misery,
Beats in this hollow prison of my flesh,
Then thus I thump it down.
To LAVINIA. Thou map of woe, that thus dost talk in signs,
When thy poor heart beats with outrages beating
Thou canst not strike it thus to make it still.
Wound it with sighing, girl, kill it with groan;
Or get some little knife between thy teeth,
And just against thy heart make thou a hole
That all the tears that thy poor eyes let fall
May run into that sink, and soak in,
Drown the lamenting fool in sea-salt tears.
Marcus. Fie, brother, fie! learn her not thus to Such violent hands upon her tender life.
Tit. How now! has sorrow made thee do already?
Why, Marcus, no man should be mad but I.
What violent hands can she lay on her life?
Ahi! whereto dost thou urge the name of hand?
To bid Æneas tell the tale twice over.
How Troy was burnt and he made miserable
O! handle not the theme, to talk of hands,
Lest we remember still that we have none.
Fie, fie! how frantically I square my talk,
As if we should forget we had no hands.
If Marcus did not name the word of hands,
Come, let’s fall to; and, gentle girl, eat this.
Here is no drink. Hark, Marcus, what she says
I can interpret all her martyr’d signs:
She says she drinks no other drink but tears,
Brew’d with her sorrow, mash’d upon her cheeks
Speechless compressor; I will learn thy thought.
In thy dumb action will I be as perfect
As begging hermits in their holy prayers:
Thoushalt not sigh, nor hold thy stump to heave;
Nor wink, nor nod, nor kneel, nor make a sign;
But I of these will wrest an alphabet,
And by still practice learn to know thy meaning.
Boy. Good grandsire, leave these bitter de laments:
Make my aunt merry with some pleasing tale.
Marcus. Alas! the tender boy, in passion mov’d
Doth weep to see his grandsire’s heaviness.
Tit. Peace, tender sapling; thou art made tears,
And tears will quickly melt thy life away.

Marcus strikes the dish with a knife.
What dost thou strike at, Marcus, with thy knife
Marcus. At that that I have kill’d, my lord; a f
ACT IV.

_Enter Titus and Marcus._ Then enter young Lucius, _Lavinia_ running after him.

Boy. Help, grandsire, help! my aunt Lavinia doth me every where; I know not why; uncle Marcus, see how swift she comes: as! sweet aunt, I know not what you mean.

Marc. Stand by me, Lucius; do not fear thine aunt.

Tit. She loves thee, boy, too well to do thee harm.

Boy. Ay, when my father was in Rome she did.

Marc. What means my niece Lavinia by these signs?

Tit. Fear her not, Lucius: somewhat doth she mean.

Marc. See, Lucius, see how much she makes of thee; so mewhither would she have thee go with her. a! boy; Cornelia never with more care to her sons than she hath read to thee veet poetry and Tully’s Orator.

Marc. Canst thou not guess wherefore she plies thee thus?

Boy. My lord, I know not, I, nor can I guess, less some sort or fancy do possess her; or I have heard my grandsire say full oft, extremity of griefs would make men mad; and I have read that Hecuba of Troy an mad through sorrow; that made me to fear, although, my lord, I know my noble aunt owes me as dear as e’er my mother did,

And would not, but in fury, fright my youth; Which made me down to throw my books and fly, Causeless, perhaps. But pardon me, sweet aunt; And, madam, if my uncle Marcus go, I will most willingly attend your ladyship.

Marc. Lucius, I will.

_Lavinia turns over the books which Lucius had let fall._

Tit. How now, Lavinia! Marcus, what means this?

Some book there is that she desires to see. Which is it, girl, of these? Open them, boy. But thou art deeper read, and better skill’d; Come, and take choice of all my library, And so beguile thy sorrow, till the heavens Reveal the damned contriver of this deed. Why lifts she up her arms in sequence thus?

Marc. I think she means that there was more than one

Confederate in the fact: ay, more there was; Or else to heaven she heaves them for revenge.

Tit. Lucius, what book is that she tosteth so?

Boy. Grand sire, ’tis Òvid’s Métamorphoses; My mother gave it me.

Marc. For love of her that’s gone, Perhaps, she could it from among the rest.

Tit. Soft! see how busily she turns the leaves! What would she find? Lavinia, shall I read? This is the tragic tale of Philemèl, And treats of Tereus’ treason and his rape; And rape, I fear, was root of thine annoy.

Marc. See, brother, see! note how she quotes the leaves.

Tit. Lavinia, wert thou thus surpris’d, sweet girl,

Ravish’d and wrong’d, as Philomela was,

Fors in the ruthless, vast, and gloomy woods? See, see!

Ay, such a place there is, where we did hunt, O! had we never, never hunted there. Pattern’d by that she poet here describes, By nature made for murders and for rapes.

Marc. O! why should nature build so foul a den, Unless the gods delight in tragedies?

Tit. Give signs, sweet girl, for here are none but friends,

What Roman lord it was durst do the deed: Or sunk not Satirumne, as ‘larquin erst, That left the camp to sin in Lucrece’ bed?

Marc. Sit down, sweet niece: brother, sit down by me.

Apollo, Pallas, Jove, or Mercury, Inspire me, that I may this treason find! My lord, look here; look here, Lavinia: This sandy plot is plain; guide, if thou canst, This after me.

_He writes his name with his staff, and guides it with feet and mouth._

I have writ my name

Without the help of any hand at all. Curs’d be that heart that forc’d us to this shift! Write thou, good niece, and here display at last What God will have discover’d for revenge. Heaven guide thy pen to print thy sorrows plain, That we may know the traitors and the truth!

_She takes the staff in her mouth, and guides it with her stumps, and writes._

Tit. O! do ye read, my lord, what she hath writ?

_Stampum. Chiron. Demetrius._

Marc. What, what! the lustful sons of Tamora
Performers of this heinous, bloody deed!

Tit. Magni dominator poli,
Tam lentus audis secleræ? tam lentus vides?

Marc. O! calm thee, gentle lord; although I know
There is enough written upon this earth
To stir a mutiny in the mildest thoughts
And arm the minds of infants to exclaims.
My lord, kneel down with me; Lavinia, kneel;
And kneel, sweet boy, the Roman Hector's hope;
And swear with me, as with the woeful fare
And father of that chaste dishonour'd dame,
Lord Junius Brutus swears for Lucrece's rape,
That we will prosecute by good advice.
Mortal revenge upon these traitorius Goths,
And see their blood, or die with this reproach.

Tit. 'Tis sure enough, an you knew how;
But if you hunt these bear-whelps, then beware:
The dam will wake, an if she wind you once:
She's with the lion deeply still in league,
And lulls him whilst she playeth on her back,
And when he sleeps will she do what she list. 109
You're a young huntsman, Marcus, let alone;
And, come, I will go get a leaf of brass,
And with a gat of steel will write these words,
And lay it by: the angry northern wind
Will blow these sands like Sibyl's leaves abroad,
And where's your lesson then? Boy, what say you?

Boy. I say, my lord, that if I were a man,
Their mother's bed-chamber should not be safe
For these bad bondmen to the yoke of Rome.

Marc. Ay, that's my boy! thy father hath full oft
For his ungrateful country done the like.

Boy. And, uncle, so will I an it I live.

Tit. Come, go with me into mine armoury:
Lucius, I'll fit thee; and withal my boy
Shall carry from me to the empress's sons
Presents that I intend to send them both:
Come, come; thou 't do thy message, wilt thou not?

Boy. Ay, with my dagger in their bosoms, grandsire.

Tit. No, boy, not so; I'll teach thee another course.

Lavinia, come. Marcus, look to my house; 120
Lucius and I'll go brave it at the court:
Ay, marry, will we, sir; and we'll be waited on.

Exeunt Titus, Lavinia, and Boy.

Marc. O heavens! can you hear a good man groan,
And not relent or not compassion him?
Marcus, attend him in his ecstacy,
That hath more scars of sorrow in his heart
Than foemen's marks upon his batter'd shield;
But yet so just that he will not revenge.
Revenge, ye heavens, for old Andronicus! Exit.

Scene II.—The Same. A Room in the Palace.

Enter from one side Aaron, Demetrius, and Chiron;
from the other side, young Lucius and an Attendant, with a bundle of weapons, and verses writ upon them.

Chi. Demetrius, here's the son of Lucius;
He hath some message to deliver us.

Aar. Ay, some mad message from his mad grandfather.

Boy. My lords, with all the humbleness I may,
I greet your honours from Andronicus;
Aside. And pray the Roman gods confound us both.

Dem. Gramercy, lovely Lucius: what's the news?

Boy. Aside. That you are both deciph'd that's the news,
For villains mark'd with rape. Aloud. My lords,
I pray you, my grandsire, well advis'd, hath sent by me
The goodliest weapons of his armoury,
To gratify your honourable youth,
The hope of Rome, for so he bade me say;
And so I do, and with his gifts present
Your lordships, that, whenever you have need
You may be armed and appointed well.
And so I leave you both, aside like billy villains.

Exeunt Boy and Attend. Lucius.

Dem. What's here? A scroll; and what round about?

Let's see:

Integer vitae, sederisque purus,
Non eyet Mauri jaculis, nec arcæ.

Chi. O! 'tis a verse in Horace; I know it was
I read it in the grammar long ago.

Aar. Ay, just a verse in Horace; right, we have it.

Aside. Now, what a thing it is to be an ass!
Here's no sound jest! the old man hath for their guilt,
And sends them weapons wrapp'd about with lines,
That wound, beyond their feeling, to the quiz;
But were our witty empress well afoot,
She would applaud Andronicus' conceit:
But let her rest in her unrest awhile.
And now, young lords, was not a happy state
Led us to Rome, strangers, and more than so,
Captives, to be advanced to this height?
It did me good before the palace gate
To brave the tribune in his brother's hearing.

Dem. But me more good, to see so great a lord
Basely insinuate and send us gifts.

Aar. Had he not reason, Lord Demetrius?
Did you not use his daughter very friendly?

Dem. I would we had a thousand Roman dams
At such a banch, by turn to serve our lust.

Chi. A charitable wish and full of love.

Aar. Here lacks but your mother for to amen.

Chi. And that would she for twenty thousand more.

Dem. Come, let us go, and pray to all the gods
For our beloved mother in her pains.

Aar. Aside. Pray to the devils; the gods have given us over.

Trumpets sound. Dem. Why do the emperor's trumpets flourish thus?

Chi. Belike, for joy the emperor hath a son.

Dem. Soft! who comes here?

Enter a Nurse, with a blackamoor Child.

Nurse. Good morrow, lords. O! tell me, do you see Aaron the Moor?

Aar. Well, more or less, or ne'er a whist at all.
Here Aaron is; and what with Aaron now?

Nurse. O gentle Aaron! we are all undone.
Now help, or woe betide thee evermore!
This maugre all the world will I keep safe; Or some of you shall smoke for it in Rome.
Dem. By this our mother is for ever shamed.
Chi. Rome will despise her for this foul escape.
Nurse. The emperor in his rage will doom her death.
Chi. I blush to think upon this ignomy.
Aar. Why, there's the privilege your beauty bears.
Fie, treacherous hue! that will betray with blushing
The close enacts and counsels of the heart:
Here's a young lad fram'd of another leer:
Look how the black slave smiles upon the father,
As who should say, 'Old lad, I am thine own.'
He is your brother, lords, sensibly fed
Of that self blood that first gave life to you;
And from that womb where you imprison'd were
He is enfranchised and come to light:
Nay, he's your brother by the surer side,
Although my seal be stamped in his face.
Nurse. Aaron, what shall I say unto the empress?
Dem. Advise thee, Aaron, what is to be done,
And we will all subscribe to thy advice:
Save thou the child, so we may all be safe.
Aar. Then sit we down, and let us all consult.
My son and I will have the wind of you:
Keep there; now talk at pleasure of your safety.
They sit.
Dem. How many women saw this child of his!
Aar. Why, so, brave lords! when we join in league,
I am a lamb; but if you brave the Moor,
The chafed boar, the mountain lioness,
The ocean swells not so as Aaron storms.
But say again, how many saw the child?
Nurse. Cornelia the midwife, and myself,
And no one else but the deliver'd empress.
Aar. The empress, the midwife, and yourself:
Two may keep counsel when the third's away.
Go to the empress; tell her this I said:
Stabbing her.
Weke, weke!"

So cries a pig prepared to the spit.

Dem. What mean'st thou, Aaron? wherefore didst thou this?
Aar. O Lord, sir, 'tis a deed of policy:
Shall she live to betray this guilt of ours,
A long-tongu'd babbling gossip? no lords, no.
And now be it known to you my full intent.
Not far, one Mulci lives, my countryman;
His wife but yesternight was brought to bed.
His child is like to her, fair as you are:
Go pack with him, and give the mother gold,
And tell them both the circumstance of all,
And how by this their child shall be advance'd,
And be received for the emperor's heir,
And substituted in the place of mine,
To calm this tempest whirling in the court;
And let the emperor dandle him for his own.
Hark ye, lords; you see I have given her physic,
Pointing to the Nurse.
And you must needs bestow her funeral;
The fields are near, and you are gallant grooms.
This done, see that you take no longer days,
But send the midwife presently to me.
The midwife and the nurse well made away,
Then let the ladies tattle what they please.
Chi. Aaron, I see thou wilt not trust the air
With secrets.

Dem. For this care of Tamora,
Herself and hers are highly bound to thee.

Exc. Demetrius and Chiron, bearing off the Nurse’s body.

Aur. Now to the Goths, as swift as swallow flies;
There to dispose this treasure in mine arms,
And secretly to greet the empress’ friends.
Come on, you thick-lipp’d slave, I’ll bear you
hence;
For it is you that puts us to our shifts:
I’ll make you feed on berries and on roots,
And feed on curds and whey, and suck the goat,
And cabin in a cave, and bring you up
To be a warrior, and command a camp.
Exit, with the Child.

Scene III.—The Same. A public Place.

Enter Titus, bearing arrows with letters on the ends of them; with him Marcus, young Lucius, Publius, Sempronius, Caius, and other Gentlemen, with bows.

Tit. Come, Marcus, come; kinsmen, this is the way.
Sir boy, now let me see your archery:
Look ey’drawn home enough, and ’tis threestraight.
Terræ Astræa religiæ:
Be you remember’d, Marcus, she’s gone, she’s
fled.
Sirs, take you to your tools. You, cousins, shall Go sound the ocean, and cast your nets;
Happily you may find her in the sea;
Yet there’s as little justice as at land.
No; Publius and Sempronius, you must do it;
’Tis you must dig with mattock and with spade,
And pierce the inmost centre of the earth:
Then, when you come to Pluto’s region,
I pray you, deliver him this petition;
Tell him, it is for justice and for aid,
And that it comes from old Andronicus,
Shaken with sorrows in ungrateful Rome.
Ah! Rome. Well, well; I made thee miserable
What time I threw the people’s suffrages
On him that thus doth tyrannize o’er me.
Go, get you gone; and pray be careful all,
And leave you not a man-of-war unsearch’d:
This wicked emperor may have shipp’d her hence;
And, kinsmen, then we may go pipe for justice.

Marc. O Publius! is not this a heavy case,
To see thy noble uncle thus distract?
Pub. Therefore, my lord, it highly us concerns
By day and night to attend him carefully,
And feed his humour kindly as we may,
Till time beget some careful remedy.

Marc. Kinsmen, his sorrows are past remedy.
Join with the Goths, and with revengeful war
Take wreak on Rome for this ingratitude,
And vengeance on the traitor Saturnine.

Tit. Publius, how now! how now, my masters!
What! have you met with her?
Pub. No, my good lord; but Pluto sends you
word.
If you will have Revenge from hell, you shall:
Marv, for Justice, she is so employ’d,
He thinks, with Jove in heaven, or somewhere else,
So that perforce you must needs stay a time.

Tit. He doth me wrong to feed me with dels,
I’ll dive into the burning lake below,
And pull her out of Acheron by the heels.
Marcus, we are but brubs, no cedars we;
No big-bon’d men fram’d of the Cyclops’ size.
But metal, Marcus, steel to the very back,
Yet wrong with wrongs more than our bad
(can bear:
And sith there’s no justice in earth nor hell,
We will solicit heaven and move the gods
To send down Justice for to wreak our wrong.
Come, to this gear. You’re a good archer, Marc.

He gives them the arrows

Ad. Jovem, that’s for you: here, Ad Apollinem
Ad. Mortem, that’s for myself
Here, boy, to Pallas: here, to Mercury:
To Saturn, Caius, not to Saturnine;
You were as good to shoot against the wind.
To it, boy! Marcus, loose when I bid.
Of my word, I have written to effect;
There’s not a god left unsolicited.

Marc. Kinsmen, shoot all your shafts into the court:
We will afflict the emperor in his pride.

Tit. Now, masters, draw:—They shoot
O! well said, Lucius.
Good boy, in Virgo’s lap; give it Pallas.
Marc. My lord, I am a mile beyond the moon.
Your letter is with Jupiter by this.

Tit. Hal! Publius, Publius, what hast thou don;
See, I thou hast shot off one of Taurus’ horns.

Marc. This was the sport, my lord: we Publius shot,
The Bull, being gall’d, gave Aries such a knock
That down fell both the Ram’s horns in the court.
And who should find them but the empress villain?
She laugh’d, and told the Moor he should no choose
But give them to his master for a present.

Tit. Why, there it goes: God give his lordship
joy!
Enter a Clown, with a basket, and two pigeons in
it.

News! news from heaven! Marcus, the post is
come.
Sirrah, what tidings? have you any letters?
Shall I have justice? what says Jupiter?
Clo. O! the gibe-maker. He says that he hath taken them down again, for the man mus not be hanged till the next week.

Tit. But what says Jupiter, I ask thee?
Clo. Alas! sir, I know not Jupiter; I never drank with him in all my life.

Tit. Why, villain, art not thou the carrier?
Clo. Ay, of my pigeons, sir; nothing else.

Tit. Why, didst thou not come from heaven
Clo. From heaven! alas! sir, I never came there. God forbid I should be so bold to press to heaven in my young days. Why, I am going with my pigeons to the tribunal plebs, to take up a matter of brawl betwixt my uncle and one of the emperor’s men.

Marc. Why, sir, that is as fit as can be to serve for your oration; and let him deliver the pigeons to the emperor from you.

Tit. To thee, can you deliver an oration to the emperor with a grace?
Clo. Nay, truly, sir, I could never say grace in all my life.
Titus. Sirrah, come hither: make no more ado, at give your pigeons to the emperor:
me thou shalt have justice at his hands.
old, hold; meanwhile here's money for thy charges.
ive me pen and ink.
rah, can you with a grace deliver a supplication?
Clo. Ay, sir.
Tit. Then here is a supplication for you.
and when you come to him, at the first approach must kneel; then kiss his foot; then deliver your pigeons; and then look for your reward.
ll be at hand, sir; see you do it bravely.
Clo. I warrant you, sir; let me alone.
Tit. Sirrah, hast thou a knife? Come, let me
see it.
ere, Marcus, fold it in the oration;
or thou hast made it like an humble supplicant:
and when thou hast given it to the emperor,
ock at my door, and tell me what he says.
Clo. God be with you, sir; I will.
Tit. Come, Marcus, let us go. Publius, follow me.
Exeunt. 120

SCENE IV.—The Same. Before the Palace.

Act SATURNINUS, TAMORA, DEMETRIUS,
CHIRON, Lords, and Others: SATURNINUS with the arrows in his hand that Titus shot.

Sat. Why, lords, what wrongs are these!
Was ever seen an emperor in Rome thus overborne, bulled, confronted thus; and, for the extent and justice, us'd in such contempt?
lords, you know, as do the mighty gods,
over these disturbers of our peace in the people's ears, there nought hath pass'd, even with law, against the wilful sons of old Andronicus. And what an if sorrows have so overwhelm'd his wits,
'll we be thus afflicted in his winks,
fits, his frenzy, and his bitterness!
I now he writes to heaven for his redress:
here's to Jove, and this to Mercury;
's to Apollo; this to the god of war;
set scrolls to fly about the streets of Rome!
hat's this but libelling against the senate,
d blazoning our injustice every where?
goodly humour, is it not, my lords?
who would say, in Rome no justice were.
if I live, his reign'd estancies all be no shelter to these outrages;
the and his shall know that justice lives
Saturninus' health; whom, if she sleep,
'll she awake, as she in fury shall
't the proud'st conspirator that lives.
Tam. My gracious lord, my lovely Saturnine,
r of my life, commander of my thoughts,
me thee, and bear the faults of Titus' age,
e effects of sorrow for his valiant sons, lose loss hath pierc'd him deep and scar'd his
heart;
I rather comfort his distressed plight an prosecute the meanest or the best these contempts. Aside. Why, thus it shall become gh-witted Tamora to glaze with all:
Titus, I have touch'd thee to the quick,
Thy life-blood out; if Aaron now be wise,
Then is all safe, the anchor's in the port.

Enter Clown.

How now, good fellow! would'st thou speak
with us?
Clo. Yea, forsooth, an your mistership be em-perial.
Tam. Empress I am, but yonder sits the emperor.
Clo. 'Tis he. God and Saint Stephen give you good den. I have brought you a letter and a couple of pigeons here.

SATURNINUS reads the letter.

Sat. Go, take him away, and hang him pre-
ently.
Clo. How much money must I have?
Tam. Come, sirrah, you must be hanged.
Clo. Hanged! By'r lady, then I have brought up a neck to a fair end. Exit, guarded.

Sat. Despightful and intolerable wrongs! 58
Shall I endure this monstrous villany?
I know from whence this same device proceeds.
May this be borne? As if his traitorous sons,
That died by law for murder of our brother,
Have by my means been butcher'd wrongfully!
Go, drag the villain hither by the hair;
Nor age nor honour shall shape privilege.
For this proud mock I'll be thy slayghterman;
Sly frantic wretch, that holp'st to make me great,
In hope thyself should govern Rome and me.

Enter EMILIUS.

What news with thee, Emilius?
Emil. Arm, my lords! Rome never had more cause.
The Goths have gather'd head, and with a power
Of high-resolved men, bent to the spoil,
They hither march amain, under conduct
Of Lucius, son to old Andronicus;
Who threats, in course of this revenge, to do
As much as ever Coriolanus did.

Sat. Is war-like Lucius general of the Goths?
These tidings nip me, and I hang the head
As flowers with frost or grass beat down with storms.

Ay, now begin our sorrows to approach:
'Tis he the common people love so much;
Myself hath often heard them say,
When I have walked like a private man,
That Lucius' banishment was wrongfully,
And they have wish'd that Lucius were their emperor.

Tam. Why should you fear? is not your city strong?
Sat. Ay, but the citizens favour Lucius,
And will revolt from me to succour him.

Tam. King, be thy thoughts imperious, like thy name.

Is the sun dimm'd, that gnats do fly in it?
The eagle suffers little birds to sing,
And is not careful what they mean thereby,
Knowing that with the shadow of his wings
He can at pleasure stint their melody;
Even so may'st thou the giddy men of Rome.
Then cheer thy spirit; for know, thou emperor,
I will enchant the old Andronicus
With words more sweet, and yet more dangerous,
Than baits to fish, or honey-stalks to sheep,
Whenas the one is wounded with the bair,
The other rotted with delicious feed.

Sat. But he will not entreat his son for us.

Tam. If Tamora entreat him, then he will:
For I can smooth and fill his aged ear
With golden promises, that, were his heart
Almost impregnable, his old ears deaf,
Yet should both ear and heart obey my tongue.

To AEemilius. Go thou before, be our ambassador:
Say that the emperor requests a parley
Of war-like Lucius, and appoint the meeting
Even at his father's house, the old Andronicus.

Sat. Emilius, do this message honourably:
And if he stand on hostage for his safety,
Bid him demand what pledge will please him best.

Emil. Your bidding shall I do effectually.

Tam. Now will I to that old Andronicus,
And temper him with all the art I have,
To pluck proud Lucius from the war-like Goths,
And now, sweet emperor, be blithe again,
And bury all thy fear in my devices.

Sat. Then go successantly, and plead to him.

Exit.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Plains near Rome.

Enter Lucius and an army of Goths, with drum and colours.

Luc. Approved warriors, and my faithful friends,
I have received letters from great Rome,
Which signify what hate they bear their emperor,
And how desirous of our sight they are.
Therefore, great lords, be, as your titles witness,
Imperious and impatient of your wrongs;
And wherein Rome hath done you any scath,
Let him make treble satisfaction.

First Goth. Brave slip, sprung from the great Andronicus,
Whose name was once our terror, now our comfort;
Whose high exploits and honourable deeds
Ingrateful Rome requites with foul contempt,
Be bold in us: we'll follow where thou lead'st,
Like stinging bees in hottest summer's day
Led by their master to the flower'd fields,
And be aveng'd on cursed Tamora.

Goths. And, as he saith, so say we all with him.

Luc. I humbly thank him, and I thank you all.
But who comes here, led by a lusty Goth?

Enter a Goth, leading Aaron, with his Child in his arms.

Second Goth. Renowned Lucius, from our troops I stray'd
To gaze upon a ruinous monastery;
And as I earnestly did fix mine eye
Upon the wasted building, suddenly
I heard a child cry underneath a wall.
I made unto the noise; when soon I heard
The crying babe contr'd with this discourse:
'Peace, tawny slave, half me and half thy dam!
Did not thy hue bewray whose brat thou art,
Hath nature lent thee but thy mother's look,
Villain, thou might'st have been an emperor:
But where the bull and cow are both milk-white,

They never do beget a coal-black calf.
Peace, villain, peace!' even thus he rates a babe.

'For I must bear thee to a trusty Goth;
Who, when he knows thou art the empress',
Will hold thee dearly for thy mother's sake.
With this, my weapon drawn, I rush'd upon him,
Surpris'd him suddenly, and brought him hither,
To use as you think needful of the man.

Luc. O worthy Goth, this is the incarnate devil
That robb'd Andronicus of his good hand:
This is the pearl that pleas'd your empress' ear,
And here's the base fruit of his burning lust.

Say, wall-eyed slave, whither would'st thou convey
This growing image of thy fiend-like face?
Why dost not speak? What! deaf! not a word?
A halter, soldiers! hang him on this tree,
And by his side his fruit of bastardy.

Aor. Touch not the boy; he is of royal blood.

Luc. Too like the sire for ever being good.
First hang the child, that he may see it spare.
A sight to vex the father's soul withal.
Get me a ladder!

Aor. A ladder brought, which Aaron is to ascend

Luc. Lucius, save the child;
And bear it from me to the empress.
If thou do this, I'll show thee wondrous tricks
That highly may advantage thee to hear;
If thou wilt not, befall what may befall,
I'll speak no more but 'Vengeance rot you all!'

Luc. Say on; an if it please me which thou speak'st,
Thy child shall live, and I will see it nourish.
Aor. An if it please thee! why, assure thyself.
'Twill vex thy soul to hear what I shall speak.
For I must talk of murders, rapes, and massacres
Acts of black night, abominable deeds,
Complots of mischief, treason, villanies
Ruthful to hear, yet piteously perform'd:
And this shall all be buried in my death,
Unless thou swear to me my child shall live.

Luc. Tell on thy mind; I say thy child shall live.

Aor. Swear that he shall, and then I will begin.

Luc. Who should I swear by? thou believest no god:
That granted, how canst thou believe an oath?
Aor. What if I do not? as, indeed, I do not.
Yet, for I know thou art religious,
And hast a thing within thee called conscience
With twenty popish tricks and ceremonies,
Which I have seen thee careful to observe,
Therefore I urge thee oath; for that I know
An idiot holds his bangle for a god,
And keeps the oath which by that god he swears
To that I'll urge him: therefore thou shalt

By that same god, what god soe'er it be,
That thou ador'st and hast in reverence,
To save my boy, to nourish and bring him up
Or else I will discover nought to thee.

Luc. Even by my god I swear to thee I will

Aor. First know thou, I begot him on thy empress.

Luc. O most insatiate and luxurious woman
TITUS ANDRONICUS.

Enter Tarn.

Tarn. Tut! Lucius, this was but a deed of charity that which thou shalt hear of me anon. was her two sons that murder'd Bassianus;
ey cut thy sister's tongue and ravish'd her, d cut her hands and trimm'd her as thou saw'st.

Luc. O detestable villain! call'st thou that trimming?

Tarn. Why, she was wash'd, and cut, and trimm'd, and 'twas im sport for them that had the doing of it.

Luc. O barbarous, beastly villains, like thyself!

Indeed, I was their tutor to instruct them, at coddling spirit had they from their mother, sure a card as ever won the set;
100 at bloody mind, I think, they learnt of me, true a dog as ever fought at head.

All, let my deeds be witness of my worth.
cain'd thy brethren to that guileful hole were the dead corpse of Bassianus lay;
rote the letter that thy father found,
bad the gold within the letter mention'd, federate with the queen and her two sons:
what not done, that thou hast cause to rue, herein I had no stroke of mischief in it?
lay'd the cheater for thy father's hand,
d, when I had it, drew myself apart,
d almost broke my heart with extreme laughter.

ry'd me through the crevice of a wall for, his hand, he had his two sons' heads;
held his tears, and laugh'd so heartily,
at both mine eyes were rainy like to his:
d when I told the empress of this sport,
 swooned almost at my pleasing tale,
d for my tidings gave me twenty kisses.

First Goth. What I canst thou say all this, and never blush?

Ay, like a black dog, as the saying is.

Art thou not sorry for these heinous deeds?

Ay, that I had not done a thousand more.
en now I curse the day, and yet, I think,

w come within the compass of my curse,
herein I did not some notorious ill:
kill a man, or else devise his death;
dish a maid, or plot the way to do it;
use some innocent, and forswear myself;

deathly enmity between two friends;
ke poor men's cattle break their necks;
fire on barns and hay-stacks in the night,
d bid the owners quench them with their tears.

I have digg'd up dead men from their graves,
d set them upright at their dear friends' doors,
en when their sorrows almost were forgot;
d on their skins, as on the bark of trees, we with my knife carved in Roman letters, et not your sorrow die, though I am dead.

I have done a thousand dreadful things willingly as one would kill a fly.

dothing grieves me heartily indeed that I cannot do ten thousand more.

Luc. Bring down the devil, for he must not die sweet a death as hanging presently.

Aar. If there be devils, would I were a devil,
To live and burn in everlasting fire,
So I might have your company in hell,
But to torment you with my bitter tongue!

Luc. Sirs, stop his mouth, and let him speak no more.

Enter a Goth.

Goth. My lord, there is a messenger from Rome
Desires to be admitted to your presence.

Luc. Let him come near.

Enter Æmilius.

Welcome, Æmilus! what's the news from Rome?

Æmil. Lord Lucius, and you princes of the Goths.
The Roman emperor greets you all by me;
And, for he understands you are in arms,
He cries a parley at your father's house,
Willing you to demand your hostages:
And they shall be immediately deliver'd.

First Goth. What says our general?

Æmil. Lucius, let the emperor give his pledges
Unto my father and my uncle Marcus,

And we will come. March away.

Enter Tamora, Demetrius, and Chiron, disguised.

Tam. Thus, in this strange and sad habili-
ment,

I will encounter with Andronicus,
And say I am Revenge, sent from below
To join with him and right his heinous wrongs.
Knock at his study, where they say he keeps,
To ruminate strange plots of dire revenge;
Tell him, Revenge is come to join with him,
And work confusion on his enemies.

They knock.

Enter Titus, above.

Tit. Who doth molest my contemplation?

Is it your trick to make me ope the door,
That so my sad decrees may fly away,
And all my study be to no effect?

You are deceit'd; for what I mean to do,
See here, in bloody lines I have set down;
And what is written shall be executed.

Tam. Titus, I am come to talk with thee.

Tit. No, not a word; how can I grace my talk,
Wanting a hand to give it action?

Thou hast the odds of me; therefore no more.

Tam. If thou diest know me, thou would'st talk with me.

Tit. I am not mad; I know thee well enough:
Witness this wretched stump, witness these crimson lines;
Witness these trenches made by grief and care;
Witness the tiring day and heavy night;
Witness all sorrow, that I know thee well.

For our proud empress, mighty Tamora.
Is not thy coming for my other hand?

Tam. Know, thou sad man, I am not Tamora;
She is thy enemy, and I thy friend:
I am Revenge, sent from the infernal kingdom,
To ease the gnawing vulture of thy mind.

By working wreakful vengeance on thy foes.
Come down and welcome me to this world's light;
Confere with me of murder and of death.
There's not a hollow cave or lurking-place,
No vast obscurity or misty vale,
Where bloody murder or detested rape
Can couche for fear, but I will find it out;
And in their ears tell them my dreadful name,
Revenge, which makes the foul offender quake.
Tit. Art thou Revenge? and art thou sent to me,
To be a torment to mine enemies?
Tam. I am; therefore come down, and welcome me.

Tit. Do me some service ere I come to thee.
Lo, by thy side where Rape and Murder stands;
Now give some assurance that thou art Revenge:
Stab them, or tear them on thy chariot-wheels,
And then I'll come and be thy waggoner,
And whirl along with thee about the globe.
Provide two proper falreys, black as jet,
To hale thy vengeful waggon swift away,
And find out murderers in their guilty caves:
And when thy car is laden with their heads,
I will dismiss, and by the waggon-wheel
Trot like a servile foottman all day long,
Even from Hyerion's rising in the east
Until his very downfall in the sea:
And day by day I'll do this heavy task,
So thou destroy Rape and Murder there.
Tit. These are my ministers, and come with me.

Tit. Are these thy ministers? what are they call'd?
Tam. Rape and Murder; therefore called so,
'Cause they take vengeance of such kind of men.
Tit. Good Lord, how like the empress' sons they are,
And you the empress! but we worldly men
Have miserable, mad, mistaking eyes.
O sweet Revenge! now do I come to thee;
And, if one arm's embracement will content thee,
I will embrace thee in it by and by. Exit above.

Tit. This closing with him fits his lunacy.
Whate'er I forge to feed his brain-sick fits,
Do you uphold and maintain in your speeches,
For now he firmly takes me for Revenge;
And, being credulous in this mad thought,
I'll make him send for Lucius his son;
And, whilst I at a banquet hold him sure,
I'll find some cunning practice out of hand
To scatter and disperse the giddy Goths,
Or, at the least, make them his enemies.
See, here he comes, and I must ply my theme.

Enter Titus.

Tit. Long have I been forlorn, and all for thee:
Welcome, dear Fury, to my woeful house:
Rapine and Murder, you are welcome too.
How like the empress and her sons you are!
Well are you fitted had you but a Moor:
Could not all hell afford you such a devil?
For well I wot the empress never wags
But in her company there is a Moor;
And would you represent our queen ariht,
It were convenient you had such a devil.
But welcome as you are. What shall we do?
Tam. What wouldst thou have us do, Andronicus?

Dem. Show me a murderer, I'll deal with him.
Chi. Show me a villain that hath done a m,
And I am sent to be reveng'd on him.
Tam. Show me a thousand that have done thee wrong,
And I will be revenged on them all.
Tit. Look round about the wicked streets of Rome,
And when thou find'st a man that's like thy self,
Good Murder, stab him; he's a murderer.
Go thou with him; and when it is thy hap
To find another that is like to thee,
Good Rapine, stab him; he's a ravier.
Go thou with them; and in the emperor's court
There is a queen attended by a Moor;
Well may'st thou know her by thine own proportion,
For up and down she doth resemble thee:
I pray thee, do on them some violent death
They have been violent to me and mine.

Tam. Well hast thou lesson'd us; this shall we do.
But would it please thee, good Andronicus,
To send for Lucius, thy thrice-valiant son,
Who leads towards Rome a band of warlike Goths,
And bid him come and banquet at thy house.
When he is here, even at thy solemn feast,
I will bring in the empress and her sons,
The emperor himself, and all thy foes,
And at thy mercy shall they stoop and kneel
And on them shalt ease thy angry heart.
What says Andronicus to this device?

Tit. Marcus, my brother! 'tis sad Titus can.

Enter Marcus.

Go, gentle Marcus, to thy nephew Lucius;
Thou shalt inquire him out among the Goths;
Bid him repair to me, and bring with him
Some of the chiefest princes of the Goths;
Bid him encamp his soldiers where they are
Tell him, the emperor and the empress too
Feast at my house, and he shall feast with them.
This do thou for my love; and so let him,
As he regards his aged father's life.
Marc. This will I do, and soon return again.

Tam. Now will I hence about thy business
And take my ministers along with me.
Tit. Nay, nay, let Rape and Murder stay with me;
Or else I'll call my brother back again,
And cleave to no revenge but Lucius.

Tam. Aside to her sons. What say you, boy,
And you abide with him,
While I go tell my lord the emperor
How I have govern'd our determin'd jest?
Yield to his humour, smooth and speak him fair;
And tarry with him till I turn again.

Tit. Aside. I know them all, though the suppos'd me mad,
And will o'erreach them in their own devices
A pair of cursed hell-hounds and their dam,
Dem. Madam, depart at pleasure; I leave us here.
Tam. Farewell, Andronicus: Revenge now go
To lay a compot to betray thy foes.

Tit. I know thou dost; and, sweet Revenge, farewell.

Exit TAMOR.

Chi. Tell us, old man, how shall we be employ'd?

Exit CHI.
TITUS ANDRONICUS.

TITUS. I have work enough for you to do. Publius, come hither, Caius, and Valentine! Enter PUBLIUS and Others.

Publius. What is your will?

Caius. Know you these two?

Valentine. The empress' sons.

Caius. The one is Murder, Rape is the other's name; therefore bind them, gentle Publius; and, Valentine, lay hands on them. Have you heard me wish for such an hour, and now I find it: therefore bind them sure, I'll stop their mouths if they begin to cry.

Enter TITUS, with LAVINIA; she bearing a basin, and he a knife.

CELIA. Villains, forbear! we are the empress' sons. Publius. And therefore do we what we are commanded.

Caius. Stop their mouths, let them not speak a word.

Valentine. Sure bound? look that you bind them fast.

Enter TITUS, with LAVINIA; she bearing a basin, and he a knife.

TITUS. Come, come, Lavinia; look, thy foes are bound, stop their mouths, let them not speak to me, let them hear what fearful words I utter. Villains, Chiron and Demetrius! stands the spring whom you have stain'd with mud, a goodly season with your winter mix'd. a kill'd her husband, and for that vile fault of her brothers were condemn'd to death, and cut off and made a merry jest: a sweet hand, her tongue, and that more dear hands or tongue, her spotless chastity, human traitors, you constrain'd and forc'd. at would you say if I should let you speak? stains, for shame you could not beg for grace. ek! wretches, how I mean to martyr you. one hand yet is left to cut your throats, list that Lavinia 'twixt her stumps doth hold a basin that receives your guilty blood, I know your mother means to feast with me, I call her Revenge, and thinks me mad. Villains, I will grind your bones to dust, with your blood and it I'll make a paste; of the paste a coffin I will rear, make two pasties of your shameful heads; bid that trumpeter, your unhallow'd dam, to the earth swallow her own increase. is the feast that I have bid her to this the banquet she shall surfeit on; worse than Philomel you're; my daughter, I worse than Procne I will be reveng'd. I now prepare your throats. Lavinia, come, He cuts their throats. receive the blood: and when that they are dead, be go grind their bones to powder small, with this hateful liquor temper it; in that paste let their vile heads be bak'd. come, be every one officious make this banquet, which I wish may prove More stern and bloody than the Centaurs' feast. So, now bring them in, for I'll play the cook, And see them ready 'gainst their mother comes. Exeunt, bearing the dead bodies.

SCENE III.—The Same. Court of Titus's House. A banquet set out.

Enter LUCIUS, MARCUS, and Goths; with AARON, prisoner.

Lucius. Uncle Marcus, since 'tis my father's mind That I repair to Rome, I am content. First Goth. And ours with thine, befall what fortune will. Lucius. Good uncle, take you in this barbarous Moor, This ravenous tiger, this accursed devil; Let him receive no sustenance, fetter him, Till he be brought unto the empress' face, For testimony of her foul proceedings: And see the ambush of our friends be strong; I fear the emperor means no good to us. Avow. Some devil whisper curses in mine ear, And prompt me, that my tongue may utter forth The venomous malice of my swelling heart! Lucius. Away, inhuman dog! unshallow'd slave! Sirs, help our uncle to convey him in. Exeunt Goths, with AARON. Trumpets sound. The trumpets show the emperor is at hand.

Enter SATURNINUS and TAMORA, with EMILIUS, Senators, Tribunes, and Others.

Saturninus. What! hath the firmament more suns than one? Lucius. What boots it thee to call thyself a sun! Marcus. Rome's emperor, and nephew, break the parole; These quarrels must be quietly debated. The feast is ready which the careful Titus Hath ordain'd to an honourable end, For peace, for love, for league, and good to Rome: Please you, therefore, draw nigh, and take your places.

Saturninus. Marcus, we will. Haubocks sound.

Enter TITUS, dressed like a cook; LAVINIA, veiled, young LUCIUS, and Others. Titus places the dishes on the table.

TITUS. Welcome, my gracious lord; welcome, dread queen; Welcome, ye war-like Goths; welcome, Lucius; And welcome, all. Although the cheer be poor, 'Twill fill your stomachs; please you eat of it. Why art thou thus attir'd, Andronicus? Titus. Because I would be sure to have all well, To entertain your highness, and your empress. Tam. We are beholding to you, good Andronicus. TITUS. An if your highness knew my heart, you were. My lord the emperor, resolve me this: Was it well done of rash Virginius To slay his daughter with his own right hand, Because she was enforc'd, stain'd, and deflower'd? Lucius. It was, Andronicus. TITUS. Your reason, mighty lord?
Sat. Because the girl should not survive her
shame,
And by her presence still renew his sorrows.
Tit. A reason mighty, strong, and effectual;
A pattern, precedent, and lively warrant,
For me, most wretched, to perform the like
Die, die, Lavinia, and thy shame with thee;
And with thy shame thy father's sorrow die!

Kills Lavinia.

Sat. What hast thou done, unnatural and unkind?
Tit. Kill'd her, for whom my tears have made me blind.
I am as woeeful as Virginius was,
And have a thousand times more cause than he
to do this outrage: and it now is done.
Sat. What! was she ravish'd? tell who did the deed.
Tit. Will 't please you eat? will 't please your highness feed?
Tan. Why hast thou slain thine only daughter thus?
Tit. Not I; 'twas Chiron and Demetrius:
They ravish'd her, and cut away her tongue;
And they, 'twas they, that did her all this wrong.
Sat. Go fetch them hither to us presently.
Tit. Why, there they are both, baked in that pie;
Whereof their mother daintily hath fed,
Eating the flesh that she herself hath bred,
'Tis true, 'tis true; witness my knife's sharp point.

Kills Tamora.

Sat. Die, frantic wretch, for this accurs'd deed!

Kills Titus.

Luc. Can the son's eye behold his father bleed?
There's need for meed, death for a deadly deed!

Kills Saturninus. A great tumult. The people in confusion disperse. Marcus, Lucius, and their partisans, go up into the balcony.

Marc. You sad-fac'd men, people and sons of Rome,
By uproar sever'd, like a flight of fowl
Scatter'd by winds and high tempestuous gusts,
O! let me teach you how to knit again
This scatter'd corn into one mutual sheaf,
These broken limbs again into one body;
Lest Rome herself be borne unto herself,
And she whom mighty kingdoms court'sy to,
Like a forlorn and desperate castaway,
Do shameful execution on herself.
But if my frosty signs and chaps of age,
Grave witnesses of true experience,
Cannot induce you to attend my words,
To Lucius. Speak, Rome's dear friend, as erst our ancestor,
When with his solemn tongue he did discourse
To love-sick Dido's sad attending ear
The story of that baleful burning night
When subtle Greeks surpris'd King Priam's Troy;
Tell us what Sinon hath bewitch'd our ears,
Or who hath brought the fatal engine in
That gives our Troy, our Rome, the civil wound.
My heart is not compact of flint nor steel,
Nor can I utter all our bitter grief,
But floods of tears will drown my oratory,
And break my utterance, even in the time
When it should move you to attend me most,
Lending your kind commiseration.

Here is a captain, let him tell the tale:
Your hearts will throb and weep to hearing speak.

Luc. Then, noble auditory, be it known to you
That cursed Chiron and Demetrius
Were they that murdered our emperor's brother,
And they it was that ravished our sister.
For their fell faults our brothers were beheld,
Our father's tears despi'sd, and basely cozen'd
Of that true hand that fought Rome's quarrel,
And sent her enemies unto the grave:
Lastly, myself unkindly banished,
The gates shut on me, and turn'd weeping to
To beg relief among Rome's enemies;
Who drown'd their enmity in my true tears,
And op'd their arms to embrace me as a friend.
I am the turn'd forth, be it known to you,
That have preserv'd her welfare in my blood,
And from her bosom took the enemy's spoils:
Sheathing the steel in my adventurous body.
Ah! you know I am no vaunter, I;
My scars can witness, dumb although they are;
That my report is just and full of truth.
But soft! methinks I do digress too much,
Citing my worthless praise: O! pardon me.
For when no friends are by, men praise the selves.

Marc. Now is my turn to speak. Behold a child;
Of this was Tamora delivered,
The issue of an irreligious Moor,
Chief architect and plotter of these woes.
The villain is alive in Titus' house,
Damn'd as he is, to witness this is true.
Now judge what cause had Titus to revenge
These wrongs, unspeakable, past patience,
Or more than any living man could bear.
Now you have heard the truth, what say ye?

Romans?

Have we done aught amiss, show us where.
And, from the place where you behold us now,
The poor remainder of Andronici
Will hand in hand all headlong cast us down
And on the ragged stones beat forth our brains
And make a mutual closure of our house.
Speak, Romans, speak! and if you say we shal
Let! hand in hand, Lucius and I will fall.

Emil. Come, come, thou reverend man of Rome,
And bring our emperor gently in thy hand,
Lucius our emperor; for well I know
The common voice do cry it shall be so.

Marc. Lucius, all hail! Rome's royal emperor.

To Attendants. Go, go into old Titus' sorrow
house,
And hither hale that misbelieving Moor,
To be adjudge'd some direful slaughter'd death
As punishment for his most wicked life.

Exeunt Attendants.

Lucius, Marcus, and the Others descend.

All. Lucius, all hail! Rome's gracious governor.

Luc. Thanks, gentle Romans: may I govern
To heal Rome's harms, and wipe away her wounds.
But, gentle people, give me a little a while.
For nature puts me to a heavy task.

Stand all aloof; but, uncle, draw you near,
To shed obsequious tears upon this trunk.
O! take this warm kiss on thy pale cold lips,

Kisses Titus.
ese sorrowful drops upon thy blood-stain'd face,
the last true duties of thy noble son.

Marc. Tear for tear, and loving kiss for kiss,
y brother Marcus tenders on thy lips:
were the sum of these that I should pay unless and infinite, yet would I pay them.

Luc. Come hither, boy; come, come, and learn of us melt in showers: thy grandsire lov'd thee
well:
y a time he danc'd thee on his knee,
ing thee asleep, his loving breast thy pillow;
y a matter hath he told to thee,
et and agreeing with thine infancy;
that respect, then, like a loving child,
d yet some small drops from thy tender spring,
cause kind nature doth require it so:
ends should associate friends in grief and woe.
him farewell; commit him to the grave;
that kindness, and take leave of him.

oy. O grandsire, grandsire! even with all my heart
uld I were dead, so you did live again.
ond! I cannot speak to him for weeping;
tears will choke me if I ope my mouth.

Re-enter Attendants, with AARON.
First Rom. You sad Andronic, have done with woes:
Give sentence on this execrable wretch,
That hath been breeder of these dire events.

Luc. Set him breast-deep in earth, and famish
him;
There let him stand, and rave, and cry for food:
If any one relieves or pities him,
For the offence he dies. This is our doom:
Some stay to see him fasten'd in the earth.

Aar. O! why should wrath be mute, and fury dumb?
I am no baby, I, that with base prayers
I should repent the evils I have done.
Ten thousand worse than ever yet I did
Would I perform, if I might have my will:
If one good deed in all my life I did,
I do repent it from my very soul.

Luc. Some loving friends convey the emperor
hence,
And give him burial in his father's grave.
My father and Lavinia shall forthwith
Be closed in our household's monument.
As for that heinous tiger, Tamora,
No funeral rite, nor man in mourning weeds,
No mournful bell shall ring her burial;
But throw her forth to beasts and birds of prey.
Her life was beast-like, and devoid of pity;
And, being so, shall have like want of pity. 209
See justice done on Aaron, that damn'd Moor,
By whom our heavy haps had their beginning:
Then, afterwards, to order well the state,
That like events may ne'er it ruinate. 210

Exeunt.
PROLOGUE.

Enter CHORUS.

Two households, both alike in dignity
In fair Verona, where we lay our scene,
From ancient grudge break to new mutiny,
Where civil blood makes civil hands unclean.
From forth the fatal loins of these two foes
A pair of star-cross'd lovers take their life;
Whose misadventur'd piteous overthrows
Do with their death bury their parents' strife.
The fearful passage of their death-mark'd love,
And the continuance of their parents' rage,
Which, but their children's end, nought could remove,
Is now the two hours' traffic of our stage;
The which if you with patient ears attend,
What here shall miss, our toil shall strive to mend.

Exit.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Verona. A public Place.

Enter Sampson and Gregory, armed with swords and buckles.

Samp. Gregory, o' my word, we'll not carry coals.

Gre. No, for then we should be colliers.

Samp. I mean, an we be in choler, we'll draw.

Gre. Ay, while you live, draw your neck out o' the collar.

Samp. I strike quickly, being moved.

Gre. But thou art not quickly moved to strike.

Samp. A dog of the house of Montague moves me.

Gre. To move is to stir, and to be valiant.

Samp. A dog of that house shall move me.

Gre. That shows thee a weak slave; for the weakest goes to the wall.

Samp. 'Tis true; and therefore women, betwixt the weaker vessels, are ever thrust to the wall; therefore I will push Montague's men from the wall, and thrust his maids to the wall.

Gre. The quarrel is between our masters and us their men.

Samp. 'Tis all one, I will show myself a tyrant; when I have fought with the men, I will be cruel with the maids; I will cut off their heads.

Gre. The heads of the maids?

Samp. Ay, the heads of the maids, or the maidenheads; take it in what sense the wilt.

Gre. They must take it in sense that feel it.

Samp. Me they shall feel while I am able to stand; and 'tis known I am a pretty piece of flesh.

Gre. 'Tis well thou art not fish; if thou hast thou hast been poor John. Draw thy tool here comes two of the house of the Montague.
Enter Abraham and Balthasar.

Samp. My naked weapon is out: quarrel; I'll back thee.

Fri. How! turn thy back and run?

Samp. Fear me not.

Fri. No, marry; I fear thee!

Samp. Let us take the law of our sides; let us begin.

Fri. I will frown as I pass by, and let them see it as they list.

Samp. Nay, as they dare. I will bite my thumb at them; which is a disrege to them, they bear it.

Abr. Do you bite your thumb at us, sir?

Samp. I do bite my thumb, sir.

Abr. Do you bite your thumb at us, sir?

Samp. Aside to Gregory. Is the law of our e if I say ay?

Fri. No.

Samp. No, sir, I do not bite my thumb at you; but I bite my thumb, sir.

Fri. Do you quarrel, sir?

Abr. Quarrel, sir! no, sir.

Samp. If you do, sir, I am for you: I serve as a man as you.

Abr. No better.

Samp. Well, sir.

Enter Benvolio.

Fri. Aside to Sampson. Say 'better': here are none of my master's kinsmen.

Samp. Yes, better, sir.

Fri. You lie.

Samp. Draw, if you be men. Gregory, remember thy swashing blow. They fight.

Ben. Part, fools!

Up your swords; you know not what you do.

Boots down their swords.

Enter Tybalt.

Clyb. What! art thou drawn among these heartless hinds?

Fri. thee, Benvolio, look upon thy death.

Ben. I do but keep the peace: put up thy sword, manage it to part these men with me.

Clyb. What! drawn, and talk of peace; I hate the word, I hate hell, all Montagues, and thee.

Fri. at thee, coward! They fight.

Enter several of both houses, who join the fray; then enter citizens, with clubs.

First Cit. Clubs, bills, and partisans! strike! beat them down with the Capulets! down with the Montagues!

Enter Capulet in his gown; and Lady Capulet.

Cap. What noise is this? Give me my long sword, ho!

Lady Cap. A crutch, a crutch! Why call you for a sword?

Cap. My sword, I say! Old Montague is come, d'flourishes his blade in spite of me.

Enter Montague and Lady Montague.

Mon. Thou villain Capulet! Hold me not; let me go.

Lady Mon. Thou shalt not stir one foot to seek a foe.

Enter Prince, with his Train.

Prince. Rebellious subjects, enemies to peace, Profaners of this neighbour-stained steel,— Will they not hear? What hol ye men, you beasts, That quench the fire of your pernicious rage With purple fountains issuing from your veins, On pain of torture, from those bloody hands Throw your mistringer'd weapons to the ground, And hear the sentence of your moved prince.

Three civil brawls, bred of an airy word, By thee, old Capulet, and Montague, Have thrice disturb'd the quies of our streets, And made Verona's ancient citizens Cast by their grave beseeeming ornaments, To wield old partisans, in hands as old, Canker'd with peace, to part your canker'd hate. If ever you disturb our streets again Your lives shall pay the forfeit of the peace. For this time, all the rest depart away: You, Capulet, shall go along with me; And, Montague, come you this afternoon To know our further pleasure in this case, To old Free-town, our common judgment-place. Once more, on pain of death, all men depart.

Exeunt all but Montague, Lady Montague, and Benvolio.

Mon. Who set this ancient quarrel new abroach? Speak, nephew, were you by when it began?

Ben. Here were the servants of your adversary And yours close fighting ere I did approach: I drew to part them; in the instant came The fiery Tybalt, with his sword prepar'd, Which, as he breath'd defiance to my ears, He swung about his head, and cut the winds, Who nothing hurt withal hissed him in scorn. While we were interchanging thrusts and blows, Camemore and more, and fought on part and part, Till the prince came, who parted either part.

Lady Mon. O! where is Romeo? saw you him to-day?

Right glad I am he was not at this fray.

Ben. Madam, an hour before the worshipp'd sun Peer'd forth the golden window of the east, A troubled mind drive me to walk abroad; Where, underneath the grove of sycamore That rooteth toward from the city's side, So early walking did I see your son: Towards him I made; but he was ware of me, And stole into the covert of the wood; I, measuring his affections by my own, That most are busied when they're most alone, Pursu'd my humour not pursuing his, And gladly shunn'd who gladly fled from me.

Mon. Many a morning hath he there been seen, With tears augmenting the fresh morning's dew, Adding to clouds more clouds with his deep sighs: But all so soon as the all-cheering sun Should in the furthest east begin to draw The shady curtains from Aurora's bed, Away from light steals home my heavy son, And private in his chamber pens himself, Shuts up his windows, locks fair daylight out, And makes himself an artificial night. Black and portentous must this ominous prove Unlesss good counsel may the cause remove.

Ben. My noble uncle, do you know the cause?
Mon. I neither know it nor can learn of him.
Ben. Have you importun'd him by any means?
Mon. Both by myself and many other friends:
But he, his own affections' counsellor,
Is to himself, I will not say how true,
But to himself so secret and so close,
So far from sounding and discovery,
As is the bud bit with an envious worm.
But he can spread his sweet leaves to the air,
Or dedicate his beauty to the sun.
Could we but learn from whence his sorrows grow,
We would as willingly give cure as know.

Enter Romeo.

Ben. See where he comes: so please you, step aside;
I'll know his grievance, or be much denied.

Mon. I would thou wert so happy by thy stay,
To hear true shift. Come, madam, let's away.

Exeunt Montague and Lady Montague.

Ben. Good morrow, cousin.
Rom. Is the day so young?
Ben. But new struck nine.
Rom. Ay me! sad hours seem long.

Was that my father that went hence so fast!
Ben. It was. What sadness lengthens Romeo's hours?
Rom. Not having that, which, having, makes them short.
Ben. In love?
Rom. Out—
Ben. Of love?
Rom. Out of her favour, where I am in love.
Ben. Alas! that love, so gentle in his view,
Should be so tyrannous and rough in proof.
Rom. Alas! that love, whose view is muffled still,
Should, without eyes, see pathways to his will.
Where shall we dine? O me! What fray was here?

Yet tell me not, for I have heard it all.
Here's much to do with hate, but more with love:
Why then, O brawling love! O loving hate!
O any thing! of nothing first created.
O heavy lightness! serious vanity!
Misspav'n chaos of well-seeming forms!
Feather of lead, bright smoke, cold fire, sick health!
Still-waking sleep, that is not what it is!
This love feel I, that feel no love in this.

Dost thou not laugh?
Ben. No, coz, I rather weep.
Rom. Good heart, at what?
Ben. At thy good heart's oppression.
Rom. Why, such is love's transgression.
Griefs of mine own lie heavy in my breast,
Which thou wilt propagate to have it press'd
With more of thine; this love that thou hast shown
Dost add more grief to too much of mine own.
Love is a smoke made with the fume of sighs;
Being purg'd, a fire sparkling in lovers' eyes;
Being vex'd, a sea nourish'd with lovers' tears:
What is it else? a madness most discreet,
A choking gall, and a preserving sweet.

Farewell, my coz.
Ben. Soft, I will go along;
An if you leave me so, you do me wrong.
Rom. Tut! I have lost myself: I am not here;
This is not Romeo, he's some other where.
Ben. Tell me in sadness, who is that you love.

Rom. What! shall I groan and tell thee?
Ben. Groan! why, but sadly tell me who.
Rom. Bid a sick man in sadness make his pills?
Ah! word ill urg'd to one that is so ill.
In sadness, cousin, I do love a woman.
Ben. I am so near when I supposed you did.
Rom. A right good mark-man! And she's so fair I love.
Ben. A right fair mark, fair coz, is soonest.
Rom. Well, in that hit you miss: she'll be hit.

With Cupid's arrow; she hath Dian's wit;
And, in strong proof of chastity well arm'd.
From love's weak childish bow she lives unarm'd.
She will not stay the siege of loving terms,
Nor hide the encounter of assaying eyes,
Nor ope her lap to saint-seducing gold:
O! she is rich in beauty; only poor
That when she dies, with beauty dies her star.
Ben. Then she hath sworn that she will live chaste?
Rom. She hath, and in that sparing me huge waste;
For beauty starv'd with her severity
Cuts beauty off from all posterity.
She is too fair, too wise, wisely too fair,
To merit bliss by making me despair:
She hath forsworn to love, and in that vow
Do I live dead that live to tell it now.
Ben. Be rul'd by me; forget to think of it.
Rom. O! teach me how I should forget to think.
Ben. By giving liberty unto thine eyes:
Examine other beauties.
Rom. 'Tis the way
To call hers exquisite, in question more.
These happy masks that kiss fair ladies' brows,
Being black put us in mind they hide the face
That is strucken blind cannot forget.
The precious treasure of his eyesight lost:
Show me a mistress that is passing fair,
What doth her beauty serve but as a note
Where I may read who pass'd that passing fair.
Farewell: thou canst not teach me to forgive.
Ben. I'll pay that doctrine, or else die in despair.

Scene II.—The Same. A Street.

Enter Capulet, Paris, and Servant.

Cap. But Montague is bound as well as I,
In penalty alike; and 'tis not hard, I think,
For men so old as we to keep the peace.

Par. Of honourable reckoning are you both,
And pity 'tis you liv'd at odds so long.
But now, my lord, what say you to my suit?

Cap. But saying o'er what I have said before,
My child is yet a stranger in the world,
She hath not seen the change of fourteen years
Let two more summers wither in their pride
Ere we may think her ripe to be a bride.

Par. Younger than she are happy mothers made.

Cap. And too soon married are those so made.

The earth hath swallow'd all my hopes but she;
She is the hopeful lady of my earth;
But woer her, gentle Paris, get her heart.
My will to her consent is but a part...
She agree, within her scope of choice
As my consent and fair according voice.
I night I hold an old accustom'd feast,
Here to I have invited many a guest
As I love; and you, among the store,
No more, most welcome, makes my number
More.
My poor house look to behold this night
With treading stars that make dark heaven
Light:
Ch comfort as do lusty young men feel
T'en well-apparel'd April on the heel
Limping winter treads, even such delight
Long fresh female buds shall you this night
Here at my house: hear all, all see,
'd like her most whose merit most shall be;
Rich on more view of many of mine being one
By stand in number, though in reckoning none.
Me, go with me. To Servant, giving a paper.
Go, sirrah, trudge about
Through fair Verona; find those persons out
These names are written there, and to them you
Now whole and welcome on their pleasure stay.

Exeunt Capulet and Paris.

Serv. Find them out whose names are written re!
It is written that the shoemaker should ride with his yard, and the tailor with his
It, the fisher with his pencil, and the painter with his nets; but I am sent to find those persons
These names are here writ, and can never find
At names the writing person hath here writ.
Must to the learned. In good time.

Enter Benvolio and Romeo.

Ben. Tut! man, one fire burns out another's Burning.
One pain is less'n'd by another's anguish;
'm giddy, and be holp by backward turning;
One desperate grief cures with another's lan-Guish:
Thou some new infection to thy eye,
The rank poison of the old will die.
Rom. Your plantain leaf is excellent for that.
Ben. For what, I pray thee?
Rom. For your broken shin.
Ben. Why, Romeo, art thou mad?
Rom. Not mad, but bound more than a madman is;
Put up in prison, kept without my food,
Hipp'd and tormented, and—Good den, good Fellow.
Serv. God gi' good den. I pray, sir, can you Ad?
Rom. Ay, mine own fortune in my misery. 60 Serv. Perhaps you have learned it without book: but, I pray, can you read any thing you see?
Rom. Ay, if I know the letters and the language.
Serv. Ye say honestly; rest you merry.
Rom. Stay, fellow; I can read.
Signior Martino and his wife and daughters;
Nunzio Ascanio and his beautiful sisters; the lady Dow of Vitruvio; Signor Placentio and his Vely nieces; Mercutio and his brother Valentine;
The uncle Capulet, his wife and daughters; my Sir niece Rosaline; Livia; Signior Valentio and Cousins Tybalt; Lucio and the lively Helena.
Fair assembly; whither should they come?
Serv. Up.
Rom. Whither?

Serv. To supper; to our house.
Rom. Whose house?
Serv. My master's.
Rom. Indeed, I should have asked you that Before.
Serv. Now I'll tell you without asking. My Master is the great rich Capulet; and if you be
Not of the house of Montagues, I pray, come
And crush a cup of wine. Rest you merry!

Ben. At this same ancient feast of Capulet's,
Sups the fair Rosaline, whom thou so lov'st,
With all the admired beauties of Verona:
Go thither; and with unattainted eye
Compare her face with some that I shall show,
And I will make thee think thy swan a crow.

Rom. When the devout religion of mine eye Maintains such falsehood, then turn tears to Fires!
And these, who often drown'd could never die,
Transparent heretics, be burnt for liars!
One fairer than my love! the all-seeing sun
Ne'er saw her match since first the world begun.
Ben. Tut! you saw her fair, none else being by,
Herself pois'd with herself in either eye;
But in that crystal scales let there be weigh'd
Your lady's love against some other maid
That I will show you shining at this feast,
And she shall scant show well that now shows
Best.
Rom. I'll go along, no such sight to be shown,
But to rejoice in splendour of mine own.

Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. A Room in Capulet's
House.

Enter Lady Capulet and Nurse.

Lady Cap. Nurse, where's my daughter? call
Her forth to me.
Nurse. Now, by my maidenhead, at twelve
Year old,
I bade her come. What, lamb! what, lady-bird!
God forbid! Where's this girl? What, Juliet?

Enter Juliet.

Jul. How now! who calls?
Nurse. Your mother.

Jul. Madam, I am here.

What is your will?

Lady Cap. This is the matter. Nurse, give Leave awhile,
We must talk in secret: nurse, come back again;
I have remember'd me, thou's hear our counsel.
Thou know'st my daughter's of a pretty age. 10
Nurse. Faith, I can tell her age unto an hour.

Lady Cap. She's not fourteen.
Nurse. No, God be thanked. I shall lay fourteen of my teeth,
And yet, to my teen be it spoken, I have but four,
She is not fourteen. How long is it now
To Lammass-tide?

Lady Cap. A fortnight and odd days.

Nurse. Even or odd, of all days in the year,
Come Lammass-eve at night shall she be fourteen.
Susan and she—God rest all Christian souls!—
Were of an age. Well, Susan is with God;
She was too good for me. But, as I said, 19
On Lammass-eve at night shall she be fourteen;
That shall she, marry; I remember it well.
'Tis since the earthquake now eleven years;
And she was wean'd, I never shall forget it,
Of all the days of the year, upon that day;
For I had then laid wormwood to my dog,
Sitting in the sun under the dove-house wall;
My lord and you were then at Mantua.
Nay, I do bear a brain:—but, as I said,
When it did taste the wormwood on the nipple
Of my dog and felt it bitter, pretty fool!
To see it tetchy and fall out with the dog.
'Shake,' quoth the dove-house: 'twas no need
I trow,
To bid me trudge:
And since that time it is eleven years;
For then she could stand alone; nay, by the rood,
She could have run and waddled all about;
For even the day before she broke her brow:
And then my husband, God be with his soul!
A' was a merry man, took up the child:
'Yea,' quoth he, 'dost thou fall upon thy face?
Thou wilt fall backward when thou hast more wit;
Wilt thou not, Jule?' and, by my halidom,
The pretty wretch left crying, and said 'Ay.'
To see now how a jest shall come about!
I warrant, an I should live a thousand years,
I never should forget it: 'Wilt thou not, Jule?'
quoth he;
And, pretty fool, it stinted and said 'Ay.'

Lady Cap. Enough of this; I pray thee, hold thy peace.
Nurse. Yes, madam. Yet I cannot choose but laugh.
To think it should leave crying, and say 'Ay':
And yet, I warrant, it had upon its brow
A bump as big as a young cockerel's stone;
A perilous knock; and it cried bitterly:
'Yea,' quoth my husband, 'fall'st upon thy face?
The wilt fall backward when thou com'st to age;
Wilt thou not, Jule?' it stinted and said 'Ay.'

Jul. And stint thou too, I pray thee, nurse, say I.

Nurse. Peace, I have done. God mark thee to his grace!
Thou wast the prettiest babe that e'er I nurs'd:
An I might live to see thee married once,
I have my wish.

Lady Cap. Marry, that 'marr}' is the very theme
I come to talk of. Tell me, daughter Juliet,
How stands your disposition to be married?
Jul. It is an honour that I dream not of.

Nurse. An honour! were not I thine only nurse,
I would say thou had'st suck'd wisdom from thy teat.

Lady Cap. Well, think of marriage now;
younger than you,
Here in Verona, ladies of esteem,
Are made already mothers: by my count,
I was your mother much upon these years
That you are now a maid. Thus then in brief,
The valiant Paris seeks you for his love.

Nurse. A man, young lady! lady, such a man
As all the world—why, he's a man of wax.

Lady Cap. Verona's summer hath not such a flower.

Nurse. Nay, he's a flower; in faith, a very flower.

Lady Cap. What say you? can you love the gentleman?
This night you shall behold him at our feast;
ROMEO AND JULIET.

Scene IV.

ROMEO. 'tis true, for she the I be
Mer. Tut! dun's the mouse, the constable's own word:
Rom. And we mean well in going to this mask; 'tis no wit to go.
Mer. Why, may one ask?
Rom. I dream'd a dream to-night.
Mer. And so did I.
Rom. Well, what was yours?
Rom. That dreamers often lie.
Rom. In bed asleep, while they do dream things true.
Mer. O! then I see Queen Mab hath been with you.

Scene V.—The Same. A Hall in CAPULET'S House.

Musicians waiting. Enter Servingmen.

First Serv. Where's Potpan, that he helps not to take away? He shift a trencher! he scrape a trencher!

Second Serv. When good manners shall lie all in one or two men's hands, and they unwashed too, 'tis a foul thing.

First Serv. Away with the joint-stools, remove the court-cupboard, look to the plate. Good thou, save me a piece of marchpane; and, as thou lovtest me, let the porter let in Susan Grindstone and Nell. Antony! and Potpan!

Second Serv. Ay, boy; ready.

First Serv. You are looked for and called for, asked for and sought for, in the great chamber.

Third Serv. We cannot be here and there too. Cheery, boys; be brisk awhile, and the longer liver take all. They retire behind.

Enter CAPULET, with JULIET and others of his house, meeting the Guests and Maskers.

Cap. Welcome, gentlemen! ladies that have their toes Unplagued' with corns will have a bout with you. Ah ha! my mistresses, which of you all Will now deny to dance! she that makes dainty, she,
I'll swear, hath corns; am I come near ye now?
Welcome, gentlemen! I have seen the day
That I have worn a visor, and could tell
A whispering tale in a fair lady's ear
Such as would please; 'tis gone, 'tis gone, 'tis gone.
You are welcome, gentlemen! Come, musicians, play.
A hall! a hall! give room, and foot it, girls.
Music plays, and they dance.
More light, you knaves! and turn the tables up,
And quench the fire, the room is grown too hot.
Ah! sirrah, this unlook'd for sport comes well.
Nay, sit, sit, sit, good cousin Capulet.
For you and I are past our dancing days;
How long is't now since last yourself and I
Were in a mask?

Second Cap. By'r Lady, thirty years.
Cap. What! man; 'tis not so much, 'tis not so much:
'Tis since the nuptial of Lucentio,
Come Pentecost as quickly as it will,
Some five-and-twenty years; and then we mask'd.

Second Cap. 'Tis more, 'tis more: his son is elder, sir;
His son is thirty.

Cap. Will you tell me that?
His son was but a ward two years ago.
Rom. What lady's that which doth enrich the hand
Of yonder night?

Serv. I know not, sir.
Rom. O! she doth teach the torches to burn bright.
It seems she hangs upon the cheek of night
Like a rich jewel in an Ethiop's ear;
Beauty too rich for use, for earth too dear!
So shows a snowy dove trooping with crows,
As yonder lady o'er her fellows shows.
The measure done, I'll watch her place of stand,
And, touching hers, make blessed my rude hand.
Did my heart love till now? forsake it, sight!
For I ne'er saw true beauty till this night.

Tyb. This, by his voice, should be a Montague.
Fetch me my rapier, boy. What! dares the slave
Come hither, cover'd with an antic face,
To fleer and scorn at our solemnity?
Now, by the stock and honour of my kin,
To strike him dead I hold it not a sin.

Cap. Why, how now, kinsman! wherefore storm you so?

Tyb. Uncle, this is a Montague, our foe;
A villain that is hither come in spite,
To scorn at our solemnity this night.

Cap. Young Romeo is't?

Tyb. 'Tis he, that villain Romeo.

Cap. Content thee, gentle coz, let him alone:
He bears him like a portly gentleman;
And, to say truth, Verona brags of him
To be a virtuous and well-govern'd youth.
I would not for the wealth of all the town
Here in my house do him disparagement;
Therefore be patient, take no note of him:
It is my will; the which if thou respect,
Show a fair presence and put off these frowns,
An ill-beseeming semblance for a feast.

Tyb. It fits, when such a villain is a guest:
I'll not endure him.

Cap. He shall be endur'd: What! goodman boy; I say he shall, go to;
Am I the master here, or you? go to.
You'll not endure him! God shall mend my soul!
You'll make a mutiny among my guests!
You will set cock-a-hoop! you'll be the man!

Tyb. Why, uncle, 'tis a shame.

Cap. Go to, go to.
You are a saucy boy.—Is't so, indeed?—
This trick may chance to sooth thee. —I know where.
You must contrary me! marry, 'tis time.
Well said, my heart! You are a prince;
Be quiet, or—More light, more light!—shame!
I'll make you quiet. What! cheerly, my heart.

Tyb. Patience perforce with wilful chiding meeting
Makes my flesh tremble in their different gring.
I will withdrawing: but this intrusion shall Now seeming sweet convert to bitter gall. In

Rom. To JULIET. If I profane with my unworthiest hand
This holy shrine, the gentle sin is this;
My lips, two blushing pilgrims, ready stand
To smooth that rough touch with a tender kiss.

Jul. Good pilgrim, you do wrong your holy hands too much,
Which mannerly devotion shows in this
For saints have hands that pilgrims' hand do touch,
And palm to palm is holy palmers' kiss.

Rom. Have not saints lips, and holy palmers?

Jul. Ay, pilgrim, lips that they must use in prayer.

Rom. O! then, dear saint, let lips do what hands do;
They pray, grant thou, lest faith turn to despair.

Jul. Saints do not move, though grant they prayers' sake.

Rom. Then move not, while my prayer's effect I take.
Thus from my lips, by thine, my sin is purg'd.

Kissing, Jul. Then have my lips the sin that they have took.

Rom. Sin from my lips? O trespass sweetly urg'd!
Give me my sin again.

Nurse. Madam, your mother craves a word with you.

Rom. What is her mother?

Nurse. Marry, bachelor.

Her mother is the lady of the house,
And a good lady, and a wise, and virtuous;
I nurs'd her daughter that you talk'd withal;
I tell you he that can lay hold of her
Shall have the chinks.

Rom. Is she a Capulet?

O dear account! my life is my foe's debt.

Ben. Away, be gone; the sport is at the bed.

Rom. Ay, so I fear; the more is my unrest.

Cap. Nay, gentlemen, prepare not to be gone.
We have a tripling foolish banquet towards.
Is it e'en so? Why then, I thank you all;
I thank you, honest gentlemen; good night.
More torches here! Come on then, let's bed.

Ah! sirrah, by my fay, it waxes late;
I'll to my rest.

Exeunt all but JULIET and Nurse.
PROLOGUE.

Enter Chorus.

O old desire doth in his death-bed lie,
And young affection yeps to be his heir;
Hat fair for which love groaned for and would die.
With tender Juliet match'd, is now not fair.

O Romeo is belov'd and loves again,
Alike bewitched by the charm of looks,
Yet to his foe suppos'd he must complain,
And she steal love's sweet bait from fearful hooks:
E'en of a foe he may not have access.

To breathe such vows as lovers use to swear;
And she as much in love, her means much less.
To meet her new-belov'd any where;
But passion lends them power, time means, to meet,
Impering extremities with extreme sweet.

Exeunt.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Verona. A Lane by the wall of Capulet's Orchard.

Enter Romeo.

Rom. Can I go forward when my heart is here?
Turn back, dull earth, and find thy centre out.
He climbs the wall, and leaps down within it.

Enter BENVOLIO and MERCUTIO.

Ben. Romeo! my cousin Romeo!

Mer. He is wise; And, on my life, hath stol'n him home to bed.

Ben. He ran this way, and leap'd this orchard wall:
Call, good Mercutio.

Mer. Nay, I'll conjugue too. Romeo! humours! madman! passion! lover!
Appear thou in the likeness of a sigh:
Speake but one rhyme and I am contented; Cry but 'Ay me!' pronounce but 'love' and 'dove';
Speak to my gossip Venus one fair word,

One nickname for her purblind son and heir,
Young Adam Cupid, he that shot so trim;
When King Cophetua lov'd the beggar-maid,
He heareth not, he stirreth not; he moveth not;
The ape is dead, and I must conjure him.
I conjure thee by Rosaline's bright eyes,
By her high forehead, and her scarlet lip,
By her fine foot, straight leg, and quivering thigh,
And the demesnes that there adjacent lie,
That in thy likeness thou appear to us.

Ben. An if he hear thee, thou wilt anger him.

Mer. This cannot anger him: 'twould anger him
To raise a spirit in his mistress' circle
Of some strange nature, letting it there stand
Till she had laid it, and conjur'd it down;
That were some spite: my invocation
Is fair and honest, and in his mistress' name
I conjure only but to raise up him.

Ben. Come, he hath hid himself among these trees,
To be consorted with the humorous night:
Blind is his love and best befits the dark.

Mer. If love be blind, love cannot hit the mark.
Now will he sit under a medlar tree.
And wish his mistress were that kind of fruit
As maids call medlars, when they laugh alone.
O Romeo! that she were, O! that she were
An open et cetera, thou a poperin pear.
Romeo, good night: I'll to my truckle-bed;
This field-bed is too cold for me to sleep:
Come, shall we go?

Ben. Go, then; for 'tis in vain
To seek him here that means not to be found.

Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. Capulet's Orchard.

Enter Romeo.

Rom. He jests at scars that never felt a wound.
Juliet appears above at a window.

But, soft! what light through yonder window breaks?
It is the east, and Juliet is the sun!
Arise, fair sun, and kill the envious moon,
Who is already sick and pale with grief,
That thou her maid art far more fair than she:
Be not her maid, since she is envious;
Her vestal livery is but sick and green,
And none but fools do wear it; cast it off.
It is my lady! O! it is my love!
O! that she knew she were.
She speaks, yet she says nothing: what of that?
Her eye discourses; I will answer it.
I am too bold, 'tis not to me she speaks:
Two of the fairest stars in all the heaven,
Having some business, do entreat her eyes
To twinkle in their spheres till they return.
What if her eyes were there, they in her head?
The brightness of her cheek would shame those stars
As daylight doth a lamp; her eyes in heaven
Would through the airy region stream so bright
That birds would sing and think it were not night.

See! how she leans her cheek upon her hand:
O! that I were a glove upon that hand
That I might touch that cheek.
Jul. Ay me!
Rom. She speaks
O! speak again, bright angel; for thou art
As glorious to this night, being o'er my head, As is a winged messenger of heaven Unto the white-upturned wond'ring eyes Of mortals, that fall back to gaze on him When he bestrides the lazy-pacing clouds, And sails upon the gossam of the air.

Jul. O Romeo, Romeo! wherefore art thou Romeo? Deny thy father, and refuse thy name; Or, if thou wilt not, but be but sworn my love, And I'll no longer be a Capulet.

Rom. Aside. Shall I hear more, or shall I speak at this?

Jul. 'Tis but thy name that is my enemy; Thou art thyself, though not a Montague. What's Montague? it is nor hand, nor foot, Nor arm, nor face, nor any other part Belonging to a man. O! be some other name: What's in a name? that which we call a rose By any other name would smell as sweet; So Romeo would, were he not Romeo call'd, Retain that dear perfection which he owes Without that title. Romeo, doff thy name; And for thy name, which is no part of thee, Take all myself.

Rom. I take thee at thy word. Call me but love, and I'll be new baptiz'd; Henceforth I never will be Romeo.

Jul. What man art thou, that thus bescreen'd in night So stumbilst on my counsel? By a name I know not how to tell thee who I am: My name, dear saint, is hateful to myself, Because it is an enemy to thee: Had I it written, I would tear the word.

Jul. My ears have yet not drunk a hundred words Of that tongue's utterance, yet I know the sound: Art thou not Romeo, and a Montague?

Rom. Neither, fair maid, if either thee dislike.

Jul. How cam'st thou hither, tell me, and wherefore? The orchard walls are high and hard to climb; And the place death, considering who thou art, If any of my kinsmen find thee there.

Rom. With love's light wings did I o'er-perch these walls; For stony limits cannot hold love out, And what love can do that dares love attempt; Therefore thy kinsmen are no stop to me.

Jul. If they do see thee they will murder thee.

Rom. Alack! there lies more peril in thine eye Than twenty of their swords: look thou but sweet,

And I am proof against their enmity.

Jul. I would not for the world they saw thee here.

Rom. I have night's cloak to hide me from their eyes; And but thou love me, let them find me here: My life was better ended by their hate. Than death prorogued, wanting of thy love.

Jul. By whose direction found'st thou this place?

Rom. By love, that first did prompt me to inquire; He lent me counsel, and I lent him eyes. I am no pilot; yet, wert thou as far As that vast shore wash'd with the furthest, I would adventure for such merchandise.

Jul. Thou know'st the mask of night is my face, Else would a maiden blush bepaint my cheek For that which thou hast heard me speak night.

Rom. What have I spoke: but farewell complier! Dost thou love me? I know thou wilt say 'tis true; And I will take thy word; yet, if thou swearest Thou may'st prove false; at lovers' perjuries They say, Jove laughs. O gentle Romeo! If thou dost love, pronounce it faithfully: Or if thou think'st I am too quickly won, I'll frown and be perverse and say thee nay. So thou wilt woo; but else, not for the world In truth, fair Montague, I am too fond, And therefore thou may'st think my havior light:

But trust me, gentleman, I'll prove more true Than those that have more cunning to be strange.

I should have been more strange, I must confess, But that thou overheard'st, ere I was ware, My true love's passion: therefore pardon me, And not impute this yielding to light love, Which the dark night hath so discovered.

Rom. Lady, by yonder blessed moon I swear That tips with silver all these fruit-tree tops: Jul. O! I swear not by the moon, the inconstant moon, That monthly changes in her circled orb, Lest that thy love prove likewise variable.

Rom. What shall I swear by?

Jul. Do not swear at all: Or, if thou wilt, swear by thy gracious self, Which is the god of my idolatry, And I'll believe thee.

Rom. If my heart's dear love

Jul. Well, do not swear. Although I joy thee, I have no joy of this contract to-night: It is too rash, too unadvis'd, too sudden; Too like the lightning, which doth cease to be Ere one can say it lightens. Sweet, good night! This bud of love, by summer's ripening breath May prove a beauteous flower when next we meet.

Good night, good night! as sweet repose a rest

Come to thy heart as that within my breast!

Rom. O! wilt thou leave me so unsatisfied? Jul. What satisfaction canst thou have at night?

Rom. The exchange of thy love's faithful yea For mine.

Jul. I gave thee mine before thou didst request it; And yet I would it were to give again.

Rom. Would'st thou withdraw it? for what purpose, love?

Jul. But to be frank, and give it thee again yet I wish but for the thing I have:
My count is as boundless as the sea,
O, as deep; the more I give to thee,
more I have, for both are infinite.

Nurse calls within.

ROMEO. Some noise within; dear love, adieu!

Enter Juliet, above.

Re-enter JULIET, above.

NURSE. Within, Madam! I come, anon.—But if thou mean'st not well, beseech thee—

JULIET. Within, Madam! By and by: I come—

ROMEO. A thousand times good night!—

JULIET. A thousand times the worse, to want thy light.

ROMEO. What age is hoarse, and may not speak aloud?

JULIET. I would I ear the cave where Echo lies,
I make her airly tongue more hoarse than mine.

ROMEO. It is my soul that calls upon my name:
W silver-sweet sound lovers' tongues by night,
And yet no farther than a wanton's bird,
Who lets it hop a little from her hand,
Like a poor prisoner in his twisted gyves,
And with a silk thread plucks it back again,
So loving-jealous of his liberty.

JULIET. Sweet, so would I:
Yet I should kill thee with much cherishing:
Good night, good night! parting is such sweet sorrow
That I shall say good night till it be morrow.

ROMEO. Sleep dwell upon thine eyes, peace in thy breast!
Would I were sleep and peace, so sweet to rest!
Hence will I to my ghostly father's cell,
His help to crave, and my dear hap to tell.

SCENE III.—The Same. Friar Laurence's Cell.

Enter Friar Laurence, with a basket.

FRIAR. The grey-eyed morn smiles on the frowning night,
Chequering the eastern clouds with streaks of light,
And flecked darkness like a drunkard reels
From forth day's path and Titan's fiery wheels:
Now, ere the sun advance his burning eye
The day to cheer and night's dank dew to dry,
I must up-fill this osier cage of ours
With baleful weeds and precious-juiced flowers.
The earth that's nature's mother is her tomb;
What is her burying grave that is her womb,
And from her womb children of divers kind
We sucking on her natural bosom find,
Many for many virtues excellent,
None but for some, and yet all different.
O! mickle is the powerful grace that lies
In herbs, plants, stones, and their true qualities:
For nought so vile that on the earth doth live
But to the earth some special good doth give,
Nor aught so good but strain'd from that fair
Revolts from true birth, stambling on abuse:
Virtue itself turns vice, being misapplied,
And vice sometime's by action dignified.
Within the infant rind of this weak flower
Poison hath residence and medicine power:
For this, being smelt, with that part cheers each part:
Being tasted, slays all senses with the heart.
Two such opposed kings encamp them still
In man as well as herbs, grace and rude will;
And where the worser is predominant,
Full soon the canker death eats up that plant.

Enter ROMEO.

ROMEO. Good morrow, father!

FRIAR. Benedicite! What early tongue so sweet saluteth me?
Young son, it argues a distemper'd head
So soon to bid good morrow to thy bed:
Care keeps his watch in every old man's eye,
And where care lodges, sleep will never lie;
But where unbruised youth with unstuffed brain
Doth couch his limbs, there golden sleep doth reign:
Therefore thy earliness doth me assure
Thou art up-rous'd by some distemperature; 40
Or if not so, then here I hit it right,
Our Romeo hath not been in bed to-night.
Rom. That last is true; the sweeter rest was mine.
Fri. God pardon sin! wast thou with Rosaline?
Rom. With Rosaline, my ghostly father? no;
I have forgot that name, and that name's woe.
Fri. That's my good son: but where hast thou been, then?
Rom. I'll tell thee, ere thou ask it me again.
I have been feasting with mine enemy,
Where on a sudden one hath wounded me,
That's by me wounded: both our remedies
Within thy help and holy physic lies:
I bear no hatred, blessed man; for, lo!
My intercession likewise steeds my foe.
Fri. Be plain, good son, and homely in thy drift;
Riddling confession finds but riddling shift.
Rom. Then plainly know my heart's dear love is set
On the fair daughter of rich Capulet:
As mine on hers, so hers is set on mine;
And all combin'd, save what thou must combine
By holy marriage: when and where and how
We met we wo'd and made exchange of vow,
I'll tell thee as we pass; but this I pray,
That thou consent to marry us to-day.
Fri. Holy Saint Francis! what a change is here!
Is Rosaline, whom thou didst love so dear,
So soon forsaken? young men's love then lies
Not truly in their hearts, but in their eyes.
Jesu Maria! what a deal of brine
Hath wash'd thy sallow cheeks for Rosaline;
How much salt water throwed away in waste,
To season love, that of it doth not taste!
The sun not yet thy sighs from heaven clears,
Thy old groans ring yet in my ancient ears;
Lo! here upon thy cheek the stain doth sit
Of an old tear that is not wash'd off yet.
If e'er thou wast thyself and these woes thine,
Thou and these woes were all for Rosaline:
And art thou chang'd? I pronounce this sentence then:
Women may fall, when there's no strength in men.
Rom. Thou child'dst me oft for loving Rosaline.
Fri. For doting, not for loving, pupil mine.
Rom. And bad'st me bury love.
Fri. Not in a grave,
To lay one in, another out to have.
Rom. I pray thee, chide not; she whom I love now Doth grace for grace and love for love allow;
The other did not so.
Fri. O! she knew well
Thy love did read by rote and could not spell.
But come, young waverer, come, go with me,
In one respect I'll thy assistant be;
For this alliance may so happy prove,
To turn your households' rancour to pure love.
Rom. O! let us hence; I stand on sudden haste.
Fri. Wisely and slow; they stumble that run fast.

Scene IV.—The Same. A Street.

Enter BENVOLIO and MERCUTIO.
Mer. Where the devil should this Romeo
Came he not home to-night?
Ben. Not to his father's; I spoke with man.
Mer. Why, that same pale hard-hearted we that Rosaline,
Torments him so, that he will sure run mad
Ben. Tybalt, the kinsman to old Capulet,
Hath sent a letter to his father's house.
Mer. A challenge, on my life.
Ben. Romeo will answer it.
Mer. Any man that can write may answer letter.
Ben. Nay, he will answer the letter's mask, how he dares, being dared.
Mer. Alas! poor Romeo, he is already de stabbed with a white wench's black eye; a thorough the ear with a love-song; the pin of his heart cleft with the blind boy's butt-shaft; and is he a man to encon Tybalt?
Ben. Why, what is Tybalt?
Mer. More than prince of cats, I can tell—
O! he is the courageous captain of com ments. He fights as you sing prick-song, ko time, distance, and proportion; rests me minim rest, one, two, and the third in bosom; the very butcher of a silk butto duellist, a duellist; a gentleman of the first house, of the first and second cause the immortal passado! the punto reverso! hay!
Ben. The what?
Mer. The box of such antick, lisping, affect fantasticoes, these new tuners of accents!
Jesu, a very good blade! a very tall man! a good whore! Why, is not this a lamenta ting, thing, grandsire, that we should be thus affli with these strange flies, these fashion-mong these pardonnez-moii, who stand so much on new form that they cannot sit at ease on the bench! O! their bons, their bons.

Enter ROMEO.
Ben. Here comes Romeo, here comes Rom.
Mer. Without his roe, like a dried her
O flesh, flesh, how art thou fishified! Now it for the numbers that Petrarch flowed in: Le his lady was a kitchen-wench; marry, he had a better love to be-rime her; Dido a dow Cleopatra a gipsy; Helen and Hero bilden harlots; Thisbe a grey eye and so, but not to purpose. Signior Romeo, bon jour! there
French salutation to your French slop.
He gave us the counterfeit fairly last night.
Rom. Good morrow to you both. What counterfeit did I give you?
Mer. The slip, sir, the slip; can you con ceive?
Rom. Pardon, good Mercutio, my business is great; and in such a case as mine a man strain courtesy.
Mer. That's as much as to say, such a case yours constrains a man to bow in the hams.
Rom. Meaning, to court'sy.
Mer. Thou hast most kindly hit it.
A most courteous exposition.

Nay, I am the very pink of courtesy.

Right.

Why, then is my pump well flowered.

Well said; follow me this jest now till

I hast worn out thy pump, that when the sole of it is worn, the jest may remain the wearing sole singular.

O single-soled jest! solely singular for singleness.

Come between us, good Benvolio; my faits.

Switch and spurs, switch and spurs; 'll cry a match.

Nay, if our wits run the wild-goose

e, I am done, for thou hast more of the -goose in one of thy wits than, I am sure, ve in my whole five. Was I with thee there the goose?

Thou wast never with me for any thing

n thou wast not there for the goose.

I will bite thee by the ear for that jest.

Nay, good goose, bite not.

Thy wit is a very bitter sweeting; it is not sharp sauce.

And is it not well served in to a sweet as?

O! here's a wit of cheveril, that stretches an inch narrow to an ell broad.

I stretch it out for that word 'broad'; ch added to the goose, proves thee far and e a broad goose.

Why, is not this better now than groaning love? now art thou sociable, now art thou so; now art thou what thou art, by art as ls by nature: for this drivelling love is like eat natural, that runs lolling up and down side his bauble in a hole.

Stop there, stop there.

Desirest me to stop in my tale

the hair.

Thou would'st else have made thy tale

here.

O! thou art deceived; I have

ite short; for I was come to the whole

th of my tale, and meant indeed to occupy argument no longer.

Here's goodly gear!

Enter Nurse and Peter.

Peter, anon!

Nurse. My fan, Peter.

Nurse. God, God, Peter, to hide her face; for her

's the fairer of the two.

Nurse. God ye good morrow, gentlemen.

Nurse. God ye good den, fair gentleswman.

Nurse. Is it good den?

Nurse. 'Tis no less, I tell you; for the bawdy hand the dial is now upon the prick of noon.

Nurse. Out upon you! what a man are you?

Nurse. One, gentleswman, that God hath made himself to mar.

Nurse. By my troth, it is well said; 'for him to mar,' quoique 't? Gentlemen, can any of you me where I may find the young Romeo?

Rom. I can tell you; but young Romeo will be older when you have found him than he was when you sought him: I am the youngest of that name, for fault of a worse.

Nurse. You say well.

Mer. Yea! is the worst well? very well took,

i? faith; wisely, wisely.

Nurse. If you be he, sir, I desire some confidence with you.

Ben. She will indite him to some supper.

Mer. A bawd, a bawd, a bawd! So ho!

Rom. What hast thou found?

Mer. No hare, sir; unless a hare, sir, in a lenten pie, that is something stale and hoar ere it be spent.

An old hare hoar, and an old hare hoar,

Is very good meat in Lent:

But a hare that is hoar, is too much for a score,

When it hoars ere it be spent.

Romeo, will you come to your father's? we'll to dinner thither.

Rom. I will follow you.

Mer. Farewell, ancient lady; farewell.

Lady, lady, lady.

Enter Mercutio and Benvolio.

Nurse. Marry, farewell! I pray you, sir, what saucy merchant was this, that was so full of his ropery?

Rom. A gentleman, nurse, that loves to hear himself talk, and will speak more in a minute than he will stand to in a month.

Nurse. An a' speak any thing against me, I'll take him down, an a' were lustier than he is, and twenty such Jacks; and if I cannot, I'll find those that shall. Scurvy knave! I am none of his flirt-gills; I am none of his skeins-mates.

To Peter. And thou must stand by too, and suffer every knave to use me at his pleasure?

Peter. I saw no man use you at his pleasure;

if I had, my weapon should quickly have been out, I warrant you. I dare draw as soon as another man, if I see occasion in a good quarrel, and the law on my side.

Nurse. Now, afore God, I am so vexed, that every part about me quivers. Scurvy knave!

Pray you, sir, a word; and as I told you, my young lady bade me inquire you out; what she bid me say I will keep to myself; but first let me tell ye, if ye should lead her into a fool's paradise, as they say, it were a very gross kind of behaviour, as they say: for the gentleswman is young; and therefore, if you should deal double with her, truly it were an ill thing to be offered to any gentleswman, and very weak dealing.

Rom. Nurse, commend me to thy lady and mistress. I protest unto thee,—

Nurse. Good heart! and, i' faith, I will tell her as much. Lord, Lord! she will be a joyful woman.

Rom. What wilt thou tell her, nurse? thou dost not mark me.

Nurse. I will tell her, sir, that you do protest;

which, as I take it, is a gentleswmanlike offer.

Rom. Bid her devise

Some means to come to shrift this afternoon;

And there she shall at Friar Laurence' cell be shriv'd and married. Here is for thy pains.

Nurse. No, truly, sir; not a penny.
Rom. Go to; I say you shall.
Nurse. This afternoon, sir? well, she shall be there.
Rom. And stay, good nurse; behind the abbey-wall.
Within this hour my man shall be with thee,
And bring thee cords made like a tackled stair;
Which to the high top-gallant of my joy
Must be my convoy in the secret night.
Farewell! Be trusty, and I'll quitt thy pains.
Farewell! Command me to thy mistress.
Nurse. Now God in heaven bless thee! Hark you, sir.
Rom. What say'st thou, my dear nurse? 29
Nurse. Is your man secret? Did you ne'er hear say,
Two may keep counsel, putting one away?
Rom. I warrant thee my man's as true as steel.
Nurse. Well, sir; my mistress is the sweetest lady—Lord, Lord! when 'twas a little prating thing.—O! there's a nobleman in town, one Paris, that would fain lay knife aside; but she, good soul, had as lief see a toad, a very toad, as see him. I anger her sometimes and tell her that Paris is the properer man; but, I'll warrant you, when I say so, she looks as pale as any clout in the versal world. Doth not rosemary and Romeo begin both with a letter?
Rom. Ay, nurse; what of that? both with an R.
Nurse. Ah! mocker; that's the dog's name.
Rom. Is for the— No; I know it begins with some other letter; and she hath the prettiest sententious of it, of you and rosemary, that it would do you good to hear it.
Rom. Command me to thy lady.
Nurse. Ay, a thousand times. Exit Romeo.

Scene V.—The Same. Capulet's Orchard.

Enter JULIET.

Jul. The clock struck nine when I did send the nurse;
In half an hour she promis'd to return.
Perchance she cannot meet him: that's not so.
O! she is lame: love's heralds should be thoughts,
Which ten times faster glide than the sun's beams
Driving back shadows over louring hills:
Therefore do nimble-pinion'd doves draw Love,
And therefore hath the wind-swift Cupid wings.
Now is the sun upon the highmost hill
Of this day's journey, and from nine till twelve
Is three long hours, yet she is not come.
Had she affections, and warm youthful blood,
She'd be as swift in motion as a ball;
My words would bandy her to my sweet love,
And his to me:
But old folks, many feign as they were dead;
Unwieldy, slow, heavy and pale as lead.

Enter Nurse and Peter.

O God! she comes. O honey nurse! what news?
Hast thou met with him? Send thy man away.
Nurse. Peter, stay at the gate. Exit Peter.
Jul. Now, good sweet nurse; O Lord! why look'st thou sad?
Though news be sad, yet tell them merrily;
If good, thou shan't'st the music of sweet notes
By playing it to me with so sour a face.
Nurse. I am awearie, give me leave awhile.
Fie, how my bones ache! What a jaunt I had!
Jul. I would thou hadst my bones, and I
news.
Nay, come, I pray thee, speak; good, good, my master.
Nurse. Jesu! what haste; can you not
speak.
Do you not see that I am out of breath?
Jul. How art thou out of breath when thou hast breath
To say to me that thou art out of breath?
The excuse that thou dost make in this dearth is longer than the tale thou dost excuse.
Is thy news good, or bad? answer to that;
Say either, and I'll stay the circumstance:
Let me be satisfied, is't good or bad?
Nurse. Well, you have made a simple choice you know not how to choose a man: Romeo is not he;
thou, his face be better than any, yet his leg excels all men's; and for a hand, a foot, and a body, though they be not to talk on, yet they are past compare. He not the flower of courtesy, but, I'll warrant him as gentle as a lamb. Go thy ways, wench; so God. What have you dined at home?
Jul. No, no: but all this did I know before.
What says he of our marriage! what of that?
Nurse. Lord! how my head aches; who head have I!
It beats as it would fall in twenty pieces.
My back o' other side; O! my back, my back.
Beshrew your heart for sending me about,
To catch my death with jaunting up and down.
Jul. I' faith, I am sorry that thou art not well.
Sweet, sweet, sweet nurse, tell me, what is my love?
Nurse. Your love says, like an honest gen-man, and a courteous, and a kind, and a he-some, and, I warrant, a virtuous,—Where your mother?
Jul. Where is my mother! why, she is with Where should she be? How oddly thou repli-'ce your love says, like an honest gentleman,
Where is your mother?
Nurse. O! God's lady dies. Are you so hot? Marry, come up, I trow;
Is this the poultrie for my aching bones?
Henceforward do your messages yourself.
Jul. Here's such a coil! come, what is Romeo?
Nurse. Have you got leave to go to shrift day?
Jul. I have.
Nurse. Then hie you hence to Friar Laure-cell;
There stays a husband to make you a wife:
Now comes the wanton blood up in your cheek.
They'll be in scarlet straight at any news,
Hie to church; I must another way,
To fetch a ladder, by the which your love
Must climb a bird's nest soon when it is dare.
I am the drudge and toil in your delight,
But you shall bear the burden soon at night.
Go; 'I'll to dinner: hie you to the cell.
Jul. Hie to high fortune! Honest nurse,
farewell. Exeunt
Enter Friar Laurence and Romeo.

1. So smile the heavens upon this holy act, when hours with sorrow chide us not! 2. Amen, amen! but come what sorrow can, we must counteravail the exchange of joy: one short minute gives me in her sight: how but close our hands with holy words, and love-devouring death do what he dare; enough I may but call her mine.

3. These violent delights have violent ends, in their triumph die, like fire and powder, chas as they kiss consune: the sweetest honeyathome in his own deliciousness 12 in the taste confounds the appetite; before love moderately; long love doth so; swift arises as tardy as slow.

Enter Juliet.

3 comes the lady: O! so light a foot never wear out the everlasting flint; never may bestrade the gossamer. 4. Idles in the wanton summer air, yet not fall: so light is vanity. 5. Good even to my ghostly: confessor. 6. Romeo shall thank thee, daughter, for us both.

6. As much to him, else is his thanks too much.

om. Ah! Juliet, if the measure of thy joy seemed like mine, and that thy skill be more shacon it, then sweeten with thy breath to neighbour air, and let rich music's tongue old the imagin'd happiness that both gave in either by this dear encounter. 11. Conceit, more rich in matter than in words, gs of his substance, not of ornament: 31 are but baggers that can count their worth; my true love is grown to such excess not sum up half my sum of wealth.

4. Come, come with me, and we will make short work; by your leaves, you shall not stay alone holy church incorporate two in one.

Act I

Scene I.—Verona. A public Place.

Enter Mercutio, Benvolio, Page, and Servants.

Ben. I pray thee, good Mercutio, let's retire: to day is hot, the Capulets abroad, 1. if we meet, we shall not 'scape a brawl; now, these hot days, is the mad blood stirring. 2. Thou art like one of those fellows that en the enters the confines of a tavern claps his sword upon the table and says, 'God de me no need of thee!' and by the operation the second cup draws it on the drawer, when need there is no need.

Ben. Am I like such a fellow? 3. Mer. Come, come, thou art as hot a Jack in mood as any in Italy, and as soon moved to moody, and as soon moody to be moved. 4. And what to? 5. Mer. Nay, an there were two such, we should ve none shortly, for one would kill the other.

Thou! why thou wilt quarrel with a man that hath a hair more or a hair less in his beard than thou hast. Thou wilt quarrel with a man for cracking nuts, having no other reason but because thou hast hazel eyes. What eye, but such an eye, would spy out such a quarrel? Thy head is as full of quarrels as an egg is full of meat, and yet thy head hath been beaten as addle as an egg for quarrelling. Thou hast quarrelled with a man for coughing in the street, because he hath wakened thy dog that hath lain asleep in the sun. Didst thou not fall out with a tailor for wearing his new doublet before Easter! with another, for tying his new shoes with old riband! and yet thou wilt tutor me from quarrelling!

Ben. An I were so apt to quarrel as thou art, any man should buy the fee-simple of my life for an hour and a quarter.

Mer. The fee-simple! O simple! 33

Ben. By my head, here come the Capulets.

Mer. By my heel, I care not.

Enter Tybalt and Others.

Tyb. Follow me close, for I will speak to them. Gentlemen, good den! a word with one of you. 34 Mer. And but one word with one of us! Couple it with something; make it a word and a blow.

Tyb. You shall find me apt enough to that, sir, an you will give me occasion.

Mer. Could you not take some occasion without giving!

Tyb. Mercutio, thou consort'st with Romeo,— 35 Mer. Consort! what! dost thou make us minstrels? an thou make minstrels of us, look to hear nothing but discords: here's my fiddle-stick; here's that shall make you dance. 36 Zounds! consort!

Ben. We talk here in the public haunt of men: Either withdraw unto some private place, Or reason coldly of your grievances, Or else depart; here all eyes gaze on us. 37 Mer. Men's eyes were made to look, and let them gaze; I will not budge for no man's pleasure, I.

Enter Romeo.

Tyb. Well, peace be with you, sir. Here comes my man.

Mer. But I'll be hang'd, sir, if he wear your livery:

Marry, go before to field, he'll be your follower; Your worship in that sense may call him man.

Tyb. Romeo, the love I bear thee can afford No better term than this,—thou art a villain.

Rom. Tybalt, the reason that I have to love thee Doth much excuse the appertaining rage To such a greeting; villain am I none, Therefore farewell; I see thou know'st me not. 72

Tyb. Boy, this shall not excuse the injuries That thou hast done me; therefore turn and draw.

Rom. I do protest I never injur'd thee, But love thee better than thou canst devise, Till thou shalt know the reason of my love: And so, good Capulet, which name I tender As dearly as mine own, be satisfied.

Mer. O calm, dishonourable, vile submission!
Alla stoccata carries it away.

Draws.

Tybalt, you rat-catcher, will you walk?

Tyb. What would'st thou have with me?

Mer. Good king of cats, nothing but one of your nine lives, that I mean to make bold withal, and, as you shall use me hereafter, dry-beat the rest of the eight. Will you pluck your sword out of his pitchler by the ears? make haste, lest mine be about your ears ere it be out.

Tyb. I am for you.

Tyb. Thou, wretched boy, that didst come him here,

Shalt with him hence.

Rom. This shall determine the

They fight; Tybalt!

Ben. Romeo, away! be gone!

The citizens are up, and Tybalt slain.

Stand not amaz'd: the prince will doom

death

If thou art taken: hence! be gone! away!

Rom. O! I am fortune's fool.

Ben. Why dost thou so?
for justice, which thou, prince, must give:
\textit{Enter Romeo.} Romeo must not live.

\textit{Romeo.} Romeo slew him, he slew Mercutio;
now the price of his dear blood doth owe.
\textit{Enter Nurse.} Not Romeo, prince, he was Mercutio's friend; fault concludes but what the law should end, life of Tybalt.

\textit{Romeo.} And for that offence mediately we do exile him hence:
we an interest in thy bate's proceeding,
our blood for thy rude brawls doth lie a-bleding;
I'll amerce you with so strong a fine that you shall all repent the loss of mine.
it'll be dead to pleading and excuses;
'tears nor prayers shall purchase out abuses;
refrane use none; let Romeo hence in haste,
as, when he's found, that hour is his last.
r hence this body and attend our will:
cy but murders, pardoning those that kill.

\textit{Nurse.} I saw the wound, I saw it with mine eyes, God save the mark! here on his manly breast:
A piteous corse, a bloody piteous corse;
Pale, pale as ashes, all bedaub'd in blood,
All in gore blood; I swounded at the sight.
\textit{Juliet.} O! break, my heart; poor bankrupt, break at once!
To prison, eyes, ne'er look on liberty!
Vile earth, to earth resign; end motion here;
And thou and Romeo press one heavy bier!
\textit{Nurse.} O Tybalt, Tybalt! the best friend I had:
O courteous Tybalt! honest gentleman!
That ever I should live to see thee dead!
\textit{Juliet.} What storm is this that blows so contrary?
Is Romeo slaughter'd, and is Tybalt dead?
My dearest cousin, and my dearer lord!
Then, dreadful trumpet, sound the general doom!
For who is living if those two are gone!
\textit{Nurse.} Tybalt is gone, and Romeo banished;
Romeo, that kill'd him, he is banished.
\textit{Juliet.} O God! did Romeo's hand shed Tybalt's
blood?
\textit{Nurse.} It did, it did; alas the day! it did.
\textit{Juliet.} O serpent heart, hid with a flowering face!
Did ever dragon keep so fair a cave?
Beautiful tyrant! fiend angelical!
Love-feather'd raven! wolvish-ravening lamb!
Despised substance of divinest show!
Just opposite to what thou justly seem'st;
A damned saint, an honourable villain!
O nature! what hadst thou to do in hell?
When thou didst bow the spirit of a fiend
In mortal paradise of such sweet flesh?
Was ever book containing such vile matter
So fairly bound? O! that deceit should dwell
In such a gorgeous palace.

\textit{Nurse.} There's no trust,
No faith, no honesty in men; all perjur'd,
All forsworn, all naught, all dissemblers.
Ah! where's my man? give me some \textit{aqua vitae}:
These griefs, these woes, these sorrows make me old.
Shame come to Romeo!
\textit{Juliet.} Blist'rd the thy tongue!
For such a wish! he was not born to shame:
Upon his brow shame is asham'd to sit;
For 'tis a throne where honour may be crown'd
Solo monarch of the universal earth,
O! what a beast was I to chide at him.
Nurse. Will you speak well of him that kill'd your cousin?
Jul. Shall I speak ill of him that is my husband?
Ah! poor my lord, what tongue shall smooth thy name,
When I, thy three-hours' wife, have mangled it?
But, wherefore, villain, didst thou kill my cousin?
That villain's cousin would have kill'd my husband:
Back, foolish tears, back to your native spring;
Your tributary drops belong to woe,
Which you, mistaking, offer up to joy.
My husband lives, that Tybalt would have slain;
And Tybalt's dead, that would have slain my husband:
All this is comfort; wherefore weep I then?
Some word there was, worse than Tybalt's death,
That murder'd me: I would forget it fain;
But, O! it presses to my memory,
Like damned guilty deeds to sinners' minds.
'Thy dead,' and Rome! banish'd!'
That 'banish'd,' that one word 'banish'd,
Hath slain ten thousand Tybals. Tybalt's death
Was woe enough, if it had ended there:
Or, if sour woe delights in fellowship,
And needly will be rank'd with other griefs,
Why follow'd not, when she said 'Tybalt's dead,'
Thy father, or thy mother, nay, or both,
Which modern lamentation might have mov'd;
But with a rearward following Tybalt's death,
'Romeo is banish'd!' to speak that word,
Is father, mother, Tybalt, Romeo, Juliet.
All slain, all dead: 'Romeo is banish'd!'
There is no end, no limit, measure, bound,
In that word's death; no words can that woe sound.
Where is my father and my mother, nurse?
Nurse. Weeping and wailing over Tybalt's corpse:
Will you go to them? I will bring you thither.
Jul. Wash they his wounds with tears: mine shall be spent,
When theirs are dry, for Rome! banishment.
Take up those cords. Poor ropes, you are beguil'd,
Both you and I, for Rome! is exil'd;
He made you for a highway to my bed,
But I, a maid, die maiden-widow'd.
Come, cords; come, nurse; I'll to my wedding-bed;
And death, not Rome! take my maidenhead!
Nurse. Hie to your chamber; I'll find Romeo
To comfort you: I wot well where he is,
Hark ye, your Romeo will be here at night:
I'll to him; he is hid at Laurence' cell.
Jul. O! find him; give this ring to my true knight,
And bid him come to take his last farewell.

Exeunt.

Scene III.—The Same. Friar Laurence' Cell.
Enter Friar Laurence.
Fri. Romeo, come forth; come forth, thou fearful man:
Affliction is enamour'd of thy parts,
And thou art wedded to calamity.

Enter Romeo.
Rom. Father, what news? what is the prince's doom?
What sorrow craves acquaintance at my hand?
That I yet know not?
Fri. Too familiar
Is my dear son with such sour company:
I bring thee tidings of the prince's doom.
Rom. What less than doomsday is the prince's doom?
Fri. A gentler judgment vanish'd from lips,
Not body's death, but body's banishment.
Rom. Ha! banishment! be merciful, 'death';
For exile hath more terror in his look,
Much more than death: do not say 'banishment.'
Fri. Hence from Verona art thou banish'd,
Be patience, for the world is broad and wide.
Rom. There is no world without Verona: but Purgatory, torture, hell itself.
Hence banisht' is banish'd from the world,
And world's exile is death; then 'banished' isdeath mis-term'd.
Calling death 'banish;' Thou cutt'st my head off with a golden axe,
And smil'st upon the stroke that murders me.
Fri. O deadly sin! O rude unthankfullness.
Thy fault our law calls death; but the prince,
Taking thy part, hath rush'd aside the law,
And turn'd that black word death to benediction:
This is dear mercy, and thou seest it not.
Rom. 'Tis torture, and not mercy: heaven here,
Where Juliet lives; and every cat and dog
And little mouse, every unworthy thing,
Live here in heaven and may look on her;
But Rome! may not: more validity,
More honourable state, more courtship lives,
In carrion flies than Rome! they may seize.
On the white wonder of dear Juliet's hand,
And steal immortal blessing from her lips,
Who, even in pure and vestal modesty,
Still blush, as thinking their own kisses sin,
But Rome! may not; he is banish'd.
Fly's may do this, but I from this must fly,
They are free men, but I am banish'd.
And say'st thou yet that exile is not death
Hadst thou no poison mix'd, no sharp-grind'd knife,
No sudden mean of death, though ne'er so much,
But 'banish'd' to kill me? 'Banish'd!' O friar! the damned use that word in hell;
Howlings attend it: how hast thou the heart,
Being a divine, a ghostly confessor,
A sin-absolver, and my friend profess'd,
To mangle me with that word 'banish'd'?
Fri. Thou fond mad man, hear me but say a word.
Rom. O! thou wilt speak again of banishment.
Fri. I'll give thee armour to keep off at word:
Adversity's sweet milk, philosophy,
To comfort thee, though thou art banish'd,
Rom. Yet 'banish'd'! Hang up philosophy.
Unless philosophy can make a Juliet,
Displant a town, reverse a prince's doom,
It helps not, it prevents not: talk no more."
Fri. Hold thy desperate hand:
Art thou a man? thy form cries out thou art:
Thy tears are womanish; thy wild acts denote
The unreasonable fury of a beast:
Unseemly woman in a seeming man;
And ill-beseeing beast in seeming both!
Thou hast amaz'd me: by my holy order,
I thought thy disposition better temper'd.
Hast thou slain Tybalt? wilt thou slay thyself?
And slay thy lady that in thy life lives,
By doing damned hate upon thyself?
Why rail'st thou on thy birth, the heaven, and earth?
Since birth, and heaven, and earth, all three do meet
In thee at once, which thou at once would'st lose.
Fie, fie! thou sham'st thy shape, thy love, thy wit;
Which, like an usurer, abound'st in all,
And usest none in that true use indeed
Which should bedeck thy shape, thy love, thy wit.
Thy noble shape is but a form of wax,
Digressing from the valour of a man;
Thy dear love sworn, but hollow perjury, Killing that love which thou hast vow'd to cherish;
Thy wit, that ornament to shape and love,
Misshapen in the conduct of them both,
Like powder in a skillless soldier's flask,
Is set a-fire by thine own ignorance,
And thou dismember'd with thine own defence.
What! rouse thee, man; thy Juliet is alive,
For whose dear sake thou wast but lately dead;
There art thou happy: Tybalt would kill thee,
But thou slew'st Tybalt; there art thou happy
too:
The law that threaten'd death becomes thy friend,
And turns it to exile; there art thou happy:
A pack of blessings light upon thy back;
Happiness courts thee in her best array;
But, like a misbehav'd and sullen wench,
Thou poust upon thy fortune and thy love.
Take heed, take heed, for such die miserable.
Go, get thee to thy love, as was decreed,
Ascend her chamber, hence and comfort her;
But look thou stay not till the watch be set,
For then thou canst not pass to Mantua:
Where thou shalt live, till we can find a time
To blaze your marriage, reconcile your friends,
Beg pardon of the prince, and call thee back
With twenty hundred thousand times more joy
Than thou went'st forth in lamentation.
Go before, nurse: commend me to thy lady;
And bid her hasten all the house to bed,
Which heavy sorrow makes them apt unto Romeo is coming.
Nurse. O Lord! I could have stay'd here all the night
To hear good counsel: O! what learning is.
My lord, I'll tell my lady you will come.
Rome. Do so, and bid my sweet prepare to chide.
Nurse. Here, sir, a ring she bid me give you,
sir.
Hie you, make haste, for it grows very late.
Exit.
Rome. How well my comfort is reviv'd by this!

Fri. O! then I see that madmen have no ears.
Rom. How should they, when that wise men have no eyes?
Fri. Let me dispute with thee of thy estate.
Rom. Thou canst not speak of that thou dost not feel.
rt thou as young as I, Juliet thy love,
hour but married, Tybalt murdered,
ing like me, and like me banished, might'st thou speak, then might'st thou tear thy hair,
d fall upon the ground, as I do now,
ding the measure of an unmade grave.
Knocking within.
Fri. Arise; one knocks: good Romeo, hide yself.
Rom. Not I; unless the breath of heart-sick groans,
st-like, infold me from the search of eyes.
Knocking.
Fri. Hark! how they knock. Who's there?
Romeo arise;
o wilt be taken. Stay awhile! Stand up;
Knocking.
'to my study. By and by! God's will!
at simplicity is this! I come, I come!
Knocking.
o knocks so hard? whence come you? what's your will?
Nurse. Within. Let me come in, and you shall know my errand:
one from Lady Juliet.
Fri. Welcome then.

Enter Nurse.
Nurse. O holy friar! O! tell me, holy friar,
here is my lady's lord? where's Romeo?
Fri. There on the ground, with his own tears made drunk.
Nurse. O! he is even in my mistress' case, in her case. O woeful sympathy!
whose predicament! Even so lies she, berering and weeping, weeping and blub-bering.
and up, stand up; stand, an you be a man:
her Juliet's sake, for her sake, rise and stand;
hy should you fall into so deep an O?
Rom. Nurse!
Nurse. Ah sir! ah sir! Well, death's the end of all.
Rom. Spak'st thou of Juliet? how is it with her?
oth she not think me an old murderer,
ow I have stain'd the childhood of our joy ith blood remov'd but little from her own?
here is she? and how doth she? and what says
you conceal'd lady to our cancell'd love?
Nurse. O! she says nothing, sir, but weeps and weeps;
now falls her head; and then stands up,
d Tybalt calls, and then on Romeo cries,
d then down falls again.
Rom. As if that name,
hot from the deadly level of a gun, s to murder her; as that name's cursed hand ndler'd her kinsman. O! tell me, friar, tell
me,
what vile part of this anatomy
both my name lodge? tell me, that I may sack the hateful mansion.
Drawing his sword.
Fri. Go hence. Good night; and here stands all your state:
Either be gone before the watch be set,
Or by the break of day disguis’d from hence:
Sojourn in Mantua: I’ll find out your man,
And he shall signify from time to time.

Every good hap to you that chances here.
Give me thy hand; ‘tis late; farewell; good night.

Rom. But that a joy past joy calls out on me,
It was a grief, so brief to part with thee:
Farewell. Exeunt.

Scene IV.—The Same. A Room in Capulet’s House.

Enter Capulet, Lady Capulet, and Paris.

Cap. Things have fall’n out, sir, so unluckily,
That we have had no time to move our daughter:
Look you, she lov’d her kinsman Tybalt dearly,
And so did I: well, we were born to die.
’Tis very late, she’ll not come down to-night:
I promise you, but for your company,
I would have been a-bed an hour ago.

Par. These times of woe afford no time to woo.
Madam, good night: commend me to your daughter.

Lady Cap. I will, and know her mind early to-morrow.

To-night she’s mew’d up to her heaviness.

Cap. Sir Paris, I will make a desperate tender
Of my child’s love: I think she will be rul’d
In all respects by me; may, more, I doubt it not.
Wife, go you to her ere you go to bed;
Acquaint her here of my son Paris’ love,
And bid her, mark you me, on Wednesday next—
But, soft! what day is this?

Par. Monday, my lord.

Cap. Monday! ha, ha! Well, Wednesday is too soon;
O’ Thursday let it be: o’ Thursday, tell her,
She shall be married to this noble earl.
Will you be ready? do you like this haste?
We’ll keep no great ado; a friend or two;
For, hark you, Tybalt being slain so late,
It may be thought we held him carelessly,
Being our kinsman, if we revel much.
Therefore we’ll have some half a dozen friends,
And there an end. But what say you to Thursday?

Par. My lord, I would that Thursday were to-morrow.

Cap. Well, get you gone: o’ Thursday be it then.

Go you to Juliet ere you go to bed,
Prepare her, wife, against this wedding-day.
Farewell, my lord. Light to my chamber, ho!
Afore me! it is so very late, very late,
That we may call it early by and by.

Good night. Exeunt.

Scene V.—The Same. Juliet’s Chamber.

Enter Romeo and Juliet.

Jul. Wilt thou be gone? it is not yet near day:
It was the nightingale, and not the lark,
That pierc’d the fearful hollow of thine ear;

Nightly she sings on yon pomegranate tree;
Believe me, love, it was the nightingale.

Rom. It was the lark, the herald of the day:
No nightingale: look, love, what envious streaks
Do light the severing clouds in yonder east;
Night’s candles are burnt out, and jocund day
Stands tiptoe on the misty mountain tops;
I must be gone and live, or stay and die.

Jul. You light is not daylight, I know it,
It is some meteor that the sun exhales,
To be to thee this night a torch-bearer,
And light thee on thy way to Mantua:
Therefore stay yet; thou need’st not to go.

Rom. Let me be ta’en, let me be put to deat,
I am content, so thou wilt have it so.
I’ll say you grey is not the morning’s eye,
’Tis but the pale reflex of Cynthia’s brow;
Nor that is not the lark, whose notes do bet
The vaulty heaven so high above our heads.
I have more care to stay than will to go:
Come, death, and welcome! Juliet wilt it.

How is’t, my soul? let’s talk; it is not day.

Jul. It is, it is; hie hence, be gone, away.
It is the lark that sings so out of tune,
Straining harsh discords and unpleasing shade.
Some say the lark makes sweet division;
This doth not so, for she divideth us:
Some say the lark and loathed toad chant eyes;
O! now I would they had chang’d voices too.
Since arm from arm that voice doth us affright.
Hunting thee hence with hunt’s-up to the crows.

O! now be gone; more light and light grows.

Rom. More light and light; more dark and dark our woes.

Enter Nurse.

Nurse. Madam!

Jul. Nurse!

Nurse. Your lady mother is coming to your chamber:
The day is broke; be wary, look about.

Jul. Then, window, let day in, and let me out.

Rom. Farewell, farewell! one kiss, and descend.

Des. These later daylight, then I may convey Thy wish to her, let me to thee return:
For my fair lady, what art thou, my lord?
My lord, I must hear from thee every day in the hour;
For in a minute there are many days:
O! by this count I shall be much in years
Ere I again behold my Romeo.

Rom. Farewell! I will omit no opportunity
That may convey my greetings, love, to thee.

Jul. O! think’st thou we shall ever meet again?

Rom. I doubt it not; and all these woes shall serve
For sweet discourses in our time to come.

Jul. O God! I have an ill-divining soul:
Methinks I see thee, now thou art so low,
As one dead in the bottom of a tomb:
Either my eyes fail, or thou look’st pale.

Rom. And trust me, love, in my eye so you:
Dry sorrow drinks our blood. Adieu! adieu!
Jul. O fortune, fortune! all men call thee fickle:
Thou art fickle, what dost thou with him
That is renown'd for faith? Be fickle, fortune;
Or else, I hope, thou wilt not keep him long,
And send him back.

Lady Cap. Within, ho, daughter! are you up long?
Jul. Who is 't that calls? Is it my lady mother?
She not down so late, or up so early?
But unaccustom'd cause procures her hither?

Enter Lady Capulet.

Lady Cap. Why, how now, Juliet!
Jul. Madam, I am not well.
Lady Cap. Evermore weeping for your cousin's death?
Jul. Wilt thou wash him from his grave with tears?
If thou could'st, thou could'st not make him live;
Therefore, have done: some grief shows much of love;
Much of grief shows still some want of wit.
Yet, let me weep for such a feeling loss.

Lady Cap. So shall you feel the loss, but not the friend
Which you weep for.

Jul. Feeling so the loss, cannot choose but ever weep the friend.

Lady Cap. Well, girl, thou weep'st so much for his death
That the villain lives which slaughter'd him.
Jul. What villain, madam?
Lady Cap. That same villain, Romeo.
Jul. Aside. Villain and he be many miles amiss.

Jul. Ay, madam, from the reach of these my hands
Could none but I might venge my cousin's death.

Lady Cap. We will have vengeance for it, thou not:
Then weep no more. I'll send to one in Mantua,
There that same banish'd runagate doth live,
That shall give him such an unaccustom'd dram
That he shall soon keep Tybalt company:
And then, I hope, thou wilt be satisfied.
Jul. Indeed, I never shall be satisfied
With Romeo, till I behold him—dead—
My poor heart so for a kinsman vex'd:
Madam, if you could find out but a man to bear a poison, I would tempe't,
That Romeo should, upon receipt thereof,
Soon sleep in quiet. O! how my heart abhors
To bear him nam'd, and cannot come to him.
To wreak the love I bore my cousin Tybalt
Upon his body that hath slaughter'd him.

Lady Cap. Find thou the means, and I'll find such a man.
But now I'll tell thee joyful tidings, girl.
Jul. And joy comes well in such a needy time.
What are they? I beseech your ladyship?
Lady Cap. Well, well, thou hast a careful father, child;
One who, to put thee from thy heaviness,
I tell thee what: get thee to church o' Thursday, or never after look me in the face. Speak not, reply not, do not answer me; my fingers itch—Wife, we scarce thought us bless'd! That God had lent us but this only child; but now I see this one is too much, and that we have a curse in having her. Out on her, hilding!

Nurse. God in heaven bless her! You are to blame, my lord, to rate her so. 170

Cap. And why, my lady wisdom? hold your tongue.

Good prudence; smatter with your gossips; go.

Nurse. I speak no treason.

Cap. O! God ye good den. Nurse. May not one speak?

Cap. Peace, you mumbling fool! Utter your gravity o'er a gossip's bowl, for here we need it not.

Lady Cap. You are too hot.

Cap. God's bread! it makes me mad. Day, night, hour, tide, time, work, play, alone, in company, still my care hath been to have her match'd; and having now provided a gentleman of noble parentage, 181 of fair demesnes, you...¡l, and nobly train'd, Staff'd, as they say, with honourable parts, proportion'd as one's thought would wish a man; and then to have a wretched pulling fool, a whining mammet, in her fortune's tender. To answer 'I'll not wed,' 'I cannot love,' 'I am too young,' 'I pray you, pardon me,' but, an you will not wed, I'll pardon you! Graze where you will; you shall not house with me:

Look to't, think on't, I do not use to jest. Thursday is near; lay hand on heart, advise. An you be mine, I'll give you to my friend; An you be not, hang, beg, starve, die in the streets, for, by my soul, I'll ne'er acknowledge thee, nor what is mine shall never do thee good. Trust to't, bethink you; I'll not be forsown.

Exit.

Jul. Is there no pity sitting in the clouds, that sees into the bottom of my grief? O! sweet my mother, cast me not away: Delay this marriage for a month, a week; or, if you do not, make the bridal bed in that dim monument where Tybalt lies.

Lady Cap. Talk not to me, for I'll not speak a word. Do as thou wilt, for I have done with thee.

Exit.

Jul. O God! O nurse! how shall this be prevented? My husband is on earth, my faith in heaven; how shall that faith return again to earth, unless that husband send it me from heaven by leaving earth? comfort me, counsel me. 200 Alack, alack! that heaven should practise stratagems upon so soft a subject as myself! what say'st thou? hast thou not a word of joy? Some comfort, nurse.

Nurse. Faith, here 'tis. Romeo is banished; and all the world to nothing.

That he dares ne'er come back to challenge ye, or, if he do, it needs must be by stealth. Then, since the case so stands as now it doth, I think it best you married with the county. O! he's a lovely gentleman; Romeo's a dishclout to him: an eagle, mada hath not so green, so quick, so fair an eye As Paris hath. Beshrew my very heart, I think you are happy in this second match, for it excels your first: or if it did not, your first is dead; or 'twere as good he were. As living here and you no use of him.

Jul. Speakest thou from thy heart?

Nurse. And from my soul to or else beshrew them both.

Jul. Amen! Nurse. What. Jul. Well, thou hast comforted me marvelously. Go in; and tell my lady I am gone, having displeas'd my father, to Laurence' cell to make confession and to be absolv'd.

Nurse. Marry, I will; and this is wisely done. Ex. Jul. Ancient damnation! O most wick'flend! Is it more sin to wish me thus forsworn, or to dispaise my lord with that same tongue which she hath praiz'd him with above com- pare. So many thousand times? Go, counsellor; thou and my bosom henceforth shall be twain. I'll go to the friar, to know his remedy; if all else fail, myself have power to die. Ex.

ACT IV.

Fri. On Thursday, sir? the time is very shoo... Paris. My father Capulet will have it so; and I am nothing slow to slack his haste.

Fri. You say you do not know the lady's mind. Uneven is the course, I like it not.

Par. Immoderately she weeps for Tybalt's death, and therefore have I little talk'd of love; for Venus smiles not in a house of tears. Now, sir, her father counts it dangerous that she doth give her sorrow so much sway, and in his wisdom haste our marriage to stop the inundation of her tears, which, too much minded by herself alone, may be put from her by society. Now do you know the reason of this haste.

Fri. Aside. I would I knew not why it shou... slow'd. Look, sir, here comes the lady towards my cell.

Enter Juliet.

Par. Happily met, my lady and my wife! Jul. That may be, sir, when I may be a wif. Par. That may be must be, love, on Thursd... next. Jul. What must be shall be. Fri. That's a certain te... Par. Come you to make confession to th' father?
With racy shanks, and yellow chalpess skulls;
Or bid me go into a new-made grave
And hide me with a dead man in his shroud;
Things that, to hear them told, have made me tremble;
And I will do it without fear or doubt,
To live an unstain'd wife to my sweet love.

Fri. Hold, then; go home, be merry, give consent
To marry Paris: Wednesday is to-morrow:
To-morrow night look that thou lie alone,
Let not thy nurse lie with thee in thy chamber:
Take thou this vial, being then in bed,
And this distilled liquor drink thou off;
When presently through all thy veins shall run
A cold and drowsy humour, for no pulse
Shall keep his native progress, but surcease;
No warmth, no breath, shall testify thou livest;
The roses in thy lips and cheeks shall fade
To paly ashes; thy eyes' windows fall,
Like death, when he shuts up the day of life;
Each part, depriv'd of supple government,
Shall, stiff and stark, and cold, appear like death;
And in this borrow'd likeness of shrunken death
Thou shalt continue two and forty hours,
And then awake as from a pleasant sleep.
Now, when the bridegroom in the morning comes
To rouse thee from thy bed, there art thou dead:

Then, as the manner of our country is,
In thy best robes uncover'd on the bier,
Thou shalt be borne to that same ancient vault
Where all the kindred of the Capulets lie.
In the mean time, against thou shalt awake,
Shall Romeo by my letters know our drift,
And hither shall he come; and he and I
Will watch thy waking, and that very night
Shall Romeo bear thee hence to Mantua,
And this shall free thee from this present shame;
If no unconstant toy, nor womanish fear,
Abate thy valour in the acting it.

Jul. Give me, give me! O! tell not me of fear.

Fri. Hold; get you gone: be strong and prosperous
In this resolve. I'll send a friar with speed
To Mantua, with my letters to thy lord.

Jul. Love give me strength! and strength shall help afford.
Farewell, dear father.

Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. Hall in CAPULET'S House.

Enter CAPULET, Lady CAPULET, Nurse, and Servi"
We shall be much unfurnish'd for this time. 10
What! is my daughter gone to Friar Laurence?
Nurse. Ay, forsooth.
Cap. Well, he may chance to do some good on her:
A peevish self-will'd harlotry it is.

Enter JULIET.

Nurse. See where she comes from shrift with merry look.
Cap. How now, my headstrong! where have you been gadding?
Jul. Where I have learn'd me to repent the sin
Of disobedient opposition
To you and your behests; and am enjoin'd
By holy Laurence to fall prostrate here,
And beg your pardon. Pardon, I beseech you!
Henceforward I am ever rul'd by you.
Cap. Send for the county; go tell him of this:
I'll have this knot knit up to-morrow morning.
Jul. I met the youthful lord at Laurence' cell;
And gave him what became love I might,
Not stepping o'er the bounds of modesty.
Cap. Why, I am glad on't; this is well:
stand up:
This is as 'tis should be. Let me see the county;
Ay, marry, go, I say, and fetch him hither. 20
Now, afore God! this reverend holy friar,
All our whole city is much bound to him.
Jul. Nurse, will you go with me into my closet,
To help me sort such needful ornaments
As you think fit to furnish me to-morrow?
Lady Cap. No, not till Thursday; there is time enough.
Cap. Go, nurse, go with her. We'll to church to-morrow.

Exeunt JULIET and Nurse.

Lady Cap. We shall be short in our provision:
'Tis now near night.
Cap. Tush! I will stir about,
And all things shall be well, I warrant thee,
wife.

Go thou to Juliet, help to deck up her;
I'll not to bed to-night; let me alone;
I'll play the housewife for this once. What, ho!
They are all forth: well, I will walk myself
To County Paris, to prepare him up Against to-morrow. My heart is wondrous light,
Since this same wayward girl is so reclaim'd.

Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. JULIET'S Chamber.

Enter JULIET and Nurse.

Jul. Ay, those attires are best; but, gentle nurse,
I pray thee, leave me to myself to-night;
For I have need of many orisons
To move the heavens to smile upon my state,
Which, well thou know'st, is cross and full of sin.

Enter Lady CAPULET.

Lady Cap. What! are you busy, ho? need you my help?
Jul. No, madam; we have call'd such necessaries
As are behoveful for our state to-morrow:
So please you, let me now be left alone,

And let the nurse this night sit up with you
For I am sure you have your hands full all
In this so sudden business.

Lady Cap. Good night:
Get thee to bed, and rest; for thou hast ne-

Exeunt Lady CAPULET and Nurse.

Jul. Farewell! God knows when we shall meet again.
I have a faint cold fear thrills through my vitals;
That almost freezes up the heat of life:
I'll call them back again to comfort me:
Nurse! What should she do here? My dismal scene I must act alone.
Come, wish a good fortune.
What if this mixture do not work at all?
Shall I be married then to-morrow morning?
No, no; this shall forbid it: lie thou there.

Laying down a day
What if it be a poison, which the friar
Subtilly hath minister'd to have me dead,
Lest in this marriage he should dishonour
Because he married me before to Romeo?
I fear it is: and yet, methinks, it should not
For he hath still been tried a holy man.
How if, when I am laid into the tomb,
I wake before the time that Romeo
Come to redeem mee there's a fearful point;
Shall I not then be stiffed in the vault,
To whose foul mouth no wholesome air breain,
And there die strangled ere my Romeo come?
Or, if I live, is it not very like,
The horrible conceit of death and night,
Together with the terror of the place,
As in a vault, an ancient receptacle,
Where, for this many hundred years, the be-cs of many buried ancestors are pack'd:
Where bloody Tybalt, yet but green in earth,
Lies fest ring in his shroud; where, as they lay
At some hours in the night spirits resort:
Alack, alack! is it not like that I,
So early waking, what with loathsom snore,
And shrieks like mandrakes torn out of earth,
That living mortals, hearing them, run mad
O! if I wake, shall I not be distraught,
Environed with all these hideous fears,
And madly play with my forefathers' joints
And pluck the mangled Tybalt from his shroud
And, in this rage, with some great kinsmen bone,
As with a club, dash out my desperate brain
O! look, methinks I see my cousin's ghost
Seeking out Romeo, that did spit his body
Upon a rapier's point. Stay, Tybalt, stay!
Romeo, I come! this do I drink to thee.

She falls upon her bed within the curtained

SCENE IV.—The Same. Hall in CAPULET

Enter Lady CAPULET and Nurse.

Lady Cap. Hold, take these keys, and fetch more spices, nurse.
Nurse. They call for dates and quinces in the dry

Enter CAPULET.

Cap. Come, stir, stir, stir! the second ek hath crow'd.
curfew bell hath rung, 'tis three o'clock:

Go, you cot-queen, go,
you to bed; faith, you'll be sick to-morrow
this night's watching.

No, not a whit: what! I have watch'd ere now night for lesser cause, and ne'er been sick.

Ah, you have been a mouse-hunt
in your time;
I will watch you from such watching now.

A jealous-hood, a jealous-hood!

Sirrah, fetch drier logs:
I Peter, he will show thee where they are.

Mass, and well said; a merry whoreson, ha!
on shalt be logger-head. Good faith! 'tis day:

A county will be sleeper with music straight, so he said he would. Music within.

I hear him near.

Waken Juliet, go, and trim her up;
I go and chat with Paris. Hie, make haste, ke haste; the bridgroom he is come already:
ke haste, I say.

Enter Nurse.

Nurse. Mistress! what, mistress! Juliet! fast,
I warrant her, she:
y lamb! why, lady! fie, you slug-a-bed!
y love, I say! madam! sweet-heart! why, bride!
hat! not a word? you take your pennyworths
now:

for a week; for the next night, I warrant,
County Paris hath set up his rest,
at you shall rest but little. God forgive me, arry, and amen, how sound is she asleep!
mist needs wake her. Madam, madam, madam!
let the county take you in your bed;
'll fright you up, i' faith. Will it not be?
that, dress'd! and in your clothes! and down
again!
mist needs wake you. Lady! lady! lady!
fas! alas! Help! help! my lady's dead!
well-a-day, that ever I was born.

Nurse. Look, look! O heavy day!
Lady Cap. O me! O me! my child, my only
life,
Revive, look up, or I will die with thee!
Help! help! Call help.

Enter Capulet.

Cap. For shame! bring Juliet forth; her lord
is come.
Nurse. She's dead, deesse'd, she's dead;
alack the day!

Lady Cap. Alack the day! she's dead, she's dead, she's dead.

Cap. Ha! let me see her. Out, alas! she's cold;
Her blood is settled, and her joints are stiff;
Life and these lips have long been separated:
Death lies on her like an untimely frost
Upon the sweetest flower of all the field.

O lamentable day!

Lady Cap. O woeful time!

Cap. Death, that hath ta'en her hence to make me wail,
Ties up my tongue, and will not let me speak.

Enter Friar Laurence and Paris, with Musicians.

Fri. Come, is the bride ready to go to church?

Cap. Ready to go, but never to return.

Son! the night before thy wedding-day
Hath Death lain with thy wife. There she lies,
Flower as she was, deflowered by him.
Death is my son-in-law, Death is my heir;
My daughter he hath wedded: I will die,
And leave him all; life, living, all is Death's!

Par. Have I thought long to see this morn-ing's face,

And doth it give me such a sight as this?

Lady Cap. Accurs'd, unhappy, wretched, hateful day!

Most miserable hour that e'er time saw
In lasting labour of his pilgrimage!
But one, poor one, one poor and loving child,
But one thing to rejoice and solace in,
And cruel death hath catch'd it from my sight!

Nurse. O woe! O woeful, woeful, woeful day!

Most lamentable day, most woeful day,

But ever, ever, I did yet behold!

O day! O day! O day! O hateful day!

Never was seen so black a day as this:

O woeful day, O woeful day!

Par. Beguil'd, divorced, wronged, spited, slain!

Most detestable death, by thee beguil'd,

By cruel cruel thee quite overthrown!

O love! O life! not life, but love in death!

Cap. Despis'd, distressed, hated, martyr'd,

Kill'd!

Uncomfortable time, why cam'st thou now
To murder, murder our solemnity?

Child! O child! my soul, and not my child!
Dead art thou! alack! my child is dead;
And with my child my joys are buried.

Fri. Peace, ho! for shame! confusion's cure lives not

In these confusions. Heaven and yourself
Had part in this fair maid; now heaven hath all,
And all the better is it for the maid:

Your part in her you could not keep from death,
But heaven keeps his part in eternal life.
The most you sought was her promotion,
For 'twas your heaven she should be advance'd;
And weep ye now, seeing she is advance'd!
Above the clouds, as high as heaven itself?
O! in this love, you love your child so ill,
That you run mad, seeing that she is well:
She's not well married that lives married long;
But she's best married that dies married young.
Dry up your tears, and stick your rosemary
On this fair corse; and, as the custom is,
In all her best array bear her to church;
For though fond nature bids us all lament,
Yet nature's tears are reason's meritment.

Cap. All things that we ordained festival,
Turn from their office to black funeral;
Our instruments to melancholy bells,
Our wedding cheer to a sad burial feast,
Our solemn hymns to sullen dirges change,
Our bridal flowers serve for a buried corse,
And all things change them to the contrary.

Fri. Sir, go you in; and, madam, go with him;
And go, Sir Paris; every one prepare
To follow this fair corse unto her grave.
The heavens do lour upon you for some ill;
Move them no more by crossing their high will.

Exeunt CAPULET, Lady CAPULET,
PARIS, and Friar.

First Mus. Faith, we may put up our pipes, and be gone.

Nurse. Honest good fellows, ah! put up, put up;

For, well you know, this is a pitiful case. Exit.
First Mus. Ay, by my troth, the case may be amended.

Enter PETER.

Peter. Musicians, O! musicians; 'Heart's ease, Heart's ease': O! an you will have me live,
play 'Heart's ease.'

First Mus. Why 'Heart's ease'?

Peter. O! musicians, because my heart itself plays 'My heart is full of woe.' O! play me some merry dump, to comfort me.

First Mus. Not a dump we; 'tis no time to play now.

Peter. You will not then?

First Mus. No.

Peter. I will then give it you soundly.

First Mus. What will you give us?

Peter. No money, on my faith! but the gleek;
I will give you the minstrel.

First Mus. Then will I give you the serving-creature.

Peter. Then will I lay the serving-creature's dagger on your pate. I will carry no crotches:
I'll re you, I'll sae you. Do you note me?

First Mus. An you re us and sae us, you note us.

Second Mus. Pray you, put up your dagger, and put out your wit.

Peter. Then have at you with my wit! I will dry-beat you with an iron wit, and put up my iron dagger. Answer me like men:

When griping grief the heart doth wound,
And doleful dumps the mind oppress,
Then music with her silver sound—

why 'silver sound'? why 'music with her silver sound'? What say you, Simon Catling?

First Mus. Marry, sir, because silver hath a sweet sound.

Peter. Pretty! What say you, Hugh Rebo?

Second Mus. I say 'silver sound,' best musicians sound for silver.

Peter. Pretty too! What say you, Jack Soundpost?

Third Mus. Faith, I know not what to say.

Peter. O! I cry you mercy; you are singer; I will say for you. It is 'music with her silver sound,' because musicians have gold for sounding:

Then music with her silver sound
With speedy help doth lend redress.

First Mus. What a pestilent knife is same!

Second Mus. Hang him, Jack! Come, we'll here; tarry for the mourners, and stay din'd.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Mantua. A Street.

Enter ROMEO.

Rom. If I may trust the flattering truth
sleep,
My dreams presage some joyful news at hand:
My bosom's lord sits lightly in his throne;
And all this day an unaccustomed spirit
Lifts me above the ground with cheery thoughts.

I dreamt my lady came and found me dead
Strange dream, that gives a dead man leave
think!

And breath'd such life with kisses in my lip
That I reviv'd, and was an emperor.

Ah me! how sweet is love itself possess'd,
When but love's shadows are so rich in joy!

Enter BALTHASAR, boosted.

News from Verona! How now, Balthasar!
Dost thou not bring me letters from the frie,
How doth my lady? Is my father well?
How fares my Juliet? that I ask again;
For nothing can be ill if she be well.

Bal. Then she is well, and nothing can be her body sleeps in Capel's monument,
And her immortal part with angels lives.
I saw her laid low in her kindred's vault,
And presently took post to tell it you.
O! pardon me for bringing these ill news,
Since you did leave it for my office, sir.

Rom. Is it e'en so? then I deny you, stars
Thou know'st my lodging: get me ink and pen
And hire post-horses; I will hence to-night.

Bal. I do beseech you, sir, have patience;
Your looks are pale and wild, and do import
Some misadventure.

Rom. Tush! thou art deceiv'd.
Leave me, and do the thing I bid thee do.
Hast thou no letters to me from the friar?

Bal. No, my good lord.

Rom. No matter; get thee go,
And hire those horses: I'll be with thee straight.

Exit BALTHASAR.

Well, Juliet, I will lie with thee to-night.
Let's see for means: O mischief! thou art sly.
To enter in the thoughts of desperate men.
I do remember an apothecary,
And hereabouts he dwells, which late I note
ROMEO AND JULIET.

Scene I.—Verona. Friar Laurence's Cell.

Enter Friar John.

Friar John. Holy Franciscan friar! brother! ho!

Enter Friar Laurence.

Friar. Lau. This same should be the voice of Friar John.

Welcome from Mantua: what says Romeo? Or, if his mind be writ, give me his letter.

Friar. John. Going to find a bare-foot brotherout, one of our order, to associate me, here in this city visiting the sick, And finding him, the searchers of the town, Suspecting that we both were in a house Where the infectious pestilence did reign, Seal'd up the doors, and would not let us forth; So that my speed to Mantua there was stay'd.

Friar. Lau. Who bare my letter then to Romeo? Friar. John. I could not send it, here it is again, Nor get a messenger to bring it thee, So fearful were they of infection.

Friar. Lau. Unhappy fortune! by my brotherhood, The letter was not nice, but full of charge Of dear import; and the neglecting it May do much danger. Friar John, go hence; Get me an iron crow, and bring it straight Unto my cell.

Friar. Lau. Now must I to the monument alone; Within this three hours will fair Juliet wake: She will beshrew me much that Romeo Hath had no notice of these accidents; But I will write again to Mantua, And keep her by my cell till Romeo come: Poor living corse, clos'd in a dead man's tomb! Exit.

Scene III.—A Churchyard; in it a tomb belonging to the CAPULETS.

Enter Paris, and his Page bearing flowers and a torch.

Par. Give me thy torch, boy: hence, and stand aloof; Yet put it out, for I would not be seen. Under yond yew-trees lay thee all along, Holding thine ear close to the hollow ground: So shall no foot upon the churchyard tread, Being loose, unform with digging up of graves, But thou shalt hear it: whistle then to me, As signal that thou hear'st something approach. Give me those flowers. Do as I bid thee; go. Page. I am almost afraid to stand alone Here in the churchyard; yet I will adventure. Retires.

Par. Sweet flower, with flowers thy bridal bed I strew, O woe! thy canopy is dust and stones; Which with sweet water nightly I will dew, Or, wanting that, with tears distill'd by moans: The obsequies that I for thee will keep Nightly shall be to strew thy grave and weep. The Page whistles.

The boy gives warning something doth approach. What cursed foot wanders this way to-night, To cross my obsequies and true love's rite? What! with a torch? muffle me, night, awhile. Retires.

Enter Romeo and Balthasar, with a torch, mattock, etc.

Rom. Give me that mattock and the wrenching iron. Hold, take this letter; early in the morning See thou deliver it to my lord and father. Give me the light: upon thy life I charge thee, Whate'er thou hear'st or seest, stand all aloof, And do not interrupt me in my course. Why I descend into this bed of death
Is partly to behold my lady’s face,
But chiefly to take thence from her dead finger
A precious ring, a ring that I must use 31
In dear employment: therefore hence, be gone: 31
But if thou, jealous, dost return to pry. 41
In what I further shall intend to do,
By heaven, I will tear thee joint by joint,
And strew this hungry churchyard with thy limbs. 41

The time and my intents are savage-wild,
More fierce and more inexorable
Than empty tigers or the roaring sea. 51
Bal. I will be gone, sir, and not trouble you. 51
Rom. So shalt thou show me friendship. Take thou that: 41
Live, and be prosperous; and farewell, good fellow. 41
Bal. Aside. For all this same, I’ll hide me hereabout: 41
His looks I fear, and his intents I doubt. 41
Retires.

Rom. Thou detestable maw, thou womb of death,
Gorg’d with the dearest morsel of the earth,
Thus I enforce thy rotten jaws to open, 62
Opens the tomb.

And, in despite, I’ll cram thee with more food!
Par. This is that bash’d haughty Montague,
That murder’d my love’s cousin, with which grief
It is supposed the fair creature died; 51
And here is come to do some villainous shame
To the dead bodies: I will apprehend him. 51
Comes forward.

Stop thy unhallow’d toil, vile Montague,
Can vengeance be pursu’d further than death?
Condemned villain, I do apprehend thee:
Obey, and go with me; for thou must die. 62
Rom. I must indeed; and therefore came I hither.
Good gentle youth, tempt not a desperate man;
Fly hence and leave me: think upon these gone;
Let them affright thee. I beseech thee, youth,
Put not another sin upon my head 62
By urging me to fury: O! be gone: 62
By heaven, I love thee better than myself,
For I come hither arm’d against myself:
Stay not, be gone; live, and hereafter say
A madman’s mercy bade thee run away. 62
Par. I do defy thy conjurations,
And apprehend thee for a felon here. 62
Rom. Wilt thou provoke me? then have at thee, boy!
They fight. 79
Page. O Lord! they fight: I will go call the watch. Exit.
Par. O! I am slain. Falls.

If thou be merciful,
Open the tomb, lay me with Juliet. Dies.
Rom. In faith, I will. Let me peruse this face:
Mercutio’s kinsman, noble County Paris! 89
What said my man when my betossed soul
Did not attend him as we rode? I think
He told me Paris should have married Juliet:
Said he not so? or did I dream it so?
Or am I mad, hearing him talk of Juliet,
To think it was so? O! give me thy hand,
One writ with me in sour misfortune’s book:
I’ll bury thee in a triumphant grave;
A grave? O, no! a lantern, slaught’r’d youth,
For here lies Juliet, and her beauty makes
This vault a festing presence full of light.

Death, lie thou there, by a dead man inter’d. 31
Laying Paris in the t
How oft when men are at the point of death,
Have they been merry! which their keepers
A lightning before death: O! how may I
Call this a lightning? O my love! my wife,
Death, that hath suck’d the honey of thy brea
Hath had no power yet upon thy beauty:
Thou art not conquer’d; beauty’s ensign yet
Is crimson in thy lips and in thy cheeks,
And death’s pale flag is not advanced there
Tybalt, liest thou there in thy bloody sheet
O! what more favour can I do to thee,
Than with that hand that cut thy youth in two.
To sunder his that was thine enemy?
Forgive me, cousin! Ah! dear Juliet,
Why art thou yet so fair? Shall I believe
That unsubstantial Death is amorous,
And that the lean abhorred monster keeps
Thee here in dark to be his paramour?
For fear of that I still will stay with thee,
And never from this palace of dim night
Depart again: here, here will I remain
With worms that are thy chambermaids; O! I will Set up my everlasting rest,
And shake the yoke of inauspicious stars
From this world-weary’d flesh. Eyes, look ye last!
Arms, take your last embrace! and, lips, O y
The doors of breath, seal with a righteous kiss
A dateless bargain to engrossing death!
Come, bitter conduct, come, unsavoury guide,
Thou desperate pilot, now at once run on
The dashing rocks thy sea-sick weary bark!
Here’s to my love!
Drin

Thy drugs are quick. Thus with a kiss I die.

Enter, at the other end of the churchyard, Fri Laurence, with a lantern, crow, and spade.
Fri. Saint Francis be my speed! how to-night
Have my old feet stumbled at graves? Who there?
Bal. Here’s one, a friend, and one that know’st you well,
Fri. Bliss be upon you! Tell me, good friend,
What torch is yond, that vainly lends his light
To grubs and eyeless skulls? as I discern,
It burneth in the Capel’s monument.
Bal. It doth so, holy sir; and there’s
One that you love.
Fri. Who is it?
Bal. Romeo.
Fri. How long hath he been there?
Bal. Full half an hour.
Fri. Go with me to the vault.
Bal. I dare not,
My master knows not but I am gone hence;
And fearfully did menace me with death
If I did stay to look on his intents.
Fri. Stay then, I’ll go alone. Fear com upon me;
O! much I fear some ill unlucky thing.
Bal. As I did sleep under this yew tree here
I dreamt my master and another fought,
And that my master slew him.
Fri. Romeo! Advance.
Enter the Prince and Attendants.

Prince. What misadventure is so early up, That calls our person from our morning's rest?

Enter Capulet, Lady Capulet, and Others.

Cap. What should it be that they so shriek abroad!

Lady Cap. The people in the street cry Romeo, Some Juliet, and some Paris; and all run With open outcry toward our monument.

Prince. What fear is this which startles in our ears?

First Watch. Sovereign, here lies the County Paris slain;
And Romeo dead; and Juliet, dead before,
Warm and new kill'd.

Prince. Search, seek, and know how this foul murder comes.

First Watch. Here is a friar, and slaughter'd Romeo's man,
With instruments upon them fit to open
These dead men's tombs.

Cap. O heaven! O wife! look how our daughter bleeds.

This dagger hath mista'en, for, lo! his house Is empty on the back of Montague,
And it mis-sheathed in my daughter's bosom.

Lady Cap. O me! this sight of death is as a bell,
That warns my old age to a sepulchre.

Enter Montague and Others.

Prince. Come, Montague; for thou art early up,
To see thy son and hear more early down.

Friar. Alas! my liege, my wife is dead to-night;
Grief of my son's exile hath stopp'd her breath.

Prince. Look, and thou shalt see.

Montague. O thou untaught! what mannaresis in this,
To press before thy father to a grave?

Prince. Seal up the mouth of outrage for a while,
Till we can clear these ambiguities,
And know their spring, their head, their true descent;
And then will I be general of your woe,
And lead you even to death: meintime forbear,
And let mishance be slave to patience.

Bring forth the parties of suspicion.

Friar. I am the greatest, able to do least,
Yet most suspected, as the time and place
Doth make against me, of this direful murder;
And here I stand, both to impeach and purge
Myself condemned and myself excus'd.

Prince. Then say at once what thou dost know in this.

Friar. I will be brief, for my short date of breath
Is not so long as is a tedious tale.

Romeo, there dead, was husband to that Juliet;
And she, there dead, that Romeo's faithful wife:
I married them; and their stol'n marriage-day
Was Tybalt's doomsday, whose untimely death
Banish'd the new-made bridegroom from this city;
For whom, and not for Tybalt, Juliet pin'd.

You, to remove that siege of grief from her,
Betroth'd, and would have married her perfonce,
To County Paris: then comes she to me,
And with wild looks bid me devise some mean
To rid her from this second marriage, 210
Or in my cell there would she kill herself.
Then gave I her, so tutor'd by my art,
A sleeping potion; which so took effect
As I intended, for it wrought on her
The form of death: meantime I writ to Romeo
That he should hither come as this dire night,
To help to take her from her borrow'd grave,
Being the time the potion's force should cease.
But he which bore my letter, Friar John, 250
Was stay'd by accident, and yesternight
Return'd my letter back. Then, all alone,
At the prefixed hour of her wak'ning,
Came I to take her from her kindred's vault,
Meaning to keep her closely at my cell,
Till I conveniently could send to Romeo:
But when I came, some minute ere the time
Of her awakening, here untimely lay
The noble Paris and true Romeo dead.
She wakes; and I entreated her come forth
And bear this work of heaven with patience;
But then a noise did scare me from the tomb,
And she, too desperate, would not go with me,
But, as it seems, did violence on herself.
All this I know; and to the marriage
Her nurse is privy: and, if aught in this Miscarried by my fault, let my old life
Be sacrifice'd, some hour before his time,
Unto the rigour of severest law.

Prince. We still have known thee for a holy man.

Where's Romeo's man? what can he say to this?

Bul. I brought my master news of Juliet's
death;
And then in post he came from Mantua
To this same place, to this same monument.
This letter he early bid me give his father,
And threaten'd me with death, going in the vault,
If I departed not and left him there.

Prince. Give me the letter; I will look on Where is the county's page that rais'd watch!

Sirrah, what made your master in this place?
Page. He came with flowers to strew his lady's grave,
And bid me stand aloof, and so I did;
Anon comes one with light to ope the tomb:
And by and by my master drew on him;
And then I ran away to call the watch.

Prince. This letter doth make good the first
words,
Their course of love, the tidings of her death:
And here he writes that he did buy a poison
Of a poor 'pothecary, and therewithal
Came to this vault to die, and lie with Juliet.
Where be these enemies? Capulet! Montague,
See what a scourge is laid upon your hate;
That heaven finds means to kill your joys with love;
And I, for winking at your discords too,
Have lost a brace of kinsmen: all are punished.

Cap. O brother Montague! give me thy hand
This is my daughter's jointure, for no more
Can I demand.

Mon. But I can give thee more
For I will raise her statue in pure gold;
That while Verona by that name is known,
There shall no figure at such rate be set
As that of true and faithful Juliet.

Cap. As rich shall Romeo by his lady lie;
Poor sacrifices of our enmity!

Prince. A glooming peace this morning brings;
The sun, for sorrow, will not show his head.
Go hence, to have more talk of these sad things:
Some shall be pardon'd, and some punished:
For never was a story of more woe
Than this of Juliet and her Romeo. Execute TIMON OF ATHENS.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

TIMON, a noble Athenian.
Lucius, Lucullus, Sempronius, Ventidius, one of Timon's false Friends.
Alcibiades, an Athenian Captain.
Apemantus, a churlish Philosopher.
Flavius, Steward to Timon.
Flaminius, Lucilius, Servilius, Caphis, Philotus, Servants to Timon's Creditors.
Lords, Senators, Officers, Soldiers, Thieves, and Attendants.

SCENE.—Athens, and the neighbouring Woods.

ACT I.

Enter Poet, Painter, Jeweller, Merchant, and Others, at several doors.

Poet. Good day, sir. I am glad you're well.
Poet. I have not seen you long. How goes the world?
Poet. It wears, sir, as it grows.
Poet. Ay, that's well known; at what particular rarity? what strange, which manifold record not matches? See, fagic of bounty! all these spirits thy power hath conjur'd to attend. I know the merchant. I know them both; 'tis other's a jeweller.

Mer. O! 'tis a worthy lord.

Jew. Nay, that's most fix'd.

Mer. A most incomparable man, breath'd, as it were, o' an unalterable and continue goodness: he passes.

Jew. I have a jewel here—

Mer. O! pray, let 'tis see 't: for the Lord Timon, sir!

Jew. If he will touch the estimate: but, for that—

Poet. When we for recompense have prais'd the vile, it stains the glory in that happy verse. Which aptly sings the good.

Mer. Looking at the jewel. 'Tis a good form.

Titus, Lucius, Servants to Timon's Creditors.
Hortensius, Poet, Painter, Jeweller, and Merchant.
An old Athenian.
Servants to Varro and Isidore, two of Timon's Creditors.
Three Strangers.
A Page.
A Fool.

Phrynia, Timandra, Mistresses to Alcibiades.

Jew. And rich: here is a water, look ye.

Pain. You are rapt, sir, in some work, some dedication.

To the great lord.

Poet. A thing slipp'd idly from me.

Our poesy is as a gum, which oozes from whence 'tis nourish'd: the fire 'tis the flint shows not till it be struck; our gentle flame provokes itself, and like the current flies each bound it chafes. What have you there?

Pain. A picture, sir. When comes your book forth?

Poet. Upon the heels of my presentment, sir. Let's see your piece.

Pain. 'Tis a good piece.

Poet. So 'tis: this comes off well and excellent.

Pain. Indifferent.

Poet. Admirable! How this grace speaks his own standing! what a mental power! This eye shoots forth! how big imagination moves in this lip! to the dullness of the gesture one might interpret.

Pain. It is a pretty mocking of the life. Here is a touch; is't good?

Poet. I'll say of it, it tutors nature: artificial strife.

Lives in these touches, livelier than life.

Enter certain Senators, who pass over the stage.

Pain. How this lord is followed!

Poet. The senators of Athens: happy man!

Pain. Look, more!

Poet. You see this confluence, this great flood of visitors.
I have, in this rough work, shaped out a man, Whom this beneath world doth embrace and hug With ampest entertainment: my free drift Halts not particularly, but moves itself In a wide sea of wax: no level’d malice Infects one comma in the course I hold; But flies an eagle flight, bold and forth on, Leaving no tract behind.

Pain. How shall I understand you?

Poc. I will unboil to you.

You see how all conditions, how all minds, As well of glib and slippery creatures as Of grave and austere quality, tender down Their services to Lord Timon: his large fortune, Upon his good and gracious nature hanging, Subdues and properties to his love and tendance All sorts of hearts; yea, from the glass-faced flattering

To Apeamatus, that few things loves better Than to abhor himself: even he drops down The knee before him and returns in peace Most rich in Timon’s nod.

Pain. I saw them speak together.

Poc. Sir, I have upon a high and pleasant hill Feign’d Fortune to be thron’d: the base of the mount Is rank’d with all deserts, all kinds of natures, That labour on the bosom of this sphere To propagate their states: amongst them all, Whose eyes are on this sovereign lady fix’d, One do I personate of Lord Timon’s frame, Whom Fortune with her ivory hand wafts to her; Whose present grace to present slaves and servants Translates his rivals.

Pain. ’Tis conceiv’d to scope, This throne, this Fortune, and this hill, methinks, With one man beckon’d from the rest below, Bowing his head against the steepy mount To climb his happiness, would be well express’d In our condition.

Poc. Nay, sir, but hear me on. All those which were his fellows but of late, Some better than his value, on the moment Follow his strides, his lobbies fill with tendance, Rain sacrificial whisperings in his ear, Make sacred even his stirrup, and through him Drink the free air.

Pain. Ay, marry, what of these?

Poc. When Fortune in her shift and change of mood Spurns down her late belov’d, all his dependants Which labour after him to the mountain’s top Even on their knees and hands, let him slip down, Not one accompanying his declining foot.

Pain. ’Tis common: A thousand moral paintings I can show That shall demonstrate these quick blows of Fortune’s

More pregnantly than words. Yet you do well To show Lord Timon that mean eyes have seen The foot above the head.

Trumpets sound. Enter Lord TIMON, addressing himself courteously to every suitor; a Messenger from VENTIDIIUS talking with him. LUCILIUS and other servants following.

Tim. Imprison’d is he, say you?

Mess. Ay, my good lord: five talents is his debt, His means most short, his creditors most strait Your honourable letter he desires To those that have shut him up; which failing, Periods his comfort.

Tim. Noble Ventidius! We I am not of that feather to shake off My friend when he must need me. I do know him

A gentleman that well deserves a help, Which he shall have: I’ll pay the debt and fr him.

Mess. Your lordship ever binds him.

Tim. Command me to him: I will send him ransom; And being enfranchis’d, bid him come to me. ’Tis not enough to help the feeble up, But to support him after. Fare you well.

Mess. All happiness to your honour!

Enter an old Athenian.

Old Ath. Lord Timon, hear me speak.

Tim. Freely, good father.

Old Ath. Thou hast a servant nam’d Lucilius.

Tim. I have so: what of him?

Old Ath. Most noble Timon, call the man before thee.

Tim. Attends he here or no? Lucilius! Luc. Here, at your lordship’s service.

Old Ath. This fellow here, Lord Timon, thy creature, By night frequents my house. I am a man That from my first have been inclin’d to thrift And my estate deserves an heir more rais’d Than one which holds a trencher.

Tim. Well; what furthe Old Ath. One only daughter have I, no kin els On whom I may confer what I have got: The maid is fair, o’ the youngest for a bride, And I have bred her at my dearest cost In qualities of the best. This man of thine Attempts her love: I prithee, noble lord, Join with me to forbid him her resort; Myself have spoke in vain.

Tim. The man is hone

Old Ath. Therefore he will be, Timon: His honesty rewards him in itself; It must not bear my daughter.

Tim. Does she love him Old Ath. She is young and apt: Our own precedent passions do instruct us What levity’s in youth.

Tim. To LUCILIUS. Love you the maid? Luc. Ay, my good lord, and she accepts of Old Ath. If in her marriage my consent missing, I call the gods to witness, I will choose Mine heir from forth the beggars of the world And dispossess her all.

Tim. How shall she be endow

If she be mated with an equal husband?

Old Ath. Three talents on the present; future, all.

Tim. This gentleman of mine hath serv’d r long; To build his fortune I will strain a little. For ’tis a bond in men. Give him thy daughter What you bestow, in him I’ll counterpoise, And make him weigh with her.

Old Ath. Most noble lor Pawn me to this your honour, she is his.
Tim. My hand to thee; mine honour on my promise.
Luc. Humbly I thank your lordship: never may hat state or fortune fall into my keeping which is not ow'd to you!

Exeunt Lucilius and Old Athenian.

Poet. Vouchsafe my labour, and long live your lordship!
Tim. I thank you; you shall hear from me anon:
so not away. What have you there, my friend?

Pain. A piece of painting, which I do beseech our lordship to accept.
Tim. Painting is welcome.

The painting is almost the natural man; for since dishonour traffics with man's nature,

He is but outside; these pencill'd figures are e'en such as they give out. I like your work; and you shall find I like it: wait attendance ill you hear further from me.

Pain. The gods preserve you!
Tim. Well fare you, gentleman: give me your
hand;
Ve must needs dine together. Sir, your jewel faith suffer'd under praise.

Jew. What, my lord! dispraise?
Tim. A mere satiety of commendations.
If I should pay you for 't as 'tis extoll'd,

I would unclew me quite.
Jew. My lord, 'tis rated is those which sell would give: but you well
know,

Things of like value, differing in the owners,
Are prized by their masters. Believe 't, dear lord,
You mend the jewel by the wearing it.

Tim. Well mock'd.

Mer. No, my good lord; he speaks the common tongue,
Which all men speak with him.
Tim. Look, who comes here. Will you be child?

Enter APEMANTUS.

Jew. We'll bear, with your lordship.
Mer. He'll spare none.

Tim. Good morrow to thee, gentle Ape-

Mantus!

Apen. Till I be gentle, stay thou for thy good morrow;

When thou art Timon's dog, and these knaves honest,

Tim. Why dost thou call them knaves? thou know'st them not.

Apen. Are they not Athenians?
Tim. Yes.

Apen. Then I repent not.
Jew. You know me, Apeamantus?
Apen. Thou know'st I do; I call'd thee by thy name.

Tim. Thou art proud, Apeamantus.
Apen. Of nothing so much as that I am not like Timon.

Tim. Whither art going?
Apen. To knock out an honest Athenian's brains.

Tim. That's a deed thou 'lt die for.
Apen. Right, if doing nothing be death by the law.

Tim. How likest thou this picture, Ape-

Mantus?

Apen. The best, for the innocence.

Tim. Worught he not well that painted it?
Apen. He wrought better that made the painter; and yet he's but a filthy piece of work.

Pain. You're a dog.
Apen. Thy mother's of my generation:
what's she, if I be a dog?

Tim. Wilt dine with me, Apeamantus?
Apen. No; I eat not lords.

Tim. An thou should'st, thou'dst anger ladies.
Apen. O! they eat lords; so they come by great bellies.

Tim. That's a lascivious apprehension.
Apen. So thou apprehendedst it, take it for thy labour.

Tim. How dost thou like this jewel, Ape-

Mantus?

Apen. Not so well as plain-dealing, which will not cost a man a doit.

Tim. What dost thou think 'tis worth?
Apen. Not worth my thinking. How now, poet!

Poet. How now, philosopher!
Apen. Thou liest.

Poet. Art not one?
Apen. Yes.

Poet. Then I lie not.
Apen. Art not a poet?

Poet. Yes.

Apen. Then thou liest: look in thy last work, where thou hast feigned him a worthy fellow.

Poet. That's not feigned; he is so.

Apen. Yes, he is worthy of thee, and to pay thee for thy labour: he that loves to be flattered is worthy o' the flatterer. Heavens, that I were a lord!

Tim. What would'st do then, Apeamantus?
Apen. E'en as Apeamantus does now; hate a lord with my heart.

Tim. What, thyself?
Apen. Ay.

Tim. Wherefore?
Apen. That I had no angry wit to be a lord.

Art not thou a merchant?

Mer. Ay, Apeamantus.
Apen. Traffic confound thee, if the gods will not!

Mer. If traffic do it, the gods do it.
Apen. Traffic's thy god, and thy god confound thee!

Trumpets sound. Enter a Servant.

Tim. What trumpet's that?
Serv. 'Tis Alcibiades, and some twenty horse,
All of companionship.

Tim. Pray, entertain them; give them guide to us.

Exeunt some Attendants.

You must needs dine with me. Go not you
hence
Till I have thank'd you; and, when dinner's done,
Show me this piece. I am joyful of your sights.

Enter Alcibiades, with his Company.

Most welcome, sir!
Apen. So, so; there!
Aches contract and starve your supple joints!
That there should be small love amongst these sweet knaves,
And all this courtesy! The strain of man’s bred out
Into baboon and monkey.
Alec. Sir, you have sav’d my longing, and I feed
Most hungerly on your sight.
Tim. Right welcome, sir! Ere we depart, we’ll share a bounteous time In different pleasures. Pray you, let us in.

Exeunt all but APEMANTUS.

Enter two Lords.

First Lord. What time o’ day is’t, Ape-manus?
Apen. Time to be honest.

First Lord. That time serves still.
Apen. The more accused thou, that still omitt’s t’ it.

Second Lord. Thou art going to Lord Timon’s feast?
Apen. Ay; to see meat fill knaves and wine heat fools.

Second Lord. Fare thee well, fare thee well.
Apen. Thou art a fool to bid me farewell twice.

Second Lord. Why, Ape­manus?
Apen. Should’s t have kept one to thyself, for
I mean to give thee none.

First Lord. Hang thyself!

Apen. No, I will do nothing at thy bidding:
make thy requests to thy friend.

Second Lord. Away, unpeaceable dog! or I’ll spurn thee hence.

Apen. I will fly, like a dog, the heels o’ the ass.

First Lord. He’s opposite to humanity.
Come, shall we in
And taste Lord Timon’s bounty? he ou­tgoes
The very heart of kindness.

Second Lord. He pours it out; Plutus, the god of gold,
Is but his steward: no meed but he repays
Sevenfold above itself; no gift to him
But breeds the giver a return exceeding
All use of quittance.

First Lord. The noblest mind he carries
That ever govern’d man.
Second Lord. Long may he live in fortunes!
Shall we in?

First Lord. I’ll keep you company.

Exeunt.

Scene II.—The Same. A Room of State in TIMON’S House.

Hautboys playing loud music. A great banquet served in; Flavius and Others attending; then enter Lord Timon, Alcibiades, Lords, Senators, and Ventidius. Then comes, dropping after all, APEMANTUS, discontentedly, like himself.

Ven. Most honour’d Timon,
It hath pleas’d the gods to remember my father’s age,
And call him to long peace.
He is gone happy, and has left me rich:
Then, as in grateful virtue I am bound
To your free heart, I do return those talents, Doubled with thanks and service, from whose help
I deriv’d liberty.

Tim. O! by no means,
Honest Ventidius; you mistake my love;
I gave it freely; and there’s none
Can truly say he gives, if he receives:
If our betters play at that game, we must no dare
To imitate them; faults that are rich are fair.

Ven. A noble spirit!
They all stand ceremoniously looking on TIMON.

Tim. Nay, my lords, ceremony was but devis at first.
To set a gloss on faint deeds, hollow welcome
Recanting goodness, sorry ere tis shown;
But where there is true friendship, there need none.
Pray, sit; more welcome are ye to my fortune
Than my fortunes to me. They sit.
First Lord. My lord, we always have con-Fess’d it.
Apen. Ho, ho! confess’d it; hang’d it, how you not?

Tim. O! Ape­manus, you are welcome.
Apen. You shall not make me welcome:
I come to thee thrust me out of doors.

Tim. Fie! thou’rt a churl! ye’ve got a hume
there
Does not become a man; ’tis much to blame,
They say, my lords, Ira furor brevis est,
But yond man is ever angry.
Go, let him have a table by himself,
For he does neither affect company,
Nor is he fit for it, indeed.
Apen. Let me stay at thine apperil, Timon:
I come to observe; I give thee warning on’t.
Tim. I take no heed of thee; thou’rt Athenian; therefore welcome. I myself would have no power; prithee, let my meat make the silent.

Apen. I scorn thy meat; ’twould choke me for I should Ne’er flatter thee. O you gods! what a numb
Of men eat Timon, and he sees ‘em not.
It grieves me to see so many dip their meat
In one man’s blood; and all the madness is,
He cheers them up too.
I wonder men dare trust themselves with men
Methinks they should invite them with no knives;
Good for their meat, and safer for their lives.
There’s much example for’t; the fowler that Sits next him now, parts bread with him, at plegdes
The breath of him in a divided draught,
Is the readiest man to kill him: it has be proved.
If I were a huge man, I should fear to drink meals,
Lest they should spy my wind-pipe’s danger
notes:
Great men should drink with harness on the throats.

Tim. My lord, in heart; and let the heal go round.

Second Lord. Let it flow this way, my good lor
TIMON OF ATHENS. 725

Enter a Servant.  129

Serv. Please you, my lord, there are certain ladies most desirous of admittance.

Tim. Ladies! What are their wills?

Serv. There comes with them a forerunner, my lord, which bears that office to signify their pleasures.

Tim. I pray, let them be admitted.

Enter CUPID.

Cup. Hail to thee, worthy Timon; and to all That of his bounties taste! The five best Acknowledge thee their patron; and come freely 139

To gratulate thy plenteous bosom. Th' ear.

Taste, touch, and smell, pleas'd from thy table rise;

They only now come but to feast thine eyes.

Tim. They're welcome all; let 'em have kind admittance;

Music, make their welcome! Exit CUPID.

First Lord. You see, my lord, how ample you 're below'd.

Music. Re-enter CUPID, with a masque of Ladies as Amazons, with lutes in their hands, dancing and playing.

Apem. Hoy-day! what a sweep of vanity comes this way:

They dance! they are mad women.

Like madness is the glory of this life,
As this pomp shows to a little oil and root. 140

We make ourselves fools to disport ourselves;
And spend our flatteries to drink those men Upon whose age we void it up again,

With poisonous spite and envy.

Who lives that's not depraved or depraves?

Who dies that bears not one spurr to their graves

Of their friends' gift?

I should fear those that dance before me now Would on the day stamp upon me: 't has been done;

Men shut their doors against a setting sun. 159

The Lords rise from table, with much adoring Of TIMON; and to show their loves each singlets out an Amazon, and all dance, men with women, a lofty strain or two to the hautboys, and cease.

Tim. You have done our pleasures much grace, fair ladies,

Set a fair fashion on our entertainment,
Which was not half so beautiful and kind;
You have added worth unto 't and lustre,
And entertain'd me with mine own device;
I am to thank you for 't.

First Lady. My lord, you take us even at the best.

Apem. Faith, for the worst is filthy; and would not hold taking, I doubt me.

Tim. Ladies, there is an idle banquet 160

Attends you: please you to dispose yourselves.

All Ladies. Most thankfully, my lord.

Excuse CUPID and Ladies.

Tim. Flavius!

Flav. My lord!

Tim. The little casket bring me hither.

There is no crossing him in's humour;
Else I should tell him, well, 'tis faith, I should, When all's spent, he'd be cross'd then, an he could. 'Tis pity bounty had not eyes behind, That man might ne'er be wretched for his mind.

Exit.

First Lord. Where be our men?
Serv. Here, my lord, in readiness.
Second Lord. Our horses!

Re-enter Flavius, with the casket.

Tim. O my friends! I have one word to say to you. Look you, my good lord, I must entreat you, honour me so much As to advance this jewel; accept it and wear it. Kind my lord.

First Lord. I am so far already in your gifts— All. So are we all.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. My lord, there are certain nobles of the senate Newly alighted, and come to visit you.
Tim. They are fairly welcome.
Flav. I beseech your honour, Vouchsafe me a word; it does concern you near.
Tim. Near! why, then another time I'll hear thee. I prithee, let's be provided to show them entertainment.
Flav. Aside. I scarce know how.

Enter another Servant.

Second Serv. May it please your honour, Lord Lucius, Out of his free love, hath presented to you Four milk-white horses, trap'd in silver.
Tim. I shall accept them fairly; let the presents Be worthily entertain'd.

Enter a third Servant.

Third Serv. Please you, my lord, that honourable gentleman, Lord Lucinus, entreats your company to-morrow to hunt with him, and has sent your honour two brace of greyhounds.
Tim. I'll hunt with him; and let them be receiv'd, Not without fair reward.
Flav. Aside. What will this come to? He commands us to provide, and give great gifts, And all out of an empty coffer:

Nor will he know his purse, or yield me this,
'To show him what a beggar his heart is,
Being of no power to make his wishes good.
His promises fly so beyond his state
That what he speaks is all in debt; he owes
For every word: he is so kind that he now
Pays interest for 't; his land's put to their books.
Well, would I were gently put out of office
Before I were forc'd out!
Happier is he that has no friend to feed

Than such that do o'en enemies exceed.
I bleed inwardly for my lord.

Exit.

Tim. You do yourselves Much wrong, you bathe too much of your own merits:
Here, my lord, a trifle of our love.

Second Lord. With more than common than
I will receive it.

Third Lord. O! he's the very soul of bounty
Tim. And now I remember, my lord, you gave Good words the other day of a bay courser
I rode on: it is yours, because you lik'd it.

Third Lord. O! I beseech you, pardon my lord, in that.
Tim. You may take my word, my lord;
know no man Can justly praise but what he does affect;
I weigh my friend's affection with mine own;
I'll tell you true. I'll call to you.

All Lords. O! none so welcome
Tim. I take all and your several visitations
So kind to heart, 'tis not enough to give;
Methinks I could deal kingdoms to my friend
And ne'er be weary. Alcibiades,
Thou art a soldier, therefore seldom rich;
It comes in charity to thee; for all thy living
Is 'mongst the dead, and all the lands thou lie in a pitch'd field.

Alep. Ay, desist'd land, my lord
First Lord. We are so virtuously bound—
Tim. And Am I to you.
Second Lord. So infinitely endear'd—
Tim. All to you. Lights, more lights!
First Lord. The best of happiness.
Honour and fortunes, keep with you, Lo Timon!
Tim. Ready for his friends.

Exeunt Alcibiades, Lords, e Apem.

What a coil's her Serving of becks and jutting-out of buff's!
I doubt whether their legs be worth the sums
That are given for 'em. Friendship's full dregs:
Methinks, false hearts should never have saw legs.
Thus honest fools lay out their wealth court-sies.

Tim. Now, Apemantus, if thou Wert not so dull
I would be good to thee.
Alep. No, I'll nothing; for if I should be bribed too, there would be none left to per upon thee, and then thou would'st sin the fast Thou givest so long. Timon, I fear me thou wilt give away thyself in paper shortly; where these feasts, pomp's, and vain-glories?
Tim. Nay, an you begin to rail on solicence, I am sworn not to give regard to ye Farewell; and come with better music.

Ex.

Alep. So:
Thou wilt not hear me now; thou shalt not the
I'll lock thy heaven from thee.
O! that men's ears should be
To counsel deaf, but not to flattery

ACT II.

Scene I.—Athens. A Room in a Senator’s House.

Enter Senator, with papers in his hand.

Sen. And late, five thousand: to Varro as to Isidore
He owes nine thousand; besides my former suit
Which makes it five-and-twenty. Still motion
Enter CAPHIS.

Caph. Here, sir; what is your pleasure? Sen. Get on your cloak, and haste you to Lord Timon’s importune him for my moneys; be not ceas’d with slight denial, nor then silence when—Commend me to your master—and the cap tays in the right hand, thus; but tell him, I uses cry to me; I must serve my turn out of mine own; his days and times are past, and my reliances on his fracted dates have smit my credit; I love and honour him, but must not break my back to heal his finger; immediate are my needs, and my relief just not be toss’d and turn’d to me in words, but find supply immediate. Get you gone: ‘tis on a most importunate aspect, visage of demand; for I do fear, When every feather sticks in his own wing, Lord Timon will be left a naked gull, Which flashes now a phaonix. Get you gone.

Caph. I go, sir.

Sen. I go, sir! Take the bonds along with you, and have the dates in compt.

Caph. I will, sir. Go. Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. A Hall in Timon’s House.

Enter FLAVIUS, with many bills in his hand.

Flav. No care, no stop! so senseless of expense, that he will neither know how to maintain it, nor cease his flow of riot: takes no account how things go from him, nor resumes no care of what is to continue: never mind Was to be so unwise, to be so kind. What shall be done? He will not hear, till feel must be round with him, now he comes from hunting.

Enter CAPHIS, and the Servants of ISIDORE and VARRO.

Flav. Pray, whose here? What! you come for money?

Var. Serv. Is’t not your business too?

Caph. It is: and yours too, Isidore?

Isid. Serv. It is so.

Caph. Would we were all discharg’d!

Var. Serv. I fear it.

Caph. Here comes the lord.

Enter TIMON, ALCIBIADES, and Lords, etc.

Tim. So soon as dinner’s done, we’ll forth again.

My Alcibiades. With me? what is your will?

Caph. My lord, here is a note of certain dues.

Tim. Dues! Whence are you?

Caph. Of Athens here, my lord.

Tim. Go to my steward.

Caph. Please it your lordship, he hath put me off

To the accession of new days this month:

My master is awak’d by great occasion

To call upon his own; and humbly prays you

That with your other noble parts you’ll suit,

In giving him his right.

Tim. Mine honest friend,

I prithee, but repair to me next morning.

Caph. Nay, good my lord,—

Tim. Contain thyself, good friend.

Var. Serv. One Varro’s servant, my good lord,—

Isid. Serv. From Isidore;

He humbly prays your speedy payment.

Caph. If you did know, my lord, my master’s wants,—

Var. Serv. ’Twas due on forfeiture, my lord, six weeks

And past.

Isid. Serv. Your steward puts me off, my lord; And I am sent expressly to your lordship.

Tim. Give me breath.

I do beseech you, good my lords, keep on; I’ll wait upon you instantly.

Exeunt ALCIBIADES and Lords.

To FLAVIUS. Come hither: pray you, How goes the world, that I am thus encounter’d With clamorous demands of date-broke bonds, And the detention of long-since-dué debts, Against my honour?

Flav. Please you, gentlemen, The time is unagreeable to this business:

Your importunity cease till after dinner, That I may make his lordship understand Wherefore you are not paid.

Enter APEMANTUS and Fool.

Caph. Stay, stay; here comes the fool with Apeamantus: let’s ha’ some sport with ’em.

Var. Serv. Hang him, he’ll abuse us.

Isid. Serv. A plague upon him, dog!

Var. Serv. How dost, fool?

Ape. Dost dialogue with thy shadow?

Var. Serv. I speak not to thee.

Ape. No; ’tis to thyself. To the Fool. Come away.

Isid. Serv. There’s the fool hangs on your back already.

Ape. No, thou standest single; thou’rt not on him yet.

Caph. Where’s the fool now?

Ape. He last asked the question. Poor rogues, and usurers’ men! bawds between gold and want!

All Serv. What are we, Apeamantus?

Ape. Asses.

All Serv. Why?

Ape. That you ask me what you are, and do not know yourselves. Speak to ’em, fool.

Fool. How do you, gentlemen?

All Serv. Gramercies, good fool. How does your mistress?
Foof. She's e'en setting on water to scald such chickens as you are. Would we could see you at Corinth! 72
Apen. Good! gramercy.

Enter Page.

Page. Look you, here comes my mistress' page. Why, how now, captain! what do you in this wise company? How dost thou, Apemantus?
Apen. Would I had a rod in my mouth, that I might answer thee profitably.
Page. Prithee, Apemantus, read me the superscription of these letters: I know not which is which.
Apen. Canst not read?
Page. No.
Apen. There will little learning die then that day thou art hanged. This is to Lord Timon; this to Alcibiades. Go; thou wast born a bastard, and thou 'lt die a bawd.
Page. Thou wast whelped a dog, and thou shalt famish a dog's death. Answer not; I am gone.
Apen. 'E'en so thou outrunnest grace. Fool, I will go with you to Lord Timon's.
Page. Will you leave me there?
Apen. If Timon stay at home. You three serve three usurers?
All Serv. Ay; would they served us.
Apen. So would I, as a good trick as ever hangman served thief.
Page. Are you three usurers' men?
All Serv. Ay, fool.
Apen. I think no usurer but has a fool to his servant: my mistress is one, and I am her fool. When men come to borrow of your masters, they approach sadly, and go away merry; but they enter my mistress' house merrily, and go away sadly: the reason of this?
Var. Serv. I could render one.
Apen. Do it then, that we may account thee a whoremaster and a knife; which notwithstanding, thou shalt be no less esteemed.
Var. Serv. What is a whoremaster, fool?
Fool. A fool in good clothes, and something like thee. 'Tis a spirit: sometime 't appears like a lord; sometime like a lawyer; sometime like a philosopher, with two stones more than 's artificial one. He is very often like a knight; and generally in all shapes that man goes up and down in from fourscore to thirteene, this spirit walks in.
Var. Serv. Thou art not altogether a fool.
Fool. Nor thou altogether a wise man: as much foolery as I have, so much wit thou lackest.
Apen. That answer might have become Apemantus.
All Serv. Aside, aside; here comes Lord Timon.

Re-enter Timon and Flavius.

Apen. Come with me, fool, come.
Fool. I do not always follow lover, elder brother and woman; sometime the philosopher.

Execute Apemantus and Fool.

Flav. Pray you, walk near: I'll speak with you anon.

Execute Servants.

Tim. You make me marvel: wherefore ere this time

Had you not fully laid my state before me,
Enter FLAMINIUS, SERVIlius, and other Servants.

servants. My lord! my lord!

Tim. I will dispatch you severally: you to Lucius; to Lord Lucullus you; I hunted his honour to-day; you, to Sempronius. I mend me to their loves; and I am proud, that my occasions have found time to toward a supply of money: let the request fifty talents.

Flam. As you have said, my lord.

Tim. Lord Lucius! and Lucullus! hum! To another Servant. Go you, sir, to the senators, whom, even to the state’s best health, I have serv’d this hearing, bid ’em send o’ the instant thousand talents to me.

Flam. Is’t true? I can’t be? They answer, in a joint and corporate voice, at now they are at fall, want treasure, cannot what they would; are sorry; you are honorable. Yet they could have wish’d; they know not, nothing hath been amiss; a noble nature catch a wrench; would all were well; tis pity; so, intending other serious matters, or distasteful looks and these hard fractions, certain half-caps and cold-moving nods froze me into silence.

Tim. You gods, reward them! whee, man, look cheerly. These old fellows we’re their ingratitude in them hereditary; their blood is cak’d, ’tis cold, it seldom flows; lack of kindly warmth they are not kind; nature, as it grows again toward earth, fashion’d for the journey, dull and heavy.

a Servant. Go to Ventidius. To FLAVIUS. Prithchee, be not sad, you art true and honest; ingeniously I speak, I blame belongs to thee. To Servant. Ventidius lately cried his father; by whose death he’s stepp’d to a great estate; when he was poor, 23 aprison’d and in scarcity of friends, clear’d him with five talents; greet him from me; him suppose some good necessity suiches his friend, which, craves to be remembr’d with those five talents. Exit Servant.

Tim. To FLAVIUS. That had, give’t these fellows whom ’tis instant due. Ne’er speak or think that Timon’s fortunes’ mong his friends can sink. Flam. I would I could not think it: that thought is bounty’s foe; free itself, it thinks all others so. Exeunt.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Athens. A Room in Lucullus’s House.

FLAMINIUS waiting. Enter a Servant to him.

Serv. I have told my lord of you; he is coming down to you.

Flam. I thank you, sir.

Enter Lucullus.

Serv. Here’s my lord.

Lucullus. Aside. One of Lord Timon’s men! a gift, I warrant. Why, this hits right; I dreamt of a silver basin and ewer to-night. Flaminus, honest Flaminus, you are very respectively welcome, sir. Fill me some wine.

Exit Servant.

And how does that honourable, complete, free-hearted gentleman of Athens, thy very bountiful good lord and master?

Flam. His health is well, sir.

Luc. I am right glad that his health is well, sir. And what hast thou there under thy cloak, pretty Flaminus?

Flam. Faith, nothing but an empty box, sir, which, in my lord’s behalf, I came to entreat your honour to supply; who, having great and instant occasion to use fifty talents, hath sent to your lordship to furnish him, nothing doubting your present assistance therein.

Luc. La, la, la! ‘nothing doubting,’ says he? Alas! good lord; a noble gentleman ’tis, if he would not keep so good a house. Many a time and often I ha’ dined with him, and told him on’t; and come again to supper to him, of purpose to have him spend less; and yet he would embrace no counsel, take no warning by my coming. Every man has his fault, and honesty is his; I ha’ told him on’t, but I could ne’er get him from it.

Re-enter Servant, with wine.

Serv. Your lordship, here is the wine.

Lucullus. Flaminus, I have noted thee always wise.

Here’s to thee.

Flam. Your lordship speaks your pleasure.

Lucullus. I have observed thee always for a thoroughly prompt spirit, give thee thy due, and one that knows what belongs to reason; and canst use the time well, if the time use thee well: good parts in thee. To the Servant. Get you gone, sirrah.

Exit Servant. Draw nearer, honest Flaminus. Thy lord’s a bountiful gentleman; but thou art wise, and thou knowest well enough, although thou comest to me, that this is no time to lend money, especially upon bare friendship, without security. Here’s three solidares for thee; good boy, wink at me, and say thou sawest me not. Fare thee well.

Flam. Is’t possible the world should so much differ, And we alive that liv’d? Fly, damned baseness, To him that worships thee!

Throwing the money away.

Lucullus. Ha! now I see thou art a fool, and fit for thy master.

Exit.

Flam. May these add to the number that may scald thee!
Let molten coin be thy damnation, Thou disease of a friend, and not himself! Has friendship such a faint and milky heart? It turns in less than two nights? O you gods! or I feel my master's passion. This slave unto his honour Has my lord's meat in him: Why should it thrive and turn to nutriment When he is turn'd to poison? O! may diseases only work upon't, And when he's sick to death, let not that part of nature Which my lord paid for, be of any power To expel sickness, but prolong his hour. Exit.

Scene II.—The Same. A public Place.

Enter Lucius, with three Strangers.

Luc. Who? the Lord Timon? he is my very good friend, and an honourable gentleman.

First Stran. We know him for no less, though we are but strangers to him. But I can tell you one thing, my lord, and which I hear from common hours: now Lord Timon's happy hours are done and past, and his estate shrinks from him.

Luc. Fle, no, do not believe it; he cannot want for money.

Second Stran. But believe you this, my lord, that, not long ago, one of his men was with the Lord Lucullus to borrow so many talents, nay, urged extremely for 't, and showed what necessity belonged to 't, and yet was denied.

Luc. How?

Second Stran. I tell you, denied, my lord.

Luc. What a strange case was that! now, before the gods, I am ashamed on 't. Denied that honourable man! there was very little honour showed in 't. For my own part, I must needs confess, I have received some small kindnesses from him, as money, plate, jewels, and such like trifles, nothing comparing to his; yet, had he mistook him and sent to me, I should ne'er have denied his occasion so many talents.

Enter Servilius.

Ser. See, by good hap, yonder's my lord; I have sweat to see his honour. To Lucius. My honoured lord!

Luc. Servilius! you are kindly met, sir. Fare thee well: commend me to thy honourable virtuous lord, my very exquisite friend.

Ser. May it please your honour, my lord hath sent—

Luc. Ha! what has he sent? I am so much endeared to that lord; he's ever sending: how shall I thank him, thinkest thou? And what has he sent now?

Ser. He has only sent his present occasion now, my lord; requesting your lordship to supply his instant use with so many talents.

Luc. I know his lordship is but merry with me; he cannot want fifty-five hundred talents.

Ser. But in the meantime he wants less, my lord.

If his occasion were not virtuous, I should not urge it half so faithfully.

Luc. Dost thou speak seriously, Servilius?

Ser. Upon my soul, 'tis true, sir.

Luc. What a wicked beast was I to disfavor myself against such a good time, when I ha' shown myself honourable! how unluckily happened, that I should purchase the day before a little part, and undo a great deal of honor! Servilius, now, before the gods, I am not about; the more beast, I say; I was sending use Lord Timon myself, these gentlemen witness; but I would not, for the wealth of Athens, I had done 't now. Commend me boldly to his good lordship; and I hope his honor will conceive the fairest of me, because I have no power to be kind: and tell him this for me, I count it one of my greatest afflictions to say, that I cannot pleasure such an honourable gentleman. Good Servilius, will you befriend me so far as to use mine own words to him?

Ser. Yes, sir, I shall.

Luc. I'll look you out a good turn, Servilius.

Exit Servilius.

True, as you said, Timon is shrunk indeed; And he that's once denied will hardly speak.

First Stran. Do you observe this, Hostilius?

Second Stran. Ay, too well.

First Stran. Why, this is the world's so and just of the same piece Is every flatterer's spirit. Who can call him His friend that dips in the same dish! for I My knowing, Timon has been this lord's father: And kept his credit with his purse, Supported his estate; nay, Timon's money Has paid his men their wages: he ne'er drinks But Timon's silver treads upon his lip; And yet, O see the monstrousness of man, When he looks out in an ungrateful shape, He does deny him, in respect of his, What charitable men afford to beggars.

Third Stran. Religion groans at it.

First Stran. For mine own part, I never tasted Timon in my life, Nor came any of his bounties over me, To mark me for his friend; yet, I protest, For his right noble mind, illustrious virtue, And honourable carriage, Had his necessity made use of me, I would have put my wealth into donation, And the best half should have return'd to So much I love his heart. But, I perceive, Men must learn now with pity to dispense; For policy sits above conscience.

Scene III.—The Same. A Room in Sempronius's House.

Enter Sempronius, and a Servant of Timon.

Sem. Must he needs trouble me in't? Hubove all others? He might have tried Lord Lucius, or Lucullus; And now Ventidius is wealthy too, Whom he redeem'd from prison: all these Owe their estates unto him.

Serv. My lord, They have all been touch'd and found base men for They have all denied him.

Sem. How! have they denied him? Has Ventidius and Lucullus denied him? And does he send to me? Three! hum!
Welcome, Sir, for Titus now
What Your Mark, Labouring
What good Ay, I
It was my lord's best hope; now all are fled only the gods. Now his friends are dead, or, that were never acquainted with his wards
by a bounteous year, must be employ'd
'to guard sure their master:
'd this is all a liberal course allows;
'to cannot keep his wealth must keep his house.
es he hath spent of Timon's wealth,
And now ingratitude makes it worth than stealth.
First Var. Serv. Yes, mine's three thousand crowns;
what's yours?
Luc. Serv. Five thousand mine.
First Var. Serv. 'Tis much deep:
and it should seem by the sun,
your master's confidence was above mine;
else, surely, his had equal'd.

Enter Flaminius.
Tit. One of Lord Timon's men.
Luc. Serv. Flaminius! Sir, a word. Pray, is my lord ready to come forth?
Flam. No, indeed, he is not.
Tit. We attend his lordship; pray, signify so much.
Flam. I need not tell him that; he knows you are too diligent.

Enter Flavius in a cloak, muffled.
Luc. Serv. Ha! is not that his steward muffled so?
He goes away in a cloud: call him, call him.
Tit. Do you hear, sir?
Second Var. Serv. By your leave, sir.—
Flav. What do ye ask of me, my friend?
Tit. We wait for certain money here, sir.
Flav. Ay, If money were as certain as your waiting,
'twere sure enough.
Why then preferr'd you not your sums and bills
When your false masters eat of my lord's meat?
Then they could smile and fawn upon his debts,
And take down the interest into their glutinous maws.
You do yourselves but wrong to stir me up;
Let me pass quietly:
Believe 't, my lord and I have made an end;
I have no more to reckon, he to spend.
Luc. Serv. Ay, but this answer will not serve.
Flav. If 'twill not serve, 'tis not so base as you;
For you serve knaves.

First Var. Serv. How! what does his cashiered worship mutter?
Second Var. Serv. No matter what; he's poor, and that’s revenge enough. Who can speak broader than he that has no house to put his head in? such may rail against great buildings.

Enter Servilius.

Tim. O! here’s Servilius; now we shall know some answer.

Serv. If I might beseech you, gentlemen, to repair some other hour, I should derive much from’t; for, take’t on my soul, my lord, it would wondrously to discontent. His comfortable temper has forsaken him; he’s much out of health, and keeps his chamber.

Luc. Serv. Many do keep their chambers are not sick:

An if it be far beyond his health,

Methinks he should the sooner pay his debts.

And make a clear way to the gods.

Serv. Good gods!

Tim. We cannot take this for answer, sir.

Flam. Within. Servilius, help! my lord! my lord!

Enter Timon, in a rage; Flaminius following.

Tim. What! are my doors oppos’d against my passage?

Have I been ever free, and must my house

Be my retentive enemy, my gaol?

The place which I have feasted, does it now,

Like all mankind, show me an iron heart?

Luc. Serv. Put in now, Titus.

Tim. My lord, here is my bill.

Luc. Serv. Here’s mine.

Hor. And mine, my lord.

Both Var. Serv. And ours, my lord.

Flam. All our bills.

Tim. Knock me down with ’em: clear me to the girdle.

Luc. Serv. Alas! my lord,—

Tim. Cut my heart in sums.

Tim. Mine, fifty talents.

Tim. Tell out my blood.

Luc. Serv. Five thousand crowns, my lord.

Tim. Five thousand drops pays that. What yours? and yours?

First Var. Serv. My lord,—

Second Var. Serv. My lord,—

Tim. Tear me, take me; and the gods fall upon you!

Exit.

Hor. Faith, I perceive our masters may throw their caps at their money: these debts may well be called desperate ones, for a madman owes ’em.

Exeunt.

Re-enter Timon and Flavius.

Tim. They have c’en put my breath from me, the slaves:

Creditors! devils!

Flav. My dear lord,—

Tim. What if it should be so?

Flav. My lord,—

Tim. I’ll have it so. My steward!

Flav. Here, my lord.

Tim. So fitly! Go, bid all my friends again,

Lucius, Lucullus, and Sempronius; all:

I’ll once more feast the rascals.

Flav. O my lord!

You only speak from your distracted soul;

There is not so much left to furnish out

A moderate table.
TIMON OF ATHENS.

Is this the balsam that the usuring senate
Pours into captains' wounds? Banishment!
It comes not ill; I hate not to be banish'd;
It is a cause worthy my spleen and fury,
That I may strike at Athens. I'll cheer up
My discontented troops, and lay for hearts.
'Tis honour with most lands to be at odds;
Soldiers should brook as little wrongs as gods,

Exit.

SCENE VI.—The Same. A Room of State in TIMON'S House.

Music. Tables set out: Servants attending. Enter divers Lords, Senators, and Others, at several doors.

First Lord. The good time of day to you, sir.
Second Lord. I also wish it to you. I think this honourable lord did but try us this other day.

First Lord. Upon that were my thoughts tiring when we encountered: I hope it is not so low with him as he made it seem in the trial of his several friends.

Second Lord. It should not be, by the persuasion of his new feasting.

First Lord. I should think so: he hath sent me an earnest inviting, which many my near occasions did urge me to put off; but he hath conjured me beyond them, and I must needs appear.

Second Lord. In like manner was I in debt to my inexpressable friends, but he would not hear my excuse. I am sorry, when he sent to borrow of me, that my provision was out.

First Lord. I am sick of that grief too, as I understand how all things go.

Second Lord. Every man here's so. What would he have borrowed of you?

First Lord. A thousand pieces.

Second Lord. A thousand pieces!

First Lord. What of you?

Third Lord. He sent to me, sir,—Here he comes.

Enter TIMON and Attendants.

Tim. With all my heart, gentlemen both;
and how fare you?

First Lord. Ever at the best, hearing well of your lordship.

Second Lord. The swallow follows not summer more willing than we your lordship.

Tim. Aside. Nor more willingly leaves winter; such summer-birds are men. Gentlemen, our dinner will not recompense this long stay: feast your ears with the music awhile, if they will fare so harshly o' the trumpet's sound; we shall to 't presently.

First Lord. I hope it remains not unkindly with your lordship that I returned you an empty
messenger.

Tim. 'O! sir, let it not trouble you.

Second Lord. My noble lord,—

Tim. Ah! my good friend, what cheer?

Second Lord. My most honourable lord, I am
'e'en sick of shame, that when your lordship this other day sent to me I was so unfortunate a beggar.

Tim. Think not on 't, sir.

Second Lord. If you had sent but two hours before,—
Tim. Let it not cumber your better remembrance. The banquet brought in.
Come, bring in all together.
Second Lord. All covered dishes!
First Lord. Royal cheer, I warrant you.
Third Lord. Doubt not that, if money and the season can yield it.
First Lord. How do you? What's the news? Third Lord. Alcibiades is banished: hear you of it?
First and Second Lord. Alcibiades banished!
Third Lord. 'Tis so, be sure of it.
First Lord. How? how?
Second Lord. I pray you, upon what?
Tim. My worthy friends, will you draw near?
Third Lord. I'll tell you more anon. Here's a noble feast toward.
Second Lord. This is the old man still.
Third Lord. Will 't hold? will 't hold?
Second Lord. It does; but time will—and so—Third Lord. I do conceive.
Tim. Each man to his stool, with that spur as he would to the lip of his mistress; your diet shall be in all places alike. Make not a city feast of it, to let the meat cool ere we can agree upon the first place: sit, sit. The gods require our thanks.

You great benefactors, sprinkle our society with thankfulness. For your own gifts make yourselves praised: but reserve still to give, lest your deities be despised. Lend to each man enough, that one need not lend to another; for were your godheads to borrow of men, men would forsake the gods. Make the meat be beloved more than the man that gives it. Let no assembly of twenty be without a score of villains: if there sit twelve women at the table, let a dozen of them be—as they are. The rest of your fees, O gods! the senators of Athens, together with the common lag of people, what is amiss in them, you gods, make suitable for destruction. For these my present friends, as they are to me nothing, so in nothing bless them, and to nothing are they welcome.

Uncover, dogs, and lap. The dishes are uncovered and seen to be full of warm water.

Some speak. What does his lordship mean?

Some other. I know not.

Tim. May you a better feast never behold,
You knot of mouth-friends! smoke and luke-warm water
Is your perfection. This is Timon's last;
Who, stuck and stangled with your flatteries,
Washes it off, and sprinkles in your faces
Throwing the water in their faces.

Your reeking villany. Live loath'd, and long,
Most smiling, smooth, detested parasites,
Courteous destroyers, affable wolves, meek bears,
You fools of fortune, trencher-friends, time's flies,
Cap and knee slaves, vapours, and minute-jacks!
Of man and beast the infinite malady
Crust you quite o'er! What! dost thou go?
Soft! take thy physic first,—thou too,—and thou:
Stay, I will lend thee money, borrow none.

What! all in motion? Henceforth be no feast,

Whereat a villain's not a welcome guest.
Burn, house! sink, Athens! henceforth hat Of Timon man and all humanity!

Re-enter the Lords, Senators, etc.

First Lord. How now, my lords!
Second Lord. Know you the quality of Timon's fury?
Third Lord. Push! did you see my cap?
Fourth Lord. I have lost my gown.
Third Lord. He's but a mad lord, and not but humour sways him. He gave me a jewel other day, and now he has beat it out of hat: did you see my jewel?
Fourth Lord. Did you see my cap?
Second Lord. Here 'tis.
Fourth Lord. Here lies my gown.
First Lord. Let's make no stay.
Second Lord. Lord Timon's mad.
Third Lord. I feel 't upon my bosom.
Fourth Lord. One day he gives us diano, next day stones.
Enter Flavius, with two or three Servants.

First Serv. Hear you, Master steward! where’s our master?

We undone? cast off? nothing remaining?

I, Alack! my fellows, what should I say to you?

Be recorded by the righteous gods,

As poor as you.

First Serv. Such a house broke! noble a master fall’n! All gone, and not friend to take his fortune by the arm,

Go along with him!

Second Serv. As we do turn our backs in our companion thrown into his grave,

As his familiar to his buried fortunes all away, leave their false vows with him,

And his disease of all-shunn’d poverty,

Like, contempt, alone. More of our fellows.

Enter other Servants.

First Serv. All broken implements of a ruin’d house.

Third Serv. Yet do our hearts wear Timon’s livery,

As I see by our faces; we are fellows still,

Ring alike in sorrow. Leak’d is our bark,

We, poor mates, stand on the dying deck,

The surges threat: we must all part this sea of air.

Good fellows all,

Latest of my wealth I’ll share amongst you,

Never shall we meet, for Timon’s sake yet be fellows; let’s shake our heads, and say,

Were a knell unto our master’s fortunes,

E have seen better days.’ Let each take some;

Giving them money,

Y, put out all your hands. Not one word more: as part we rich in sorrow, parting poor.

They embrace, and part several ways.

The fierce wretchedness that glory brings us,

So would not wish to be from wealth exempt,

Yet riches point to misery and contempt?

So’d be so mock’d with glory? or so live in a dream of friendship?

Have his pomp and all what state compounds

Only painted, like his varnish’d friends?

Or honest lord! brought low by his own heart,

Done by goodness. Strange, unusual blood,

Ken man’s worst sin is he does too much good!

Then dares to be half so kind again?

Bounty, that makes gods, does still mar men.

Dearest lord, bless’d, to be most accurs’d,

Sh, only to be wretched, thy great fortunes made thy chief afflictions. Alas! kind lord;

S flung in rage from this ingratitude seat monstrous friends;

Has he with him to supply his life,

That which can command it.

I’ll follow and inquire him out:

I’ll ever serve his mind with my best will;

Whilst I have gold I’ll be his steward still.

Exit.

SCENE III.—Woods and Cave, near the Sea-shore.

Enter Timon from the Cave.

Tim. O blessed breeding sun! draw from the earth

Rotten humidity; below thy sister’s orb

Infest the air! Twin’d brothers of one womb,

Whose procreation, residence, and birth,

Scarce is divitant, touch them with several fortunes;

The greater scorns the lesser: not nature,

To whom all sores lay siege, can bear great fortune,

But by contempt of nature.

Raise me this beggar, and deny ’t that lord;

The senator shall bear contempt hereditary;

The beggar native honour.

It is the pasture lards the rother’s sides,

The want that makes him lean. Who dares, who dares,

In purity of manhood stand upright,

And say ‘This man’s a flatterer’? if one be,

So are they all; for every grize of fortune

Is smooth’d by that below: the learned pate

Ducks to the golden fool: all is oblique;

There’s nothing level in our cursed natures

But direct villany. Therefore, be abhor’d

All feasts, societies, and thron’s of men!

His semblable, yea, himself, Timon disdains;

Destruction fang mankind! Earth, yield me roots!

Digging.

Who seeks for better of thee, sauce his palate

With thy most operant poison! What is here? Gold! yellow, glittering, precious gold! No, gods,

I am no idle votarist. Roots, you clear heavens!

Thus much of this will make black white, foul fair,

Wrong right, base noble, old young, coward valiant.

Ha! you gods, why this? What this, you gods?

Why, this

Willing your priests and servants from yourselves,

Pluck stout men’s pillows from below their heads:

This yellow slave

Will knit and break religions; bless the accurs’d;

Make the hoar leprosy adore’d; place thieves,

And give them title, knee, and approbation,

With senators on the bench; this is it

That makes the wappen’d widow wed again;

She, whom the spital-house and ulcerous sores

Would cast the gargoyle at, this embalms and spices

To the April day again. Come, damned earth,

Thou common whore of mankind, that put’st odds

Among the rout of nations, I will make thee

Do right nature. March after’d.

Ha! a drum? Thou’rt quick.

But yet I’ll bury thee: thou’lt go, strong-thief.

When gouty keepers of thee cannot stand:

Nay, stay thou out for earnest.

Keeping some gold.
Enter Alcibiades, with drum and fife, in warlike manner; Phrynia and Timandra.

Tim. A beast, as thou art. The canker gnaw thy heart.

For showing me again the eyes of man!

Alcib. What is thy name? Is man so hateful to thee?

That art thyself a man?

Tim. I am Misaunthrops, and hate mankind.

For thy part, I do wish thou wert a dog,
That I might love thee something.

Alcib. I know thee well;

But in thy fortunes am unlearn'd and strange.

Tim. I know thee too; and more than that I know thee.

I not desire to know. Follow thy drum;
With man's blood paint the ground, gules, gules;
Religious canons, civil laws are cruel;
Then what should war be? This fell whore of thine

Hath in her more destruction than thy sword,

For all her churlish look.

Phry. Thy lips rot off!

Tim. I will not kiss thee; then the rod returns
To thine own lips again.

Alcib. How came the noble Timon to this change?

Tim. As the moon does, by wanting light to give:
But then renew I could not like the moon;

There were no suns to borrow of.

Alcib. Noble Timon, what friendship may I do thee?

Tim. None, but to maintain my opinion.

Alcib. What is it, Timon?

Tim. Promise me friendship, but perform none; if thou wilt not promise, the gods plague thee, for thou art a man! if thou dost perform, confound thee, for thou art a man!

Alcib. I have heard in some sort of thy miseries.

Tim. Thou saw'st them, when I had prosperity.

Alcib. I see them now; then was a blessed time.

Tim. As thine is now, held with a brace of harlots.

Timon. Is this the Athenian minion whom the world

Voic'd so regardfully?

Tim. Art thou Timandra?

Timon. Yes.

Tim. Be a whore still; they love thee not that use thee;
Give them diseases, leaving with thee their lust.

Make use of thy salt hours; season the slaves
For tubs and baths; bring down rose-checked youth
To the tub-fast and the diet.

Timon. Hang thee, monster!

Alcib. Pardon him, sweet Timandra, for his wits
Are drown'd and lost in his calamities.
I have but little gold of late, brave Timon,
The want whereof daily make revolt
In my penurious band: I have heard and griev'd
How cursed Athens, mindless of thy worth,

Forgetting thy great deeds, when neighbour states,

But for thy sword and fortune, trod upon them

Tim. I prithee, beat thy drum, and get gone.

Alcib. I am thy friend, and pity thee, Timon.

Tim. How dost thou pity him whom thou dost trouble?
I had rather be alone.

Alcib. Why, fare thee well.

Here is some gold for thee.

Tim. Keep it, I cannot eat.

Alcib. When I have laid proud Athens to heap,—

Tim. Warr'st thou 'gainst Athens?

Alcib. Ay, Timon, and have call.

Tim. The gods confound them all in thy quest; and Thee after, when thou hast conquer'd!

Alcib. Why me, Timon.

Tim. That by killing of villains thou wert born to conquer

My country,

Put up thy gold: go on,—here's gold,—go!

Be as a planetary plague, when Jove

Will o'er some high-vie'd city hang his poise
In the sick air: let not thy sword slip one,

Pity not honour's age for his white beard;
He is an usurer. Strike me the counter matron;

It is her habit only that is honest,

Herself's a bawd. Let not the virgin's chaste
Make soft thy trenchant sword; for thick milk-paps,

That through the window-bars bore at my eyes,

Are not within the leaf of pity writ,

But set them down horrible traitors. Speak not the bale,

Whose dimpled smiles from fools exhaust the mercy;

Think it a bastard, whom the oracle

Hath doubtfully pronounc'd thy throat shall

And mince it sans remorse. Swear again objects;

Put armour on thine ears and on thine eyes,

Whose proof, nor yells of mothers, maidens, babes,

Nor sight of priests in holy vestments bleeds.

Shall pierce a jot. There's gold to pay soldiers:

Make large confusion; and, thy fury spent,

Confound be thyself! Speak not, be gone.

Alcib. Hast thou gold yet? I'll take the gold thou giv'st me,

Not all thy counsel.

Tim. Dost thou, or dost thou not, hear the curse upon thee!

Phry. Timon. Give us some gold, good Timon;

Dost thou more!

Tim. Enough to make a whore forswear a t'ade,

And to make whores a bawd. Hold up thy slats.

You o'erweening mountant: you are not cahhable

Although, I know, you'll swear, terribly sve

Into strong shudders and to heavenly agues;

The immortal gods that hear you, spare ye oaths,
TIMON OF ATHENS.

Teem with new monsters, whom thy upward face
Hath to the marbled mansion all above
Never presented! O! a root; dear thanks:
Dry up thy marrows, vines, and plough-torn leas;
Whereof ingrateful man, with liquorish draughts
And morsels unctuous, greases his pure mind,
That from it all consideration slips!

Enter APEMANTUS.

More man! Plague! plague!

Ape. I was directed hither: men report
Thou dost affect my manners, and dost use them.

Tim. 'Tis then because thou dost not keep a dog.

Whom I would imitate: consumption catch thee!

Ape. This is in thee a nature but infected;
A poor unmanly melancholy sprung
From change of fortune. Why this spade? this place?
This slave-like habit? and these looks of care?
Thy flatterers yet wear silk, drink wine, lie soft,
Hug their discases' perfumes, and have forgot
That ever Timon was. Shame not these woods
By putting on the cunning of a carper.
Be thou a flatterer now, and seek to thrive
By that which has undone thee: hinge thy knee,
And let his very breath, whom thou 'st observe,
Blow off thy cap; praise his most vicious strain,
And call it excellent. Thou wast told thus;
Thou gav'st thine ears, like tapsters that bid welcome,
To knaves and all approachers: 'tis most just
That thou turn rascal; hadst thou wealth again,
Rascals should have 't. Do not assume my like-

Tim. Were I like thee I'd throw away myself.

Ape. Thou hast cast away thyself, being like thyself;
A madman so long, now a fool. What! think'st
That the bleak air, thy boisterous chamberlain,
Will put thy shirt on warm? will these moss'd trees,

That have outliv'd the eagle, page thy heels
And skip when thou point'st out? will the cold brook,
Candied with ice, caule thy morning taste
To cure thy o'er-night's surfeit? Call the creatures
Whose naked natures live in all the spite
Of wraekful heaven, whose bare unhoused trunks,

To the conflicting elements expos'd,
Answer mere nature; bid them flatter thee; 230
O! thou shalt find—

Ape. I love thee better now than e'er I did.

Tim. I hate thee worse.

Ape. Why?

Tim. Thou flatter'st miserv.

Ape. I flatter not, but say thou art a caitiff.

Tim. Why dost thou seek me out?

Ape. To vex thee.

Tim. Always a villain's office, or a fool's.

Dost please thyself in 't?

Ape. Ay.

Tim. What! a knave too?
Ape. If thou didst put this sour-cold habit on
To castigate thy pride, 'twere well; but thou
Dost it enforcingly; thou 'dst courtier be again
Wert thou not beggar. Willing misery
Outlives uncertain pomp, is crown'd before;
The one is filling still, never complete;
The other, at high wish: best state, contentless,
Hath a distracted and most wretched being,
Worse than the worst, content.
Thou should'st desire to die, being miserable.
Tim. Not by his breath that is more miserable.
Thou art a slave, whom Fortune's tender arm
With favour never clasped, but bred a dog. 290
Hadst thou, like us, from our first swath, proceeded
The sweet degrees that this brief world affords
To such as may the passive drudges of it
Freely command, thou would'st have plung'd thyself
In general riot; melted down thy youth
In different beds of lust; and never learn'd
The icy precepts of respect, but follow'd
The sugar'd game before thee. But myself,
Who had the world as my confectionary,
The mouths, the tongues, the eyes and hearts of men
At duty, more than I could frame employment,
That numberless upon me stuck as leaves
Do on the oak, have with one winter's brush
Fell from their boughs and left me open, bare
For every storm that blows; I, to bear this,
That never knew but better, is some burden:
Thy nature did commence in suffrance, time
Hath made thee hard in't. Why should'st thou hate men?
They never flatter'd thee: what hast thou given?
If thou wilt curse, thy father, that poor rag,
Must be thy subject, who in spite put stuff
To some she beggar and compounded thee
Poor rogue hereditarily. Hence! be gone!
If thou hadst not been born the worst of men,
Thon hadst been a knave and flatterer.
Ape. Art thou proud yet?
Tim. Ay, that I am not thee.
I, that I was
No prodigal,
Tim. I, that I am one now:
Were all the wealth I have shut up in thee,
I'd give thee leave to hang it. Get thee gone.
That the whole life of Athens were in this! 290
Thus would I eat it. Eating a root.
Ape. Here; I will mend thy feast.
Tim. First mend my company, take away thyself.
Ape. So I shall mend mine own, by the lack of thine.
Tim. 'Tis not well mended so, it is but botch'd;
If not, I would it were.
Ape. What would'st thou have to Athens?
Tim. Thee thither in a whirlwind. If thou wilt,
Tell them there I have gold; look, so I have.
Ape. Here is no use for gold.
Tim. The best and trustiest;
For here it sleeps, and does no hired harm. 290
Ape. Where liest o' nights, Timon?
Tim. Under that's above me.
Where feed'st thou o' days, Apemantus?

Ape. Where my stomach finds meat;
rather, where I eat it.
Tim. Would poison were obedient and kind!
Ape. Where would'st thou send it?
Tim. To sence thy dishes.
Ape. The middle of humanity thou knowest, but the extremity of both ends. When thou wast in thy gilt and thy perfume, thou mockst thee for too much curiosity; in rage thou knowest none, but art despised for contrary. There's a medlar for thee; eat it.
Tim. On what I hate I feed not.
Ape. Dost hate a medlar?
Tim. Ay, though it look like thee.
Ape. An thou hadst hated meddlers so, thou should'st have loved thyself better. What man didst thou ever know unthrift, it was beloved after his means?
Tim. Who, without those means thou talk of, didst thou ever know beloved?
Ape. Myself.
Tim. I understand thee; thou hadst no means to keep a dog.
Ape. What things in the world canst thou nearest compare to thy flatterers?
Tim. Women nearest; but men, men are things themselves. What would'st thou with the world, Apemantus, if it lay in power?
Ape. Give it the beasts, to be rid of men.
Tim. Would'st thou have thyself fall in confusion of men, and remain a beast with beasts?
Ape. Ay, Timon.
Tim. A beastly ambition, which the great thee t'attain to. If thou wert the lion, the fox would beguile thee; if thou wert lamb, the fox would eat thee; if thou wert fox, the lion would suspect thee, when peradventure thou wert accused by the ass; if thou wert the ass, thy dulness would torment thee, and still thou livest but as a breakfast to wolf; if thou wert the wolf, thy greediness would afflict thee, and oft thou should'st have thy life for thy dinner; were thou the uncial pride and wrath would confound thee and make thee self the conquest of thy fury; were thou a bear, thou would'st be killed by a horse; were thou a horse, thou would'st be seized by the leopard; were thou a leopold, thou wert German to the lion, and the spots thy kindred were jurors on thy life; all safety, wars, recreation, and thy defence absorbed.
What beast could'st thou be that were not subject to a beast? and what a beast art thou already, that seest not thy loss in transmigration?
Ape. If thou could'st please me with speaking to me, thou might'st have hit upon it here the commonwealth of Athens is become a forest of beasts.
Tim. How has the ass broke the wall, that thou art out of the city?
Ape. Yonder comes a poet and a painter the plague of company light upon thee! I wot not what else to do, I'll see thee again.
Tim. When there is nothing living but the
TIMON OF ATHENS.

First Thief. Where should he have this gold? is some fragment, some slender ort of his maimder. The mere want of gold, and the lling-from of his friends, drove him into this elancholy.

Second Thief. It is noised he hath a mass of ease.

Third Thief. Let us make the assay upon m: if he care not for’t, he will supply us easily; if he covetously reserve it, how shall’s get it?

First Thief. Is not this he?

First Thief. Where?

Second Thief. ’Tis his description.

Third Thief. He; I know him.

All. Save thee, Timon.

Tim. Now, thieves?

All. Soldiers, not thieves.

Tim. Both too; and women’s sons.

All. We are not thieves, but men that much do want.

Tim. Your greatest want is, you want much of meat.

Why should you want? Behold, the earth hath roots;
Within this mile break forth a hundred springs;
The oaks bear mast, the briers scarlet hips;
The bounteous housewife, nature, on each bush
Lays her full mess before you. Want! why want?

First Thief. We cannot live on grass on berries, water,
As beasts and birds and fishes.

Tim. Nor on the beasts themselves, the birds, and fishes;
You must eat men. Yet thanks I must you confess
That you are thieves profess’d, that you work not
In holier shapes; for there is boundless theft
In limited professions. Haecdon thieves, Here’s gold. Go, suck the subtle blood o’ the grape,
Till the high fever seethe your blood to froth, And so escape hanging: trust not the physician; His antidotes are poison, and he says More than you rob: take wealth and lives together;
Do villainy, do, since you protest to do’t.

Like workmen. I’ll example you with thievery: The sun’s a thief, and with his great attraction Licks the vast sea; the moon’s an arrant thief, And her pale fire she swatches from the sun: The sea’s a thief, whose liquid surge resolves The moon into salt tears; the earth’s a thief, That feeds and breeds by a composture stolen From general excrement; each thing’s a thief; The laws, your curb and whip, in their rough power Have uncheck’d theft. Love not yourselves; away!

Rob one another. There’s more gold: cut throats;
All that you meet are thieves. To Athens go,
Break open shops; nothing can you steal
But thieves do lose it: steal no less for this
I give you; and gold confound you howsoever! Amen.

Third Thief. He has almost charmed me from my profession, by persuading me to it.

First Thief. ’Tis in the malice of mankind that he thus advises us; not to have us thrive in our mystery.

Second Thief. I’ll believe him as an enemy, and give over my trade.

First Thief. Let us first see peace in Athens; there is no time so miserable but a man may be true.
Enter Flavius.

Flav. O you gods!
Is yond despis’d and ruinous man my lord?
Full of decay and failing? O monument
And wonder of good deeds evilly bestow’d! 470
What an alteration of honour
Has desperate want made!
What viler thing upon the earth than friends
Who can bring noblest minds to basest ends!
How rarely does it meet with this time’s guise,
When man was wish’d to love his enemies!
Grant I may ever love, and rather woo
Those that would mischiefe me than those that do!
He has caught me in his eye: I will present
My honest grief unto him; and, as my lord, 480
Still serve him with my life. My dearest master!

Timon comes forward.

Tim. Away! what art thou?
Flav. Have you forgot me, sir?
Tim. Why dost ask that? I have forgot all men;
Then, if thou grant’st thou’rt a man, I have forgot thee.
Flav. An honest poor servant of yours.
Tim. Then I know thee not:
I never had honest man about me; ay, all
I kept were knaves, to serve in men to villains.
Flav. The gods are witness,
Ne’er did poor steward wear a truer grief
For his undone lord than mine eyes for you. 490
Then I love thee.
Because thou art a woman, and disclaim’st
Flinty mankind; whose eyes do never give,
But thorough lust and laughter. Pity’s sleeping:
Strange times, that weep with laughing, not without weeping!
Flav. I beg of you to know me, good my lord,
To accept my grief and whilst this poor wealth lasts
To entertain me as your steward still.
Tim. Had I a steward
So true, so just, and now so comfortable? 500
It almost turns my dangerous nature mild.
Let me behold thy face. Surely, this man
Was born of woman.
Forgive my general and exceptless rashness,
You perpetual-sober gods! I do proclaim
One honest man, mistake me not, but one;
No more, I pray, and he’s a steward.
How fair would I have hated all mankind!
And thou redeem’st thyself: but all, save thee,
I fell with curses.

Methinks thou art more honest now than wise;
For, by oppressing and betraying me,
Thou might’st have sooner got another service:
For many so arrive at second masters
Upon their first lord’s neck. But tell me true,
For I must ever doubt, though ne’er so sure,
Is not thy kindness subtle, covetous,
If not a usurping kindness, and as rich men deal
Gifts,
Expecting in return twenty for one?
Flav. No, my most worthy master; in whose breast
Doubt and suspect, alas! are plac’d too late.

You should have fear’d false times when Did feast;
Suspect still comes where an estate is least.
That which I show, heaven knows, is merely.
Duty and zeal to your unmatch’d mind,
Care of your food and living; and, believe
My most honour’d lord,
For any benefit that points to me,
Either in hope, or present, I’d exchange
For this one wish, that you had power and we
To require me by making rich yourself.
Tim. Look thee, ’tis so. Thou singly ho
Here, take: the gods out of my misery.
Have sent thee treasure. Go, live rich and happy.
But thus condition’d: thou shalt build from n
Hate all, curse all, show charity to none,
But let the famish’d flesh slide from the bone,
Ere thou relieve the beggar; give to dogs
What thou deny’st to men; let prisons swa
’em,
Debts wither ’em to nothing; be men
blasted woods,
And may diseases lick up their false bloods
And so farewell and thrive.
Flav. O! let me stay
And comfort you, my master.
Tim. If thou hast
Curses, stay not; fly, whilst thou art ble and free:
Ne’er see thou man, and let me ne’er see th

Exeunt severally.

Enter Poet and Painter.

Poet. What’s to be thought of him? Does rumour hold for true that he’s so full of go Pain. Certain: Alcibiades reports it; Phry and Timandra had gold of him: he like enriched poor struggling soldiers with gr quantity. ’Tis said he gave unto his stew a mighty sum.

Poet. Then this breaking of his has been a try for his friends.

Pain. Nothing else; you shall see him a pa in Athens again, and flourish with the high.
Therefore ’tis not amiss we tender our love him, in this supposed distress of his: it show honestly in us, and is very likely to lo our purposes with what they travel for, if it is a just and true report that goes of his havin Pain. What have you now to present unto h Pain. Nothing at this time but my visitati only I will promise him an excellent piece.
Poet. I must serve him so too; tell him of in intent that’s coming toward him.

Pain. Good as the best. Promising is very air o’ the time; it opens the eyes of pectation; performance is ever the dallier his act; and, but in the plainer and simp kind of people, the deed of saying is quite able. To promise is most courtly and fas able; performance is a kind of will or tes ment which argues a great sickness in ju gment that makes it.
Enter TIMON, from his cave.

im. Aside. Excellent workman! thou canst paint a man so bad as is thyself.

poet. I am thinking what I shall say I have said for him: it must be a personating of self; a satire against the softness of prosperity, with a discovery of the infinite flatteries; follow youth and opulence.

tim. Aside. Must thou needs stand for a villain, mine own work? Wilt thou whip thine own ass in other men? Do so, I have gold for thee.

poet. Nay, let's seek him:

in do we sin against our own estate,
en we may profit meet, and come too late.

paim. True;

on the day serves, before black-corner'd night,
d what thou want'st by free and offer'd light. ne.

im. Aside. I'll meet you at the turn. What a god's gold, it he is worshipp'd in a baser temple in where swine feed!

thou that rigg'st the bark and plough'st the foam, best admired reverence in a slave:
thee be worship'd; and thy saints for aye crown'd with plagues that thee alone obey.

I meet them.

Advancing.

paim. Hail, worthy Timon!

paim. Our late noble master!
tim. Have I once liv'd to see two honest men?
paim. Sir, wing often of your open bounty tasted, leaving you were retir'd, your friends fall'n off, have thankless natures—O abhorred spirits!
all the whips of heaven are large enough—hat! to you, hose star-like nobleness gave life and influence their whole being? I am rapt, and cannot cover these monstrous bulk of this ingratitude with any size of words.

tim. Let it go naked, men may see 't the better:
that are honest, by being what you are, take them best seen and known.

paim. Hail, and myself are travel'd in the great shower of your gifts, and sweetly felt it.
tim. Ay, you are honest men.
paim. We are hither come to offer you our service.
tim. Most honest men! Why, how shall I requite you?
an you eat roots and drink cold water? no.
both. What we can do, we'll do, to do you service.
tim. Ye're honest men. Ye've heard that I have gold;
am sure you have: speak truth; ye're honest men.
paim. So it is said, my noble lord; but Therefore came not my friend nor I.
tim. Good honest men! Thou draw'st a counterfeit best in all Athens: thou'rt, indeed, the best; thou counterfeit'st most lively.
paim. So, so, my lord.
tim. E'en so, sir, as I say. And, for thy fiction, why, thy verse swells with stuff so fine and smooth that thou art even natural in thine art.

But, for all this, my honest-natur'd friends,
I must needs say you have a little fault:

tim. Marry, 'tis not monstrous in you, neither wish I
You take much pains to mend.

both. Beseech your honour
To make it known to us.
tim. You'll take it ill.
both. Most thankfully, my lord.
tim. Will you indeed?
both. Doubt it not, worthy lord.
tim. There's never a one of you but trusts a knave,
That mightily deceives you.

both. Do we, my lord?
tim. Ay, and you hear him cog, see him dissemble,
Know his gross patchery, love him, feed him,
Keep in your bosom; yet remain assur'd
That he's a made-up villain.
paim. I know none such, my lord.
paim. Nor I.
tim. Look you, I love you well. I'll give you gold,
Rid me these villains from your companies:
Hang them or stab them, drown them in a draught,
Confound them by some course, and come to me,
I'll give you gold enough.

both. Name them, my lord; let's know them.
tim. You that way and you this, but two in company:
Each man apart, all single and alone,
Yet an arch-villain keeps him company.
If, where thou art two villains shall not be,
Come not near him. If thou would'st not reside
But where one villain is, then him abandon.
Hence! pack! there's gold; you came for gold,
Ye slaves:
You have work'd for me, there's payment: hence!
You are an alchemist, make gold of that.
Out, rascal dogs!

Beat them out and then retires to his cave.

Enter FLAVIUS and two Senators.

flav. It is in vain that you would speak with Timon:

For he is set so only to himself.

That nothing but himself, which looks like man, is friendly with him.

first sen.Bring us to his cave:
It is our part and promise to the Athenians To speak with Timon.

Second sen. At all times alike
Men are not still the same: 'twas time and griefs That fram'd him thus: time, with his fairer hand, Offering the fortunes of his former days,
The former man may make him. Bring us to him, And chance it as it may.

flav. Here is his cave.

Peace and content be here! Lord Timon! Timon!
Look out, and speak to friends. The Athenians, By two of their most reverend senate, greet thee: Speak to them, noble Timon.

Re-enter TIMON from his cave.

tim. Thou sun, that comfort'st, burn! Speak, and be hang'd:

For each true word, a blister! and each false
Be as a cautering to the root o' the tongue, Consuming it with speaking!

first sen. Worthy Timon,—
Ti. Of none but such as you, and you of Timon.

Sec. The senators of Athens greet thee, Timon.

Ti. I thank them; and would send them back the plague, Could I but catch it for them.

Sec. O! forget What we are sorry for ourselves in thee. The senators with one consent of love Entreat thee back to Athens; who have thought On special dignities, which vacant lie For thy best use and wearing.

Sec. They confess Toward thee forgetfulness too general, gross; Which now the public body, which doth seldom Play the recanter, feeling in itself A lack of Timon's aid, hath sense withal Of its own fail, restraining aid to Timon; And send forth us, to make their sorrow'd render, Together with a recompense more fruitful Than their offence can weigh down by the dram; Ay, even such heaps and sums of love and wealth As shall to thee blot out what wrongs were theirs, And write in thee the figures of their love, Ever to read them thine.

Ti. You witch me in it; Surprise me to the very brink of tears: Lend me a fool's heart and a woman's eyes, And I'll beweep these comforts, worthy senators.

Sec. Therefore so please thee to return with us, And of our Athens, thine and ours, to take The captainship, thou shalt be met with thanks, Allow'd with absolute power, and thy good name Live with authority: so soon shall we drive back Of Alcibiades the approaches wild; Who, like a boar too savage, doth root up His country's peace.

Sec. And shakes his threaten'ning sword Against the walls of Athens.

Ti. Well, sir, I will; therefore, I will, sir, thus: If Alcibiades kill my countrymen, Let Alcibiades know this of Timon, That Timon cares not. But if he sack fair Athens, And take our goodly aged men by the beards, Giving our holy virgins to the stain Of contumelious, beastly, mad-brain'd war, Then let him know, and tell him Timon speaks it, In pity of our aged and our youth.

Sec. I cannot choose but tell him, that I care not, And let him take't at worst; for their knives care not While you have threats to answer: for myself, There's not a whistle in the unruly camp But I do prize it at my love before The reverend'st threat in Athens. So I leave you To the protection of the prosperous gods, As thieves to keepers.

Pla. Stay not; all's in vain.

Ti. Why, I was writing of my epitaph; It will be seen to-morrow. My long sickness Of health and living now begins to mend, And nothing brings me all things. Go; live still: Be Alcibiades your plague, you his, And last so long enough!

Sec. We speak in vain.

Ti. But yet I love my country, and am not One that rejoices in the common wreck, As common bruit doth put it.

Sec. That's well spoke.

Ti. Command me to my loving count men,— Sec. These words become your lips they pass through them.

Sec. And enter in our ears like gr triumpers In their applauding gates.

Ti. Command me to them; And tell them that, to ease them of their griest Their fears of hostile strokes, their aches, losses Their pangs of love, with other incident thro That nature's fragile vessel doth sustain In life's uncertain voyage, I will some kind do them:

Sec. I'll teach them to prevent wild Alcibiades' wrath.

Ti. Like this well; he will ret again.

Ti. I have a tree which grows here in my close That mine own use invites me to cut down, And shortly must I fell it; tell my friends, Tell Athens, in the sequence of degree, From high to low throughout, that whose ple To stop affliction, let him take his haste, Come hither, ere my tree hath felt the axe, And hang himself. I pray you, do my greet. Flo. Trouble him no further; thus you shall find him.

Ti. Come not to me again; but say to Athen. Timon hath made his everlasting mansion Upon the beached verge of the salt flood; Who once a day with his embossed froth The turbulent surge shall cover: thither cor And let my grave-stone be your oracle. Lips, let sour words go by and language end What is amiss plague and infection mend! Graves only be men's works and death their sail Sun, hide thy beams! Timon hath done his reig

Sec. His discontents are unremovable. Coupled to nature.

Sec. Our hope in him is dead: let return, And strain what other means is left unto us In our dear peril.

Sec. It requires swift foot. Exeunt.

SCENE II. — Before the Walls of Athens.

Enter two Senators and a Messenger.

Sec. Thou hast painfully discover'd are his files As full as thy report? I have spoke the less Besides, his expedition promises Present approach.

Sec. Our message to him as follows: Thence is his answer to Timon.

Mess. I met a courier, one mine ancient frien Whom, though in general part we were oppos Yet our old love made a particular force, And made us speak like friends: this man was riding.

Sec. From Alcibiades to Timon's cave, With letters of entreaty, which imported His fellowship 'tis the cause against your city, In part for his sake mov'd.
Enter the Senators from Timon.

First Sen. Here come our brothers.

Third Sen. No talk of Timon, nothing of him expect, a enemy's drum is heard, and fearful scouring th choke the air with dust. In, and prepare: is the fall, I fear; our foes the snare.

Exit.

Scene III.—The Woods. Timon's Cave, and a rude tomb seen.

Enter a Soldier, seeking Timon.

Sold. By all description this should be the place. 's here I speak, ho! No answer! what is this? non is dead, who hath outstretch'd his span: me beast rear'd this; here does not live a man. ad, sure; and this his grave. What's on this tomb annot read; the character I'll take with wax: r captain hath in every figure skill; ag'd interpreter, though young in days. fore proud Athens he's set down by this, rose fall the mark of his ambition is. Exit.

Scene IV.—Before the Walls of Athens.

Trumpets sound. Enter Alcibiades with his Powers.

Alcib. Sound to this coward and lascivious town terrible approach. A parley sounded.

Enter Senators on the walls.

I now you have gone on, and fill'd the time with all licentious measure, making your will's scope of justice; till now myself and such slept within the shadow of your power we wander'd with our travers'd arms, and breath'd sufferance vainly. Now the time is flush, en crouching marrow, in the bearer strong, of itself, 'No more': now breathless wrong all sit and pant in your great chairs of ease, pursy insolence shall break his wind 12th fear and horrid flight.

First Sen. Noble and young, hen thy first griefs were but a mere conceit, e thou hadst power or we had cause of fear, e sent to thee, to give thy rages balm, wipe out our ingratitude with loves love their quantity.

Second Sen. So did we woo anformed Timon to our city's love a humble message and by promis'd means: e were not all unkind, nor all deserve to common stroke of war.

First Sen. These walls of ours are not erected by their hands from whom have receiv'd thy grief; nor are they such at these great towers, trophies, and schools should fall 7 or private faults in them.

Second Sen. Nor are they living ho were the motives that you first went out; name that they wanted cunning in excess ath broke their hearts. March, noble lord, to our city with thy banners spread: y decimation, and a tithed death, thy revenges hunger for that food Which nature loathes, take thou the destin'd tenth. And by the hazard of the spotted die Let die the spotted.

First Sen. All have not offended; For those that were, it is not square to take On those that are, revenges: crimes, like lands, Are not inherited. Then, dear countryman, Bring in thy marks, but leave without thy rage: Spare thy Athenian cradle, and those kin Which in the bluster of thy wrath must fall With those that have offended: like a shepherd, Approach the fold and call the infected forth, But kill not all together.

Second Sen. What thou wilt, Thou rather shalt enforce it with thy smile Than hew to with thy sword.

First Sen. Set but thy foot Against our ramp'ring gates, and they shall ope, So thou wilt send thy gentle heart b. fore, To say thou 't enter friendly.

Second Sen. Throw thy glove, Or any token of thine honour else, That thou wilt use the wars as thy redress And not as our confusion, all thy powers Shall make their harbour in our town, till we Have seal'd thy full desire.

Alcib. Then there's my glove; Descend, and open your uncharged ports: Those enemies of Timon's, and mine own, Whom you yourselves shall set out for reproof, Fall, and no more; and, to atone your fears With my more noble meaning, not a man Shall pass his quarter, or offend the stream Of regular justice in your city's bounds, But shall be render'd to your public laws At heaviest answer.

Both. 'Tis most nobly spoken.

Alcib. Descend, and keep your words.
The Senators descend, and open the gates.

Enter a Soldier.

Sold. My noble general, Timon is dead; Entomb'd upon the very hem o' the sea: And on his grave-stone this inscription, which With wax I brought away, whose soft impression Interprets for my poor ignorance.

Alcib. Here lies a wretched corse, of wretched soul bereft:

Seek not my name: a plague consume you wicked caitiffs left!

Here lie I, Timon; who, alive, all living men did hate:

Pass by and curse thy fill; but pass and stay not here thy guilt.

These well express in thee thy latter spirits: Though thou abhorrest'd in us our human griefs. Scorn'dst our brain's flow and those our droplets which From niggard nature fall, yet rich conceit Taught thee to make vast Neptune weep for aye On thy low grave, on faults forgiven. Dead Is noble Timon; of whose memory Hereafter more. Bring me into your city, And I will use the olive with my sword; Make war breed peace; make peace stint war; make each Prescribe to other as each other's leech.

Let our drums strike. Exit.

SCENE.—During a great part of the Play, at Rome: afterwards at Sardis and near Philippi.

ACT I.

Scene I.—Rome. A Street.

Enter Flavius, Marullus, and certain Commoners.

Flav. Hence! home, you idle creatures, get you home:

Is this a holiday? What! know you not, Being mechanical, you ought not walk Upon a labouring day without the sign Of your profession! Speak, what trade art thou?
First Com. Why, sir, a carpenter.
Mar. Where is thy leather apron, and thy rule?

What dost thou with thy best apparel on?
You, sir, what trade are you?
Second Com. Truly, sir, in respect of a fine workman, I am but, as you would say, a cobbler.

Second Com. A trade, sir, that I hope I may use with a safe conscience; which is, indeed, sir, a mender of bad soles.
Mar. What trade, thou knave? thou naughty knave, what trade?
Second Com. Nay, I beseech you, sir, be not out with me: yet, if you be out, sir, I can mend you.

Mar. What meanest thou by that? Mend me, thou saucy fellow!

Second Com. Why, sir, cobble you.
Flav. Thou art a cobble, art thou?
Second Com. Truly, sir, all that I live by is with the awl: I meddle with no tradesman matters, nor women's matters, but with awl. am, indeed, sir, a surgeon to old shoes; who they are in great danger, I recover them. proper men as ever trod upon neat's-leather have gone upon my handiwork.

Flav. But wherefore art not in thy shop today?

Why dost thou lead these men about thy streets?
Second Com. Truly, sir, to wear out the shoes, to get myself into more work. But indeed, sir, we make holiday to see Caesar art to rejoice in his triumph.

Mar. Wherefore rejoice? What conquest brings he home?

What tributaries follow him to Rome to grace in captive bonds his chariot wheels?
You blocks, you stones, you worse than senseless things!
O you hard hearts, you cruel men of Rome,
Knew you not Pompey? Many a time an oft
Have you climb'd up to walls and battlements,
To towers and windows, yea, to chimney-tops.
Your infants in your arms, and there have sat
The livelong day, with patient expectation,
To see great Pompey pass the streets of Rome
And when you saw his chariot but appear,
Have you not made an universal shout,
That Tiber trembled underneath her banks,
To hear the replication of your sounds
Made in her concave shores?
And do you now put on your best attire?
And do you now call out a holiday?
DO you now strew flowers in his way,
and comes in triumph over Pompey's blood? —
To your houses, fall upon your knees, and to the gods to intermit the plague. — needs must light on this ingratitude.

JULIUS. Go, go, good countrymen, and for this fault
Emble all the poor men of your sort;
W them to Tiber banks, and weep your tears
The channel, till the lowest stream
Kiss the most exalted shores of all.

Calpurnia. Exeunt all the Commoners.

Exeunt, in procession, with music; CAESAR, ANTONY, for the course; CALPURNIA, PORTIA, DECIUS, CICERO, BRUTUS, CASSIUS, and CASCA; a great crowd following, among them a Soothsayer.

CASCA. Peace, ho! Caesar speaks.

CASCA. Set on; and leave no ceremony out.

Sooth. Caesar!

CASCA. Ha! Who calls?

CASCA. Bid every noise be still; peace yet again!

Sooth. Who is it in the press that calls on me?
A tongue, shriller than all the music,
Cesar! Speak; Caesar is turn'd to hear.
Sooth. Beware the ides of March.

CASCA. What man is that?

BRU. A soothsayer bids you beware the ides of March.

CASCA. Set him before me; let me see his face.

CAS. Fellow, come from the throng; look upon Caesar.

CASCA. What say'st thou to me now? Speak once again.

Sooth. Beware the ides of March.

CASCA. He is a dreamer; let us leave him:

Pass.

BRU. Not I.

CASCA. I pray you, do.

BRU. I am not gamesome; I do lack some part
Of that quick spirit that is in Antony.

Let me not hinder, Cassius, your desires; —
I'll leave you.

CASCA. BRUTUS, I do observe you now of late:
I have not from your eyes that gentleness
And show of love as I was wont to have:
You bear too stiffen and too strange a hand
Over your friend that loves you.

BRU. Cassius, Be not deceiv'd; if I have veil'd my look,
I turn the trouble of my countenance
Merely upon myself. Vexed I am
Of late with passions of some difference,
Conceptions only proper to myself,
Which give some soil perhaps to my behaviours;
But let not therefore my good friends be griev'd,
Among which number, Cassius, be you one,
Nor construe any further my neglect,
Than that poor Brutus, with himself at war,
Forgets the shows of love to other men.

CAS. Then, Brutus, I have much mistook your passion;
By means whereof this breast of mine hath buried
Thoughts of great value, worthy cogitations.

BRU. No, Cassius; for the eye sees not itself,
But by reflection, by some other things.

CAS. 'Tis just:
And it is very much lamented, Brutus,
That you have no such mirrors as will turn
Your hidden worthiness into your eye,
That you might see your shadow. I have heard,
Where many of the best respect in Rome,
Except immortal Caesar, speaking of Brutus,
And groaning underneath this age's yoke,
Have wish'd that noble Brutus had his eyes.

BRU. Into what dangers would you lead me, Cassius?
That you would have me seek into myself
For that which is not in me?

CAS. Therefore, good Brutus, be prepar'd to hear;
And since you know you cannot see yourself
So well as by reflection, I, your glass,
Will modestly discover to yourself
That of yourself which you yet know not of.

And be not jealous on me, gentle Brutus:
Were I a common laugh, or did use
To stale with ordinary oaths my love
To every new protestor; if you know
That I do fawn on men and hug them hard,
And after scandal them; or if you know
That I profess myself in banquetting
To all the rout, then hold me dangerous.

Flourish and shout.

BRU. What means this shouting? I do fear the people
Choose Caesar for their king.

CAS. Ay, do you fear it? Then must I think you would not have it so.

BRU. I would not, Cassius; yet I love him well,
But wherefore do you hold me here so long? What is it that you would impart to me? If it be aught toward the general good, Set honour in one eye and death in the other, And I will look on both indifferently; For let the gods so speed me as I love The name of honour more than I fear death.

Cas. I know that virtue to be in you, Brutus, As well as do I know your outward favour. Well, honour is the subject of my story. I cannot tell what you and other men Think of this life; but for my single self, I had as lief be not as live to be In awe of such a thing as I myself. I was born free as Caesar; so were you: We both have fed as well, and we can both Endure the winter's cold as well as he: For once, upon a raw and gusty day, The troubled Tiber chafing with her shores, Caesar said to me, 'Dar's thos, Cassius, now Leap in with me into this angry flood, And swim to yonder point?' Upon the word, Accosted as I was, I plunged in And bade him follow; so indeed he did. The torrent roar'd, and we did buffet it With lusty sinews, throwing it aside And stemming it with hearts of controversy; But ere we could arrive the point propos'd, Caesar cried 'Help me, Cassius, or I sink.' I, as Enaces, our great ancestor, Did from the flames of Troy upon his shoulder The old Anchises bear, so from the waves of Tiber Did the tired Caesar. And this man Is now become a god, and Cassius is A wretched creature and must bend his body If Caesar carelessly but nod on him. He had a fever when he was in Spain, And when the fit was on him, I did mark How he did shake; 'tis true, this god did shake; His coward lips did from their colour fly, And that same eye whose bend doth awe the world Did lose his lustre; I did hear him groan; Ay, and that tongue of his that bade the Romans Mark him and write his speeches in their books, Alas! it cried 'Give me some drink, Titinius,' As a sick girl. Ye gods, it doth amaze me A man of such a feeble temper should So get the start of the majestic world, And bear the palm alone. Shout. Flourish.

Bru. Another general shout! I do believe that these applauses are For some new honours that are heaped on Caesar.

Cas. Why, man, he doth bestride the narrow world Like a Colossus; and we petty men Walk under his huge legs, and peep about To find ourselves dishonourable graves. Men at some time are masters of their fates: The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars, But in ourselves, that we are underlings. Brutus and Caesar: what should be in that 'Cæsar'? Why should that name be sounded more than yours? Write them together, yours is as fair a name; Sound them, it doth become the mouth as well; Weigh them, it is as heavy; conjure with 'em, 'Brutus' will start a spirit as soon as 'Cæsar.' Now, in the names of all the gods at once, Upon what meat doth this our Cæsar feed, That he is grown so great? Age, thou sham'd! Rome, thou hast lost the breed of noble blood When went there by an age, since the great Flor. But it was fam'd with more than with one man When could they say, till now, that talk'd? Rome, That her wide walks encompass'd but one man Now is it Rome indeed and room enough, When there is in it but one only man. O! you and I have heard our fathers say, There was a Brutus once that would have brood The eternal devil to keep his state in Rome, As easily as a king.

Bru. That you do love me, I am nothing jeous; What you would work me too, I have some all How I have thought of this and of these tim I shall recount hereafter; for this present, I would not, so with love I might entreat you Be any further mov'd. What you have said I will consider; what you have to say I will with patience hear, and find a time Both meet to hear and answer such high thin Till then, my noble friend, chew upon this: Brutus had rather be a villager Than to repute himself a son of Rome Under these hard conditions as this time Is like to lay upon us.

Cas. I am glad That my weak words have struck but thus nu I show Of fire from Brutus.

Bru. The games are done and Cæsar is turning.

Cas. As they pass by, pluck Cæsar by the slee And he will, after his sour fashion, tell you What hath proceeded worthy note to-day.

Re-enter Cæsar and his Train.

Bru. I will do so. But, look you, Cassius, The angry spot doth glow on Cæsar's brow, And all the rest look like a chidden train: Calpurnia's cheek is pale, and Cicero Looks with such ferret and such fiery eyes As we have seen him in the Capitol, Being cross'd in conference by some senators. Cæsar, Cassius will tell us what the matter is. Cæsar, Antonius!

Ant. Cæsar.

Cas. Let me have men about me that are fat Sleek-headed men and such as sleep o' nights. Yond Cassius has a lean and hungry look; He thinks too much: such men are dangerous. Ant. Fear him not, Cæsar, he's not dangerous. He is a noble Roman, and well given. Cæsar, Would he were fatter! But I fear him not: Yet if my name were liable to fear, I do not know the man I should avoid So soon as that spare Cassius. He reads much He is a great observer, and he looks Quite through the deeds of men; he loves to plays, As thow dost, Antony; he hears no music; Seldom he smiles, and smiles in such a sort As if he mock'd himself, and scorn'd his spirit That could be mov'd to smile at any thing.
Scene II. - The Senate House. Thunder and lightning. Enter, from opposite sides, Cæsar, with his sword drawn, and Cicero.

Cic. Good even, Cæsar: brought you Cæsar home?

Why are you breathless? and why stare you so?
Cicero. Are not you mov'd, when all the sway of earth
Shakes like a thing unfirm? O Cicero!
I have seen tempests, when the scolding winds
Have riv'd the knotty oaks; and I have seen
The ambitious ocean swell and rage and foam,
To be exulted with the threatening clouds:
But never till to-night, never till now,
Did I go through a tempest dropping fire.

Either there is a civil strife in heaven,
Or else the world, too saucy with the gods,
Incenses them to send destruction.

Cic. Why, saw you any thing more wonderful?
Casa. A common slave, you know him well
by sight,
Held up his left hand, which did flame and burn
Like twenty torches join'd; and yet his hand,
Not sensible of fire, remain'd unscorch'd.
Besides, I have not since put up my sword,
Against the Capitol I met a lion,
Who glare'd upon me, and went surly by,
Without annoying me; and there were drawn
Upon a heap a hundred gaily women, Transformed with their fear, who swore they saw
Men all in fire walk up and down the streets.
And yesterday the bird of night did sit,
Even at noon-day, upon the market-place,
Hooting and shrieking. When these prodigies
Do so conjointly meet, let not men say
'These are their reasons, they are natural';
For, I believe, they are portentous things
Unto the climate that they point upon.

Cic. Indeed, it is a strange-disposed time:
But men may construe things after their fashion,
Clean from the purpose of the things themselves.

Casa. He doth; for he did bid Antonius
Send word to you he would be there to-morrow.

Cic. Good night then, Casa; this disturbed sky
Is not to walk in.

Enter CASSIUS.

Cas. Who's there?
Casa. A Roman.
Cas. Casa, by your voice, Casa.
Casa. Your ear is good. Casa, what night
is this!
Cas. A very pleasing night to honest men.
Casa. Whoever knew the heavens menace so?
Cas. Those that have known the earth so full of faults.

For my part, I have walk'd about the streets,
Submitting me unto the perilous night,
And, thus unbraced, Casa, as you see,
Have bar'd my bosom to the thunder-stone;
And when the cross blue lightning seem'd to open
The breast of heaven, I did present myself,
Even in the aim and very flash of it.

Casa. But wherefore did you so much tempt the heavens?

It is the part of men to fear and tremble
When the most mighty gods by tokens send
Such dreadful heralds to astonish us.

Cas. You are dull, Casa, and those sparks of life
That should be in a Roman you do want,
Or else you use not. You look pale, and gaze,
And put on fear, and cast yourself in wonder,

To see the strange impatience of the heavens
But if you would consider the true cause
Why all these fires, why all these gliding ghos
Why birds and beasts, from quality and kind
Why old men, fools, and children, calculate;
Why all these things change from their ordain
Their nature, and proformed faculties.
To monstrous quality, why, you shall find
That heaven hath infused them with these spirits
To make them instruments of fear and war;
Unto some monstrous state.

Now could I, Casa, name to thee a man
Most like this dreadful night,
That thunders, lightens, opens graves, and ro.
As doth the lion in the Capitol,
A man no mightier than thyself or me
In personal action, yet prodigious grown
And fearful as these strange eruptions are.

Casa. 'Tis Caesar that you mean; is it n
Cassius?

Cas. Let it be who it is: for Romans now
Have thews and limbs like to their ancestors.
But, woe the while! our fathers' minds are de
And we are govern'd with our mothers' spirit.
Our yoke and sufferance show us womanish.

Casa. Indeed, they say the senators to mor
Mean to establish Caesar as a king;
And he shall wear his crown by sea and land,
In every place, save here in Italy.

Cas. I know where I will wear this dage
then;
Cassius from bondage will deliver Cassius:
Therein, ye gods, you make the weak most
Therein, ye gods, you tyrants do defeat:
Nor stony tower, nor walls of beaten brass,
Nor airless dungeon, nor strong links of iron,
Can be retentive to the strength of spirit;
But life, being weary of these worldly bars,
Never lacks power to dismiss itself.
If I know this, know all the world besides,
That part of tyranny that I do bear.
I can shake off at pleasure.

Thunder sti

Casa. So can I:
So every bondman in his own hand bears
The power to cancel his captivity.
Cas. And who should Caesar be a tyrant ther
But that he sees the Romans are but sheep;
He were no lion were not Romans minds.
Those that with haste will make a mighty fire
Begin it with weakstraws; what trash is Rom
What rubbish, and what offal, when it serves
For the base matter to illuminate
So vile a thing as Caesar! But, o grief!
Where hast thou led me? I perhaps speak this Before a willing bondman; then I know
My answer must be made; but I am arm'd;
And dangers are to me indifferent.

Casa. You speak to Casa, and to such a man
That is no fleering tell-tale. Hold, my hand;
Be factious for redress of all these griefs,
And I will set this foot of mine as far
As who goes furthest.

Cas. There's a bargain made.

Now know you, Casa, I have mov'd already
Some certain of the noblest-minded Romans
To undergo with me an enterprise
Of honourable-dangerous consequence;
And I do know, by this they stay for me
In Pompey's porch: for now, this fearful nigh here is no stir or walking in the streets; at the complexion of the element fav' r's like the work we have in hand, o st bloody, fierce, and most terrible.

Cas. Stand close awhile, for here comes one in haste.--

Cas. 'Tis Cinna; I do know him by his gait: e is a friend.

Enter Cinna.

Cinna, where haste you so?

Cin. To find out you. Who's that? Metellus Cimber?

Cas. No, it is Casca; one incorporate our attempts. Am I not stay'd for, Cinna?

Cin. I am glad on 't. What a fearful night is this!

Here's two or three of us have seen strange sights.

Cas. Am I not stay'd for? Tell me.

Cin. Yes, you are.

Cassius! if you could

At win the noble Brutus to our party—

Cas. Be you content. Good Cinna, take this paper, and look you lay it in the praetor's chair, Where Brutus may but find it; and throw this u at his window; set this up with wax 'pon old Brutus' statue: all this done, repair to Pompey's porch, where you shall find us.

Cas. All but Metellus Cimber, and he's gone to seek you at your house. Well, I will lie, and so bestow these papers as you bade me.

Cas. That done, repair to Pompey's theatre.

Exit Cinna.

Cinna, Casca, and I will yet ere day see Brutus at his house: three parts of him's ours already, and the man entire From the next encounter yields him ours.

Casca. O! he sits high in all the people's hearts: and that which would appear offense in us, his countenance, like richest acumen, Will change to virtue and to worthiness.

Cas. Him and his worth and our great need of him You have right well conceiv'd. Let us go, For it is after midnight; and ere day We will awake him and be sure of him. Exeunt.

ACT II.

Enter Brutus.

Bru. What, Lucius! ho! I cannot, by the progress of the stars, Give guess how near to day. Lucius, I say! I would it were my fault to sleep so soundly. When, Lucius, when! Awake, I say! What, Lucius!

Enter Lucius.

Luc. Calld you, my lord?

Bru. Get me a taper in my study. Lucius: When it is lighted, come and call me here.

Luc. I will, my lord. Exit.

Bru. It must be by his death: and for my part, I know no personal cause to spurn at him, But for the general. He would be crown'd: How that might change his nature, there's the question. It is the bright day that brings forth theadder; And thus he praves wary walking. Crown him? that!

And then, I grant, we put a sting in him, That at his will he may do danger with. The abuse of greatness is when it disjoins Remorse from power; and, to speak truth of Caesar, I have not known when his affections sway'd 30 More than his reason. But 'tis a common proof, That lowliness is young ambition's ladder, Whereto the climber-upward turns his face; But when he once attains the upmost round, He then unto the ladder turns his back, Looks in the clouds, scorning the base degrees By which he did ascend. So Caesar may: Then, lest he may, prevent. And, since the quarrel Will bear no colour for the thing he is, Fashion it thus; that what he is, augmented, Would run to these and these extremities; And therefore think him as a serpent's egg Which, hatch'd, would, as his kind, grow mischievous, And kill him in the shell.

Re-enter Lucius.

Luc. The taper burneth in your closet, sir. Searching the window for a flint, I found This paper, thus seal'd up; and I am sure It did not lie there when I went to bed.

Gives him a letter.

Bru. Get you to bed again; it is not day.

Is not to-morrow, boy, the ides of March?

Luc. I know not, sir.

Bru. Look in the calendar, and bring me word.

Luc. I will, sir. Exit.

Bru. The exhalations whizzing in the air Give so much light that I may read by them.

Opens the letter.

Brutus, thou sleep'st: awake, and see thyself. Shall Rome, etc. Speak, strike, redress! Brutus, thou sleep'st: awake!

Such instigations have been often dropp'd Where I have took them up.

'Shall Rome, etc.' Thus must I piece it out: Shall Rome stand under one man's awe? What Rome?

My ances tors did from the streets of Rome The Tarquin drive, when he was call'd a king. 'Speak, strike, redress!' Am I entreated To speak and strike? O Rome! I make thee promise; If the redress will follow, thou receiv'st Thy full petition at the hand of Brutus!

Re-enter Lucius.

Luc. Sir, March is wasted fourteen days.

Knocking within.

Bru. 'Tis good. Go to the gate; somebody knocks. Exit Lucius.

Since Cassius first did whet me against Caesar, I have not slept. Between the acting of a dreadful thing And the first motion, all the interim is Like a phantasma, or a hidous dream:
The genius and the mortal instruments
Are then in council: and the state of man,
Like to a little kingdom, suffers then
The nature of an insurrection.

Re-enter LUCIUS.

Luc. Sir, 'tis your brother Cassius at the door,
Who doth desire to see you.

Bru. Is he alone? 71

Luc. No, sir, there are more with him.

Bru. Do you know them?

Luc. No, sir; their hats are pluck'd about their ears,
And half their faces buried in their cloaks,
That by no means I may discover them
By any mark of favour.

Bru. Let 'em enter. Exit LUCIUS.

They are the faction. O conspiracy!
Sham'st thou to show thy dangerous brow by night,
When evils are most free? O! then by day
Where wilt thou find a cavern dark enough To mask thy monstrous visage? Seek none, conspiracy;
Hide it in smiles and affability:
For if thou path, thy native semblance on,
Not Erebus itself were dim enough
To hide thee from prevention.

Enter the Conspirators, CASSIUS, CASCA, DECIUS, CINNA, METELLUS CIMBER, and TREBONIUS.

Cas. I think we are too bold upon your rest: Good morrow, Brutus; do we trouble you?
Bru. I have been up this hour, awake all night.
Know I these men that come along with you?
Cas. Yes, every man of them; and no man here
But honours you; and every one doth wish
You had but that opinion of yourself
Which every noble Roman bears of you.
This is Trebonius.

Bru. He is welcome hither.

Cas. This, Decius Brutus.

Bru. He is welcome too.

Cas. This, Casca; this, Cinna; and this, Metellus Cimber.

Bru. They are all welcome.

What watchful cares do interpose themselves
Betwixt your eyes and night?

Cas. Shall I entreat a word?

BRUTUS and CASSIUS whisper.

Dec. Here lies the east; doth not the day break here?

Casca. No.

Cin. O! pardon, sir, it doth; and you grey lines
That fret the clouds are messengers of day.

Casca. You shall confess that you are both deceived.

Here, as I point my sword, the sun arises,
Which is a great way growing on the south,
Weighing the youthful season of the year.
Some two months hence up higher toward the north.
He first presents his fire; and the high east
Stands, as the Capitol, directly here.

Bru. Give me your hands all over, one by one.

Cas. And let us swear our resolution.

Bru. No, not an oath: if not the face of men,
The sufferance of our souls, the time's abuse,
Por. Nor for yours neither. You've ungently, Brutus,
Stole from my bed; and yesternight at supper
You suddenly arose, and walk'd about,
Musing and sighing, with your arms across,
And when I ask'd you what the matter was,
You star'd upon me with ungentle looks.
I urg'd you further; then you scratch'd your head,
And too impatiently stamp'd with your foot;
Yet I insisted, yet you answer'd not,
But with an angry wafture of your hand,
Gave sign for me to leave you. So I did,
Fearing to strengthen that impiacence
Which seem'd too much enkindled, and withal
Hoping it was but an effect of humour,
Which sometime hath his hour with every man.
It will not let you eat, nor talk, nor sleep,
And could it work so much upon your shape
As it hath much prevail'd on your condition,
I should not know you, Brutus. Dear my lord,
Make me acquainted with your cause of grief.
Brutus. I am not well in health, and that is all.
Por. Brutus is wise, and, were he not in health,
He would embrace the means to come by it.
Brutus. Why, so I do. Good Portia, go to bed.
Por. Is Brutus sick, and is it phys'cal?
To walk unbraced and suck up the humours
Of the dank morning? What! is Brutus sick,
And will he steal out of his wholesome bed
To dare the vile contagion of the night,
And tempt the rheumy and unpurged air
To add unto his sickness? No, my Brutus;
You have some sick offence within your mind,
Which, by the right and virtue of my place,
I ought to know of; and, upon my knees,
I charm you, by my once-commended beauty,
By all your vows of love, and that great vow
Which did incorporate and make us one,
That you unfold to me, your self, your half,
Why you are heavy, and what men to-night
Have had resort to you; for here have been
Some six or seven, who did hide their faces
Even from darkness.

Por. Kneel not, gentle Portia.
Por. I should not need, if you were gentle Brutus.
Within the bond of marriage, tell me, Brutus,
Is it excepted I should know no secrets
That appertain to you? Am I yourself
But, as it were, in sort or limitation,
To keep with you at meals, comfort your bed,
And talk to you sometimes? Dwell I but in the suburbs
Of your good pleasure? If it be no more,
Portia is Brutus' harlot, not his wife.

Brutus. You are my true and honourable wife,
As dear to me as are the ruddy drops
That visit my sad heart.

Por. If this were true then should I know this secret.
I grant I am a woman, but withal
A woman that Lord Brutus took to wife;
I grant I am a woman, but withal
A woman well-reputed, Cato's daughter.
Think you I am no stronger than my sex,
Being so father'd and so husbanded?
Tell me your counsels, I will not disclose 'em.
I have made strong proof of my constancy,
Giving myself a voluntary wound
Here, in the thigh: can I bear that with patience, And not my husband’s secrets?

Brutus. O ye gods! Render me worthy of this noble wife.

Knocking within. Hark, hark! one knocks. Portia, go in awhile; And by and by thy bosom shall partake The secrets of my heart. All my engagements I will construe to thee, All the charactery of my sad brows. Leave me with haste. Exit Portia. Lucius, who’s that knocks?

Re-enter Lucius with Ligarius.

Lucullus. Here is a sick man that would speak with you.

Brutus. Caius Ligarius, that Metellus spake of. Boy, stand aside. Caius Ligarius! how?

Ligarius. Vouchsafe good morrow from a feeble tongue.

Brutus. O! what a time have you chose out, brave Caius, To wear a kerschief. Would you were not sick! Ligarius. I am not sick if Brutus have in hand Any exploit worthy the name of honour. Brutus. Such an exploit have I in hand, Ligarius, Had you a healthful ear to hear of it. Ligarius. By all the gods that Romans bow before, I here discard my sickness. Soul of Rome! an Brave son, deriv’d from honourable loins! Thou, like an exercist, hast conjur’d up My mortified spirit. Now bid me run, And I will strive with things impossible; Yea, get the better of them. What’s to do? Brutus. A piece of work that will make sick men whole.

Ligarius. But are not some whole that we must make sick?

Brutus. That must we also. What it is, my Caius, I shall unfold to thee as we are going To whom it must be done.

Ligarius. Set on your foot, And with a heart new-fir’d I follow you, To do I know not what; but it sufficeth That Brutus leads me on.

Brutus. Follow me then. Exit.

Scene II.—The Same. Cæsar’s House.

Thunder and lightning. Enter Cæsar, in his night-gown.

Cæsar. Nor heaven nor earth have been at peace to-night:
Thrice hath Calpurnia in her sleep cried out, ‘Help, ho! they murder Cæsar!’ Who’s within?

Enter a Servant.

Servant. My lord!

Cæsar. Go bid the priests do present sacrifice, And bring me their opinions of success.

Servant. I will, my lord. Exit.

Enter Calpurnia.

Cæsar. What mean you, Cæsar? Think you to walk forth? You shall not stir out of your house to-day.

Cæsar. Cæsar shall forth: the things that threaten’d me

Ne’er look’d but on my back; when they shall see The face of Cæsar, they are vanished.

Cæsar, I never stood on ceremonies, Yet now they fright me. There is one with besides the things that we have heard and seen, Re-counts most horrid sights seen by the with a lioness hath welphed in the streets; And graves have yawn’d and yielded up to dead; Fierce fliery warriors fought upon the cloud; In ranks and squadrons and right form of war, Which drizzled blood upon the Capitol; The noise of battle hurtled in the air, Horses did neigh, and dying men did graun: And ghosts did shriek and squeal about the streets.

O Cæsar! these things are beyond all use, And I do fear them.

Cæsar. What can be avoided? Whose end is purpos’d by the mighty gods? Yet Cæsar shall go forth; for these predictions Are to the world in general as to Cæsar.

Cæsar. When beggars die there are no com companion; The heavens themselves blaze forth the death of princes.

Cæsar. Cowards die many times before their deaths; The valiant never taste of death but once. Of all the wonders that I yet have heard, It seems to me most strange that men should fear; Seeing that death, a necessary end, Will come when it will come.

Re-enter Servant.

Servant. What say the augurs?

Servant. They would not have you to stir for to-day.

Plucking the entrails of an offering forth, They could not find a heart within the beast:

Cæsar. The gods do this in shame of cowardice. Cæsar should be a beast without a heart If he should stay at home to-day for fear. No, Cæsar shall not; danger knows full well That Cæsar is more dangerous than he: We are two lions litter’d in one day, And I the elder and more terrible; And Cæsar shall go forth.

Cæsar. Alas! my lord, Your wisdom is consum’d in confidence. Do not go forth to-day: call it my fear That keeps you in the house, and not your own. We’ll send Mark Antony to the senate-house And he shall say you are not well to-day: Let me, upon my knee, prevail in this.

Cæsar. Mark Antony shall say I am not well And, for thy humour, I will stay at home.

Enter Decius.

Here’s Decius Brutus, he shall tell them so.

Decius. Cæsar, all hail! Good morrow, worthy Cæsar: I come to fetch you to the senate-house.

Cæsar. And you are come in very happy time To bear my greeting to the senators, And tell them that I will not come to-day: Cannot, is false, and that I dare not, falser; I will not come to-day: tell them so, Decius.

Cæsar. Say he is sick.

Cæsar. Shall Cæsar send a letter? Have I in conquest stretch’d mine arm so far... to found the greybeards the truth.

Cius, go tell them Caesar will not come.

Dec. Most mighty Caesar, let me know some cause, st be laugh'd at when I tell them so.

Ces. The cause is in my will: I will not come; is not enough to satisfy the senate:
t for your private satisfaction, cause I love you, I will let you know:
Iurinia here, my wife, stays me at home: a dream'd to-night she saw my statua, hich, like a fountain with an hundred spouts, d run pure blood; and many lusty Romans me smiling, and did bathe their hands in it.

id these docs she apply for warnings and portents, id evils imminent; and on her knee lb reg'd that I will stay at home to-day.

Dec. This dream is all amiss interpreted; was a vision fair and fortunate: our statute spouting blood in many pipes, which so many smiling Romans bath'd, guifies that from you great Rome shall suck living blood, and that great men shall press r tinctures, stains, relics, and cognizance.

is by Calpurnia's dream is signified.

Ces. And this way have you well expounded it.

Dec. I have, when you have heard what I can say: id know it now: the senate have concluded give this day a crown to mighty Caesar. you shall send them word you will not come, heir minds may change. Besides, it were a mock o't to be render'd, for some one to say break up the senate till another time, hen Caesar's wife shall meet with better dreams.'

Cezar hide himself, shall they not whisper o! Caesar is afraid!'

Dict. me, Ces.; for my dear love your proceeding bids me tell you this, id reason to my love is liable.

Ces. How foolish do your fears seem now, Calpurnia!

am ashamed I did yield to them.

me my robe, for I will go:

Enter Publius, Brutus, Ligarius, Metellus, Casca, Trebonius, and Cinna.

id look where Publius is come to fetch me.

Pub. Good morrow, Caesar.

Ces. Welcome, Publius, hat! Brutus, are you stirr'd so early too? no bud morrow, Casca.

Calus Ligarius, cesar was ne'er so much your enemy: that sameague which hath made you lean, hat is 't o'clock?

Brut. Caesar, 'tis strucken eight.

Ces. I thank you for your pains and courtesy.

Enter Antony.

O! Antony, that reveals long o' nights, notwithstanding up.

Good morrow, Antony.

Ant. So to most noble Caesar.

Ces. Bid them prepare within: am to blame to be thus waited for.

ow, Cinna; now, Metellus; what, Trebonius! have an hour's talk in store for you:

member that you call on me to-day: near me, that I may remember you.

Treb. Caesar, I will: Aside and so near will I be, That your best friends shall wish I had been further.

Ces. Good friends, go in, and taste some wine with me; And we, like friends, will straightway go together.

Brut. Aside. That every like is not the same, O Caesar! The heart of Brutus yearns to think upon.

Exeunt.

Scene III.—The Same. A Street near the Capitol.

Enter Artemidorus, reading a paper.

Cesar, beware of Brutus: take heed of Cassius: come not near Casca; have an eye to Cinna; trust not Trebonius; mark well Metellus Cicero; Decius Brutus loves thee not; thou hast wronged Caius Ligarius. There is but one mind in all these men, and it is bent against Caesar. If thou best not immortal, look about you: security gives way to conspiracy. The mighty gods defend thee! Thy lover, Artemidorus.

Here will I stand till Caesar pass along, And as a suitor will I give him this.

My heart laments that virtue cannot live Out of the teeth of emulation.

If thou read this, O Caesar! thou may'st live;

If not, the Fates with traitors do contrive.

Exit.

Scene IV.—The Same. Another Port of the same Street, before the House of Brutus.

Enter Portia and Lucius.

Por. I prithee, boy, run to the senate-house; Stay not to answer me, but get thee gone.

Why dost thou stay?

Luc. To know my errand, madam.

Por. I would have had thee there, and here again, Ere I can tell thee what thou should'st do there. O constancy! be strong upon my side; Set a huge mountain 'tween my heart and tongue;

I have a man's mind, but a woman's might.

How hard it is for women to keep counsel! Art thou here yet?

Luc. Madam, what should I do?

Run to the Capitol, and nothing else?

And so return to you, and nothing else?

Por. Yes, bring me word, boy, if thy lord look well,

For he went sickly forth; and take good note What Caesar doth, what suitors press to him.

Hark, boy! what noise is that!

Luc. I hear none, madam.

Por. Prithee, listen well;

I heard a bustling rumour, like a fray,

And the wind brings it from the Capitol.

Luc. Sooth, madam, I hear nothing.

Enter the Soothsayer.

Por. Come hither, fellow: which way hast thou been?

Sooth. At mine own house, good lady.

Por. What is 't o'clock?

Sooth. About the ninth hour, lady.

Por. Is Caesar yet gone to the Capitol?
Sooth. Madam, not yet: I go to take my stand, To see him pass on to the Capitol.
Por. Thou hast some suit to Caesar, hast thou not?
Sooth. That I have, lady: if it will please Caesar
To be so good to Caesar as to hear me, I shall beseech him to befriended himself.
Por. Why, know'st thou any harm's intended towards him?
Sooth. None that I know will be, much that I fear may chance.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Rome. Before the Capitol; the Senate sitting above.

A crowd of People; among them ARTEMIDORUS and the Soothsayer. Flourish. Enter Cesar, Brutus, Cassius, Casca, Decius, Metellus, Trebonius, Cinna, Antony, Lepidus, Popilius, Publius, and Others.

Ces. To the Soothsayer. The ides of March are come.
Sooth. Ay, Caesar; but not gone.
Art. Hail, Caesar! Read this schedule.
Dec. Trebonius doth desire you to o'er-read, At your best leisure, this his humble suit.
Art. O Caesar! read mine first; for mine's a suit That touches Caesar nearer. Read it, great Caesar.
Ces. What touches us ourself shall be last serv'd.
Art. Delay not, Caesar; read it instantly.
Ces. What! is the fellow mad?
Pub. Sirrah, give place.
Ces. What! urge you your petitions in the street?
Come to the Capitol.

Cæsar goes up to the Senate-House, the rest following. All the Senators rise.

Pop. I wish your enterprise to-day may thrive.
Ces. What enterprise, Popilius?
Pop. Fare you well. Advances to Cæsar.
Bru. What said Popilius Lena?
Ces. He wish'd to-day our enterprise might thrive.
I fear our purpose is discovered.
Bru. Look, how he makes to Cæsar: mark him.
Ces. Casca, be sudden, for we fear prevention.

Brutus, what shall be done? If this be known, Cassius or Caesar never shall turn back, For I will slay myself.

Bru. Cassius, be constant: Popilius Lena speaks not of our purposes; For, look, he smiles, and Caesar doth not chang.
Ces. Trebonius knows his time; for, loe, you, Brutus,
He draws Mark Antony out of the way.

Excuse Antony and Trebonius.

And presently prefer his suit to Caesar.
Bru. He is address'd; press near and secon him.
Cin. Casca, you are the first that rear's your hand.
Ces. Are we all ready? What is now amiss That Caesar and his senate must redress?
Met. Most high, most mighty, and most puissant Caesar, Metellus Cimber throws before thy seat
An humble hum,— Kneeling.
Ces. I must prevent thee, Cimber:
These couchings and these lowly courtesies, Might fire the blood of ordinary men, And turn pre-ordinance and first decree Into the law of children. Be not fond, To think that Caesar bears such rebel blood That will be thaw'd from the true quality With that which melteth fools; I mean sweet words, Low-crooked court'sies, and base spaniel fawning.
Bru. Thy brother by decree is banish'd:
If thou dost bend and pray and fawn for him, I spurn thee like a cur out of my way.
Know, Caesar doth not wrong, nor without cause Will he be satisfied.
Met. Is there no voice more worthy than my own, To sound more sweetly in great Caesar's ear For the repealing of my banish'd brother?
Bru. I kiss thy hand, but not in flattery, Caesar Desiring thee that Publius Cimber may Have an immediate freedom of repeal.
Ces. What, Brutus!
Ces. Pardon, Caesar; Cæsar, pardon As low as to thy foot doth Cæsar fall,
To beg enfranchisement for Publius Cimber.
Ces. I could be well mov'd if I were as you If I could pray to move prayers would move me But I am constant as the northern star, Of whose true-fix'd and resting quality There is no fellow in the firmament. The skies are painted with unnumber'd sparks, They are all fire and every one doth shine, But there's but one in all doth hold his place: So in the world; 'tis furnish'd well with men, And men are flesh and blood, and apprehensive Yet in the number I do know but one That unassailable holds on his rank, Unshak'd of motion: and that I am he, Let me a little show it, even in this, That I was constant Cimber should be banish'd And constant do remain to keep him so.
Cin. O Cæsar,—
Ces. Hence! wilt thou lift up Olympus
Dec. Great Cæsar,—
Ces. Dost not Brutus bootless kneel
Cas. Speak, hands, for me!

They stab Caesar.

Cas. Et tu, Brute! Then fall, Caesar! Dies.

Cia. Liberty! Freedom! Tyranny is dead! un hence, proclaim, cry it about the streets.

Cas. Some to the common pulpits, and cry out liberty, freedom, and enfranchisement!

Bru. People and senators, be not affrighted; ly not; stand still; ambition’s debt is paid.

Casca. Go to the pulpit, Brutus.

Dec. And Cassius too.

Bru. Where’s Publius?

Cia. Here, quite confounded with this mutiny.

Met. Stand fast together, lest some friend of Caesar’s shoulcl change—

Bru. Talk not of standing. Publius, good cheer; here is no harm intended to your person, or to no Roman else; so tell them, Publius.

Cas. And leave us, Publius; lest that the people,ushing on us, should do your age some mischief.

Bru. Do so; and let no man abide this deed at we the doers.

Re-enter Trebonius.

Cas. Where’s Antony?

Tre. Fled to his house amaz’d, ten, wives and children stare, cry out and run as it were doomsday.

Bru. Fates, we will know your pleasures; that we shall die, we know; ’tis but the time and drawing days out, that men stand upon. Why, he that cuts off twenty years of life cuts off so many years of fearing death.

Bru. Grant that, and then is death a benefit; are we Caesar’s friends, that have abrig’d his time of fearing death. Stoop, Romans, stoop, and let us battle our hands in Caesar’s blood to the elbows, and besmear our swords; then walk we forth, even to the market-place; and, waving our red weapons o’er our heads, let’s all cry Peace, freedom, and liberty!

Cas. Stoop then, and wash. How many ages hence shall this our lofty scene be acted over, in states unborn and accents yet unknown!

Bru. How many times shall Caesar bleed in sport, that now on Pompey’s basis lies along No worthier than the dust!

Cas. So oft as that shall be, so often shall the knot of us be call’d
The men that gave their country liberty.

Dec. What! shall we forth?

Cas. Ay, every man away: Brutus shall lead; and we will grace his heels With the most boldest and best hearts of Rome.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Thus, Brutus, did my master bid me kneel; Thus did Mark Antony bid me fall down; And, being prostrate, thus he bade me say: Brutus is noble, wise, valiant, and honest; Caesar was mighty, bold, royal, and loving: Say I love Brutus, and I honour him; Say I fear’d Caesar, honour’d him, and lov’d him.

If Brutus will vouchsafe that Antony May safely come to him, and be resolv’d How Caesar hath deserv’d to lie in death, Mark Antony shall not love Caesar dead So well as Brutus living; but will follow The fortunes and affairs of noble Brutus Thorough the hazards of this untrod state, With all true faith. So says my master Antony. Bru. Thy master is a wise and valiant Roman; I never thought him worse. Tell him, so please him come unto this place, He shall be satisfied; and, by my honour, Depart untouch’d.

Serv. I’ll fetch him presently. Exit.

Bru. I know that we shall have him well to friend.

Cas. I wish we may: but yet have I a mind That fears him much; and my misgiving still Falls shrewdly to the purpose.

Re-enter Antony.

Ant. O mighty Caesar! dost thou lie so low! Are all thy conquests, glories, triumphs, spoils, Shrink to this little measure! Fare thee well. I know not, gentlemen, what you intend, Who else must be let blood, who else is rank: If I myself, there is no hour so fit As Caesar’s death’s hour, nor no instrument Of half that worth as those your swords, made rich With the most noble blood of all this world. I do beseech ye, if you bear me hard, Now, whilst your purpled hands do reek and smoke, Fulfil your pleasure. Live a thousand years, I shall not find myself so apt to die: No place will please me so, no mean of death. As here by Caesar, and by you cut off, The choice and master spirits of this age.

Bru. O Antony! beg not your death of us. Though now we must appear bloody and cruel, As, by our hands and this our present act, You see we do, yet see you but our hands And this the bleeding business they have done: Our hearts you see not; they are pitiful; And pity to the general wrong of Rome, As fire drives out fire, so pity pity, Hath done this deed on Caesar. For your part, To you our swords have leaden points, Mark Antony: Our arms, in strength of malice, and our hearts Of brothers’ temper, do receive you in With all kind love, good thoughts, and reverence. Your voice shall be as strong as any man’s In the disposing of new dignities.

Bru. Only be patient till we have appeas’d The multitude, beside themselves with fear, And then we will deliver you the cause Why I, that did love Caesar when I struck him, Have thus proceeded.

Ant. I doubt not of your wisdom. Let each man render me his bloody hand: First, Marcus Brutus, will I shake with you; Next, Caius Cassius, do I take your hand; Now, Decius Brutus, yours; now yours, Metellus, Yours, Cinna; and, my valiant Casca, yours; Though last, not least in love, yours, good Trebonius.
Gentlemen all,—alas! what shall I say? 300
My credit now stands on such slippery ground,
'hat one of two bad ways you must Conceit me,
Either a coward or a flatterer.
That I did love thee, Caesar, O! 'tis true:
If then thy spirit look upon us now,
Shall it not grieve thee dearer than thy death,
To see thy Antony making his peace,
Slashing the bloody fingers of thy foes,
Most noble! in the presence of thy corse?
Hast I as many eyes as thou hast wounds,
Weeping as fast as they stream forth thy blood,
It would become me better than to close
In terms of friendship with thine enemies.
Pardon me, Julius! Here wast thou bay'd, brave hart;
Here didst thou fall; and here thy hunters stand,
Sign'd in thy spoil, and crimson'd in thy death.
O world! thou wast the forest to this hart;
And this, indeed, O world! the heart of thee.
How like a deer, strucken by many princes,
Dost thou here lie! 310
Cas. Mark Antony,—
Ant. Pardon me, Caius Cassius:
The enemies of Caesar shall say this;
Then, in a friend, it is cold modesty.
Cas. I blame you not for praising Caesar so;
But what compact mean you to have with us?
Will you be prick'd in number of our friends,
Or shall we on, and not depend on you!
Ant. Therefore I took your hands, but was indeed
Sway'd from the point by looking down on Caesar.
Friends am I with you all, and love you all, 320
Upon this hope, that you shall give me reasons
Why and wherein Caesar was dangerous.
Brutus, or else were this a savage spectacle.
Our reasons are so full of good regard
That were you, Antony, the son of Caesar,
You should be satisfied.
Ant. That's all I seek:
And am moreover suitor that I may Produce his body to the market-place;
And in the pulpit, as becomes a friend,
Speak in the order of his funeral. 330
Brutus, you shall, Mark Antony.
Cas. Brutus, a word with you.
Aside to Brutus. You know not what you do;
do not consent.
That Antony speak in his funeral:
Know you how much the people may be mov'd
By that which he will utter? 340
Brutus. By your pardon;
I will myself into the pulpit first,
And show the reason of our Caesar's death:
What Antony shall speak, I will protest
He speaks by leave and by permission,
And that we are contented Caesar shall
Have all true rites and lawful ceremonies.
It shall advantage more than do us wrong.
Cas. I know not what may fall; I like it not.
Brutus. Mark Antony, here, take you Caesar's body.
You shall not in your funeral speech blame us,
But speak all good you can devise of Caesar,
And say you do't by our permission;
Else shall you not have any hand at all
About his funeral: and you shall speak
In the same pulpit where I am going,
After my speech is ended.

Ant. I do desire no more.
Brutus. Prepare the body then, and follow us.

Enter all but Antony.
Ant. O! pardon me, thou bleeding piece of earth,
That I am meek and gentle with these butchers
Thou art the ruins of the noblest man
That ever lived in the tide of times.
Woe to the hand that shed this costly blood!
Over thy wounds now do I prophesy,
Which like dumb mouths do ope their ruby lips
To beg the voice and utterance of my tongue,
A curse shall light upon the limbs of men;
Domestic fury and fierce civil strife
Shall cumber all the parts of Italy;
Blood and destruction shall be so in use,
And dreadful objects so familiar,
That mothers shall but smile when they behold
Their infants quarter'd with the hands of war;
All pity shok'd with custom of fell deeds:
And Caesar's spirit, ranging for revenge,
With Atre by his side come hot from hell,
Shall in these confines with a monarch's voice
Cry 'Havoc!' and let slip the dogs of war;
That this foul deed shall smell above the earth
With carrion men, groaning for burial.

Enter a Servant.
You serve Octavius Caesar, do you not?
Serv. I do, Mark Antony.
Ant. Caesar did write for him to come to Rome.
Serv. He did receive his letters, and is coming;
And bid me say to you by word of mouth— 380
O Caesar!—

Enter the body.
Ant. Thy heart is big, get thee apart and weep.
Passion, I see, is catching; for mine eyes,
Seeing those beads of sorrow stand in thine,
Began to water. Is thy master coming?
Serv. He lies to-night within seven leagues of Rome.
Ant. Post back with speed, and tell him what hath chance'd;
Here is a mourning Rome, a dangerous Rome,
No Rome of safety for Octavius yet; 385
He hence and tell him so. Yet stay awhile;
Thou shalt not back till I have borne this corpse
Into the market-place; there shall I try,
In my oration, how the people take
The cruel issue of these bloody men;
According to the which thou shalt discourse
To young Octavius of the state of things.
Lend me your hand.

Exeunt, with Caesar's body.

Scene II.—The same. The Forum.

Enter Brutus and Cassius, and a throng
of Citizens.

Citizens. We will be satisfied: let us be satisfied.
Brutus. Then follow me, and give me audience, friends.
Cassius, go you into the other street,
And part the numbers.
Those that will hear me speak, let 'em stay here;
Those that will follow Cassius, go with him;
And public reasons shall be rendered
Of Caesar's death.
First Cit. I will hear Brutus speak.
Second Cit. I will hear Cassius; and compare their reasons, when severally we hear them rendered.
Exit CASSIUS, with some of the Citizens.

BRUTUS goes into the pulpit.

Third Cit. The noble Brutus is ascended: silence!

Bru. Be patient till the last.
Romans, countrymen, and lovers! hear me for my cause, and be silent, that you may hear: believe me for mine honour, and have respect to mine honour, that you may believe: censure me not your wisdom, and awake your senses, that you may the better judge. If there be any in this assembly, any dear friend of Caesar's, to him I say that Brutus' love to Caesar was no less than his. If then that friend demand why Brutus rose against Caesar, this is my answer: Not that I loved Caesar less, but that I loved Rome more. Had you rather Caesar were living, and die all slaves, than that Caesar were dead, to live all free? As Caesar loved me, I weep for him; as he was fortunate, I rejoice at it; as he was valiant, I honour him; but, as he was ambitious, I slew him. There is tears for his love; joy for his fortune; honour for his valour; and death for his ambition. Who is here so base, that would be a boughman? If any, speak; for him have I offended. Who is here so rude, that would not be a Roman? If any, speak; for him have I offended. Who is here so vile, that will not love his country? If any, speak; for him have I offended. I pause for a reply.

Citzens. None, Brutus, none.

Bru. Then none have I offended. I have done no more to Caesar than you shall do to Brutus. The question of his death is enrolled in the Capitol; his glory not extenuated, wherein he was worthy, nor his offences enforced, for which he suffered death.

Enter ANTONY and Others, with CAESAR's body.

Here comes his body, mourned by Mark Antony: who, though he had no hand in his death, shall receive the benefit of his dying, a place in the commonwealth, as which of you shall not? With this I depart: that, as I slew my best lover for the good of Rome, I have the same dagger for myself, when it shall please my country to need my death.

Citzens. Live, Brutus! live! live! live!
First Cit. Bring him with triumph home unto his house.
Second Cit. Give him a statue with his ancestors.
Third Cit. Let him be Caesar.
Fourth Cit. Caesar's better parts shall be crown'd in Brutus.
First Cit. We'll bring him to his house with shouts and clamours.

Bru. My countrymen,—
Second Cit. Peace! silence! Brutus speaks.
First Cit. Peace, ho!

Bru. Good countrymen, let me depart alone, and, for my sake, stay here with Antony.

Do grace to Caesar's corpse, and grace his speech.
Tending to Caesar's glories, which Mark Antony, by our permission, is allow'd to make.
Third Cit. There's not a nobler man in Rome than Antony.

Fourth Cit. Now mark him; he begins again to speak.

Ant. But yesterday the word of Caesar might have stood against the world; now lies he there,
And none so poor to do him reverence.
O masters! if I were dispos'd to stir
Your hearts and minds to mutiny and rage,
I should do Brutus wrong, and Cassius wrong.
Who, you all know, are honourable men. 130
I will not do them wrong; I rather choose
To wrong the dead, to wrong myself, and you,
Than I will wrong such honourable men.
But here's a parchment with the seal of Caesar;
I found it in his closet, 'tis his will.
Let but the commons hear this testament,
Which, pardon me, I do not mean to read,
And they would go and kiss dead Caesar's wounds,
And dip their napkins in his sacred blood,
Yea, beg a hair of him for memory, 140
And, dying, mention it within their wills,
Bequeathing it as a rich legacy
Unto their issue.

Fourth Cit. We'll hear the will: read it, Mark Antony.

Citizens. The will, the will! we will hear Cæsar's will.
Ant. Have patience, gentle friends; I must not read it:
It is not meet you know how Caesar lov'd you.
You are not wood, you are not stones, but men;
And, being men, hearing the will of Caesar,
It will inflame you, it will make you mad. 150
'Tis good you know not that you are his heirs;
For if you should, O! what would come of it.

Fourth Cit. Read the will! we'll hear it, Antony;
You shall read us the will, Caesar's will.
Ant. Will you be patient? will you stay awhile?
I have o'ershoot myself to tell you of it.
I fear I wrong the honourable men
Whose daggers have stabb'd Cæsar; I do fear it.

Fourth Cit. They were traitors: honourable men!

Citizens. The will! the testament! 160

Second Cit. They were villains, murderers.
The will! read the will!
Ant. You will compel me then to read the will?
Then make a ring about the corpse of Cæsar,
And let me show you him that made the will.
Shall I descend? and will you give me leave?

Citizens. Come down.

Second Cit. Descend. ANTONY comes down.

Third Cit. You shall have leave.

Fourth Cit. A ring; stand round. 170
First Cit. Stand from the hearse; stand from the body.

Second Cit. Room for Antony; most noble Antony.
Ant. Nay, press not so upon me; stand far off.

Citizens. Stand back! room! hear back!
Ant. If you have tears, prepare to shed them now.
You all do know this mantle: I remember
The first time ever Cæsar put it on;
'Twas on a summer's evening, in his tent,
That day he overcame the Nervii.

Look! in this place ran Cassius' dagger through
See what a rent the vainious Cæsae made:
Through this the well-beloved Brutus stabb'd
And as he pluck'd his cursed steel away,
Mark how the blood of Cæsar follow'd it,
As rushing out of doors, to be resolv'd
If Brutus so unkindly knock'd or no;
For Brutus, as you know, was Cæsae's angel:
Judge, O you gods! how dearly Cæsar lov'd his
This was the most unkindest cut of all;
For when the noble Cæsar saw him stab,
Ingratitude, more strong than traitors' arms,
Quite vanquish'd him: then burst his migh
heart;
And, in his mantle muffling up his face,
Even at the base of Pompey's statue,
Which all the while ran blood, great Cæsar fell;
O! what a fall was there, my countrymen!
Then I, and you, and all of us fell down,
Whilst bloody treason flourish'd over us.
O! now you weep, and I perceive you feel
The dint of pity; these are gracious drops.
Kind souls, what! weep you when you but beho
Our Caesar's vesture wounded? Look you here;
Here is himself, marr'd, as you see, with traitor
First Cit. O piteous spectacle!
Second Cit. O noble Cæsar!
Third Cit. O woeful day!
Fourth Cit. O traitors! villains!
First Cit. O most bloody sight!
Second Cit. We will be reveng'd.

Citizens. Revenge! About!—Seek!—Burn!—Fire!—Kill!—Shay!—Let not a traitor live.
Ant. Stay, countrymen.

First Cit. Peace there! Hear the nob Antony.
Second Cit. We'll hear him, we'll follow him
We'll die with him.
Ant. Good friends, sweet friends, let me no stir you up
To such a sudden flood of mutiny,
They that have done this deed are honourable
What private griefs they have, alas! I know no That made them do it; they are wise an honourable,
And will, no doubt, with reasons answer you.
I come not, friends, to steal away your hearts;
I am no orator, as Brutus is;
But, as you know me all, a plain blunt man,
That love my friend; and that they know full
That gave me public leave to speak of him.
For I have neither wit, nor words, nor worth,
Action, nor utterance, nor the power of speech
To stir men's blood: I only speak right on;
I tell you that which you yourselves do know,
Show you sweet Cæsar's wounds, poor poor dumb mouths,
And bid them speak for me: but were I Brutus
And Brutus Antony, there were an Antony
Would ruffle up your spirits, and put a tongue
In every wound of Cæsar, that should move
The stones of Rome to rise and mutiny.

Citizens. We'll mutiny.

First Cit. We'll burn the house of Brutus.
Third Cit. Away then! come, seek the conspirators.
Ant. Yet hear me, countrymen; yet hear me. speak.

Ant. Why, friends, you go to do you know not what.

herein hath Caesar thus deserv'd your loves? as you know not: I must tell you then.

or have forgot the will I told you of.

Citizens. Most true. The will! Let's stay and hear the will.

Ant. Here is the will, and under Caesar's seal.

evry Roman citizen he gives,
every several man, seventy-five drachmas.

Second Cit. Most noble Caesar! We'll revenge his death.

Third Cit. O royal Caesar!}

Ant. Hear me with patience.

Citizens. Peace, ho! Ant. Moreover, he hath left you all his walks, is private arbours, and new-planted orchards, a this side Tiber; he had left them you, ad to your heirs for ever; common pleasures, a walk abroad, and recreate yourselves.
here was a Caesar! when comes such another?

First Cit. Never, never! Come, away, away!
't burn his body in the holy place, and with the brands fire the traitors' houses.
ike up the body.

Second Cit. Go, fetch fire.

Third Cit. Pluck down benches.

Fourth Cit. Pluck down forms, windows, any thing. Exeunt Citizens, with the body.

Ant. Now let it work. Mischief, thou art afoot, take thou what course thou wilt!

Enter a Servant.

How now, fellow! Serv. Sir, Octavius is already come to Rome.

Ant. Where is he? Serv. He and Lepidus are at Caesar's house.

Ant. And thither will I straight to visit him. It comes upon a wish. Fortune is merry, and in this mood will give us any thing.

Serv. I heard him say Brutus and Cassius ride like madmen through the gates of Rome.

Ant. Believe they had some notice of the people, how I had mov'd them. Bring me to Octavius. Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. A Street.

Enter Cinna, the Poet.

Cin. I dreamt to-night that I did feast with Caesar, and things unlucky charge my fantasy: have no will to wander forth of doors, let something leads me forth.

Enter Citizens.

First Cit. What is my name? Whither am I going? Where do I dwell? Am I a married man or a bachelor? Then, to answer every man directly and briefly, wisely and truly; wisely I say, I am a bachelor.

Second Cit. That's as much as to say they are fools that marry; you'll bear me a bane for that, I fear. Proceed; directly.

Cin. Directly, I am going to Caesar's funeral. First Cit. As a friend or an enemy? Cin. As a friend.

Second Cit. That matter is answered directly. Fourth Cit. For your dwelling, briefly. Cin. Briefly, I dwell by the Capitol.

Third Cit. Your name, sir, truly.

Cin. Truly, my name is Cinna. First Cit. Tell him to pieces; he's a conspirator.

Cin. I am Cinna the poet, I am Cinna the poet.

Fourth Cit. Tear him for his bad verses, tear him for his bad verses.

Cin. I am not Cinna the conspirator.

Second Cit. It is no matter, his name's Cinna; pluck but his name out of his heart, and turn him going.

Third Cit. Tear him, tear him! Come, brands, bo! firebrands! To Brutus, to Cassius; burn all. Some to Decius' house, and some to Casca's; some to Ligarius'. Away! go! Exeunt.

ACT IV.

ANTONY, OCTAVIUS, and LEPIDUS, seated at a table.

Ant. These many then shall die; their names are prick'd.

Ant. He shall not live; look, with a spot I damn him.

But, Lepidus, go you to Caesar's house; Fetch the will hither, and we shall determine How to cut off some charge in legacies.

Lep. What! shall I find you here? Oct. Or here or at the Capitol. Exit LEPIDUS.

Ant. This is a slight unmeritable man, Meet to be sent on errands: is it fit, The three-fold world divided, he should stand One of the three to share it!

Oct. So you thought him; And took his voice who should be prick'd to die, In our black sentence and proscription.

Ant. Octavius, I have seen more days than you:

And though we lay these honours on this man, To ease ourselves of divers slanderous loads, He shall but bear them as the ass bears gold, To groan and sweat under the business, Either led or driven, as we point the way;
And having brought our treasure where we will,
Then take we down his load, and turn him off,
Like to the empty ass, to shake his ears,
And graze in commons.
Oct. You may do your will;
But he's a tried and valiant soldier.
Ant. So is my horse, Octavius; and for that I do appoint him store of provender.
It is a creature that I teach to fight,
To wind, to stop, to run directly on,
His corporal motion govern'd by my spirit.
And, in some taste, is Lepidus but so;
He must be taught, and train'd, and bid go forth;
A barren-spirited fellow; one that feeds
On abject orts and imitations.
Which, out of use and staid by other men,
Begin his fashion: do not talk of him
But as a property. And now, Octavius,
Listen great things: Brutus and Cassius
Are levying powers; we must straight make head;
Therefore let our alliance be combin'd,
Our best friends made, and our best means stretch'd out;
And let us presently go sit in council,
How covert matters may be best disclos'd,
And open perils surest answered.
Oct. Let us do so; for we are at the stake,
And bnd' about with many enemies;
And some that smile have in their hearts, I fear,
Millions of mischiefs. Exeunt.

Scene II.—Camp near Sardis. Before Brutus's Tent.

Drum. Enter Brutus, Lucilius, Lucius, and Soldiers; Titinius and Pindarus meet them.

Brut. Stand, ho!
Lucil. Give the word, ho! and stand.
Brut. What now, Lucilius! is Cassius near?
Lucil. He is at hand; and Pindarus is come
To do you salutation from his master.
Brut. He regrets me well. Your master Pindarus,
In his own change, or by ill officers,
Hath given me some worthy cause to wish
Things done undone; but, if he be at hand,
I shall be satisfied.

Pind. I do not doubt
But that my noble master will appear
Such as he is, full of regard and honour.
Brut. He is not doubted. A word, Lucilius;
How he receiv'd you, let me be resolv'd.

Lucil. With courtesy and with respect enough;
But not with such familiar instances,
Nor with such free and friendly conference,
As he hath us'd of old.
Brut. Thou hast describ'd
A hot friend cooling. Ever note, Lucilius,
When love begins to sicken and decay,
It useth an enforced ceremony.
There are no tricks in plain and simple faith;
But hollow men, like horses hot at hand,
Make gallant show and promise of their mettle;
But when they should endure the bloody spur,
They fall their crests, and, like deceitful jades,
Sink in the trial. Comes his army on!
Lucil. They mean this night in Sardis to be quarter'd;
The greater part, the horse in general,
Are come with Cassius. Low march with
Bru. Hark! he is arriv'd March gently on to meet him.

Enter Cassius and Soldiers.

Cas. Stand, ho!
Bru. Stand, ho! Speak the word along.
First Sold. Stand!
Second Sold. Stand!
Third Sold. Stand!
Cas. Most noble brother, you have done wrong.
Bru. Judge me, you gods! wrong I m
And, if not so, how should I wrong a brother
Cas. Brutus, this sober form of yours hit wrongs;
And when you do them—
Bru. Cassius, be content
Speak your griefs softly: I do know you well
Before the eyes of both our armies here,
Which should perceive nothing but love from
Let us not wrangle: bid them move away;
Then in my tent, Cassius, enlarge your griefs
And I will give you audience.
Cas. Pindarus,
Bid our commanders lead their charges off
A little from this ground.
Bru. Lucilius, do you the like; and let no man
Come to our tent till we have done our conference
Let Lucius and Titinius guard our door.

Scene III.—Within the Tent of Brutus.

Enter Brutus and Cassius.

Cas. That you have wrong'd me doth appe in this:
You have condemn'd and noted Lucius Pella
For taking bribes here of the Sardians;
Wherein my letters, praying on his side,
Because I knew the man, were slighted off.
Bru. You wrong'd yourself to write in such a case.
Cas. In such a time as this it is not meet
That every nice office should bear his comment.
Bru. Let me tell you, Cassius, you yourself
Are much condemn'd to have an itching palm
To sell and mart your offices for gold
To undeservers.
Cas. I am an itching palm!
You know that you are Brutus that speak this
Or, by the gods, this speech were else your last Bru. The name of Cassius honours this corruption,
And chastisement doth therefore hide his head
Cas. Chastisement!
Bru. Remember March, the ides of Marc remember:
Did not great Julius bleed for justice' sake?
What villain touch'd his body, that did stab,
And not for justice? What shall one of us,
That struck the foremost man of all this world
But for supporting robbers, shall we now
Contaminate our fingers with base bribes,
And sell the mighty space of our large honours
For so much trash as may be grasped thus?
I had rather be a dog, and bay the moon,
Than such a Roman.
JULIUS CAESAR.

Cas. I did not: he was but a fool
That brought my answer back. Brutus hath riv'd my heart.
A friend should bear his friend's infirmities,
But Brutus makes mine greater than they are.
Bru. I do not, till you practise them on me.
Cas. You love me not.
Bru. I do not like your faults.
Cas. A friendly eye could never see such faults.
Bru. A flatterer's would not, though they do appear
As huge as high Olympus.
Cas. Come, Antony, and young Octavius, come,
Revenge yourselves alone on Cassius,
For Cassius is awearie of the world;
Hated by one he loves; braw'd by his brother;
Check'd like a bondman; all his faults observ'd,
Set in a note-book, learn'd, and conn'd by rote,
To cast into my teeth. O ! I could weep
My spirit from mine eyes. There is my dagger,
And here my naked breast; within, a heart
Dearer than Plutus' mine, richer than gold;
If that thou be'st a Roman, take it forth;
I, that denied thee gold, will give my heart:
Strike, as thou didst at Caesar; for, I know,
When thou didst hate him worst, thou lov'dst him better
Than ever thou lov'dst Cassius.

Bru. Shenthe your dogger:
Be angry when you will, it shall have scope;
Do what you will, dishonour shall be humour.
O Cassius! you are yoked with a lamb
That carries anger as the flint bears fire,
Who, much enforced, shows a hasty spark,
And straight is cold again.

Cas. Hath Cassius liv'd
To be but mirth and laughter to his Brutus,
When grief and blood ill-temper'd vexeth him?
Bru. When I spoke that I was ill-temper'd too.
Cas. Do you confess so much? Give me your hand.
Bru. And my heart too.

Cas. O Brutus!
Bru. What's the matter?
Cas. Have you not love enough to bear with me,
When that rash humour which my mother gave me
Makes me forgetful?
Bru. Yes, Cassius; and from henceforth
When you are over-earest with your Brutus,
He'll think your mother chides, and leave you so.

Noise within.

Poet. Within. Let me go in to see the generals;
There is some grudge between 'em, 'tis not meet
They be alone.

Lucid. Within. You shall not come to them.

Poet. Within. Nothing but death shall stay me.

Enter Poet, followed by Lucilius, Titinius, and Lucius.

Cas. How now! What's the matter?
Poet. For shame, you generals! What do you mean?
Love, and be friends, as two such men should be;
For I have seen more years. I'm sure, than ye.
Cas. Ha, ha! how vilely doth this cyanic rime?
Bru. Get you hence, sirrah; saucy fellow, hence!
Cas. Bear with him, Brutus; 'tis his fashion.
Re-enter Lucilius and Titinius.

Bru. Lucius, a bowl of wine. Exit Lucius.

Cas. I did not think you could have been so angry.

Bru. O Cassius! I am sick of many griefs.

Cas. Of your philosophy you make no use.

If you give place to accidental evils.

Bru. No man bears sorrow better: Portia is dead.

Cas. Ha! Portia!

Bru. She is dead.

Cas. How 'scap'd I killing when I cross'd you so?

O insupportable and touching loss!

Upon what sickness?

Bru. Impatient of my absence.

And grief that young Octavius with Mark Antony

Have made themselves so strong; for with her death

That tidings came; with this she fell distract,

And, her attendants absent, swallow'd fire.

Cas. And died so?

Bru. Even so.

Cas. O ye immortal gods!

Re-enter Lucius, with wine and tapers.

Bru. Speak no more of her. Give me a bowl of wine:

In this I bury all unkindness, Cassius.

Cas. My heart is thirsty for that noble pledge.

Fill, Lucius, till the wine o'erswell the cup;

I cannot drink too much of Brutus' love.

Re-enter Titinius, with Messala.

Welcome, good Messala.

Now sit we close about this taper here,

And call in question our necessities.

Cas. Portia, art thou gone?

Bru. No more, I pray you.

Messala, I have here received letters,

That young Octavius and Mark Antony

Come down upon us with a mighty power,

Bending their expedition toward Philippi.

Mes. Myself have letters of the self-same tenour.

Bru. With what addition?

Mes. That by proscription and bills of outlawry,

Octavius, Antony, and Lepidus

Have put to death an hundred senators.

Bru. Therein our letters do not well agree;

Mine speak of seventy senators that died

By their proscriptions, Cicero being one.

Cas. Cicero one!

Mes. Cicero is dead,

And by that order of proscription.

Had you your letters from your wife, my lord?

Bru. No, Messala.
Enter VARRO and CLAUDIUS.

var. Calls my lord?

ru. I pray you, sirs, lie in my tent and sleep; ay be I shall raise you by and by business to my brother Cassius.

ar. So please you, we will stand and watch your pleasure.

ru. I will not have it so; lie down, good sirs;
ay be I shall otherwise be th'knave.

k. Lucius, here's the book I sought for;
in the pocket of my gown.

VARRO AND CLAUDIUS LIE DOWN.

ru. I was sure your lordship did not give it me.

ru. Bear with me, good boy, I am much forgetful.

st thou hold up thy heavy eyes awhile, touch thy instrument a strain or two?

uc. Ay, my lord, an't please you.

ru. It does, my boy.

ru. I should not urge thy duty past thy might;
now young bloods look for a time of rest.

ru. I have slept, my lord, already.

ru. It was well done, and thou shalt sleep again;
if not hold thee long: if I do live,
I'll be good to thee. Music, and a Song.

is a sleepy tune: O murderous slumber!
'tst thou thy leden mace upon my boy,
't plays thee music? Gentle knave, good night;
ill not do thee so much wrong to wake thee.
thou dost nod, thou break'st thy instrument;
take it from thee; and, good boy, good night.

me see, let me see; is not the leaf turn'd down ere I left reading? Here it is, I think.

Enter the Ghost of Cæsar.

w'll this taper burns! Ha! who comes here?
ink it is the weakness of nine eyes
it shapes this monstrous apparence.
comes upon me. Art thou any thing?
thou some god, some angel, or some devil,
at mak'st my blood cold and my hair to stare?
ask to me what thou art.

HOST. Thy evil spirit, Brutus.

bru. Why com'st thou?

HOST. To tell thee shalt see me at Philippi.

ru. Well; then I shall see thee again?

HOST. Ay, at Philippi.

BRU. Why, I will see thee at Philippi then.

GHOST VANISHES.

Now I have taken heart thon vanishest:
Ill spirit, I would hold more talk with thee.
Boy! Lucius! Varro! Claudius! Sirs, awake! Claudius!

Luc. The strings, my lord, are false.

BRU. He thinks he still is at his instrument.
Lucius, awake!

Luc. My lord!

BRU. Didst thou dream, Lucius, that thou so criedst out?

Luc. My lord, I do not know that I did cry.

BRU. Yes, that thou didst. Didst thou see any thing?

Luc. Nothing, my lord.

BRU. Sleep again, Lucius. Sirrah, Claudius!
To VARRO. Fellow thou! awake!

Var. My lord!

Clau. My lord!

BRU. Why didst thou cry out, sirs, in yoursleep?

Var., Clau. Did we, my lord?

BRU. Ay! saw you any thing?

Var. No, my lord, I saw nothing.

Clau. Nor I, my lord.

BRU. Go and commend me to my brother Cassius;

Bid him set on his powers betimes before,
And we will follow.

Var., Clau. It shall be done, my lord.

Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The Plains of Philippi.

Enter OCTAVIUS, ANTONY, and their Army.

Oct. Now, Antony, our hopes are answered:
You said the enemy would not come down,
But keep the hills and upper regions;
It proves not so; their battles are at hand;
They mean to warn us at Philippi here,
Answering before we do demand of them.

Ant. Tut! I am in their bosoms, and I know Wherefore they do it: they could be content
To visit other places; and come down
With fearful bravery, thinking by this face
To fasten in our thoughts that they have courage;
But 'tis not so.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Prepare you, generals:
The enemy comes on in gallant show;
Their bloody sign of battle is hung out,
And something to be done immediately.

Ant. Octavius, lead your battle softly on,
Upon the left hand of the even field.

Oct. Upon the right hand I; keep thou the left.

Ant. Why do you cross me in this exigent?

Oct. I do not cross you; but I will do so.

March.

Dread. Enter BRUTUS, CASSIUS, and their Army; LUCILIUS, TITINIUS, MESSALA, and Others.

Bru. They stand, and would have parley.

Cas. Stand fast, Titinius: we must out and talk.

Oct. Mark Antony, shall we give sign of battle?

Ant. No, Caesar, we will answer on their charge.
Make forth; the generals would have somewords.
OCT. Stir not until the signal.

BRU. Words before blows: is it so, countrymen?

OCT. Not that we love words better, as you do.

BRU. Good words are better than bad strokes.

OCT. In your bad strokes, Brutus, you give good words:

Witness the hole you made in Caesar's heart,
Crying 'Long live! hail, Caesar!'

CAS. Antony, the posture of your blows are yet unknown;
But for your words, they rob the Hybla bees,
And leave them honeyless.

ANT. Not stingless too.

BRU. O! yes, and soundless too;
For you have stol'n their buzzing, Antony,
And very wisely threat before you sting.

ANT. Villains! you did not so when your vile daggers
Hack'd one another in the sides of Caesar:
You show'd your teeth like apes, and fawn'd like hounds;
And bow'd like bondmen, kissing Caesar's feet;
Whilst damned Cassius, like a cur, behind,
Struck Caesar on the neck. O you flatteringurs!

CAS. Flatterers! Now, Brutus, thank yourself:
This tongue had not offended so to-day,
If Cassius might have rul'd.

OCT. Come, come, the cause: if arguing make us sweat,
The proof of it will turn to redder drops.

Look: I draw a sword against conspirators;
When think you that the sword goes up again?
Never, till Caesar's three-and-thirty wounds
Be well aveng'd; or till another Caesar
Have added slaughter to the sword of traitors.

BRU. Caesar, thou caus'st not die by traitors' hands,
Unless thou bring'st them with thee.

OCT. So I hope;
I was not born to die on Brutus' sword.

BRU. O! if thou wert the noblest of thy strain,
Young man, thou could'st not die more honourable.

CAS. A peevish school-boy, worthless of such honour,
Join'd with a masker and a reveller.

ANT. Old Cassius still!

OCT. Come, Antony; away!

Defiance, traitors, hurl we in your teeth,
If you dare fight to-day, come to the field;
If not, when you have stomachs.

EXECUT OCTAVIUS, ANTONY, and their Army.

CAS. Why now, blow wind, swell billow, and swim bark!
The storm is up, and all is on the hazard.

BRU. Ho!

LUCILIUS, hark, a word with you.

LUCIL. BRUTUS and LUCILIUS talk apart.

CAS. Messala!

MES. What says my general?

CAS. Messala, this is my birth-day; as this very day,
Was Cassius born. Give me thy hand, Messala:
Be thou my witness that against my will,
As Pompey was, am I compell'd to set

Upon one battle all our liberties.
You know that I held Epicurus strong,
And his opinion; now I change my mind,
And partly credit things that do presage.

Coming from Sardis, on our former ensign,
Two mighty eagles fell, and there they per Gorging and feeding from our soldiers' hat
Who to Philippi here consorted us:
This morning are they fled away and gone.
And in their steads do ravens, crows, and Fly o'er our heads, and downward look on
As we were sickly prey: their shadows see
A canopy most fatal, under which
Our army lies, ready to give up the ghost.

MES. Believe not so.

CAS. I but believe it par

For I am fresh of spirit and resolv'd
To meet all perils very constantly.

BRU. Even so, Lucullus.

CAS. Now, most noble Brutus,
The gods to-day stand friendly, that we may Lovers in peace, lead on our days to age!
But since the affairs of men rest still incor
Let's reason with the worst that may be.
If we do lose this battle, then is this
The very last time we shall speak together.
What are you then determined to do?

BRU. Even by the rule of that philosophy
By which I did blame Cato for the death
Which he did give himself; I know not how
But I do find it cowardly and vile,
For fear of what might fall, so to prevent
The time of life: arming myself with patience
To stay the provocation of some high power
That governs us below.

CAS. Then, if we lose this battle?
You are contented to be led in triumph
Thorough the streets of Rome?

BRU. No, Cassius, no: think not, thou Roman,
That ever Brutus will go bond to Rome;
He bears too great a mind: but this same
Must end that work the ides of March beg
And whether we shall meet again I know;
Therefore our everlasting farewell take:
For ever, and for ever, farewell, Cassius!
If we do meet again, why, we shall smile;
If not, why then, this parting was well made.

CAS. For ever, and for ever, farewell, Brutus.

BRU. If we do meet again, we'll smile indeed;
If not, 'tis true this parting was well made.

BRU. Why then, lead on. O! that a

The end of this day's business ere it came;
But it sufficeth that the day will end,
And then the end is known. Come, ho! away!

SCENE II.—The Same. The Field of Battle.

ALARUM. Enter BRUTUS and MESSALA.

BRU. Ride, ride, Messalla, ride, and give the Unto the legions on the other side.

MES. Let them set on at once, for I perceive

But cold demeanour in Octavius' wing,
And sudden push gives them the overthrow.

BRU. Ride, Messalla: let them all come dow

BRU. Ride, Messalla: let them all come dow
O! look, Titinius, look, the villains fly; I have to mine own turn’d enemy; resign here of mine was turning back; the coward, and did take it from him. O Cassius! Brutus gave the word too early; having some advantage on Octavius, it too eagerly: his soldiers fell to spoil, we by Antony are all enclos’d.

Enter Pindarus. Fly further off, my lord, fly further off; Antony is in your tents, my lord! herefore, noble Cassius, fly far off. This hill is far enough. Look, look, Titinius; hoes my tents where I perceive the fire? They are, my lord.

Titinius, if thou lov’st me, tru thou my horse, and hide thy spurs in him, have brought thee up to yonder troops here again; that I may rest assur’d her yound troops are friend or enemy. I will be here again, even with a thought. Exit. Go, Pindarus, get higher on that hill; night was ever thick; regard Titinius, tell me what thou not’sh about the field.

Pindarus ascends the hill. Day I breathed first; time is come round, where did I begin, there shall I end; fe is run his compass. Sirrah, what news? Above. O my lord!

What news? Titinius is enclosed round about horsemen, that make to him on the spur; he spurs on: now they are almost on him. Titinius! now some light! O! he lights a’en! And, hark! they shout for joy. Come down; behold no more.eward that I am, to live so long, so my best friend a’en before my face.

Pindarus descends. hither, sirrah. Arthia did I take thee prisoner; then I swore thee, saving of thy life, whatsoever I did bid thee do, should’st attempt it. Come now, keep thine oath; be a freeman; and with this good sword, ran through Caesar’s bowels, search this bosom. d not to answer; here, take thou the hilts; when my face is cover’d, as ’tis now, e thou the sword. Caesar, thou art reveng’d, with the sword that kill’d thee. Dies. So, I am free; yet would not so have been. I have done my will. O Cassius! from this country Pindarus shall run, never Roman shall take note of him.

Enter Titinius with Messala. Mes. It is but change, Titinius; for Octavius is overthrown by noble Brutus’ power, As Cassius’ legions are by Antony. Tit. These tidings will well comfort Cassius. Mes. Where did you leave him? Tit. All disconsolate, With Pindarus his bondman, on this hill. Mes. Is not that he that lies upon the ground? Tit. He lies not like the living. O my heart! Mes. Is not that he? Tit. No, this was he, Messala, But Cassius is no more. O setting sun! As in thy red rays thou dost sink to-night, So in his red blood Cassius’ day is set; The sun of Rome is set. Our day is gone; Clouds, dews, and dangers come; our deeds are done. Mistrust of my success hath done this deed. Mes. Mistrust of good success hath done this deed. O hateful error, melancholy’s child! Why dost thou show to the apt thoughts of men The things that are not? O error! soon conceived, Thou never com’st unto a happy birth, But kill’st the mother that engender’d thee. Tit. What, Pindarus! Where art thou, Pindarus? Mes. Seek him, Titinius, whilst I go to meet The noble Brutus, thrusting this report Into his ears; I may say, thrusting it; For piercing steel and darts envenom’d Shall be as welcome to the ears of Brutus As tidings of this sight.

Tit. Hie you, Messala, And I will seek for Pindarus the while. Exit Messala. Why didst thou send me forth, brave Cassius? Did I not meet thy friends? and did not they Put on my brows this wreath of victory, And bid me give it thee? Didst thou not hear their shouts? Alas! thou hast misconstrued every thing. But hold thee, take this garland on thy brow; Thy Brutus bid me give it thee, and I Will do his bidding. Brutus, come apace, And see how I regarded Caius Cassius. By your leave, gods: this is a Roman’s part: Come, Cassius’ sword, and find Titinius’ heart. Kill’s himself.

Alarum. Enter Titinius with Messala, Brutus, Cato, Strato, Volumnius, and Lucilius. Bru. Where, where, Messala, doth his body lie? Mes. Lo, yonder; and Titinius mourning it. Bru. Titinius’ face is upward. Cato. He is slain. Bru. O Julius Caesar! thou art mighty yet: Thy spirit walks abroad, and turns our swords In our own proper entrails. Low alarum. Low. Brave Titinius! Look! who’er he have not crown’d dead Cassius. Bru. Are yet two Romans living such as these? The last of all the Romans, fare thee well! It is impossible that ever Rome Should breed thy fellow. Friends, I owe more tears
To this dead man than you shall see me pay.
I shall find time, Cassius, I shall find time.
Come therefore, and to Thassos send his body:
His funerals shall not be in our camp,
Lest it discomfort us. Lucilius, come;
And come, young Cato; let us to the field.
Laboe and Flavius, set our battles on:
'Tis three o'clock; and, Romans, yet ere night
We shall try fortune in a second fight.
Exc. ut.

SCENE IV.—Another Part of the Field.

Alarum. Enter fighting, Soldiers of both Armies;
then Brutus, Cato, Lucilius, and Others.

Bru. Yet, countrymen, O! yet hold up your heads.
Cato. What bastard doth not? Who will go with me?
I will proclaim my name about the field:
I am the son of Marcus Cato, ho!
A foe to tyrants, and my country's friend;
I am the son of Marcus Cato, ho!
Bru. And I am Brutus, Marcus Brutus, I;
Brutus, my country's friend; know me for Brutus.

Lucil. O young and noble Cato! art thou down?
Why, now thou diest as bravely as Titinius,
And may'st be honour'd, being Cato's son.

First Sold. Yield, or thou diest.
Lucil. Only I yield to die:
There is so much that thou wilt kill me straight.

Offering money.

Kill Brutus, and be honour'd in his death.

First Sold. We must not. A noble prisoner!
Second Sold. Room, ho! Tell Antony, Brutus is ta'en.

First Sold. I'll tell the news. Here comes the general.

Enter Antony.

Brutus is ta'en, Brutus is ta'en, my lord.

Ant. Where is he?

Lucil. Safe, Antony; Brutus is safe enough.
I dare assure thee that no enemy
Shall ever take alive the noble Brutus;
The gods defend him from so great a shame!
When you do find him; or alive or dead,
He will be found like Brutus, like himself.

Ant. This is not Brutus, friend; but, I assure you,
A prize no less in worth. Keep this man safe;
Give him all kindness: I had rather have Such men my friends than enemies. Go on,
And see whe'r Brutus be alive or dead;
And bring us word unto Octavius' tent
How every thing is chanced.
Exc. ut.

SCENE V.—Another Part of the Field.

Enter Brutus, Dardanius, Clitus, Strato, and Volumnius.

Bru. Come, poor remains of friends, rest on this rock.

Clit. Statilius show'd the torch-light, but, my lord,
He came not back; he is or ta'en or slain.

Bru. Sit thee down, Clitus; slaying is the word;
It is a deed in fashion. Hark thee, Clitus.

Whispers.

Clit. What I, my lord? No, not for all the word.

Bru. Peace then! no words.

Clit. I'll rather kill my

Bru. Hark thee, Dardanius. White

Clit. Shall I do such a deed?

Dard. O Clitus!

Clit. What ill request did Brutus make to thee?

Dard. To kill him, Clitus. Look, he meditates.

Clit. Now is that noble vessel full of grief.

That it runs over even at his eyes.

Bru. Come hither, good Volumnius: I'll hear.

Vol. What says my lord?

Bru. Why, this, Volumnius.

The ghost of Caesar hath appear'd to me:
Two several times by night; at Sardis once
And, this last night, here in Philippi fields.
I know my hour is come.

Vol. Not so, my lord.

Bru. Nay, I am sure it is, Volumnius.

Thou seest the world, Volumnius, how it goes.

Our enemies have beat us to the pit:—

Low alarum.

It is more worthy to leap in ourselves
Than tarry till they push us. Good Volumnius.
Thou know'st that we two went to seek together;

Even for that our love of old, I prithee,
Hold thou my sword-hilts, whilst I run on.

Vol. That's not an office for a friend, my lord.

Alarum.

Clit. Fly, fly, my lord! there is no tarrying.

Bru. Farewell to you; and you; and Volumnius.

Strato, thou hast been all this while asleep;
Farewell to thee too, Strato. Countrymen,
My heart doth joy that yet in all my life
I found no man but he was true to me.
I shall have glory by this losing day.

More than Octavius and Mark Antony
By this vile conquest shall attain unto.
So fare you well at once; for Brutus' tongue
Hath almost ended his life's history.
Night hangs upon mine eyes; my bones we rest,
That have but labour'd to attain this hour.

Alarum. Cry within, 'Fly, fly, fly, Clit.
Clit. Fly, my lord, fly!

Bru. Hence! I will follow.

Exc. ut Clitus, Dardanius, Volumnius.

I prithee, Strato, stay thou by thy lord.

Thou art a fellow of a good respect;
Thy life liath had some smack of honour in;
Hold then my sword, and turn away thy face
While I do run upon it. Wilt thou, Strato?
Strato. Give me your hand first: fare you well,
my lord.

Bru. Farewell, good Strato. Caesar, now still:

I kill'd not thee with half so good a will.
He runs on his sword, and Alarum. Retreat. Enter Octavius, Anto.

MESSALA, Lucilius, and their Army.

Oct. What man is that?

Mess. My master's man. Strato, where is master!
MACBETH.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

UNCAN, King of Scotland.
ALCOM, his Sons.
DONALBAIN, a General of the King's Army.
MACBETH, Lord calamity of Scotland.
LENNOX, Nobleman.
LENNOX, Son to Banquo.
WARD, Earl of Northumberland, General of the English Forces.

The Ghost of Banquo, and other Apparitions.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—A desert Place.

Enter three Witches.

First Witch. When shall we three meet again
Hunder and lightning. Enter three Witches.

Second Witch. When shall we three meet again
Hunder and lightning, or in rain?

Second Witch. When shall we three meet again
Hunder and lightning, or in rain?

Third Witch. That will be ere the set of sun.

First Witch. Where the place?

Second Witch. Upon the heath.

Third Witch. There to meet with Macbeth.

First Witch. I come, Graymalkin!

Third Witch. Paddock calls.

Third Witch. Anon.

Fair is foul, and foul is fair:
Ver through the fog and filthy air. Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A Camp near Forres.

Alarum within. Enter DUNCAN, MALCOLM,
DONALBAIN, LENNOX, with Attendants, meeting a bleeding Sergeant.

DUNCAN. What bloody man is that? He can report
As seemeth by his plight, of the revolt
The newest state.

MALCOLM. This is the sergeant
Who like a good and hearty soldier fought Gainst my captivity. Hail, brave friend! I Say to the king the knowledge of the broil
As thou didst leave it.

Ser. Doubtful it stood;
As two swain swimmers, that do cling together
And choke their art. The merciless Mac
Dondalld,
Worthy to be a rebel, for to that
Macbeth.

The multiplying villainies of nature
Do swarm upon him, from the western isles
Of kerns and gallowglasses is supplied;
And fortune, on his damned quarrel smiling,
Show'd like a rebel's whore: but all 's too weak;
For brave Macbeth, well he deserves that name,
Disdaining fortune, with his brandish'd steel,
Which smok'd with bloody execution,
Like valour's minion carv'd out his passage
Till he fac'd the slave;
Which ne'er shook hands, nor bade farewell to him,
Till he unseam'd him from the nave to the chaps,
And fix'd his head upon our battlemets.

Dun. O valiant cousin! worthy gentleman!

Ser. As whence the sun 'gins his reflection
Shipwrecking storms and direful thunders break,
So from that spring whence comfort seem'd to come Discomfort swells. Mark, King of Scotland, mark:
No sooner justice had with valour arm'd
Compelli'd these skipping kerns to trust their heels,
But the Norwegian lord surveying vantage,
With furnish'd arms and new supplies of men
Began a fresh assault.

Dun. Dismay'd not this
Our captains, Macbeth and Banquo?

Ser. Yes;
As sparrows eagles, or the hare the lion.
If I say sooth, I must report they were
As cannons overcharg'd with double cracks;
So they
Doubly redoubled strokes upon the foe:
Except they meant to bathe in reeking wounds,
Or memorize another Golgotha,
I cannot tell—
But I am faint. my gashes cry for help.

Dun. So well thy words become thee as thy wounds;
They smack of honour both. Go get him surgeons.

Enter Ross.

Who comes here?

Mal. The worthy Thane of Ross.
Len. What haste looks through his eyes! So should he look
That seems to speak things strange.

Ross. God save the king!
Dun. Whence cam'st thou, worthy thane?
Ross. From Fife, great king;
Where the Norweyan banners flout the sky
And fan our people cold. Norway himself,
With terrible numbers,
Assisted by that most disloyal traitor,
The Thane of Cawdor, began a dismal conflict;
Till that Bellona's bridegroom, lapp'd in proof,
Confronted him with self-comparisons,
Point against point rebellions, arm 'gainst arm,
Curbing his lavish spirit: and, to conclude,
The victory fell on us.

Dun. Great happiness!
Ross. That now
Sweno, the Norways' king, craves composition;
Nor would we deign him burial of his men
Till he disbursed at Saint Colme's Inch
Ten thousand dollars to our general use.

Dun. No more do Thane of Cawdor shall deceive
Our bosom interest. Go pronounce his present death,
And with his former title greet Macbeth.
Ross. I'll see it done.
Dun. What he hath lost noble Macbeth hath won.

Enter Macbeth and Banquo.

Macb. So foul and fair a day I have not se'n.
Ban. How far is it call'd to Forres? Whose these are,
So wither'd and so wild in their attire,
That look not like th' inhabitants of the earth
And yet are on't? Live you? or are you a's
That man may question? You seem to understand me,
By each at once her choppy finger laying
Upon her skinny lips: you should be women
And yet your beards forbid me to interpret
That you are so.

Macb. Speak, if you can: what are you?
First Witch. All hail, Macbeth! hail to thine
Thane of Glamis!
MACBETH.

Enter ROSS and ANGUS.

ROSS. The king hath happily receiv'd, Macbeth, he news of thy success; and when he reads your personal venture in the rebels' fight, is wonders and his praises do contend which should be thine or his. Silence'd with that, viewing o'er the rest o' the self-same day,
he finds thee in the stout Norweyan ranks, thing afar'd of what thyself didst make, range images of death. As thick as hail one post with post, and every one did bear praises in his kingdom's great defence, and pour'd them down before him.

ANG. We are sent
To give thee from our royal master thanks;
Only to herald thee into his sight,
Not pay thee.

ROSS. And for an earnest of a greater honour,
He bade me, from him, call thee Thane of Cawdor:
In which addition, hail, most worthy thine!
For it is thine.

BAN. What! can the devil speak true?
MACB. The Thane of Cawdor lives: why do you dress me
In borrow'd robes?

ANG. Who was the thane lives yet;
But under heavy judgment bears that life
Which he deserves to lose. Whether he was
With those of Norway, or did line the rebel
With hidden help and vantage, or that with both
He labour'd in his country's wreck, I know not;
But treasons capital, confess'd and prov'd,
Have overthrown him.

MACB. ASIDE. Glamis, and Thane of Cawdor:
The greatest is behind. To ROSS and ANGUS.
Thanks for your pains.

To BANQUO. Do you not hope your children shall be kings,
When those that gave the Thane of Cawdor to Promis'd no less to them?

BAN. That, trusted home,
Might yet enkindle you unto the crown,
Besides the Thane of Cawdor. But 'tis strange:
And oftentimes, to win us to our harm,
The instruments of darkness tell us truths,
Win us with honest trifles, to betray's
In deepest consequence.

Cousins, a word, I pray you.

MACB. ASIDE. Two truths are told,
As happy prologues to the swelling act
Of the imperial theme. I thank you, gentlemen.

ASIDE. This supernatural soliciting
Cannot be ill, cannot be good; if ill,
Why hath it given me earnest of success,

Commencings in a truth! I am Thane of Cawdor:
If good, why do I yield to that suggestion
Whose horrid image doth unfix my hair
And make my seated heart knock at my ribs,
Against the use of nature? Present fears
Are less than horrible imaginings;
My thought, whose murder yet is but fantastical,
Shakes so my single state of man that function
Is smother'd in surmise, and nothing is
But what is not.

BAN. Look, how our partner's rapt.

MACB. ASIDE. If chance will have me king, why, chance may crown me,
Without my stir.

BAN. New honours come upon him,
Like our strange looks, allmore to our mould
But with the aid of use.

MACB. ASIDE. Come what come may,
Time and the hour runs through the roughest day.

BAN. Worthy Macbeth, we stay upon your leisure.

MACB. Give me your favour: my dull brain was wrought
With things forgotten. Kind gentlemen, your pains
Are register'd where every day I turn
The leaf to read them. Let us toward the king.

Aside to Banquo. Think upon what hath chanc'd; and at more time,
The interim having weigh'd it, let us speak
Our free hearts each to other.
Ban. Very gladly.

Macb. Till then, enough. Come, friends.

Exeunt.

Scene IV.—Forres. A Room in the Palace.
Flourish. Enter Duncan, Malcolm, Donal-
 Bain, Lennox, and Attendants.

Dun. Is execution done on Cawdor? Are not
Those in commission yet return'd?
Mal. My liege,
They are not yet come back; but I have spoke
With one that saw him die; who did report
That very frankly he confess'd his treasons,
Implo'rd his highness' pardon and set forth
A deep repentance. Nothing in his life
Became him like the leaving it; he died
As one that had been studied in his death
To throw away the dearest thing he ow'd;
As 'twere a careless trifle.

Dun. There's no art
To find the mind's construction in the face:
He was a gentleman on whom I built
An absolute trust.

Enter Macbeth, Banquo, Ross, and Angus.

O worthiest cousin! The sin of my ingratitude even now
Was heavy on me. Thou art so far before
That swiftest wing of recompense is slow
To overtake thee; would thou hast less deserv'd,
That the proportion both of thanks and payment
Might have been mine! only I have left to say,
More is thy due than more than all can pay.

Macb. The service and the loyalty I owe,
In doing it, pays itself. Your highness' part
Is to receive our duties; and our duties
Are to your throne and state, children and servants;
Which do but what they should, by doing every thing
Safe toward your love and honour.

Dun. Welcome hither:
I have begun to plant thee, and will labour
To make thee full of growing. Noble Banquo,
That hast no less deserv'd, nor must be known
No less to have done so, let me inflod thee;
And hold thee to my heart.
Ban. There if I grow,
The harvest is your own.

Dun. My plenteous joys,
Wanton in fulness, seek to hide themselves
In drops of sorrow. Sons, kinsmen, thanes,
And you whose places are the nearest, know
We will establish our estate upon
Our eldest, Malcolm, whom we name hereafter
The Prince of Cumberland; which honour must Not unaccompanied invest him only,
But signs of nobleness, like stars, shall shine
On all deservers. From hence to Inverness,
And bind us further to you.

Macb. The rest is labour, which is not
For you:
I'll be myself the harbinger, and make joy!
The hearing of your wife with your approach
So humbly take my leave.

Dun. My worthy Caw-

Macb. Aside. The Prince of Cumberland
That is a step
On which I must fall down, or else o'erleap,
For in my way it lies. Stars, hide your fires
Let not light see my black and deep desires
The eye wink at the hand; yet let that be
Which the eye fears, when it is done, to see.

Dun. True, worthy Banquo; he is full valiant
And in his commendations I am fed;
It is a banquet to me. Let's after him,
Whose care is gone before to bid us welcome
It is a peerless kinsman. Flourish. Exe-

Scene V.—Inverness. Macbeth's Castle.

Enter Lady Macbeth, reading a letter.

They met me in the day of success; and I learned by the perfectest report, they have more, that no mortal knowledge. When I burned
Desire to question them further, they made th'

Enter Malcolm, Banquo, Thane of Cawdor, Meet, these weird sisters saluted and referred me to the coming on of time,

'Mall, king that shall be' This have I thought to deliver thee, my dearest partner of greatness, that thou mightest not lose the dues of re-ing, by being ignorant of what greatness is mixed thee. Lay it to thy heart, and farewell.

Glamis, thou art, and Cawdor; and shalt be What thou art promis'd. Yet do I fear,

It is too full o' the milk of human kindness
To catch the nearest way; thou wouldst

Art not without ambition, but without
The illness should attend it; what thou wouldst

Highly, that would'st thou holly; would'st not p
false,
And yet would'st wrongly win; thou'dst ha great Glamis,

Which that cries 'Thus thou must do, if thou have it';
And that which rather thou dost fear to do
Than wishest should be undone. Hie til

Bither, That I may pour my spirits in thine ear,
And chastise with the valour of my tongue
All that impedes thee from the golden round Which fate and metaphysical aid doth seem to have thee crown'd withal.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. What is your tidings?

Lady M. Thou 'rt mad to say
Is not thy master with him? who, were 't so,
Would have inform'd for preparation.
MACBETH.

fess. So please you, it is true: our thane is coming;
of my fellows had the speed of him,
o, almost dead for breath, had scarcely more in would make up his message.
lady M. Give him tending; brings great news.
Exit Messenger.
The raven himself is hoarse
it croaks the fatal entrance of Duncan der my battlements. Come, you spirits:
it tend on mortal thoughts! unsex me here,
I fill me from the crown to the toe top full of direst cruelty; make thick my blood,
p up the access and passage to remorse,
it no complusions of visitings of nature like my fell purpose, nor keep peace between effect and it! Come to my woman's breasts, d take my milk for gall, you murdering ministers, erever in your sightless substances u wait on nature's mischief! Come, thick night,
d pall thee in the dunnest smoke of hell,
at my keen knife see not the wound it makes,
heaven peep through the blanket of the dark,
cry 'Hold, hold!'

Enter Macbeth.
Great Glamis! worthy Cawdor!
cater than both, by the all-hail hereafter!
y letters have transported me beyond is ignorant present, and I feel now a future in the instant.
Macb. My dearest love,
Bun. comes here to-night.
Ban. And when goes hence?
Ban. To-morrow, as he purports.
M. O! never
all sun that may sorrow.
Ban. air face, my thane, is as a book where men
y read strange matters. To beguile the time, like the time; bear welcome in your eye, hand, your tongue: look like the innocent flower,
t be the serpent under 't. He that's coming must be provided for; and you shall put his night's great business into my dispatch;
hich shall to all our nights and days to come we solely sovereign sway and masterdom.
Macb. We will speak further.
Ban. Only look up clear;
alter favour ever is to fear.
save all the rest to me.
Exeunt.

Scene VI.—The Same. Before the Castle.

Outboys and torches. Enter Duncan, Malcolm, Donalbain, Banquo, Lennox, Macduff, Ross, Angus, and Attendants.

Dun. This castle hath a pleasant seat; the air imbly and sweetly recommends itself into our gentle senses.
Ban. This guest of summer, he temple-haunting marlet, does approve y his lov'd mansionry that the heaven's breath mells wooningly here: no jutty, frieze, attress, nor coign of vantage, but this bird mades his pendent bed and procreant cradle:

Where they most breed and haunt, I have obser'd.
The air is delicate.

Enter Lady Macbeth.

Dun. See, see, our honour'd hostess!
The love that follows us sometime is our trouble,
Which still we thank as love. Herein I teach you
How you shall bid God 'ild us for your pains.
And thank us for your trouble.

Lady M. All our service,
In every point twice done, and then done double,
Were poor and single business, to contend
Against those honours deep and broad, wherewith
Your majesty loads our house: for those of old,
And the late dignities heap'd up to them,
We rest your hermits.

Dun. Where's the Thane of Cawdor?
We cours'd him at the heels, and had a purpose
To be his purveyor; but he rides well,
And his great love, sharp as his spur, hath holp
To his home before us. Fair and noble hostess,
We are your guest to-night.

Lady M. Your servants ever Have theirs, themselves, and what is theirs, in compt,
To make their audit at your highness' pleasure,
Still to return your own.

Dun. Give me your hand;
Conduct me to mine host: we love him highly,
And shall continue our graces towards him.
By your leave, hostess.
Exeunt.

Scene VII.—The Same. A Room in the Castle.

Hauteboys and torches. Enter, and pass over the stage, a Sever, and divers Servants with dishes and service. Then enter Macbeth.

Macb. If it were done when 'tis done, then
'twere well
It were done quickly; if the assassination
Could trampl up the consequence, and catch
With his sucoase success; that but this blow
Might be the be-all and the end-all here,
But here, upon this bank and shool of time,
We'd jump the life to come. But in these cases
We still have judgment here; that we but teach
Bloody instructions, which, being taught, return
To plague the inventor; this even-handed justice
Commends the ingredients of our poison'd chalice
To our own lips. He's here in double trust:
First, as I am his kinsman and his subject,
Strong both against the deed; then, as his host,
Who should against his murderer shut the door,
Not bear the knife myself. Besides, this Duncan Hath borne his faculties so meek, hath been
So clear in his great office, that his virtues
Will plead like angels trumpet-tongued against
The deep damnation of his taking-off;
And pity, like a naked new-born babe,
Striding the blast, or heaven's cherubin, hors'd
Upon the sightless couriers of the air,
Shall blow the horrid deed in every eye,
That tears shall drown the wind. I have no spur
To prick the sides of my intent, but only Vaulting ambition, which o'erleaps itself
And falls on the other—
Enter Lady Macbeth.

How now! what news?

Lady M. He has almost supp'd: why have you left the chamber?

Macb. Hath he ask'd for me?

Lady M. Know you not he has?

Macb. We will proceed no further in this business:

He hath honour'd me of late; and I have bought Golden opinions from all sorts of people, Which would be worn now in their newest gloss, Not cast aside so soon.

Lady M. Was the hope drunk

Wherein you dress'd yourself? hath it slept since,

And wakes it now, to look so green and pale
At what it did so freely? From this time Such I account thy love. Art thou afraid To be the same in thine own act and valour 40 As thou art in desire? Would'st thou have that Which thou esteem'st the ornament of life, And live a coward in thine own esteem, Letting 'tis dare not' wait upon 'tis would,' Like the poor cat o' the adage?

Macb. Prithee, peace. I dare do all that may become a man;

Who dares do more is none.

Lady M. What beast was't then

That made you break this enterprise to me?

When you durst do it then you were a man;

And, to be more than what you were, you would Be so much more the man. Nor time ha'st place 51 Did then adhere, and yet you would make both:

They have made themselves, and that their fitness now Does unmake you. I have given suck, and know How tender 'tis to love the babe that milks me: I would, while it was smiling in my face, Have pluck'd my nipple from his boneless gums, And dash'd the brains out, had I so sworn as you Have done to this.

Macb. If we should fail,—

Lady M. We fail.

But screw your courage to the sticking-place, 60 And we'll not fail. When Duncan is asleep, Whereof the rather shall his day's hard journey Soundly invite him, his two chamberlains Will I with wine and wassail so convince That memory, the warder of the brain, Shall be a fume, and the receipt of reason A limbeck only; when in swinish sleep Their drenched natures lie as in a death, What cannot you and I perform upon The unguarded Duncan? what not put upon 70 His spongy officers, who shall bear the guilt Of our great quell?

Macb. Bring forth men-children only;

For thy undaunted mettle should compose Nothing but males. Will it not be receiv'd, When we have mark'd with blood those sleepy two Of his own chamber and us'd their very daggers, That they have done't!

Lady M. Who dares receive it other,

As we shall make our griefs and clamour roar Upon his death?

Macb. I am settled, and bend up Each corporal agent to this terrible feat.

Away, and mock the time with fairest show False face must hide what the false heart doth know.

ACT II.

Scene I.—Inverness. Court within the Castle

Enter Banquo, and Fleance bearing a torch before him.

Ban. How goes the night, boy?

Fle. The moon is down; I have not heard clock.

Ban. And she goes down at twelve.

Fle. I take 't, 'tis later.

Ban. Hold, take my sword. There's 1 bandry in heaven;

Their candles are all out. Take thee that to

A heavy summons lies like lead upon me, And yet I would not sleep: merciful powers

Restrain in me, the cursed thoughts that nature

Gives way to in repose.

Enter Macbeth, and a Servant with a torch;

Give me my sword Who's there?

Macb. A friend.

Ban. What, sir! not yet at rest? The king a-bed:

He hath been in unusual pleasure, and Sent forth great largess to your offices. This diamond he gives your wife withal, By the name of most kind hostesses; and shut In measureless content.

Macb. Being unprepar'd, Our will became the servant to defect, Which else should free have wrought.

Ban. All's well. I dreamt last night of the three weird sisters To you they have show'd some truth.

Macb. I think not of the Yet, when we can entertain an hour to serve, We would spend it in some words upon't business, If you would grant the time.

Ban. At your kind'st leis

Macb. If you shall cleave to my conse when 'tis,

It shall make honour for you.

Ban. So I lose not In seeking to augment it, but still keep My bosom franchis'd and allegiance clear, I shall be counsel'd.

Macb. Good repose the while

Ban. Thanks, sir: the like to you.

Exeunt Banquo and Fleance.

Macb. Go bid thy mistress, when my drink is ready She strike upon the bell. Get thee to bed. Exit Servant

Is this a dagger which I see before me, The handle toward my hand? Come, let me clutch thee:

I have thee not, and yet I see thee still. Art thou not, fatal vision, sensible To feeling as to sight? or art thou but A dagger of the mind, a false creation, Proceeding from the heat-oppressed brain? I see thee yet, in form as palpable Scene II. — The Same.

Enter Lady Macbeth.

Lady M. That which hath made them drunk hath made me bold,
But hath quench'd them hath given me fire.
Hark! Peace! was the owl that shriek'd, the fatal bann,\nWhich gives the stern'st good-night. He is about it:

Macb. Within. Who's there? what, ho! Lady M. Alack! I am afraid they have awak'd,\nAnd 'tis not done; the attempt and not the deed\nConfounds us. Hark! I laid their daggers ready;\nE could not miss 'em. Had he not resembled\nMy father as he slept I had done 't. My husband!

Enter Macbeth.

Macb. I have done the deed. Didst thou not hear a noise?

Lady M. I heard the owl scream and the crickets cry,\nDid not you speak?

Macb. When?

Lady M. Now.

Macb. Ay.

Macb. Hark!

Who lies i' the second chamber?

Lady M. Donalbain.

Macb. Looking on his hands. This is a sorry sight.

Lady M. A foolish thought to say a sorry sight.

Macb. There's one did laugh in's sleep, and one cried 'Murder!'

That they did wake each other: I stood and heard them;
But they did say their prayers, and address'd them.

Again to sleep.

Lady M. There are two lodg'd together.

Macb. One cried 'God bless us!' and 'Amen,' the other;
As they had seen me with these hangman's hands.
Listening their fear, I could not say 'Amen'
When they did say 'God bless us!'

Lady M. Consider it not so deeply.

Macb. But wherefore could not I pronounce 'Amen'?
I had most need of blessing, and 'Amen'

Stuck in my throat.

Lady M. These deeds must not be thought
After these ways; so, it will make us mad.

Macb. Methought I heard a voice cry 'Sleep no more!'

Macbeth does murder sleep, the innocent sleep,
Sleep that knits up the ravell'd sleeve of care,
The death of each day's life, sore labour's bath,
Balm of hurt minds, great nature's second course,
Chief nourisher in life's feast,—

Lady M. What do you mean?

Macb. Still it cried 'Sleep no more!' to all the house:

'Glamis hath murder'd sleep, and therefore Cawdor

Shall sleep no more, Macbeth shall sleep no more!'

Lady M. Who was it that thus cried? Why, worthy thane,
You do unbend your noble strength to think
So brain sickly of things. Go get some water,
And wash this filthy witness from your hand.
Why did you bring these daggers from the place?
They must lie there: go carry them, and smear
The sleepy grooms with blood.

Macb. I'll go no more:
I am afraid to think what I have done;
Look on't again I dare not.

Lady M. Infirm of purpose!
Give me the daggers. The sleeping and the dead
Are but as pictures; 'tis the eye of childhood
That fears a painted devil. If he do bleed,
I'll gild the faces of the grooms withal;
For it must seem their guilt.

Exit. Knocking within.

Whence is that knocking? How is 't with me, when every noise appalls me?
What hands are here? Ha! they pluck out
Mine eyes.
Will all great Neptune's ocean wash this blood Clean from my hand? No, this my hand will

The multitudinous seas incarne, Making the green one red.

Re-enter Lady Macbeth.

Lady M. My hands are of your colour, but I shame
To wear a heart so white. Knocking within
I hear a knocking
At the south entry; retire we to our chambers;
A little water cleans us of this deed;
How easy is it then! Your constancy Hath left you unattended. Knocking within.

Hark! more knocking.
Macb. To know my deed 'twere best not know myself.

Knocking within.

Macb. I have almost slipp'd the hour.

Macb. I'll bring you to him.

Macb. I know this is a joyful thing to ye,

But yet 'tis one.

Macb. The labour we delight in physics pays.

This is the door.

Macb. I'll make so bold to call,

For 'tis my limited service.

Len. Goes the king hence to-day?

Macb. He does: he did appoint

Len. The night has been unquiet: where we

Our chimneys were blown down; and, as they

Lamentings heard 'tis air: strange sound of death,

And prophesying with accents terrible

Of dire combustion and corrusc'd events

New hatch'd to the woeful time. The obstin bird

Clamour'd the livelong night: some say the ear

Was feverous and did shake.

Macb. 'Twas a rough night.

Len. My young remembrance cannot parall

A fellow to it.

Re-enter Macbeth.

Macb. O horror! horror! horror! Tongue

nor heart

Cannot conceive nor name thee!

Macb. Len. What's the matter?

Macb. Confusion now hath made his maste piece!

Most sacrilegious murder hath broke ope

The Lord's anointed temple, and stole thence

The life o' the building.

Macb. What is 'tou say? the life Len. Mean you his majesty?

Macb. Approach the chamber, and destro your sight

With a new Gorgon: do not bid me speak; See, and then speak yourselves.

Execut Macbeth and Lennox. Macd. Awake! awake!

Ring the alarum-bell. Murder and treason! Banquo and Donalbain! Malcolm! awake! shake off this downy sleep, death's counterfei

And look on death itself! up, up, and see

The great doom's image! Malcolm! Banqu

As from your graves rise up, and walk like sprit" To countenance this horror! Ring the bell.

Bell ring

Enter Lady Macbeth.

Lady Mac. What's the business,

That such a hideous trumpet calls to parley The sleepers of the house? speak, speak! Macb. O gentle lady

'Tis not for you to hear what I can speak;
The repetition in a woman's ear

Would murder as it fell.

Enter Banquo. O Banquo! Banqu

Our royal master's murder'd!

Lady Mac. Woe, alas, what?

Ban. Too cruel any where.

Dear Duff, I prithee, contradict thyself, And say it is not so.
MACBETH.

Re-enter MACBETH and LENNOX.

Macb. Had I but died an hour before this chance 115 I'ld a blessed time; for, from this instant, e's nothing serious in mortality,
3 but toys; renown and grace is dead, wine of life is drawn, and the mere lees 4 this vault to brag of.

Enter MALCOLM and DONALBAIN.

M. What is amiss?

Len. You are, and do not know't: spring, the head, the fountain of your blood
5 opp'd; the very source of it is stopp'd.

Macb. Your royal father's murder'd.

Al. O! by whom?

M. Those of his chamber, as it seem'd, had done't:
6 their hands and faces were all bag'd with blood:
7 were their daggers, which unwip'd we found in their pillows:
8 y'ard'd, and were distracted; no man's life to be trusted with them.

Al. O! yet I do repent of my fury, I did kill them.

Macb. Wherefore did you so?

Len. Who can be wise, amaz'd, temperate and furious,
9 al and neutral, in a moment? No man:
10 expedition of my violent love
11 run the pauser, reason. Here lay Duncan,
12 silver skin lac'd with his golden blood;
13 his gash'd stabs look'd like a breach in nature
14 ruin's wasteful entrance: there, the murderers
15'd in the colours of their trade, their daggers
16 mannerly break'd with gore: who could refrain,
17 had a heart to love, and in that heart
18 rage to make love's known?

Lady M. Help me hence, ho!

Macb. Look to the lady.

Al. Aside to DONALBAIN. Why do we hold our tongues,
19 at most may claim this argument for ours?

Don. Aside to MALCOLM. What should be spoken re, where our fate, hid in an auger-hole, y rush and seize us? Let's away: our tears 20 not yet brew'd.

Al. Aside to DONALBAIN. Nor our strong sorrow
21 on the foot of motion.

Ban. Look to the lady:

Lady MACBETH is carried out.

d when we have our naked frailties hid,
at suffer in exposure, let us meet,
d question this most bloody piece of work,
22 know it further. Fears and scruples shake us:
23 the great hand of God I stand, and thence 24 the undivulg'd pretence I fight
25 treasonous malice.

Macb. And so do I.

All. So all.

Macb. Let's briefly put on manly readiness,

And meet I the hall together.

All. Well contented.

Exeunt all but MALCOLM and DONALBAIN.

Mal. What will you do? Let's not consort with them:

To show an unfelt sorrow is an office
Which the false man does easy. I'll to England.

Don. To Ireland, I; our separated fortune Shall keep us both the safer: where we are,
There's daggers in men's smiles: the near in blood,
The nearer bloody.

Mal. This murderous shaft that's shot
Hath not yet lighted, and our safest way
Is to avoid the aim: therefore, to horse;
And let us not be dainty of leave-taking,
But shift away: there's warrant in that theft
Which steals itself when there's no mercy left.

Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Without the Castle.

Enter ROSS and an old man.

Old Man. Threescore and ten I can remember
1 well;
2 Within the volume of which time I have seen
3 Hours dreadful and things strange, but this sore night
Hath trifled former knowings.

Ross. Ah! good father, Thou seest, the heavens, as troubled with man's act,

Threaten his bloody stage: by the clock 'tis day,
And yet dark night strangles the travelling lamp.
Is 't night's predominance, or the day's shame,
That darkness does the face of earth entomb,
When living light should kiss it?

Old Man. 'Tis unnatural,
Even like the deed that's done. On Tuesday last,
11 A falcon, towering in her pride of place,

Was by a mousing owl hawk'd at and kill'd.
Ross. And Duncan's horses, a thing most strange and certain,
Beauteous and swift, the minions of their race,
Turn'd wild in nature, broke their stalls, flung out,
Contending 'gainst obedience, as they would make War with mankind.

Old Man. 'Tis said they eat each other.
Ross. They did so; to the amazement of mine eyes,
That look'd upon't. Here comes the good Macduff.

Enter MACDUFF.

How goes the world, sir, now?

Macd. Why, see you not?
Ross. Is't known who did this more than bloody deed?
Macd. Those that Macbeth hath slain.
Ross. Alas the day!
What good could they pretend?
Macd. They were suborn'd.
Malcolm and Donalbain, the king's two sons,
Are stol'n away and fied, which puts upon them
Suspicion of the deed.

Ross. 'Gainst nature still!
Thriftless ambition, that will ravin up
Thine own life's means! Then 'tis most like
The sovereignty will fall upon Macbeth.

Mac. He is already nam'd, and gone to Scone
To be invested.

Ross. Where is Duncan's body?

Mac. Carried to Colmekill,
The sacred storehouse of his predecessors
And guardian of their bones.

Ross. Will you to Scone?

Mac. No, cousin, I'll to Fife.

Ross. Well, I will thither.

Mac. Well, may you see things well done there: adieu!
Lest our old robes sit easier than our new!

Ross. Farewell, father.

Old Man. God's benison go with you; and with those

That would make good of bad, and friends of foes!

_Exit.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Forres. _A Room in the Palace._

_Banquet sounded._ Enter Macbeth, as king; Lady Macbeth, as queen; Lennox, Ross, Lords, Ladies, and Attendants.

_Mac._ Here's our chief guest.

Lady M. If he had been forgotten
It had been as a gap in our great feast,
And all-thing unbecoming.

_Mac._ To-night we hold a solemn supper, sir,
And I'll request your presence.

_Ban._ Let your highness
Command upon me; to the which my duties
Are with a most indissoluble tie
For ever knit.

_Mac._ Ride you this afternoon?

_Ban._ Ay, my good lord.

_Mac._ We should have else desire'd your good advice,
Which still hath been both grave and prosperous,
In this day's council; but we'll take to-morrow.
Is 't far you ride?

_Ban._ As far, my lord, as will fill up the time
'Twixt this and supper; go not my horse the better,
I must become a borrower of the night
For a dark hour or twain.

_Mac._ Fail not our feast.

_Ban._ My lord, I will not.

_Mac._ We hear our bloody cousins are bestow'd
In England and in Ireland, not confessing
Their cruel paricide, filling their hearers
With strange invention; but of that to-morrow,
When therewithal we shall have cause of state

Crawling us jointly. He yeo to horse; adieu, Till you return at night. Goes Fleance with

_Ban._ Ay, my good lord: our time does upon's.

_Mac._ I wish your horses swift and sure
And so I do commend you to their backs.
Farewell.

_Exit Ban._

Let every man be master of his time
Till seven at night, to make society
The sweeter welcome; we will keep ourself
Till supper-time alone; while then, God
With you!

_Exit all but Macbeth and an Attendant._

_Sirrah, a word with you._ Attend those men
Our pleasure?

_Att._ They are, my lord, without the pale gate.

_Mac._ Bring them before us.

_Exit Att._ To be thus is nothing.
But to be safely thus. Our fears in Banquo
Stick deep, and in his royalty of nature
Reigns that which would be feared: 'tis much dares,
And, to that dauntless temper of his mind,
He hath a wisdom that doth guide his value
To act in safety. There is none but he Whose being I do fear; and under him
My genius is rebuk'd, as it is said
Mark Antony's was by Caesar. He did the sister
When first they put the name of king upon me,
And made them speak to him; then, prophet-like,
They hail'd him father to a line of kings.
Upon my head they plac'd a fruitless crown,
And put a barren sceptre in my gripe,
Thence to be wrench'd with an unlineal hand.
No son of mine succeeding. If 't be so,
For Banquo's issue have I fil'd my mind;
For them the gracious Duncan have I murder'd
Put rancours in the vessel of my peace
Only for them; and mine eternal jewel
Given to the common enemy of man,
To make them kings, the seed of Banquo kin
Rather than so, come fate into the list,
And champion me to the utterance! Wh where?

_Re-enter Attendant, with two Murderers._

Now go to the door, and stay there till we come.

_Exit Attendant._

Was it not yesterday we spoke together?

_First Mur._ It was; so please your highness.

_Mac._ Well then, what have you consider'd of my speeches? Know
That it was he in the times past which held ye
So under fortune, which you thought had been
Our innocent self. This I made good to you
In our last conference, pass'd in probation with
you,
How you were borne in hand, how cross'd, with instruments,
Who wrought with them, and all things that might
To half a soul and to a notion craz'd Say 'Thus did Banquo,'

_First Mur._ You made it known to _Mac._ I did so; and went further, which is in Our point of second meeting. Do you find
Your patience so predominant in your nature
That you can let this go? Are you so gosp
Scene I.—The Castle. youth's grave.

Enter MACBETH, and housekeeper.

MACH. Beggar'd yours for ever?

First MUR. We are men, my liege.

MACB. Ay, in the catalogue ye go for men; hounds and greyhounds, mongrels, spaniels, curs, ughs, water-rugs, and demi-wolves, are clept by the name of dogs: the vali'd file distinguishes the swift, the slow, the subtle, the housekeeper, the hunter, every one according to the gift which bounteous nature hath in him clos'd; whereby he does receive particular addition, from the bill it writes them all alike: and so of men.

MACB. If you have a station in the file, 'tis the worst rank of manhood, say it; I will put that business in your bosoms, these execution takes your enemy off, applies you to the heart and love of us, to wear our health but sickly in his life, since in his death were perfect.

Second MUR. I am one, my liege, from the vile blows and buffets of the world, so incens'd that I am reckless what o to spite the world.

First MUR. And I another weary with disasters, tagg'd with fortune, at I would set my life on any chance, mend it or be rid on't.

MACB. Both of you ow Banquo was your enemy.

Second MUR. True, my lord. MACB. So is he mine; and in such bloody distance at every minute of his being thrusts against my near'st of life: and though I could 'th bare-fac'd power sweep him from my sight, did bid my will avouch it, yet I must not, certain friends that are both his and mine, those loves I may not drop, but wail his fall so I myself struck down; and thence it is to I to your assistance do make love, skimming the business from the common eye or sundry weighty reasons.

Second MUR. We shall, my lord, conform what you command us.

First MUR. Though our lives—MACB. Your spirits shine through you. Within this hour at most will advise you where to plant yourselves, squaint you with the perfect spy of the time, he moment on 't; for 't must be done tonight, something from the palace; always thought that I require a clearness: and with him, leave no rubs nor botches in the work, launce his son, that keeps him company, those absence is no less material to me than is his father's, must embrace the fate that dark hour. Resolve yourselves apart; 'll come to you anon.

Second MUR. We are resolv'd, my lord. MACB. I'll call upon you straight: abide within.

Exit Murderers.

It is concluded: Banquo, thy soul's flight, if it find heaven, must find it out to-night.

Exit.

Scene II.—The Same. Another Room in the Palace.

Enter Lady MACBETH and a Servant.

Lady M. Is Banquo gone from court?

Serv. Ay, madam, but returns again to-night.

Lady M. Say to the king, I would attend his leisure

For a few words.

Serv. Madam, I will.

Exit.

Lady M. Nought's had, all's spent, Where our desire is got without content: 'Ts safer to be that which we destroy Than by destruction dwell in doubtful joy.

Enter MACBETH.

How now, my lord! why do you keep alone, Of sorriest fancies your companions making, Using those thoughts which should indeed have died

With them they think on? Things without all remedy Should be without regard: what's done is done.

MACB. We have scotch'd the snake, not kill'd it:

She'll close and be herself, whilst our poor malice Remains in danger of her former tooth. But let the frame of things disjoint, both the worlds suffer, Ere we will eat our meal in fear, and sleep

In the affliction of these terrible dreams That shake us nightly. Better be with the dead, Whom we, to gain our peace, have sent to peace, Than on the torture of the mind to lie

In restless ecstacy. Duncan is in his grave; After life's fitful fever he sleeps well;

Treason has done his worst: nor steel, nor poison,

Malice domestic, foreign levy, nothing Can touch him further!

Lady M. Come on;

Gentle my lord, sleek o'er your rugged looks;

Be bright and jovial among your guests to-night.

MACB. So shall I, love; and so, I pray, be you.

Let your remembrance apply to Banquo;

Present him eminence, both with eye and tongue: Unsafe the while, that we Must have our honours in these flattering streams, And make our faces wizards to our hearts, Disguising what they are.

Lady M. You must leave this.

MACB. O! full of scorpions is my mind, dear wife;

Thou know'st that Banquo and his Fleance lives.

Lady M. But in them nature's copy's not eternal.

MACB. There's comfort yet; they are assailable; Then be thou jocund. Ere the bat hath flown His cloister'd flight, ere to black Hecate's summons

The shard-borne beetle with his drowsy hums Hath rung night's yawning peal, there shall be done

A deed of dreadful note.

Lady M. What's to be done?

MACB. Be innocent of the knowledge, dearest chuck,

Till thou applaud the deed. Come, seeing night,
Scarf up the tender eye of pitiful day,
And with thy bloody and invisible hand
Cancel and tear to pieces that great bond Which keeps me pale! Light thickens, and the crow
Makes wing to the rocky wood;
Good things of day begin to drop and drowse,
Whiles night's black agents to their preys do rousse.
Thou marvell'st at my words: but hold thee still;
Things bad begun make strong themselves by ill.
So, prithee, go with me.

Exit
Approaching
Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. A Park, with a Road leading to the Palace.

Enter three Murderers.

First Mur. But who did bid thee join with us?
Third Mur. Macbeth.
Second Mur. He needs not our mistrust, since he delivers
Our offices and what we have to do
To the direction just.

First Mur. Then stand with us.
The west yet glimmers with some streaks of day:
Now spurs the lated traveller apace
To gain the timely inn; and near approaches
The subject of our watch.

Third Mur. Hark! I hear horses.
Ban. Within. Give us a light there, ho!

Second Mur. Then it is he: the rest
That are within the note of expectation
Already are 't the court.

First Mur. His horses go about.
Third Mur. Almost a mile; but he does usually,
So all men do, from hence to the palace gate
Make it their walk.

Second Mur. A light, a light!

Enter BANQUO, and FLEANCE with a torch.

Third Mur. 'Tis he.
First Mur. Stand to't.
Ban. It will be rain to-night.

First Mur. Let it come down.

They set upon BANQUO.

Ban. O, treachery! Fly, good Fleance, fly,
Fly, fly, fly!
Thou may'st revenge. O slave!
Dies. Fleance escapes.

Third Mur. Who did strike out the light?
First Mur. Was't not the way?
Third Mur. There's but one down; the son is fled.
Second Mur. We have lost
Best half of our affair.

First Mur. Well, let's away, and say how much is done.

Exit.

SCENE IV.—The Same. A Room of State in the Palace.

A banquet prepared. Enter MACBETH, Lady
MACBETH, ROSS, LENNOX, Lords, and Attendants.

Macb. You know your own degrees; sit down:
at first and last.
The hearty welcome.

Lords. Thanks to your majesty.
Macb. Ourself will mingle with society
And play the humble host.
Our hostess keeps her state, but in best time
We will require her welcome.

Lady M. Pronounce it for me, sir, to all
friends;
For my heart speaks they are welcome.

Enter First Murderer, to the door.

Mab. See, they encounter thee with their hearts' thanks.
Both sides are even: here I'll sit i' the midst
Be large in mirth; anon we'll drink a mea:
The table round.

Approaching the door.

There's blood upon thy face.

Mur. 'Tis Banquo's then.
Mab. 'Tis better thee without than he with
Is he dispatch'd?

Mur. My lord, his throat is cut; that I for him.

Mab. Thou art the best o' the cut-throats yet he's good.
That did the like for Fleance: if thou didst
Thou art the nonpareil.

Mur. Most royal sir,
Fleance is 'scap'd.

Mab. Then comes my fit again: I had o'
been perfect;
Whole as the marble, founded as the rock,
As broad and general as the casing air:
But now I am cabin'd, cribb'd, confin'd, bound
To saucy doubts and fears. But Banquo's safe Mur. Ay, my good lord; safe in a ditch bides,
With twenty trench'd gashes on his head;
The least a death to nature.

Mab. Thanks for the
There the groan serpent lies: the worm that fled
Hath nature that in time will venom breed,
No teeth for the present. Get thee gone; to morrow
We'll hear ourselves again.

Exit Murder. Lady M. My royal lord,
You do not give the cheer: the feast is sold
That is not often vouch'd, while 'tis a-making.
'Tis given with welcome: to feed were best
home;
From thence, the sauce to meat is ceremony;
Meeting were bare without it.

Mab. Sweet remembrance
Now good digestion wait on appetite,
And health on both!

Len. May't please your highness
The Ghost of BANQUO enters, and sits in MACBETH's place.

Mab. Here had we now our country's hono roof'd,
Were the grac'd person of our Banque presen
Who may I rather challenge for unkindness
Than pity for mischance!

Rss. His absence, sir,
Lay's the blame upon his promise. Please't yo highness
To grace us with your royal company.
Mab. The table's full.

Len. Here is a place reserv'd, sir.

Mab. Where?
Len. Here, my good lord. What is't that moves your highness?
Macb. Which of you have done this?

\textit{ords.} What, my good lord?

Macb. Thou canst not say I did it: never shake \textit{a} gory locks at me.

\textit{oss.} Gentlemen, rise; his highness is not well.

\textit{ady M.} Sit, worthy friends: my lord is often thus,
I hath been from his youth: pray you, keep a seat;
fit is momentary: upon a thought will again be well. If much you note him
I shall offend him and extend his passion:
d and regard him not. Are you a man?

\textit{Macb.} Ay, and a bold one, that dare look on that ich might appal the devil.

\textit{ady M.} O proper stuff!
\textit{s} is the very painting of your fear;
\textit{s} is the air-drawn dagger which, you said,
I to Duncan. O! these flaws and starts, postors to true fear, would well become woman's story at a winter's fire, choriz'd by her grandam. Shame itself!
how do you make such faces? When all's done's
I look but on a stool.

\textit{Macb.} Pray thee, see there! behold! look! lo! how say you?
\textit{v} what care I? If thou canst nod, speak too.
charnel-houses and our graves must send \textit{a} see that we bury back, our monuments all be the maws of kites. \textit{Ghost vanishes.}

\textit{ady M.} What! quite unmann'd in folly?

\textit{Macb.} If I stand here, I saw him.

\textit{ady M.} Fie, for shame!

\textit{Macb.} Blood hath been shed ere now, i' the olden time,
\textit{a} human statute purg'd the gentle weak;
\textit{and} since too, murders have been perform'd terrible for the car: the time has been,
at, when the brains were out, the man would die, d there an end; but now they rise again, so thirty twenty mortal murders on their crowns, \textit{push} us from our stools: this is more strange \textit{an} such a murder is.

\textit{ady M.} My worthy lord, our noble friends do lack you.

\textit{Macb.} I do forget.
not muse at me, my most worthy friends;
save a strange instability, which is nothing those that know me. Come, love and health to all;
then, I'll sit down. Give me some wine; fill full;
drink to the general joy o' the whole table, \textit{d} to our dear friend Banquo, whom we miss;
could he were here! to all, and him, we thirst,
d to all.

\textit{Lord.} Our duties, and the pledge.

\textit{Re-enter Ghost.}

\textit{Macb.} Avanti! and quit my sight! Let the earth hide thee!
my bones are marrowless, thy blood is cold;
on last no speculatio in those eyes \textit{hich thou dost glare with.}

\textit{ady M.} Think of this, good peers, at as a thing of custom: 'tis no other;
\textit{ly} it spoils the power of the time.

\textit{Macb.} What man dare, I dare:
proach thou like the rugged Russian bear, he arm'd rhinoceros, or the Hyrcan tiger;
ake any shape but that, and my firm nerves

Shall never tremble: or be alive again,
And dare me to the desert with thy sword;
If trembling I inhabit then, protest me
The baby of a girl. Hence, horrible shadow!
Unreal mockery, hence!
\textit{Ghost vanishes.}

Why, so; being gone,
I am a man again. Pray you, sit still.

\textit{ady M.} You have displac'd the mirth, broke the good meeting,
With most admir'd disorder.

\textit{Macb.} Can such things be,
And overcome us like a summer's cloud, in Without our special wonder! You make me strange
Even to the disposition that I owe,
When now I think you can behold such sights,
And keep the natural ruby of your cheeks,
When mine is blanch'd with fear.

\textit{Ross.} What sights, my lord?

\textit{ady M.} I pray you, speak not; he grows worse and worse;
Question engagers him. At once, good night:
Stand not upon the order of your going,
But go at once.

\textit{Len.} Good night; and better health to Attend his majesty!

\textit{ady M.} A kind good night to all!

\textit{Exeunt Lords and Attendants.}

\textit{Macb.} It will have blood, they say; blood will have blood:
Stones have been known to move and trees to
speak;
Augurs and understood relations have
By magot-pies and choughs and rooks brought forth
The secret'st man of blood. What is the night?

\textit{ady M.} Almost at odds with morning, which is which.

\textit{Macb.} How say'st thou, that Macduff denies his person
At our great bidding?

\textit{ady M.} Did you send to him, sir?

\textit{Macb.} I hear it by the way; but I will send.
There's not a one of them but in his house in
I keep a servant's fee'd. I will to-morrow,
And betimes I will, to the weird sisters:
More shall they speak; for now I am bent to
know,
By the worst means, the worst. For mine own good
All causes shall give way: I am in blood
Stepp'd in so far, that, should I wade no more,
Returning were as tedious as go o'er.
Strange things I have in head that will to hand,
Which must be acted ere they may be scann'd.

\textit{ady M.} You lack the season of all natures,
sleep.

\textit{Macb.} Come, we'll sleep. My strange and self-abuse
Is the innate fear that wants hard use:
We are yet but young in deed.

\textit{Exeunt.}

\textbf{Scene V. — A Heath.}

\textbf{Thunder. Enter the three Witches, meeting}

\textbf{HECATE.}

\textbf{First Witch.} Why, how now, Hecate! you look angrily.

\textbf{Hec.} Have I not reason, beldams as you are,
Saucy and overbold! How did you dare
To trade and traffic with Macbeth;
In riddles and affairs of death;
And I, the mistress of your charms,
The close contriver of all harms,
Was never call’d to hear my part,
Or show the glory of our art?
And which is worse, all you have done
Hath been but for a wayward son,
Spiteful and wrathful; who, as others do,
Loves for his own ends, not for you.
But make amends now: get you gone,
And at the pit of Acheron
Meet me i’ the morning; thither he
Will come to know his destiny:
Your vessels and your spells provide,
Your charms and every thing beside.
I am for the air; this night I’ll spend Unto a dismal and a fatal end:
Great business must be wrought ere noon:
Upon the corner of the moon
There hangs a vaporous drop profound;
I’ll catch it ere it come to ground;
And that distil’d by magic sleights
Shall raise such artificial sprites
As by the strength of their illusion
Shall draw him on to his confusion:
He shall spurn fate, scorn death, and bear
His hopes' bower wisdom, grace, and fear;
And you all know security
Is mortals' chiefest enemy.

Music and a song within: 'Come away, come away, etc.'

Hark! I am call'd; my little spirit, see,
Sits in a foggy cloud, and stays for me.
Exit.

First Witch. Come, let's make haste; she'll soon be back again.

Exeunt.

Scene VI.—Forres. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Lennox and another Lord.

Len. My former speeches have but hit your thoughts,
Which can interpret further: only, I say,
Things have been strangely borne. The gracious
Duncan
Was pitied of Macbeth; marry, he was dead:
And the right-valiant Banquo walk'd too late;
Whom, you may say, if 't please you, Flicance
kill'd,
For Flecance fled: men must not walk too late.
Who cannot want the thought how monstrous
It was for Malcolm and for Donaldban
To kill their gracious father! damned fact!
How it did grieve Macbeth! did he not speak
In pious rage the two delinquents tear,
That were the slaves of drink and throttles of slop?
Was not that nobly done? Ay, and wisely too;
For 'twould have anger'd any heart alive
To hear the men deny 't. So that, I say,
He has borne all things well; and I do think
That had he Duncan's sons under his key,
As, an't please heaven, he shall not, they should find
What 'twere to kill a father; so should Flicance.
But, peace! for from broad words, and 'cause he fail'd
His presence at the tyrant's feast, I hear

Macduff lives in disgrace. Sir, can you tell
Where he bestows himself?

Lord. The son of Duncan
From whom this tyrant holds the due of birth
Lives in the English court, and is receiv'd
Of the most pious Edward with such grace
That the malevolence of fortune nothing
Takes from his high respect. Thither Macduf
Is gone to pray the holy king, upon his aid
To wake Northumberland and war-like Siwer.
That, by the help of these, with him above
To ratify the work, we may again
Give to our tables meat, to sleep our nights,
Free from our feasts and banquets bloody knife
Do faithful homage and receive free honours
All which we pine for now. And this report Hath so exasperate the king that he Prepares for some attempt of war.

Len. Sent he to Macduff?
Lord. He did: and with an absolute 'Sir, not
The cloudy messenger turns me his back,
And hums, as who should say, 'You'll rue the time
That clogs me with this answer.'

Len. And that well may Advise him to a caution to hold what distance
His wisdom can provide. Some holy angel
Fly to the court of England and unfold
His message ere he come, that a swift blessing
May soon return to this our suffering country
Under a hand accurs'd!

Lord. I'll send my prayers with him.

Exeunt.

Act IV.

Scene I.—A Cavern. In the middle, a boiling Cauldron.

Thunder. Enter the three Witches.

First Witch. Thrice the brinded cat ha' mew'd.
Second Witch. Thrice and once the hedge-p whin'd.
Third Witch. Harpier cries: 'Tis time, 't
time.

First Witch. Round about the cauldron go;
In the poison'd entrails throw.
Toad, that under cold stone
Days and nights has thirty-one
S welter'd venom sleeping got.
Boil thou first i' the charmed pot.
All. Double, double toil and trouble;
Fire burn and cauldron bubble.
Second Witch. Fillet of a fenny snake,
In the cauldron boil and bake;
Eye of newt, and toe of frog,
Wool of bat, and tongue of dog,
Adder's fork, and blind-worm's sting,
Lizard's leg, and howlet's wing.
For a charm of powerful trouble,
Like a hell-broth boil and bubble.
All. Double, double toil and trouble;
Fire burn and cauldron bubble.
Third Witch. Scale of dragon, tooth of wolf,
Witches' mummy, maw and gulf
Of the ravin'd salt-sea shark.
Root of hemlock digg'd i' the dark,
Liver of blaspheming Jew,
Thou hast harp'd my fear aright. But one word more.—
First Witch. He will not be commanded: here's another,
More potent than the first.
Thunder. Second Apparition, a bloody Child.
Second App. Be bloody, bold, and resolute; laugh to scorn
The power of man, for none of woman born
Shall harm Macbeth. Descends.
Macb. Then live, Macduff: what need I fear thee?
But yet I'll make assurance doubly sure,
And take a bond of fate: thou shalt not live;
That I may tell pale-hearted fear it lies,
And sleep in spite of thunder.
Thunder. Third Apparition, a Child crowned, with a tree in his hand.
What is this
That rises like the issue of a king,
And wears upon his baby brow the round
And top of sovereignty?
All. Listen, but speak not to't.
Third App. Be lion-mettled, proud, and take no care
Who chafes, who frets, or where conspirers are:
Macbeth shall never vanquish'd be until
Great Birnam wood to high Dunsinane hill
Shall come against him. Descends.
Macb. That will never be:
Who can impress the forest, bid the tree
Unfix his earth-bound root? Sweet bodements! good!
Rebellion's head, rise never till the wood
Of Birnam rise, and our high-place'd Macbeth
Shall live the lease of nature, pay his breath
To time and mortal custom. Yet my heart
Throbs to know one thing: tell me, if your art
Can tell so much, shall Banquo's issue ever Reign in this kingdom?
All. Seek to know no more.
Macb. I will be satisfied: deny me this,
And an eternal curse fall on you! Let me know,
Why sinks that cauldron? and what noise is this?
Hautboys.
First Witch. Show! Second Witch. Show!
Third Witch. Show! All. Show his eyes, and grieve his heart;
Come like shadows, so depart.
A show of Eight Kings, the last with a glass in his hand; BANQUO'S Ghost following.
Macb. Thou art too like the spirit of Banquo; down!
Thy crown does scar mine eye-balls: and thy hair,
Thou other gold-bound brow, is like the first:
A third is like the former. Filthy hags!
Why do you show me this? A fourth! Start, your eyes!
What I will the line stretch out to the crack of doom?
Another yet! A seventh! I'll see no more:
And yet the eighth appears, who bears a glass
Which shows me many more; and some I see
That two-fold balls and treble sceptres carry.
Horrible sight! Now, I see, 'tis true; 122
For the blood-bolter'd Banquo smiles upon me,
And points at them for his. Apparitions vanish.

What! is this so?

First Witch. Ay, sir, all this is so; but why Stands Macbeth thus amazedly!
Come, sisters, cheer we up his sprites,
And show the best of our delights.
I'll charm the air to give a sound,
While you perform your antick round,
That this great king may kindly say,
Our duties did his welcome pay.

Music. The Witches dance, and then vanish with Hecate.

Macb. Where are they! Gone! Let this pernicious hour Stand aye accursed in the calendar!
Come in, without there!

Enter Lennox.

Len. What's your grace's will?

Macb. Saw you the weird sisters?

Len. No, my lord.

Macb. Came they not by you?

Len. No indeed, my lord.

Macb. Infected be the air whereon they ride,
And damn'd all those that trust them! I did hear
The galloping of horse: who was 't came by? 140
Len. 'Tis two or three, my lord, that bring you word

Macduff is fled to England.

Macb. Fled to England!

Len. Ay, my good lord.

Macb. Aside. Time, thou anticipat'st my dread exploits;
The flighty purpose never is o'ertook
Unless the deed go with it; from this moment
The very firstlings of my heart shall be
The firstlings of my hand. And even now,
To crown my thoughts with acts, be it thought
and done:
The castle of Macduff I will surprise;
Seize upon Fife; give to the edge o' the sword
His wife, his babes, and all unfortunate souls
That trace him in his line. No boasting like a fool;
This deed I'll do before this purpose cool:
But no more sights! Where are these gentlemen?

Come, bring me where they are. Exeunt.

Scene II.—Fife. Macduff's Castle.

Enter Lady Macduff, her Son, and Ross.

L. Macd. What had he done, to make him fly the land?

Ross. You must have patience, madam.

L. Macd. He had none:
His flight was madness: when our actions do not,
Our fears do make us traitors.

Ross. You know not
Whether it was his wisdom or his fear.

L. Macd. Wisdom! to leave his wife, to leave his babes,
His mansion and his titles in a place
From whence himself does fly? He loves us not;
He wants the natural touch; for the poor wren,
The most diminutive of birds, will fight,

Her young ones in her nest, against the owl.
All is the fear and nothing is the love;
As little is the wisdom, where the flight
So runs against all reason.

Ross. My dearest coz
I pray you, school yourself: but for your husband
He is noble, wise, judicious, and best knows
The fits o' the season. I dare not speak in further;
But cruel are the times, when we are traitor
And do not know ourselves, when we be Heav'n's nourish
From what we fear, yet know not what we fear.
But float upon a wild and violent sea
Each way and move. I take my leave of you Shall not be long but I'll be here again.
Things at the worst will cease, or else cli upward
To what they were before. My pretty cousin
Blessing upon you!

L. Macd. Father's he is, and yet he's fatherless.

Ross. I am so much a fool, should I st longer,
It would be my disgrace and your discomfor
I take my leave at once.

L. Macd. Sirrah, your father's dead;

And what will you do now? How will you liv
Son. As birds do, mother.

L. Macd. What! with worms and flit
Son. With what I get, I mean; and so do the L. Macd. Poor bird! thou'rt never fear t
net nor lime,
The pitfall nor the gin.

Son. Why should I, mother? Poor birds th are not set for,
My father is not dead, for all your saying.

L. Macd. Yes, he is dead: how wilt thou o for a father?

Son. Nay, how will you do for a husband?

L. Macd. Why, I can buy me twenty at a market.

Son. Then you'll buy 'em to sell again.

L. Macd. Thou speak'st with all thy wit; ar yet, 't faith,
With wit enough, for the.

Son. Was my father a traitor, mother?

L. Macd. Ay, that he was.

Son. What is a traitor?

L. Macd. Why, one that swears and lies.

Son. And be all traitors that do so?

L. Macd. Every one that does so is a traito and must be hanged.

Son. And must they all be hanged that sw and lie?

L. Macd. Every one.

Son. Who must hang them?

L. Macd. Why, the honest men.

Son. Then the liars and swearers are fool for there are liars and swearers enough to bea the honest men and hang up them.

L. Macd. Now God help thee, poor monkey
But how wilt thou do for a father?

Son. If he were dead, you'd weep for him: if you would not, it were a good sign that I should quickly have a new father.

L. Macd. Poor pratter, how thou talk'st!

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Bless you, fair dame! I am not to your known,
though in your state of honour I am perfect.

... you will take a lonely man's advice, not found here; hence, with your little ones,

... methinks, I am too savage; do worse to you were fell cruelty, which is too nigh your person. Heaven preserve you! are abide no longer.

Enter Murderers.

What are these faces?

First Mur. Where is your husband?

7.Mac. I hope in no place so unsanctified where such as thou may'st find him.

First Mur. He's a traitor.

Son. Thou liest, thou shag-hair'd villain!

First Mur. What! you egg, Stabbing him.

... here] Mourn fry of treachery!

Son. He has kill'd me, mother: away. I pray you.

Exit Lady Macduff, crying 'Murder', and pursued by the Murderers.

Ene III.—England. Before the King’s Palace.

Enter Malcolm and Macduff.

Mal. Let us seek out some desolate shade, and there keep our sad bosoms empty.

Mac. Let us rather fast the mortal sword, and like good men ride our down-fall’n birthdom; each new morn widows howl, new orphans cry, new sorrow take heaven on the face, that it resounds if it felt with Scotland and yeld’d out to syllable of dolour.

Mal. What I believe I’ll wait, that know believe, and what I can redress, I shall find the time to friend, I will.

... what] hath not touch’d you yet. I am young; but something may deserve of him through me, and wisdom offer up a weak, poor, innocent lamb appease an angry god.

Mac. I am not treacherous.

Mal. But Macbeth is, good and virtuous nature may recoil an imperial charge. But I shall crave your pardon; at which you are my thoughts cannot trans-pose;

... bright still, though the brightest fell; though all things foul would wear the brows of grace, grace must still look so.

... I have lost my hopes.

Mal. Perchance even there where I did find my doubts.

Why in that rawness left you wife and child, Those precious motives, those strong knots of love, Without leave-taking! I pray you,

... and But mine own safeties: you may be rightly just, Whatever I shall think.

Mac. Bleed, bleed, poor country! Great tyranny, lay thou thy basis sure, For goodness dare not check thee! wear thou thy wrongs;

... title is afeard! Fare thee well, lord; I would not be the villain that thou thinkest. For the whole space that’s in the tyrant’s grasp, And the rich East to boot.

Mal. Be not offended: I speak not as in absolute fear of you.

... our country sinks beneath the yoke; it weeps, it bleeds, and each day a gash is added to her wounds: I think withal there would be hands uplifted in my right; and here from gracious England have I offer’d Of goodly thousands: but for all this, When I shall tread upon the tyrant’s head, Or wear it on my sword, yet my poor country Shall have more vices than it had before, More suffer, and more sundry ways than ever, By him that shall succeed.

Mac. What should he be?

Mal. It is myself I mean; in whom I know all the particulars of vice so grafted,

That, when they shall be open’d, black Macbeth will seem as pure as snow, and the poor state esteem him as a lamb, being compar’d with my confineless harms.

Mal. Not in the legions Of horrid hell can come a devil more damn’d In evils to top Macbeth.

Mal. I grant him bloody, luxurious, avaricious, false, deceitful, sudden, malicious, snapping of every sin That has a name; but there’s no bottom, none,

... voluptuousness: you wives, your daughters,

Your matrons, and your maids, could not fill up The cistern of my lust; and my desire all continent impediments would o’erbear That did oppose my will; better Macbeth than such an one to reign.

Mac. Boundless intemperance in nature is a tyranny; it hath been The untimely emptying of the happy throne, And fall of many kings. But fear not yet To take upon you what is yours; you may Convey your pleasures in a spacious plenty, and yet seem cold, the time you may so hoodwink. We have willing dames enough; there cannot be That vulture in you, to devour so many As will to greatness dedicate themselves, Finding it so inclin’d.

Mal. With this there grows In my most ill-compos’d affection, such A stanchess avarice that, were I king, I should cut off the nobles for their lands, Desire his jewels and this other’s house;

... the sauce To make me hunger more, that I should forge
Quarrels unjust against the good and loyal, Destroying them for wealth.

Macb. This avarice Sticks deeper, grows with more pernicious root Than summer-seeming lust, and it hath been The sword of our slain kings: yet do not fear; Scotland hath poisons to fill up your will, Of your mere own; all these are portable, With other graces weigh'd.

Mal. But I have none: the king-becoming graces, As justice, verity, temperance, stableness, Bounty, perseverance, mercy, lowliness, Devotion, patience, courage, fortitude, I have no relish of them, but abound In the division of each trivial crime, Acting it many ways. Nay, had I power, I should Pour the sweet milk of concord into hell, Uproar the universal peace, confound All unity on earth.

Macb. O Scotland, Scotland!

Mal. If such a one be fit to govern, speak I am as I have spoken.

Macb. Fit to govern! No, not to live. O nation miserable, With an untitled tyrant bloody-scepter'd, When shalt thou see thy wholesome days again, Since that the truest issue of thy throne By his own interdict stands accurs'd, And does blaspheme his breed? Thy royal father Was a most sainted king; the queen that bore thee, Off'ner upon her knees than on her feet, Died every day she liv'd! Fare thee well! These evils thou repeat'st upon thyself Have banish'd me from Scotland. O my breast, Thy hope ends here!

Mal. Macdutf, this noble passion, Child of integrity, hast from my soul Wip'd the black scruples, reconcile'd my thoughts To thy good truth and honour. Devilish Macbeth By many of these trains hath sought to win me Into his power, and modest wisdom plucks me From over-credible haste; but God above 129 Deal between thee and me! for even now I put myself to thy direction, and Unspeak mine own distraction, here abjure The taints and blames I laid upon myself, For strangers to my nature. I am yet Unknown to woman, never was forsworn, Scarce have coveted what was mine own, At no time broke my faith, would not betray The devil to his fellow, and delight No less in truth than life; my first false speaking Was this upon myself. What I am truly, Is thine and my poor country's to command; Whither indeed, before thy here-approach, Old Siward, with ten thousand war-like men, Already at a point, was setting forth. Now we'll together, and the chance of goodness Be like our warranted quarrel. Why are you silent?*

Macb. Such welcome and unwelcome things at once 'Tis hard to reconcile.

Enter a Doctor.

Mal. Well; more anon. Comes the king forth. I pray you?

Macb. Ay, sir; there are a crew of wretches souls That stay his cure; their malady convinces The great assay of art; but at his touch, Such sanctity hath heaven given his hand, They presently amend.

Mal. I thank you, doctor. Exit Do.

Macb. What's the disease he means?

Mal. 'Tis call'd the e

A most miraculous work in this good king, Which often, since my here-remain in Engla I have seen him do. How he solicits heaven Himself best knows; but strangely-visit people, All swollen and ulcerous, pitiful to the eye, The more despair of surgery, he cares, Hanging a golden stamp about their necks, Put on with holy prayers; and 'tis spoken To the succeeding royalty he leaves The healing benediction. With this stra virtue, He hath a heavenly gift of prophecy, And sundry blessings hang about his throne That speak him full of grace.

Enter Ross.

Ross. See, who comes he

Mal. My countryman; but yet I know I not.

Macb. My ever-gentle cousin, welcome hilt. Mal. I know him now. Good God, beth remove The means that makes us strangers!

Ross. Sir, am

Macb. Stands Scotland where it did?

Ross. Alas! poor count Almost afraid to know itself. It cannot Be call'd our mother, but our grave; wh nothing, But who knows nothing, is once seen to smile Where sighs and groans and shrieks that re the air Are made, not mark'd; where violent sort seems A modern ecstasy; the dead man's knell Is there scarce ask'd for who; and good me lives Expire before the flowers in their caps, Dying or ere they sicken.

Macb. O! relation Too nice, and yet too true.

Mal. What's the newest gri Ross. That of an hour's age doth his speaker;

Each minute teems a new one.

Macb. How does my wife?

Ross. Why, well.

Mal. And all my children

Ross. Well too.

Macb. The tyrant has not batter'd at th peace?

Ross. No; they were well at peace when I leave 'em.

Macb. Be not a niggard of your speech: b goes 't?

Ross. When I came hither to transport tidings, Which I have heavily borne, there ran a rum Of many worthy fellows that were out; Which was to my belief witness'd the rather act short all intermission; front to front
Bring thou this fiend of Scotland and myself;
Within my sword's length set him; if he escape,
Heaven forgive him too!

Mac. This tune goes manly.
Come, go we to the king; our power is ready;
Our lack is nothing but our leave. Macbeth
Is ripe for shaking, and the powers above Put on their instruments. Receive what cheer
you may;
The night is long that never finds the day.

Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Dunsinane. A Room in the Castle.

Enter a Doctor of Physic and a Waiting-Gentlewoman.

Doct. I have two nights watch'd with you, but can perceive no truth in your report. When was it she last walked?

Gent. Since his majesty went into the field,
I have seen her rise from her bed, throw her nightgown upon her, unlock her closet, take forth paper, fold it, write upon't, read it, afterwards seal it, and again return to bed; yet all this while in a most fast sleep.

Doct. A great perturbation in nature, to receive at once the benefit of sleep and do the effects of watching! In this slumberous agitation, besides her walking and other actual performances, what, at any time, have you heard her say?

Gent. That, sir, which I will not report after her.

Doct. You may to me, and 'tis most meet you should.

Gent. Neither to you nor any one, having no witness to confirm my speech.

Enter Lady Macbeth, with a taper.

Lo you! here she comes. This is her very guise; and, upon my life, fast asleep. Observe her;
she stands close.

Doct. How came she by that light?

Gent. Why, it stood by her: she has light by her continually; 'tis her command.

Doct. You see, her eyes are open.

Gent. Ay, but their sense is shut.

Doct. What is it she does now? Look, how she rubs her hands.

Gent. It is an accustomed motion with her, to seem thus washing her hands. I have known her continue in this a quarter of an hour.

Lady M. Yet here's a spot.

Doct. Haark! she speaks. I will set down what comes from her, to satisfy my remembrance the more strongly.

Lady M. Out, damned spot! out, I say! One;
two; why, then 'tis time to do't. Hell is murky!
Fie, my lord, fie! a soldier, and a coward?
What need we fear who knows it, when none can call our power to account? Yet who would have thought the old man to have had so much blood in him?

Doct. Do you mark that?

Lady M. The Thane of Fife had a wife;
where is she now? What! will these hands ne'er be clean? No more 'o' that, my lord, no more 'o' that: you mar all with this starting.
MACBETH.

[Act]

Doct. Go to, go to; you have known what you should not. 51
Gent. She has spoke what she should not, I am sure of that: heaven knows what she has known.
Lady M. Here's the smell of the blood still: all the perfumes of Arabia will not sweeten this little hand. Oh! oh! oh!
Doct. What a sigh is there! The heart is sorely charged.
Gent. I would not have such a heart in my bosom for the dignity of the whole body. 60
Doct. Well, well, well.
Gent. Pray God it be, sir.
Doct. This disease is beyond my practice: yet I have known those which have walked in their sleep who have died howly in their beds.
Lady M. Wash your hands, put on your night-gown; look not so pale. I tell you yet again, Banquo's buried; he cannot come out on's grave.
Doct. Even so? 69
Lady M. To bed, to bed: there's knocking at the gate. Come, come, come, come, give me your hand. What's done cannot be undone. To bed, to bed, to bed. Exit.
Doct. Will she go now to bed?
Gent. Directly.
Doct. Foul whisperings are abroad. Unnatural deeds
Do breed unnatural troubles; infected minds
To their dear pillows will discharge their secrets;
More needs she the divine than the physician.
God, God forgive us all! Look after her; 89
Remove from her the means of all annoyance,
And still keep eyes upon her. So, good night:
My mind she has mated, and amaz'd my sight.
I think, but dare not speak.
Gent. Good night, good doctor. Exit.

SCENE II.—The Country near Dunsinane.

Enter, with drum and colours, MENTEITH, CAITHNESS, ANGUS, LENNOX, and Soldiers.
Ment. The English power is near, led on by Malcolm,
His uncle Siward, and the good Macduff.
Revenge burn in them; for their dear causes
Would to the bleeding and the grim alarm
Excite the mortified man.
Aug. Near Birnam wood
Shall we well meet them; that way are they coming.
Caith. Who knows if Donalbain be with his brother?
Len. For certain, sir, he is not: I have a file
Of all the gentry: there is Siward's son,
And many unruly youths that even now
Protest their first of manhood.
Ment. What does the tyrant?
Caith. Great Dunsinane he strongly fortifies.
Some say he's mad; others that lesser hate him
Do call it valiant fury; but, for certain,
He cannot buckle his distemper'd cause
Within the belt of rule.
Aug. Now does he feel
His secret murders sticking on his hands;
Now minutely revolts upbraid his faith-breath;
Those he commands move only in command,
Nothing in love; now does he feel his title
Hang loose about him, like a giant's robe
Upon a dwarfish thief.

Ment. Who then shall bar
His pester'd senses to recoil and start,
When all that is within him does condemn
Itself for being there?
Caith. Well, march we on,
To give obedience where 'tis truly ow'd;
Meet we the medicine of the sickly weal,
And with him pour we in our country's purg
Each drop of us.
Len. Or so much as it needs
To dew the sovereign flower and drown
Weeds.
Make we our march towards Birnam.
Exit, marching.

SCENE III.—Dunsinane. A Room in the Castle.

Enter MACBETH, Doctor, and Attendants.
Macb. Bring me no more reports; let thy say all:
Till Birnam wood remove to Dunsinane
I cannot taint with fear. What's the news of Malcolm?
Was he not born of woman? The spirits to know
All mortal consequences have pronounc'd thus:
'Fear not, Macbeth; no man that's born
Shalt e'er have power upon thee.' Then the false thanes,
And mingle with the English epicures:
The mind I sway by and the heart I bear
Shall never sag with doubt nor shake with fe
Enter a Servant.

The devil damn thee black, thou cream-fa

Where got's thon that goose look?
Serv. There is ten thousand—Macb. Geese, villain?
Serv. Soldiers,
Macb. Go, prick thy face, and over-red thy fe
Thou lily-liver'd boy. What soldiers, patch
Denth of thy soul! those linen cheeks of this
Are counsellors to fear. What soldiers, who Serv. The English force, so please you.

Macb. Take thy face hence. Exit Serva

Seyton!—I am sick at he
When I behold—Seyton, I say!—This push
Will cheer me ever or dissect me now.
I have liv'd long enough: my way of life
Is fall'n into the scar, the yellow leaf;
And that which should accompany old age,
As honour, love, obedience, troops of friends,
I must not look to have; but, in their stead,
Curses, not loud but deep, mouth-hono
breath,
Which the poor heart would fain deny, and do not.

Enter Seyton.

Sey. What is your gracious pleasure?
Macb. What news morn
Sey. All is confirm'd, my lord, which was reported.
Macb. I'll fight till from my bones my fle be hack'd.
Give me my armour.
Macb. I'll put it so.

Out more horses, skirt the country round; putting those that talk of fear. Give me mine armour.

Doct. Not so sick, my lord, she is troubled with thick-coming fancies, at keep her from her rest.

Macb. Cure her of that:

Ist thou not minister to a mind diseas'd? Your memory a rooted sorrow, to out the written troubles of the brain, d with some sweet oblivious antidote cause the stuff'd bosom of that perilous stuff which weighs upon the heart!

Doct. Therein the patient must minister to himself.

Macb. Throw physic to the dogs; I'll none of it.

Me, put mine armour on; give me my staff. Seyton, send out—Doctor, the thanes fly from me. Me, sir, dispatch—If thou could'st, doctor, cast

As water of my land, find her disease, id purge it to a sound and pristine health, would applaud thee to the very echo, that should applaud again—Pull 't off, I say,—hat rhubarb, senna, or what purgative drug could scour these English hence? Hear'st thou of them?

Doct. Ay, my good lord; your royal preparation takes us hear something.

Macb. Bring it after me. We will not be afraid of death and ban

If Birnam wood come to Dunsinane.

Doct. Aside. Were I from Dunsinane away and clear, ofit again should hardly draw me here.

Exeunt.

Scene IV.—Country near Birnam Wood.

Enter, with drum and colours, MACBETH, SIWARD, and his Son, MACDUFF, MENTEITH, CAITHNESS, ANGUS, LENNOX, ROSS, and Soldiers, marching.

Macb. Cousin, I hope the days are near at hand that chambers will be safe.

Seyton. What wood is this before us?

Menteith. The wood of Birnam.

Macb. Let every soldier hew him down a bough and bear't before him: thereby shall we shadow he numbers of our host, and make discovery in report of us.

Sold. It shall be done.

Seyton. We learn no other but the confident tyrant keeps still in Dunsinane, and will endure our setting down before 't.

Macb. 'Tis his main hope; or where there is advantage to be given, both more and less liath given him the revolt, and none serve with him but constrained things. Those hearts are absent too.

Macb. Let our just censures Attend the true event, and put we on Industrious soldiership.

Seyton. The time approaches That will with due decision make us know What we shall say we have and what we owe. Thoughts speculative their unsure hopes relate, But certain issue strokes must arbitrate, Towards which advance the war.

Exeunt, marching.

Scene V.—Dunsinane. Within the Castle.

Enter, with drum and colours, MACBETH, SIWARD, and Soldiers.

Macb. Hang out our banners on the outward walls; The cry is still 'They come!' our castle's strength

Will laugh a siege to scorn; here let them lie Till famine and the ague eat them up; Were they not for'd with those that should be ours,

We might have met them careful, beard to beard, And beat them backward home.

A cry of women within.

What is that noise?

Seyton. It is the cry of women, my good lord.

Exeunt.

Macb. I have almost forgot the taste of fears. The time has been my senses would have cool'd To hear a night-shriek, and my fell of hair Would at a dismal treatise rouse and stir As life were in't. I have supp'd full with horrors; Direness, familiar to my slaughterous thoughts, Cannot once start me.

Re-enter Seyton.

Wherefore was that cry?

Seyton. The queen, my lord, is dead.

Macb. She should have died hereafter; There would have been a time for such a word. To-morrow, and to-morrow, and to-morrow, Creeps in this petty pace from day to day, To the last syllable of recorded time; And all our yesterdays have lighted fools The way to dusty death. Out, out, brief candle! Life's but a walking shadow, a poor player That struts and frets his hour upon the stage, And then is heard no more; it is a tale Told by an idiot, full of sound and fury, Signifying nothing.

Enter a Messenger.

Thou com'st to use thy tongue; thy story quickly.

Mess. Gracious my lord, I should report that which I say I saw, But know not how to do it.

Macb. Well, say, sir.

Mess. As I did stand my watch upon the hill, I look'd toward Birnam, and anon, methought, The wood began to move.

Macb. Liar and slave!

Mess. Let me endure your wrath if 't be not so: Within this three mile may you see it coming; I say, a moving grove.
Macb. If thou speak'st false,
Upon the next tree shalt thou hang alive,
Till famine cling thee; if thy speech be sooth,
I care not if thou dost for me as much. 41
I pull in resolution, and begin
To doubt the equivocation of the fiend
That lies like truth; 'Fear not till Birnam wood
Do come to Dunsinane'; and now a wood
Comes toward Dunsinane. Arm, arm, and out!
If this which I avouches does appear,
There is nor flying hence nor tarrying here.
I 'gin to be aweary of the sun,
And wish the estate o' the world were now undone.
Ring the alarum-bell! Blow, wind! come, wreck!
At least we'll die with harness on our back.
Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—The Same. A Plain before the Castle.

Enter, with drum and colours, Malcolm, old Siward, Macduff, etc., and their Army, with boughs.

Mal. Now, near enough; your leavy screens throw down,
And show like those you are. You, worthy uncle,
Shall, with my cousin, your right-noble son,
Lead our first battle; worthy Macduff and we Shall take upon 's what else remains to do,
According to our order.

Siev. Fare you well,
Do we but find the tyrant's power to-night,
Let us be beaten, if we cannot fight.

Macb. Make all our trumpets speak; give them all breath,
Those clamorous harbingers of blood and death.
Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—The Same. Another Part of the Plain.

Alarums. Enter Macbeth.

Macb. They have tied me to a stake; I cannot fly,
But bear-like must fight the course. What's he
That was not born of woman? Such a one Am I to fear, or none.

Enter young Siward.

Young Siw. What is thy name?
Macb. Thou 'lt be afraid to hear it.

Young Siw. No; though thou call'st thyself a hotter name
Than any is in hell.

Macb. My name's Macbeth.

Young Siw. The devil himself could not pronounce a title
More hateful to mine ear.

Macb. No, nor more fearful.
Young Siw. Thou liest, abhorred tyrant;
with my sword
I'll prove the lie thou speak'st.

They fight and young Siward is slain.

Macb. Thou wast born of woman;
But swords I smile at, weapons laugh to scorn,
Brandish'd by man that's of a woman born.

Alarums. Enter Macduff.

Macd. That way the noise is. Tyrant, sh-.
thy face:
If thou be'st slain and with no stroke of mine
My wife and children's ghost will haunt me still.
I cannot strike at wretched kerns, whose arm
Are hir'd to bear their staves: either the
Macbeth,
Or else my sword with an unbatter'd edge
I sheathe again undone. There thou should'st be;
By this great clatter, one of greatest note
Seems bruited. Let me find him, fortune!
And more I beg not.

Exit. Alarums.

Enter Malcolm and old Siward.

Siw. This way, my lord; the castle's gen
render'd:
The tyrant's people on both sides do fight;
The noble thanes do bravely in the war;
The day almost itself professes yours,
And little is to do.

Mal. We have met with foes
That strike beside us.

Siev. Enter, sir, the castle.

Exeunt. Alarums.

Re-enter Macbeth.

Macb. Why should I play the Roman fo and die,
On mine own sword? whiles I see lives, the gash
Do better upon them.

Re-enter Macduff.

Macd. Turn, hell-hound, turn.
Macb. Of all men else I have avoided thee:
But get thee back, my soul is too much charg
With blood of thine already.

Macd. I have no word
My voice is in my sword, thou bloodier villain
Than terms can give thee out! They fig.

Macd. Thou losest laboure
As easy may'st thou the intrenched air
With thy keen sword impress as make me bleed
Let fall thy blade on vulnerable crests;
I bear a charmed life, which must not yield
To one of woman born.

Macd. Despair thy charm;
And let the angel whom thou still hast serv'd
Tell thee, Macduff was from his mother's won Untimely ripp'd.

Macb. Accursed be that tongue which tells me
For it hath cow'd my better part of man;
And be these juggling fiends no more believe'd
That palter with us in a double sense;
That keep the word of promise to our ear,
And break it to our hope. I'll not fight with the Macd. Then yield thee, coward,
And live to be the show and gaze o' the time:
We'll have thee, as our rarer monsters are,
Painted upon a pole, and underwrit,
'Here may you see the tyrant.'

Macb. I will not yield
To kiss the ground before young Malcolm's foot
And to be baited with the rabble's curse.
Though Birnam wood be come to Dunsinane,
And thou oppos'd, being of no woman born,
Yet I will try the last: before my body
I row my war-like shield. Lay on, Macduff, I damn'd be him that first cries ‘Hold, enough!’

Exeunt, fighting.

reat. Flourish. Re-enter, with drum and drums, MACBETH, old SIWARD, ROSS, Thanes, and Soldiers.

Mal. I would the friends we miss were safe arriv’d.

Siv. Some must go off; and yet, by these I see, great a day as this is cheaply bought.

Mal. Macduff is missing, and your noble son, Ross. Your son, my lord, has paid a soldier’s debt:

only liv’d but till he was a man;

e which no sooner had his prowess confirm’d the unshrinking station where he fought, than like a man he died.

Siv. Then he is dead?

Ross. Ay, on the front.

Siv. Why then, God’s soldier be he! and as many sons as I have hairs, would not wish them to a fairer death:

Mal. He’s worth more sorrow, and that I’ll spend for him.

Siv. He’s worth no more; so they say, he parted well, and paid his score:

And so, God be with him! Here comes newer comfort.

Re-enter MACDUFF, with MACBETH’s head.

Macd. Hail, king! for so thou art. Behold, where stands

The usurper’s cursed head: the time is free:

I see thee compass’d with thy kingdom’s pearl,

That speak my salutation in their minds;

Whose voices I desire aloud with mine;

Hail, King of Scotland!

All. Hail, King of Scotland!

Flourish.

Mal. Weshall not spend a large expense of time Before we reckon with your several loves,

And make us even with you. My thanes and kinsmen,

Henceforth be earls, the first that ever Scotland In such an honour nam’d. What’s more to do Which would be planted newly with the time,

As calling home our exil’d friends abroad That fled the snares of watchful tyranny;

Producing forth the cruel ministers

Of this dead butcher and his fiend-like queen,

Who, as ’tis thought, by self and violent hands Took off her life; this, and what needful else That calls upon us, by the grace of Grace

We will perform in measure, time, and place:

So thanks to all at once and to each one, Whom we invite to see us crown’d at Scone.

Flourish. Exeunt.

Scene I.—Elsinore. A Platform before the Castle.

Francisco at his post. Enter to him Bernardo.

Ber. Who's there?

Fran. Nay, answer me; stand, and unfold yourself.

Ber. Long live the king!

Fran. Bernardo?

Ber. He.

Fran. You come most carefully upon your hour.

Ber. 'Tis now struck twelve; get thee to bed, Francisco.

Fran. For this relief much thanks; 'tis bitter cold,
And I am sick at heart.

Ber. Have you had quiet guard?

Fran. Not a mouse stirring.

Ber. Well, good night.

If you do meet Horatio and Marcellus,
The rivals of my watch, bid them make haste.

Fran. I think I hear them. Stand, ho! Who's there?

Enter Horatio and Marcellus.

Hor. Friends to this ground.

Mar. And liegemen to the Dane.

Fran. Give you good night.

Mar. O! farewell, honest soldie
Who hath reliev'd you?

Fran. Bernardo has my plac
Give you good night.

Mar. Holla! Bernardo!

Ber. What! is Horatio there?

Hor. A piece of him.

Ber. Welcome, Horatio; welcome, good Marcellus.

Mar. What! has this thing appear'd ago

Ber. I have seen nothing.

Mar. Horatio says 'tis but our fantasy,
And will not let belief take hold of him
Touching this dreaded sight twice seen of us
Therefore I have entreated him along
With us to watch the minutes of this night;
That if again this apparition come,
He may approve our eyes and speak to it.

Hor. Tush, tush! 'twill not appear.

Ber. Sit down awhile,
And let us once again assail your ears,
That are so fortified against our story,
What we two nights have seen.

Hor. Well, sit we dow
And let us hear Bernardo speak of this.

Ber. Last night of all,
When yond same star that's westward from th

pole

Had made his course to illume that part

heaven
Where now it burns, Marcellus and myself,
The bell then beating one,—
Mar. Peace! break thee off; look, where it comes again!

Enter Ghost.

Ber. In the same figure, like the king that's dead.
Mar. Thou art a scholar; speak to it, Horatio.
Ber. Looks it not like the king? mark it, Horatio.
Hor. Most like; it harrows me with fear and wonder.
Ber. It would be spoke to.
Mar. Question it, Horatio.
Hor. What art thou that usurp'st this time of night,
Together with that fair and war-like form
Which the majesty of buried Denmark
Did sometimes March? by heaven I charge thee, speak!
Mar. It is offended.
Ber. See! it stalks away.
Hor. Stay! speak: speak, I charge thee, speak!

Exit Ghost.

Mar. 'Tis gone, and will not answer.
Ber. How now, Horatio! you tremble and look pale;
Is not this something more than fantasy?
What think you on't?
Hor. Before my God, I might not this believe Without the sensible and true avouch
Of mine own eyes.
Mar. Is it not like the king?
Hor. As thou art to thyself:
Such was the very armour he had on
When he the ambitious Norway combated;
So frown'd he once, when, in an angry parle,
He smote the sledged Polacks on the ice.
Tis strange.
Mar. Thus twice before, and jump at this dead hour,
With martial stalk hath he gone by our watch.
Hor. In what particular thought to work I know not;
But in the gross and scope of my opinion,
This bodes some strange eruption to our state.
Mar. Good now, sit down, and tell me, he that knows,
Why this same strict and most observant watch
So nightly toils the subject of the land;
And why such daily cast of brazen cannon,
And foreign mart for implements of war;
Why such impress of shipwrights, whose sores task
Does not divide the Sunday from the week;
What might be toward, that this sweaty haste
Oth'ring make the night joint-labourer with the day;
Who 'tis that can inform me?
Hor. That can I.
At least the whisper goes so. Our last king,
Whose image even but now appear'd to us,
Was, as you know, by Fortinbras of Norway,
Thereto prick'd on by a most emulate pride,
Dar'd to the combat; in which our valiant Hamlet,
For so this side of our known world esteem'd him,
Did slay this Fortinbras; who, by a seal'd compact,
Well ratified by law and heraldry,
Did forfeit with his life all those his lands
Which he stood seiz'd of, to the conqueror;
Against the which, a moiety competent
Was gaged by our king; which had return'd
To the inheritance of Fortinbras,
Had he been vanquisher; as, by the same covenant
And carriage of the article design'd.
His fell to Hamlet. Now, sir, young Fortinbras,
Of unimproved mettle hot and full,
Hath in the skirts of Norway here and there
Shark'd up a list of lawless resolute,
For food and diet, to some enterprise
That hath a stomach in 't; which is no other,
As it doth well appear unto our state,
But to recover of us, by strong hand
And terms compulsative, those foresaid lands
So by his father lost. And this, I take it,
Is the main motive of our preparations,
The source of this our watch and the chief head
Of this post-haste and romage in the land.
Ber. I think it be no other but e'en so;
Well may it sort that this portentous figure
Comes armed through our watch, so like the king
That was and is the question of these wars.

Hor. A mote it is to trouble the mind's eye.
In the most high and palmy state of Rome,
A little ere the mighty Julius fell,
The graves stood tenantless and the sheeted dead
Did squeak and gibber in the Roman streets;
As stars with trains of fire and dews of blood,
Disasters in the sun; and the moist star
Upon whose influence Neptune's empire stands
Was sick almost to doomsday with eclipse;
And even the like precurse of fierce events,
As harbingers preceding still the fates.
And prologue to the omen coming on,
Have heaven and earth together demonstrated
Unto our climates and countrymen.
But, soft! behold! lo! where it comes again.

Re-enter Ghost.

I'll cross it, though it blast me. Stay, illusion!
If thou hast any sound, or use of voice,
Speak to me:
If there be any good thing to be done,
That may to thee do ease and grace to me,
Speak to me:
If thou art privy to thy country's fate,
Which happily foreknowing may avoid,
O! speak;
Or if thou hast upheaved in thy life
Extorted treasure in the womb of earth,
For which, they say, you spirits oft walk in death,

Cock crowed.

Speak of it: stay, and speak! Stop it, Marcellus.
Mar. Shall I strike at it with my partisan?
Hor. Do, if it will not stand.
Ber. 'Tis here! 'Tis here!
Mar. 'Tis gone!
Hor. 'Tis here!

Exit Ghost.

We do it wrong, being so majestical,
To offer it the show of violence;
For it is, as the air, invulnerable,
And our vain blows malicious mockery.
Ber. It was about to speak when the cock crew.
Hor. And then it started like a guilty thing
Upon a fearful summons. I have heard,
The cock, that is the trumpet to the morn,
Doth with his lofty and shrill-sounding throat
Awake the god of day; and, at his warning,
HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

Whether in sea or fire, in earth or air,
The extravagant and erring spirit lies
To his confine; and of the truth herein
This present object made probation.

Mar. It faded on the crowing of the cock.
Some say that ever 'gainst that season comes Wherein our Saviour's birth is celebrated,
The bird of dawning singeth all night long; 16
And then, they say, no spirit can walk abroad;
The nights are wholesome; then no planets strike,
No fairy takes, nor witch hath power to charm,
So hallow'd and so gracious is the time.

Hor. So have I heard and do in part believe it.
But, look, the morn, in russet mantle clad,
Walks o'er the dew of yon high eastern hill;
Break we our watch up; and by my advice
Let us impart what we have seen to-night
Unto young Hamlet; for, upon my life, 17
This spirit, dumb to us, will speak to him.
Do you consent we shall acquaint him with it,
As needful in our loves, fitting our duty!

Mar. Let's do't, I pray; and I this morning know
Where we shall find him most conveniently.

Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A Room of State in the Castle.

Enter the King, Queen, Hamlet, Polonius, Laertes, Voltimand, Cornelius, Lords, and Attendants.

King. Though yet of Hamlet our dear brother's death
The memory be green, and that it us befitted
To bear our hearts in grief and our whole kingdom
To be contracted in one brow of woe,
Yet so far hath discretion fought with nature
That we with wisest sorrow think on him,
Together with remembrance of ourselves,
Therefore our sometime sister, now our queen,
The imperial jointress of this war-like state,
Have we, as 'twere with a defeated joy,
With one auspicious and one dropping eye,
With mirth in funeral and with dirge in marriage,
In equal scale weighing delight and dole,
Taken to wife: nor have we herein bair'd
Your better wisdoms, which have freely gone
With this affray along: for all, our thanks.
Now follows, that you know, young Fortinbras,
Holding a weak supposal of our worth,
Or thinking by our late dear brother's death
Our state to be disjoint and out of frame,
Colleagued with the dream of his advantage,
He hath not fail'd to pester us with message,
Importing the surrender of those lands
Lost by his father, with all bounds of law,
To our most valiant brother. So much for him.
Now for ourself and for this time of meeting,
Thus much the business is: we have here writ
To Norway, uncle of young Fortinbras,
Who, impotent and bed-rid, scarcely hears
Of this his nephew's purpose, to suppress
His further gait herein; in that the levies,
The lists and full proportions, are all made
Out of his subject; and we here dispatch
You, good Cornelius, and you, Voltimand,
For bearers of this greeting to old Norway,
Giving to you no further personal power
To business with the king more than the scope
Of these delayed articles allow.
Farewell, and let your haste commend your duty
Cor., Vol. In that and all things will we show our duty.

King. We doubt it nothing; heartily farewell

Exeunt Voltimand and Cornelius

And now, Laertes, what's the news with you?
You told us of some suit; what is's, Laertes?
You cannot speak of reason to the Dane,
And lose your voice; what would'st thou beg Laertes,
That shall not be my offer, not thy asking?
The head is not more native to the heart,
The hand more instrumental to the mouth,
Than is the throne of Denmark to thy father.
What would'st thou have, Laertes?

Laer. Dread my lord, o Your leave and favour to return to France;
From whence though willingly I came to Denmark,
To show my duty in your coronation,
Yet now, I must confess, that duty done,
My thoughts and wishes bend again towards France
And bow them to your gracious leave and pardon.

King. Have you your father's leave? What says Polonius!

Pol. He hath, my lord, wrung from me my slow leave
By laboursome petition, and at last
Upon his will I seal'd my hard consent:
I do beseech you, give him leave to go.

King. Take thy fair hour, Laertes; time be thine,
And thy best graces spend it at thy will.
But now, my cousin Hamlet, and my son,—

Ham. Aside. A little more than kin, and less than kind.

King. How is it that the clouds still hang
On you?

Ham. Not so, my lord; I am too much i' the sun.

Queen. Good Hamlet, cast thy nighted colour off,
And let thine eye look like a friend on Denmark.
Do not for ever with thy vailed lids seek for thy noble father in the dust:
Thou know'st 'tis common; all that lives must die,
Passing through nature to eternity.

Ham. Ay, madam, it is common.

Queen. If it be, Why seems it so particular with thee?

Ham. Seems, madam? nay, it is; I know not 'seems,'
'Tis not alone my inky cloak, good mother,
Nor customary suits of solemn black,
Nor windy suspension of forc'd breath,
No, nor the fruitful river in the eye,
Nor the dejected haviour of the visage,
Together with all forms, modes, shows of grief,
That can denote me truly; these indeed seem,
For they are actions that a man might play;
But I have that within which paseth show;
These but the trappings and the suits of woe.

King. 'Tis sweet and commendable in your nature, Hamlet,
To give these mourning duties to your father:
But, you must know, your father lost a father;

Our father lost, lost his; and the survivor bound filial obligation for some term

Ham. I pray thee, stay with us; go not to Wittenberg.

Hor. I shall in all my best obey you, madam.

King. Why, 'tis a loving and a fair reply: as ourselves in Denmark. Madam, come; as gentle and unforc'd accord of Hamlet is smiling to my heart; in grace whereof, joucing health that Denmark drinks to-day, at the great cannon to the clouds shall tell, and the king's rouse the heavens shall bruit again, speaking earthly thunder. Come away.

Flourish. Exeunt King, Queen, Lords, etc.

Ham. O! that this too too solid flesh would melt, aw and resolve itself into a dew;
that the Everlasting had not fix'd is canon 'gainst self-slaughter! O God! God!
our weary, stale, flat, and unprofitable to me all the uses of this world.
e 'on't! ah fie! 'tis an unweeded garden,
at grows to seed; things rank and gross in nature assess it merely. 'Tis it should come to this!
at two months dead: nay, not so much, not two:
on a king; that was, to this,
ypeiron to a satyr; so loving to my mother at he might not bethe winds of heaven lit her face too roughly. Heaven and earth!
ast I remember? why, she would hang on him,
 'f if increase of appetite had grown ut what it fed on; and yet, within a month, ne me not think on 't: Frailty, thy name is woman!

little month; or else those shoes were old ith which she follow'd my poor father's body, ke Nibe, all tears; why she, even she—

God! a beast, that wants discourse of reason, could have mourn'd longer,—married with my uncle,

My father's brother, but no more like my father Than I to Hercules: within a month, ere the salt of most unrighteous tears
Had left the flushing in her gilded eyes,
She married. O! most wicked speed, to post
With such dexterity to incestuous sheets.
It is not nor it cannot come to good;
But break, my heart, for I must hold my tongue!

Enter Horatio, Marcellus, and Bernardo.

Hor. Hail to your lordship!

Ham. I am glad to see you well: Horatio, or I do forget myself.

Hor. The same, my lord, and your poor servant ever.

Ham. Sir, my good friend; I'll change that name with you.
And what make you from Wittenberg, Horatio? Marcellus?

Mar. My good lord,—

Ham. I am very glad to see you. To Bernardo. Good even, sir.

But what, in faith, make you from Wittenberg?

Hor. A truant disposition, good my lord.

Ham. I would not hear your enemy say so, Nor shall you do mine ear that violence;
To make it truer of your own report
Against yourself; I know you are no truant.
But what is your affair in Elsinore? We'll teach you to drink deep ere you depart.

Hor. My lord, I came to see your father's funeral.

Ham. I pray thee, do not mock me, fellow-student;
I think it was to see my mother's wedding.

Hor. Indeed, my lord, it follow'd hard upon.

Ham. Thrift, thrift, Horatio! the funeral bak'd meats
Did coldly furnish forth the marriage tables.
Would I had met my dearest foe in heaven
Or ever I had seen that day, Horatio!

My father, methinks I see my father.

Hor. O! where, my lord?

Ham. In my mind's eye, Horatio. I saw him once; he was a goodly king.

Ham. He was a man, take him for all in all, I shall not look upon his like again.

Hor. My lord, I think I saw him yesternight.

Ham. Saw who?

Hor. My lord, the king your father.

Ham. The king my father! Hor. Season your admiration for a while
With an attent ear, till I may deliver,
Upon the witness of these gentlemen,
This marvell to you.

Ham. For God's love, let me hear.

Hor. Two nights together had these gentlemen,
Marcellus and Bernardo, on their watch,
In the dead vast and middle of the night,
Been thus encounter'd: a figure like your father,
 Armed at point exactly, cap-a-pe,
Appears before them, and with solemn march Goes slow and stately by them: three he walk'd
By their oppress'd and fear-surprised eyes,
Within his truncheon's length; whilst they, distill'd
Almost to jelly with the act of fear,
Stand dumb and speak not to him. This to me
In dreadful secrecy impart they did,
Scene III.—A Room in Polonius's House.

Enter Laertes and Ophelia.

Laer. My necessaries are embark'd; farewell. And, sister, as the winds give benefit And convoy is assistant, do not sleep, But let me hear from you.

Oph. Do you doubt that

Laer. For Hamlet, and the trilling of his favour, Hold it a fashion and a toy in blood, A violet in the youth of primy nature, Forward, not permanent, sweet, not lasting, The perfume and suppliance of a minute; No more.

Oph. No more but so? Think it no more For nature creasent does not grow alone In thevs and bulk; but, as this temple waxed In the inward service of the mind and soul Grows wide withal. Perhaps he loves you not And now no soul nor cautel doth besmirch The virtue of his will; but you must fear, His greatness weigh'd, his will is not his own For he himself is subject to his birth; He may not, as unvalu'd persons do, Carve for himself, for on his choice depends The safety and the health of the whole state And therefore must his choice be circumscrib'd Unto the voice and yielding of that body Whereof he is the head. Then if he says loves you, If fits your wisdom so far to believe it As he in his particular act and place May give his saying deed; which is no further Than the main voice of Denmark goes withal. Then weigh what loss your honour may sustaie If with too credent ear you list his songs, Or lose your heart, or your chastie treasure op. To his unmaster'd importunity, Fear it, Ophelia, fear it, my dear sister, And keep you in the rear of your affection, Out of the shot and danger of desire. The chariest maid is prodigal enough If she unmask her beauty to the moon; Virtue itself 'scapes not calumnions strokes; The canker galls the infants of the spring Too oft before their buttons be disclos'd, And in the morne and liquid dew of youth Contagious blastments are most imminent. Be wary then; best safety lies in fear: Youth to itself rebels, though none else near. Oph. I shall the effect of this good less keep, As watchman to my heart. But, good brother, Do not, as some ungracious pastors do, Show me the steep and thorny way to heaven Whiles, like a puff'd and reckless libertine, His hand of the primrose path of dalliance trends And recks not his own rode. Laer. O! fear me not I stay too long; but here my father comes.

Exit Polonius.

A double blessing is a double grace; Occasion smiles upon a second leave.
the wind sits in the shoulder of your sail, and you are stay'd for. There; my blessing with thee!
and these few precepts in my memory see thou character. Give thy thoughts no tongue,
for any unproportion'd thought his act. 59
a thou familiar, but by no means vulgar;
he friends thou hast, and their adoption tried,
rappe them to thy soul with hoops of steel;
at do not dull thy path with entertainment of each new-hatch'd, unled'd comrade. Beware of entrance to a quarrel, but being in,
hear 't that the opposed may beware of thee.
Live every man thine ear, but few thy voice;
take each man's censure, but reserve thy judgment.

mostly thy habit as thy purse can buy,
but not express'd in fancy; rich, not gaudy;
or the apparel oft proclaims the man,
and they in France of the best rank and station are most select and generous, chief in that.

Neither a borrower nor a lender be;
or loan off loses both itself and friend,
and borrowing dulls the edge of husbandry.
This above all: to thine own self be true,
and it must follow, as the night the day,
Thou canst not then be false to any man.

farewell; my blessing season this in thee!

Lear. Most humbly do I take my leave, my lord.
Pol. The time invites you; go, your servants tend.

Lear. Farewell, Ophelia; and remember well
What I have said to you.
Oph. 'Tis in my memory lock'd,
and you yourself shall keep the key of it.

Lear. Farewell.

Pol. What is 't, Ophelia, he hath said to you?
Oph. So please you, something touching the Lord Hamlet.

Pol. Marry, well bethought:

'Is told me, he hath very oft of late
Given private time to you; and you yourself
Have of your audience been most free and Bounteous.

If it be so, as so 'tis put on me,
And that in way of caution, I must tell you,
You do not understand yourself so clearly
As it behoves my daughter and your honour.
What is between you? give me up the truth.

Oph. He hath, my lord, of late made many Tenders
Of his affection to me.

Pol. Affection! pooh! you speak like a green girl,

Unsifted in such perilous circumstance.

Do you believe his tenders, as you call them?

Oph. I do not know, my lord, what I should think.

Pol. Marry, I'll teach you: think yourself a baby,

That you have taken these tenders for true pay,
Which are not sterling. Tender yourself more dearly;
Or, not to crack the wind of the poor phrase,
Running it thus, you'll tender me a fool.

Oph. My lord, he hath importun'd me with love
In honourable fashion.

Pol. Ay, fashion you may call it; go to, go to.

Oph. And hath given countenance to his speech, my lord,
With almost all the holy vows of heaven.

Pol. Ay, springs to catch woodcocks. I do know,

When the blood burns, how prodigal the soul
Lends the tongue vows: these blazes, daughter,
Giving more light than heat, extinct in both,

Even in their promise, as it is a making.

You must not take for five. From this time
Be somewhat scatter'd of your maiden presence;
Set your entreatments at a higher rate than a command to parley. For Lord Hamlet, Believe so much in him, that he is young,
And with a larger tetter may he walk
Than may be given you: in few, Ophelia,
Do not believe his vows, for they are brokers,
Not of that dye which their investments show,
But more implorators of unholy suits,
Breathing like sanctified and pious bawds,

The better to beguile. This is for all:
I would not, in plain terms, from this time forth,
Have you so slander any moment leisure,
As to give words or talk with the Lord Hamlet.

Look to 't, I charge you; come your ways.

Oph. I shall obey, my lord.

Exit.

SCENE IV.—The Platform.

Enter HAMLET, HORATIO, and MARCELLUS.

Ham. The air bites shrewdly; it is very cold.
Hor. It is a nipping and an eager air.
Ham. What hour now?
Hor. I think it lacks of twelve.
Mor. No, it is struck.
Hor. Indeed? I heard it not: it then draws near the season
Wherein the spirit held his wont to walk.

A flourish of trumpets, and ordnance shot off, within.

What does this mean, my lord?

Ham. The king doth wake to-night and takes his rouse,

Keeps wassail, and the swaggering up-spring
reels;
And as he drains his draughts of Rhenish down,
The kettle-drum and trumpet thus bray out
The triumph of his pledge.

Hor. Is it a custom?

Ham. Ay, marry, is 't;
But to my mind, though I am native here
And to the manner born, it is a custom
More honour'd in the breach than the observance.
This heavy-headed revel east and west
Makes us traduc'd and tax'd of other nations;
They clepe us drunkards, and with swinish phrase
Soil our addition; and indeed it takes From our achievements, though perform'd at height,
The pith and marrow of our attribute.
So, oft it chances in particular men,
That for some vicious mole of nature in them,
As, in their birth, wherein they are not guilty,
Since nature cannot choose his origin,
By the o'er-growth of some complexion,
Oft breaking down the pales and forts of reason,
Or by some habit that too much o'er-

The form of plausible manners; thus Carrying, I say, the stamp of our Being nature's livery, or fortune's star,
Their virtues else, be they as pure as grace,
As infinite as man may undergo,
Shall in the general censure take corruption
From that particular fault: the dale of caine
Doth all the noble substance of a doubt
To his own scandal.

Enter Ghost.

Hor. Look, my lord, it comes!
Ham. Angels and ministers of grace defend us!
Be thou a spirit of health or goblin damn'd,
Bring with thee airs from heaven or blasts from hell,
Be thy intents wicked or charitable,
Thou com'st in such a questionable shape
That I will speak to thee: I'll call thee Hamlet,
King, father; royal Dane, O! answer me:
Let me not burst in ignorance; but tell
Why thy canoniz'd bones, hearsed in death,
Have burst their ceramic; why the sepulchre,
Wherein we saw thee quietly inter'd,
Hath ope'd his ponderous and marble jaws,
To cast thee up again. What may this mean,
That thou, dead corse, again in complete steel
Revisit'st thine glimpses of the moon,
Making night hideous; and we fools of nature
So horridly to shake our dispositions
With thoughts beyond the reaches of our souls?
Say, why is this? wherefore? what should we do?

Ghost beckons Hamlet.

Hor. It beckons you to go away with it,
As if it some impartment did desire
To you alone.

Mar. Look, with what courteous action
It waves you to a more removed ground:
But do not go with it.

Hor. No, by no means.

Ham. It will not speak; then I will follow it.

Hor. Do not, my lord.

Ham. Why, what should be the fear?
I do not set my life at a pin's fee;
And for my soul, what can it do to that,
Being a thing immortal as itself?
It waves me forth again; I'll follow it.

Hor. What if it tempt you toward the flood,
your lord,
Or to the dreadful summit of the cliff
That beetles o'er his base into the sea,
And there assume some other horrible form,
Which might deprive your sovereignty of reason
And draw you into madness? think of it;
The very place puts toys of desperation,
Without more motive, into every brain
That looks so many fathoms to the sea
And hears it roar beneath.

Ham. It waves me still: go on, I'll follow thee.

Mar. You shall not go, my lord.

Ham. Hold off your hands! so

Hor. Be rule'd; you shall not go.

Ham. My fate cries out,

And makes each petty artery in this body
As hardly as the Nemean lion's nerve.

Ghost beckons.

Still am I call'd. Unhand me, gentlemen,
Breaking from them.

By heaven! I'll make a ghost of him that lets

Go on, I'll follow thee.

Exeunt Ghost and Hamlet.
wicked wit and gifts, that have the power to seduce! won to his shameful lust he will of my most seeming-virtuous queen. Hamlet! what a falling-off was there? come, me, whose love was of that dignity that it went hand in hand even with the vow made to her in marriage; and to decline pon a wretch whose natural gifts were poor to those of mine! ut virtue, as it never will be mov'd, though lewdness court it in a shape of heaven, a lust, though, to a radiant angel link'd, 't will save itself in a celestial bed, nd prey on garboge, ut, soft! methinks I scent the morning air; rief let me be. Sleeping within mine orchard, y custom always in the afternoon, pon my secure hour thy uncle stole, 7th juice of cursed hebona in a vial, nd in the porches of mine ears did pour he leperous distilment; whose effect olds such an enmity with blood of man hat swift as quicksilver it courses through the natural gates and alleys of the body, nd with a sudden vigour it doth possesd nd curd, like eager droppings into milk, he thin and wholesome blood: so did it mine; nd a most instant tetter bark'd about, lost lazar-like, with vile and loathsome crust, all my smooth body. hus was I, sleeping, by a brother's hand of life, of crown, of queen, at once dispatch'd; ut off even in the blossoms of my sin, house'd, disappointed, unam'd, do reckoning made, but sent to my account With all my imperfections on my head: I, horrible! O, horrible! most horrible! than hast nature in thee, bear it not; not the royal bed of Denmark be couch for luxury and damned incest. at, howsoever thou pursu'st this act, snt not thy mind, nor let thy soul contrive against thy mother aught; leave her to heaven, and to those thorns that in her bosom lodge, p'rick and stitch her. Fare thee well at once! the glow-worm shows the matin to be near, and 'gins to pale his uneffectual fire; adieu, adieu! Hamlet, remember me. Exit. Ham. O all you host of heaven! O earth! What else? And shall I couple hell? O fie! Hold, hold, my heart; And you, my sinews, grow not instant old, But bear me stiffly up! Remember thee! Ay, thou poor ghost, while memory holds a seat in this distracted globe. Remember thee! yea, from the table of my memory I'll wipe away all trivial fond records, All saws of books, all forms, all pressures past, That youth and observation copied there; And thy commandment all alone shall live Within the book and volume of my brain, Unmix'd with baser matter: yes, by heaven! O most pernicious woman! O villain, villain, smilling, damned villain! My tables,—meet it is I set it down, That one may smile, and smile, and be a villain; At least I'm sure it may be so in Denmark:

So, uncle, there you are. Now to my word; 119

It is 'Adieu, adieu! I remember me.' I have sworn't.

Hor. Within. My lord! my lord!

Mar. Within. Lord Hamlet!

Hor. Within. Heaven secure him!

Ham. So be it!

Hor. Within. Hillo, ho, ho, my lord!

Ham. Hillo, ho, ho, boy! come, bird, come.

Enter Horatio and Marcellus.

Mar. How is 't, my noble lord?

Hor. What news, my lord?

Ham. O! wonderful.

Hor. Good my lord, tell it.

Ham. No; you will reveal it.

Hor. Not I, my lord, by heaven.

Mar. Nor I, my lord. 120

Ham. How say you, then; would heart of man once think it?

But you'll be secret?

Hor. Mar. Ay, by heaven, my lord.

Ham. There's ne'er a villain dwelling in all Denmark

But he's an arrant knave.

Hor. There needs no ghost, my lord, come from the grave,

To tell us this.

Ham. Why, right; you are i' the right;

And so, without more circumstance at all,

I hold it fit that we shake hands and part;

You, as your business and desire shall point you,

For every man hath business and desire, 130

Such as it is; and, for mine own poor part,

Look you, I'll go pray.

Hor. These are but wild and whirling words,

my lord.

Ham. I'm sorry they offend you, heartily;

Yes, faith, heartily.

Hor. There's no offence, my lord.

Ham. Yes, by Saint Patrick, but there is,

Horatio,

And much offence too. Touching this vision here,

It is an honest ghost, that let me tell you;

For your desire to know what is between us,

O'er master't as you may. And now, good friends,

As you are friends, scholars, and soldiers,

Give me one poor request.

Hor. What is 't, my lord? we will.

Ham. Never make known what you have seen to-night.

Hor. Mar. My lord, we will not.

Ham. Nay, but swear't.

Hor. In faith, My lord, not I.

Mar. Nor I, my lord, in faith.

Ham. Upon my sword.

Mar. We have sworn, my lord, already.

Ham. Indeed, upon my sword, indeed.

Ham. Ah, ha, boy! say'st thou so? art thou there, true-penny?

150

Come on,—you hear this fellow in the cellarage,—

Consent to swear.

Hor. Propose the oath, my lord.

Ham. Never to speak of this that you have seen;

Swear by my sword.
HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

[ACT]

Scene I.—A Room in Polonius’s House.

Enter Polonius and Reynaldo.

Pol. Give him this money and these notes, Reynaldo.

Reg. I will, my lord.

Pol. You shall do marvellous wisely, good Reynaldo,

Before you visit him, to make inquire

Of his behaviour.

Reg. My lord, I did intend it.

Pol. Marry, well said, very well said. Look you, sir,

Inquire me first what Danskers are in Paris;

And how, and who, what means, and where they keep,

What company, at what expense; and finding

By this encompassment and drift of question

That they do know my son, come you me nearer

Than your particular demands will touch it:

Take you, as ’twere, some distant knowledge

him;

As thus, ‘I know his father and his friends,

And, in part, him’; do you mark this, Reynaldo?

Reg. Ay, very well, my lord.

Pol. ‘Ay, and, in part, him; but, you may say not well;

But if’t be he I mean, he’s very wild,

Addicted so and so’; and there put on him

What forgeries you please; marry, none rank

As may dishonour him; take heed of that;

But, sir, such wanton, wild, and usual slips

As are companions noted and most known

To youth and liberty.

Reg. As gaming, my lord.

Pol. ‘Ay, or drinking, fencing, swearing,

Quarrelling,

Drabbing; you may go so far.

Reg. My lord, that would dishonour him.

Pol. Faith, no; as you may season it in charge.

You must not put another scandal on him,

That he is open to incontinency;

That’s not my meaning; but breathe his fault

So quaintly

That they may seem the taints of liberty,

The flash and outbreak of a fiery mind,

A savageness in unreclaimed blood,

Of general assault.

Reg. But, my good lord,—

Pol. Wherefore should you do this?

Reg. Ay, my lord.

I would know that.

Pol. Marry, sir, here’s my drif.

And, I believe, it is a fetch of warrant:

You laying these slight sullies on my son,

As ‘twere a thing a little soil’d i’ the working,

Mark you,

Your party in converse, him you would sound

Having ever seen in the pronominate crimes

The youth you breathe of guilty, be assur’d

He closes with you in this consequence;

‘Good sir, or so; or ‘friend, or ‘gentleman,

According to the phrase or the addition

Of man and country.

Reg. Very good, my lord.

Pol. And then, sir, does he this,—he does

What was I about to say? By the mass, I was about to say something: where did I leave?

Reg. At ‘closes in the consequence,’

‘friend or so,’ and ‘gentleman.’

Pol. At ‘closes in the consequence,’ a marry;

He closes with you thus: ‘I know the gentleman;

I saw him yesterday, or t’other day,

Or then, or then; with such, or such; and, as you say,

There was a gaming; there o’ertook in’s house

There falling out at tennis’; or perchance,

‘I saw him enter such a house of sale,’

Videlicet, a brothel, or so forth.

See you now;

Your bait of falsehood takes this carp of truth.
HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

Scene I. — Guildenstern and Hamlet talking. (Enter Ophelia or Polonius.)

Hamlet. What! Ophelia! what's the matter? Ophelia. Alas! my lord, I have been so affrighted. Polonius. With what? what's the name of God? Ophelia. My lord, as I was sewing in my closet, rd Hamlet, with his doublet all unbrac'd ; that upon his head ; his stockings fout'd, garter'd, and down-gyved to his ancle; he as his shirt; his knees knocking each other; d with a look so piteous in purport if he had been loosed out of hell speak of horrors, he comes before me. Polonius. Mad for thy love? Ophelia. What said he? Ophelia. He took me by the wrist and held me hard, he goes to the length of all his arm, did, with his other hand thus o'er his brow, falls to such perusal of my face; he would draw it. Long stay'd he so; a little shaking of mine arm, a thrice his head thus waving up and down, rais'd a sigh so piteous and profound at it did seem to shatter all his bulk and his being. That done, he lets me go, did, with his head over his shoulder turn'd, seem'd to find his way without his eyes; r out of doors he went without their help, to the last bend'd their light on me. Polonius. Come, go with me; I will go seek the king. This is the very ecstasy of love, those violent property forsores itself and leads the will to desperate undertakings, so oft as any passion under heaven, that does afflict our natures. I am sorry, that! have you given him any hard words of late? Ophelia. No, my good lord; but, as you did command, did repel his letters and denied is access to me, Polonius. That hath made him mad. I am sorry that with better heed and judgment had not quoted him; I fear'd he did but trifle, nd meant to wreck thee; but, beshrew my jealousy! y heaven, it is as proper to our age o' cast beyond ourselves in our opinions s it is common for the younger sort o' lack discretion. Come, go we to the king.

More to be known; which, being kept close, might move
More grief to hide than hate to utter love.

Come.

SCENE II. — A Room in the Castle.

Flourish. Enter King, Queen, Rosencrantz, Guildenstern, and Attendants.

King. Welcome, dear Rosencrantz and Guildenstern!
Moreover that we much did long to see you, The need we have to use you did provoke Our hasty sending. Something have you heard Of Hamlet's transformation; so call it, Since not the exterior nor the inward man Resembles that it was. What it should be, More than his father's death, that thus hath put him
So much from the understanding of himself, I cannot dream of: I entreat you both, That, being of so young days brought up with him, And since so neighbour'd to his youth and humour,
That you vouchsafe your rest here in our court Some little time; so by your companies To draw him on to pleasures, and to gather, So much as from occasion you may glean, Whether aught to us unknown afflicts him thus, That, open'd, lies within our remedy.

Queen. Good gentlemen, he hath much talk'd of you;
And sure I am two men there are not living To whom he more adheres. If it will please you To show us so much gentry and good will As to expend your time with us awhile, For the supply and profit of our hope, Your visitation shall receive such thanks As fits a king's remembrance.

Rosencrantz. Both your majesties Might, by the sovereign power you have of us, Put your dear pleasures more into command Than to entreat.

Guil. We both obey, And here give up ourselves, in the full bent To lay our service freely at your feet, To be commanded.

King. Thanks, Rosencrantz and gentle Guildenstern.

Queen. Thanks, Guildenstern and gentle Rosencrantz:
And I beseech you instantly to visit My too much chang'd son. Go, some of you, And bring these gentlemen where Hamlet is. Guil. Heavens make our presence and our practices Pleasant and helpful to him!

Queen. Ay, amen!

Exeunt Rosencrantz, Guildenstern, and some Attendants.

Enter Polonius.

Pol. The ambassadors from Norway, my good lord,
Are joyfully return'd.

King. Thou still hast been the father of good news.

Pol. Have I, my lord? Assure you, my good liege,
I hold my duty, as I hold my soul,
Both to my God and to my gracious king;
And I do think, or else this brain of mine
Hunts not the trail of policy so sure
As it hath us'd to do, that I have found
The very cause of Hamlet's lunacy.

King. O! speak of that; that do I long to hear.

Pol. Give first admittance to the ambassadors;
My news shall be the fruit to that great feast.

King. Thyself do grace to them, and bring them in. Exit POLONIUS.

He tells me, my sweet queen, that he hath found
The head and source of all your son's distemper.
Queen. I doubt it is no other but the main;
His father's death, and our o'erhasty marriage.
King. Well, we shall sift him.

Re-enter POLONIUS, with VOLTIMAND and CORNELIUS.

Welcome, my good friends.

Say, Voltimand, what from our brother Norway?
VOLT. Most fair return of greetings and desires.
Upon our first, he sent out to suppress
His nephew's levies, which to him appear'd
To be a preparation 'gainst the Polack;
But, better look'd into, he truly found
It was against your highness: whereat griev'd,
That so his sickness, age, and impotence
Was falsely borne in hand, sends out arrests
On Fortinbras; which he, in brief, obeyes,
Receives rebuke from Norway, and in fine
Makes vow before his uncle never more
To give the assay of arms against your majesty.

WHEREON Old Norway, overcome with joy,
Gives him three thousand crowns in annual fee,
And his commission to employ those soldiers,
So levied as before, against the Polack;
With an entreaty, herein further shown,
That it might please you to give quiet pass
Through your dominions for this enterprise,
On such regards of safety and allowance
As therein are set down.

King. It likes us well;
And at our more consider'd time we'll read,
Answer, and think upon this business:
Meantime we thank you for your well-took labour.
Go to your rest; at night we'll feast together:
Most welcome home!

EXECUT Voltimand and Cornelius.

Pol. This business is well ended.

My liege, and madam, to expostulate
What majesty should be, what duty is,
Why day is day, night night, and time is time,
Were nothing but to waste night, day, and time.
Therefore, since brevity is the soul of wit,
And tediousness the limbs and outward flourishes,
I will be brief. Your noble son is mad:
Mad call I it; for, to define true madness,
What is 't but to be nothing else but mad?
But let that go.

Queen. More matter, with less art.

— Pol. Madam, I swear I use no art at all.
That he is mad, 'tis true; 'tis true 'tis pity;
And pity 'tis 'tis true: a foolish figure;
But farewell it, for I will use no art.
Mad let us grant him, then; and now remains
That we find out the cause of this effect,
Or rather say, the cause of this defect,
For this effect defective comes by cause;
Thus it remains, and the remainder thus.
Perpend:
I have a daughter; have, while she is mine;
Who, in her duty and obedience, mark,
Hath given me this. Now gather, and surmise.

To the celestial, and my soul's idol, the most beautiful Ophelia,—

That's an ill phrase, a vile phrase; 'beautiful is a vile phrase; but you shall hear. Thus:

In her excellent white bosom, these, etc.

Queen. Came this from Hamlet to her?
Pol. Good madam, stay awhile; I will faithful,

Doubt thou the stars are fire;
Doubt that the sun doth move;
Doubt truth to be a liar;
But never doubt I love.

O dear Ophelia! I am ill at these numbers; have not art to reckon my groans; but that I may the best, o most best! believe it. Adieu.

Thine evenmore, most dear lady, whilst th'
machine is to him,

HAMLET.

This in obedience hath my daughter shown me
And more above, hath his solicitations,
As they fell out by time, by means, and place
All given to mine ear.

King. But how hath she receiv'd his love?
Pol. What do you think of me?

King. As of a man faithful and honorable — Pol. I would faint prove so. But what mig you think,
When I had seen this hot love on the wing,
As I perceived it, I must tell you that,
Before my daughter told me, what might you
Or my dear majesty, your queen here, think,
If I had play'd the desk or table-book,
Or given my heart a winking, mute and dumb
Or look'd upon this love with idle sight;
What might you think? No, I went round work,
And my young mistress thus I did bespeak;
'Lord Hamlet is a prince, out of thy star;
This must not be': and then I precepts gave he
That she should look herself from his resort,
Admit no messengers, receive no tokens.
Which done, she took the fruits of my advice
And he, repulsed, a short tale to make,
Fell into a sadness, then into a fast,
Thence to a watch, thence into a weakness,
Thence to a lightness; and by this declension
Into the madness wherein he raves,
And all we wait for.

King. Do you think tis this?

Queen. It may be, very likely.

Pol. Hath there been such a time, I'd fa know that,
That I have positively said 'Tis so,'
When it prov'd otherwise?

King. Not that I know.

Pol. Pointing to his head and shoulder. Ta this from this, if this be otherwise.

If circumstances lead me, I will find are truth is hid, though it were hid indeed in the centre.

ing.
How may we try it further?
o. You know sometimes he walks four hours together in the lobby.

 reusable.
So he does indeed.

ol. At such a time I'll lose my daughter
to him;

ou and I behind an array then,

k the encounter; if he love her not,

be not from his reason fall'n thereon,

me be no assistant for a state,

keep a farm and carters.

ing.
We will try it.

 reusable.
But, look, where sadly the poor wretch comes reading.

ol. Away! I do beseech you, both away.

board him presently.

Execute KING, QUEEN, and Attendants.

Enter HAMLET, reading.

O! give me leave.

y does my good Lord Hamlet?

am. Well, God-a-mercy.

ol. Do you know me, my lord?

am. Excellent well; you are a fishmonger.

ol. Not I, my lord.

am. Then I would you were so honest a man.

ol. Honest, my lord!

am. Ay, sir; to be honest, as this world goes,

be one man picked out of ten thousand.

ol. That's very true, my lord.

am. For if the sun brend maggots in a dead being a god kissing carion,—Have you a ighter!

ol. I have, my lord.

am. Let her not walk i' the sun: conception blessing; but not as your daughter may serve. Friend, look to 't.

a.

 Aside. How say you by that? Still harp-on my daughter: yet he knew me not at first;

I was a fishmonger: he is far gone, far and truly is my youth I suffered much safety for love; very near this. I'll speak am again. What do you read, my lord?

am. Words, words, words.

am. What is the matter, my lord?

am. Between who?

am. I mean the matter that you read, my lord.

am. Slanders, sir: for the satirical rogue here that old men have grey beards, that faces are wrinkled, their eyes purging thick ser and plum-tree gum, and that they have entiful lack of wit, together with most weak

as: all which, sir, though I most powerfully

potently believe, yet I hold it not honestly have it thus set down; for yourself, sir, uld be old as I am, if like a crab you could backward.

Aside. Though this be madness, yet there method in 't. Will you walk out of the air,

lord?

am. Into my grave?

ol. Indeed, that is out o' the air. Aside.

h pregnant sometimes his replies are! a iness that often madness hits on, which son and sanity could not so prosperously be ed of. I will leave him, and suddenly rive the means of meeting between him and my daughter. My honourable lord, I will most humly take my leave of you.

Hamm. You cannot, sir, take from me any thing that I will more willingly part withal; except my life, except my life, except my life.

Pol. Fare you well, my lord.

Hamm. These tedious old fools!

Enter Rric ENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.

Pol. You go to seek the Lord Hamlet; there

he is.

Rosc. To POLONIUS. God save you, sir!

Exit Polonia.

Guilt. My honour'd lord!

Rosc. My most dear lord!

Hamm. My excellent good friends! How dost thou,

GUILDENSTERN? Ah, Rosencrantz! Good

lads, how do ye both?

Rosc. As the indifferent children of the earth.

Guilt. Happy in that we are not over-happy;

On Fortune's cap we are not the very button.

Rosc. Nor the soles of her shoe?

Rosc. Neither, my lord.

Hamm. Then you live about her waist, or in the middle of her favours?

Guilt. Faith, her privates we.

Hamm. In the secret parts of Fortune! O! most true; she is a strumpet. What news?

Rosc. None, my lord, but that the world's grown honest.

Hamm. Then is doomsday near; but your news is not true. Let me question more in particular:

what have you, my good friends, deserved at the hands of Fortune, that she sends you to prison hither?

Gilt. Prison, my lord!

Hamm. Denmark's a prison.

Rosc. Then is the world one.

Hamm. A goodly one; in which there are many confines, wards, and dungeons, Denmark being one of the worst.

Rosc. We think not so, my lord.

Hamm. Why then 'tis none to you; for there is nothing either good or bad, but thinking makes it so: to me it is a prison.

Rosc. Why, then your ambition makes it one;

'tis too narrow for your mind.

Hamm. O God! I could be bounded in a nutshell, and count myself a king of infinite space, were it not that I have bad dreams.

Guilt. Which dreams indeed are ambition, for the very substance of the ambitions is merely the shadow of a dream.

Hamm. A dream itself is but a shadow.

Rosc. Truly, and I hold ambition of so airy and light a quality that it is but a shadow's shadow.

Hamm. Then are our beggars bodies, and our monarchs and outstretched heroes the beggars' shadows. Shall we to the court? for, by my fay, I cannot reason.

Rosc. Guilt. We'll wait upon you.

Hamm. No such matter; I will not sort you with the rest of my servants, for, to speak to you like an honest man, I am most dreadfully attended. But, in the beaten way of friendship, what make you at Elsinore?

Rosc. To visit you, my lord; no other occasion.

Hamm. Beggar that I am, I am even poor in thanks; but I thank you: and sure, dear friends, my thanks are too dear a halfpenny. Were you not sent for? Is it your own inclining? Is it a free visitation? Come, come; deal justly with me: come, come; nay, speak.

Guilt. What should we say, my lord?

Ham. Why, any thing, but to the purpose. You were sent for; and there is a kind of confession in your looks which your modesties have not craft enough to colour: I know the good king and queen have sent for you.

Ros. To what end, my lord?

Ham. That you must teach me. But let me conjure you, by the rights of our fellowship, by the consonancy of our youth, by the obligation of our ever-preserved love, and by what more dear a better proposer could charge you withal, be even and direct with me, whether you were sent for or no.

Ros. Aside to Guildenstern. What say you?

Ham. Aside. Nay, then I have an eye of you. If you love me, hold not off.

Guilt. My lord, we were sent for.

Ham. I will tell you why; so shall my anticipation prevent your discovery, and your secrecy to the king and queen mount no feather. I have of late, but wherefore I know not, lost all my mirth, forgone all custom of exercises; and indeed it goes so heavily with my disposition that this goodly frame, the earth, seems to me a sterile promontory; this most excellent canopy, the air, look you, this brave o'erhanging firmament, this majestic roof fretted with golden fire, why, it appears no other thing to me than a foul and pestilent congregation of vapours. What a piece of work is a man! how noble in reason! how infinite in faculty! in form and moving how express and admirable! in action how like an angel! in apprehension how like a god! the beauty of the world! the paragon of animals! And yet, to me, what is this quintessence of dust? man delights not me: no, nor woman neither, though by your smiling you seem to say so.

Ros. My lord, there was no such stuff in my thoughts.

Ham. Why did you laugh then, when I said 'man delights not me'?

Ros. To think, my lord, if you delight not in man, what lepton entertainment the players shall receive from you: we coted them on the way; and hither are they coming to offer you service.

Ham. He that plays the king shall be welcome; his majesty shall have tribute of me; the adventurous knight shall use his cloak and target; the lover shall not sigh gratis; the humorous man shall end his part in peace; the clown shall make those laugh whose lungs are tickle o' the sere; and the lady shall say her mind freely, or the blank verse shall halt for 't. What players are they?

Ros. Even those you were wont to take delight in, the tragedians of the city.

Ham. How chances it they travel? their residence, both in reputation and profit, was better both ways.

Ros. I think their inhibition comes by the means of the late innovation.

Ham. Do they hold the same estimation they did when I was in the city? are they so followed? Ros. No indeed they are not.

Ham. How comes it? do they grow rusty? Ros. Nay, their endeavour keeps in the way: but there is, sir, an acry of children, lilies, that cry out on the top of question, are most tyrannically clapped for 't: these now the fashion, and so berattle the company, so they call them, that many wear rapiers are afraid of goose-quills and dare scarce come thither.

Ham. What! are they children? who maintai 'em! how are they escoted? Will they pur the quality no longer than they can sing? they not say afterwards, if they should grat themselves to common players, as it is most if their means are no better, their writers them wrong; to make them exclaim against own succession?

Ros. Faith, there has been much to-do on b sides; and the nation holds it no sin to them to controversy: there was, for a while, money bid for argument, unless the poet a the player went to cuffs in the question.

Ham. Is't possible?

Guilt. O! there has been much throwing ab of brains.

Ham. Do the boys carry it away?

Ros. Ay, that they do, my lord; Hercules his load too.

Ham. It is not very strange; for my uncle King of Denmark, and those that would m seasons at his while my father lived, gave two forty, fifty, an hundred ducats a-piece, for picture in little. 'Sblood, there is something this more than natural, if philosophy could it out.

Flourish of trumpets with Guilt. There are the players.

Ham. Gentlemen, you are welcome to Elsin Your hands. Come, then; the appurtenances welcome is fashion and ceremony: let me come with you in this garb, lest my extent to players, which, I tell you, must show fairly ward, should more appear like entertainment than yours. You are welcome; but my un father and aunt-mother are deceived.

Guilt. In what, my dear lord?

Ham. I am but mad north-north-west: w the wind is southerly I know a hawk from handsaw.

Re-enter Polonius.

Pol. Well be with you, gentlemen!

Ham. Hark you, Guildenstern; and you t at each ear a hearer: that great baby you there is not yet out of his swaddling-clouts.

Ros. Happily he's the second time come them; for they say an old man is twice a ch

Ham. I will prophesy he comes to tell the players; mark it. You say right, sir Monday morning; 'twas so indeed.

Pol. My lord, I have news to tell you.

Ham. My lord, I have news to tell you. W Roscius was an actor in Rome,—

Pol. The actors are come hither, my lord.

Ham. Buz, buzz!

Pol. Upon my honour,—

Ham. Then came each actor on his ass.—

Pol. The best actors in the world, either tragedy, comedy, history, pastoral, pasto comical, historical-pastoral, tragical-histpri comical-historical-pastoral, scene in
We are welcome, masters; welcome, all. I am to see ye well: welcome, good friends! my old friend. Why, thy face is valanced. I saw thee last: come, thou to hear me Denmark? What! my young lady and mistress! 'r lady, your ladyship is nearer to heaven in when I saw you last, by the altitude of a opine. Pray God, your voice, like a piece of current gold, be not cracked within the rings, sers, you are all welcome. We'll e'en to 't French falconers, fly at any thing we see: I'll have a speech straight. Come, give us taste of your quality; come, a passionate tech.

First Play. What speech, my good lord?

Ham. I heard thee speak me a speech once, it was never acted; or, if it was, not above see; for the play, I remember, pleased not the lion; 'twas caviare to the general: but it was, I received it, and others, whose judgments such matters cried in the top of mine, an ellent play, well digested in the scenes, set wn with as much modesty as cunning. I member one said there were no sallets in the es to make the matter savoury, nor no matter the phrase that might indicted the author of cacation; but called it an honest method, wholesome as sweet, and by very much more insome than fine. One speech in it I chiefly red; 'twas Æneas' tale to Dido; and there-out of it especially, where he speaks of Priam's daughter. If it live in your memory, begin at is line: let me see, let me see;—

he rugged Pyrrhus, like the Hyrcanian beast,—

Tis well; I'll have thee speak out the

That lend a tyrannous and a damned light To their vile murders: roasted in wrath and fire, And thus o'er-sized with coagulate gore, With eyes like carbuncles, the hellish Pyrrhus Old grandparents Priam seeks.

So, proceed you. Pol. 'Fore God, my lord, well spoken; with good accent and good discretion.

First Play. Anon he finds him

Striking too short at Greeks; his antique sword, Rebellious to his arm, lies where it falls, Repugnant to command. Unequal match'd, Pyrrhus at Priam drives; in rage strikes wide; But with the whip and wind of his fell sword The unaverted father falls. Then senseless Hecuba, Seeming to feel this blow, with flaming top Stoops to his base, and with a hideous crash Takes prisoner Pyrrhus' ear: for, lo! his sword, Which was declining on the milky head Of reverend Priam, seem'd v' the air to stick: So, as a painted tyrant, Pyrrhus stood, And like a neutral to his will and matter, Did nothing.

But, as we often see, against some storm, A silence in the heavens, the rock stand still, The bold winds speechless and the orb below As hush as death, anon the dreadful thunder Doth read the region; so, after Pyrrhus' pause, Aroused vengeance sets him new a-work;

And never did the Cyclops' hammers fall On Mars's armour, for, 'e dur'd for proof etern, With less remorse than Pyrrhus' bleeding sword Now falls on Priam.

Out, out, thou strumpet, Fortune! All you gods, In general synod, take away her power; Break all the spoons and fellettes from her wheel, And bowl the round wave down the hill of heaven As low as to the fiends!

Pol. This is too long.

Ham. It shall to the barber's, with your beard. Prithee, say on: he's for a jig or a tale of bawdry, or he sleeps. Say on; come to Hecuba.

First Play. But who, O! who had seen the mobled queen—

Ham. 'The mobled queen?'

Pol. That's good; 'mobled queen' is good.

First Play. Run barefoot up and down, threat'ning the flames

With bisson rheum: a clout upon that head Where late the diadem stood; and for a robe, About her loins, and all o'er-temned loins, A blanket, in the alarm of fear caught up; Who this had seen, with tongue in venom steep'd, 'Gainst Fortune's state would treason have pro-nounced;

But if the gods themselves did see her then, When she saw Pyrrhus make malicious sport In mimicing with his sword her husband's limbs, The instant burst of clamour that she made, Unless things mortal move them not at all, Would have made milch the burning eyes of heaven, And passion in the gods.

Pol. Look! whe'er he has not turned his colour and has tears in's eyes. Prithee, no more.

Ham. 'Tis well; I'll have thee speak out the rest of this soon. Good my lord, will you see the players well bestowed? Do you hear, let them be well used; for they are the abstracts and brief chronicles of the time: after your death you were better have a bad epitaph than their ill report while you live.

Pol. My lord, I will use them according to their desert.

Ham. God's bodkins, man, much better; use every man after his desert, and who should 'scape whining? Use them after your own honour and dignity: the less they deserve, the more merit is in your bounty. Take them in.

Pol. Come, sirs.

Ham. Follow him, friends: we'll hear a play to-morrow. Exit Polonius, with all the Players but the First.

Dost thou hear me, old friend; can you play
the Murder of Gonzago?

First Play. Ay, my lord.

Ham. We'll ha' to-morrow night. You could, for a need, study a speech of some dozen or sixteen lines, which I would set down and insert in 't, could you not?

First Play. Ay, my lord.

Ham. Very well. Follow that lord; and look you mock him not. Exit First Player.

My good friends, I'll leave you till night; you are welcome to Elsinore.

Ros. Good my lord!

Ham. Ay, so, God be wi' ye.

Execute ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.

Now I am alone.

O! what a rogue and peasant slave am I:
Is it not monstrous that this player here,
But in a fiction, in a dream of passion,
Could force his soul so to his whole conceit
That from her working all his visage wann'd,
Tears in his eyes, distraction in 's aspect,
A broken voice, and his whole function suitning
With forms to his conceit? and all for nothing!
For Hecuba!
What 's Hecuba to him or he to Hecuba
That he should weep for her? What would he do
Had he the motive and the cue for passion
That I have? He would drown the stage with ears,
And cleave the general ear with horrid speech,
Make mad the guilty and appall the free,
Confound the ignorant, and amaze indeed
The very faculties of eyes and ears.
Yet I,
A dull and muddy-mettled rascal, peak,
Like John-a-dreams, unpregnant of my cause,
And can say nothing; no, not for a king,
Upon whose property and most dear life
A damn'd defeat was made. Am I a coward?
Who calls me villain? breaks my pate across?
Pink's off my beard and blows it in my face?
Tweaks me by the nose? gives me the lie i' the throat
As deep as to the lungs? Who does me this?
Ha!
'Sounds! I should take it, for it cannot be
But I am pigeon-liver'd, and lack gill
To make oppression bitter, or ere this
I should have fatt'd all the region kites
With this slave's offal. Bloody, bawdy villain!

Remorseless, treacherous, lecherous, kindle
villain!

O! vengeance!

Why, what an ass am I! This is most brave,
That I, the son of a dear father murder'd,
Prompted to my revenge by heaven and hell,
Must, like a whore, unpack my heart with word
And fall a-cursing, like a very drab,
A scullion!

Fie upon 't! foh! About, my brain! I ha' heard
That guilty creatures sitting at a play
Have by the very cunning of the scene
Been struck so to the soul that presently
They have proclaim'd their malefactions;
For murder, though it have no tongue, will spe With most miraculous organ. I'll have the players
Play something like the murder of my father
Before mine uncle; I'll observe his looks;
I'll tent him to the quick: if he but bleech
I know my course. The spirit that I have see
May be the devil; and the devil hath power
To assume a pleasing shape; yea, and perhaps
Out of my weakness and my melancholy,
As he is very potent with such spirits,
Abuses me to damn me. I'll have grounds
More relative than this: the play's the thing
Wherein I'll catch the conscience of the king.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Room in the Castle.

Enter KING, QUEEN, POLONIUS, OPHELIA, ROSENCRANTZ, and GUILDENSTERN.

King. And can you, by no drift of circumstance
Get from him why he puts on this confusion,
Grating so harshly all his days of quiet
With turbulent and dangerous lunacy?

Ros. He does confess he feels himself distracted.
But from what cause he will by no means speak.

Guil. Nor do we find him forward to sound,
But, with a crafty madness, keeps aloof,
When we would bring him on to some confession
Of his true state.

Queen. Did he receive you well?

Ros. Most like a gentleman.

Guil. But with much forcing of his disposition.

Ros. Niggard of question, but of our demand
Most free in his reply.

Queen. Did you assay him

Ros. Madam, it so fell out that certain player
We o'er-raft on the way; of these we told him
And there did seem in him a kind of joy
To hear of it: they are about the court,
And, as I think, they have already order
This night to play before him.

Pol. 'Tis most true

And he beseech'd me to entreat your majesties
To hear and see the matter.

King. With all my heart; and it doth much content me
To hear him so inclin'd.

Good gentlemen, give him a further edge,
And drive his purpose on to these delights.
HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

Act I.

Scene I.

Ham. To be, or not to be: that is the question:
Whether 'tis nobler in the mind to suffer
The slings and arrows of outrageous fortune, or to take arms against a sea of troubles,
And by opposing end them? To die: to sleep;
No more; and by a sleep to say we end
The heart-ache and the thousand natural shocks
That flesh is heir to, 'tis a consummation
Devoutly to be wish'd. To die, to sleep;
Sleep: perchance to dream: ay, there's the rub;
For in that sleep of death what dreams may come
When we have shuffled off this mortal coil,
Must give us pause. There's the respect
That makes calamity of so long life;
For who would bear the whips and scorns of time,
The oppressor's wrong, the proud man's contumely,
The pangs of despis'd love, the law's delay,
The insolence of office, and the spurds
That patient merit of the unworthy takes,
But he himself might his quietus make
With a bare bodkin? who would fardels bear,
Or grunt and sweat under a weary life,
But that the dread of something after death,
The undiscover'd country from whose bourn
Traveller returns, puzzles the will,
And makes us rather bear those ills we have Than fly to others that we know not of?
Thus conscience does make cowards of us all;
And thus the native hue of resolution
Is sicklied o'er with the pale cast of thought,
And enterprises of great pith and moment
With this regard their currents turn awry,
And lose the name of action. Soft you now! The fair Ophelia! Nymph, in thy orisons
Be all my sins remember'd.

Oph. Good my lord,
How does your honour for this many a day?

Ham. I humbly thank you; well, well, well.

Oph. My lord, I have remembrances of yours,
That I have longed to re-deliver;
I pray you, now receive them.

Ham. No, not I;
I never gave you aught.

Oph. My honour'd lord, you know right well you did;
And, with them, words of so sweet breath compos'd
As made the things more rich; their perfume lost,
Take these again; for to the noble mind
Rich gifts wax poor when givers prove unkind.

There, my lord.

Ham. Ha, ha! are you honest?

Oph. My lord?

Ham. Are you fair?

Oph. What means your lordship?

Ham. That if you be honest and fair, your honesty should admit no discourse to your beauty:

Oph. Could beauty, my lord, have better commerce than with honesty?

Ham. Ay, truly; for the power of beauty will sooner transform honesty from what it is to a bawd than the force of honesty can translate beauty into his likeness: this was sometime a paradox, but now the time gives it proof. I did love you once.

Oph. Indeed, my lord, you made me believe so.

Ham. You should not have believed me; for virtue cannot so inoculate our old stock but we shall relish of it: I loved you not.

Oph. I was the more deceived.

Ham. Get thee to a nunnery: why shouldst thou be a breeder of sinners? I am myself indifferent honest; but yet I could accuse me of such things that it were better my mother had not borne me. I am very proud, revengeful, ambitious; with more offences at my beck than I have thoughts to put them in, imagination to give them shape, or time to act them in. What should such fellows as I do crawling between earth and heaven? We are arrant knaves all; believe none of us. Go thy ways to a nunnery. Where's your father?

Oph. At home, my lord.

Ham. Let the doors be shut upon him, that he may play the fool no more where out in's own house. I knowew.

Oph. O! help him, you sweet heavens.

Ham. If thou dost marry, I'll give thee this plague for thy dowry: be thou as chaste as ice, as pure as snow, thou shalt not escape calumny. Get thee to a nunnery, go; farewell. Or, if thou wilt needs marry, marry a fool; for wise men know well enough what monsters you make
HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

Scene II.—A Hall in the Castle.

Enter Hamlet and certain Players.

Ham. Speak the speech, I pray you, as I pronounced it to you, trippingly on the tongue; but if you mouth it, as many of your players do, I had as lief the town-crier spoke my lines.

Nor do not saw the air too much with your hand, thus; but use all gently: for in the very torrent, tempest, and, as I may say, the wild wind of passion, you must acquire and beget a temperance that may give it smoothness. O, it offends me to the soul to hear a robust periwigs-pated fellow tear a passion to tatters, to very raggs, to split the ears of the groundlings, who for the most part are capable of nothing but inexplicable dumbl-shows and noise: would have such a fellow whipped for o'er doing Termagant; it out-heros Herod, pray you, avoid it.

First Play. I warrant your honour.

Ham. Be not too tame neither, but let you own discretion be your tutor: suit the action to the word, the word to the action; with th' special observance, that you o'erstep not the modesty of nature; for any thing so overdone is from the purpose of playing, whose end, both at the first and now, was and is, to hold, 'twere the mirror up to nature; to show virtue her own feature, scorn her own image, and the very age and body of the time: his form of pressure. Now, this overdone, or come tardy off, though it make the unskilful laugh, can but make the judicious grieve: the censure of the which one must in your allowance o'erweigh a whole theatre of others. O! there be players that have seen play, and heard others praise, and that highly, not to speak it profanely, the neither having the accent of Christians nor the guilt of Christian, pagan, nor man, have struttled and bellowed that I have thought son of nature's journeymen had made men and nought made them well, they imitated humanity abominably.

First Play. I hope we have reformed that differently with us.

Ham. O! reform it altogether. And let those that play your clowns speak no more than is set down for them; for there be of them that will themselves laugh, to set on some quantity of barren spectators to laugh too, though in the mean time some necessary question of the plot be then to be considered; that's villainous, and shows a most pitiful ambition in the fool that uses it. Go, make you ready. Exeunt Players.

Enter Polonius, Rosencrantz, and Guildenstern.

How now, my lord! will the king hear this piece of work?

Pol. And the queen too, and that presently.

Ham. Did the players make haste.

Exit Polonius

Will you two help to hasten them?

Ros., Guil. We will, my lord.

Exeunt Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.

Ham. What ho! Horatio!

Enter Horatio.

Hor. Here, sweet lord, at your service.

Ham. Horatio, thou art c'en as just a man As e'er my conversation cop'd withal.

Hor. O! my dear lord,—

Ham. Nay, do not think I flatter For what advancement may I hope from thee That no revenue hast but thy good spirits...
HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

feed and clothe thee? Why should the poor be flatter’d?

let the candied tongue lick absurd pomp, and crook the pregnant hinges of the knee here thrift may follow fawning. Dost thou hear?

my dear soul was mistress of her choice and could of men distinguish, her election th’seal’d thee for herself; for thou hast been one, in suffering all, that suffers nothing, man that fortune’s buffets and rewards as ta’en with equal thanks; and bless’d are those

but they are not a pipe for fortune’s finger sound what stop she please. Give me that man my heart’s core, ay, in my heart of heart,
I do thee. Something too much of man, here is a play to-night before the king;
scene of it comes near the circumstance which I have told thee of my father’s death:
prithee, when thou seest that act afoot, ven with the very comment of thy soul serve mine uncle; if his occulted guilt not itself unkennel in one speech, is a damned ghost that we have seen,
nd my imaginations are as foul s Vulcan’s stiethy. Give him heedful note;
nd I may en amuse to his face, nd after we will both our judgments join a censure of his seeming.

Well, my lord;
the steal aught the whilst this play is playing,
nd ‘scape detecting, I will pay the theft.

They are coming to the play; I must be idle:
let you a place.

March. A Flourish. Enter KING, QUEEN, POLENIO, OPHELIA, ROSENCRANTZ, GUILDENSTERN, and Others.

How fares our cousin Hamlet?

Excellent, i’ faith; of the chameleon’s ish: I eat the air, promise-crammed; you can’t of feed capons so.

I have nothing with this answer, Hamlet;
these words are not mine.

No, nor mine now. To Polonius. My lord, you played once i’ the university, you say?

That did i’ my lord, and was accounted a good actor.

And what did you enact?

I did enact Julius Caesar: I was killed i’ the Capitol; Brutus killed me.

It was a brute part of him to kill so capitally a calf there. Be the players ready?

Ay, my lord; they stay upon your patience.

Come hither, my good Hamlet, sit by me.

No, good mother, here’s metal more attractive.

To the King. O ho! do you mark that?

Lady, shall I lie in your lap?

Lying down at Ophelia’s feet.

No, my lord.

I mean, my head upon your lap?

Ay, my lord.
Since love our hearts and Hymen did our hands
Unite commutual in most sacred bands.

P. Queen. So many journeys may the sun and moon
Make us again count o'er ere love be done!
But, woo is me! you are so sick of late,
So far from cheer and from your former state,
That I distrust you. Yet, though I distrust, Discomfort you, my lord, it nothing must;
For women's fear and love holds quantity,
In neither aught, or in extremity.

Now, what my love is, proof hath made you know;
And as my love is siz'd, my fear is so.
Where love is great, the littlest doubts are fear;
Where little fears grow great, great love grows there.

P. King. Faith, I must leave thee, love, and shortly too;
My operant powers their functions leave to do:
And thou shalt live in this fair world behind,
Honour'd, belov'd; and haply one as kind
For husband shalt thou—

P. Queen. O! confound the rest;
Such love must needs be treason in my breast:

In second husband let me be accurst;
None wed the second but who kill'd the first.

Ham. Aside. Wormwood, wormwood.

P. Queen. The instances that second marriage move
Are base respects of thrift, but none of love;
A second time I kill my husband dead,
When second husband kisses me in bed.

P. King. I do believe you think what now you speak;

But what we do determine oft we break.
Purpose is but the slave to memory,
Of violent birth, but poor validity;
Which now, like fruit unripe, sticks on the tree,
But fall unskilful when they shall be o'er.

Most necessary 'tis that we forget
To pay ourselves what to ourselves is debt;
What to ourselves in passion we propose,
The passion ending, doth the purpose lose.
The violence of either grief or joy
Their own eneuctures with themselves destroy;
Where joy most scarce grief doth most plentiful,
Grief joys, joy grieves, on slender accident.
This world is not for age, nor 'tis not strange
That even our loves should with our fortunes change;
For 'tis a question left us yet to prove
Whether love lead fortune or else fortune love.

The great man down, you mark his favourite flies;
The poor advance'd makes friends of enemies.
And lustherto doth love on fortune tend,
For who not needs shall never lack a friend;
And who in want a hollow friend doth try
Directly seasons him his enemy.

But, orderly to end where I began,
Our wills and fates do so contrary run
That our devices still are overthrown,
Our thoughts are ours, their ends none of our own:
So think thou will no second husband wed;
But die thy thoughts when thy first lord is dead.

P. Queen. Nor earth to me give food, nor heaven light!

Sport and repose lock from me day and night!
To desperation turn my trust and hope!
An anchor's cheer in prison be my scope!
Would not this, sir, and a forest of feathers, if he rest of my fortunes turn Turk with me, with no Provincial roses on my raked shoes, get me fellowship in a cry of players, sir?

Hor. Half a share.

Ham. A whole one, I.

For thou dost know, O Damon dear,
This realm dismantled was
Of Jove himself; and now reigns here
A very, very—pajock.

Hor. You might have rimed.

Ham. O good Horatio! I'll take the ghost's lord for a thousand pound. Didst perceive?

Hor. Very well, my lord.

Ham. Upon the talk of the poisoning?

Hor. I did very well note him.

Ham. Ah, ha! Come, some music! come, he recorders!

For if the king like not the comedy,
Why then, belike, he likes it not, perdy.

Come, some music!

Re-enter Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.

Guil. Good my lord, vouchsafe me a word with you.

Ham. Sir, a whole history.

Guil. The king, sir.

Ham. Ay, sir, what of him?

Guil. Is in his retirement marvellous disempered.

Ham. With drink, sir?

Guil. No, my lord, rather with choler.

Ham. Your wisdom should show itself more icher to signify this to his doctor; for, for me to put him to his purgation would perhaps plunge him into far more choler.

Guil. Good my lord, put your discourse into one frame, and start not so wildly from my affray.

Ham. I am tame, sir; pronounce.

Guil. The queen, your mother, in most great affliction of spirit, hath sent me to you.

Ham. You are welcome.

Guil. Nay, good my lord, this courtesy is not of the right breed. If it shall please you to make me a wholesome answer, I will do your mother's commandment; if not, your pardon and my return shall be the end of my business.

Ham. Sir, I cannot.

Guil. What, my lord?

Ham. Make you a wholesome answer; my wit's diseased; but, sir, such answer as I can make you shall command; or, rather, as you say, my mother: therefore no more, but to the matter: my mother, you say,—

Ros. Then thus she says: your behaviour hath struck her into amazement and admiration.

Ham. O wonderous son, that can so astonish a mother! But is there no sequel at the heels of this mother's admiration? Impart.

Ros. She desires to speak with you in her closet ere you go to bed.

Ham. We shall obey, were she ten times our mother. Have you any further trade with us?

Ros. My lord, you once did love me.

Ham. And do still, by these pickers and stealers.

Ros. Good my lord, what is your cause of distemper? you do surely bar the door upon your own liberty, if you deny your griefs to your friend.

Ham. Sir, I lack advancement.

Ros. How can that be when you have the voice of the king himself for your succession in Denmark?

Ham. Ay, sir, but 'While the grass grows,—' the proverb is something musty.

Enter Players with recorders.

O! the recorders: let me see one. To withdraw with you: why do you go about to recover the wind of me, as if you would drive me into a toil?

Guil. O! my lord, if my duty be too bold, my love is too unmanfully.

Ham. I do not well understand that. Will you play upon this pipe?

Guil. My lord, I cannot.

Ham. I pray you.

Guil. Believe me, I cannot.

Ham. I do beseech you.

Guil. I know no touch of it, my lord.

Ham. 'Tis as easy as lying; govern these vantages with your finger and thumb, give it breath with your mouth, and it will discourse most eloquent music. Look you, these are the stops.

Guil. But these cannot I command to any utterance of harmony; I have not the skill.

Ham. Why, look you now, how unworthy a thing you make of me. You would play upon me; you would seem to know my stops; you would pluck out the heart of my mystery; you would sound me from my lowest note to the top of my compass; and there is much music, excellent voice, in this little organ, yet cannot you make it speak. 'Sblood! do you think I am easier to be played on than a pipe? Call me what instrument you will, though you can fret me, you cannot play upon me.

Enter Polonius.

God bless you, sir!

Pol. My lord, the queen would speak with you, and presently.

Ham. Do you see yonder cloud that's almost in shape of a camel?

Pol. By the mass, and 'tis like a camel, indeed.

Ham. Methinks it is like a weasel.

Pol. It is backed like a weasel.

Ham. Or like a whale?

Pol. Very like a whale.

Ham. Then will I come to my mother by and by. Aside. They fool me to the top of my bent. I will come by and by.

Pol. I will say so.

Exit.

Ham. By and by is easily said. Leave me, friends.

Exit all but Hamlet.

'Tis now the very witching time of night, when churchyards yawn and hell itself breathes out Contagion to this world: now could I drink hot blood,

And do such bitter business as the day

Would quake to look on. Soft! now to my mother.

O heart! lose not thy nature; let not ever

The soul of Nero enter this firm bosom;

Let me be cruel, but unnatural:

I will speak daggers to her, but use none;
HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

My tongue and soul in this be hypocrites; How in my words soever she be shent, To give them seals never, my soul, consent!

Exit.

SCENE III.—A Room in the Castle.

Enter King, Rosencrantz, and Guildenstern.

King. I like him not, nor stands it safe with us To let his madness range. Therefore prepare you; I your commission will forthwith dispatch, And he to England shall along with you. The terms of our estate may not endure Hazard so dangerous as doth hourly grow Out of his lunacies.

Guil. We will ourselves provide. Most holy and religious fear it is To keep those many many bodies safe: That live and feed upon your majesty.

Ros. The single and peculiar life is bound With all the strength and armour of the mind To keep itself from noyance; but much more That spirit upon whose weal depends and rests The lives of many. The cease of majesty Dies not alone, but like a gulf doth draw What's near it with it; it is a massy wheel, Fix'd on the summit of the highest mount, To whose huge spokes ten thousand lesser things Are mortis'd and adjoin'd; which, when it falls, Each small annexment, petty consequence, Attends the boiler's ruin. Never alone Did the King sigh, but with a general groan.

King. Arm you, I pray you, to this speedy voyage; For we will fetters put upon this fear, Which now goes too free-footed.

Ros. Guil. We will haste us.

Exeunt Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.

Enter Polonius.

Pol. My lord, he's going to his mother's closet: Behind the arras I'll convey myself To hear the process; I'll warrant she'll tax him home; And, as you said, and wisely was it said, 'Tis meet that some audience than a mother, Since nature makes them partial, should o'erhear The speech, of vantage. Fare you well, my liege: I'll call upon you ere you go to bed And tell you what I know.

King. Thanks, dear my lord.

Exit Polonius.

O! my offence is rank, it smells to heaven; It hath the primal eldest curse upon 't; A brother's murder! Pray can I not, Though inclination be as sharp as will: My stronger guilt defeats my strong intent; And, like a man to double business bound, I stand in pause where I shall first begin, And both neglect. What if this cursed hand Were thicker than itself with brother's blood, Is there not rain enough in the sweet heavens To wash it white as snow? Where to serves mercy But to confront the visage of offence? And what's in prayer but this two-fold force, To be forestalled ere we come to fall, Or pardon'd being down? Then I'll look up: My fault is past. But, O! what form of prayer Can serve my turn? 'Forgive me my foul murder!' That cannot be; since I am still possess'd Of those effects for which I did the murder, My crown, mine own ambition, and my queen, May one be pardon'd and retain the offence? In the corrupted currents of this world Offence's gilded hand may shove by justice, And oft 'tis seen the wicked prize itself Buys out the law; but 'tis not so above; There is no shuffling, there the action lies In his true nature, and we ourselves compel'd Even to the teeth and forehead of our faults To give in evidence. What then? what rests? Cry what repentance can; what can it not? Yet what can it, when one can not repent? O wretched state! O bosom black as death! O limed soul, that struggling to be free Art more engaged! Help, angels! make assay; Bow, stubborn knees; and, heart with strings of steel, Be soft as sinews of the new-born babe. All may be well.

Enter Hamlet.

Ham. Now might I do it yet, now he is praying; And now I'll do't: and so he goes to heaven; And so am I reveng'd: That would be scann'd; A villain kills my father; and for that, I, his sole son, do this same villain send To heaven. Why, this is hire and salary, not revenge. He took my father grossly, full of bread, With all his crimes broad blown, as flush as May; And how his audit stands who knows save heaven? But in our circumstance and course of thought 'Tis heavy with him. And am I then reveng'd, To take him in the purging of his soul, When he is fit and season'd for his passage! No. Up, sword, and know thou a more horrid hent; When he is drunk asleep, or in his rage, Or in the incestuous pleasure of his bed, At gaming, swearing, or about some act That has no relish of salvation in 't; Then trip him, that his heels may kick at heaven, And that his soul may be as damned and black As hell, whereeto it goes. My mother stays: This physic but prolongs thy sickly days. Exit.

The King rises and advances.

King. My words fly up, my thoughts remain below: Words without thoughts never to heaven go.

Exit.

SCENE IV.—The Queen's Closet.

Enter Queen and Polonius.

Pol. He will come straight. Look you lay home to him; Tell him his pranks have been too broad to bear with, And that your grace hath screen'd and stood between Much heat and him. I'll silence me e'en here. Pray you, be round with him.

Ham. Within. Mother, mother, mother!
Hamlet, Look here, upon this picture, and on this;
The counterfeit presentment of two brothers. See, what a grace was seated on this brow; Hyperion's curls, the front of Jove himself, An eye like Mars, to threaten and command, A station like the herald Mercury New-lighted on a heaven-kissing hill, A combination and a form indeed, Where every god did seem to set his seal, To give the world assurance of a man. Thus was your husband: look you now, what follows. Here is your husband; like a milord's ear, Blasting his wholesome brother. Have you eyes? Could you on this fair mountain leave to feed, And batton on this motte? Ha! have you eyes? You cannot call it love, for at your age The hey-day in the blood is tame, 'tis humble, And waits upon the judgment; and what judgment Would step from this to this? Sense, sure, you have, Else could you not have motion; but sure, that sense Is apoplexy; for madness would not err, Nor sense to ecstacy was ne'er so thrall'd But it reserv'd some quantity of choice, To serve in such a difference. What devil was't That thus hath cozen'd you at hoodman-blind? Eyes without feeling, feeling without sight, Ears without hands or eyes, smelling sans all, Or but a sickly part of one true sense Could not so mope. O shame! where is thy blush? Rebellious hell, If thou canst mutine in a matron's bones, To flaming youth let virtue be as wax, And melt in her own fire: proclaim no shame When the compulsive ardour gives the charge, Since frost itself as actively doth burn, And reason panders will. Queen. O Hamlet! speak no more; Thou turn'st mine eyes into my very soul; And there I see such black and grained spots As will not leave their tint. Ham. Nay, but to live In the rank sweat of an en Jens'ed bed, Stew'd in corruption, honeying and making love Over the nasty sty,— Queen. O! speak to me no more; These words like daggers enter in mine ears; No more, sweet Hamlet! Ham. A murderer and a villain; A slave that is not twentieth part the title Of your precedent lord: a vice of kings; A cut-purse of the empire and the rule, That from a shelf the precious diadem stole, And put it in his pocket! Queen. No more! Ham. A king of shreds and patches,— Enter Ghost. Save me, and hover o'er me with your wings, You heavenly guards! What would your gracious figure? Queen. Alas! he's mad. Ham. Do you not come your tardy son to chide, That, laps'd in time and passion, let us go by The important acting of your dread command? O! say.
HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

Act IV.

Scene I.—A Room in the Castle.

Enter KIng, Queen, Rosencrantz, and Guildenstern.

King. There's matter in these sights, these profound heav'ns:
You must translate; 'tis fit we understand them.
Where is your son?
Queen. Bestow this place upon us a little while.

Enter Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.

Hamlet, come guarded, a your 30 A speak we a diseases 19 when 'But O bring How Exeunt. and that he Lord 813 but he Lord.

King. What, Gertrude! How does Hamlet! Queen. Mad as the sea and wind, when both contend which is the mightier. In his lawless fit, ehind the arras hearing something stir, chips out his rapier, cries, 'A rat! a rat!' nd, in this brainish apprehension, kills he unseen good old man.

King. O heavy deed!  I had been so with us had we been there. is liberty is full of threats to all; o you yourself, to us, to every one.
I how shall this bloody deed be answer'd? w ill be laid to us, whose providence should have kept short, restrain'd, and out of haunt, his mad young man: but so much was our love,

I w'ud not understand what was most fit, ut, like the owner of a foul disease, o keep it from divulging, let it feed ven on the pitch of life. Where is he gone? Queen. To draw apart the body he had kill'd; fer whom his very madness, like some ore mong a mineral of metals base, hows itself pure: he weeps for what is done. King. O Gertrude! come away. He sun no sooner shall the mountains touch ut we will ship him hence; and this vile deed imust, with all our majesty and skill, oth countenance and excuse. Ho! Guildenstern!

Re-enter Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.

friends both, go join you with some further aid. Hamlet in madness hath Polonius slain, and from his mother's closet hath he dragg'd him: to seek him out; speak fair, and bring the body to the chapel. I pray you, haste in this.

Exit Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.

me, Gertrude, we'll call up our wisest friends; nd let them know both what we mean to do, nd what's untimely done: so, haply, slander, those whisper o'er the world's diameter, s level as the cannon to his blash, transports his poison'd shot, may miss our name, nd hit the woundless air. O! come away; ty soul is full of discord and dismay. Exit.

Scene III.—Another Room in the Same.

Enter King, attended.

King. I have sent to seek him, and to find the body. How dangerous is it that this man goes loose! Yet must not we put the strong law on him: He's lov'd of the distracted multitude. Who like not in their judgment, but their eyes; And where 'tis so, the offender's scourg is weigh'd, But never the offence. To bear all smooth and even, This sudden sending him away must seem Deliberate pause; diseases desperate grown By desperate appliance are reliev'd, Or not at all.

Enter Rosencrantz.

Enter Hamlet and Guildenstern.

King. Now, Hamlet, where's Polonius? Ham. At supper. King. At supper! Where? Ham. Not where he eats, but where he is eaten: a certain convocation of politic worms are e'en at him. Your worm is your only emperor for diet: we fat all creatures else to fat us, and we fat ourselves for maggots: your fat king and your lean beggar is but variable service; two dishes, but to one table: that's the end.
King. Alas, alas!

Ham. A man may fish with the worm that hath eat of a king, and eat of the fish that hath fed of that worm.

King. What dost thou mean by this?

Ham. Nothing, but to show you how a king may go a progress through the guts of a beggar.

King. Where is Polonius?

Ham. In heaven; send thither to see: if your messenger find him not there, seek him I the other place yourself. But, indeed, if you find him not within this month, you shall nose him as you go up the stairs into the lobby.

King. To some Attendants. Go seek him there.

Ham. He will stay till you come.

Exeunt Attendants.

Enter Hamlet, Rosencrantz, Guildenstern, etc.

Ham. Good sir, whose powers are these?

Cap. They are of Norway, sir.

Ham. How purpos'd, sir, I pray you?

Cap. Against some part of Poland.

Ham. Who commands them, sir?

Cap. The nephew to old Norway, Fortinbras.

Ham. Goes it against the main of Poland, sir, or for some frontier?

Cap. Truly to speak, and with no addition, We go to gain a little patch of ground That hath in it no profit but the name, To pay five ducats, five, I would not farm it; Nor will it yield to Norway or the Pole A ranker rate, should it be sold in fee.

Ham. Why, then the Polack never will defend it.

Cap. Yes, 'tis already garrison'd.

Ham. Two thousand souls and twenty thousand ducats.

Will not debate the question of this straw: This is the imposthume of much wealth and peace,

That inward breaks, and shows no cause without.

Why the man dies. I humbly thank you, sir.

Cap. God be wi' you, sir.

Exit Rosencrantz.

Ham. Will 't please you go, my lord?

Cap. I'll be with you straight. Go a little before.

Exeunt Rosencrantz, Guildenstern, etc.

How all occasions do inform against me,

And spur my dull revenge! What is a man,

If his chief good and market of his time

Be but to sleep and feed? a beast, no more,

Sure he that made us with such large discourse

Looking before and after, gave us not

That capability and god-like reason

To fast in us un'sd'ed. Now, whether it be

Bestial oblivion, or some craven sculpure

Of thinking too precisely on the event,

A thought, which quarter'd, hath but one part

Wisdom

And ever three parts coward, I do not know

Why yet I live to say 'This thing 's to do';

Sith I have cause and will and strength an means

To do 't. Examples gross as earth exhort me:

Witness this army of such mass and charge

Led by a delicate and tender prince,

Whose spirit with divine ambition puffed

Makes mouths at the invisible event,

Exposing what is mortal and unsure

To all that fortune, death and danger dare,

Even for an egg-shell. Rightly to be great

Is not to stir without great argument,

But greatly to find quarrel in a straw

When honour's at the stake. How stand then,

That have a father kill'd, a mother stain'd,

Excitements of my reason and my blood,

And let all sleep, while, to my shame, I see

The imminent death of twenty thousand men,

That, for a fantasy and trick of fame,

Go to their graves like beds, fight for a plot

Whereon the numbers cannot try the cause,

Which is not tomb enough and continent

To hide the slain? O! from this time forth,

My thoughts be bloody, or be nothing worth.

Exit.
To-morrow is Saint Valentine’s day, 59
All in the morning betime,
And I a maid at your window,
To be your Valentine:
Then up he rose, and don’d his clothes,
And dapp’d the chamber door;
Let in the maid, that out a maid
Never departed more.

King. Pretty Ophelia!

Oph. Indeed, la! without an oath, I’ll make an end on’t:

By Gis and by Saint Charity, 60
Alack, and fie for shame!
Young men will do’t, if they come to’t;
By Cock they are to blame.
Quoth she, before you tumbled me,
You promised me to seed:
So would I ha’ done, by yonder sun,
An thou hadst not come to my bed.

King. How long hath she been thus!

Oph. I hope all will be well. We must be patient: but I cannot choose but weep, to think they should lay him i’ the cold ground. My brother shall know of it: and so I thank you for your good counsel. Come, my coach! Good night, ladies; good night, sweet ladies! good night, good night.

Exit. 61

King. Follow her close; give her good watch, I pray you. 62

Exit HORATIO.

O! this is the poison of deep grief; it springs All from her father’s death. O Gertrude, Gertrude!

When sorrows come, they come not single spies, But in battalions. First, her father slain; 63
Next, your son gone; and he most violent author Of his own just remove: the people muddied, Thick and unwholesome in their thoughts and whispers, For good Polonius’ death; and we have done but greenly, In hugger-mugger to inter him: poor Ophelia Divided from herself and her fair judgment, Without which we are pictures, or mere beasts:

Last, and as much containing as all these, Her brother is in secret come from France, Feeds on his wonder, keeps himself in clouds, 64
And wants not buzzers to infect his ear With pestilent speeches of his father’s death; Wherein necessity, of matter beggar’d, Will nothing stick our person to arraign In ear and ear. O my dear Gertrude! this, Like to a murdering-piece, in many places Gives me superfluous death. 65

A noise within.

Queen. Alack! what noise is this?

Enter another Gentleman.

King. Where are my Switzers? Let them guard the door.

What is the matter?

Gent. Save yourself, my lord;
The ocean, overpeering of his list, 66
Eats not the flats with more impetuous haste
Than young Laertes, in a riotous head,
O’erbear your officers. The rabble call him lord;
And, as the world were now but to begin, Antiquity forgot, custom not known,
The ratifiers and props of every word,
They cry 'Choose we; Laertes shall be king!' Caps, hands, and tongues, applaud it to the clouds.

'Laertes shall be king, Laertes king!'

Queen. How cheerfully on the false trail they cry!

O! this is counter, you false Danish dogs.

King. The doors are broke. Noise within.

Enter Laertes, armed; Danes following.

Laer. Where is this king? Sirs, stand you all without.

Danes. No, let's come in.

Laer. I pray you, give me leave.

Danes. We will, we will.

They retire without the door.

Laer. I thank you: keep the door. O thou vile king!

Give me my father.

Queen. Calmly, good Laertes.

Laer. That drop of blood that's calm proclaims me bastard,

Cries euckold to my father, brands the harlot

Even here, between the chaste unsmirched brows

Of my true mother.

King. What is the cause, Laertes,

That thy rebellion looks so giant-like?

122 Let him go, Gertrude; do not fear our person:

There's such divinity doth hedge a king,

That treason can but peep to what it would,

Acts little of his will. Tell me, Laertes, Whytou art thusinsenc'd. Let himgo, Gertrude.

Speak, man.

Laer. Where is my father?

King. Dead.

Queen. But not by him.

Laer. Let him demand his fill.

Laer. How came he dead? I'll not be juggled with.

To hell, allegiance! vows, to the blackest devil!

Conscience and grace, to the profoundest pit!

I dare damnation. To this point I stand,

That both the worlds I give to negligence,

Let come what comes; only I'll be reveng'd

Most thoroughly for my father.

King. Who shall stay you?

Laer. My will, not all the world:

And for my means, I'll husband them so well,

They shall go far with little.

King. Good Laertes.

If you desire to know the certainty

Of your dear father's death, is't writ in your

revenge,

That, swoopstake, you will draw both friend and foe,

Winner and loser?

Laer. None but his enemies.

King. Will you know them then?

Laer. To his good friends thus wide I'll ope

my arms;

And like the kind life-rendering pelican,

Regest them with my blood.

King. Why, now you speak

Like a good child and a true gentleman,

That I am guiltless of your father's death,

And am most sensibly in grief for it,

It shall as level to your judgment pierce

As day does to your eye.

Danes. Within. Let her come in.

Laer. How now! what noise is that?

Re-enter Ophelia.

O heat, dry up my brains! tears seven times salt

Burn out the sense and virtue of mine eye!

By heaven, thy madness shall be paid by weight

Till our scale turn the beam. O rose of May!

Dear maid, kind sister, sweet Ophelia!

O heavens! is 't possible a young maid's wits

Should be as mortal as an old man's life?

Nature is fine in love, and where 'tis fine

It sends some precious instance of itself

After the thing it loves.

Oph. They bore him bareface'd on the bier;

Hey non nonny, nonny, hey nonny;

And in his grace rain'd many a tear;—

Fare you well, my dove!

Laer. Hadst thou thy wits, and didst persuade revenge,

It could not move thus.

Oph. You must sing a down a down,

An you call him a down a.

O! how the wheel becomes it. It is the false steward that stole his master's daughter.

Laer. This nothing's more than matter.

Oph. There's rosemary, that's for remembrance;—

pray you, love, remember: and there i've pansies, that's for thoughts.

Laer. A document in madness, thoughts and remembrance fitted.

Oph. There's fennel for you, and columbines

there's rue for you; and here's some for me

we may call it herb-grace o' Sundays. O! you must wear your rue with a difference. There's daisy; I would give you some violets, but they withered all when my father died. The say he made a good end,—

For bonny sweet Robin is all my joy.

Laer. Thought and affliction, passion, hel itself,

She turns to favour and to prettiness.

Oph. And will he not come again?

And will he not come again?

No, no, he is dead:

Go to thy death-bed.

He never will come again.

His beard as white as snow,

All flaxen was his poll;

He is gone, he is gone,

And we cast away moan;

God ha' mercy on his soul! 2

And of all Christian souls, I pray God. Go be wi' ye!

Laer. Do you see this, O God?

King. Laertes, I must commune with you grief,

Or you deny me right. Go but apart,

Make choice of whom your wisest friends you

will,

And they shall hear and judge 'twixt you and me

If by direct or by collateral hand

They find us touch'd, we will our kingdom give

Our crown, our life, and all that we call ours,

To you in satisfaction; but if not,

Be you content to lend your patience to us,

And we shall jointly labour with your soul

To give it due content.
Scene VI.—Another Room in the Same.

Enter Horatio and a Servant.

Hor. What are they that would speak with e!
Serr. Sailors, sir; they say they have letters
you.

Hor. Let them come in. Exit Servant.
do not know from what part of the world should be greeted, if not from Lord Hamlet.

Enter Sailors.

First Sail. God bless you, sir.
Hor. Let him bless thee too.

Second Sail. He shall, sir, an't please him.
I've here's a letter for you, sir;—it comes from the ambassador that was bound for England; —if our name be Horatio, as I am let to know it is.

Hor. Horatio, when thou shalt have overlooked is, give these fellows some means to the king; they write for him. Ere we were two days old at a, a pirate of very war-like appointment gave us chance. Finding ourselves too slow of sail, we put our enemies to a complete valor, and in the grapple we found: on the instant they got clear of our ship, so alone became their prisoner. They have dealt with me like thieves of mercy; but they knew what yielded; I am to do a good turn for them. Let them have the letters I have sent; and repair me to where I am. Rosencrantz and Guildenstern are the course for England: of them I have heavily to tell thee. Farewell.

He that thou knowest thine,

Hamlet,

who will give you way for these your letters;
and treat the speedier, that you may direct me from him whom you brought them.

Exit.

Scene VII.—Another Room in the Same.

Enter King and Laertes.

King. Now must your conscience my acquittance seal, and you must put me in your heart for friend,
thou have heard, and with a knowing ear,
at he which hath your noble father slain
as my life.

Laer. It well appears: but tell me by you proceeded not against these feats,
so criminal and so capital in nature,
by your safety, wisdom, all things else,
or mainly were stirr'd up.

King. O! for two special reasons;

Which may to you, perhaps, seem much unsine'wold,

And yet to me they are strong. The queen his mother
Lives almost by his looks, and for myself,
My virtue or my plague, be it either which,
She's so conjunctive to my life and soul,
That, as the star moves not but in his sphere,
I could not but by her. The other motive,
Why to a public count I might not go,
Is the great love the general gender bear him;
Who, dipping all his faults in their affection,
Would, like the spring that turneth wood to Convert his grives to graces; so that my arrows,

Too slightly timber'd for so loud a wind,
Would have reverted to my bow again,
And not where I had aim'd them.

Laer. And so have I a noble father lost;
A sister driven into desperate terms,
Whose worth, if praises may go back again,
Stood challenger on mount of all the age
For her perfections. But my revenge will come.

King. Break not your sleeps for that; you must not think

That we are made of stuff so flat and dull
That we can let our beard be shawk with danger.
And think it pastime. You shortly shall hear more;
I love your father, and we love ourself,
And that, I hope, will teach you to imagine—

Enter a Messenger.

How now! what news?

Mess. Letters, my lord, from Hamlet.

This to your majesty; this to the queen.

King. From Hamlet! who brought them?

Mess. Sailors, my lord, they say; I saw them not:
They were given me by Claudio, he receiv'd them
Of him that brought them.

King. Laertes, you shall hear them.

Leave us. Exit Messenger.

High and mighty, you shall know I am set naked on your kingdom. To-morrow shall I beg leave to see your kingly eyes; when I shall, first asking your pardon thereunto, recount the occasions of my sudden and more strange return.

What should this mean? Are all the rest come back?

Or is it some abuse and no such thing?

Laer. Know you the hand?

King. 'Tis Hamlet's character. 'Naked,'

And in a postscript here, he says 'alone.'

Can you advise me?

Laer. I'm lost in it, my lord. But let him
come:

It warmes the very sickness in my heart,
That I shall live and tell him to his teeth,
'Thus didest thou.'

King. If it be so, Laertes,
As how should it be so? how otherwise?

Will you be rul'd by me?

Laer. Ay, my lord;
So you will not o'errule me to a peace.

King. To thine own peace. If he be now

As checking at his voyage, and that he means —
No more to undertake it, I will work it
To an exploit now ripe in my device,
Under the which he shall not choose but fall;
And for his death no wind of blame shall breathe,
But even his mother shall uncharge the practice
And call it accident.

Laer. My lord, I will be rul'd;
The rather, if you could devise it so
That I might be the organ.

King. It falls right.

That you have been talk'd of since your travel much,
And that in Hamlet's hearing, for a quality
Wherein, they say, you shine; your sum of parts
Did not together pluck such envy from him
As did that one, and that, in my regard,
Of the unworthiest siege.

Laer. What part is that, my lord?

King. A very riband in the cap of youth,
Yet needful too; for youth no less becomes
The light and careless livery that it wears
Than settled age his sable and his weeds,
Importing health and graveness. Two months since
Here was a gentleman of Normandy;
I have seen myself, and serv'd against the French,
And they can well on horseback; but this gallant
Had witchcraft in't, he grew unto his seat,
And to such wondrous doing brought his horse,
As he had been incorp'sd and demi-natur'd
With the brave beast; so far he topp'd my thought,
That I, in forgery of shapes and tricks,
Come short of what he did.

Laer. A Norman was't?

King. Upon my life, Lamord.

King. The very same.

Laer. I know him well; he is the brooch indeed
And gem of all the nation.

He made confession of you,
And gave you such a masterly report
For art and exercise in your defence,
And for your rapier most especially,
That he cried out, 'twould be a sight indeed
If one could match you; the scramers of their nation,
He swore, had neither motion, guard, nor eye,
If you oppos'd them. Sir, this report of his
Did Hamlet so envenom with his envy
That he could nothing do but wish and beg
Your sudden coming o'er, to play with him.
Now, out of this,—

Laer. What out of this, my lord?

King. Laertes, was your father dear to you?
Or are you like the painting of a sorrow,
A face without a heart?

Laer. Why ask you this?

King. Not that I think you did not love your father,
But that I know love is begun by time,
And that I see, in passages of proof,
Time qualifies the spark and fire of it.
There lives within the very flame of love
A kind of wick or snuff that will abate it,
And nothing is at a like goodness still,
For goodness, growing to a plurality,
Dies in his own too-much. That we would do
We should do when we would, for this 'would' changes,
And hath abatements and delays as many

As there are tongues, are hands, are accidents:
And then this 'should' is like a spendthrift sigh,
That hurts by easing. But to the quick o' the ulcer;
Hamlet comes back; what would you undertake
To show yourself your father's son in deed
More than in words?

Laer. To cut his throat 'i the church.

King. No place, indeed, should murder sanctu- rize;
Revenge should have no bounds. But, good Laertes,
Will you do this, keep close within your chamber
Hamlet return'd shall know you are come home
We'll put on those shall praise your excellence
And set a double varnish on the fame
The Frenchman gave you, bring you, in fine
Together
And wager on your heads: he, being remiss,
Most generous and free from all contriving,
Will not peruse the foils; so that with ease
Or with a little shuffling, you may choose
A sword unbated, and in a pass of practice
Requite him for your father.

Laer. I will do't;

And, for that purpose, I'll anoint my sword.
I bought an uncion of a mountebank,
So mortal that, but dip a knife in it,
Where it draws blood no cataplasm so rare,
Collected from all simples that have virtue
Under the moon, can save the thing from death:
That is but scratch'd withal; I'll touch my point
With this contagion, that, if I call him slightly,
It may be death.

King. Let's further think of this;
Weigh what convenience both of time and mean
May fit us to our shape. If this should fail,
And that our drift look through our bad performance
'Twore better not assay'd; therefore this project
Should have a back or second, that might hold
If this should blast in proof. Soft! let me see We'll make a solemn wager on your cunning:
I ha' t:
When in your motion you are hot and dry,
As make your bouts more violent to that end,
And that he calls for drink, I'll have prepar
A chalice for the nonce, whereon but sipping,
If he by chance escape your venom'd stuck,
Our purpose may hold there. But stay! who noise?

Enter Queen.

How now, sweet queen!

Queen. One woe doth tread upon another's heel
So fast they follow: your sister's drownd
Laertes.

Laer. Drown'd! O! where?

Queen. There is a willow grows aslant a brook
That shows his heard leaves in the glassy stream
There with fantastic garlands did she come.
Of crow-flowers, nettles, daisies, and long purple
That liberal shepherds give a grosser name,
But our cold maids do dead men's fingers call them:
There, on the pendent boughs her coronet weed
Clambering to hang, an envious silver broke,
When down her weedy trophies and herself ell in the weeping brook. Her clothes spread wide, na, mermaid-like, awhile they bore her up;
ch time she chanted snatches of old tunes,
s one incapable of her own distress,
s like a creature native and indu'd to that element; but long it could not be ill that her garments, heavy with their drink, f'd the poor wretch from her melodious lay o muddy death.

Lacr. Alas! then, she is drown'd?
Queen. Drown'd, drown'd.
Lacr. Too much of water hast thou, poor Ophelia,
therefore I forbid my tears; but yet is our trick, nature her custom holds, et shame say what it will; when these are gone
he woman will be out. Aidez, my lord!
have a speech of fire, that fain would blaze,
at that this folly doth it.
Exit.
King.
Let's follow, Gertrude.
how much I had to do to calm his rage!
now fear I this will give it start again;
therefore let's follow.
Exit.

ACT V.
SCENE I.—A Churchyard.
Enter two Clowns, with spades and mattocks.

First Clo. Is she to be buried in Christian uriail that wilfully seeks her own salvation?
Second Clo. I tell thee she is; and therefore take her grave straight: the crowner hath sat
h her, and finds it Christian burial.

First Clo. How can that be, unless she drowned erself in her own defence?
Second Clo. Why, 'tis found so.
First Clo. It must be se offendiendo; it cannot else. For here lies the point: if I drown yself wittingly it arguments an act; and an act with three branches; it is, to act, to do, and to perform: argal, she drowned herself wittingly.
Second Clo. Nay, but hear you, Goodman elver,—

First Clo. Give me leave. Here lies the water;
God: here stands the man; good: if the man go to this water, and drown himself, it is, will he nil he, he goes; mark you that: but if the water come to him, and drown him, he drown not himself: argal, he that is not guilty of his own death shortens not his own life.

Second Clo. But is this law?
First Clo. Ay, marry, is 't; crown'er quest law.
Second Clo. Will you ha' the truth on't? If his had not been a gentlewoman she should have been buried out o' Christian burial.

First Clo. Why, there thou sayest; and the more pity that great folk shall have countenance in this world to drown or hang themselves more than their even Christian. Come, my spade.
There is no ancient gentlemen but gardeners, lithers, and grave-masters; they hold up
Adam's profession.

Second Clo. Was he a gentleman?
First Clo. A' was the first that ever bore arms.
Second Clo. Why, he had none.
First Clo. What! art a heathen? How dost thou understand the Scripture? The Scripture says Adam digged; could he dig without arms?

I'll put another question to thee; if thou answerest me not to the purpose, confess thyself—

Second Clo. Go to.
First Clo. What is he that builds stronger than either the mason, the shipwright, or the carpenter?

Second Clo. The gallows-maker; for that frame outlives a thousand tenants.
First Clo. I like thy wit well, in good faith;
the gallows does well, but how does it well?
it does well to those that do ill; now thou dost il to say the gallows is built stronger than the church: argal, the gallows may do well to thee.
To't again; come.

Second Clo. Who builds stronger than a mason,
a shipwright, or a carpenter?
First Clo. Ay, tell me that, and unyoke.
Second Clo. Marry, now I can tell.
First Clo. To't.

Enter Hamlet and Horatio, at a distance.

First Clo. Cudgel thy brains no more about it, for your dull ass will not mend his pace with beating; and when you are asked this question next, say 'a grave-maker': the houses that he makes last till doomsday. Go, get thee to Vaughan; fetch me a stoup of liquor.

Exit Second Clo.

First Clo. But age, with his stealing steps,
Hath claw'd me in his clutch,
And hath shipp'd me into the land.
As if I had never been such.

Throws up a skull.

Ham. That skull had a tongue in it, and could sing once; how the knave jows it to the ground, as if it were Cain's jaw-bone, that did the first murder! This might be the pate of a politician, which this ass now o'er-offices, one that would circumvent God, might it not?

Hor. It might, my lord.

Ham. Or of a courtier, which could say 'God morrow, sweet lord! How dost thou, good lord?' This might be my Lord Srch-a-one, that praised my Lord Such-a-one's horse, when he meant to beg it, might it not?

Hor. Ay, my lord.

Ham. Why, e'en so, and now my Lady Worm's; chapless, and knocked about the mazzard with a sexton's spade. Here's fine revolution, an we had the trick to see it. Did these bones cost no more the breeding but to play at logs and witts with 'em? mine ache to think on't.
HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

First Clo. A pick-axe, and a spade, a spade, For and a shrouding sheet; O! a pit of clay for to be made For such a guest is meet.

Throw up another skull.

Ham. There’s another; why may not that be the skull of a lawyer? Where be his quiddities now, his quirlets, his cases, his tenures, and his tricks? why does he suffer this rude knave now to knock him about the scence with a dirty shovel, and will not tell him of his action of battery? Hum! This fellow might be in’s time a great buyer of land, with his statutes, his recognizances, his fines, his double vouchers, his recoveries; is this the fine of his fines, and the recovery of his recoveries, to have his fine pate full of fine dirt? will his vouchers vouch him no more of his purchases, and double ones too, than the length and breadth of a pair of indentures? The very conveyances of his lands will hardly lie in this box, and must the inheritor himself have no more, hm?

Hor. Not a jot more, my lord.

Ham. Is not parchment made of sheep-skins?

Hor. Ay, my lord, and of calf-skins too.

Ham. They are sheep and calves which seek out assurance in that. I will speak to this fellow. Whose grave’s this, sir?

First Clo. Mine, sir.

O! a pit of clay for to be made For such a guest is meet.

Ham. I think it be thine, indeed; for thou liest in’t.

First Clo. You lie out on ‘t, sir, and therefore it is not yours; for my part, I do not lie in’t, and yet it is mine.

Ham. Thou dost lie in’t, to be in’t, and say it is thine: ’tis for the dead, not for the quick; therefore thou liest.

First Clo. ’Tis a quick lie, sir; ’twill away again, from me to you.

Ham. What man dost thou dig it for?

First Clo. For no man, sir.

Ham. What woman, then?

First Clo. For none, neither.

Ham. Who is to be buried in’t?

First Clo. One that was a woman, sir; but, rest her soul, she’s dead.

Ham. How absolute the knave is! we must speak by the card, or equivocation will undo us. By the Lord, Horatio, this three years I have taken note of it; the age is grown so picked that the toe of the peasant comes so near the heel of the courtier, he galls his kibe. How long hast thou been a grave-maker?

First Clo. Of all the days i’ the year, I came to’t that day that our last King Hamlet o’ercame Fortinbras.

Ham. How long is that since?

First Clo. Cannot you tell that? every fool can tell that: it was the very day that young Hamlet was born; he that is mad, and sent into England.

Ham. Ay, marry; why was he sent into England?

First Clo. Why, because he was mad: he shall recover his wits there; or, if he do not, ’tis no great matter there.

Ham. Why?

First Clo. ’Twill not be seen in him there, that the men are as mad as he.

Ham. How came he mad?

First Clo. Very strangely, they say.

Ham. How strangely?

First Clo. Faith, e’en with losing his wits.

Ham. Upon what ground?

First Clo. Why, here in Denmark; I have been sexton here, man and boy, thirty years.

Ham. How long will a man lie i’ the earth ere he rot?

First Clo. Faith, if he be not rotten before he die, as we have many pokey corpses now-a-days that will scarce hold the laying in, he will last you some eight year or nine year; a tanner will last you nine year.

Ham. Why he more than another?

First Clo. Why, sir, his hide is so tanned with his trade that he will keep out water a great while, and your water is a sore decayer of your whoreson dead body. Here’s a skull now; this skull hath lain i’ the earth three-and-twenty years.

Ham. Whose was it?

First Clo. A whoreson mad fellow’s it was whose do you think it was?

Ham. Nay, I know not.

First Clo. A pestilence on him for a mad rogue! at poured a flagon of Rhenish on my head once. This same skull, sir, was Yorick’s skull, the king’s jester.

Ham. This!

First Clo. E’en so.

Ham. Let me see.

Takes the skull.

Alas! poor Yorick. I knew him, Horatio; a fellow of infinite jest, of most excellent fancy; he hath borne me on his back a thousand times; and now, how abhorred in my imagination it is my gorge rises at it. Here hung those lips that I have kissed I know not how oft. Where be your gibes now? your gambols? your songs? your flashes of merriment, that were wont to set the table on a roar? Not one now, to mock your own grinning? quite chapfallen? Now get you to my lady’s chamber, and tell her, let her paint an inch thick, to this favour she must come; make her laugh at that. Prithee, Horatio, tell me one thing.

Hor. What’s that, my lord?

Ham. Dost thou think Alexander looked on this fashion i’ the earth?

Hor. E’en so.

Ham. And smelt so? pah!

Hor. E’en so, my lord.

Ham. To what base uses we may return, Horatio! Why may not imagination trace the noble dust of Alexander, till he find it stopping a hole?

Hor. ’Twere to consider too curiously; to consider so.

Ham. No, faith, not a jot; but to follow him thither with modesty enough, and likelihood to lead it; as thus: Alexander died, Alexander was buried, Alexander returneth into dust; the dust is earth; of earth we make loam; and why of that loam, whereto he was converted, might they not stop a beer-barrel?
Imperious Caesar, dead and turn'd to clay,
Might stop a hole to keep the wind away:
O! that that earth, which kept the world in awe,
Should patch a wall to expel the winter's flaw,
it soft! but soft! aside: here comes the king, and other Priests, etc. in procession; the Corpse of Ophelia, Laertes and Mourners following:

King, Queen, their Train, etc.

Queen, the queen, the courtiers: who is this they follow?

id with such maimed rites! This doth be taken corse they follow did with desperate hand pluto its own life; 'twas of some estate.
punctatural, and mark, and

Retiring with Horatio.
Laer. What ceremony else?
Ham. That is Laertes, a very noble youth: mark,

Laer. What ceremony else!
Priest. Her obsequies have been as far enlarg'd we have warrantise; her death was doubtful, and, but that great command o'ersees the order.

She should in ground unsanctified have lodg'd ll the last trumpet; for charitable prayers, sands, flints, and pebbles should be thrown on her;

where she is allow'd her virgin crants, or maiden strewments, and the bringing home
bell and burial.

Lae. Must there no more be done?
Priest. No more be done: she should profane the service of the dead, sing a requiem and such rest to her to peace-parted souls.

Lae. Lay her to the earth;

ad from her fair and unpolluted flesh
y violets spring! I tell thee, churlish priest, ministering angel shall my sister be,
then thou liest howling.

Ham. What! the fair Ophelia?
Queen. Sweets to the sweet: farewell!

Scattering flowers,
Wop'd thou should'st have been my Hamlet's wife;
thought thy bride-bed to have deck'd, sweet maid,
nd not have strew'd thy grave.

Lae. O! treble woe ill ten times treble on that cursed head hose wicked deed thy most ingenious sense pris'd thee of. Hold off the earth awhile, ll I have caught her once more in mine arms.

Leaps into the grave.

ow pile your dust upon the quick and dead,
ll of this flat a mountain you have made, o'er-top old Pelion or the skyish head blue Olympus.

Ham. Alas for our parents, What is he whose grief ears such an emphasis? whose phrase of sorrow injur's the wandering stars, and makes them stand k wonder-wounded hearers? This is I, unlet the Dane.

Lae. The devil take thy soul!

Grapples with him.

Ham. Thou pray'st not well.

I prithee, take thy fingers from my throat;
For though I am not splenitive and rash
Yet have I something in me dangerous,
Which let thy wiseness fear. Away thy hand!

King. Pluck them asunder.

Queen. Hamlet! Hamlet!

All. Gentlemen,—
The Attendants part them, and they come out of the grave.

Ham. Why, I will fight with him upon this theme

Until my eyelids will no longer wag.

Queen. O my son! what theme?

Ham. I lov'd Ophelia: forty thousand brothers
Could not, with all their quantity of love,
Make up my sum. What wilt thou do for her?

King. O! he is mad, Laertes.

Queen. For love of God, forbear him.

Ham. 'Swounds! show me what thou 'lt do:

Woo't sleep! woo't fight! woo't fast! woo't tear thyself!

Woo't drink up cisel? cat a crocodile?
I'll do't. Dost thou come here to whine?
To outface me with leaping in her grave!
Be buried quick with her, and so will I:
And, if thou prate of mountains, let them throw

Millions of acres on us, till our ground,
Singeing his pate against the burning zone,
Make Ossa like a wart! Nay, an thou 'lt mouth,
I'll rant as well as thou.

Queen. This is more madness:
And thus awhile the fit will work on him.

Anon, as patient as the female dove,
When that her golden couples are disclos'd,
His silence will sit drooping.

Ham. Hear you, sir; What is the reason that you use me thus?
I lov'd you ever: but it is no matter;
Let Hercules himself do what he may,
The cat will mew and dog will have his day.

Exit.

King. I pray you, good Horatio, wait upon him.

Exit Horatio.

To Laertes. Strengthen your patience in our last night's speech;
We'll put the matter to the present push.
Good Gertrude, set some watch over your son.
This grave shall have a living monument:
An hour of quiet shortly shall we see;
Till then, in patience our proceeding be.

Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A Hall in the Castle.

Enter Hamlet and Horatio.

Ham. So much for this, sir: now let me see
the other;
You do remember all the circumstance?

Hor. Remember it, my lord?

Ham. Sir, in my heart there was a kind of fighting
That would not let me sleep; methought I lay
Worse than the mutines in the bilboes. Rashly,
And prais'd be rashness for it, let us know,
Our indiscretion sometimes serves us well
When our deep plots do pall; and that should teach us

821
He that hath kill'd my king and whor'd my mother,
Popp'd in between the election and my hopes,
Thrown out his angle for my proper life,
And with such cozenage—'tis not perfecl

To quit him with this arm? and is 't not to damn'd?
To let this canker of our nature come
In further evil?

Hor. It must be shortly known to him from England

What is the issue of the business there.

Ham. It will be short: the interim is mine
And a man's life no more than to say 'One.'
But I am very sorry, good Horatio,
That to Laertes I forgot myself;
But, by the image of my cause, I see
The portraiture of his: I'll court his favours,
But, sure, the bravery of his grief did put me
Into a towering passion.

Hor. Peace! who comes here?

Enter OSRIC.

Osr. Your lordship is right welcome back to Denmark.

Ham. I humbly thank you, sir. Dost know this water-fly?

Hor. No, my good lord.

Osr. Thy mere is the more gracious; for 'tis a vice to know him. He hath much land, and fertile: let a beast be lord of beasts, and a crib shall stand at the king's mess: 'tis a bough, as I say, spacious in the possession dirt.

Osr. Sweet lord, if your lordship were leisure, I should impart a thing to you from majesty.

Ham. I will receive it, sir, with all diligence of spirit. Put your bonnet to your right use; for the head.

Osr. I thank your lordship, 'tis very hot.

Ham. No, believe me, 'tis very cold; the wind is northerly.

Osr. It is indifferent cold, my lord, indeed.

Ham. But yet methinks it is very sultry and hot for my complexion.

Osr. Exceedingly, my lord; it is very sultry as twere, I cannot tell how. But, my lord, I majesty bade me signify to you that he has laid a great wager on your head. Sir, this is the matter—

Ham. I beseech you, remember—

HAMLET moves him to put on his hat.

Osr. Nay, good my lord; for mine ease, good faith. Sir, here is newly come to court Laertes; believe me, an absolute gentleman, for of most excellent differences, of very soft sojourn and great showing; indeed, to speak feeling of him, he is the card or calendar of gentility, if you shall find in him the continent of what a gentleman would see.

Ham. Sir, his definition suffers no peradventure in you; though, I know, to divide him intellectually would dizzy the arithmetic of memory, and yet but yaw neither, in respect of his quicke. But, in the verity of extolment, I take him to be a soul of great article; and his intermixture of such dearth and rareness, as, to make true diction of him, his semblable is his mirror.
ad who else would trace him, his unbrage, other more.

Osr. Your lordship speaks most infallibly of him.

Ham. The concerency, sir? why do we wrap the gentleman in our more rawer breath?

Osr? Sir?

Hor. Is't not possible to understand in another tongue? You will do, sir, really.

Ham. What imports the nomination of this gentleman?

Osr. Of Laertes?

Hor. His purse is empty already; all's golden cords are spent.

Ham. Of him, sir.

Osr. I know you are not ignorant—

Ham. I would you did, sir; yet, in faith, if on did, it would not much approve me. Well, is it?

Osr. You are not ignorant of what excellence Laertes is—

Ham. I dare not confess that, lest I should compare with him in excellence; but, to know man well, were to know himself.

Osr. I mean, sir, for his weapon; but in the imputation laid on him by them, in his need he's unfellowed.

Ham. What's his weapon?

Osr. Rapier and dagger.

Ham. That's two of his weapons; but, well.

Osr. The king, sir, hath wagered with him six Barbary horses; against the which he has imponed, as I take it, six French rapiers and soniards, with their assigns, as girdle, hangers, and so; three of the carriages, in faith, are very dear to fancy, very responsive to the hits, most delicate carriages, and of very liberal conceit.

Ham. What call you the carriages?

Osr. The carriages, sir, are the hangers.

Ham. The phrase would be more german to the matter if we could carry cannon by our sides; I would it might be hangers till then.

Osr. The king, sir, hath laid, sir, that in a dozen passes between himself and he, shall not exceed you three hits; he hath laid on twelve for nine, and it would come to immediate trial if your lordship would vouchsafe the answer.

Ham. How if I answer no?

Osr. I mean, my lord, the opposition of your person in trial.

Ham. Sir, I will walk here in the hall; if it please his majesty, 'tis the breathing time of day with me; let the foils be brought, the gentleman willing, and the king hold the purpose, I will walk for him an I can; if not, I will again nothing but my shame and the odd hits.

Osr. Shall I re-deliver you e'en so?

Ham. To this effect, sir; after what flourish your nature will.

Osr. I commend my duty to your lordship.

Ham. Yours, yours. Exit Osr. Thus lapwing runs away with the shell on his head.

Ham. He did comply with his dig before he sucked it. Thus has he, and many more of the same bevy that I know the drossy age dotes on, only got the tune of the time and outward habit of encounter, a kind of yesty collection which carries them through and through the most fond and winnowed opinions, and do but blow them to their trial, the bubbles are out.

Enter a Lord.

Lord. My lord, his majesty commended him to you by young Osric, who brings back to him that you attend him in the hall; he sends to know if your pleasure hold to play with Laertes, or that you will take longer time.

Ham. I am constant to my purposes; they follow the king's pleasure: if his fitness speaks, mine is ready; now or whensoever, provided I be so able as now.

Lord. The king and queen and all are coming down.

Ham. In happy time.

Lord. The queen desires you to use some gentle entertainment to Laertes before you fall to play.

Ham. She well instructs me. Exit Lord.

Hor. You will lose this wager, my lord.

Ham. I do not think so; since he went into France I have been in continual practice; I shall win at the odds. But thou wouldest not think how ill all's here about my heart; but it is no matter.

Hor. Nay, good my lord,—

Ham. It is but foolery; but it is such a kind of gain-giving as would perhaps trouble a woman.

Hor. If your mind dislike any thing, obey it; I will forestall their repair hither, and say you are not fit.

Ham. Not a whit, we defy augury; there's a special providence in the fall of a sparrow. If it be now, 'tis not to come; if it be not to come, it will be now; if it be not now, yet it will come: the readiness is all. Since no man has aught of what he leaves, what is't to leave betimes? Let be.

Enter King, Queen, Laertes, Lords, Osric, and Attendants with foils, etc.

King. Come, Hamlet, come, and take this hand from me. The King puts the hand of Laertes into that of Hamlet.

Ham. Give me your pardon, sir; I've done you wrong;

But pardon t', as you are a gentleman.

This presence knows,
And you must needs have heard, how I am punish'd
With sore distraction. What I have done,
That might your nature, honour and exception
Roughly awake, I here proclaim was madness.
What Hamlet wrong'd Laertes? Never Hamlet:
If Hamlet from himself be ta'en away,
And when he's not himself does wrong Laertes,
Then Hamlet does it not; Hamlet denies it.
Who does it then? His madness. 'Tis be so, Hamlet is of the faction that is wrong'd; His madness is poor Hamlet's enemy.

Sir, in this audience,
Let my disclaiming from a purpos'd evil
Free me so far in your most generous thoughts,
That I have shot mine arrow o'er the house,
And hurt my brother.

Laer. Whose motive, in this case, should stir me most
To my revenge; but in my terms of honour
I stand aloof, and will no reconcilement,
Till by some elder masters, of known honour,
I have a voice and precedent of peace,
To keep my name ungord. But till that time,
I do receive your offer'd love like love,
And will not wrong it.

Ham. I embrace it freely;
And will this brother's wager frankly play.
Give us the foils. Come on.

Laer. Come, one for me. 270
Ham. I'll be your foil, Laertes; in mine ignorance
Your skill shall, like a star i' the darkest night,
Stick fiery off indeed.
Laer. You mock me, sir.

Ham. No, by this hand.

King. Give them the foils, young Osric.
Cousin Hamlet,
You know the wager?

Ham. Very well, my lord;
Your grace hath laid the odds o' the weaker side.

King. I do not fear it; I have seen you both;
But since he's better'd, we have therefore odds.

Laer. This is too heavy; let me see another.

Ham. This likes me well. These foils have all a length?

They prepare to play.

Osr. Ay, my good lord.

King. Set the stumps of wine upon that table.
If Hamlet give the first or second hit,
Or quit in answer of the third exchange,
Let all the battlements their ordnance fire;
The king shall drink to Hamlet's better breath;
And in the cup an union shall he throw,
Richer than that which four successive kings
In Denmark's crown have worn. Give me the cups;

And let the kettle to the trumpet speak,
The trumpet to the cannoner without,
The cannons to the heavens, the heavens to earth,
'Now the king drinks to Hamlet!' Come, begin;
And you, the judges, bear a wary eye.

Ham. Come on, sir.

Laer. Come, my lord.

Ham. One.

Osr. A hit, a very palpable hit.

Ham. Well; again.

King. Stay; give me drink. Hamlet, this pearl is thine;
Here's to thy health. Give him the cup.

Trumpets sound, and cannon shot off within.

Ham. 'I'll play this bout first; set it by awhile.

Come. Another hit; what say you?

Laer. A touch, a touch, I do confess.

King. Our son shall win.

Queen. He's fat, and scant of breath.

Ham, Laertes, take my napkin, rub thy brows;
The queen carouses to thy fortune, Hamlet.

Ham. Good madam!

King. Gertrude, do not drink.

Queen. I will, my lord; I pray you, pardon me.

King. Aside. It is the poison'd cup! It is too late.

Ham. I dare not drink yet, madam; by and by.

Queen. Come, let me wipe thy face.

Laer. My lord, I'll hit him now.

King. I do not think it.

Laer. Aside. And yet 'tis almost 'gainst my conscience.

Ham. Come, for the third, Laertes. You but daily;
I pray you, pass with your best violence.
I am afraid you make a wanton of me.

Laer. Say you so? come on.

They play.

Osr. Nothing, neither way.

Laer. Have at you now.

Laertes wounds Hamlet; then, in suff'ring, they change rapiers, and Hamlet wounds Laertes.

King. Part them! they are incens'd.

Ham. Nay, come again. The Queen follows.

Osr. Look to the queen there, ho! Hor. They bleed on both sides. How is it my lord?

Osr. How is 't, Laertes?

Laer. Why, as a woodcock to mine own springes, Osric;
I am justly kill'd with mine own treachery.

Ham. How does the queen?

King. She swounds to see them bleed.

Queen. No, no, the drink, the drink,—O my dear Hamlet!
The drink, the drink! I am poison'd. Dies.

Ham. O villany! Ho! let the door be lock'd;
Treachery! seek it out.

Laertes falls.

Laer. It is here, Hamlet. Hamlet, thou art slain;

No medicine in the world can do thee good;

In thee there is not half an hour of life;
The treacherous instrument is in thy hand,
Untainted and envenom'd. The foul practice
Hath turn'd itself on me; lo! here I lie,
Never to rise again. Thy mother's poison'd.
I can no more. The king, the king's to blame.

Ham. The point envenom'd too!
Then, venom, to thy work.

Stabs the King.

All. Treson! treason!

King. O! yet defend me, friends; I am but hurt.

Ham. Here, thou incestuous, murderous, damned Dane,
Drink off this potion; is thy union here?
Follow my mother.

King dies.

Laer. He is justly serv'd;
It is a poison temper'd by himself.

Exchange forgiveness with me, noble Hamlet;
Mine and my father's death come not upon thee,
Nor thine on me!

Dies.

Ham. Heaven make thee free of it! I follow thee.

I am dead, Horatio. Wretched queen, adieu!
You that look pale and tremble at this chance,
That are but mutes or audience to this act,

Had I but time, as this fell sergeant, death,
Is strict in his arrest, O! I could tell you,—
But let it be. Horatio, I am dead;
Thou liv'st; report me and my cause aight
To the unsatisfied.

Hor. Never believe it;
I am more an antique Roman than a Dane:
HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

Ham. As thou 'rt a man, give me the cup: let go; by heaven, I'll have 't. God! Horatio, what a wounded name, 369 hings standing thus unknown, shall live be-

him. thou didst ever hold me in thy heart, but sent thee from felicity awhile, and in this harsh world draw thy breath in pain, 390 o tell my story.

March afar off, and shout within. What war-like noise is this? Osr. Young Fortinbras, with conquest come from Poland, o the ambassadors of England gives his war-like volley.

Ham. O! I die, Horatio; the potent poison quite o'er-crows my spirit: cannot live to hear the news from England, ut I do prophesy the election lights 371 n Fortinbras: he has my dying voice; o tell him, with the occurrences, more and less, which have solicited—the rest is silence. Dies.

Hor. Now cracks a noble heart. Good night, sweet prince, and flights of angels sing thee to thy rest! Why does the drum come hither? March within.

Enter FORTINBRAS, the English Ambassadors, and others.

For. Where is this sight?

Hor. What is it ye would see? caught of woe or wonder, cease your search.

For. This quarry cries on havoc. O proud death! 380 that feast is toward in thine eternal cell, hat thou so many princes at a shot o bloodily hast struck?

First Amb. The sight is dismal; and our affairs from England come too late: the ears are senseless that should give us hearing, and tell him his commandment is fulfill'd,

That Rosencrantz and Guildenstern are dead. Where should we have our thanks?

Hor. Not from his mouth, Had it the ability of life to thank you: 389 He never gave commandment for their death. But since, so jump upon this bloody question, You from the Polack wars, and you from England, Are here arriv'd, give order that these bodies High on a stage be placed to the view; And let me speak to the yet unknowing world How these things came about; so shall you hear Of carnal, bloody, and unnatural acts, Of accidental judgments, casual slaughters, Of deaths put on by cunning and fore'd cause, And, in this upshot, purposes mistook Fall'n on the inventors' heads; all this can I truly deliver.

For. Let us haste to hear it, And call the noblest to the audience. For me, with sorrow I embrace my fortune: have some rights of memory in this kingdom, Which now to claim my vantage doth invite me. Hor. Of that I shall have also cause to speak, And from his mouth whose voice will draw on more: But let this same be presently perform'd, Even while men's minds are wild, lest more mis-

On plots and errors, happen. For. Let four captains Bear Hamlet, like a soldier, to the stage; For he was likely, had he been put on, To have prov'd most royally: and for his passage, The soldiers' music and the rites of war Speak loudly for him. Take up the bodies: such a sight as this Becomes the field, but here shows much amiss. Go, bid the soldiers shoot. A dead march. Exeunt, bearing off the bodies: after which a peal of ordnance is shot off.
KING LEAR.

DRAMATIS PERSONAE.

LEAR, King of Britain.
KING of FRANCE.
DUKE of BURGUNDY.
DUKE of CORNWALL.
DUKE of ALBANY.
EARL of KENT.
EARL of GLOUCESTER.
EDGAR, Son to Gloucester.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—A Room of State in King Lear’s Palace.

Enter Kent, Gloucester, and Edmund.

Kent. I thought the king had more affected the Duke of Albany than Cornwall.
Glou. It did always seem so to us; but now, in the division of the kingdom, it appears not which of the dukes he values most; for equalities are so weighed that curiosity in neither can make choice of either’s moiety.
Kent. Is not this your son, my lord?
Glou. His breeding, sir, hath been at my charge; I have so often blush’d to acknowledge him, that now I am brazed to it.
Kent. I cannot conceive you.
Glou. Sir, this young fellow’s mother could; whereupon she grew round-womb’d, and had, indeed, sir, a son for her cradle ere she had a husband for her bed. Do you smell a fault?
Kent. I cannot wish the fault undone, the issue of it being so proper.
Glou. But I have a son, sir, by order of law, some year elder than this, who yet is no dearer in my account: though this kneve came something saucily into the world before he was sent for, yet was his mother fair; there was good sport at his making, and the whoreson must be acknowledged. Do you know this noble gentleman, Edmund?
Edm. No, my lord.
Glou. My Lord of Kent: remember him hereafter as my honourable friend.
Edm. My services to your lordship.

Kent. I must love you, and sue to know ye better.
Edm. Sir, I shall study deserving.
Glou. He hath been out nine years, and what he shall again. The king is coming.

Exeunt Gloucester and Edmund.

KENT. Meantime we shall express our dark purpose.
Give me the map there. Know that we have divided in three our kingdom; and ‘tis our fast intent to shake all care and business from our age, conferring them on younger strengths; while we unburden’d crawl toward death. Our son Cornwall, and you, our no less loving son of Albany, we have this hour a constant will to publish our daughters’ several dowers, that future strait may be prevented now. The princes, France and Burgundy, great rivals in our youngest daughter’s love, long in our court have made their amorous sojourn, and here are to be answer’d. Tell me, my daughters, since now we will divest us both of rule, interest of territory, cares of state, which of you shall we say doth love us most? That we our largest bounty may extend here nature doth with merit challenge.
Goneril,
so eldest-born, speak first.

Gon. Sir, I love you more than words can \emph{c}ield the matter;
\emph{more} than eye-sight, space, and liberty;
\emph{and} what can be valued, rich or rare;
\emph{or} less than life, with grace, health, beauty,
and,
\begin{align*}
\text{more as child e'er lov'd, or father found;}
\text{love that makes breath poor and speech} \text{unable;}
\text{and all manner of so much I love you.} \end{align*}

Cor. \emph{Aside.} What shall Cordelia do? Love, \emph{and} be silent.

Lear. Of all these bounds, even from this line to this,
ith shadowy forests and with champains rich'd,
ith plenteous rivers and wide-skirted meads, \emph{e} make thee lady: to thine and Albany's issue
this perpetual. \emph{What}s says our second daughter, \emph{u} migrant Regan, \emph{wife} to Cornwall! Speak to
Reg. I am made of that self metal as my sister, \emph{u} prize me at her worth. In my true heart
\emph{find} she names my very deed of love;
\emph{ly} she comes too short: that I profess
\emph{y}self an enemy to all other joys \emph{lich} the most precious square of sense possesses,
\emph{nd} find I am alone felicitate
\emph{a} your dear highness' love.

Cor. \emph{Aside.} Then poor Cordelia!
\emph{nd} yet not so; since I am sure my love's
\emph{ore} ponderous than my tongue.

Lear. To thee and thine, hereditary ever,
\emph{main} this ample third of our fair kingdom,
\emph{an} in space, validity, and pleasure,
\emph{han} that confer'd on Goneril. Now, our joy, \emph{alth}ough our last, not least; to whose young \emph{ne} vines of France and milk of Burgundy
\emph{rive} to interest 'd; \emph{what} can you say to draw \emph{third} more opulent than your sisters? Speak.

Cor. Nothing, my lord.

Lear. \emph{Nothing}?

Cor. \emph{Nothing.}

Lear. \emph{Nothing} will come of nothing: speak
again.

Cor. Unhappy that I am, I cannot heave
\emph{y} heart into my mouth: I love your majesty
\emph{ord}ing to my bond; \emph{no} more nor less.

Lear. \emph{How, how, Cordelia! mend} your speech a little,
\emph{est} you may mar your fortunes.

Cor. Good my lord, you have begot me, brod me, lov'd me: I \emph{return} those duties back as are right fit, \emph{be} you, love you, and most honour you.
\emph{Why} have my sisters husbands, if they say \emph{hey} love you all? Haply, when I shall wed, \emph{hat} lord whose hand must take my plight shall carry
\emph{half} my love with him, \emph{half} my care and duty.
\emph{Sure} I shall never marry like my sisters, to love my father all.

Lear. \emph{But goes thy heart with this?}

Cor. \emph{Ay, my good lord.}

Lear. \emph{So young, and so untender?}

Cor. \emph{So young, my lord, and true.}

Lear. \emph{Let it be so; thy truth then be thy dower:}

For, by the sacred radiance of the sun,
The mysteries of Hecate and the night,
By all the operation of the orbs
From whom we do exist and cease to be,
Here I disclaim all my paternal care,
Propinquity and property of blood,
And as a stranger to my heart and me
Hold thee from this for ever. \emph{The barbarous} Scythian,
Or he that makes his generation messe
To gorge his appetite, shall to my bosom
\emph{Be} as well neighbour'd, pitted, and reliev'd, \emph{As} thou my sometime daughter.

Kent. Good my liege,—

Lear. Peace, Kent!

Come not between the dragon and his wrath.
I lov'd her most, and thought to set my rest
On her kind nursery. Hence, and avoid my sight!
So be my grave my peace, as here I give Her father's heart from her! \emph{Call} France. \emph{Who} stirs?

Call Burgundy. Cornwall and Albany,
With my two daughters' dowers digest the third;
Let pride, which she calls plainness, marry her.
I do invest you jointly with my power,
Pre-eminence, and all the large effects
That troop with majesty. \emph{Ourself}, by monthly course,
With reservation of an hundred knights,
\emph{By} you to be sustain'd, shall our abode Make with you by due turn. \emph{Only} we shall retain
The name and all the addition to a king;
The sway, revenue, execution of the rest,
Beloved sons, be yours: \emph{which to confirm,} \emph{This coronet part betwixt you.}

Kent. \emph{Royal Lear,}
\emph{Whom I have ever honour'd as my king,}
Lor'd as my father, as my master follow'd,
As my great patron thought on in my prayers,—

Lear. \emph{The bow is bent and drawn; make from} the shaft.

Kent. \emph{Let it fall rather, though the fork invade}
The region of my heart: be Kent unmannerly
When Lear is mad. \emph{What would'st thou do,} \emph{old man?}
\emph{Think'st thou that duty shall have dread to speak}
When power to flattery bows? \emph{To plainness} \emph{honour's bound}
\emph{When majesty falls to folly. Reserve thy state;
And, in thy best consideration, check}
This hideous rashness: answer my life my judgment,
\emph{Thy youngest daughter does not love thee least;}
\emph{Nor are those empty-hearted whose low sound}
\emph{Reverbs no hollowness.}

Lear. \emph{Kent, on thy life, no more.}

Kent. \emph{My life I never held but as a pawn} \emph{To wage against thine enemies; nor fear to} \emph{lose it;}
\emph{Thy safety being the motive.}

Lear. \emph{Out of my sight!}

Kent. \emph{See better, Lear; and let me still remain}
The true blank of thine eye.

Lear. \emph{Now, by Apollo,—}

Kent. \emph{Now, by Apollo, king,}
\emph{Thou swar'st thy gods in vain.}

Lear. \emph{O, vassal! miscreant!}

Alb. Corn. \emph{Dear sir, forbear.}
KING LEAR.

Kent. Do; Kill thy physician, and the fee bestow Upon the foul disease. Revoke thy gift; Or, whilst I can vent clamour from my throat, I'll tell thee thou dost evil.

Lear. Hear me, reentrant! On thine allegiance, hear me! Since thou hast sought to make us break our vow, Which we durst never yet, and with strain'd pride To come betwixt our sentence and our power, Which nor our nature nor our place can bear, Our potency made good, take thy reward. Five days we do allot thee for provision To shield thee from diseases of the world; And on the sixth to turn thy hate back Upon our kingdom: if on the tenth day following Thy banish'd trunk be found in our dominions, The moment is thy death. Away! By Jupiter, This shall not be revok'd.

Kent. Fare thee well, king; sith thus thou wilt appear, Freedom lives hence, and banishment is here.

To Cordelia. The gods to their dear shelter take thee, maid, That justly think'st, and hast most rightly said! To Regan and Goneril. And your large speeches may your deeds approve, That good effects may spring from words of love. Thus Kent, O princes! bids you all adieu; He'll shape his old course in a country new. Exit.

Flourish. Re-enter Gloucester, with France, Burgundy, and Attendants.

Glou. Here's France and Burgundy, my noble lord.

Lear. My Lord of Burgundy,

We first address toward you, who with this king Hath rival'd for our daughter. What, in the least, Will you require in present dower with her, Or cease your quest of love?

Bur. Most royal majesty, I crave no more than hath your highness offer'd, Nor will you tender less.

Lear. Right noble Burgundy, When she was dear to us we did hold her so, But now her price is fall'n. Sir, there she stands: If taught within that little seeming substance, Or all of it, with our displeasure piec'd, And nothing more, may fitly like your grace, She's there, and she is yours.

Bur. I know no answer. Lear. Will you, with those infirmities she owes, Unfriend'd, new-adopted to our hate, Dow'r'd with our curse, and stranger'd with our oath, Take her, or leave her?

Bur. Pardon me, royal sir; Election makes not up on such conditions. Lear. Then leave her, sir; for, by the power that made me, I tell you all her wealth. To France. For you, great king, I would not from your love make such a stray To match you where I hate; therefore beseech you To avert your liking a more worthier way Than on a wretch whom nature is asham'd Almost to acknowledge hers.

France. This is most strange, That she, that even but now was your best object, The argument of your praise, balm of your age, The best, the dearest, should in this trice of time Commit a thing so monstrous, to dismantle So many folds of favour. Sure, her offence Must be of such unnatural degree That monsters it, or your fore-vouch'd affection Fall'n into taint; which to believe of her, Must be a faith that reason without miracle Should never plant in me.

Cor. I yet beseech your majesty, If for I want that gib and oily art To speak and purpose not; since what I we intend,

I'll do 't before I speak, that you make known It is no vicious blot nor other foulness, No unchaste action, or dishonour'd step, That hath depriv'd me of your grace and favour But even for want of that for which I am richer A still-soliciting eye, and such a tongue That I am glad I have not, though not to have Hath lost me in your liking.

Lear. Better thou Hadst not been born than not to have pleased me better.

France. Is it but this? a tardiness in nature Which often leaves the history unspeak That it intends to do? My Lord of Burgundy What say you to the lady? Love's not love When it is mingled with regards that stand Aloof from the entire point. Will you have her She is herself a dowry.

Bur. Royal Lear, Give but that portion which yourself propos'd, And here I take Cordelia by the hand, Duchess of Burgundy.

Lear. Nothing: I have sworn; I am firm. Bur. I am sorry, then, you have so lost a father That you must lose a husband.

Cor. Peace be with Burgundy Since that respects of fortune are his love, I shall not be his wife.

France. Fairest Cordelia, that art most rich * being poor; Most choice, forsaken; and most lov'd, despis'd Thy and thy virtues here I seize upon: Be it lawful I take up what's cast away. Gods, gods! 'tis strange that from their cold's neglect My love should kindle to inflam'd respect. Thy doverless daughter, king, thrown to my chance, Is queen of us, of ours, and our fair France: Not all the dukes of waterish Burgundy Shall buy this unpriz'd precious maid of me. Bid them farewell, Cordelia, though unkind: Thou leastest here, a better where to find.

Lear. Thou hast her, France; let her be thine for we Have no such daughter, nor shall ever see That face of hers again; therefore be gone Without our grace, our love, our benison. Come, noble Burgundy.

Flourish. Exeunt Lear, Burgundy, Cornwall, Albany, Gloucester, and Attendants.

France. Bid farewell to your sisters.

Cor. The jewels of our father, with wash'd eyes Cordelia leaves you: I know you what you are; And like a sister am most loath to call ur faults as they are nam’d. Use well our father:
your professed bosoms I commit him:
yet, alas! stood I within his grace,
would prefer him to a better place.
Reg. Prescribe not us our duties.
Jon. Let your study to content your lord, who hath receiv’d you fortune’s alms; you have obedience scant’d, d well are worth the want that you have wanted.
382 Jon. Time shall unfold what plighted cunning hides; no cover faults, at last shame them derides.
All may you prosper!
France. Come, my fair Cordelia.
Jon. Sister, it is not little I have to say of at most nearly appertains to us both. I think:
father will hence to-night.
Reg. That’s most certain, and with you; next morn with us.
390 Jon. You see how full of changes his age is; a generation we have made of it hath not in little; he always loved our sister most; I with what poor judgment he hath now cast off appears too grossly.
Reg. ’Tis the infirmity of his age; yet he hath or but slightly known himself.
Jon. The best and soundest of his time hath in rush; then must we look to receive in his age, not alone the imperfections of g-engraved condition, but therewithal the ruy waywardness that inflam and choleric us bring with them.
398 Reg. Such unconstant starts are we like to re from him as this of Kent’s banishment.
Jon. There is further compliment of leaving between France and him. Pray you, let’s together: if our father carry authority with a disposition as he bears, this last surrender this ill but offend us.
405 Reg. We shall further think on’t.
Jon. We must do something, and i’ the heat.
Exeunt.

ACT II.—A Hall in the Earl of Gloucester’s Castle.

Enter Edmund, with a letter.

Edm. Thou, Nature, art my goddess; to thy law services are bound. Wherefore should I and in the plague of custom, and permit the curiosity of nations to deprive me, that I am some twelve or fourteen moons of a brother? Why bastard? wherefore base?
men my dimensions are as well compact,
mind as generous, and my shape as true, honest madam’s issue? Why brand they us with base? with baseness? bastardy? base? base?
in the lusty stealth of nature take composition and fierce quality an doth, within a dull, stale, tired bed, to the creating a whole tribe of fops, t’ween asleep and wake? Well then,
gitimate Edgar, I must have your hand:
father’s love is to the bastard Edmund to the legitimate. Fine word, ‘legitimate’!

Well, my legitimate, if this letter speed,
And my invention thrive, Edmund the base
Shall to the legitimate—: I grow, I prosper;
Now, gods, stand up for bastards!

Enter Gloucester.

Glou. Kent banish’d thus! And France in choler parted!
And the king gone to-night! subscrib’d his power!
Commend to exhibition! All this done
Upon the gad! Edmund, how now! what news?
Edm. So please your lordship, none.

Putting up the letter.

Glou. Why so earnestly seek you to put up that letter?
Edm. I know no news, my lord.
Glou. What paper were you reading?
Edm. Nothing, my lord.
Glou. No! What needed then that terrible dispatch of it into your pocket? the quality of nothing hath not such need to hide itself. Let’s see: come; if it be nothing, I shall not need spectacles.
Edm. I beseech you, sir, pardon me; it is a letter from my brother that I have not all o’erread, and for so much as I have perused, I find it not fit for your o’looking.
Glou. Give me the letter, sir.
Edm. I shall offend, either to detain or give it.
The contents, as in part I understand them, are to blame.
Glou. Let’s see, let’s see.
Edm. I hope, for my brother’s justification, he wrote this but as an essay or taste of my virtue.

Glou. This policy and reverence of age makes the world bitter to the best of our times; keeps our fortunes from us till our oldness cannot reliish them.
I begin to find an idle and fond bondage in the oppression of aged tyranny, who essays, not as it hath power, but as it is suffered. Come to me, that of this I may speak more. If our father would sleep till I wake him, you should enjoy half his revenue for ever, and live the beloved of your brother,

Edgar.

Hum! Conspiracy! ‘Sleep till I wake him,— you should enjoy half his revenue.’ My son Edgar! Had he a hand to write this? a heart and brain to breed it in? When came this to you? Who brought it?

Edm. It was not brought me, my lord; there’s the cunning of it; I found it thrown in at the casement of my closet.

Glou. You know the character to be your
brother’s?

Edm. If the matter were good, my lord, I durst swear it were his; but, in respect of that,
I would faint think it were not.

Glou. It is his.

Edm. It is his hand, my lord; but I hope his heart is not in the contents.

Glou. Has he never before sounded you in this business?

Edm. Never, my lord: but I have often heard him maintain it to be fit that, sons at perfect age, and fathers declined, the father should be as ward to the son, and the son manage his revenue.

Glou. O villain, villain! His very opinion in the letter! Abhorred villain! Unnatural, detested, brutish villain! worse than brutish! Go, sirrah, seek him; I'll apprehend him. Abominable villain! Where is he?

_Edm._ I do not well know, my lord. If it shall please you to suspend your indignation against my brother till you can derive from him better testimony of his intent, you shall run a certain course; where, if you violently proceed against him, mistaking his purpose, it would make a great gap in your own honour, and shake in pieces the heart of his obedience. I dare pawn my life for him, that he hath writ this to feel my affection to your honour, and to no other pretence of danger.

_Glon._ Think you so?

_Edm._ If your honour judge it meet, I will place you where you shall hear us confer of this, and by an auricular assurance have your satisfaction; and that without any further delay than this very evening.

_Glon._ He cannot be such a monster—

_Edm._ Nor is not sure.

_Glon._—to his father, that so tenderly and entirely loves him. Heaven and earth! Edmund, seek him out; wind me into him, I pray you: frame the business after your own wisdom. I would unstake myself to be in a due resolution.

_Edm._ I will seek him, sir, presently; convey the business as I shall find means, and acquaint you withal.

_Glon._ These late eclipses in the sun and moon portend no good to us: though the wisdom of nature can reason it thus and thus, yet nature finds itself scourged by the sequent effects. Love cools, friendship falls off, brothers divide: in cities, mutinies; in countries, discord; in palaces, treason; and the bond cracked 'twixt son and father. This villain of mine comes under the prediction; there's son against father: the king falls from bias of nature; there's father against child. We have seen the best of our time: machinations, hollowness, treachery, and all ruinous disorders, follow us disquietly to our graves. Find out this villain, Edmund; it shall lose thee nothing: do it carefully. And the noble and true-hearted Kent banished! his offence, honesty! 'Tis strange.

Exit. 129

_Edm._ This is the excellent foppery of the world, that, when we are sick in fortune, often the surfeit of our own behaviour, we make guilty of our disasters the sun, the moon, and the stars; as if we were villains on necessity, fools by heavenly compulsion, knaves thievish and treacherous by spherical predominance, drunkards liars and adulterers by an enforced obedience of planetary influence; and all that we are evil in, by a divine thrusting on: an admirable evasion of whoremaster man, to lay his goatish disposition to the charge of a star! My father compounded with my mother under the dragon's tail, and my nativity was under _vesta major_ so that it follows I am rough and lecherous. Tut! I should have been that I am had the brightest star in the firmament twinkled on my bastardizing.

Enter EDGAR.

_Edg._ and pat he comes, like the catastrophe of the old comedy: my cue is villainous melancholy, with a sigh like Tom o' Bedlam. O! these eclipses do portend these divisions. _Pa.,_ so _la., mi._

_Edg._ How now, brother Edmund! What serious contemplation are you in?

_Edm._ I am thinking, brother, of a prediction I read this other day, what should follow these eclipses.

_Edg._ Do you busy yourself with that?

_Edm._ I promise you the effects he writes will succeed unhappily; as of unnaturalness between the child and the parent; death, death, dissolution of ancient amities; divisions in state menaces and malapologies against king and nobles; needless diversities, banishment of friends, dissipation of cohorts, nuptial breach, and I know not what.

_Edg._ How long have you been a sectary astronomical?

_Edm._ Come, come; when saw you my father last?

_Edg._ The night gone by.

_Edm._ Spake you with him?

_Edg._ Ay, two hours together.

_Edm._ Parted you in good terms? Found you no displeasure in him by word or countenance?

_Edg._ None at all.

_Edm._ Bethink yourself wherein you may have offended him; and at my entreaty forbear his presence until some little time hath qualified the heat of his displeasure, which at this instant so rageth in him that with the mischief of your person it would scarcely allay.

_Edg._ Some villain hath done me wrong.

_Edm._ That's my fear. I pray you have continent forbearance till the speed of his rage goes slower, and as I say, retire with me to my lodging, from whence I will fitly bring you to hear my lord speak. Pray you, go; there's my key. If you do stir abroad, go armed.

_Edg._ Armed, brother!

_Edm._ Brother, I advise you to the best, girt armed; I am no honest man if there be an good meaning towards you; I have told you what I have seen and heard; but faintly, nothing like the image and horror of it; pray you, away.

_Edg._ Shall I hear from you anon?

_Edm._ I do serve you in this business.

Exit EDGAR.

A credulous father, and a brother noble, Whose nature is so far from doing harms That he suspects none; on whose foolish honest my practices ride easy! I see the business. Let me, if not by birth, have lands by wit: All with me's meet that I can fashion fit.

Scene III.—A Room in the Duke of Albany's Palace.

_Enter GONERIL, and OSWALD, her Steward._

_Gon._ Did my father strike my gentleman for chiding of his fool?

_Osw._ Ay, madam.

_Gon._ By day and night he wrongs me; every hour He flashes into one gross crime or other, That sets us all at odds: I'll not endure it: His knights grow riotous, and himself upbraids—
KING LEAR.

KENT. Authority.

KENT. What services canst thou do?

KENT. I can keep honest counsel, ride, run, mar a curious tale in telling it, and deliver a plain message bluntly; that which ordinary men are fit for; I am qualified in, and the best of me is diligence.

KENT. How old art thou?

KENT. Not so young, sir, to love a woman for singing, nor so old to dote on her for any thing; I have years on my back forty-eight.

KENT. Follow me; thou shalt serve me: if I like thee no worse after dinner I will not part from thee yet. Dinner, ho! dinner! Where's my knave? my fool! Go you and call my fool hither.

Exit an Attendant.

Enter OSWALD.

Yon, you, sirrah, where's my daughter?

Osw. So please you,—

Lear. What says the fellow there? Call the clotpoll back.

Exit a Knight.

Where's my fool, ho? I think the world's asleep.

Re-enter Knight.

How now! where's that mongrel?

Knight. He says, my lord, your daughter is not well.

Lear. Why came not the slave back to me when I called him?

Knight. Sir, he answered me in the roundest manner, he would not.

Lear. He would not!

Knight. My lord, I know not what the matter is; but, to my judgment, your highness is not entertained with that ceremonious affection as you were wont; there's a great abatement of kindness appears as well in the general dependants as in the duke himself also and your daughter.

Lear. Ha! sayest thou so?

Knight. I beseech you, pardon me, my lord, if I be mistaken; for my duty cannot be silent when I think your highness wronged.

Lear. Thou but rememberest of mine own conception: I have perceived a most faint neglect of late; which I have rather blamed as mine own jealous curiosity than as a very pretence and purpose of unkindness: I will look further into t'. But where's my fool? I have not seen him this two days.

Knight. Since my young lady's going into France, sir, the fool hath much pined away.

Lear. No more of that; I have noted it well. Go you and tell my daughter I would speak with her.

Exit an Attendant.

Go you, call hither my fool.

Exit an Attendant.

Re-enter OSWALD.

O! you sir, you, come you hither, sir. Who am I, sir?

Osw. My lady's father.

Lear. 'My lady's father!' my lord's knave: you whoreson dog! you slave! you cur!

Osw. I am none of these, my lord; I beseech your pardon.

Lear. Do you bandy looks with me, you rascal?

Striking him.
King. I'll not be struck, my lord.

Kent. Nor tripped neither, you base foot-ball player. Tripping up his heels.

Lear. I thank thee, fellow; thou servest me, and I'll love thee.

Kent. Come, sir, arise, away! I'll teach you differences: away, away! If you will measure your lubber's length again, tarry; but away! Go to; have you wisdom? so.

Pushes OSWALD out.

Lear. Now, my friendly knave, I thank thee: there's earnest of thy service.

Gives KENT money.

Enter Fool.

Fool. Let me hire him too; here's my coxcomb.

Lear. How now, my pretty knave! how dost thou?

Fool. Sirrah, you were best take my coxcomb.

Kent. Why, fool?

Fool. Why? for taking one's part that's out of favour. Nay, an thou canst not smile as the wind sits, thou'lt catch cold shortly: there, take my coxcomb. Why, this fellow has banished two of his daughters, and did the third a blessing against his will: if thou follow him thou must needs wear my coxcomb. How now, nuncle! Would I had two coxcombs and two daughters!

Lear. Why, my boy?

Fool. If I gave them all my living, I'd keep my coxcombs myself. There's mine; beg another of thy daughters.

Lear. Take heed, sirrah; the whip.

Fool. Truth's a dog must to kennel; he must be whipped out when Lady the brach may stand by the fire and stink.

Lear. A pestilent gall to me!

Fool. Sirrah, I'll teach thee a speech.

Lear. Do.

Fool. Mark it, nuncle:

Have more than thou thinkest, Speak less than thou knowest, Lend less than thou owest. Ride more than thou goest, Learn more than thou trivest, Set less than thou throwest; Leave thy drink and thy where, And keep in-a-door, Than thou shalt have more Than two tens to a score.

Kent. This is nothing, fool.

Fool. Then 'tis like the breath of an unsee'd lawyer; you gave me nothing for't. Can you make no use of nothing, nuncle?

Lear. Why, no, boy; nothing can be made out of nothing.

Fool. To KENT. Prithee, tell him, so much the rent of his land comes to: he will not believe a fool.

Lear. A bitter fool!

Fool. Dost thou know the difference, my boy, between a bitter fool and a sweet fool?

Lear. No, lad; teach me.

Fool. That lord that counsell'd thee To give away thy land, Come place him here by me, Do thou for him stand:

The sweet and bitter fool Will presently appear; The one in money here, The other found out there.

Lear. Dost thou call me fool, boy?

Fool. All thy other titles thou hast given away; that thou wast born with.

Kent. This is not altogether fool, my lord.

Fool. No, faith, lords and great men will not let me; if I had a monopoly out, they would have part on 't: and ladies too, they will not let me have all fool to myself; they'll be snatching Nuncle, give me an egg, and I'll give thee two crowns.

Lear. What two crowns shall they be?

Fool. Why, after I have cut the egg i' the middle and eat up the meat, the two crowns o' the egg. When thou clovest thy crown i' the middle, and gavest away both parts, thou bores thine ass on thy back o'er the dirt: thou had'st little wit in thy bald crown when thou gavest thy golden one away. If I speak like myself in this, let him be whipped that first finds it so.

Fools had we'er less grace in a year; For wise men are grown foppish, And know not how their wits to wear, Their manners are so apish.

Lear. When were you wont to be so full o' songs, sirrah?

Fool. I have used it, nuncle, ever since thou madest thy daughters thy mothers; for when thou gavest them the rod and puttest down thine own breeches,

Then they for sudden joy did weep, And I for sorrow sing,
That such a king should play bo-peep, And go the fools among.

Prithee, nuncle, keep a schoolmaster that can teach thy fool to lie: I would fain learn to lie.

Lear. An you lie, sirrah, we'll have you whipped.

Fool. I marvel what kin thou and thy daughter are: they'll have me whipped for speaking true, thou'lt have me whipped for lying; an sometimes I am whipped for holding my peace I had rather be any kind o' thing than a fool and yet I would not be thee, nuncle; thou hast pared thy wit o' both sides, and left nothing in the middle: here comes one o' the parings.

Enter GONERIL.

Lear. How now, daughter! what makes the frontlet on? Methinks you are too much o' late i' the frown.

Fool. Thou wast a pretty fellow when thou hadst no need to care for her frowning; now thou art an O without a figure. I am better than thou art now; I am a fool, thou art nothing.

Goneril. Yes, forsooth, I will hold my tongue; so your face bids me, though you say nothing.

Mom, mom:

He that keeps nor crust nor crum, Weary of all, shall want some.

That's a shapeless peaseed. Pointing to LEAR.

Goneril. Not only, sir, this your all-licens'd fool, But other of your insolent retinue

Do hourly carp and quarrel, breaking forth
Enter Albany.

Lear. Woe, that too late repents; O! sir, are you come?
Is it your will? Speak, sir. Prepare my horses. Ingratitude, thou marble-hearted fiend,
More hideous, when thou show'st thee in a child,
Than the sea-monster.

Ab. Pray, sir, be patient.

Lear. To Goneril. Detested kite! thou liest:
My train are men of choice and rarest parts,
That all particulars of duty know,
And in the most exact regard support
The worships of their name. O most small fault,
How ugly didst thou in Cordelia show!
Which, like an engine, wrench'd my frame of nature
From the fix'd place, drew from my heart all love,
And added to the gall. O Lear, Lear, Lear!
Beat at this gate, that let thy folly in,

Striking his head.

And thy dear judgment out! Go, go, my people.

Ab. My lord, I am guiltless, as I am ignorant
Of what hath mov'd you.

Lear. It may be so, my lord.

Hear, Nature, hear! dear goddess, hear!
Suspend thy purpose, if thou didst intend
To make this creature fruitful!
Into her womb convey sterility!
Dry up in her the organs of increase,
And from her derogate body never spring
A babe to honour her! If she must teem,
Create her child of spleen, that it may live
And a thrift disnatur'd torment to her!
Let it stamp wrinkles in her brow of youth,
With cadent tears fret channels in her cheeks,
Turn all her mother's pains and benefits
To laughter and contempt, that she may feel How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is To have a thankless child! Away, away! Exit.

Ab. Now, gods that we adore, wherefore comes this?

Gon. Never afflict yourself to know the cause;
But let his disposition have that scope
That dotage gives it.

Re-enter Lear.

Lear. What! fifty of my followers at a clap;
Within a fortnight!

Ab. What's the matter, sir?

Lear. I'll tell thee. To Goneril. Life and death! I am ashamed
That thou hast power to shake my manhood thus,
That these hot tears, which break from me
Perforce, should make thee worth them. Blasts and fogs Upon thee!

The untented woundings of a father's curse
Pierce every sense about thee! Old fond eyes,
Beweepe this cause again, I'll pluck ye out.
And cast you, with the waters that you lose,
To temper clay. Yea, is it come to this?
Let it be so: I have another daughter,
Who, I am sure, is kind and comfortable:
When she shall hear this of thee, with her nails
She'll flay thy wolvish visage. Thou shalt find That I'll resume the shape which thou dost think
I have cast off for ever; thou shalt, I warrant thee.

Exit Lear, Kent, and Attendants.

Gon. Do you mark that, my lord?

Alb. I cannot be so partial, Goneril,

To the great love I bear you,—

Gon. Pray you, content. What, Oswald, ho!

To the Fool. You, sir, more knave than fool, after your master.

Fool. Nuncle Lear, nuncle Lear! hurry, and take the fool with thee.

A fox, when one has caught her,

And such a daughter,

Should sure to the slaughter,

If my cap would buy a halter;

So the fool follows after. Exit.

Gon. This man hath good counsel. A hundred knights!

'Tis politic and safe to let him keep

At point a hundred knights; yes, that on every dream,

Each buzz, each fancy, each complaint, dislike,

He may engraunt hisdotage with their powers,

And hold our lives in mercy. Oswald, I say!

Alb. Well, you may fear too far.

Gon. Safer than trust too far.

Let me still take away the harms I fear,

Not fear still to be taken: I know his heart.

What he hath uttered I will have my sister;

If she sustain him and his hundred knights,

When I have show'd the unfitness,—

Re-enter Oswal.

How now, Oswald! What! have you writ that letter to my sister?

Osw. Ay, madam.

Gon. Take you some company, and away to horse:

Inform her fully of your particular fear;

And thereto add such reasons of your own

As may compact it more. Get you gone,

And hasten your return. Exit Oswald.

No, no, my lord,

This milky gentleness and course of yours

Though I condemn not, yet, under pardon,

You are much more attack'd for want of wisdom

Than prais'd for harmful mildness.

Alb. How far your eyes may pierce I cannot tell:

Striving to better, oft we war what's well.

Gon. Nay, then—

Alb. Well, well; the event. Exeunt.

Scene V.—Court before the Same.

Enter Lear, Kent, and Fool.

Lear. Go you before to Gloucester with these letters. Acquaint my daughter no further with anything you know than comes from her demand out of the letter. If your diligence be not speedy I shall be there before you.

Kent. I will not sleep, my lord, till I have delivered your letter. Exit.

Fool. If a man's brains were in's heels, were't not in danger of kibes?

Lear. Ay, boy.

Fool. Then, I prithee, be merry; thy wit shall ne'er go slip-shod.

Lear. Ha, ha, ha!

Fool. Shalt see thy other daughter will use thee kindly; for though she's as like this as a crab's like an apple, yet I can tell what I can tell.

Lear. What canst tell, boy?

Fool. She will taste as like this as a crab does to a crab. Thou canst tell why one's no stands I the middle on's face?

Lear. No.

Fool. Why, to keep one's eyes of either side nose, that what a man cannot smell, he may spy into.

Lear. I did her wrong,—

Fool. Canst tell how an oyster makes his shell?

Lear. No.

Fool. Nor I neither? but I can tell why snails have a house.

Lear. Why?

Fool. Why, to put's head in; not to give away to his daughters, and leave his horn without a case.

Lear. I will forget my nature. So kind father! Be my horses ready?

Fool. Thy asses are gone about 'em. The reason why the seven stars are no more than seven is a pretty reason.

Lear. Because they are not eight?

Fool. Yes, indeed: thou wouldst make good fool.

Lear. To take 't again perfurnce! Monster ingratitude!

Fool. If thou wert my fool, nuncle, I'd have thee beaten for being old before thy time.

Lear. How's that?

Fool. Thou should'st not have been old till thou hast been wise.

Lear. O! let me not be mad, not mad, sweet heaven;

Keep me in temper; I would not be mad!

Enter Gentleman.

How now! Are the horses ready?

Gent. Ready, my lord.

Lear. Come, boy.

Fool. She that's a maid now, and laughs at my departure,

Shall not be a maid long, unless things be cut shorter. Exeunt.

ACT II.

Scene I.—A Court within the Castle of the Earl of Gloucester.

Enter Edmund and Curan.

Edm. Save thee, Curan.

Cur. And you, sir. I have been with you father, and given him notice that the Duke of Cornwall and Regan his duchess will be her with him this night.

Edm. How comes that?

Cur. Nay, I know not. You have heard of the news abroad? I mean the whispered ones for they are yet but ear-kissing arguments.

Edm. Not I: pray you, what are they?

Cur. Have you heard of no likely wars toward twixt the Dukes of Cornwall and Albany?
Edm. Not a word.

Ner. You may do then, in time. Fare you ill, sir.

Exit.

Edm. The duke be here to-night! The better! best!
is weaves itself perforce into my business.
father hath set guard to take my brother;
d I have one thing, of a quesy, question, rich I must act. Briefness and fortune, work!
other, a word; descend: brother, I say!

Enter EDGAR.

Edg. I am sure on 't, not a word.

Edm. I hear my father coming; pardon me; cunning I must draw my sword upon you; and aw; seem to defend yourself; now quit you well.
cold; come before my father. Light, ho! here!
brother. Torches! torches! So, farewell.

Exit EDGAR.

Wounds his arm.

my more fierce endeavour: I have seen drunkards more than this in sport. Father! father! op, stop! No help!

Enter GLOUCESTER, and Servants with torches.

Hou. Now, Edmund, where's the villain?

Edm. Here stood he in the dark, his sharp sword out, mingling of wicked charms, conjuring the moon and his suspicious mistress.

Hou. But where is he?

Edm. Look, sir, I bleed.

Hou. Where is the villain, Edmund?

Edm. Fled this way, sir. When by no means he could—

By no means what?

Edm. Persuade me to the murder of your lordship;
it that I told him, the revenging gods until parricides did all the thunder bend;
ook with how manifold and strong a bond
one child was bound to the father; sir, in fine, cing how loathly opposite I stood his unnatural purpose, in fell motion, his prepared sword he charges home unprovided body, lane'd mine arm:
it when he saw my best armor'd spirits in the quarrel's right, rous'd to the encounter, weather gasted by the noise I made,
Il sufficiently he fled.

Glou. Let him fly far:

in this land shall he remain uncaught;
found — dispatch. The noble duke my master, y worthy arch and patron, comes to-night:

By his authority I will proclaim it,
That which finds him shall deserve our thanks,
Bringing the murderous coward to the stake;
He that conceals him, death.

Edm. When I dissuaded him from his intent,
And found him right to do it, with curt speech
I threaten'd to discover him: he replied,
Thou unpossessing bastard! dost thou think,
If I would stand against thee, would the reposals
Of any trust, virtue, or worth in thee?

Make thy words faith'd? No: what I should deny,
As this I would: ay, though thou didst produce
My very character, I'd turn it all
To thy suggestion, plot, and damned practice;
And thou must make a dullard of the world,
If they not thought the profits of my death
Were very pregnant and potential spurs
To make thee seek it.

Hark! the duke's trumpets. I know not why he comes.

Tucket within.

All ports I'll bar; the villain shall not scape;
The duke must grant me that: besides, his picture
I will send far and near, that all the kingdom
May have due note of him; and of my land,
Loyal and natural boy, I'll work the means
To make thee capable.

Enter CORNWALL, REGAN, and Attendants.

Corn. How now, my noble friend! since I came hither,
Which I can call but now, I have heard strange news.

Reg. If it be true, all vengeance comes too short
Which can pursue the offender. How dost, my lord?

Glow. O! madam, my old heart is crack'd; is crack'd.

Reg. What! did my father's godson seek your life?

He whom my father nam'd! are you Edgar?

Glow. O! lady, lady, shame would have it hid.

Reg. Was he not companion with the riuoues knights
That tend upon my father?

Glow. I know not, madam; 'tis too bad, too bad.

Edm. Yes, madam, he was of that consort.

Reg. No marvel then though he were ill affected;
'Tis they have put him on the old man's death,
To have the expense and waste of his revenues.
I have this present evening from my sister
 Been well inform'd of them, and with such

That if they come to sojourn at my house,
I'll not be there.

Corn. Nor I, assure thee, Regan.

Edmund, I hear that you have shown your father
A child-like office.

Edm. 'Twas my duty, sir.

Glow. He did bewray his practice; and receiving
This hurt you see, striving to apprehend him.

Corn. Is he pursued?

Glow. Ay, my good lord.

Corn. If he be taken he shall never move in
Be fear'd of doing harm; make your own purpose,
How in my strength you please. For you,
Edmund,
Whose virtue and obedience doth this instant
So much commend itself, you shall be ours:
Natures of such deep trust we shall much need;
You we first seize on.
Edm. I shall serve you, sir,
Truly, however else.
Glow. For him I thank your grace.
Corn. You know not why we came to visit
you,—
Reg. Thus out of season, threading dark-eyed
night:
Occasions, noble Gloucester, of some poise,
Wherein we must have use of your advice.
Our father he hath writ, so hath our sister,
Of differences, which I best think it fit to answer from our home; the several messengers
From hence attend dispatch. Our good old friend,
Lay comforts to your bosom, and bestow
Your needful counsel to our businesses,
Which crave the instant use.
Glow. I serve you, madam.
Your graces are right welcome. Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Before Gloucester’s Castle.

Enter Kent and Oswald, severally.

Osw. Good dawning to thee, friend: art of this house?
Kent. Ay.
Osw. Where may we set our horses?
Kent. I ’t the more.
Osw. Pritho, if thou lovost me, tell me.
Kent. I love thee not.
Osw. Why, then I care not for thee.
Kent. If I had thee in Lipsbury pinfold, I would make thee care for me.
Osw. Why dost thou use me thus? I know thee not.
Kent. Fellow, I know thee.
Osw. What dost thou know me for?
Kent. A knife, a rascal, an eater of broken meats; a base, proud, shallow, beggarly, three-suited, hundred-pound, filthy, worsted-stocking knife; a lily-livered, action-taking knife; a whoreson, glass-gazing, superserviceable, finical rogue; one-trunk-inheriting slave; one that wouldst be a bawd, in way of good service, and art nothing but the composition of a knife, beggar, coward, pandar, and the son and heir of a mongrel bitch: one whom I will beat into clamorous whining if thou deniest the least syllable of thy addition.
Osw. Why, what a monstrous fellow art thou, thus to rail on one that is neither known of thee nor knows thee?
Kent. What a brazen-faced varlet art thou, to deny thou knowest me! Is it two days since I tripped up thy heels and beat thee before the king! Draw, you rogue; for though it be night, yet the moon shines: I’ll make a sop o’
the moonshine of you. Drawing his sword.
Draw, you whoreson cullionly barber-monger, draw.

Osw. Away! I have nothing to do with thee.
Kent. Draw, you rascal; you come with letters against the king, and take vanity the puppet part against the royalty of her father. Draw you rogue, or I’ll so carbonado your shank, draw, you rascal; come your ways.
Osw. Help, ho! murder! help!
Kent. Strike, you slave; stand, rogue, stand you next slave, strike. Beats his
Osw. Help, ho! murder! murder!
Enter Edmund, with his rapier drawn.
Edm. How now! What’s the matter?
Parting them.
Kent. With you, Goodman boy, an ye please come, I’ll flesh ye; come on, young master.

Enter Cornwall, Regan, Gloucester, and Servants.

Glow. Weapons! arms! What’s the matter
here?
Corn. Keep peace, upon your lives:
He dies that strikes again. What is the matter?
Reg. The messengers from our sister and the king.
Corn. What is your difference? speak.
Osw. I am scarce in breath, my lord.
Kent. No marvel, you have so bestirred you valour. You cowardly rascal, nature disdain in thee: a tailor made thee.
Corn. Thou art a strange fellow; a tailor make a man?
Kent. Ay, a tailor, sir: a stone-cutter or painter could not have made him so ill, thou they had been but two hours o’ the trade.
Corn. Speak yet, how grew your quarrel?
Osw. This ancient ruffian, sir, whose life have spared at suit of his grey beard,— Kent. Thou whoreson zed! thou unnessess letter! My lord, if you will give me leave, will tred this unboltoed villain into mortar, and daub the wall of a jakes with him. Spare not gray beard, you wagtail?
Corn. Peace, sirrah!
You beastly knave, know you no reverence?
Kent. Yes, sir; but anger hath a privilege.
Corn. Why art thou angry?
Kent. That such a slave as this should wear
sword,
Who wears no honesty. Such smiling rogue as these,
Like rats, oft bite the holy cords a-twain
Which are too intrinsic t’ unloose; smooth ever passion
That in the natures of their lords rebel;
Bring oil to fire, snow to their colder moods;
Renege, affirm, and turn their halcyon beaks
With every gale and vary of their masters,
Knowing nought, like dogs, but following.
A plague upon your epileptic visage!
Smile you my speeches, as I were a fool?
Goose, if I had you upon Sarum plain,
I’d drive ye cackling home to Camelot.
Corn. What! art thou mad, old fellow?
Kent. No contraries hold more antipathy
Than I and such a knave.
Corn. Why dost thou call him knave? Why is his fault?
Kent. His countenance likes me not.
Corn. No more, perchance, does mine, nor hi nor hers.
KENT. Sir, 'tis my occupation to be plain: I have seen better faces in my time an stands on any shoulder that I see before me at this instant.

CORN. This is some fellow, ho, having been prais'd for bluntness, doth affect saucy roughness, and constrains the garb from his nature: he cannot flatter, he, a honest mind and plain, he must speak truth:

Kent. They will take it, so; if not, he's plain. These kinds of knives I know, which in this plainness

KENT. Sir, in good sooth, in sincere verity, see the allowance of your great aspect, hose influence, like the wearth of radiant fire flickering Phoebus' front, —

CORN. What mean'st by this? KENT. To go out of my dialect, which you dis并不意味 so much. I know, sir, I am not a falaterer: that beguiled you in a plain accent was a

CORN. What was the offence you gave him? OSES. I never gave him any;

Kent. Please'd the king his master very late strike at me, upon his misconstruction; hen he, conjunct, and flattering his di-pleasure,ipp'd me behind; being down, insulted, rail'd, id put upon him such a deal of man, at worthied him, got praises of the king or him attempting who was self-subdu'd; in, in the fleshment of this dread explore, ew on me here again.

KENT. None of these rogues and cowards Ajax is their fool. CORN. Fetch forth the stocks!

Kent. Sir, I am too old to learn, ll not your stocks for me; I serve the king, whose employment I was sent to you; shall do small respect, show too bold malice minst the grace and person of my master, ocking his messenger.

CORN. Fetch forth the stocks! I have life and honour, there shall he sit till noon.

Kent. Why, madam, if I were your father's dog, shou'd not use me so.

KENT. Sir, being his knave, I will.

CORN. This is a fellow of the self-same colour

KENT. Why, madam, if I were your father's dog, shou should not use me so.

CORN. This is a fellow of the self-same colour

KENT. Sir, his being his knave, I will.

KENT is put in the stocks.

Kent. Pray, do not, sir. I have watch'd and travell'd hard;

Kent. Pray, do not, sir. I have watch'd and travell'd hard;

of some time I shall sleep out, the rest I 'll whistle.

A good man's fortune may grow out at heels:

KENT. Good king, that must approve the common saw,

Thou out of heaven's benediction comest To the warm sun.

Approach, thou beacon to this under globe, That by thy comfortable beams I may Peruse this letter. Nothing almost sees miracles, But misery: I know 'tis from Cordelia, Who hath most fortunately been inform'd Of my obscured course; and shall find time From this enormous state, seeking to give Losses their remedies. All weary and o'er-watch'd, Take vantage, heavy eyes, not to behold This shameful lodging.

Fortune, good night; smile once more; turn thy wheel! He sleeps.

KINGLEAR.

SCENE III.—A Part of the Heath.

Enter Edgar.

EDGAR. I heard myself proclaim'd;

And by the happy hollow of a tree Escap'd the hunt. No port is free; no place, That guard, and most unusual vigilance, Does not attend my taking. While I may 'scape, I will preserve myself; and am bethought To take the basest and most poorest shape That ever penury, in contempt of man, Brought near to beast; my face I 'll grime with filth,

Blanket my loins, elf all my hair in knots,

And with presented nakedness outface The winds and persecutions of the sky.

The country gives me proof and precedent Of Bedlam beggars, who, with roaring voices, Strike in their numb'd and mortified bare arms Pins, wooden pricks, nails, sprigs of rosemary; And with this horrible object, from low farms, Poor pelting villages, sheep-cotes, and mills, Sometime with lunatic buns, sometime with prayers, Enforce their charity. Poor Turlygood! poor Tom!

That's something yet: Edgar I nothing am.

Exit.
SCENE IV.—Before Gloucester’s Castle.
      Kent in the Stocks.

Enter Lear, Fool, and Gentleman.

Lear. ‘Tis strange that they should so depart from home,
And not send back my messenger.

Gent. As I learn’d.

The night before there was no purpose in them
Of this remove.

Kent. Hail to thee, noble master!

Lear. Ha!

Mak’st thou this shame thy pastime?

Kent. No, my lord.

Fool. Ha, ha! he wears cruel garter. Horses are tied by the head, dogs and bears by the neck, monkeys by the loins, and men by the legs: when a man’s over-lusty at legs, then he wears wooden nether-stocks.

Lear. What’s he that hath so much thy place mistook
To set once here?

Kent. It is both he and she,
Your son and daughter.

Lear. No.

Kent. Yes.

Lear. No, I say.

Kent. I say, yea.

Lear. No, no: they would not.

Kent. Yes, they have.

Lear. By Jupiter, I swear, no.

Kent. By Juno, I swear, ay.

Lear. They durst not do’t.

To do upon respect such violent outrage.

Resolve me, with all modest haste, which way
Thou might’st deserve, or they impose, this usage,

Coming from us.

Kent. My lord, when at their home
I did commend your highness’ letters to them,
Ere I was risen from the place that show’d
My duty kneeling, came there a recking post, 30
Stew’d in his haste, half breathless, panting
forth
From Goneril his mistress salutations;
Deliver’d letters, spite of intermission,
Which presently they read: on whose contents
They summon’d up their meiny, straight took horse;
Commanded me to follow, and attend
The leisure of their answer; gave me cold looks:
And meeting here the other messenger,
Whose welcome, I perceiv’d, had poison’d mine,
Being the very fellow which of late
Display’d so saucily against your highness,
Having more man than wit about me, drew:
He rais’d the house with loud and coward cries.
Your son and daughter found this trespass
worth
The shame which here it suffers.

Fool. Winter’s not gone yet, if the wild-geese fly that way.

Fathers that wear rags
Do make their children blind,
But fathers that bear bags
Shall see their children kind.

Fortune, that arrant whore,
Ne’er turns the key to the poor.

But for all this thou shalt have as many dolor
for thy daughters as thou canst tell in a year.

Lear. O! how this mother swells up town.

Hysterica passio! down, thou climbing sorrow
Thy element’s below. Where is this daughter Kent. With the earl, sir; here within.

Lear. Follow me not; stay here. Exit.

Gent. Made you no more offence but what y’ speak of!

Kent. None.

How chance the king comes with so small number!

Fool. An thou hadst been set i’ the stocks that question, thou hadst well deserved it.

Kent. Why, fool?

Fool. We’ll set thee to school to an ant,
Teach thee there’s no labouring i’ the wint.
All that follow their noses are led by their eyes, but blind men; and there’s not a nose among twenty but can smell him that’s stinking. I go thy hold when a great wheel runs down hill, lest it break thy neck with following it but the great one that goes up the hill, let he draw thee after. When a wise man gives thee better counsel, give me mine again: I would have none but knaves follow it, since a fool gives it.

That sir which serves and seeks for gain,
And follows but for form,
Will pack when it begins to rain,
And leave thee in the storm.
But I will tarry; the fool will stay,
And let the wise man fly:
The knave turns fool that runs away;
The fool no knave, perdy.

Kent. Where learned you this, fool?

Fool. Not i’ the stocks, fool.

Re-enter Lear, with Gloucester.

Lear. Deny to speak with me! They a sick! they are weary! They have travell’d all the night! Me fetches,

The images of revolt and flying off.

Fetch me a better answer.

Glo. My dear lord,

You know the fiery quality of the duke;

How unremovable and fix’d he is

In his own course.

Lear. Vengeance! plague! death! confusion!

Fiery! what quality? Why, Gloucester, Glo -

I’d speak with the Duke of Cornwall and his wife.

Glo. Well, my good lord, I have inform’d them so.

Lear. Inform’d them! Dost thou understand me, man?

Glo. Ay, my good lord.

Lear. The king would speak with Cornwall the dear father

Would his daughter speak, commands be service

Are they inform’d of this? My breath at blood!

Fiery! the fiery duke! Tell the hot dul that—
KING LEAR.

Lear. Good morrow to you both.

Corn. Hail to your grace!

KENT is set at liberty.

Reg. I am glad to see your highness.

Lear. Regan, I think you are; I know what reason have to think so: if thou should'st not be glad, would divorce me from thy mother's tomb, spurning an adultress. To Kent. O! are you free?
One other time for that. Beloved Regan, my sister's naught: O Regan! she hath tied harp-tooth'd unkindness, like a vulture, here.

Points to his heart.
can scarce speak to thee; thou 'lt not believe ith how deprav'd a quality—O Regan!

Reg. I pray you, sir, take patience. I have hope on less know how to value her desert han she to seant her duty.

Lear. Say, how is that?

Reg. I cannot think my sister in the least bould fail her obligation: if, sir, perchance he have restrain'd the riots of your followers,
's on such ground, and to sich wholesome
s 'clears her from all blame.

Lear. My curses on her!

Reg. O, sir! you are old;
ature in you stands on the very verge
'f her confine: you should be rul'd and led
'y some discretion that discerns your state etter than you yourself. Therefore I pray you hat to our sister you do make return;
'y you have wrong'd her, sir,

Lear. Ask her forgiveness?

v she but mark how this becomes the house:

Dear daughter, I confess that I am old;
Age is unnecessary: on my knees I beg.

Kneeling.
That you 'll vouchsafe me raiment, bed, and food.

Reg. Good sir, no more; these are unsightly tricks.

Return you to my sister.

She hath abated me of half my train;
Look'd black upon me; struck me with her
tongue,

Most serpent-like, upon the very heart.

All the stord'rv vanagements of heaven fall
On her ingratitude top! Strike her young bones
You taking airs, with lameness!

Corn. Fie, sir, fie!

Lear. You nimble lightnings, dart your blinding flames
Into her scornful eyes! Infect her beauty,
You fen-suck'd fogs, drawn by the powerful sun,

To fall and blast her pride!

Reg. O the blest gods! so will you wish on me,
When the rash mood is on.

Lear. No, Regan, thou shalt never have my curse:

Thy tender-hefted nature shall not give
Thee o'er to harshness: her eyes are fierce, but thine

Do comfort and not burn. 'Tis not in thee
To grudge my pleasures, to cut off my train,
To bandy hasty words, to scant my sizes,
And, in conclusion, to oppose the bolt
Against my coming in: thou better know'st
The offices of nature, bond of childhood,
Effects of courtesy, dues of gratitude;
Thy half o' the kingdom hast thou not forgot,
Wherein I thee endow'd.

Reg. Good sir, to the purpose.

Lear. Who put my man i' the stocks?

Tucket within.

Corn. What trumpet's that?

Reg. I know't, my sister's: this approves her letter,

That she would soon be here.

Enter OSWALD.

Lear. Is your lady come?

Oswald. This is a slave, whose easy-borrow'd pride

Dwells in the fickle grace of her he follows.
Out, varlet, from my sight!

Corn. What means your grace?

Lear. Who stock'd my servant? Regan, I have good hope

Thou didst not know on' t. Who comes here?

Enter GONERIL.

O heavens,
If you do love old men, if your sweet sway
Allow obedience, if yourselves are old,
Make it your cause; send down and take my part!

To Goneril. Art not asham'd to look upon this board?

Lear. O Regan! wilt thou take her by the hand?

Gon. Why not by the hand, sir? How have

I offended?
All's not offence that discretion finds
And dotage terms so.

Lear. O sides! you are too tough; 200
Will you yet hold? How came my man i' the stocks?

Corn. I set him there, sir; but his own disorders
Deserv'd much less advancement.

Lear. You! did you?

Reg. I pray you, father, being weak, seem so.
If, till the expiration of your month,
you will return and sojourn with my sister,
Dismissing half your train, come then to me:
I am now from home, and out of that provision
Which shall be needful for your entertainment.

Lear. Return to her? and fifty men dismiss'd?
No, rather I abjure all roofs, and choose
To wage against the enmity o' the air;
To be a comrade with the wolf and owl,
Necessity's sharp pinch! Return with her!
Why, the hot-blooded France, that dowerless took

Our youngest born, I could as well be brought To kneel his throne, and, squire-like, pension beg
To keep base life afoot. Return with her!

Persuade me rather to be slave and sumpter
To this detested groom.

Pointing at OSWALD. 209

Gon. At your choice, sir.

Lear. I prithee, daughter, do not make me mad:
I will not trouble thee, my child; farewell.
We'll no more meet, no more see one another;
But yet thou art my flesh, my blood, my daughter:
Or rather a disease that's in my flesh,
Which I must needs call mine: thou art a boil,
A plague-sore, an embowed carbuncle,
In my corrupted blood. But I'll not chide thee;

Let shame come when it will, I do not call it:
I do not bid the thunder-bearer shoot.
Nor tell tales of thee to high-judging Jove.
Mend when thou canst; be better at thy leisure:
I can be patient; I can stay with Regan,
And my hundred knights.

Reg. Not altogether so:
I look'd not for you yet, nor am provided
For your fit welcome. Give ear, sir, to my sister;
For those that mingle reason with your passion
Must be content to think you old, and so—
But she knows what she does.

Lear. Is this well spoken?

Reg. I dare avouch it, sir: what! fifty followers!
Is it not well? What should you need of more?
Yea, or so many, sith that both charge and danger
Speak 'gainst so great a number? How, in one house,
Should many people, under two commands,
Hold amity? 'Tis hard; almost impossible.

Gon. Why might not you, my lord, receive attendance
From those that she calls servants, or from mine?

Reg. Why not, my lord? If then they chanc'd to slack you
We could control them. If you will come to me,
For now I spy a danger, I entreat you
To bring but five-and-twenty; to no more
Will I give place or notice.

Lear. I gave you all—

Reg. And in good time you gave Lear. Made you my guardians, my depositaries,
But kept a reservation to be follow'd
With such a number. What! must I come to you
With five-and-twenty? Regan, said you so?

Reg. And speak't again, my lord; no more with me.

Lear. Those wicked creatures yet do look
Well-favour'd
When others are more wicked; not being the worst

Stands in some rank of praise. To GONER
I'll go with thee:
Thy fifty yet doth double five-and-twenty,
And thou art twice her love.

Gon. Hear me, my lord:
What need you five-and-twenty, ten, or five,
To follow in a house where twice so many
Have a command to tend you?

Reg. What need on
Lear. O! reason not the need; our base beggars
Are in the poorest thing superfluous:
Allow not nature more than nature needs,
Man's life is cheap as beast's. Thou art a lad,
If only to go warm were gorgeous.
Why, nature needs not what thou gorgeous wear'st,
Which scarcely keeps thee warm. But, for tr need,—

You heavens, give me that patience, patience

You see me here, you gods, a poor old man,
As full of grief as age; wretched in both!
If it be you that stirs these daughters' hearts
Against their father, fool me not so much
To bear it tamely; touch me with noble anger,
And let not women's weapons, water-drops,
Stain my man's cheeks! No, you un nurtured bags,
I will have such revenges on you both
That all the world shall—I will do such thing
What they are yet I know not, but they shall!
The terror of the earth. You think I'll weep
No, I'll not weep:
I have full cause of weeping, but this heart
Shall break into a hundred thousand flaws
Or ere I'll weep. O fool! I shall go mad.

Exeunt LEAR, GLOUCESTER, KENT, and FOO.

Gon. Let us withdraw, 'twill be a storm.

Storm heard at a distance

Reg. This house is little: the old man and his people Cannot be well bestow'd.

Gon. 'Tis his own blame; hath put himself from rest,
And must needs taste his folly.

Reg. For his particular, I'll receive him gladly
But not one follower.

Gon. So am I purpos'd.

Where is my Lord of Gloucester?

Corn. Follow'd the old man forth. He is return'd.

Re-enter GLOUCESTER.

Glon. The king is in high rage.

Corn. Whither is he going

Glon. He calls to horse; but will I know no whither,
ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Heath.

Storm, with thunder and lightning. Enter Kent and a Gentleman, meeting.

Kent. Who's there, beside foul weather? Gent. One minded like the weather, most unequably.

Kent. I know you. Where's the king?

Gent. Contending with the fretful elements; aids the wind blow the earth into the sea, swells the curled waters: 'bove the main, that things might change or cease; tears his white hair, Which the impetuous blasts, with eyeless rage, hatch in their fury, and make nothing of; trives in his little world of man to out-sorn the to-and-fro conflicting wind and rain. In his height, wherein the cub-drawn bear would couch, the lion and the belly-pinched wolf keep their far dry, unbonneted he runs, and bids what will take all.

Kent. But who is with him?

Gent. None but the fool, who labours to out-jest is heart-struck injuries.

Kent. Sir, I do know you; and dare, upon the warrant of my note, commend a dear thing to you. There is division, although as yet the face of it be covered. With mutual cunning, twixt Albany and Cornwall;

Who have—as who have not, that their great stars 'ron'd and set high?—servants, who seem no less, Which are to France the spies and speculations intelligent of our state; what hath been seen, either in sniffs and packings of the dukes, or the hard rein which both of them have borne against the old kind king; or something deeper, Whereof perchance these are but furnishings; but, true it is, from France there comes a power to this scatter'd kingdom; who already, Wise in our negligence, have secret feet in some of our best ports, and are at point to show their open banner. Now to you:

On my credit you dare build so far
To make your speed to Dover, you shall find
Some that will thank you, making just report Of how unnatural and bemadding sorrow
The king hath cause to plain.
I am a gentleman of blood and breeding,
And from some knowledge and assurance offer
This office to you.

Gent. I will talk further with you.

Kent. No, do not.
For confirmation that I am much more Than my out-call, open this purse, and take
What it contains. If you shall see Cordelia,
As fear not but you shall, show her this ring,
And she will tell you who your fellow is
That yet you do not know. Fie on this storm!
I will go seek the king.

Gent. Give me your hand. Have you no more to say?

Kent. Few words, but, to effect, more than all yet;
That, when we have found the king, in which your pain
That way, I'll this, he that first lights on him
Holla the other.

Exeunt severally.

SCENE II.—Another Part of the Heath. Storm still.

Enter Lear and Fool.

Lear. Blow, winds, and crack your cheeks! rage! blow!
You cataracts and hurricanoes, spout
Till you have drench'd our steeples, drown'd the cocks!
You sulphurous and thought-executing fires,
Vaunt-couriers to oak-cleaving thunderbolts,
Singe my white head! And thou, all-shaking thunder,
Strike flat the thick rotundity o' the world!
Crack nature's moulds, all germens spill at once
That make ingratitude man!

Fool. O nuncle, court holy-water in a dry house is better than this rain-water out o' door. Good nuncle, in, and ask thy children's blessing;
here's a night pities neither wise man nor fool.

Lear. Rumble thy bellyful! Spit, fire! spout, rain!

Nor rain, wind, thunder, fire, are my daughters:
I tax not you, you elements, with unkindness;
I never gave you kingdom, call'd you children,
You owe me no subscription: then let fall
Your horrible pleasure; here I stand, your slave,
A poor, infirm, weak, and despis'd old man.

But yet I call you servile ministers,
That have with two pernicious daughters join'd
Your high-engender'd battles! gainst a head
So old and white as this. O! O! 'tis foul.

Fool. He that has a house to put 's head in has a good head-piece.
The cod-piece that will house
Before the head has any,
The head and he shall house;
So beggars marry many.
The man that makes his toe
What he his heart should make,
Shall of a corn cry wo,
And turn his sleep to wake.

For there was never yet fair woman but she made months in a glass.

Lear. No, I will be the pattern of all patience;
I will say nothing.
Enter Kent.

Kent. Who's there?

Fool. Marry, here's grace and a candle-piece; that's a wise man and a fool.

Kent. Alas! sir, are you here? things that love night Love not such nights as these; the wrathful skies Gallow the very wanderers of the dark, And make them keep their caves. Since I was man Such sheets of fire, such bursts of horrid thunder, Such groans of roaring wind and rain, I never Remember to have heard; man's nature cannot carry The affliction nor the fear.

Lear. Let the great gods, That keep this dreadful pother o'er our heads, 41 Find out their enemies now. Tremble, thou wretch, That hast within thee undivulged crimes, Unwhipp'd of justice; hide thee, thou bloody hand, Thou perjur'd, and thou simular of virtue That art incestuous; caltiff, to pieces shake, That under covert and convenient seeming Hast practis'd on man's life; close pent-up guilts, Rive your concealing continents, and cry These dreadful summoners grace. I am a man More sinn'd against than sinning.

Kent. Alack! bare-headed! 90 Gracious my lord, hard by here is a hovel; Some friendship will it lend you 'gainst the tempest; Repose you there while I to this hard house, More harder than the stones whereof 'tis rais'd, Which even but now, demanding after you, Denied me to come in, return and force Their scanty courtesy.

Lear. My wits begin to turn. Come, on, my boy. How dost, my boy? Art cold? I am cold myself. Where is this straw, my fellow? The art of our necessities is strange, That can make vile things precious. Come, your hovel. Poor fool and knave, I have one part in my heart That's sorry yet for thee.

Fool. He that has a little tiny wit, With hey, ho, the wind and the rain, Must make content with his fortunes fit, Though the rain it raineth every day.

Lear. True, my good boy. Come, bring us to this hovel. Exit Lear and Kent. Fool. This is a brave night to cool a courtezian, I'll speak a prophecy ere I go: 80 When priests are more in word than matter; When brewers mar their malt with water; When nobles are their tailors' tators: No heretics burn'd, but wenches' suitors; When every case in law is right; No squire in debt, nor no poor knight; When slanderers do not live in tongnes; Nor cut-purses come not to thrones; When usurers tell their gold i' the field; And bawds and whores do churches build; Then shall the realm of Albion Come to great confusion:

Then comes the time, who lives to see 't, That going shall be us'd with feet. This prophecy Merlin shall make; for I live before his time. Exit.
KING LEAR.

KENT. Good my lord, enter here. Lear. Prithee, go in thyself; seek thine own ease: his tempest will not give me leave to ponder on things would hurt me more. But I'll go in, o' the Fool. In, boy; go first. You houseless poverty,— yay, get thee in. I'll pray, and then I'll sleep.

Fool. Go in, poor naked wretches, whereasoe'er you are, that hide the pelting of this pitiless storm, how shall your houseless heads and unfed sides, your loop'd and window'd raggedness, defend you from seasons such as these? O! I have ta'en too little care of this. Take physic, pomp; expose thyself to feel what wretches feel. 'tis laid mayst shake the superflux to them, and show the heavens more just.

Lear. Why, thou wert better in thy grave than to answer with thy uncovered body this extremity of the skies. Is man no more than this? Consider him well. Thou ovest the worm no silk, the beast no hide, the sheep no wool, the cat no perfume. Ha! here's three on's are sophisticated; thou art the thing itself; unaccommodated man is no more but such a poor, bare, forked animal as thou art. Off, off, you lendings! Come! unbutter here.

Pillicock sat on Pillicock-hill:
Halloo, halloo, leoo, leoo!

Fool. This cold night will turn us all to fools and madmen.

Edg. Take heed o' the foul fiend. Obey thy parents; keep thy word justly; swear not; commit not with man's sworn spouse; set not thy sweet heart on proud array. Tom's a-cold!

Lear. What hast thou been?

Edg. A servingman, proud in heart and mind; that curdled my hair, wore gloves in my cap, served the lust of my mistress' heart, and did the act of darkness with her; swore as many oaths as I speak words, and broke them in the sweet face of heaven; one that slept in the contrary of lust, and waked to do it. Wine loved I deeply, dice dearly, and in woman out-paramour the Turk; false of heart, light of ear, bloody of hand; hog in sloth, fox in stealth, wolf in greediness, dog in madness, lion in prey. Let not the cracking of shoes nor the rustling of silks betray thy poor heart to woman: keep thy foot out of brothels, thy hand out of phletks, thy pen from lenders' books, and defy the foul fiend. Still through the hawthorn blows the cold wind; says suum, mun, ha, no nowny. Dolphin my boy, my boy, seesa! Let him trot by, by. Storms still, 125

Lear. Why, thou wert better in thy grave than to answer with thy uncovered body this extremity of the skies. Is man no more than this? Consider him well. Thou ovest the worm no silk, the beast no hide, the sheep no wool, the cat no perfume. Ha! here's three on's are sophisticated; thou art the thing itself; unaccommodated man is no more but such a poor, bare, forked animal as thou art. Off, off, you lendings! Come! unbutter here.

Tearing off his clothes.

Edg. This is the foul fiend Flibbertigibbet: he begins at curfew, and walks till the first cock; he gives the web and the pin, squints the eye, and makes the harelip; midlewes the white wheat, and hurts the poor creature of earth.

Swithold footed thrice the wold;
He met the night-more, and her nine-fold;
Bid her alight,
And her troth plight,
And avoint thee, witch, avoint thee!

Lear. What! have his daughters brought him to this pass? Couldst thou save nothing? Didst thou give them all?

Fool. Nay, he reserved a blanket, else we had been all shamed.

Lear. Now all the plagues that in the penurious air Hang fated o'er men's faults light on thy daughters!

KENT. He hath no daughters, sir.

Lear. Death, traitor! nothing could have subdued nature To such a lowness but his unkind daughters. Is it the fashion that disdained fathers Should have thus little mercy on their flesh? Judicious punishment! twas this flesh begot Those pelican daughters.

Enter GLOUCESTER, with a torch.

Edg. This is the foul fiend Flibbertigibbet: he begins at curfew, and walks till the first cock; he gives the web and the pin, squints the eye, and makes the harelip; midlewes the white wheat, and hurts the poor creature of earth.
Horse to ride, and weapon to wear,
But mice and rats and such small deer,
Have been Tom's food for seven long year.

Beware my follower. Peace, Smulkin! peace, thou fiend!

Glow. What! hath your grace no better company?
Edg. The prince of darkness is a gentleman;
Modo he's call'd, and Mahu.

Glow. Our flesh and blood, my lord, is grown so vile,
That it doth hate what it gets.

Edg. Poor Tom's a-cold.
Glow. Go in with me. My duty cannot suffer
To obey in all your daughters' hard commands:
Though their injunction be to bar my doors,
And let this tyrannous night take hold upon
you,
Yet have I ventur'd to come seek you out
And bring you where both fire and food is ready.

Lear. First let me talk with this philosopher.
What is the cause of thunder?
Kent. Good my lord, take his offer; go into the house.

Lear. I'll talk a word with this same learned Theban.
What is your study?

Edg. How to prevent the fiend, and to kill vermin.

Lear. Let me ask you one word in private.
Kent. Importune him once more to go, my lord;
His wits begin to unsettle.
Glow. Canst thou blame him?
Storn still.

His daughters seek his death. Ah! that good
Kent;
He said it would be thus, poor banish'd man!
Thou say'st the king grows mad; I'll tell thee,
friend,
I am almost mad myself. I had a son,
Now outlaw'd from my blood; he sought my
life,
But lately, very late; I lov'd him, friend,
No father his son dearer; true to tell thee,
The grief hath craz'd my wits. What a night's this!
I do beseech your grace,—

Lear. O! cry you mercy, sir.
Noble philosopher, your company.
Edg. Tom's a-cold.
Glow. In, fellow, there, into the howel: keep thee warm.

Lear. Come, let's in all.
Kent. This way, my lord.

Lear. With him;
I will keep still with my philosopher.
Kent. Good my lord, soothe him; let him take the fellow.

Glow. Take him you on.

Kent. Sirrah, come on; go along with us.

Lear. Come, good Athenian.
Glow. No words, no words: hush.

Edg. Child Rowland to the dark tower came,
His word was still, Fil, foil, and fim,
I smell the blood of a British man.

Exeunt.

Scene V.—A Room in Gloucester's Castle.
Enter Cornwall and Edmund.

Corn. I will have my revenge ere I depart his house.
Edm. How, my lord, I may be censured, that nature thus gives way to loyalty, something tears me to think of.

Corn. I now perceive it was not altogether your brother's evil disposition made him seek his death; but a provoking merit, set a-work by a reprovable badness in himself.
Edm. How malicious is my fortune, that I must repent to be just! This is the letter which he spoke of, which approves him an intelligent party to the advantages of France. O heavens, that this treason were not, or not I the detector
Corn. Go with me to the duchess.
Edm. If the matter of this paper be certain,
you have mighty business in hand.

Corn. True or false, it hath made thee Earl of Gloucester. Seek out where thy father is, that he may be ready for our apprehension.
Edm. Aside. If I find him comforting the king, it will stuff his suspicion more fully. I will persever in my course of loyalty, though the conflict be sore between that and my blood.
Corn. I will lay trust upon thee; and thou shalt find a dearer father in my love.

Exeunt.

Scene VI.—A Chamber in a Farmhouse adjoining the Castle.

Enter Gloucester, Lear, Kent, Fool, and Edgar.

Glow. Here is better than the open air; take it thankfully. I will piece out the comfort with what addition I can: I will not be long from you.

Kent. All the power of his wits have given way to his impatience. The gods reward your kindness!

Exit Gloucester.
Edg. Frateretto calls me, and tells me Nero is an angler in the lake of darkness. Pray, inocent, and beware the foul fiend.

Fool. Prithee, uncle, tell me whether a madman be a gentleman or a yeoman?

Lear. A king, a king!
Fool. No; he's a yeoman that has a gentleman to his son; for he's a mad yeoman that sees his son a gentleman before him.

Lear. To have a thousand with red burningspits
Come hissing in upon 'em,—

Edg. The foul fiend bites my back.

Fool. He's mad that trusts in the tameness of a wolf, a horse's health, a boy's love, or a whore's oath.

Lear. It shall be done; I will arraign them straight.
To Edgar. Come, sit thou here, most learned justicer;
To the Fool. Thou, sapient sir, sit here. Now, you she foxes!

Edg. Look where he stands and glares!
Wantest thou eyes at trial, madam?

Come o'er the bourn, Bessy, to me,—

Fool. Her boat hath a leak,
And she must not speak
Why she dares not come over to thee.
Edy. The foul fiend haunts poor Tom in the noose of a nightingale. Hopdance cries in Tom's elfy for two white herring. Croak not, black angel; I have no food for thee.

Kent. How do you, sir? Stand you not so amaz'd?
Will you lie down and rest upon the cushions? Lear. I'll see their trial first. Bring in their evidence.

'o EDGAR. Thou robed man of justice, take thy place; 'o the Fool. And thou, his yoke-fellow of equity, enchi by his side. To KENT. You are o' the commission, it you too.

Edy. Let us deal justly.

Sleepes warkest thou, jolly shepherd? Thy sheep be in the corn; And for one blast of thy minikin mouth, Thy sheep shall take no harm.

urr! the cat is grey.

Lear. Arraign her first; 'tis Goneril. I here take my oath before this honourable assembly, he kicked the poor king her father.

Fool. Come hither, mistress. Is your name oneil?

Lear. She cannot deny it.

Fool. Cry you mercy, I took you for a joint-ooll.

Lear. And here's another, whose warp's looks proclaim that store her heart is made on. Stop her there!

rms, arms, sword, fire! Corruption in the place! also justicer, why hast thou let her 'scape?

Edy. Bless thy five wits!

Kent. O pity! Sir, where is the patience now that so oft have boasted to retain?

Edy. Aside. My tears begin to take his part so much, they'll mar my counterfeiting.

Lear. The little dogs and all, ay, Blanch, and Sweetchart, see, they bark at me.

Edy. Tom will throw his head at them, vanted, you cuss! Be thy mouth or black or white, Tooth that poisons if it bite; Mastiff, greyhound, mongrel grim, Hound or spaniel, brach or lyn; Or bobtail tike or trundle-tail; Tom will make them weep and wail: For, with throwing thus my head, Dogs leap the hatch, and all are fled, o de, de, de. Sessee! Come, march to wakes od fairs and market-towns. Poor Tom, thy tern is dry.

Lear. Then let them anatomize Regan, see hat breeds about her heart. Is there any use in nature that makes these hard hearts? o EDGAR. You, sir, I entertain for one of my mind; only I do not like the fashion of your utens; you will say they are Persian attire; it let them be changed.

Kent. Now, good my lord, lie here and rest awhile.

Lear. Make no noise, make no noise; draw the curtains: so, so, so. We'll go to supper in the morning: so, so, so.

Fool. And I'll go to bed at noon.

Re-enter Gloucester.

Glou. Come hither, friend: where is the king my master?

Kent. Here, sir; but trouble him not, his wits are gone.

Glou. Good friend, I prithee, take him in thy arms; I have o'erheard a plot of death upon him. There is a litter ready; lay him in't, and drive toward Dover, friend, where thou shalt meet.

Both welcome and protection. Take up thy master:
If thou should'st daily half an hour, his life, With thine, and all that offer to defend him, Stand in assured loss. Take up, take up; And follow me, that will to some provision Give thee quick conduct.

Kent. Oppress'd nature sleeps: This rest must yet have balm'd thy broken sinews, Which, if convenience will not allow, Stand in hard cure. To the Fool. Come, help to bear thy master; Thou must not stay behind.

Glou. Come, come, away.

Exit KENT, GLoucester, and the Fool, bearing off the King.

Edy. When we our betters see bearing our woes, We scarcely think our miseries our foes. Who alone suffers suffers most 't the mind, Leaving free things and happy shows behind; But then the mind much sufferance doth o'er-skip, When grief hath mates, and bearing fellowship. How light and portable my pain seems now, When that which makes me bend makes the king bow; He childed as I father'd! Tom, away! Mark the high noises, and thyself bewray When false opinion, whose wrong thought defiles thee, In thy just proof repeals and reconciles thee. What will hap more to-night, safe 'scape the king! Lazar, lark.

Exit.

Scene VII.—A Room in Gloucester's Castle.

Enter Cornwall, Regan, Goneril, Edmund, and Servants.

Corn. To Goneril. Post speedily to my lord your husband; show him this letter: the army of France is landed. Seek out the villain Gloucester.

Kent. Dispatch some of the Servants.

Reg. Hang him instantly.

Gon. Pluck out his eyes.

Corn. Leave him to my displeasure. Edmund, keep you our sister company: the revenges we are bound to take upon your traitorous father are not fit for your beholding. Advise the duke, where you are going, to a most seasonable preparation: we are bound to the like. Our posts shall be swift and intelligent betwixt us. Farewell, dear sister; farewell, my Lord of Gloucester.

Enter Oswald.

How now! where's the king?

Osw. My Lord of Gloucester hath convey'd him hence:

Some five or six and thirty of his knights,
Hot questrius after him, met him at gate; 19
Who, with some other of the lord's dependants,
Are gone with him towards Dover, where they boast
To have well-armed friends.

Corn. Get horses for your mistress.

Glo. Farewell, sweet lord, and sister.

Corn. Edmund, farewell.

Exeunt Goneril, Edmund, and Oswald.

Go seek the traitor Gloucester,
Pinion him like a thief, bring him before us.

Exeunt other Servants.

Though well we may not pass upon his life
Without the form of justice, yet our power
Shall do a courtesy to our wrath, which men
May blame but not control. Who's there? The traitor?

Re-enter Servants, with Gloucester.

Reg. Ingratitude fox! 'tis he.

Corn. Bind fast his corky arms.

Glo. What mean your grace? Good my friends, consider
You are my guests: do me no foul play, friends.

Glo. Unmerciful lady as you are, I'm none.

Corn. To this chair bind him. Villain, thou shalt find—

Regan plucks his beard.

Glo. By the kind gods, 'tis most ignobly done
To pluck me by the beard.

Reg. So white, and such a traitor!

Glo. Naughti lady,
These hairs, which thou dost ravish from my chin,
Will quicken, and accuse thee: I am your host:
With robbers' hands my hospitable favours 42
You should not ruffle thus. What will you do?
Corn. Come, sir, what letters had you late from France?

Reg. Be simple-answer'd, for we know the truth.

Corn. And what confederacy have you with the traitors
Late footed in the kingdom?

Reg. To whose hands have you sent the lunatic king?

Speak.

Glo. I have a letter guessingly set down, 50
Which came from one that's of a neutral heart,
And not from one oppo'd.

Corn. Cunning.

Reg. And false.

Corn. Where hast thou sent the king?

Glo. To Dover.

Reg. Wherefore to Dover? Wast thou not charg'd at peril—

Corn. Wherefore to Dover? Let him answer that.

Glo. I am tied to the stake, and I must stand the course.

Reg. Wherefore to Dover?

Glo. Because I would not see thy cruel nails
Pluck out his poor old eyes; nor thy fierce sister
In his anointed flesh stick boarish fangs. 60
The sea, with such a storm as his bare head
In hell-black night endure? would have buoy'd up,
And snatch'd the stelled fires;
Yet, poor old heart, he help the heavens to min.
If wolves had at thy gate how'd that stern time,
Thou should'st have said 'Good porter, turn the key,
All cruels else subscribe': but I shall see
The winged vengeance overtake such children.

Corn. See't shalt thou never. Fellows, hold the chair.

Upon these eyes of thine I'll set my foot.

Glo. He that will think to live till he be old,
Give me some help! O cruel! O ye gods!

Reg. One side will mock another; the other too.

Corn. If you see vengeance,—

First Serv. Hold your hand, my lord.

I have serv'd you ever since I was a child,
But better service have I never done you
Than now to bid you hold.

Reg. How now, you dog?

First Serv. If you did wear a beard upon you chin
I'd shake it on this quarrel. What do you mean Corn. My villain!— They draw and fight
First Serv. Nay then, come on, and take the chance of anger.

Reg. Give me thy sword. A peasant stand up thus!

Takes a sword and runs at him behind

First Serv. O! I am slain. My lord, you have One eye left

To see some mischief on him. O!— Dies

Corn. Lest it see more, prevent it. Out, vile jelly!

Where is thy lustre now?

Glo. All dark and comfortless. Where's my son Edmund?

Edmund, enkindle all the sparks of nature
To quit this horrid act.

Reg. Out, treacherous villain
Thou call'st on him that hates thee; it was he
That made the overture of thy treasons to us,
Who is too good to pity thee.

Glo. O my follies! Then Edgar was abus'd
Kind gods, forgive me that, and prosper him!

Reg. Go thrust him out at gates, and let him smell
His way to Dover. Exit one with Gloucester

How is 't, my lord? How look you
Corn. I have receiv'd a hurt. Follow me, lady
Turn out that eyeless villain; throw this slave
Upon the dunghill. Regan, I blest space;
Untimely comes this hurt. Give me your arm.

Exit Cornwall, led by Regan

Second Serv. I'll never care what wickedness
I do

If this man come to good.

Third Serv. If she live long,
And in the end meet the old course of death,
Women will all turn monsters.

Second Serv. Let's follow the old earl, and go
To lead him where he would: his roguis

Allows itself to any thing.
KING LEAR.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Heath.

Enter EDGAR.

Edy. Yet better thus, and known to be contented; he now no more seeks than requisite, and flatter’d. To be worst, he lowest and most dejected thing of fortune, and to be least in fortune, lives not in fear: he lamentable change is from the best; he worst returns to laughter. Welcome, then, thou substantial air that I embrace: he wretch that thou hast blunted upon the worst was nothing to thy blasts. But who comes here?

Enter GLoucester, led by an Old Man.

Thy father, poorly led? World, world, O world! I say, thou strange mutations make us hate thee; life would not yield to age.

Old Man. O my good lord! have you been your tenant, and your father’s tenant, these fourscore years.

Glow. Away, get thee away; good friend, be gone: thy comforts can do me no good at all; thee may hurt.

Old Man. You cannot see your way.

Glow. I have no way, and therefore want no eyes; stumbled when I saw. Full oft ‘tis seen, 20 ur means secure us, and our mere defects love our commodities. Ah! dear son Edgar, the food of thy abused father’s wrath; glit but live to see thee in my touch, I say I had eyes again.

Old Man. How now! Who’s there?

Edy. Aside. O gods! Who is’t can say ‘I am at the worst’? am worse than e’er I was.

Old Man. ‘Tis poor mad Tom.

Edy. Aside. And worse I may be yet; the worst is not long as we can say ‘This is the worst.’

Old Man. Fellow, where goest?

Glow. Is it a beggar-man?

Old Man. Madman and beggar too.

Glow. He has some reason, else he could not beg.

the last night’s storm I such a fellow saw, which made me think a man a worm: my son ame then into my mind; and yet my mind has then scarce friends with him: I have heard more since, flies to wanton boys, are we to the gods; hey kill us for their sport.

Edy. Aside. How should this be? ad is the trade that must play fool to sorrow, 41 angering itself and others. Bless thee, master!

Glow. Is that the naked fellow?

Old Man. Ay, my lord.

Glow. Then, prithee, get thee gone. If, for my sake, Thou wilt c’ertake us, hence a mile or twain, I the way toward Dover, do it for ancient love; And bring some covering for this naked soul, Who I’ll entreat to lead me.

Old Man. Alack, sir! he is mad.

Glow. ‘Tis the times’ plague, when madmen lead the blind.

Do as I bid thee, or rather do thy pleasure; Above the rest, be gone.

Old Man. I’ll bring him the best ‘parel that I have, Come on’t what will.

Exit. 59

Edy. Poor Tom’s a-cold. Aside. I cannot dub it further.

Glow. Come hither, fellow.

Edy. Aside. And yet I must. Bless thy sweet eyes, they bleed.

Glow. Know’st thou the way to Dover?

Edy. Both stile and gate, horse-way and foot-path. Poor Tom hath been scared out of his good wits: bless thee, good man’s son, from the foul fiend! Five fiends have been in poor Tom at once; of lust, as Obidicut; Hobbidildance, prince of dunces; Mahu, of stealing; Modo, of murder; Flibbertigibbet, of mopping and mowing; who since possesses chambermaids and waiting-women. So, bless thee, master!

Glow. Here, take this purse, thou whom the heavens’ plagues Have humbled to all strokes: that I am wretched Makes thee the happier: heavens, deal so still! Let the superfluous and lust-dieted man, That slavesh your ordinance, that will not see Because he doth not feel, feel your power quickly;

So distribution should undo excess, And each man have enough. Dost thou know Dover?

Edy. Ay, master.

Glow. There is a cliff, whose high and bending head Looks fearfully in the confined deep; Bring me but to the very brim of it, And I’ll repair the misery thou dost bear With something rich about me; from that place I shall no leading need.

Edy. Give me thy arm:

Poor Tom shall lead thee.

Exit. 80

SCENE II.—Before the Duke of ALBANY’s Palace.

Enter GONERIL and EDMUND.

Gon. Welcome, my lord: I marvel our mild husband Not met us on the way.

Enter OSWALD.

Now, where’s your master?

Osw. Madam, within; but never man so chang’d. I told him of the army that was landed; He smil’d at it: I told him you were coming; His answer was ‘The worse’: of Gloucester’s treachery, And of the loyal service of his son, When I inform’d him, then he call’d me set, And told me I had turn’d the wrong side out: What most he should dislike seems pleasant to him;

What like, offensive.
Gon. To Edmund. Then shall you go no further. It is the cowish terror of his spirit That dares not undertake; he 'll not feel wrongs Which tie him to an answer. Our wishes on the way May prove effects. Back, Edmund, to my brother; Hasten his musters and conduct his powers: I must change arms at home, and give the distaff Into my husband's hands. This trusty servant Shall pass between us; ere long you are like to hear, If you dare venture in your own behalf, A mistress's command. Wear this; spare speech; Decline your head: this kiss, if it dart speak, Would stretch thy spirits up into the air. Conceive, and fare thee well.
Edw. Yours in the ranks of death.
Gon. My most dear Gloucester!
Exit Edmund.
O! the difference of man and man.
To thee a woman's services are due; My fool usurps my body.
Osw. Madam, here comes my lord.
Exit.
Enter Albany.
Gon. I have been worth the whistle.
Alb. O Goneril! You are not worth the dust which the rude wind Blows in your face. I fear your disposition: a That nature, which contends it origin, Cannot be border'd certain in itself; She that herself will sliver and disbranch From her material sap, perfuse must wither And come to deadly use.
Gon. No more; the text is foolish.
Alb. Wisdom and goodness to the vile seem vile; Filth on your but themselves. What have you done? Tigers, not daughters, what have you perform'd? A father, and a gracious aged man, Whose reverence the head-lugg'd bear would lick, Most barbarous, most degenerate! have you madded, Could my good brother suffer you to do it? A man, a prince, by him so benefited! If that the heavens do not their visible spirits Send quickly down to tame these vile offences, It will come, Humanity must perfuse prey on itself, Like monsters of the deep.
Gon. Milk-liver'd man! so That bear'st a cheek for blows, a head for wrongs; Who last not in thy brows an eye discerning Thine honour from thy suffering; that not know'st Fools do those villains pity who are punish'd Ere they have done their mischief. Where's thy drum? France spreads his banners in our noiseless land, With plumed helm thy slayer begins threats, Whiles thou, a moral fool, sitt'st still, and criest: 'Alack! why does he so?'
Alb. See thyself, devil!
Proper deformity seems not in the fiend  So horrid as in woman.
Gon. O vain fool!
Alb. Thou changed and self-cover'd thing, for shame, Be-monster not thy feature. Were't my fitness To let these hands obey my blood, They are apt enough to dislocate and tear Thy flesh and bones; howe'er thou art a fiend, A woman's shape cloth shield thee.
Gon. Marry, your manhood now—
Enter a Messenger.
Alb. What news?
Mess. O! my good lord, the Duke of Cornwall's dead;
Slain by his servant, going to put out The other eye of Gloucester.
Alb. Gloucester's eyes.
Mess. A servant that he bred, thrill'd with remorse, Oppos'd against the act, bending his sword To his great master; who, theretofor enrag'd, Flew on him, and amongst them fell'd him dead But not without that harmful stroke, which since Hath pluck'd him after.
Alb. This shows you are above You justicers, that these our nether crimes So speedily can venge! But, O poor Gloucester Lost he his other eye?
Mess. Both, both, my lord. This letter, madam, craves a speedy answer; 'Tis from your sister.
Gon. Aside. One way I like this well But being widow, and my Gloucester with her, May all the building in my fancy pluck Upon my hateful life: another way, The news is not so tart. I'll read, and answer.
Exit.
Alb. Where was his son when they did take his eyes?
Mess. Come with my lady hither.
Alb. He is not here.
Mess. No, my good lord; I met him back again.
Alb. Knows he the wickedness?
Mess. Ay, my good lord; 'twas he inform'd against him, And quit the house on purpose that their punishment Might have the freer course.
Alb. Gloucester, I live To thank thee for the love thou show'dst the king And to revenge thine eyes. Come hither, friend Tell me what more thou knowest.
Exit.
Scene III.—The French Camp near Dover.
Enter Kent and a Gentleman.
Kent. Why the King of France is so suddenly gone back know you the reason?
Gent. Something he left imperfect in the state which since his coming forth is thought of which imports to the kingdom so much fear and danger that his personal return was most required and necessary.
Kent. Who hath he left behind him general?
Gent. The Marshal of France, Monsieur la Faye Kent. Did your letters pierce the queen to any demonstration of grief?
KING LEAR.

SCENE III.—A Room in Gloucester's Castle.

Enter REGAN and OSWALD.

Reg. But are my brother's powers set forth?

Osw. Ay, madam.

Reg. Himself in person there?

Osw. Madam, with much ado:

Your sister is the better soldier.

Reg. Lord Edmund spake not with your lord at home?

Osw. No, madam.

Reg. What might import my sister's letter to him?

Osw. I know not, lady.

Reg. Faith, he is posted hence on serious matter.

It was great ignorance, Gloucester's eyes being out,
To let him live; where he arrives he moves
All hearts against us. Edmund, I think, is gone, In pity of his misery, to dispatch
His nighted life; moreover, to descry
The strength o' the enemy.

Osw. I must needs after him, madam, with my letter.

Reg. Our troops set forth to-morrow; stay with us,
The ways are dangerous.

Osw. I may not, madam;
My lady charg'd my duty in this business.

Reg. Why should she write to Edmund? Might not you Transport her purposes by word? Belike, Something—I know not what. I'll love thee much,
Let me unseal the letter.

SCENE IV.—The Same. A Tent.

Cor. Alack! 'tis he: why, he was met even now mad as the vex'd sea; singing aloud; ownd with rank fumiter and furrow-weeds,

With burdocks, hemlock, nettles, cuckoo-flowers,
Darnel, and all the idle weeds that grow
In our sustaining corn. A century send forth;
Search every acre in the high-ground field,
And bring him to our eye.

Exit an Officer.

What can man's wisdom
In the restoring his bereaved sense?
He that helps him take all my outward worth.

Doct. There is means, madam;
Our foster-nurse of nature is repose,
The which he lacks; that to provoke in him,
Are many simples operative, whose power
Will close the eye of anguish.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. News, madam;
The British powers are marching hitherward.

Cor. 'Tis known before; our preparation stands
In expectation of them. O dear father!
It is thy business that I go about;
Therefore great France
My mourning and important tears hath pitied.
No blush ambition doth our arms incite,
But love, dear love, and our aged father's right.
Soon may I hear and see him! Exeunt.
Osw. Madam, I had rather—
Reg. I know your lady does not love her husband;
I am sure of that: and at her late being here
She gave strange æolliades and most speaking looks
To noble Edmund. I know you are of her bosom.
Osw. I, madam!
Reg. I speak in understanding; you are, I
know't:
Therefore I do advise you, take this note:
My lord is dead; Edmund and I have talk'd, 30
And more convenient is he for my hand
Than for your lady's. You may gather more.
If you do find him, pray you give him this,
And when your mistress hears thus much from you,
I pray desire her call her wisdom to her:
So, fare you well.
If you do chance to hear of that blind traitor,
Preferment falls on him that cuts him off.
Osw. Would I could meet him, madam: I would show
What party I do follow.
Reg. Fare thee well. Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—The Country near Dover.
Enter Gloucester, and Edgar dressed like a peasant.

Glow. When shall we come to the top of that same hill.
Edg. You do climb up it now; look how we labour.
Glow. Methinks the ground is even.
Edg. Hark! do you hear the sea?
Glow. No, truly.
Edg. Why, then your other senses grow imperfect
By your eyes' anguish.
Glow. So may it be, indeed.
Methinks thy voice is alter'd, and thou speak'st
In better phrase and matter than thou didst.
Edg. You're much deceiv'd; in nothing am I chang'd
But in my garments.
Glow. Methinks you're better spoken.
Edg. Come on, sir; here's the place: stand still. How fearful
And dizzy 'tis to cast one's eyes so low!
The crows and choughs that wing the midday air
Show scarce so gross as beetles; half way down
Hangsone that gathers samphire, dreadful trade!
Methinks he seems no bigger than his head.
The fishermen that walk upon the beach
Appear like mice, and yond tall anchoring bark
Diminish'd to her cock, her cock a buoy Almost too small for sight. The murmuring surge,
That on the unnumber'd idle pebbles chafes,
Cannot be heard so high. 'T'll look no more,
Lest my brain turn, and the deficient sight
Topple down headlong.
Glow. Set me where you stand.
Edg. Give me your hand; you are now within a foot
Of the extreme verge: for all beneath the moon
Would I not leap upright.

Glow. Let go my hand.
Here, friend, 's another purse; in it a jewel
Well worth a poor man's taking: fairies and gods
Prosper it with thee! Go thou further off;
Bid me farewell, and let me hear thee going.
Edg. Now fare you well, good sir.
Glow. With all my heart.
Edg. Why I do trifle thus with his despair.
Is done to cure it.
Glow. O you mighty gods!
This world I do renounce, and in your sights
Shake patiently my great affliction off;
If I could bear it longer, and not fall
To quarrel with your great opposeless wills,
My snuff and loathed part of nature should Burn itself out. If Edgar live, O, bless him!
Now, fellow, fare thee well.
Edg. Gone, sir: farewell.
He falls forward.

And yet I know not how conceit may rob
The treasury of life when life itself
Yields to the theft; had he been where I thought
By this had thought been past. Alive or dead.
Ho, you sir! friend! Hear you, sir! speak?
Thus might he pass indeed; yet he revives.
What are you, sir?
Glow. Away and let me die.
Edg. Hadst thou been aught but gossamere feathers, air,
So many fathom down precipitating,
Thou 'd'st shiver'd like an egg; but thou do breathe,
Hast heavy substance, bleed'st not, speak'st at sound.
Ten masts at each make not the altitude
Which thou hast perpendicularly fell:
Thy life's a miracle. Speak yet again.
Glow. But have I fallen or no?
Edg. From the dread summit of this chalk bourn.
Look up a-height; the shrill-gorg'd lark so far
Cannot be seen or heard: do but look up.
Glow. Alack! I have no eyes.
Is wretchedness depri'ved that benefit
To end itself by death? 'Twas yet some comfort
When misery could beguile the tyrant's rage,
And frustrate his proud will.
Edg. Give me your arm
Up: so; how is 't? Feel you your legs? Ye stand.
Glow. Too well, too well.
Edg. This is above all strangelers.
Upon the crown o' the cliff what thing was the
Which parted from you?
Glow. A poor unfortunate beggar.
Edg. As I stood here below methought her eyes
Were two full moons; he had a thousand nose
Horns whelk'd and wav'd like the enridged sea
It was some fiend; therefore, thou happy fathe'r Think that the clearest gods, who make the honours
Of men's impossibilities, have preserv'd thee.
Glow. I do remember now; henceforth I'll be Affliction till it do cry out itself 'Enough, enough,' and die. That thing ye speak of
I took it for a man: often 'twould say
'The fiend, the fiend': he led me to that place,
Enter LEAR, fantastically dressed with wild flowers.

Edg. Bear free and patient thoughts. But who comes here?

KING. said here. 'tis I a mark yet. I Give pah. the I No. for we. I Give Thou change no. well. No. hell. and, do are so. die to 143. for 120. they 120. into 120. I. to 180. 'tis I a 180. mark yet. I Give pah. the I No. see fie, we. A Give. Thou change no. well. No. hell. and, do are so. die to 143. for 120. They are 120. die to 143. for 120.

Edg. Sweet marjoram.

Edg. O thou side-piercing sight!

LEAR. Nature’s above art in that respect ere your press-money. That fellow press-money bow like a crow-keeper: draw me a clothier’s d. Look, look! a mouse. Peace, peace! s piece of toasted cheese will do’t. There’s a gauntlet; I’ll prove it on a giant. Bring the brown bills. O! well flown, bird; t’ the ut, t’ the clout; hewgh! Give the word.

Edg. Sweet marjoram.

Edg. Pass.

How. I know that voice.

LEAR. Ha! Gentleman, with a white beard! They aterd me like a dog, and told me I had white rs in my beard ere the black ones were there. say ‘ay’ and ‘no’ to every thing I said! y’ and ‘no’ too was no good divinity. When I rain came to wet me once and the wind to ke me catter, when the thunder would not see at my bidding, there I found ‘em, there I felt ‘em out. Go to, they are not men o’ their rds: they told me I was every thing; ’tis a I am not agree-proof.

How. The trick of that voice I do well remember: it not the king?

LEAR. Ay, every inch a king: when I do stare, see how the subject quakes. aterd that man’s life. What was thy cause? uterly?

Edg. shall not die: die for adultery! No: wren goes to ‘t, and the small gilded fly lecher in my sight.

Copulation thrive; for Gloucester’s bastard son is kinder to his father than my daughters tween the lawful sheets.

’t, luxury, pell-mell! for I lack soldiers, hold yond simpering dame, those face between her forks presageth snow; at minces virtue, and does shake the head hear of pleasure’s name;

e fitchew nor the soiled horse goes to ‘t th a more riotus appetite.

wn from the waist they are Centaurs, ough women all above: t to the girdle do the gods inherit, meath is all the fiend’s:

e’se hell, there’s darkness, there’s the sulphurous pit, ting, scalding, stench, consumption; fie, fie, pah, pah! Give me an ounce o’ civet, od apothecary, to sweeten my imagination: e’s money for thee.

Bow. O! let me kiss that hand.

LEAR. Let me wipe it first; it smells of rality.

Bow. O ruin’d piece of nature! This great world all so wear out to nought. Dost thou know me!

LEAR. I remember thine eyes well enough. Dost thou squiny at me? No, do thy worst, blind Cupid; I’ll not love. Read thou this challenge; mark but the penning of it.

GLO. Were all thy letters suns, I could not see.

Edg. Aside. I would not take this from report; it is,

And my heart breaks at it.

LEAR. Read.

GLO. What! with the case of eyes?

LEAR. O, ho! are you there with me? No eyes in your head, nor no money in your purse?

Your eyes are in a heavy case, your purse in a light: yet you see how this world goes.

GLO. I see it feelingly.

LEAR. What! art mad? A man may see how this world goes with no eyes. Look with thine ears; see how yond justice rails upon yond simple thief. Hark, in thine ear: change places; and, handy-dandy, which is the justice, which is the thief? Thou hast seen a farmer’s dog bark at a beggar?

GLO. Ay, sir.

LEAR. And the creature run from the curt? There thou might’st behold the great image of authority; a dog’s obeyed in office.

Thou rascal beadle, hold thy bloody hand! Why dost thou lash that whore? Strip thine own back;

Thou hotly lusts to use her in that kind For which thou whippst her. The usurer hangs the cozenor.

Through tatter’d clothes small vices do appear; Bobes and fur’d gowns hide all. Plate sin with gold,

And the strong lance of justice hurtless breaks; Arm it in rags, a pigmy’s straw does piece it. None does offend, none, I say, none; I’ll able ’em:

Take that of me, my friend, who have the power To seal the accuser’s lips. Get thee glass eyes; And, like a scruffy politician, seem To see the things thou dost not. Now, now, now, now;

Pull off my boots; harder, harder; so.

Edg. Aside. O! matter and impertinence mix’d;

Reason in madness.

LEAR. If thou wilt weep my fortunes, take my eyes; I know thee well enough; thy name is Gloucester;

Thou must be patient; we came crying hither: Thou know’st the first time that we smell the air We want and cry. I will preach to thee: mark Glou. Alack, alack the day!

LEAR. When we are born, we cry that we are come To this great stage of fools. This a good block!

It were a delicate stratagem to shoe A troop of horse with felt; I’ll put ‘t in proof, And when I have stol’n upon these sons-in-law, Then, kill, kill, kill, kill, kill, kill, kill!

Enter a Gentleman, with Attendants.

GENT. O! here he is; lay hand upon him. Sir,

Your most dear daughter—
LEAR. No rescue? What! a prisoner? I am even
The natural fool of fortune. Use me well;
You shall have ransom. Let me have surgeons;
I am cut to the brains.
Gent. You shall have any thing.
LEAR. No seconds? all myself?
Why this would make a man a man of salt, to use his eyes for garden water-pots,
Ay, and laying autumn's dust.
Gent. Good sir,—
LEAR. I will die bravely, like a bridegroom.
What!
I will be jovial: come, come; I am a king,
My masters, know you that?
Gent. You are a royal one, and we obey you.
LEAR. Then there's life in 't. Nay, an you get it, you shall get it by running. Sa, sa, sa, sa.
Exit; Attendants follow.
Gent. A sight most pitiful in the meanest wretch,
Past speaking of a king! Thou hast one daughter,
Who redeems nature from the general curse
Which twain have brought her to.
Edg. Hail, gentle sir!
Gent. Sir, speed you: what's your will?
Edg. Do you hear aught, sir, of a battle toward?
Gent. Most sure and vulgar; every one hears that,
Which can distinguish sound.
Edg. But, by your favour,
How near's the other army?
Gent. Near, and on speedy foot; the main desery
Stands on the hourly thought.
Edg. I thank you, sir: that's all.
Gent. Though that the queen on special cause is here,
Her army is mov'd on.
Edg. I thank you, sir. Exit Gentleman.
Glow. You ever-gentle gods, take my breath from me:
Let not my worser spirit tempt me again
To die before you please!
Edg. Well pray you, father.
Glow. Now, good sir, what are you?
Edg. A most poor man, made tame to fortune's blows;
Who, by the art of known and feeling sorrows,
Am pregnant to good pity. Give me your hand,
I'll lead you to some bidding.
Glow. Heartly thanks:
The bounty and the benison of heaven
To boot, and boot!

Enter OSWALD.

Osw. A proclaim'd prize! Most happy!
That eyeless head of thine was first fram'd flesh
To raise my fortunes. Thou old unhappy traitor,
Briefly thyself remember: the sword is out
That must destroy thee.
Glow. Now let thy friendly hand
Put strength enough to 't. Edgaret interposes.
Osw. Wherefore, bold peasant,
Dar'st thou support a publish'd traitor? Hence;
Lest that the infection of his fortune take
Like hold on thee. Let go his arm.

Edg. Chill not let go, zur, without wuth er casion.
Osw. Let go, slave, or thou diest.
Edg. Good gentle man, go your gait, and poor volk pass.
An chud ha' bin swaggered on
Of my life, 'twould not ha' bin so long as 'tis in a vortnicht.
Nay, come not near th' old man keep out, che vor ye, or ise try wheter you costard or my ballow be the harder. Chill be plain with you.
Osw. Out, dunghill!
Edg. Chill pick your teeth, zur. Come; I matter vor your foins.

They fight, and EDGAR knocks him down.
Osw. Slave, thou hast slain me. Villain, take my purse.
If ever thou wilt thrive, bury my body;
And give the letters which thou find'st abov me
To Edmund Earl of Gloucester; seek him out.
Upon the English party: O! untimely death.

Did

Edg. I know thee well: a serviceable villain
As dutious to the vices of thy mistress
As badness would desire.
Glow. What! is he dead
Edg. Sit you down, father; rest you.
Let's see these pockets: the letters that I speaks of May be my friends. He's dead; I am on sorry
He had no other death's-man. Let us see:
Leave, gentle wax; and, manners, blame not:
To know our enemies' minds, we'd rip the hearts;
Their papers is more lawful.

Let our reciprocal vows be remembered. If have many opportunities to cut him off; if you want not, time and place will be fruitful offer.
There is nothing done if he return the conqueror, then am I the prisoner, and his bed my gait; fro the loathed warmth whereof deliver me, and suppl the place for your labour.

Your—wife, so I would say—
Affectionate servant,

Goneril.

O undistinguish'd space of woman's will!
A plot upon her virtuous husband's life,
And the exchange my brother! Here, in this sands,
Thee I'll rake up, the post unsanctified
Of murderous lechers; and in the mature time,
With this ungracious paper strike the sight
Of the death-practis'd duke. For him 'twas well
That of thy death and business I can tell.

Glow. The king is mad: how stiff is my vsense,
That I stand up, and have ingenious feeling
Of my huge sorrows! Better I were distract
So should my thoughts be sever'd from my griefs,
And woes by wrong imaginations lose
The knowledge of themselves. Drum afur Edg.

Give me your hand.

Far off, methinks, I hear the beaten drum.
Come, father, I'll bestow you with a friend.

Exe.
SCENE VII.—A Tent in the French Camp.

After CORDELIA, KENT, Doctor, and Gentleman.

Cor. O thou good Kent! how shall I live and work match thy goodness? My life will be too short, d every measure fail me.

Kent. To be acknowledged, madam, is o'er-paid.

Cor. Be better suited: these weeds are memories of those worser hours:
rithee, put them off.

Kent. Pardon me, dear madam; to be known shortens my made intent:
I soon make it that you know me not
I time and I think meet.

Cor. Then be't so, my good lord. To the Doctor. How does the king?

Doc. Madam, sleeps still.

Cor. O you kind gods, re this great breach in his abused nature! a untun'd and jarring senses, O! wind up this child-changed father.

Doc. So please your majesty at we may wake the king! he hath slept long. Be govern'd by your knowledge, and proceed the sway of your own will. Is he array'd? 20

Enter LEAR in a chair carried by Servants.

Doc. Ay, madam; in the heaviness of sleep put fresh garments on him.

Kent. Be by, good madam, when we do awake him;
quar not of his temperance.

Cor. Very well. Music. Doc. Please you, draw near. Louder the music there!

Cor. O my dear father! Restoration hang medicature on my lips, and let this kiss air those violent harms that my two sisters ve in thy reverence made!

Kent. Kind and dear princess!

Cor. Had you not been their father, these white flakes 30 I challenge pity of them. Was this a face- be oppos'd against the warring winds?
stand against the deep dread-bolted thunder?
the most terrible and nimble stroke quick cross lightning? to watch, poor perdur th this thin helm? Mine enemy's dog, ough he had bit me, should have stood that night ainst my fire. And wast thou fain, poor father, hovel thee with swine and rogues forlorn, shot and musty straw? Alack, alack! 40 s wonder that thy life and wits at once d not concluded all. He wakes; speak to him.

Doc. Madam, do you; 'tis fittest .

Cor. How does my royal lord? How fares your majesty?

Lear. You do me wrong to take me out o' the grave;
on art a soul in bliss; but I am bound

Upon a wheel of fire, that mine own tears
Do scald like molten lead.

Cor. Sir, do you know me?

Lear. You are a spirit, I know; when did you die?

Cor. Still, still, far wide.

Doc. He's scarce awake; let him alone awhile.

Lear. Where have I been? Where am I? Fair daylight?

I am mightily abus'd. I should 'en die with pity
To see another thus. I know not what to say, I will not swear these are my hands: let's see; I feel this pin prick. Would I were assur'd Of my condition!

Cor. O! look upon me, sir, And hold your hands in benediction o'er me.

No, sir, you must not kneel.

Lear. Pray, do not mock me: I am a very foolish fond old man,
Fourscore and upward, not an hour more nor less;
And, to deal plainly, I fear I am not in my perfect mind. Methinks I should know you and know this man; Yet I am doubtful: for I am mainly ignorant What place this is, and all the skill I have Remembered not these garments; nor I know not Where I did lodge last night. Do not laugh at me;

For, as I am a man, I think this lady
To be my child Cordelia.

Cor. And so I am, I am. 70

Lear. Be your tears wet! Yes, faith. I pray, weep not:
If you have poison for me, I will drink it. I know you do not love me; for your sisters Have, as I do remember, done me wrong:

You have some cause, they have not.

Cor. No cause, no cause.

Lear. Am I in France?

Kent. In your own kingdom, sir.

Lear. Do not abuse me.

Doc. Be comforted, good madam; the great rage,
You see, is kill'd in him; and yet it is danger To make him even o'er the time he has lost. 80 Desire him to go in; trouble him no more Till further settling.

Cor. Will 't please your highness walk?

Lear. You must bear with me.

Pray you now, forget and forgive: I am old and foolish.

Execute LEAR, CORDELIA, Doctor, and Attendants.

Kent. Holds it true, sir, that the Duke of Cornwall was so slain?

Kent. Most certain, sir.

Kent. Who is conductor of his people?

Kent. As 'tis said, the bastard son of Gloucester.

Kent. They say Edgar, his banished son, is with the Earl of Kent in Germany.

Kent. Report is changeable. 'Tis time to look about; the powers of the kingdom approach apace.

Kent. The arbitrement is like to be bloody. Fare you well, sir.

Exit. Kent. My point and period will be thoroughly wrought,
Or well or ill, as this day's battle's fought. Exit.
ACT V.

SCENE I.—The British Camp near Dover.

Enter, with drum and colours, EDMUND, REGAN, Officers, Soldiers, and Others.

Edm. Know of the duke if his last purpose hold,
Or whether since he is advis’d by aught
To change the course; he’s full of alteration
And self-reproving; bring his constant pleasure.
    To an Officer, who goes out.

Reg. Our sister’s man is certainly miscarried.
Edm. ’Tis to be doubted, madam.

Reg. Now, sweet lord,
You know the goodness I intend upon you:
Tell me, but truly, but then speak the truth,
Do you not love my sister?

Edm. In honour’d love.
Reg. But have you never found my brother’s way
To the forfended place?
Edm. That thought abuses you.
Reg. I am doubtful that you have been conjunct
And bosom’d with her, as far as we call hers.
Edm. No, by mine honour, madam.
Reg. I never shall endure her: dear my lord,
Be not familiar with her.

Edm. Fear me not.
She and the duke her husband!

Enter, with drum and colours, ALBANY, GONERIL, and Soldiers.

Gon. Aside. I had rather lose the battle than that sister
Should loosen him and me.

Alb. Our very loving sister, well be-met.
Sir, this I heard; the king is come to his daughter,
With others whom the rigour of our state
For’d to cry out. Where I could not be honest,
I never yet was valiant: for this business,
It toucheth us, as France invades our land,
Not bolds the king, with others, whom, I fear,
Most just and heavy causes make oppose.
    Edm. Sir, you speak nobly.
Reg. Why is this reason’d?
Gon. Combine together ’gainst the enemy;
For these domestic and particular broils
Are not the question here.

Alb. Let’s then determine
With the ancient of war on our proceeding.
    Edm. I shall attend you presently at your tent.
Reg. Sister, you’ll go with us?
    Edm. No.
Reg. ’Tis most convenient; pray you, go with us.
Gon. Aside. O, ho! I know the riddle. I will go.

Enter EDGAR, disguised.

Edg. If e’er your grace had speech with man so poor,
Hear me one word.

Alb. I’ll overtake you. Speak.

Exeunt EDMUND, REGAN, GONERIL, Officers, Soldiers, and Attendants.

Edg. Before you fight the battle, ope the letter.
If you have victory, let the trumpet sound
For him that brought it: wretched though it seem,
I can produce a champion that will prove
What is avouched there. If you miscarry,
Your business of the world hath so an end,
And machination ceases. Fortune love you!
    Alb. Stay till I have read the letter.

Edg. I was forbid,
When time shall serve, let but the herald cry,
And I’ll appear again.
Alb. Why, fare thee well: I will o’erlook the paper.
Exeunt.

Re-enter EDMUND.

Edm. The enemy’s in view; draw up your powers.
Here is the goss of their true strength and fore
By diligent discovery; but your haste
Is now urg’d on you.

Alb. We will give the time. Ex

Edm. To both these sisters have I sworn no love;
Each jealous of the other, as the sting
Are of the adder. Which of them shall take?
Both? one? or neither? Neither can be enjoy
If both remain alive: to take the widow
Exasperates, makes mad her sister Goneril;
And hardily shall I carry out my side,
Her husband being alive. Now then, we’ll use
His countenance for the battle; which being done,
Let her who would be rid of him devise
His speedy taking off. As for the mercy
Which he intends to Lear and to Cordelia,
The battle done, and they within our power,
Shall never see his pardon; for my state
Stands on me to defend, not to debates.

SCENE II.—A Field between the two Camps.

Alarum within. Enter, with drum and colours LEAR, CORDELIA, and their Forces, and Exeunt.

Enter EDGAR and GLOUCESTER.

Edg. Here, father, take the shadow of the tree
For your good host; pray that the right may thrive.
If ever I return to you again,
I’ll bring you comfort.
Glo. Grace go with you, sir! Exit EDGAR.

Alarum; afterwards a retreat. Re-enter EDGAR.

Edg. Away, old man! give me thy hand; away,
King Lear hath lost, he and his daughter too!
Give me thy hand; come on.
Glo. No further, sir; a man may rot ere here.

Edg. What! in all thoughts again? Men must endure
Their going hence, even as their coming hither!
Ripeness is all. Come on.
Glo. And that’s true too. Exeunt.
Scene III.—The British Camp near Dover.

Edm. Some officers take them away: good guard,
That their greater pleasures first be known
That are to censure them.

Cor. We are not the first
To pluck the common bosome on his side,
And turn our impress’d lances in our eyes
Which do command them. With him I sent Giving me not all the same; and they are ready
To-morrow, or at further space, to appear
Where you shall hold your session. At this time
We sweat and bleed; the friend hath lost his friend,
And the best quarrels, in the heat, are curs’d
They that feel their sharpness;
The question of Cordelia and her father
Requires a fitter place.

Reg. That’s as we list to grace him;
Methinks our pleasure might have been demanded,
Ere you had spoke so far. He led our powers,
Bore the commission of my place and person;
The which immediacy may well stand up,
And call itself your brother.

Gon. Not so hot;
In his own grace he doth exalt himself
More than in your addition.

Reg. In my rights,
By me invested, he compeers the best.

Alb. That were the most, if he should husband
You.

Gon. Holla, holla! That eye that told you so look’d but a-squint
Reg. Lady, I am not well; else I should answer
From a full-flowing stomach. General,
Take thou my soldiers, prisoners, patrimony;
Dispose of them, of me; the walls are thine;
Witness the world, that I create thee here
My lord and master.

Gon. Mean you to enjoy him?

Alb. The let-alone lies not in your good will.

Edm. Nor in thine, lord.

Alb. Half-blooded fellow, yes.

Reg. To EDMUND. Let the drum strike, and Prove my title thine.

Alb. Stay yet; hear reason. Edmund, I
Arrest thee
On capital treason; and, in thy arrest,
This gilded serpent. Pointing to GONERIL.

For your claim, fair sister,
I bar it in the interest of my wife;
’Tis she is sub-contracted to this lord,
And I, her husband, contradict your bans.
If you will marry, make your love to me,
My lady is bespoke.

Gon. An interlude!

Alb. Thou art arm’d, Gloucester; let the trumpet sound:
If none appear to prove upon thy person
Thy heinous, manifest, and many treasons,
There is my pledge; Throws down a glove.

Ere I taste bread, thou art in nothing less
Than I have here proclaim’d thee.

Reg. Sick! O, sick!

Gon. Aside. If not, I’ll ne’er trust medicine.

Edm. There’s my exchange:

Throws down a glove.

What in the world he is

Whose age has charms in it, whose title more,
And turn our impress’d lances in our eyes
Which do command them. With him I sent
The queen;
My reason all the same; and they are ready

Gon. Aside. If not, I’ll ne’er trust medicine.

Edm. There’s my exchange:

Throws down a glove.

What in the world he is

Whose age has charms in it, whose title more,
Enter a Herald.

Come hither, herald.—Let the trumpet sound,—
And read out this.

Off. Sound, trumpet! A trumpet sounds.

Her. If any man of quality or degree within the lists of the army will maintain upon Edmund, supposed Earl of Gloucester, that he is a manifold traitor, let him appear by the third sound of the trumpet.
He is bold in his defence.

Edm. Sound! First trumpet.

Her. Again! Second trumpet.

Edm. Again! Third trumpet.

Trumpet answers within.

Enter EDGAR, armed, with a trumpet before him.

Alb. Ask him his purposes, why he appears
Upon this call o’ the trumpet.

Her. What are you?
Your name? your quality? and why you answer
This present summons?

Edg. Know, my name is lost: 19
By treason’s tooth bare-gnawn and canker-bit:
Yet am I noble as the adversary
I come to cope.

Alb. Which is that adversary?

Edg. What’s he that speaks for Edmund Earl of Gloucester?

Edm. Himself: what say’st thou to him?

Edg. Draw thy sword, That, if my speech offend a noble heart,
Thy arm may do thee justice; here is mine: Behold, it is the privilege of mine honours,
My oath, and my profession: I protest, 139
Maugre thy strength, youth, place, and eminence,
Despite thy victor sword and fire-new fortune,
Thy valour and thy heart, thou art a traitor,
False to thy gods, thy brother, and thy father,
Conspirant’ gainst this high illustrious prince,
And, from the extremest upward of thy head
To the descent and dust below thy foot,
A most toad-spotted traitor. Say thou ‘No,’ This sword, this arm, and my best spirits are bent
To prove upon thy heart, wherefo’ I speak, 140
Thou liest.

Edm. In wisdom I should ask thy name;
But since thy outside looks so fair and war-like,
And that thy tongue some say of breeding breathes,
What safe and nicely I might well delay
By rule of knighthood, I disdain and spurn;
Back do I toss these treasons to thy head,
With the hell-hated lie o’erwhelm thy heart,
Which, for thy yet glance by and scarcely bruise
This sword of mine shall give them instant way;
Where they shall rest for ever. Trumpets, speak.

Alarums. They fight. EDMUND falls.

Alb. Save him! save him!

Gon. This is practice, Gloucester: 153
By the law of arms thou wast not bound to answer
An unknown opposite; thou art not vanquish’d;
But cozen’d and beguil’d.

Alb. Shut your mouth, dame; or with this paper shall I stop it. Hold, sir; Thou worse than any name, read thine own evil.
No tearing, lady; I perceive you know it.

Gives the letter to EDMUND

Gon. Say, if I do, the laws are mine, not thine.
Who can arraign me for’t? 160

Alb. Most monstrous! O
Know’st thou this paper?

Edm. Ask me not what I know. 161

Alb. Go after her: she’s desperate; govern her well.

Exit an Officer

Edm. What you have charg’d me with, that have I done,
And more, much, more; the time will bring it out.
’Tis past, and so am I. But what art thou
That hast this fortune on me? If thou’rt noble
I do forgive thee.

Edg. Let’s exchange charity.
I am no less in blood than thou art, Edmund;
If more, the more thou hast wrong’d me.
My name is Edgar, and thy father’s son.
The gods are just, and of our pleasant vices
Make instruments to plague us: 170
The dark and vicious place where thee he got Cost him his eyes.

Edm. Thou hast spoken right, ‘tis true.
The wheel is come full circle; I am here.

Alb. Methought thy very gait did prophesy
A royal nobleness: I must embrace thee:
Let sorrow split my heart, if ever I
Did hate thee or thy father.

Edg. Worthy prince, I know’t.

Alb. Where have you hid yourself?
How have you known the miseries of your father?

Edg. By nursing them, my lord. List a brief tale;
And when ‘tis told, O! that my heart would burst,
The bloody proclamation to escape
That follow’d me so near,—O! our lives’ sweetness,
That we the pain of death would hourly die
Rather than die at once!—taught me to shift
Into a madman’s rags, to assume a semblance
That very dogs disdain’d: and in this habit
Mot I my father with his bleeding rings,
Their precious stones new lost; became his guide,

Led him, begg’d for him, sav’d him from despair;
Never, O fault! reveal’d myself unto him,
Until some half-hour past, when I was arm’d;
Not sure, though hoping, of this good success,
I ask’d his blessing, and from first to last
Told him my pilgrimage: but his flaw’d heart,
Alack! too weak the conflict to support;
Twixt two extremes of passion, joy and grief,
 Burst smilingly.

Edm. This speech of yours hath mov’d me,
And shall per chance do good; but speak you on;
You look as you had something more to say.

Alb. If there be more, more woeful, hold it in;
For I am almost ready to dissolve,
Hearing of this.
Edg. This would have seem'd a period such as love not sorrow; but another, amply too much, would make much more,
d top extremity,
ailst I was big in clamour came there a man,
no, having seen me in my worst estate, and my abhor'd society; but then, finding
'twas that so endur'd, with his strong arms fasten'd on my neck, and bellow'd out 213 he'd burst heaven; threw him on my father;
'd the most piteous tale of Lear and him at ear ever receiv'd; which in recounting
's grief grew puissant, and the strings of life gan to crack: twice then the trumpets sounded,
d there I left him tranc'd.

Alb. But who was this?

Edg. Kent, sir, the banish'd Kent; who in disguise
hew his enemy king, and did him service proper for a slave.

Enter a Gentleman, with a bloody knife.

Kent. Help, help! O, help!

Edg. What kind of help?

Alb. Speak, man.

Edg. What means that bloody knife?

Kent. 'Tis hot, it smokes; came even from the heart of—O! she's dead.

Edg. Who dead? speak, man.

Kent. Your lady, sir, your lady: and her sister
her is poison'd; she confesses it.

Lear. I was contracted to them both: all three w marry in an instant.

Edg. Here comes Kent.

Alb. Produce the bodies, be they alive or dead:
is judgment of the heavens, that makes us tremble,
aches us not with pity.

Exit Gentleman.

Enter Kent.

O! is this he?
time will not allow the compliment sich very manners urges.

Kent. I am come bid my king and master aye good night;
he not here?

Alb. Great thing of us forgot!

Edg. Edmund, where's the king? and where's Cordelia?
'est thou this object, Kent?

The bodies of Goneril and Regan are brought in.

Kent. Alack! why thus?

Lear. Yet Edmund was belov'd:
e one the other poison'd for my sake, 240
d after slew herself.

Alb. Even so. Cover their faces.

Lear. I pant for life: some good I mean to do spite of mine own nature. Quickly send, brief in it, to the castle; for my writ on the life of Lear and on Cordelia.
send, in time.

Alb. Run, run! O, run!

Edg. To who, my lord? Who has the office?

Lear. You are welcome hither.

Kent. No, nor man else; all 's cheerless, dark, and deadly:

Your eldest daughters have fordone themselves,
And desperately are dead.

Edg. Ay, so I think.

Alb. He knows not what he says, and vain is it
That we present us to him.

Edg. Very bootless.
Enter an Officer.

Off. Edmund is dead, my lord.

Alb. That's but a trifle here.

You lords and noble friends, know our intent; What comfort to this great decay may come Shall be applied: for us, we will resign, During the life of this old majesty, To him our absolute power: To Edgar and Kent. You, to your rights, With boot and such addition as your honours Have more than merited. All friends shall taste The wages of their virtue, and all foes The cup of their deserving. O! see, see!

Lear. And my poor fool is hang'd! No, no, no life! Why should a dog, a horse, a rat, have life, And thou no breath at all? Thou 'tis come no more.

Never, never, never, never, never! Pray you, undo this button: thank you, sir. Do you see this? Look on her, look, her lips, Look there, look there!

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Venice. A Street.

Enter RODERIGO and IAGO.

Rod. Tush! never tell me; it take me much unkindly at thou, Iago, who hast had my purse if the strings were thine, should'st know of this.

Iago. 'Sblood, but you will not hear me: ever I did dream of such a matter, nor me.

Rod. Thou told'st me thou didst hold him in thy hate.

Iago. Despise me if I do not. Three great ones of the city, a personal suit to make me his lieutenant, fit-capp'd to him; and, by the faith of man, know my price, I am worth no worse a place; at he, as loving his own pride and purposes, vades them, with a bomast circumstance errily stuff'd with epithets of war; nd, in conclusion, onsuits my mediators; for, 'Certes,' says he, 'have already chose my officer.' nd what was he? orsooth, a great arithmetician, ne Michael Cassio, a Florentine, fellow almost dam'd in a fair wife; hat never set a squadron in the field, or the division of a battle knows fore a spinster; unless the bookish theor, therein the toged consuls can propone is masterly as he: mere prattle, without practice, all his soldieryship. But he, sir, had the election; nd I, of whom his eyes had seen the proof at Rhodes, at Cyprus, and on other grounds Christian and heathen, must be be-lee'd and calm'd. By debtor and creditor, this counter-caster; He, in good time, must his lieutenant be, And I, God bless the mark! his Moorship's ancient.

Iago. By heaven, I rather would have been his hangman.

Iago. But there's no remedy: 'tis the curse of service, Preferment goes by letter and affection, And not by old gradation, where each second Stood heir to the first. Now, sir, be judge yourself, Whether I in any just term am affin'd To love the Moor.

Rod. I would not follow him then. I follow him to serve my turn upon him; We cannot all be masters, nor all masters Cannot be truly follow'd. You shall mark Many a duteous and knee-crooking knave, That, doting on his own obsequious bondage, Wears out his time, much like his master's ass, For nought but provender, and when he's old, cashier'd; Whip me such honest knaves. Others there are Who, trimm'd in forms and visages of duty, Keep yet their hearts attending on themselves, And, throwing but shows of service on their lords, Do well thrive by them, and when they have lin'd their coats Do themselves homage: these fellows have some soul; And such a one do I profess myself. For, sir, It is as sure as you are Roderigo,

Were I the Moor, I would not be Iago:

859
In following him, I follow but myself; Heaven is my judge, not I for love and duty, But seeming so, for my peculiar end: For when my outward action doth demonstrate The native act and figure of my heart. In compliment extern, 'tis not long after But I will wear my heart upon my sleeve For days to peck at: I am not what I am.

Rod. What a full fortune does the thick-lips owe, If he can carry 't thus!

Iago. Call up her father; Rouse him, make after him, poison his delight, Proclaim him in the streets, incense his kinsmen, And, though he in a fertile climate dwell, Plague him with flies; though that his joy be joy, Yet throw such chances of vexation on 't As it may lose some colour. Rod. Here is her father's house; I'll call aloud. Iago. Do; with like timorous accent and dire yell As when, by night and negligence, the fire Is spied in populous cities.

Look to your house, your daughter, and your bags! Thieves! thieves!

Enter Brabantio, above, at a window.

Br. What is the reason of this terrible summons?

What is the matter there?

Rod. Signior is all your family within?

Iago. Are your doors lock'd?

Br. Why! wherefore ask you this?

Iago. 'Zounds! sir, you're robb'd; for shame, put on your gown; Your heart is burst, you have lost half your soul; Even now, now, very now, an old black ram Is tampering your white eye. Arise, arise! Awake the snorting citizens with the bell, Or else the devil will make a grand sire of you. Arise, I say.

Br. What! have you lost your wits?

Rod. Most reverend signior, do you know my voice?

Br. Not I; what are you?

Rod. My name is Roderigo.

Br. The worser welcome: I have charg'd thee not to haunt about my doors: In honest plainness thou hast heard me say My daughter is not for thee; and now, in madness, Being full of supper and distempering draughts, Upon malicious knavery dost thou come To start my quiet.

Rod. Sir, sir, sir! But thou must needs be sure My spirit and my place have in them power To make this bitter to thee.

Rod. Patience, good sir.

Br. What tell'st thou me of robbing? this is Venice; My house is not a grange.

Rod. Most grave Brabantio, In simple and pure soul I come to you.

Iago. 'Zounds! sir; you are one of those that will not serve God if the devil bid you. Because we come to do you service and you think we are ruffians, you 'll have your daughter covered with a Barbary horse; you 'll have your nephews neigh to you; you 'll have coursers for cousins and gennets for Germans. Bra. What profane wretch art thou?

Iago. I am one, sir, that comes to tell you your daughter and the Moor are now making the beast with two backs.

Br. Thou art a villain.

Iago. This thou shalt answer; I know thee, Roderigo.

Rod. Sir, I will answer any thing. But I beseech you, If 't be your pleasure and most wise consent, As partly I find it, that your fair daughter, At this odd-even and dull watch o' the night, Transported with no worse nor better guard But with a knife of common hire, a gondolier, To the gross claps of a lascivious Moor,— If this be known to you, and your allowance, We then have done you bold and saucy wrongs: But if you know not this, my manners tell me We have your wrong rebuke. Do not believe That, from the sense of all civility, I thus would play and trifle with your reverence: Your daughter, if you have not given her leave, I say again, hath made a gross revolt; Tying her duty, beauty, wit, and fortunes In an extravagant and wheeling stranger Of here and every where. Straight satisfy yourself: If she be in her chamber or your house, Let loose on me the justice of the state For thus deluding you.

Br. Strike on the tinder, ho! Give me a taper! call up all my people! This accident is not unlike my dream; Belief of it oppresses me already. Light, I say! light! Exit from above.

Iago. Farewell; for I must leave you: It seems not meet nor wholesome to my place To be produc'd, as if I stay I shall, Against the Moor; for I do know the state, However this may gall him with some check, Cannot with safety cast him; for he's embark'd With such loud reason to the Cyprus wars, Which even now stand in act, that, for their souls, Another of his fathom they have none, To lead their business; in which regard, Though I do hate him as I do hell-pains, Yet, for necessity of present life, I must show out a flag and sign of love, Which is indeed but sign. That you shall surely find him, Lead to the Sagittary the raised search; And there will I be with him. So, farewell.

Exit.

Enter Brabantio and Servants with torches.

Br. It is too true an evil; gone she is, And what 's to come of my despised time Is sought but bitterness. Now, Roderigo, Where didst thou see her? O unhappy girl! With the Moor, say'st thou? Who would be a father? How didst thou know 'twas she? O! she deceives me
[Scene I.]

OTHELLO, THE MOOR OF VENICE.

361

Enter Cassio and certain Officers with torches.

Oth. The servants of the duke, and my lieutenant.

The goodness of the night upon you, friends! What is the news?

Cas. The duke does greet you, general, and he requires your haste-post-haste appearance.

Even on the instant.

Oth. What is the matter, think you?

Cas. Something from Cyprus, as I may divine. It is a business of some heat; the galleys have sent a dozen sequent messengers this very night at one another’s heels, and many of the consuls, raised and met, are at the duke’s already. You have been hotly called for; when, being not at your lodging to be found, the senate hath sent about three several quests to search you out.

Oth. ’Tis well I am found by you. I will but spend a word here in the house, and go with you.

Exit. Cas. Ancient, what makes he here?

Iago. Faith, he to-night hath boarded a land carack;

If it prove lawful prize, he’s made for ever.

Cas. I do not understand.

Iago. He’s married.

Cas. To who?

Re-enter Othello.

Iago. Marry, to—Come, captain, will you go?

Oth. Have with you.

Cas. Here comes another troop to seek for you. Iago. It is Brabantio. General, be advis’d; he comes to bad intent.

Enter Brabantio, Roderigo, and Officers with torches and weapons.

Oth. Holla! stand there!

Rod. Signior, it is the Moor.

Bra. Down with him, thief! They draw on both sides.

Iago. You, Roderigo! come, sir, I am for you. Oth. Keep up your bright swords, for the dew will rust them.

Good signor, you shall more command with years than with your weapons.

Bra. O thou foul thief! where hast thou stow’d my daughter? Damn’d as thou art, thou hast enchanted her; for I’ll refer me to all things of sense, if she in chains of magic were not bound, whether a maid so tender, fair, and happy, so opposite to marriage that she shunn’d the wealthy curled darlings of our nation, would ever have, to incur a general mock. Run from her guardage to the sooty bosom of such a thing as thou; to fear, not to delight. Judge me the world, if ‘tis not gross in sense that thou hast practis’d her with foul charms, Abus’d her delicate youth with drugs or minerals that weaken motion: I’ll have’t disputed on; ‘Tis probable and palpable to thinking. I therefore apprehend and do attach thee for an abuser of the world, a practiser of arts inhibited and out of warrant.

SCENE II.—Another Street.

Enter Othello, Iago, and Attendants with torches.

Iago. Though in the trade of war I have slain men, yet do I hold it very stuff o’ the conscience to do no contriv’d murder: I lack iniquity sometimes to do me service. Nine or ten times had thought to have yerk’d him here under the ribs. Oth. ’Tis better as it is. Iago. Nay, but he prated and spake such scurry and provoking terms against your honour sat, with the little godliness I have, did full hard forbear him. But, I pray you, sir, 129 if you fast married? Be assur’d of this, that the magnifico is much below’d, had he in his effect a voice potent double as the duke’s; he will divorce you, put upon you what restraint and grievance he law, with all his might to enforce it on, I’ll give him cable. Oth. Let him do his spite: y services which I have done the signiary all on-tongue his complaints. ’Tis yet to know, which when I know that boasting is an honour shall promulgate, I fetch my life and being a rom man of royal siege, and my demerits ay speak unbonneted to as proud a fortune this that I have reach’d; for know, Iago, that I love the gentle Desdemona, would not my unhoused free condition ut into circumscription and confine or the sea’s worth. But, look! what lights come yond? Iago. These are the raised father and his friends: we were best go in. Oth. Not I; I must be found: 30 by parts, my title, and my perfect soul hall manifest me rightly. Is it they? Iago. By Janus, I think no.
Lay hold upon him: if he do resist,
Subdue him at his peril.

Oth. Hold your hands,
Both you of my inclining, and the rest:
Were it my cue to fight, I should have known it Without a prompter. Where will you that I go
To answer this your charge?

Bra. To prison; till fit time
Of law and course of direct session
Call thee to answer.

Oth. What if I do obey?
How may the duke be therewith satisfied,
Whose messengers are here about my side,
Upon some present business of the state
To bring me to him?

Off. 'Tis true, most worthy signior;
The duke's in council, and your noble self,
I am sure, is sent for.

Bra. How! the duke in council!
In this time of the night! Bring him away.
Mine's not an idle cause: the duke himself,
Or any of my brothers of the state,
Cannot but feel this wrong as 'twere their own;
For if such actions may have passage free,
Bond-slaves and pagans shall our statesmen be.

Exeunt.

Scene III.—A Council-chamber.

The Duke and Senators sitting at a table; Officers attending.

Duke. There is no composition in these news
That gives them credit.

First Sen. Indeed, they are disproportion'd;
My letters say a hundred and seven galleys.
Duke. And mine, a hundred and forty.

Second Sen. And mine, two hundred:
But though they jump not on a just account,
As in these cases, where the aim reports,
'Tis oft with difference, yet do they all confirm
A Turkish fleet, and bearing up to Cyprus.

Duke. Nay, it is possible enough to judgment:
I do not so secure me in the error,
But the main article I do approve
In fearful sense.

Sailor. Within, what, ho! what, ho! what, ho!

Off. A messenger from the galleys.

Enter Sailor.

Duke. Now, what's the business?
Sail. The Turkish preparation makes for Rhodes;
So was I bid report here to the state
By Signior Angelo.

Duke. How say you by this change?

First Sen. This cannot be,
By no assay of reason; 'tis a pageant
To keep us in false gaze. When we consider
The importunity of Cyprus to the Turk,
And let ourselves again but understand,
That as it more concerns the Turk than Rhodes,
So may he with more facile question bear it,
For that it stands not in such war-like brace,
But altogether lacks the abilities
That Rhodes is dress'd in: if we make thought of this,
We must not think the Turk is so unskilful
To leave that latest which concerns him first,
Neglecting an attempt of ease and gain,
To wake and wage a danger profitless.

Duke. Nay, in all confidence, he's not for Rhodes.

First Off. Here is more news.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The Ottomites, reverend and gracious,
Steering with due course toward the isle of Rhodes,
Have there injointed them with an after fleet.
First Sen. Ay, so I thought. How many, you guess?

Mess. Of thirty sail; and now they do re-steer
Their backward course, bearing with firm appearance
Their purposes toward Cyprus. Signior Montano,
Your trusty and most valiant servitor,
With his free duty recommends you thus,
And prays you to believe him.

Duke. 'Tis certain then for Cyprus.

Marcus Lucceicos, is not he in town?

First Sen. He's now in Florence.
Duke. Write from us to him; post-post-haste dispatch.

First Sen. Here comes Brabantio and the valiant Moor.

Enter Brabantio, Othello, Iago, Roderigo and Officers.

Duke. Valiant Othello, we must straight employ you Against the general enemy Ottoman.
To Brabantio. I did not see you; welcome gentle signior;
We lack'd your counsel and your help to-night.
Bra. So did I yours. Good your grace pardon me;
Neither my place nor aught I heard of business Hath rais'd me from my bed, nor doth the general care
Take hold on me, for my particular grief
Is of so flood-gate and o'erbearing nature
That it engulfs and swallows other sorrows
And it is still itself.

Duke. Why, what's the matter?
Bra. My daughter! O! my daughter.
Duke, Sen. Dead!
Bra. Ay, to me
She is abus'd, stol'n from me, and corrupted
By spells and medicines bought of mountebanks;
For nature so preposterously to err,
Being not deficient, blind, or lame of sense,
Sans witchcraft could not.
Duke. Who'er he be that in this foul proceeding
Hath thus beguil'd your daughter of herself
And you of her, the bloody book of law
You shall yourself read in the bitter letter
After your own sense; yea, though our prop
Stood in your action.
Bra. Humly I thank your grace.
Here is the man, this Moor; whom now, it seems,
Your special mandate for the state affairs
Hath hither brought.
Duke, Sen. We are very sorry for't Duke. To Othello. What, in your own part, can you say to this?
Oth. Nothing, but this is so.
Duke. Most potent, grave, and reverend signors, every noble and approv'd good masters, at I have ta'en away this old master's dughter,
is most true; true, I have married her:
every head and front of my offending with this extent, no more. Rude am I in my speech,
little bles'd with the soft phrase of peace;
since these arms of mine had seven years'
pith,
now some nine moons wasted, they have us'd their dearest action in the tented field;
little of this great work can I speak,
more than pertains to feats of broil and battle;
therefore little shall I grace my cause speaking for myself. Yet, by your gracious patience,
will a round unvarnish'd tale deliver my whole course of love; what drugs, what charms, that conjuration, and what mighty magic,
or such proceeding I am charg'd withal, von his daughter.
Br. A maiden never bold;
spirit so still and quiet, that her motion
ush'd at herself; and she, in spite of nature, years, of country, credit, every thing, fell in love with what she fear'd to look on!
is a judgment main'd and most imperfect that will confess perfection so could err against all rules of nature, and must be driven find out practices of cunning hell, by this should be. I therefore vouch again at with some mixtures powerful o'er the blood, with some dram conjur'd to this effect,
and wrought upon her.
Duke. To vouch this, is no proof, without more wider and more overt test an these thin habits and poor likelihods
f a modern seeming do prefer against him.
First Sen. But, Othello, speak:
you by indirect and forced courses
bade poison this young maid's affections; came it by request and such fair question soul to soul affordeth?
Oth. I do beseech you,
and for the lady to the Sagittary,
nd let her speak of me before her father:
you do find me foul in her report,
he trust, the office I do hold of you,
o only take away, but let your sentence
ven fall upon my life.
Oth. Ancient, conduct them; you best know the place.
Exeunt IAGO and Attendants,
nd, till she come, as truly as to heaven
do confess the vices of my blood, justly to your grave ears I'll present how I did thrive in this fair lady's love, ynd she in mine.
Duke. Say it, Othello.
Oth. Her father lov'd me; oft invited me;
Still question'd me the story of my life
From yearto yearto, the battles, sieges, fortunes
That I have pass'd.
I ran it through, even from my boyish days
To the very moment that he bade me tell it;
Wherein I spake of most disastrous chances,
Of moving accidents by flood and field,
Of hair-breadth 'scopes i' the imminent deadly breach,
Of being taken by the insolent foe
And sold to slavery, of my redemption thence
And portance in my travels' history;
Wherein of antres vast and deserts idle,
Rough quarries, rocks and hills whose heads
touch heaven,
It was my hint to speak, such was the process;
And of the Cannibals that each other eat,
The Anthropophagi, and men whose heads
Do grow beneath their shoulders. This to hear
Would Desdemona seriously incline;
But still the house-affairs would draw her hence;
Which ever as she could with haste dispatch,
She'd come again, and with a greedy ear
Devour up my discourse. Which I observing,
Took once a pliant hour, and found good means
To draw from her a prayer of earnest heart
That I would all my pilgrimage dilate,
Whereof by parcels she had something heard,
But not intentionally: I did consent;
And often did beguile her of her tears,
When I did speak of some distressful stroke
That my youth suffer'd. My story being done,
She gave me for my pains a world of sighs:
She swore, in faith, 'twas strange, 'twas passing strange;
'Twas pitiful, 'twas wondrous pitiful:
She wish'd she had not heard it, yet she wish'd
That heaven had made her such a man; she thank'd me,
And bade me, if I had a friend that lov'd her,
I should but teach him how to tell my story,
And that would woo her. Upon this hint I
spake:
She lov'd me for the dangers I had pass'd,
And I lov'd her that she did pity them.
This only is the witchcraft I have us'd:
Here comes the lady; let her witness it.
Enter DESDEMONA, IAGO, and Attendants.
Duke. I think this tale would win my daughter too.
Good Brabantio,
Take up this mangled care at the best:
Men do their broken weapons rather use
Than their bare hands.
Bra. I pray you, hear her speak:
If she confess that she was half the woorer,
Destruction on my head, if my bad blame
Light on the man! Come hither, gentle mistress:
Do you perceive in all this noble company
Where most you owe obedience?
Des. My noble father,
I do perceive here a divided duty;
To you I am bound for life and education;
My life and education both do learn me
How to respect you; you are the lord of duty;
I am hitherto your daughter: but here's my husband;
And so much duty as my mother show’d
To you, preferring you before her father,
So much I challenge that I may profess
Due to the Moor my lord.

_Bra._

God be with you! I have done.
Please it your grace, on to the state affairs:
I had rather to adopt a child than get it.
Come hither, Moor:
I here do give thee with all my heart
Which, but thou hast already, with all my heart
I would keep from thee. For your sake, jewel,
I am glad at soul I have no other child;
For thy escape would teach me tyranny,
To hang clogs on them. I have done, my lord.

_Duke._

Let me speak like yourself, and lay a sentence,
Which, as a grize or step, may help these lovers
Into your favour,
When remedies are past, the griefs are ended
By seeing the worst, which late on hopes depend.
To mourn a mischief that is past and gone
Is the next way to draw new mischief on.
What cannot be preserv’d when fortune takes Patience, her injury a mockery makes.
The robb’d that smiles steals something from the thief;
He robs himself that spends a bootless grief.

_Bra._

So let the Turk of Cyprus us beguile;
We lose it not so long as we can smile.
He bears the sentence well that nothing bears
But the free comfort which from hence he hears;
But he bears both the sentence and the sorrow
That, to pay grief, must of poor patience borrow.
These sentences, to sugar, or to gall,
Being strong on both sides, are equivocal;
But words are words; I never yet did hear
That the bruis’d heart was pierced through the ear.

I humbly beseech you, proceed to the affairs of state.

_Duke._
The Turk with a most mighty preparation makes for Cyprus. Othello, the fortitude of the place is best known to you; and though we have there a substitute of most allowed sufficiency, yet opinion, a sovereign mistress of effects, throws a more safer voice on you: you must therefore be content to slubber the gloss of your new fortunes with this more stubborn and boisterous expedition.

_Oth._
The tyrant custom, most grave senators,
Hath made the flinty and steel couch of war
My thrice-driven bed of down: I do agnize
A natural and prompt alacrity
I find in hardness, and do undertake
These present wars against the Ottomites.
Most humbly therefore bending to your state,
I crave fit disposition for my wife,
Due reference of place and exhibition,
With such accommodation and resort
As levels with her breeding.

_Duke._

If you please,

_Bra._

I’ll not have it so.

_Oth._ Nor I.

_Des._

Nor I; I would not there reside,
To put my father in impatient thoughts
By being in his eye. Most gracious duke,
To my unfolding lend your prosperous ear;
And let me find a charter in your voice
To assist my simpleness.

_Duke._

What would you, Desdemona?

_Des._

That I did love the Moor to live wit
him,
My downright violence and storm of fortunes
May trumpet to the world; my heart’s subdue
Even to the very quality of my lord;
I saw Othello’s visage in his mind,
And to his honours and his valiant parts
Did I my soul and fortunes consecrate,
So that, dear lords, if I be left behind,
A motch of peace, and he go to the war,
The rites for why I love him are bereft me,
And I a heavy interm shall support
By his dear absence. Let me go with him.

_Oth._

Let her have your voices.

Vouch with me, heaven, I therefore beg it not
To please the palate of my appetite,
Nor to comply with heat, the young affects
In me defunct, and proper satisfaction,
But to be free and bounteous to her mind;
And heaven defend your good souls that yo
think
I will your serious and great business scant.
For she is with me. No, when light-wing’d Toys
Of feather’d Cupid seal with wanton dulness
My speculative and offic’d instruments,
That my disport corrupt and taint my business
Let housewives make a skille of my helm,
And all indig and base adversities
Make head against my estimation!

_Duke._

Be it as you shall privately determine,
Either for her stay or going. The affair cries haste,
And speed must answer it.

_First Sen._

You must away to-night.

_Oth._

With all my heart.

_Duke._

At nine I’ the morning here we’ll mee
again.

Othello, leave some officer behind,
And he shall our commission bring to you;
With such things else of quality and respect
As doth import you.

_Oth._

So please your grace, my ancient
A man he is of honesty and trust:
To his conveyance I assign my wife,
With what else needful your good grace shall think
To be sent after me.

_Duke._

Let it be so.

Good night to every one. _To BRABANTIO, And noble signior,
If virtue no delighted beauty lack,
Your son-in-law is far more fair than black.
_First Sen._

Adieu, brave Moor! use Desdemona
well.

_Bra._

Look to her, Moor, if thou hast eyes to
see:
She has deceiv’d her father, and may thee.

_Execunt Duke, Senators, Officers, etc._

_Oth._

My life upon her faith! Honest Iago,
My Desdemona must I leave to thee:
I prithee, let thy wife attend on her;
And bring them after in the best advantage.
Come, Desdemona; I have but an hour
Of love, of worldly matters and direction,
To spend with thee: we must obey the time.

_Execunt Othello and Desdemona._
OTHELLO, THE MOOR OF VENICE.

Scene I.—A Sea-port Town in Cyprus. An Open Place near the Quay.

Enter MONTANO and two Gentlemen.

Mon. What from the cape can you discern at sea?

First Gent. Nothing at all: it is a high-wrought flood;
I cannot 'twixt the heaven and the main descry a sail.

Mon. Methinks the wind hath spoke aloud at land;
A fuller blast ne'er shook our battlements;
If it hath ruffian'd so upon the sea,
What ribs of oak, when mountains melt on them,
Can hold the mortise? What shall we hear of this?

Second Gent. A segregation of the Turkish fleet;
For do but stand upon the foaming shore,
The chidden billow seems to pelt the clouds;
The wind-shak'd surge, with high and monstrous mane,
Seems to cast water on the burning bear
And quench the guards of the ever-fixed pole:
I never did like molestation view
On the enchafed flood.

Mon. If that the Turkish fleet
Be not ensheiter'd and embay'd, they are drown'd;
It is impossible they bear it out.

Enter a third Gentleman.

Third Gent. News, lads! our wars are done. 20
The desperate tempest hath so bang'd the Turks
That their designment halts; a noble ship of Venice
Hath seen a grievous wrench and sufferance
On most part of their fleet.

Mon. How! is this true?
Third Gent. The ship is here put in,
A Veronese; Michael Cassio,
Lieutenant to the war-like Moor Othello,
Is come on shore: the Moor himself at sea,
And is in full commission here for Cyprus.

Mon. I am glad on't; 'tis a worthy governor.
Third Gent. But this same Cassio, though he speak of comfort
Touching the Turkish loss, yet he looks sadly
And prays the Moor be safe; for they were parted
With foul and violent tempest.

Mon. Pray heavens he be;
For I have serv'd him, and the man commands
Like a full soldier. Let's to the sea-side, ho!
As well to see the vessel that's come in
As to throw out our eyes for brave Othello,
Even till we make the main and the aerial blue
An indistinct regard.

Third Gent. Come, let's do so;
For every minute is expectancy
Of more arrivance.

Enter Cassio.

Cas. Thanks, you the valiant of this war-like isle,
That so approve the Moor. O! let the heavens
Give him defence against the elements,
For I have lost him on a dangerous sea.

Mon. Is he well shipp'd?
Cas. His bark is stoutly timber'd, and his pilot
Of very expert and approv'd allowance;
Therefore my hopes, not surfeit'd to death,
Stand in bold cure.

Cry within. A sail!-a sail!-a sail!

Enter a Messenger.

Cas. What noise?
Mess. The town is empty; on the brow o' the sea
Stand ranks of people, and they cry 'A sail!'
Cas. My hopes do shape him for the governor.

Second Gent. They do discharge their shot of courtesy;
Our friends at least.
Cas. I pray you, sir, go forth,
And give us truth who 'tis that is arriv'd.
Second Gent. I shall.

Mon. But, good lieutenant, is your general wiv'd?
Cas. Most fortunately: he hath achiev'd a maid
That paragons description and wild fame;
One that excels the quirks of blazoning pens,
And in the essential venture of creation
Does tire the ingener.

Re-enter Second Gentleman.

How now! who has put i

Second Gent. 'Tis one Iago, ancient to the general.
Cas. He has had most favourable and hap speed:
Tempests themselves, high seas, and howl winds,
The gutter'd rocks, and congregated sands,
Traitors ensteep'd to enclog the guiltless keel,
As having sense of beauty, do omit
Their mortal natures, letting go safely
By the divine Desdemona.

Mon. What is she?
Cas. She that I spake of, our great captain's Left in the conduct of the bold Iago,
Whose footing here anticipates our thoughts.
A se'nnight's speed. Great Jove, Othello gua
And swell his sail with thine own power breath,
That he may bless this bay with his tall ship
Make love's quick pants in Desdemona's arm
Give renew'd fire to our extincted spirits,
And bring all Cyprus comfort!

Enter DESDEMONA, EMILIA, IAGO, RODERICK and Attendants.

O! behold
The riches of the ship is come on shore.
Ye men of Cyprus, let her have your knees.
Hail to thee, lady! and the grace of heaven,
Before, behind thee, and on every hand,
Euwheel thee round!

Des. I thank you, valiant Cassio
What tidings can you tell me of my lord?
Cas. He is not yet arriv'd; nor know I aug
But that he's well, and will be shortly here.

Des. O! but I fear—How lost you company?
Cas. The great contention of the sea and skies
Parted our fellowship. But, hark! a sail.

Cry within. A sail!-a sail! Guns heard.

Second Gent. They give their greeting to the citadel:
This likewise is a friend.

Cas. See for the news!

Exit Gentlemen.

Good ancient, you are welcome. To EMIL. Welcome, mistress.
Let it not gall your patience, good Iago,
That I extend my manners; 'tis my breeding
That gives me this bold show of courtesy.

Kissing I. Iago, Sir, would she give you so much of my lips
As of her tongue she oft bestows on me,
You'd have enough.

Des. Alas! she has no speech.

Iago. In faith, too much;
I find it still when I have list to sleep:
Iago, before your ladyship, I grant,
He puts her tongue in her little heart,
And chides with thinking.
Emil. You have little cause to say so.
Iago. Come on, come on; you are pictures
Out of doors,
Ells in your parlours, wild cats in your kitchens,
Aunts in your injuries, devils being offended,
Layers in your housewifery, and housewives in your beds.
Des. O! lie upon thee, slanderer.
Iago. Nay, it is true, or else I am a Turk:
On rise to play and go to bed to work.
Emil. You shall not write my praise.
Iago. No, let me not.
Des. What would'st thou write of me, if thou
Should'st praise me?
Iago. O gentle lady, do not put me to't, or I am nothing if not critical.
Des. Come on; assay. There's one gone to the harbour.
Iago. Ay, madam.
Des. I am not merry, but I do beguile
That I am by seeming otherwise.
Emil. O, how would'st thou praise me?
Iago. I am about it; but indeed my invention
Comes from my pate as birdlime does from frize;
Plucks out brains and all: but my Muse
Labour'd, and thus she is deliver'd,
she be fair and wise, fairness and wit,
She one's for use, the other useth it.
Des. Well prais'd! How if she be black and witty?
Iago. If she be black, and thereto have a wit,
He'll find a white that shall her blackness fit.
Des. Worse and worse.
Emil. How if fair and foolish?
Iago. She never yet was foolish that was fair, or even her folly help'd her to an heir.
Des. These are old fond paradoxes to make Dols laugh 't the alehouse. What miserable
Price hast thou for her that's foul and foolish?
Iago. There's none so foul and foolish thereunto
That does foul pranks which fair and wise ones do.
Des. O heavy ignorance! thou praises the worst best. But what praise could'st thou Esteem on a deserving woman indeed, one that
The authority of her merit did justly put
On vouch of very malice itself?
Iago. She that was ever fair and never proud,
Fad tongue at will and yet was never loud,
ever lack'd gold and yet went never gay,
Fed from her wish and yet said 'Now I may,' be
That being anger'd, her revenge being high,
Ade her wrong stay and her displeasure fly,
That in wisdom never was so frail
Change the soul's head for the salmon's tail,
That he could think and never disclose his mind,
See suitors following and not look behind,
He was a wight, if ever such wight were,
Des. To do what?
Iago. To saddle fools and chronicle small beer.
Des. O most lame and impotent conclusion!
Do not learn of him, Emilía, though he be thy Usband. How say you, Cassio? is he not a most Votane and liberal counsellor?
Cas. He speaks home, madam; you may relish
Im more in the soldier than in the scholar.

Iago. Aside. He takes her by the palm; ay,
Well said, whisper; with as little a web as this Will I ensnare as great a fly as Cassio. Ay, smile
Upon her, do; I will gyve thee in thine own courtship.
You say true, 'tis so, indeed. If such tricks as these strip you out of your lieutenantancy, it had been better you had not kissed your three fingers so oft, which now again you are most apt
To play the sir in. Very good; well kissed! an excellent courtesy! 'tis so, indeed. Yet again your fingers to your lips? would they were Clyster-pipes for your sake! A trumpet heard. The Moor! I know his trumpet.
Cas. 'Tis truly so.
Des. Let's meet him and receive him.
Cas. Lo! where he comes.

Enter Othello and Attendants.

Oth. O my fair warrior!
Des. My dear Othello!
Oth. It gives me wonder great as my content
To see you here before me. O my soul's joy!
If after every tempest come such calms,
May the winds blow till they have waken'd death!
And let the labours bark climb hills of seas
Olympus-high, and duck again as low
As hell's from heaven! If it were now to die,
Twere now to be most happy, for I fear
My soul hath her content so absolute
That not another comfort like this Succeeds in unknown fate.
Des. The heavens forbid
But that our loves and comforts should increase
Even as our days do grow!
Oth. Amen to that, sweet powers!
I cannot speak enough of this content;
It stops me here; it is too much of joy:
And this, and this, the greatest discords be Kissing her.
That e'er our hearts shall make!
Iago. Aside. O! you are well tun'd now,
But I'll set down the pegs that make this music,
As honest as I am.
Oth. Come, let us to the castle.
News, friends; our wars are done, the Turks are drown'd.
How does my old acquaintance of this isle?
Honey, you shall be well desir'd in Cyprus;
I have found great love amongst them. O my sweet,
I prattle out of fashion, and I dote
In mine own comforts. I pritchee, good Iago,
Go to the bay and disembark my coffers.
Brig thou the master to the citadel;
He is a good one, and his worthiness
Does challenge much respect. Come, Desdemona,
Once more well met at Cyprus.

Exeunt Othello, Desdemona, and Attendants.

Iago. Do thou meet me presently at the harbour. Come hither. If thou be'st valiant, as they say base men being in love have then
A nobility in their natures more than is native to them, list me. The lieutenant to-night watches on the court of guard: first, I must tell thee this; Desdemona is directly in love with him.
Rod. With him! why, 'tis not possible.

Iago. Lay thy finger thus, and let thy soul be instructed. Mark me with what violence she first loved the Moor but for bragging and telling her fantastical lies; and will she love him still for prating? let not thy discreet heart think it. Her eye must be fed; and what delight shall she have to look on the devil? When the blood is dull with the act of sport, there should be, again to inflame it, and to give satiety a fresh appetite, loveliness in favour, sympathy in years, manners and beauties; all which the Moor is defective in. Now, for want of these required conveniences, her delicate tenderness will find itself abused, begin to heave the gorge, disbelieve and abhor the Moor; very nature will instruct her in it and compel her to some second choice. Now, sir, this granted, as it is a most pregnant and unforced position, who stands so eminent in the degree of this fortune as Cassio does? a knave very voluble, no further conceivable than in putting on the mere form of civil and humane seeming, for the better compassing of his salt and most hidden loose affection? why, none; why, none: a slipper and subtle knave, a finder-out of chasms, that has an eye can stamp and countenance advantages, though true advantage never present itself; a devilish knave! Besides, the knave is handsome, young, and hath all those requisites in him that folly and green minds look after; a pestilent complete knave! and the woman hath found him already.

Rod. I cannot believe that in her; she's full of most blessed condition.

Iago. Blessed fig's end! the wine she drinks is made of grapes; if she had been blessed she would never have loved the Moor; blessed pudding! Didst thou not see her paddle with the palm of her hand? didst not mark that?

Rod. Yes, that I did; but that was but courtesy.

Iago. Lechery, by this hand! an index and obscure prologue to the history of lust and foul thoughts. They met so near with their lips that their breaths embraced together. Villainous thoughts, Roderigo! when these mutualities so marshal the way, hard at hand comes the master and main exercise, the incorporate conclusion. Fish! But, sir, be you ruled by me: I have brought you from Venice. Watch you to-night; for the command, I'll lay 't upon you: Cassio knows you not. I'll not be far from you: do you find some occasion to anger Cassio, either by speaking too loud, or tainting his discipline; or from what other course you please, which the time shall more favourably minister.

Rod. Well.

Iago. Sir, he is rash and very sudden in choler, and haply may strike at you: provoke him, that he may; for even out of that will I cause these of Cyprus to mutiny, whose qualification shall come into no true taste again but by the displanting of Cassio. So shall you have a shorter journey to your desires by the means I shall then have to prefer them; and the impediment most profitably removed, without the which there were no expectation of our prosperity.

Rod. I will do this, if you can bring it to any opportunity.

Iago. I warrant thee. Meet me by and by at the citadel: I must fetch his necessary ashore. Farewell.

Exit. Rod. Adieu.

Iago. That Cassio loves her, I do well believe it; that she loves him, 'tis apt and of great credit. The Moor, howbeit that I endure him not, is of a constant, loving, noble nature; and I dare think he'll prove to Desdemona A most dear husband. Now, I do love her too. Not out of absolute lust, though peradventure I stand accountant for as great a sin, but partly led to diet my revenge, For that I do suspect the lusty Moor Hath leap'd into my seat; the thought whereof Doth like a poisonous mineral gnaw my inwards; and nothing can or shall content my soul Till I am even'd with him, wife for wife; or falling so, yet that I put the Moor At least into a jealousy; so strong That judgment cannot cure. Which thing to do If this poor trash of Venice, whom I trash For his quick hunting, stand the putting-on, I'll have our Michael Cassio on the hip; Abuse him to the Moor in the rank garb, For I fear Cassio with my night-cap too, Make the Moor thank me, love me, and rewar me, For making him egregiously an ass And practising upon his peace and quiet Even to madness. 'Tis here, but yet confus'd Knavery's plain face is never seen till us'd.

Exit.
Enter IAGO.

Cas. Welcome, Iago; we must to the watch.

Iago. Not this hour, lieutenant; 'tis not yet 1 o'clock. Our general cast us thus

Some wine, ho!

And let me the canakin clink, clink;
And let me the canakin clink:
A soldier's a man;
A life's a but a span;
Why then let a soldier drink.

Some wine, boys!

Cas. 'Fore God, an excellent song.

Iago. I learned it in England, where indeed they are most potent in potting; your Dane, your German, and your swag-bellied Hollander,
—drink, ho!—are nothing to your English.

Cas. Is your Englishman so expert in his drinking?

Iago. Why, he drinks you with facility your Dane dead drunk; he sweats not to overthrow your Almain; he gives your Hollander a vomit ere the next pottle can be filled.

Cas. To the health of our general!

Mon. I am for it, lieutenant; and I'll do you justice.

Iago. O sweet England!

King Stephen was a worthy peer,
His breeches cost him but a crown;
He held them sixpence all too dear,
With that he call'd the tailor low.
He was a wight of high renown,
And thou art but of low degree:
'Tis pride that pulls the country down,
Then take thine auld clack about thee.

Some wine, ho!

Cas. Why, this is a more exquisite song than the other.

Iago. Will you hear 't again?

Cas. No; for I hold him to be unworthy of his place that does those things. Well, God's above all; and there be souls must be saved, and there be souls must not be saved.

Iago. It is true, good lieutenant.

Cas. For mine own part, no offence to the general, nor any man of quality, I hope to be saved.

Iago. And so do I too, lieutenant.

Cas. Ay; but, by your leave, not before me;
the lieutenant is to be saved before the ancient.
Let's have no more of this; let's to our affairs.
God forgive us our sins! Gentlemen, let's look to our business. Do not think, gentlemen, I am drunk; this is my ancient; this is my right hand, and this is my left hand. I am not drunk now; I can stand well enough, and speak well enough.

All. Excellent well.

Cas. Why, very well then; you must not think then that I am drunk.

Exit. Mon. To the platform, masters; come, let's set the watch.

Iago. You see this fellow that is gone before;
He is a soldier fit to stand by Cæsar
And give direction; and do but see his vice;
'Tis to his virtue a just equino,
The one as long as the other; 'tis pity of him.
I fear the trust Othello puts him in,
On some old time of his infirmity,
Will shake this island.

Mon. But is he often thus?

Iago. 'Tis evermore the prologue to his sleep:
He'll watch the horologe a double set,
If drink rock not his cradle.

Mon.
It were well
The general were put in mind of it.
Perhaps he sees it not; or his good nature
Prizes the virtue that appears in Cassio,
And looks not on his evils.  Is not this true?

Enter Roderigo.

Iago.  Aside to him.  How now, Roderigo!
I pray you, after the lieutenant; go.

Exit Roderigo.

Mon.  And 'tis great pity that the noble Moor
Should hazard such a place as his own second
With one of an ingraft infirmity;
it were an honest action to say
So to the Moor.

Iago.  Not I. for this fair island:
I do love Cassio well, and would do much
To cure him of this evil.  But hark! what noise?

Cry within:  'Help!  Help!'

Re-enter Cassio, pursuing Roderigo.

Cas.  You rogue! you rascal!
Mon.  What's the matter, lieutenant?
Cas.  A knife teach me my duty!
I'll beat the knife into a twigsden bottle.
Rod.  Beat me!
Cas.  Dost thou prate, rogue?
Stirring Roderigo.

Mon.  Nay, good lieutenant;
Staying him.

I pray you, sir, hold your hand.

Cas.  Let me go, sir,
Or I'll knock you o'er the mazzard.
Mon.  Come, come; you're drunk.
Cas.  Drunk!

They fight.

Iago.  Aside to Roderigo.  Away, I say! I go out and cry a mutiny!

Exit Roderigo.

Nay! good lieutenant! God's will, gentlemen!
Help, ho! Lieutenant! Sir! Montano! Sir!
Help, masters! Here's a goodly watch indeed!

Bell rings.

Who's that which rings the bell?  Diablo, ho!
The town will rise:  God's will! lieutenant, hold!
You will be shamed for ever.

Re-enter Othello and Attendants.

Oth.  What is the matter here?

Mon.  'Zounds! I bleed still; I am hurt to the death.

Oth.  Hold, for your lives!
Iago.  Hold, ho! Lieutenant! Sir! Montano! gentlemen!
Have you forgot all sense of place and duty?
Hold! the general speaks to you; hold, hold for shame!

Oth.  Why, how now, ho! from whence aristeth
this?

Are we turn'd Turks, and to ourselves do that
Which heaven hath forbid the Ottomites?
For Christian shame put by this barbarous brawl?
He that stirs next to carve for his own rage
Holds his soul light; he dies upon his motion.
Silence that dreadful bell! it frights the bide
From her propriety.  What is the matter, masters?

Honest Iago, that look'st dead with grieving,

Speak, who began this? on thy love, I char
thee.

Iago.  I do not know; friends all but not even now,
In quarter and in terms like bride and groom
Devesting them for bed; and then, but now,
As if some planet had unwitted men,
Swords out, and tilting one at other's breast,
In opposition bloody.  I cannot speak
Any beginning to this peevish odds,
And would in action glorious I had lost
Those legs that brought me to a part of it!

Oth.  How came it, Michael, you are th

Cas.  I pray you, pardon me; I cannot speak Oth.  Worthy Montano, you were wont civil;
The gravity and stillness of your youth
The world hath noted, and your name is great
In mouths of wisest censure:  what 's the matte
That you unlace your reputation thus
And spend your rich opinion for the name
Of a night-brawler? I give me answer to it.

Mon.  Worthy Othello, I am hurt to danger
Your officer, Iago, can inform you,
While I spare speech, which something no
offends me,
Of all that I do know; nor know I aught
By me that 's said or done amiss this night,
Unless self-charity be sometime a vice,
And to defend ourselves it be a sin
When violence assails us.

Oth.  Now, by heaven,
My blood begins my safer guides to rule,
And passion, having my best judgment collied
Assays to lead the way.  If I once stir,
Or do but lift this arm, the best of you Shall sink in my rebuke.  Give me to know
How this foul rout began, who set it on;
And he that is approv'd in this offence,
Though he had twinn'd with me, both at birth,
Shall lose me.  What! in a town of war,
Yet wild, the people's hearts brimful of fear,
To manage private and domestic quarrel,
In night, and on the court and guard of safety.
'Tis monstrous.  Iago, who began 't?

Mon.  If partially affin'd, or leag'd in office.
Thou dost deliver more or less than truth,
Thou art no soldier.

Iago.  Touch me not so near;
I had rather have this tongue cut from my mouth

Than it should do offence to Michael Cassio;
Yet, I persuade myself, to speak the truth
Shall nothing wrong him.  Thus it is, general
Montano and myself being in speech,
There comes a fellow crying out for help,
And Cassio following him with determin'd swan
To execute upon him.  Sir, this gentleman
Steps in to Cassio, and entreats his pause;
Myself the crying fellow did pursue,
Lost by his clamour, as it so fell out,
The town might fall in fright; he, swift of foot
Outran my purpose, and I return'd the rather
For that I heard the click and fall of swords,
And Cassio high in oath, which till to-night
I ne'er might say before.  When I came back,
For this was brief, I found them close together
At blow and thrust, even as again they were Iago. Come, you are too severe a moraliser. As the time, the place, and the condition of this country stands, I could heartily wish this had not befallen, but since it is as it is, mend it for your own good.

Cas. I will ask him for my place again; he shall tell me I am a drunkard! Had I as many months as Hydra, such an answer would stop them all. To be now a sensible man, by and by a fool, and presently a beast! O strange! Every inordinate cup is unblissed and the ingredient is a devil.

Iago. Come; come; good wine is a good familiar creature if it be well used; exclame no more against it. And, good lieutenant, I think you think I love you.

Cas. I have well approved it, sir. I drink!

Iago. You or any man living may be drunk at some time, man. I'll tell you what you shall do. Our general's wife is now the general: I may say so in this respect, for that he hath devoted and given up himself to the contemplation, mark, and dentement of her parts and graces: confess yourself freely to her; importune her help to put you in your place again. She is of so free, so kind, so apt, so blessed a disposition, that she holds it a vice in her goodness not to do more than she is requested. This broken joint between you and her husband entreat her to splinter; and my fortunes against any lay worth naming, this crack of your love shall grow stronger than it was before.

Cas. You advise me well.

Iago. I protest, in the sincerity of love and honest kindness.

Cas. I think it freely; and betimes in the morning I will beseech the virtuous Desdemona to undertake for me. I am desperate of my fortunes if they check me here.

Iago. You are in the right. Good night, lieutenant; I must to the watch.

Cas. Good night, honest Iago! Exit.

Iago. And what's he then that says I play the villain?

When this advice is free I give and honest, Probable to thinking and indeed the course
To win the Moor again? For 'tis most easy
The inclining Desdemona to subdue
In any honest suit; she's fram'd as fruitful
As the free elements. And then for her
To win the Moor, were't to renounce his baptism,
All seals and symbols of redeemed sin,
His soul is so enfeated to her love,
That she may make, unmake, do what she list,
Even as her appetite shall play the god
With his weak function. How am I then a villain
To counsel Cassio to this parallel course,
Directly to his good? Divinity of hell!
When devils will their blackest sins put on,
They do suggest at first with heavenly shows,
As I do now; for whiles this honest fool
Piles Desdemona to repair his fortunes,
And she for him pleads strongly to the Moor,
I'll pour this pestilence into his ear
That she repeals him for her body's lust;
And, by how much she strives to do him good,
She shall undo her credit with the Moor.
So will I turn her virtue into pitch,
And out of her own goodness make the net
That shall ensnare them all.

Re-enter Roderigo.

How now, Roderigo!

Rod. I do follow here in the chase, not like a hound that hunts, but one that fills up the cry.

My money is almost spent; I have been to-night exceedingly well cudgelled; and I think the issue will be, I shall have so much experience for my pains; and so, with no money at all and a little more wit, return again to Venice.

Iago. How poor are they that have not patience!
What wound did ever heal but by degrees? 330
Thou know'st we work by wit and not by witchcraft,
And wit depends on dilatory time.

Does't not go well? Cassio hath beaten thee,
And thou, by that small hurt, hast cashier'd Cassio.

Though other things grow fair against the sun,
Yet fruits that blossom first will first be ripe:
Content thyself awhile. By the mass, 'tis morning;
Pleasure and action make the hours seem short.
Retire thee; go where thou art billeted: 339
Away, I say; thou shalt know more hereafter.

Nay, get thee gone. Exit Roderigo.

Two things are to be done;
My wife must move for Cassio to her mistress;
I'll set her on;
Myself the while to draw the Moor apart,
And bring him jump when he may Cassio find
Soliciting his wife: ay, that's the way:
Dull not device by coldness and delay. Exit.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Cyprus. Before the Castle.

Enter Cassio and some Musicians.

Cas. Masters, play here; I will content your pains;
Something that's brief; and bid 'Good morrow, general.'

Music.

Enter Clown.

Clo. Why, masters, have your instruments been in Naples, that they speak I the nose thus?

First Mus. How, sir, how!
Clo. Are these, I pray you, wind-instruments?
First Mus. Ay, marry, are they, sir.
Clo. O! thereby hangs a tail.
First Mus. Whereby hangs a tale, sir?

Clo. Marry, sir, by many a wind-instrument that I know. But, masters, here's money for you; and the general so likes your music, that he desires you, for love's sake, to make no more noise with it.

First Mus. Well, sir, we will not.

Clo. If you have any music that may not be heard, 'tis again; but, as they say, to hear music the general does not greatly care.

First Mus. We have none such, sir.

Clo. Then put up your pipes in your bag, for I'll away. Go; vanish into air; away!

Exeunt Musicians.

Cas. Dost thou hear, mine honest friend?

Clo. No, I hear not your honest friend; hear you.

Cas. Prithee, keep up thy quillets. There's a poor piece of gold for thee. If the gentle woman that attends the general's wife be stirring, tell her there's one Cassio entreats her little favour of speech; wilt thou do this?

Clo. She is stirring, sir; if she will stir hither I shall seem to notify unto her.

Cas. Do, good my friend. Exit Clown.

Enter Iago.

Iago. You have not been a-bed, then?

Cas. Why, no; the day had broke
Before we parted. I have made bold, Iago,
To send in to your wife; my suit to her Is, that she will to virtuous Desdemona Procure me some access.

Iago. I'll send her to you presently
And I'll devise a mean to draw the Moor Out of the way, that your converse and business May be more free.

Cas. I humbly thank you for 't. Exit IAGO.

I never knew
A Florentine more kind and honest.

Enter Emilia.

Emil. Good morrow, good lieutenant: I am sorry
For your displeasure; but all will sure be well.
The general and his wife are talking of it,
And she speaks for you stoutly: the Moor replies
That he you hurt is of great fame in Cyprus
And great affinity, and that in wholesome wisdom
He might not but refuse you; but he protesteth he loves you,
And needs no other suitor but his likings
To take the sa' st occasion by the front
To bring you in again.

Cas. Yet, I beseech you,
If you think fit, or that it may be done,
Give me advantage of some brief discourse With Desdemona alone.

Emil. Pray you, come in:
I will bestow you where you shall have time
To speak your bosom freely.

Cas. I am much bound to you.

Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A Room in the Castle.

Enter Othello, Iago, and Gentlemen.

Oth. These letters give, Iago, to the pilot,
And by him do my duties to the senate;
That done, I will be walking on the works;
Repair there to me.

Iago. Well, my good lord, I'll do't.

Oth. This fortification, gentlemen, shall we see't?

Gent. We'll wait upon your lordship. Exit.
Scene III.—The Garden of the Castle.

Enter Desdemona, Cassio, and Emilia.

Des. Be thou assur'd, good Cassio, I will do my abilities in thy behalf.
Emil. Good madam, do: I warrant it grieves my husband, if the cause were his.
Des. O! that's an honest fellow. Do not doubt, Cassio, t I will have my lord and you again friendly as you were.

Des. Bounteous madam, never shall become of Michael Cassio, 's never any thing but your true servant.
Des. I know't; I thank you. You do love my lord; you have known him long; and be you well assur'd shall in strangeness stand no further off an in a politic distance.

Des. Ay, but, lady, at policy may either last so long, feed upon such nice and waterish diet, breed itself so out of circumstance, at, I being absent and my place supplied, general will forget my love and service.
Des. Do not doubt that; before Emilia here live thee warrant of thy place. Assure thee, I do vow a friendship, I'll perform it the last article; my lord shall never rest; I watch him tame, and talk him out of patience: bed shall seem a school, his board a shrift; I intermingle every thing he does th Cassio's suit. Therefore be merry, Cassio; thy solicitor shall rather die an give thy cause away.

Enter Othello and Iago, at a distance.

Emil. Madam, here comes my lord.
Iago. Madam, I'll take my leave.
Des. Why, stay, and hear me speak.
Iago. Madam, not now; I am very ill at ease, fit for mine own purposes.
Des. Well, do your discretion. Exit Cassio.

Iago. Ha! I like not that.

Oth. What dost thou say?
Iago. Nothing, my lord: or if—I know not what.

Oth. Was not that Cassio parted from my wife?
Iago. Cassio, my lord? No, sure, I cannot think it at he would steal away so guilty-like, sing you coming.

Oth. I do believe 'twas he.

Des. How now, my lord! I have any grace or power to move you, present reconciliation take: if he be not one that truly loves you, at errs in ignorance and not in cunning.

I have no judgment in an honest face.

Oth. I prithee call him back.

Des. Ay, sooth; so humbled
That he hath left part of his grief with me,
To suffer with him. Good love, call him back.

Oth. Not now, sweet Desdemona; some other time.

Des. But shall 't be shortly?

Oth. The sooner, sweet, for you.

Des. Shall 't be to-night at supper?

Oth. No, not to-night.

Des. To-morrow dinner then?

Oth. I shall not dine at home; I meet the captains at the citadel.

Des. Why then, to-morrow night; or Tuesday morn;

On Tuesday noon, or night; on Wednesday morn:

I prithee name the time, but let it not Exceed three days: in faith, he's penitent; And yet his trespass, in our common reason, Save that they say the wars must make examples Out of the best, is not almost a fault.

To incur a private check. When shall he come? Tell me, Othello. I wonder in my soul, What you could ask me that I should deny, Or stand so mammering on. What! Michael Cassio,

That came a-wooing with you, and so many a time,

When I have spoke of you disparingly,

Hath ta'en your part; to have so much to do To bring him in! Trust me, I could do much—

Oth. Prithee, no more; let him come when he will;

I will deny thee nothing.

Des. Why, this is not a boon; 'Tis as I should entreat you wear your gloves, Or feed on nourishing dishes, or keep you warm, Or sue to you to do a peculiar profit To your own person; nay, when I have a suit Wherein I mean to touch your love indeed, It shall be full of poise and difficult weight, And fearful to be granted.

Oth. I will deny thee nothing: Whereon, I do beseech thee, grant me this, To leave me but a little to myself.

Des. Shall I deny you? no: farewell, my lord.

Oth. Farewell, my Desdemona: I'll come to thee straight.

Des. Emilia, come. Be as your fancies teach you;

Whate'er you be, I am obedient.

Exit, with Emilia.

Oth. Excellent wretch! Perdition catch my soul But I do love thee! and when I love thee not, Chaos is come again.

Iago. My noble lord,—

Oth. What dost thou say, Iago?
Iago. Did Michael Cassio, when you woo'd my lady, Know of your love?

Oth. He did, from first to last: why dost thou ask?
Iago. But for a satisfaction of my thought; No further harm.

Oth. Why of thy thought, Iago? Iago. I did not think he had been acquainted with her. Oth. O! yes; and went between us very oft. Iago. Indeed! Oth. Indeed! ay, indeed; discern'st thou aught in that? Is he not honest? Iago. Honest, my lord! Oth. Honest! ay, honest. Iago. My lord, for aught I know. Oth. What dost thou think? Iago. Think, my lord! Oth. Think, my lord! By heaven, he echoes me, As if there were some monster in his thought Too hideous to be shown. Thou dost mean something: I heard thee say even now, thou lik'dst not that, When Cassio left my wife; what didst not like? And when I told thee he was of my counsel In my whole course of wooing, thou cried'st 'Indeed!' And didst contract and purse thy brow togeth'er, As if thou then hadst shut up in thy brain Some horrible conceit. If thou dost love me, Show me thy thought. Iago. My lord, you know I love you. Oth. I think thou dost; And, for I know thou art full of love and honesty, And weigh'st thy words before thou giv'st them breath, Therefore these stops of thine fright me the more; For such things in a false disloyal knave Are tricks of custom, but in a man that's just They're close delations, working from the heart That passion cannot rule. Iago. For Michael Cassio, I dare be sworn I think that he is honest. Oth. I think so too. Iago. Men should be what they seem; Or those that be not, would they might seem none! Oth. Certain, men should be what they seem. Iago. Why then, I think Cassio's an honest man. Oth. Nay, yet there's more in this. I pray thee, speak to me as to thy thoughts, As thou dost ruminate, and give thy worst of thoughts The worst of words. Iago. Good my lord, pardon me; Though I am bound to every act of duty, I am not bound to that all slaves are free to. Utter my thoughts? Why, say they are vile and false; As where's that palace whereinto foul things Sometimes intrude not? who has a breast so pure But some uncleanly apprehensions Keep leets and law-days, and in session sit With meditations lawful?

Oth. Thou dost conspire against thy friend Iago, If thou but think'st him wrong'd, and makes his ear A stranger to thy thoughts. Iago. Do beseech you Though I perchance am vicious in my guess, As, I confess, it is my nature's plague To spy into abuses, and oft my jealousy Shapes faults that are not, that your wisdom Yet, From one that so imperfectly conceits, Would take no notice, nor build yourself trouble Out of his scattering and unsure observance. It were not for your quiet nor your good, Nor for my manhood, honesty, or wisdom, To let you know my thoughts. Oth. What dost thou mean Is the immediate jewel of their souls: Who steals my purse steals trash; 'tis some thing, nothing; 'Twas mine, 'tis his, and has been slave thousands. But he that fitches from me my good name Robs me of that which not enriches him, And makes me poor indeed. Oth. By heaven, I'll know thy thoughts. Iago. You cannot, if my heart were in your hand; Nor shall not, whilst 'tis in my custody. Oth. Ha! Iago. O! beware, my lord, of jealousy. It is the green-eyed monster which doth mock The meat it feeds on; that cuckold lives in bliss Who, certain of his fate, loves not his wronger; But, O! what damned minutes tells he o'er Who dotes, yet doubts; suspects, yet sound loves. Oth. O misery! Iago. Poor and content is rich and rich enough, But riches falseless is as poor as winter To him that ever fears he shall be poor. Good heaven, the souls of all my tribe defend From jealousy! Oth. Why, why is this? Think'st thou I'd make a life of jealousy, To follow still the changes of the moon With fresh suspicions? No; to be once a doubt Is once to be resolv'd. Exchange me for goat When I shall turn the business of my soul To such exsufflicate and blown surmises, Matching thy inference. 'Tis not to make me jealous To say my wife is fair, feeds well, loves company; Is free of speech, sings, plays, and dances well Where virtue is these are more virtuous: Nor from mine own weak merits will I draw The smallest fear or doubt of her revolt; For she had eyes, and chose me. No, Iago, I'll see before I doubt; when I doubt, prove; And on the proof there is no more but this, Away at once with love or jealousy!
Iago. I am glad of it; for now I shall have reason to show the love and duty that I bear you ith franker spirit; therefore, as I am bound, eceive it from me. I speak not yet of proof:
ook to your wife; observe her well with Cassio;
'ear your eye thus, not jealous nor secure:
would not have your free and noble nature of self-bounty be abus’d; look to’t.
know our country disposition well;
 Venice they do let heaven see the pranks hey dare not show their husbands’; their best conscience
not to leave ‘t undone, but keep ‘t unknown.
Oth. Dost thou say so?
Iago. She did deceive her father, marrying you;
y when she seem’d to shake and fear your looks he lov’d them most.
Oth. And so she did.
Iago. Why, go to then;
he that so young could give out such a seeming,
sel her father’s eyes up close as oak,
e thought ‘twas witchcraft; but I am much
to blame;
humbly do beseech you of your pardon
or too much loving you.
Oth. I am bound to thee for ever.
Iago. I see this hath a little dash’d thy spirits.
Oth. Not a jot, not a jot.
Iago. I faith, I fear it has hope you will consider what is spoke omes from my love. But I do see you’re mov’d; am to pray you not to strain my speech a grosser issue nor to larger reach han to suspicion.
Oth. I will not.
Iago. Should you do so, my lord,
y speech should fall into such vile success
’s my thoughts aim not at. Cassio’s my worthy lord, I see you’re mov’d.
Oth. No, not much mov’d:
do not think but Desdemona’s honest.
Iago. Long live she so! and long live you to think so!
Oth. And yet, how nature erring from itself,— Iago. Ay, there’s the point: as, to be bold with
you,
not to affect many proposed matches of her own clime, complexion, and degree,
Where to we see in all things nature tends;
’ch! one may smell, in such, a will most rank,
our disproportion, thoughts unnatural.
at pardon me; I do not in position distinctly speak of her, though I may fear
Her will, recolling to her better judgment, ay fall to match you with her country forms and happily repent.
Oth. Farewell, farewell:
more thou dost perceive, let me know more;
et on thy wife to observe. Leave me, Iago.
Iago. My lord, I take my leave. Going. 241
Oth. Why did I marry? This honest creature, doubtless,
sees and knows more, much more, than he unfolds.
Iago. Returning. My lord, I would I might entreat your honour
’t scan this thing no further; leave it to time.
though ‘tis fit that Cassio have his place,
for sure he fills it up with great ability,
Yet, if you please to hold him off awhile,
You shall by that perceive him and his means:
Note if your lady strain his entertainment
With any strong or vehement importunity;
Much will be seen in that. In the mean time,
Let me be thought too busy in my fears,
As worthy cause I have to fear I am,
And hold her free, I do beseech your honour.
Oth. Fear not my government.
Iago. I once more take my leave. Exit.
Oth. This fellow’s of exceeding honesty,
And knows all qualities, with a learned spirit,
Of human dealings; if I do prove her haggard,
Though that her jesses were my dear heart-strings,
I’d whistle her off and let her down the wind,
To prey at fortune. Haply, for I am black
And have not those soft parts of conversation
That chamberers have, or for I am declin’d
Into the vale of years, yet that’s not much,
She’s gone. I am abus’d; and my relief
Must be to loathe her. O curse of marriage!
That we can call these delicate creatures ours,
And not their appetites. I had rather be a toad,
And live upon the vapour of a dungeon,
Than keep a corner in the thing I love
For others’ uses. Yet, ‘tis the plague of great ones;
Prerogativ’d are they less than the base;
’Tis destiny unshunnable, like death:
Even then this forked plague is fated to us
When we do quicken. Look! where she comes.
If she be false, O! then heaven mocks itself.
I will not believe ‘t.

Re-enter Desdemona and Emilia.
Des. How now, my dear Othello?
Your dinner and the generous islanders
By you invited, do attend your presence.
Oth. I am to blame.
Des. Why do you speak so faintly?
Are you not well?
Oth. I have a pain upon my forehead here.
Des. Faith, that’s with watching; ’twill away
again:
Let me but bind it hard, within this hour
It will be well.
Oth. Your napkin is too little:
She drops her handkerchief.
Let it alone. Come, I’ll go in with you.
Des. I am very sorry that you are not well.
Exeunt Othello and Desdemona.
Emil. I am glad I have found this napkin; 29
This was her first remembrance from the Moor:
My wayward husband hath a hundred times
Woo’d me to steal it, but she so loves the token,
For he conjur’d her she should ever keep it,
That she reserves it evermore about her
To kiss and talk to. I’ll have the work ta’en out
And give’t Iago:
What he will do with it heaven knows, not I;
I nothing but to please his fantasy.

Re-enter Iago.
Iago. How now! what do you here alone? 300
Emil. Do not you chide; I have a thing for you.
Iago. A thing for me? It is a common thing—
Emil. Ha!
Iago. To have a foolish wife.
Emil. O! is that all? What will you give me
now
For that same handkerchief?
Iago. What handkerchief!
Emil. What handkerchief!

Why, that the Moor first gave to Desdemona;
That which so often you did bid me steal.

Iago. Hast stol'n it from her? 310
Emil. No, faith; she let it drop by negligence,
And, to the advantage, I, being here, took't up.
Look, here it is.

Iago. A good wench; give it me.
Emil. What will you do with't, that you have been so earnest
To have me filch it?

Iago. Why, what's that to you?
Snatches it.

Emil. If it be not for some purpose of import Give't me again; poor lady! she'll run mad
When she shall lack it.

Iago. Be not acknowledg on't; I have use for it.
Go, leave me. Exit EMILIA. 320

I will in Cassio's lodging lose this napkin,
And let him find it; trifles light as air
Are to the jealous confirmations strong
As proofs of holy writ; this may do something.
The Moor already changes with my poison:
Dangerous conceits are in their natures poisoned,
Which at the first are scarce found to distaste,
But with a little act upon the blood,
Burn like the mines of sulphur. I did say so:
Look! where he comes.

Re-enter Othello.

Not poppy, nor mandragora,
Nor all the drowsy syrups of the world, 331
Shall ever medicine thee to that sweet sleep
Which thou ow'dst yesterday.

Oth. Ha! ha! false to me?

Iago. Why, how now, general! no more of that.
Oth. Avant! be gone! thou hast set me on the rack;
I swear 'tis better to be much abus'd
Than but to know 't a little.

Iago. How now, my lord!
Oth. What sense had I of her stol'n hours of lust?
I saw't not, thought it not, it harm'd not me;
I slept the next night well, was free and merry
I found not Cassio's kisses on her lips; 341
He that is rob'd, not wanting what is stol'n,
Let him not know 't and he's not rob'd at all.

Iago. I am sorry to hear this.

Oth. I had been happy, if the general camp,
Pioners and all, had tasted her sweet body,
So I had nothing known. O! now, for ever
Farewell the tranquil mind; farewell content!
Farewell the plumed troop and the big wars
That make ambition virtue! O, farewell! 350
Farewell the neighting steed, and the shrill trump,
The spirit-stirring drum, the ear-piercing sife,
The royal banner, and all quality,
Pride, pomp, and circumstance of glorious war!
And, O you mortal engines, whose rude throats
The immortal Jove's dread clamours counterfeit,
Farewell! Othello's occupation's gone!

Iago. 'tis possible, my lord?
Oth. Villain, be sure thou prove my love a whore,
Be sure of it; give me the ocular proof; 360
Or, by the worth of mine eternal soul,
Thou hadst been better have been born a dog
Than answer my wak'd wrath.

Iago. Is't come to this?
Oth. Make me to see 't; or, at the least, so prove it,
That the probation bear no hinge nor loop
To hang a doubt on; or woe upon thy life!
Iago. My noble lord,— 37

Oth. If thou dost slander her and torture me
Never pray more; abandon all remorse;
On horror's head horrors accumulate;
Do deeds to make heaven weep, all earth amazed
For nothing canst thou to damnation add Greater than that.

Iago. O grace! O heaven forgive me!
Are you a man? have you a soul or sense?
God be wi' you; take mine office. O wretched fool!
That liv'st to make thine honesty a vice.
O monstrous world! Take note, take note
O world!
To be direct and honest is not safe.
I thank you for this profit, and from hence
I'll love no friend, sith love breeds such offence.
Oth. Nay, stay; thou should'st be honest. 38
Iago. I should be wise; for honesty's a fool,
And loses that it works for.

Oth. By the world,
I think my wife be honest and think she is not,
I think that thou art just and think thou art not; I
I'll have some proof. Her name, that was a fresh
As Dian's visage, is now begrimm'd and black
As mine own face. If there be cords or knives
Poison or fire or suffocating streams,
I'll not endure it. Would I were satisfied! 39
Iago. I see, sir, you are eaten up with passion,
I do repent me that I put it to you.
You would be satisfied?

Oth. Would! nay, I will.
Iago. And may; but how? how satisfied, my lord?
Would you, the supervisor, grossly gape on;
Behold her tupp'd?
Oth. Death and damnation! O I

Iago. It were a tedious difficulty, I think,
To bring them to that prospect; damn them then
If ever mortal eyes do see them bolster
More than their own! What then? how then?
What shall I say? Where's satisfaction? 40
It is impossible you should see this,
Were they as prime as goats, as hot as monkeys,
As salt as wolves in pride, and fools as gross
As ignorance made drunk; but yet, I say,
If imputation and strong circumstances,
Which lead directly to the door of truth,
Will give you satisfaction, you might have't.
Oth. Give me a living reason she's disloyal.
Iago. I do not like the office;
But, sith I am enter'd in this cause so far,
Prick'd to 't by foolish honesty and love,
I will go on. I lay with Cassio lately;
And, being troubled with a raging tooth,
I could not sleep.
There are a kind of men so loose of soul
That in their sleep will mutter their affairs;
One of this kind is Cassio,
In sleep I heard him say 'Sweet Desdemona,
Let us be wary, let us hide our loves!'
And then, sir, would he gripe and wring my
hand,
Cry 'O sweet creature!' and then kiss me hard,
OTHELLO, THE MOOR OF VENICE.

SCENE IV.—Before the Castle.

Enter Desdemona, Emilia, and Clown.

Des. Do you know, sithere, where Lieutenant Cassio lies?

Clo. I dare not say he lies any where.

Des. Why, man?

Clo. He's a soldier; and for one to say a soldier lies, is spaw.

Des. Go to; where lodges he?

Clo. To tell you where he lodges is to tell you where I lie.

Des. Can any thing be made of this? 10

Clo. I know not where he lodges, and for me to devise a lodging, and say he lies here or he lies there, were to lie in mine own throat.

Des. Can you inquire him out, and be edified by report?

Clo. I will catechize the world for him; that is, make questions, and by them answer.

Des. Seek him, bid him come hither; tell him I have moved my lord in his behalf, and hope all will be well.

Clo. To do this is within the compass of man's wit, and therefore I will attempt the doing it.

Exit.

Des. Where should I lose that handkerchief, Emilia?

Emil. I know not, madam.

Des. Believe me, I had rather have lost my purse

Full of cruzadoes; and, but my noble Moor

Is true of mind and made of no such baseness

As jealous creatures are, it were enough

To put him to ill thinking.

Emil. Is he not jealous? 30

Des. Who? he! I think the sun where he was born

Drew all such humours from him.

Emil. Look! where he comes. 40

Des. I will not leave him now till Cassio

Be call'd to him.

Enter Othello.

How is 't with you, my lord?

How do you, Desdemona?

Des. Well, my good lord.

Oth. Give me your hand. This hand is moist, my lady.

Des. It yet has felt no age nor known no sorrow.

Oth. This argues fruitfulness and liberal heart;

Hot, hot, and moist; this hand of yours requires

A sequester from liberty, fasting and prayer, a

Much castigation, exercise devout;

For here's a young and sweating devil here,

That commonly rebels. 'Tis a good hand,

A frank one.

Des. You may, indeed, say so;

For 'twas that hand that gave away my heart.

Oth. A liberal hand; the hearts of old gave hands,

But our new heraldry is hands not hearts.

Des. I cannot speak of this. Come now, your promise.

Oth. What promise, chuck? 50

Des. I have sent to bid Cassio come speak with you.
Oth. I have a salt and sorry rheum offends me.
Lend me thy handkerchief.
Des. Here, my lord.
Oth. That which I gave you.
Des. I have it not about me.
Oth. Not?
Des. No, indeed, my lord.
Oth. That is a fault.
That handkerchief
Did an Egyptian to my mother give;
She was a charmer, and could almost read
The thoughts of people; she told her, while she kept it,
'Twould make her amiable and subdue my father
Entirely to her love, but if she lost it
Or made a gift of it, my father's eye
Should hold her loathed, and his spirits should hunt
After new fancies. She dying gave it me;
And bid me, when my fate would have me wive,
To give it her. I did so; and take heed on 't;
Make it a darling like your precious eye;
To lose 't or give 't away were such perdun
As nothing else could match.
Des. Is 't possible?
Oth. 'Tis true; there's magic in the web of it;
A sibyl, that had number'd in the world
The sun to course two hundred compasses,
In her prophetic fury sew'd the work;
The worms were hallow'd that did breed the silk,
And it was dy'd in mummy which the skilful
Conserv'd of maidens' hearts.
Des. Indeed! 't is true?
Oth. Most veritable; therefore look to 't well.
Des. Then would to God that I had never seen 't!
Oth. Ha! wherefore?
Des. Why do you speak so startlingly and rash?
Oth. 'Is lost? 'Is not 'gone? speak, is it out o' the way?
Des. Heaven bless us!
Oth. Say you?
Des. It is not lost; but what an if it were?
Oth. How?
Des. I say it is not lost.
Oth. Fetch 't, let me see 't.
Des. Why, so I can, sir, but I will not now.
This is a trick to put me from my suit:
Pray you let Cassio be receiv'd again.
Oth. Fetch me the handkerchief; my mind misgives.
Des. Come, come;
You'll never meet a more sufficient man.
Oth. The handkerchief!
Des. I pray, talk me of Cassio.
Oth. The handkerchief!
Des. A man that all his time
Hath founded his good fortunes on your love,
Shard dangers with you—
Oth. The handkerchief!
Des. In sooth, you are to blame.
Oth. Away!
Emil. Is not this man jealous?
Des. I ne'er saw this before.
Sure, there's some wonder in this handkerchief;
I am most unhappy in the loss of it.
Emil. 'Tis not a year or two shows us a man;
They are all but stomachs, and we all but food;
They eat us hungerly, and when they are full
They belch us. Look you! Cassio and my husband.

Enter Iago and Cassio.

Iago. There is no other way; 'tis she must do it.
And, lo! the happiness; go and importune her.
Des. How now, good Cassio! what's the new with you?
Cas. Madam, my former suit: I do beseech you
That by your virtuous means I may again
Exist, and be a member of his love
Whom I with all the office of my heart
Entirely honour; I would not be delay'd.
If my offence be of such mortal kind
That nor my service past, nor present sorrows,
Nor purpose'd merit in futurity,
Can ransom me into his love again,
But to know so much be my benefit;
So shall I clothe me in a for'd content,
And shut myself up in some other course
To fortune's alms.
Des. Alas! thrice-gentle Cassio!
My adoration is not now in tune;
My lord is not my lord; nor should I know him
Were he in favour as in humour alter'd.
So help me every spirit sanctified,
As I have spoken for you all my best
And stood within the blank of his displeasure
For my free speech. You must awhile bepatient
What I can do I will, and more I will
Than for myself I dare; let that suffice you.
Iago. Is my lord angry?
Emil. He went hence but now
And certainly in strange unquietness.
Iago. Can he be angry? I have seen the cannon
When it hath blown his ranks into the air,
And, like the devil, from his very arm
Puff'd his own brother; and can he be angry?
Something of moment then; I will go meet him.
There's matter in 't indeed, if he be angry.
Des. I prithee, do so.

Exit Iago.

Something, sure, of state;
Either from Venice, or some unhatch'd practice
Made demonstrable here in Cyprus to him,
Hath puddled his clear spirit; and in such case
Men's natures wrangle with inferior things,
Though great ones are their object. 'Tis even so;
For let our finger ache, and it itches
Our other healthful members ev'n to that sense
Of pain. Nay, we must think men are not gods,
Nor of them look for such observancy
As fits the bridal. Beshrew me much, Emilia,
I was, unsighsome warrior as I am,
Arraigning his unkindness with my soul;
But now I find I had suborn'd the witness,
And he's indicted falsely.
Emil. Pray heaven it be state-matters, as you think,
And no conception nor no jealous toy
Concerning you.
Des. Alas the day! I never gave him cause
Emil. But jealous souls will not be answer'd so.
They are not ever jealous for the cause,
But jealous for they are jealous; 'tis a monster
Begot upon itself, born on itself.
Des. Heaven keep that monster from Othello's mind!
Emil. Lady, amen.
Des. I will go seek him. Cassio, walk here about;
The devil their virtue tempts, and they tempt heaven.

Iago. If they do nothing, 'tis a venial slip;
But if I give my wife a handkerchief,—

Oth. What then?

Iago. Why, then, 'tis hers, my lord; and, being hers,
She may, I think, bestow 't on any man.

Oth. She is protectress of her honour too;
May she give that?

Iago. Her honour is an essence that's not seen;
They have it very oft that have it not:
But for the handkerchief,—

Oth. By heaven, I would most gladly have forgot it.

Thou said'st,—O! it comes o'er my memory,
As doth the raven o'er the infected house,
Boding to all,—he had my handkerchief.

Iago. Ay, what of that?

Oth. That's not so good now.

Iago. What

If I had said I had seen him do you wrong?
Or heard him say, as knaves be such abroad,
Who having, by their own importunate suit,
Or voluntary dotage of some mistress,
Convinced or supplied them, cannot choose
But they must blab.

Oth. Hath he said any thing?

Iago. He hath, my lord; but be you well assur'd,

No more than he'll unswear.

Oth. What hath he said?

Iago. Faith, that he did—I know not what he did.

Oth. What? what?

Iago. Lie—

Oth. With her?

Iago. With her, on her; what you will.

Oth. Lie with her! lie on her! We say lie on her when they believe her. Lie with her! that's fulsome. Handkerchief,—confessions,—handkerchief. To confess, and be hanged for his labour. First, to be hanged, and then to confess: I tremble at it. Nature would not invest herself in such shadowing passion without some instruction. It is not words that shakes me thus. Pish! Noses, ears, and lips. Is't possible? Confess!—Handkerchief!—O devil!—

Falls in a trance.

Iago. Work on,

My medicine, work! Thus credulous fools are caught;
And many worthy and chaste dames even thus,
All guiltless, meet reproach. What, ho! my lord!

My lord, I say! Othello!

Enter Cassio.

How now, Cassio!

Cas. What's the matter?

Iago. My lord is fall'n into an epilepsy;
This is his second fit; he had one yesterday.

Cas. Rub him about the temples.

Iago. No, forbear;
The lethargy must have his quiet course,
If not he foams at mouth, and by and by Breaks out to savage madness. Look! he stirs;
Do you withdraw yourself a little while,
He will recover straight; when he is gone,
I would on great occasion speak with you.

Exit Cassio.

How is it, general? have you hurt your head?

Oth. Dost thou mock me?

Iago. I mock you! no, by heaven.

Would you have your fortune like a man!

Oth. A horned man's a monster and a beast.

Iago. There's many a beast then in a populous city, and many a civil monster.

Oth. Did he confess it?

Iago. Good sir, be a man; Think every bearded fellow that's but yok'd may draw with you; there's millions now alive That nightly lie in those improper beds Which they dare swear peculiar; your case is better.

O! 'tis the spite of hell, the fiend's arch-mock, To lip a wanton in a secure couch, And to suppose her chaste. No, let me know; And knowing what I am I know what she shall be.

Oth. O! thou art wise; 'tis certain.

Iago. Stand you awhile apart; Confin yourself but in a patient list. Whilst you were here o'erwhelmed with your grief, A passion most unsuiting such a man, Cassio came hither; I shifted him away, And laid good sense upon your ecstasy:

Bade him anon return and here speak with me; The which he promises. Do but encave yourself, And mark the fleers, the gibes, and notable scorns, That dwell in every region of his face; For I will make him tell the tale anew, Where, how, how oft, how long ago, and when He hath, and is again to cope your wife: I say, but mark his gesture. Marry, patience; Or I shall say you are all in all in spleen, And nothing of a man.

Oth. Dost thou hear, Iago? I will be found most cunning in my patience; But, dost thou hear? most bloody.

Iago. That's not amiss; But yet keep time in all. Will you withdraw?

Othello goes apart.

How will I question Cassio of Bianca, A housewife that by selling her desires Buys herself bread and clothes; it is a creature That dotes on Cassio; as 'tis the strumpets' plague To beguile many and be beguil'd by one. He, when he hears of her, cannot refrain From the excess of laughter. Here he comes:

Re-enter Cassio.

As he shall smile, Othello shall go mad; And his unbookish jealousy must construe Poor Cassio's smiles, gestures, and light behaviour Quite in the wrong. How do you now, lieutenant? Cas. The worser that you give me the addition Whose want even kills me.

Iago. Ply Desdemona well, and you are sure on't.

Speaking lover. Now, if this suit lay in Bianca's dover.

How quickly should you speed!

Cas. Alas! poor caitiff.

Oth. Look! how he laughs already.

Iago. I never knew woman love man so.

Cas. Alas! poor rogue, I think, I faith, she loves me.

Oth. Now he denies it faintly, and laughs it out.

Iago. Do you hear, Cassio?

Oth. Now he imports him to tell it o'er. Go to; well said, well said.

Iago. She gives it out that you shall marry her;

Do you intend it?

Cas. Ha, ha, ha!

Oth. Do you triumph, Roman? do you triumph?

Cas. I marry her! what! a customer? prithee, bear some charity to my wit; do not think it so unwholesome. Ha, ha, ha!

Oth. So, so, so, so. They laugh that win.

Iago. Faith, the cry goes that you shall marry her.

Cas. Prithee, say true.

Iago. I am a very villain else.

Oth. Have you scored me? Well.

Cas. This is the monkey's own giving out she is persuaded I will marry her, out of her own love and flattery, not out of my promise.

Oth. Iago beckons me; now he begins the story.

Cas. She was here even now; she haunts me in every place. I was the other day talking of the sea bank with certain Venetians, and thither comes the bawble, and, by this hand, she falls me thus about my neck:—

Oth. Crying 'O dear Cassio!' as it were; his gesture imports it.

Cas. So hangs and lolls and weeps upon me, so hates and pulls me; ha, ha, ha!

Oth. Now he tells how she plucked him to my chamber. O! I see that nose of yours, but not that dog I shall throw it to.

Cas. Well, I must leave her company.

Iago. Before me! look, where she comes.

Cas. 'Tis such another fitchew! marry, a perfumed one.

Enter Bianca.

What do you mean by this haunting of me?

Bian. Let the devil and his dam haunt you! What did you mean by that same handkerchief you gave me even now? I was a fine fool to take it. I must take out the work! A likely piece of work, that you should find it in your chamber, and know not who left it there! This is some minx's token, and I must take out the work! There, give it your hobby-horse; where-soever you had it I'll take out no work on't.

Cas. How now, my sweet Bianca! how now, how now!

Oth. By heaven, that should be my handkerchief!

Bian. An you'll come to supper to-night, you may; an you will not, come when you are next prepared for.

Exit.

Iago. After her, after her.

Cas. Faith, I must; she'll rail in the street else.

Iago. Will you sup there?

Cas. Faith, I intend so.

Iago. Well, I may chance to see you, for I would very fain speak with you.

Cas. Prithee, come; will you?

Iago. Go to; say no more. Exit Cassio.

Oth. Advancing. How shall I murder him, Iago?
Iago. Did you perceive how he laughed at his wit?
Oth. O ! Iago.
Iago. And did you see the handkerchief?
Oth. Was that mine?
Iago. Yours, by this hand; and to see how I prize the foolish woman, your wife! she saw it, and she hath given it her whore.
Oth. I would have him nine years a-killing, fine woman! a fair woman! a sweet woman!
Iago. Nay, you must forget that.
Oth. Ay, let her rot, and perish, and be mamed to-night; for she shall not live. No, I'll turn my heart to stone; I strike it, and it rts my hand. O! the world hath not a fiercer creature; she might lie by an emperor's bed and command him tasks.
Iago. Nay, that's not your way.
Oth. Hang her! I do but say what she is, delicate with her needle! An admirableaisian! O! she will sing the savageness out of a bear. Of so high and plenteous wit and invention—Iago. She's the worse for all this.
Oth. O! a thousand, a thousand times. And, oh, of so gentle a condition!
Iago. Ay, too gentle.
Oth. Nay, that's certain; but yet the pity of it—
Iago! O! Iago, the pity of it, Iago.
Iago. If you are so fond over her iniquity, set her patent to offend; for, if it touch not her, it comes near nobody.
Oth. I will chop her into messes. Cuckold me!
Iago. O! 'tis foul in her.
Oth. With mine officer!
Iago. That's fouler.
Oth. Get me some poison, Iago; this night: I do not expostulate with her, lest her body and untye my mind again. This night, Iago. Do it not with poison, strangle her in bed, even the bed she hath contaminated.
Oth. Good, good; the justice of it pleases; 'tis good.
Iago. And for Cassio, let me be his under-er; you shall hear more by midnight.
A trumpet within.
Oth. Excellent good. What trumpet is that we?
Iago. Something from Venice, sure. 'Tis Lodovico,
From the duke; and, see, your wife is with him.

INTER LODOVICO, DESDEMONA, AND ATTENDANTS.

Lod. God save the worthy general!
Oth. With all my heart, sir.
Lod. The duke and senators of Venice greet you.
Gives him a packet.
Oth. I kiss the instrument of their pleasures.
Opens the packet, and reads.
Des. And what's the news, good cousin Lodovico?
Iago. I am very glad to see you, signior;
I came to Cyprus.
Lod. I thank you. How does Lieutenant Cassio?
Iago. Lives, sir.
Des. Cousin, there's fall'n between him and my lord.

An unkind breach; but you shall make all well.
Oth. Are you sure of that?
Des. My lord?
Oth. This fault you not to do, as you will—
Lod. He did not call; he's busy in the paper.
Is there division 'twixt my lord and Cassio?
Des. A most unhappy one; I would do much To atone them, for the love I bear to Cassio.
Oth. Fire and brimstone!
Des. My lord?
Oth. Are you wise?
Des. What! is he angry?
Lod. May be the letter mov'd him;
For, as I think, they do command him home, Deputing Cassio in his government.
Des. Trust me, I am glad on 't.
Oth. Indeed!
Des. My lord?
Oth. I am glad to see you mad.
Des. Why, sweet Othello!
Oth. Devil!
Strikes her.
Des. I have not deserv'd this.
Lod. My lord, this would not be believ'd in Venice.
Though I should swear I saw 't; 'tis very much; Make her amends, she weeps.
Oth. O devil, devil!
If that the earth could teem with woman's tears, Each drop she falls would prove a crocodile.
Out of my sight!
Des. I will not stay to offend you. Gone.
Lod. Truly, an obedient lady;
I do beseech your lordship, call her back.
Oth. Mistress!
Des. My lord?
Oth. What would you with her, sir?
Lod. Who, I, my lord?
Oth. Ay; you did wish that I would make her turn:
Sir, she can turn, and turn, and yet go on, And turn again; and she can weep, sir, weep; And she's obedient, as you say, obedient, Very obedient. Proceed you in your tears. Concerning this, sir,—O well-painted passion!—I am commanded home. Get you away; I'll send for you anon. Sir, I obey the mandate, And will return to Venice. Hence! avoant!
Exit DESDEMONA.
Cassio shall have my place. And, sir, to-night, I do entreat that we may sup together;
You are welcome, sir, to Cyprus. Goats and monkeys!
Exit.
Lod. Is this the noble Moor whom our full senate
Call all-in-all sufficient? Is this the nature Whom passion could not shake? whose solid virtue
The shot of accident nor dart of chance
Could neither graze nor pierce?
Iago. He is much chang'd.
Lod. Are his wits safe? is he not light of brain?
Iago. He's that he is; I may not breathe my censure.
What he might be, if what he might he is not, I would to heaven he were!
Lod. What! strike his wife! en.
Iago. Faith, that was not so well; yet would I knew
That stroke would prove the worst.

Oth. Is it his use?

Iago. Or did the letters work upon his blood,
And new-create this fault?

Oth. Alas, alas!

Iago. It is not honesty in me to speak
What I have seen and known. You shall observe him,
And his own courses will denote him so That I may save my speech. Do but go after
And mark how he continues.

Iago. I am sorry that I am deceiv'd in him.

Exit.

Scene II.—A Room in the Castle.

Enter Othello and Emilia.

Oth. You have seen nothing then?

Emil. Nor ever heard, nor ever did suspect.

Oth. Yes, you have seen Cassio and she to-gether.

Emil. But then I saw no harm, and then I heard
Each syllable that breath made up between them.

Oth. What! did they never whisper?

Emil. Never, my lord.

Oth. Nor send you out o' the way?

Emil. Never.

Oth. To fetch her fan, her gloves, her mask, nor nothing?

Emil. Never, my lord.

Oth. That's strange.

Emil. I durst, my lord, to wager she is honest,
Lay down my soul at stake: if you think other,
Remove your thought; it doth abuse your bosom.

If any wretch hath put this in your head,
Let heaven requite it with the serpent's curse!
For, if she be not honest, chaste, and true,
There's no man happy; the purest of their wives
Is fool as slander.

Oth. Bid her come hither; go.

Exit EMILIA.

She says enough; yet she's a simple bawd,
That cannot say as much. This is a subtle whore,
A closet lock and key of villainous secrets;
And yet she'll kneel and pray; I have seen her do't.

Re-enter EMILIA, with DESDEMONA.

Des. My lord, what is your will?

Oth. Pray, chuck, come hither.

Des. What is your pleasure?

Oth. Let me see your eyes;
Look in my face.

Des. What horrible fancy 's this?

Oth. To EMILIA. Some of your function, mistress;
Leave procuracy alone and shut the door;
Cough or cry 'em if any body come;
Your mystery, your mystery; nay, dispatch.

Exit EMILIA.

Des. Upon my knees, what doth your speech import?

I understand a fury in your words,
But not the words.

Oth. Why, what art thou?
I cry you mercy then;
look for that cunning whore of Venice at married with Othello. You, mistress, 90 at have the office opposite to Saint Peter, d’keep the gate of hell!

Re-enter Emilia.

You, you, ay, you!
I have done our course; there’s money for your pains:
pray you, turn the key and keep our counsel.

Exit.

Emila. Alas! what does this gentleman conceive?
how do you, madam? how do you, my good lady?

Des. Faith, half asleep.

Emila. Good madam, what’s the matter with my lord?

Des. With who?

Emila. Why, with my lord, madam.

Des. Who is thy lord?

Emila. He that is yours, sweet lady.

Des. I have none; do not talk to me, Emilia; cannot weep, nor answer have I none at what should go by water. Prithée, to-night
y on my bed my wedding sheets: remember:
I’d call thy husband hither.

Emila. Here’s a change indeed!

Exit.

Des. ‘Tis meet I should be us’d so, very meet.
ay have I been behav’d, that he might stick smallest opinion on my least misuse?

Re-enter Emilia with Iago.

Iago. What is your pleasure, madam? How is’t with you?

Des. I cannot tell. Those that do teach young babes
it with gentle means and easy tasks;
a might have child me so; for, in good faith,
am a child to chiding.

Iago. What’s the matter, lady?

Emila. Alas! Iago, my lord hath so bewor’d her, rown such despite and heavy terms upon her,
t true hearts cannot bear.

Des. Am I that name, Iago?

Iago. What name, fair lady?

Des. Such as she says my lord did say I was.

Iago. He call’d her whore; a beggar in his drink
b not have laid such terms upon his callat.

Iago. Why did he so?

Des. I do not know; I am sure I am none such.

Iago. Do not weep, do not weep. Alas the day!

Iago. Hath she soffor’d so many noble matches, her father and her country and her friends,
be call’d whore? would it not make one weep?

Des. It is my wretched fortune.

Iago. Beshrew him for’t!

ow comes this trick upon him?

Des. Nay, heaven doth know.

Emila. I will be hang’d, if some eternal villian, one busy and insinuating rogue,
one cogging cozening slave, to get some office, ave not devi’d this slander; I’ll be hang’d
else.

Iago. Fee! there is no such man; it is impossible.

Des. If any such there be, heaven pardon him!

Emila. A halter pardon him, and hell gnaw his bones!

Why should he call her whore? who keeps her company?
likelihood?
The Moor’s abus’d by some most villainous knave,
Some base notorious knave, some scurvy fellow.
O heaven! that such companions thou’dist un fold,
And put in every honest hand a whip
To lash the rascals naked through the world,
Even from the east to the west!

Iago. Speak within door.

Emila. O! tie upon them. Some such squire he was
That turn’d your wit the seamy side without,
And made you to suspect me with the Moor.

Iago. You are a fool; go to.

Des. O good Iago!

What shall I do to win my lord again?
Good friend, go to him; for, by this light
heaven,
I know not how I lost him. Here I kneel:
If e’er my will did trespass ’gainst his love,
Either in discourse of thought or actual deed,
Or that mine eyes, mine ears, or any sense,
Delighted them in any other form;
Or that I do not yet, and ever did;
And ever will, though he do shake me off
To beggarly divorcement, love him dearly, Comfort forswear me! Unkindness may do much;
And his unkindness may defeat my life,
But never taint my love. I cannot say ’whore’;
It does abhor me now I speak the word;
To do the act that might the addition earn
Not the world’s mass of vanity could make me.

Iago. I pray you, be content, ’tis but his humour;
The business of the state does him offence,
And he does chide with you.

Des. If ’twere no other,—

Iago. ’Tis but so, I warrant.

Trumpets.

Hark! how these instruments summon to supper;
The messengers of Venice stay the meat:
Go in, and weep not; all things shall be well.

Enter Desdemona and Emilia.

Enter Roderigo.

How now, Roderigo!

Rod. I do not find that thou dealst justly
with me.

Iago. What in the contrary?

Rod. Every day thou darest me with some device, Iago; and rather, as it seems to me now, keest from me all convenience than suppliest me with the least advantage of hope. I will indeed no longer endure it, nor am I yet per suaded to put up in peace what already I have foolishly suffered.

Iago. Will you hear me, Roderigo?

Rod. Faith, I have heard too much, for your words and performances are no kin together.

Iago. You charge me most unjustly.

Rod. With nought but truth. I have wasted myself out of my means. The jewels you have had from me to deliver to Desdemona would half have corrupted a votarist; you have told me she hath received them, and returned me expectations and comforts of sudden respect and acquaintance, but I find none.
Iago. Well; go to; very well.
Rod. Very well! go to! I cannot go to, man; nor 'tis not very well; by this hand, I say it is very scurvy, and begin to find myself fobbed in it.
Iago. Very well.
Rod. I tell you 'tis not very well. I will make myself known to Desdemona; if she will return me my jewels, I will give over my suit and repent my unlawful solicitation; if not, assure yourself I will seek satisfaction of you.
Iago. You have said now.
Rod. Ay, and I have said nothing but what I protest intention of doing.
Iago. Why, now I see there's mettle in thee, and even from this instant do build on thee a better opinion than ever before. Give me thy hand, Roderigo; thou hast taken against me a just just exception; but yet I protest I have felt most directly in thy affair.
Rod. It hath not appeared.
Iago. I grant indeed it hath not appeared, and thy suspicion is not without wit and judgment. But, Roderigo, if thou hast that in thee indeed, which I have greater reason to believe now than ever, I mean purpose, courage, and valour, this night show it: if thou the next night following enjoy not Desdemona, take me from this world with treachery and devise engines for my life.
Rod. Well, what is it? is it within reason and compass?
Iago. Sir, there is especial commission come from Venice to depute Cassio in Othello's place.
Rod. Is that true? why, then Othello and Desdemona return again to Venice.
Iago. O! no, he goes into Mauritania, and takes away with him the fair Desdemona, unless his abode be lingered here by some accident; wherein none can be so determinate as the removing of Cassio.
Rod. How do you mean, removing of him?
Iago. Why, by making him uncapable of Othello's place; knocking out his brains.
Rod. And that you would have me do?
Iago. Ay; if you dare do yourself a profit and a wrong. He sups to-night with a harlotry, and thither will I go to him; he knows not yet of his honourable fortune. If you will watch his going thence, which I will fashion to fall out between twelve and one, you may take him at your pleasure; I will be near to second your attempt, and he shall fall between us. Come, stand not amazed at it, but go along with me; I will show you such a necessity in his death that you shall think yourself bound to put it on him. It is now high supper-time, and the night grows to waste; about it.
Rod. I will hear further reason for this.
Iago. And you shall be satisfied.

SCENE III.—Another Room in the Castle.
Enter Othello, Lodovico, Desdemona, Emilia, and Attendants.

Lod. I do beseech you, sir, trouble yourself no further.
Oth. O! pardon me; 'twill do me good to walk.
ACT V.

SCENE I.—Cyprus. A Street.

Enter Iago and Roderigo.

_Iago._ Here, stand behind this bulk; straight will he come:

Wear thy good rapier bare, and put it home.

Quick, quick; fear nothing; I’ll be at thy elbow.

It makes us, or it mars us; think on that,
And fix most firm thy resolution.

_Rod._ Be near at hand; I may miscarry in’t.

_Iago._ Here, at thy hand: be bold, and take thy stand.

_RETires._

_Iago._ I have no great devotion to the deed;
And yet he has given me satisfying reasons:
’Tis but a man gone: forth, my sword; he dies.

_Iago._ I have rubb’d this young quaf almost to the sense,
And he grows angry. Now, whether he kill Caius,
Or Cassio him, or each do kill the other,
Every way makes my gain: live Roderigo,
He calls me to a restitution large
Of gold and jewels that I bobb’d from him,
As gifts to Desdemona:
It must not be: if Cassio do remain,
He hath a daily beauty in his life
That makes me ugly; and, besides, the Moor
May unfold me to him; there stand I in much peril.

No, he must die. But so: I hear him coming.

Enter Cassio.

_Rod._ I know his gait; ’tis he. Villain, thou diest!

Makes a pass at Cassio.

_Cos._ That thrust had been mine enemy indeed
But that my coat is better than thou know’st;
I will make proof of thine.

_Draws, and wounds Roderigo._

_O! I am slain._

_Cos._ I am maim’d for ever. Help, ho! murder! murder!

Falls.

Enter Othello, at a distance.

_Oth._ The voice of Cassio: Iago keeps his word.

_Rod._ O! villain that I am.

_Oth._ It is even so.

_Cos._ O, help! ho! light! a surgeon!

_Oth._ ’Tis he. O brave Iago, honest and just!
That hast such noble sense of thy friend’s wrong;
Thou teachest me. Minion, your dear lies dead,
And your unblest fate lies; strumpet, I come!

_Forth of my heart those charms, thine eyes, are blotted;
Thy bed lust-stain’d shall with lust’s blood be spotted._

Exit.
Enter Lodovico and Gratiano, at a distance.
Cas. What, ho! no watch! no passage? murder! murder!
Gra. 'Tis some mischance; the cry is very direful.
Cas. O, help!
Lod. Hark!
Rod. O wretched villain!
Lod. Two or three groan; it is a heavy night;
These may be counterfeiters; let's think 't unsafe
To come in to the cry without more help.
Rod. Nobody come? then shall I bleed to death.
Lod. Hark!

Re-enter Iago, with a light.
Gra. Here's one comes in his shirt, with light and weapons.
Iago. Who's there? whose noise is this that cries on murder?
Lod. We do not know.
Iago. Did not you hear a cry?
Cas. Here, here! for heaven's sake, help me!
Iago. What's the matter?
Gra. This is Othello's ancient, as I take it.
Lod. The same indeed; a very valiant fellow.
Iago. What are you here that cry so grievously?
Cas. Iago? O! I am spoil'd, undone by villains:
Give me some help.
Iago. O me, lieutenant! what villains have done this?
Cas. I think that one of them is hereabout,
And cannot make away.
Iago. O treacherous villains!
To Lodovico and Gratiano. What are you there? come in, and give some help!
Rod. O! help me here.
Cas. That's one of them.
Iago. O murderous slave! O villain!
Stabs Roderigo.
Rod. O damn'd Iago! O inhuman dog!
Iago. Kill men i' the dark! Where be these bloody thieves?

How silent is this town! Ho! murder! murder!
What may yon be? are you of good or evil?
Lod. As you shall prove us, praise us.
Iago. Signior Lodovico?
Lod. He, sir.
Iago. I cry you mercy. Here's Cassio hurt by villains.
Gra. Cassio!
Iago. How is't, brother?
Cas. My leg is cut in two.
Iago. Marry, heaven forbid!
Light, gentlemen; I'll bind it with my shirt.

Enter Bianca.
Bian. What is the matter, ho? who is 't that cried?
Iago. Who is 't that cried?
Bian. O my dear Cassio! my sweet Cassio!
O Cassio, Cassio, Cassio!
Iago. O notable strumpet! Cassio, may you suspect
Who they should be that have thus mangled you?
Cas. No.
Gra. I am sorry to find you thus; I have been to seek you.
Iago. Lend me a garter. So. O! for a chair.
To bear him easily hence.
Bian. Alas! he faints. O Cassio, Cassio, Cassio!
Iago. Gentlemen all, I do suspect this trash.
To be a party in this injury.
Patience awhile, good Cassio. Come, come.
Lend me a light. Know we this face or no?
Alas! my friend and my dear countryman,
Roderigo; no: yes, sure. O heaven! Roderigo.
Gra. What! of Venice?
Iago. Even he, sir; did you know him?
Gra. Know him? A
Iago. Signior Gratiano! I cry you gent pardon;
These bloody accidents must excuse my manner,
That so neglected you.
Gra. I am glad to see you.
Gra. Roderigo!
Iago. He, he, 'tis he. A chair brought? O! that's well said; the chair
Some good man bear him carefully from hence
I'll fetch the general's surgeon. To Bianc
For you, mistress, Save you your labour. He that lies slain her Cassio, Was my dear friend. What malice was betwix you? Cass. None in the world; nor do I know th
man.
Iago. To Bianca. What! look you pale? O bear him out o' the air.

CASSIO and RODERIGO are borne o
Stay you, good gentlemen. Look you pale mistress?
Do you perceive the ghastness of her eye?
Nay, if you stare, we shall hear more anon.
Behold her well; I pray you, look upon her:
Do you see, gentlemen? nay, guiltiness w
speak
Though tongues were out of use.

Enter Emilia.
Emil. 'Las! what's the matter? what's the mat matter, husband?
Iago. Cassio hath here been set on in the day
By Roderigo and fellows that are 'scap'd.
He's almost slain, and Roderigo dead.
Emil. Alas! good gentleman; alas! go Cassio.
Iago. This is the fruits of whoring. Prifhe
Emilia,
Go know of Cassio where he supp'd to-night.
To Bianca. What! do you shake at that?
Bian. He supp'd at my house; but I therefo shake not.
Iago. O! did he so? I charge you, go wil
me.
Emil. Fie! fie upon thee, strumpet!
Bian. I am no strumpet, but of life as hon
As you that thus abuse me.
Emil. As I'f o'h! fie upon the Iago. Kind gentlemen, let's go see poor Cass d'sid.
Come, mistress, you must tell an other tale.
Emilia, run you to the citadel,
Othello, banish me. This is the night that either makes me or fordoes me quite.

Exeunt.

Oth. It is the cause, it is the cause, my soul; and yet no name it to you, you chaste stars! Is the cause. Yet I'll not shed her blood, or scar that whiter skin of hers than snow, and smooth as monumental alabaster.

She must die; else she'll betray more men. She must die, and she'll put out the light: I quench thee, thou flaming minister, can again thy former light restore, could I repent me; but once put out thy light, you cunningst pattern of excelling nature, know not where is that Promethean heat can thy light relieve. When I have pluck'd the rose, cannot give it vital growth again, needs must wither: I'll smell it on the tree. Balmy breath, that dost almost persuade stice to break her sword! One more, one more.

thus when thou art dead, and I will kill thee, and love thee after. One more, and this the last: sweet was never so fatal. I must weep, at they are cruel tears; this sorrow's heavenly, strikes where it doth love. She wakes.

Des. Who's there? Othello?

Oth. Ay, Desdemona.

Des. Will you come to bed, my lord?

Oth. Have you pray'd to-night, Desdemona?

Des. Ay, my lord. Oth. If you be think yourself of any crime reconcile'd as yet to heaven and grace, licit for it straight.

Des. Alas! my lord, what may you mean by that?

Oth. Well, do it, and be brief; I will walk by: would not kill thy unprepared spirit; o; heaven forfend! I would not kill thy soul.

Des. Talk you of killing?

Oth. Ay, I do.

Des. Then heaven save mercy on me!

Oth. Amen! with all my heart.

Des. If you say so, I hope you will not kill me.

Oth. Hum!

Des. And yet I fear you; for you are fatal then when your eyes roll so. Why should I fear I know not, since guiltiness I know not; but yet I fear I fear.

Oth. Think on thy sins.

Des. They are loves I bear to you.

Oth. Ay, and for that thou diest.

Des. That death's unnatural that kills for loving.

Alas! why gnaw you so your nether lip? some bloody passion shakes your very frame; these are portents, but yet I hope, I hope they do not point on me.

Oth. Peace, and be still! Des. I will so.

What's the matter?

Oth. That handkerchief which I so lov'd and gave thee.

Thou gav'st to Cassio.

Des. No, by my life and soul!

Send for the man and ask him.

Oth. Sweet soul, take heed, Take heed of perjury; thou art on thy death-bed.

Des. Ay, but not yet to die.

Oth. Yes, presently; Therefore confess thee freely of thy sin; For to deny each article with oath Cannot remove nor choke the strong conception That I do groan withal. Thou art to die.

Des. Then Lord have mercy on me!

Oth. I say, amen.

Des. And have you mercy too! I never did offend you in my life; never lov'd Cassio But with such general warranty of heaven As I might love; I never gave him token.

Oth. By heaven, I saw my handkerchief in his hand.

O perjur'd woman! thou dost stone my heart, And mak'st me call what I intend to do A murder, which I thought a sacrifice: I saw the handkerchief.

Des. He found it then; I never gave it him. Send for him hither; Let him confess a truth.

Oth. He hath confess'd.

Des. What, my lord?

Oth. That he hath us'd thee.

Des. How? unlawfully?

Oth. Ay.

Des. He will not say so.

Oth. No; his mouth is stopp'd: Honest Iago hath ta'en order for 't.

Des. O! my fear interprets. What! is he dead? Oth. Had all his hairs been lives, my great revenge Had stomach for them all.

Des. Alas! he is betray'd and I undone.

Oth. Out, strumpet! Weep'st thou for him to my face?

Des. O! banish me, my lord, but kill me not.

Oth. Down, strumpet!

Des. Kill me to-morrow; let me live to-night.

Oth. Nay, if you strive,—

Des. But half an hour!

Oth. Being done, there is no pause.

Des. But while I say one prayer.

Oth. It is too late. He snatches her.

Emil. Within. My lord, my lord! what, ho! my lord, my lord!

Oth. What noise is this? Not dead? not yet quite dead?

I that am cruel am yet merciful; I would not have thee linger in thy pain.

So, so.

Emil. Within. What, ho! my lord, my lord!

Oth. Who's there?

Emil. Within. O! good my lord, I would speak a word with you.

Oth. Yes; 'tis Emilia: by and by. She's dead. 'Tis like she comes to speak of Cassio's death; The noise was high. Ha! no more moving? Still as the grave. Shall she come in? Were't good?

I think she stirs again: no. What's best to do? If she come in she'll sure speak to my wife:
My wife! my wife! what wife? I have no wife:
O, insupportable! O heavy hour!
Methinks it should be now a huge eclipse
Of sun and moon, and that the afflicted globe
Should yawn at alteration.

Emil. Within. I do beseech you 10
I may speak with you. O! good my lord.
Oth. I had forgot thee. O! come in, Emilia.
Soft, by and by: let me the curtains draw.
Where art thou? Unlocks the door.

Enter Emilia.

What's the matter with thee now?

Emil. O! my good lord, yonder's foul murder done.

Oth. What! now?

Emil. But now, my lord.

Oth. It is the very error of the moon;
She comes more nearer earth than she was wont,
And makes men mad. 111

Emil. Cassio, my lord, has kill'd a young Venetian Cal'd Roderigo.

Oth. Roderigo kill'd! And Cassio kill'd!

Emil. No, Cassio is not kill'd.

Oth. Not Cassio kill'd! Then murder's out of tune,
And sweet revenge grows harsh.

Des. O! falsely, falsely murder'd.

Emil. Alas! what cry is that?

Oth. That! what?

Emil. Out, and alas! that was my lady's voice:
Help! help, ho! help! O lady, speak again! 120
Sweet Desdemona! O! sweet mistress, speak.

Des. A guiltless death I die.

Emil. O! who hath done this deed?

Des. Nobody; I myself; farewell:
Commend me to my kind lord. O! farewell! Dies.

Oth. Why, how should she be murder'd?

Emil. Alas! who knows?

Oth. You heard her say herself it was not I.

Emil. She said so; I must needs report the truth.

Oth. She's like a liar gone to burning hell;
'Twas I that kill'd her.

Emil. O! the more angel she,
And you the blacker devil. 131

Oth. She turn'd to folly, and she was a whore.

Emil. Thou dost believe her, and thou art a devil.

Oth. She was false as water.

Emil. Thou art rash as fire to say
That she was false: O! she was heavenly true.

Oth. Cassio did thep her; ask thy husband else.

O! I were damned 'beneath all depth in hell
But that I did proceed upon just grounds
To this extremity. Thy husband knew it all.

Emil. My husband!

Oth. Thy husband.

Emil. That she was false to wedlock?

Oth. Ay, with Cassio. Nay, had she been true,
If heaven would make me such another world
Of one entire and perfect chrysolite,
I'd not have sold her for it.

Emil. My husband!

Oth. Ay, 'twas he that told me first:
An honest man he is, and hates the slime
That sticks on filthy deeds.

Emil. My husband!
hose breath, indeed, these hands have newly stopp'd:
known this act shows horrible and grim.

Oth. Poor Desdemona! I am glad thy father's dead.

Iago. That match was mortal to him, and pure grief tore his old thread in twain: did he live now, his sight would make him do a desperate turn, a curse his better angel from his side, ac fall to reprobation.

Oth. 'Tis pitiful; but yet Iago knows that she with Cassio hath the act of shame thousand times committed; Cassio confess'd it: did she not gratify his amorous works with that recognition and pledge of love which I first gave her. I saw it in his hand: was a handkerchief, an antique token y father gave my mother.

Emili. O heaven! O heavenly powers!

Iago. Come, hold your peace.

Emili. Twill out, 'twill out; I hold my peace, sir; no;

* I, I will speak as liberal as the north; at heaven and men and devils, let them all, I, all, cry shame against me, yet I'll speak.

Iago. Be wise, and get you home.

Emili. I will not.

Iago offers to stab Emilia.

Fra. Sir, your sword upon a woman?

Emili. O thou dull Moor! that handkerchief thou speak'st of found by fortune and did give my husband; or often, with a solemn earnestness, once truth upon falsehood to such a trifle, as begg'd of me to steal it.

Iago. Villainous whore! 230

Emili. She give it Cassio! no, alas! I found it, and I did give 't my husband.

Iago. Filth, thou liest!

Emili. By heaven, I do not, I do not, gentlemen; murderous coxcomb! what should such a fool as with so good a woman an?

Oth. Are there no stones in heaven at what serve for the thunder? Precious villain! He runs at Iago: Iago stabs Emilia, and exit.

Fra. The woman falls; sure, he hath kill'd his wife.

Emili. Ay, ay. O! lay me by my mistress' side.

Fra. He's gone; but his wife's kill'd.

Montano. 'Tis a notorious villain. Take you this weapon, 240 hich I have here recover'd from the Moor. Some guard the door without; let him not pass, ut kill him rather. I'll after that same villain, or 'tis a damned slave.

Execut Montano and Gratiano.

Oth. I am not valiant neither; it every puny whipster gets my sword, it why should honour outlive honesty? it it go all.

Emili. What did thy song bode, lady? ark, canst thou hear me? I will play the swan, ad die in music .

Willow, willow, willow. 250

oar, she was chaste; she lov'd thee, cruel Moor; So come my soul to bliss as I speak true; So speaking as I think, I die, I die.

Oth. I have another weapon in this chamber; It is a sword of Spain, the ice-brook's temper. O! here it is. Uncle, I must come forth.

Fra. Within. If thou attempt it, it will cost thee dear: Thou hast no weapon, and perforce must suffer.

Oth. Look in upon me then, and speak with me, Or, naked as I am, I will assault thee.

Re-enter Gratiano.

Fra. What is the matter?

Oth. Behold! I have a weapon; A better never did itself sustain Upon a soldier's thigh: I have seen the day, That with this little arm, and this good sword, I have made my way through more impediments Than twenty times your stop: but, O vain boast! Who can control his fate? 'tis not so now. Be not afraid, though you do see me weapon'd; Here is my journey's end, here is my butt, And very sea-mark of my utmost sail. Do you go back dismay'd? 'tis a lost fear; Man but a rush against Othello's breast, And he retires. Where should Othello go? Now how dost thou look now? O ill-star'd wench! Pale as thy smock! when we shall meet at comp, This look of thine will hurl my soul from heaven, And fiends will snatch at it. Cold, cold, my girl! Even like thy chastity. O! cursed, cursed slave. Whip me, ye devils, From the possession of this heavenly sight! Blow me about in winds! roast me in sulphur! Wash me in steep-down gulfs of liquid fire! O Desdemona! Desdemona! dead! Oh! oh! oh!

Enter Lodovico, Montano, Cassio carried in a chair, and Officers with Iago, prisoner.

Lod. Where is this rash and most unfortunate man?

Oth. That's he that was Othello; here I am.

Lod. Where is that viper! bring the villain forth.

Oth. I look down towards his feet; but that's a fable:
If that thou be'st a devil, I cannot kill thee.

Wounds Iago.

Lod. Wrench his sword from him.

Iago. I bleed, sir; but not kill'd.

Oth. I am not sorry neither; I'd have thee live; For, in my sense, 'tis happiness to die.

Lod. O thou Othello! that wert once so good, Fall'n in the practice of a damned slave, What shall be said to thee?

Oth. Why, any thing: An honourable murderer, if you will; For nought did I in hate, but all in honour.

Lod. This wretch hath part confess'd his villany: Did you and he consent in Cassio's death?

Oth. Ay. 300

Cas. Dear general, I never gave you cause.

Oth. I do believe it, and I ask you pardon. Will you, I pray, demand that demi-devil Why he hath thus ensnarl'd my soul and body?

Iago. Demand me nothing: what you know, you know:

From this time forth I never will speak word.
Lod. What! not to pray?
Gra. Torments will ope your lips.
Oth. Well, thou dost best.
Lod. Sir, you shall understand what hath befall'n.
Which, as I think, you know not. Here is a letter
Found in the pocket of the slain Roderigo, 414
And here another; the one of them imports
The death of Cassio to be undertook
By Roderigo.
Oth. O villain!
Cas. Most heathenish and most gross!
Lod. Now here's another discontented paper,
Found in his pocket too; and this, it seems,
Roderigo meant to have sent this damned villain,
But that, belike, Iago in the interim
Came in and satisfied him.
Oth. O the pernicious caitiff!
How came you, Cassio, by that handkerchief 221
That was my wife's?
Cas. I found it in my chamber;
And he himself confess'd but even now
That there he dropp'd it for a special purpose
Which wrought to his desire.
Oth. O fool! fool! fool!
Cas. There is besides in Roderigo's letter
How he upbraids Iago that he made him
Brave me upon the watch; whereon it came
That I was cast: and even but now he spake,
After long seeming dead, Iago hurt him, 330
Iago set him on.
Lod. You must forsake this room and go
with us;
Your power and your command is taken off,
And Cassio rules in Cyprus. For this slave,
If there be any cunning cruelty
That can torment him much and hold him long,
It shall be his. You shall close prisoner rest,
Till that the nature of your fault be known
To the Venetian state. Come, bring him away.
Oth. Soft you; a word or two before you go.

I have done the state some service, and the
know't; 342
No more of that. I pray you, in your letters,
When you shall these unlucky deeds relate,
Speak of me as I am; nothing extemate,
Nor set down aught in malice: then must you
speak
Of one that lov'd not wisely but too well:
Of one not easily jealous, but, being wrought,
Perplex'd in the extreme; of one whose hand,
Like the base Indian, threw a pear away Richer than all his tribe; of one whose sub'd
eyes,
Albeit unused to the melting mood,
Drop tears as fast as the Arabian trees
Their medicinable gum. Set you down this;
And say besides, that in Aleppo once,
Where a malignant and a turban'd Turk
Beat a Venetian and traduc'd the state,
I took by the throat the circumcised dog,
And smote him, thus.  Stabs himself

Lod. O bloody period!
Gra. All that's spoke is marr'd;
Oth. I kiss'd thee ere I kill'd thee; no way but this, Falling upon DESDEMONA
Killing myself to die upon a kiss. Dies. 106
Cas. This did I fear, but thought he had no weapon;
For he was great of heart.
Lod. To IAGO.
O Spartan dog!
More fell than anguish, hunger, or the sea,
Look on the tragic loading of this bed:
This is thy work; he object poisons sight;
Let it be hid. Gratiano, keep the house,
And seize upon the fortunes of the Moor,
For they succeed on you. To you, lord governor
Remains the censure of this hellish villain, 27
The time, the place, the torture; O! enforce it Myself will straight aboard, and to the state
This heavy act with heavy heart relate.

Exeunt

SCENE.—In several parts of the Roman Empire.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Alexandria. A Room in Cleopatra’s Palace.

Enter Demetrius and Philo.

Phi. Nay, but this dotage of our general’s doth blow the measure; those his goodly eyes, that o’er the files and musters of the war Have glow’d like plated Mars, now bend, now turn, The office and devotion of their view Upon a tawny front; his captain’s heart, Which in the scuffles of great fights hath burst The buckles on his breast, reneges all temper, And is become the bellows and the fan To cool a gipsy’s lust. Look! where they come.

Flourish. Enter Antony and Cleopatra, with their Trains; Eunuchs fanning her.

Take but good note, and you shall see in him The triple pillar of the world transform’d Into a strumpet’s fool; behold and see.

Cleo. If it be love indeed, tell me how much.

Ant. There’s beggary in the love that can be reckon’d.

Cleo. I’ll set a bourn how far to be belov’d.

Ant. Then must thou needs find out new heaven, new earth.

Enter an Attendant.

Att. News, my good lord, from Rome.

Ant. Grates me; the sum. Cleo. Nay, hear them, Antony: Fulvia perchance is angry; or, who knows If the scarce-bearded Cæsar have not sent His powerful mandate to you, ‘Do this, or this; Take in that kingdom, and enfranchise that; Perform ’t, or else we damn thee.’

Ant. How, my love! Cleo. Perchance! nay, and most like: You must not stay here longer; your dismissal Is come from Cæsar; therefore hear it, Antony. Where’s Fulvia’s process? Cæsar’s I would say? both?

Call in the messengers. As I am Egypt’s queen, Thou blushest, Antony, and that blood of thine Is Cæsar’s homager; else so thy cheek pays shame When shrill-tongued Fulvia scolds. The messengers!

Ant. Let Rome in Tiber melt, and the wide arch Of the rang’d empire fall! Here is my space. Kingdoms are clay; our dungy earth alike Feeds beast as man; the nobleness of life Is to do thus; when such a mutual pair Embracing.

And such a twain can do’t, in which I bind, On pain of punishment, the world to weet We stand up peerless.
Cleo. Excellent falsehood! Why did he marry Fulvia and not love her? I'll seem the fool I am not; Antony will be himself. But stirr'd by Cleopatra. Now, for the love of Love and her soft hours, let's not confound the time with conference.

There's not a minute of our lives should stretch without some pleasure now. What sport tonight? Cleo. Hear the ambassadors. Ant. Fie, wrangling queen! Whom every thing becomes, to chide, to laugh, To weep; whose every passion fully strives To make itself, in thee, fair and admir'd. No messenger; but thine, and all alone, To-night we'll wander through the streets and note the qualities of people. Come, my queen; last night you did desire it: speak not to us.

Antony and Cleopatra with their train.

Dem. Is Caesar with Antonius priz'd so slight? Phil. Sir, sometimes, when he is not Antony, He comes too short of that great property Which still should go with Antony.

Dem. I am full sorry That he approves the common liar, who Thus speaks of him at Rome; but I will hope Of better deeds to-morrow. Rest you happy!

Enter Enobarbus.

Cleo. Show him your hand.

Let me be married to three kings in a forenoon, and widow them all; let me have a child at fifty, to whom Herod of Jewry may do homage; find me to marry me with Octavius Caesar, and companion me with my mistress.

Sooth. You shall outlive the lady whom you serve.

Char. O excellent! I love long life better than figs.

Sooth. You have seen and prov'd a fairest former fortune Than that which is to approach. Char. Then, belike, my children shall have no names; prithee, how many boys and wenches must I have?

Sooth. If every of your wishes had a womb, And fertile every wish, a million. Char. Out, fool! I forgive thee for a witch. Alex. You think none but your sheets are privy to your wishes.

Char. Nay, come, tell Iris hers. Alex. We'll know all our fortunes. Eno. Mine, and most of our fortunes, tonight, shall be—drunk to bed. Iris. There's a palm presages chastity, if nothing else.

Char. 'En as the overflowing Nilus presageth fame. Iris. Go, you wild bedfellow, you cannot soothsay. Char. Nay, if an oily palm be not a fruitful prognostication, I cannot scratch mine ear. Prithee, tell her but a worky-day fortune. Sooth. Your fortunes are alike.

Char. But how? but how? give me particulars.

Sooth. I have said. Iris. Am I not an inch of fortune better than she?

Char. Well, if you were but an inch of fortune better than I, where would you choose it? Iris. Not in my husband's nose.

Char. Our worser thoughts heavens mend! Alexas,—come, his fortune, his fortune! O! let him marry a woman that cannot go, sweet Isis, I beseech thee; and let her die too, and give him a worse; and let worse follow worse, till the worst of all follow him laughing to his grave, fifty-fold a cuckold! Good Isis, hear me this prayer, though thou deny me a matter of more weight; good Isis, I beseech thee! Iris. Amen. Dear goddess, hear that prayer of the people! for, as it is a heart-breaking to see a handsome man loose-wived, so it is a deadly sorrow to behold a foul knave uncuckolded: therefore, dear Isis, keep decorum, and fortune him accordingly!

Char. Amen. Alex. Lo, now! if it lay in their hands to make me a cuckold, they would make themselves whores but they 'd do't.

Eno. Hush! here comes Antony. Char. Not he; the queen.

Enter Cleopatra.

Cleo. Saw you my lord?

Eno. No, lady.

Cleo. Was he not here?

Char. No, madam.
Cleo. He was dispos'd to mirth; but on the sudden Roman thought hath struck him. Enobarbus!
Eno. Madam!
Cleo. Seek him, and bring him hither. Where's Alexandria?
Alex. Here, at your service. My lord approaches.

Enter Antony with a Messenger and Attendants.
Cleo. We will not look upon him; go with us.

Exeunt Cleopatra, Enobarbus, Alexas, Iras, Charmian, Soothsayer, and Attendants.

Mess. Fulvia thy wife first came into the field.

Ant. Against my brother Lucius?

Mess. Ay: but soon that war had end, and the time's state ade friends of them, jointing their force against Caesar, these better issue in the war, from Italy pon the first encounter drave them.

Ant. Well, what worst?

Mess. The nature of bad news infects the teller.

Ant. When it concerns the fool or coward.

On: hings that are past are done with me. Titus
thus:
'Tho tells me true, though in his tale lie death,
him as he flatter'd.

Mess. Labienus, his is stiff news, hath with his Parthian force xtended Asia; from Euphrates is conquering banner shook from Syria o Lydia and to Ionion: whilst—
Ant. Antony, thou would'st say,—

Mess. O! my lord.

Ant. Speak to me home, mince not the general
tongue;
me Cleopatra as she is call'd in Rome;
all thou in Fulvia's phrase; and taunt my faults ith such full license as both truth and malice ave power to utter. O! then we bring forth weeds
Then our quick winds lie still; and our ills told us
as our caring. Fare thee well awhile.

Mess. At your noble pleasure. Exit.

Ant. From Sicyon, ho, the news! Speak there!

First Att. The man from Sicyon, is there such an one?
Second Att. He stays upon your will.

Ant. Let him appear.

these strong Egyptian fetters I must break,
lore myself in dotage.

Enter another Messenger.

What are you?

Second Mess. Fulvia thy wife is dead.

Ant. Where did she?

Second Mess. In Sicyon: for length of sickness, with what else more serious
mporteth thee to know, this bear.

Gives a letter.

Ant. Forbear me—

Exit Second Messenger.

There's a great spirit gone. Thus did I desire it:
What our contempt do often hurl from us
We wish it ours again; the present pleasure.
By revolution lowering, does become
The opposite of itself: she's good, being gone;
The hand could pluck her back that show'd her on.
I must from this enchanting queen break off;
Ten thousand harms, more than the ills I know.
My idleness doth hatch. How now! Enobarbus!

Re-enter Enobarbus.

Eno. What's your pleasure, sir?

Ant. I must with haste from hence.

Eno. Why, then, we kill all our women. We see how mortal an unkindness is to them; if they suffer our departure, death's the word.

Ant. I must be gone.

Eno. Under a compelling occasion let women die; it were pity to cast them away for nothing:
thou between them and a great cause they should be esteemed nothing. Cleopatra, catching but the least noise of this, dies instantly: I have seen her die twenty times upon so poor moment. I do think there is mettle in death which comits some loving act upon her, she hath such a celerity in dying.

Ant. She is cunning past man's thought.

Eno. Alack! sir, no; her passions are made of nothing but the finest part of pure love. We cannot call her winds and waters sighs and ears; they are greater storms and tempests than almanacs can report: this cannot be cun-ing in her; if it be, she makes a shower of rain
as well as Jove.

Ant. Would I had never seen her!

Eno. O, sir! you had then left unseen a wonderful piece of work, which not to have been blessed withal would have discredited your travel.

Ant. Fulvia is dead.

Eno. Sir?

Ant. Fulvia is dead.

Eno. Fulvia!

Ant. Dead.

Eno. Why, sir, give the gods a thankful sacri-face. When it pleaseth their deities to take the wife of a man from him, it shows to man the ailers of the earth; comforting therein, that when old robes are worn out, there are members to make new. If there were no more women but Fulvia, then had you indeed a cut, and the case to be lamented: this grief is crowned with consolation; your old smock brings forth a new petticoat; and indeed the tears live in an onion that should water this sorrow.

Ant. The business she hath broached in the state
Cannot endure my absence.

Eno. And the business you have broached here cannot be without you; especially that of Cleopatra's, which wholly depends on your abodes.

Ant. No more light answers. Let our officers
Have notice what we purpose. I shall break
The cause of our expedience to the queen,
And get her leave to part. For not alone
The death of Fulvia, with more urgent touches,
Do strongly speak to us, but the letters too Of many of our contriving friends in Rome Petition us at home. Sextus Pompeius Hath given the dare to Caesar, and commands The empire of the sea; our slippery people, Whose love is never link'd to the deserver Till his deserts are past, begin to throw Pompey the Great and all his dignities Upon his son; who, high in name and power, Higher than both in blood and life, stands up For the main soldier, whose quality, going on, The sides o' the world may danger. Much is breeding, Which, like the courser's hair, hath yet but life, And not a serpent's poison. Say, our pleasure, To such whose place is under us, requires Our quick remove from hence.

\[ACT IV.\]

SCENE III.—The Same. Another Room.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, and Alexas.

Cleo. Where is he? Char. I did not see him since.

Cleo. See where he is, who's with him, what he does; I did not send you: if you find him sad, Say I am dancing; if in mirth, report That I am sudden sick: quick, and return.

Char. Madam, methinks if you did love him dearly, You do not hold the method to enforce The like from him.

Cleo. What should I do I do not? Char. In each thing give him way, cross him in nothing. Cleo. Thou teachest like a fool; the way to lose him. 20 Char. Tempt him not so too far; I wish, forbear: In time we hate that which we often fear.

Enter Antony.

Cleo. I am sick and sullen. Ant. I am sorry to give breathing to my purpose,— Cleo. Help me away, dear Charmian, I shall fail: It cannot be thus long, the sides of nature Will not sustain it.

Ant. Now, my dearest queen,— Cleo. Pray you, stand further from me. Ant. What's the matter? Cleo. I know, by that same eye, there's some good news.

What says the married woman! You may go: Would she had never given you leave to come! Let her not say 'tis I that keep you here; I have no power upon you; hers you are. Ant. The gods best know,— Cleo. O! never was there queen So mightily betray'd; yet at the first I saw the treasons planted.

Ant. Cleopatra,— Cleo. Why should I think you can be mine and true, Though you in swearing shake the throned gods, Who have been false to Fulvia? Riotous madness, To be entangled with those mouth-made vows, Which break themselves in swearing!

\[Ant. Most sweet queen,— Cleo. Nay, pray you, seek no colour for your going,\]

But bid farewell, and go: when you sned staying Then was the time for words; no going then: Eternity was in our lips and eyes, Bliss in our brows' bent; none our parts so poor But was a race of heaven; they are so still, Or thou, the greatest soldier of the world, Art turn'd the greatest liar.

\[Ant. How now, lady! Cleo. I would I had thy inches; thou should'st know\]

There were a heart in Egypt. Ant. Hear me, queen; The strong necessity of time commands Our services awhile, but my full heart Remains in use with you. Our Italy Shines o'er with civil swords; Sextus Pompeius Makes his approaches to the port of Rome; Equality of two domestic powers Breed scrupulous faction. The hated, grown to strength, Are newly grown to love; the condemn'd Pompey, Rich in his father's honour, creeps apace Into the hearts of such as have not thriv'd Upon the present state, whose numbers threaten; And quietness, grown sick of rest, would purge By any desperate change. My more particular And that which most with you should safe my going, Is Fulvia's death.

Cleo. Though age from folly could not give me freedom, It does from childhoodish: can Fulvia die? Ant. She's dead, my queen. Look here, and at thy sovereign leisure read The garboils she awak'd; at the last, best, See when and where she died.

Cleo. O most false love! Where be the sacred vials thou should'st fill With sorrowful water? Now I see, I see, In Fulvia's death, how mine receiv'd shall be. Ant. Quarrel no more, but be prepar'd to know The purposes I bear, which are or cease As you shall give the advice. By the fire That quickens Nillus' slime, I go from hence Thy soldier, servant, making peace or war As thou affect'st.

Cleo. Cut my lace, Charmian, come; But let it be: I am quickly ill, and well; So Antony loves.

\[Ant. My precious queen, forbear, And give true evidence to his love which stands An honourable trial.\]

Cleo. So Fulvia told me. I prithee, turn aside and wEEP for her; Then bid adieu to me, and say the tears Belong to Egypt: good now, play one scene Of excellent dissembling, and let it look Like perfect honour.

\[Ant. You'll heat my blood; no more. Cleo. You can do better yet, but this is meetly.\]

\[Ant. Now, by my sword,—\]
ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

ACT III.

Scene I.—Caesar’s House. A Room in Caesar’s House.

Enter OCTAVIUS CAESAR, LEPIDUS, and ATTENDANTS.

Caes. You may see, Lepidus, and henceforth know, is not Caesar’s natural wise to hate r greater competitor. From Alexandria is is the news: he fishes, drinks, and wastes ere lamps of night in revel; not more man-like Cleopatra, nor the queen of Ptolemy re womanly than he; hardly gave audience, or achsa’d to think he had partners: you shall here on who is the abstract of all faults at all men follow.

Lep. I must not think there are d now to darken all his goodness;
 faults in him seem as the spots of heaven, ry by night’s blackness; hereditary ther than purchas’d; what he cannot change an what he chooses.

Caes. You are too indulgent. Let us grant it not to tumble on the bed of Ptolemy, give a kingdom for a mirth, to sit keep the turn of tipping with a slave, reel the streets at noon, and stand the buffet knaves that smell of sweat; say this becomes him.

Ant. His composure must be rare indeed how these things cannot blemish, yet must

As his own state and ours, ’tis to be chid
As we rate boys, who, being mature in knowledge, awn their experience to their present pleasure,
And so rebel to judgment.

Enter a Messenger.

Lep. Here’s more news.

Mess. Thy biddings have been done, and every
Most noble Caesar, shalt thou have report
How ’tis abroad. Pompey is strong at sea,
And it appears he is below’d of those
That only have fear’d Caesar; to the ports
The discontentments repair, and men’s reports
Give him much wrong’d.

Ces. I should have known no less. It
It hath been taught us from the primal state,
That he which is was wish’d until he were;
And the ebb’d man, ne’er lovd’tilline’r worth lov’d, Comes dear’d by being lack’d. This common
body,
Like to a vagabond flag upon the stream,
Goes to and back, lackeying the varying tide,
To rot itself with motion.

Mess. Caesar, I bring thee word,
Menecrates and Menas, famous pirates,
Make the sea serve them, which they ear and wound
With keels of every kind: many hot inroads
They make in Italy; the borders maritime
Lack blood to think on’t, and flush youth revolt;
No vessel can peep forth, but ’tis as soon
Taken as seen; for Pompey’s name strikes more Than could his war resisted.

Ant. Antony,
Leave thy lascivious wassails. When thou once
Wast beaten from Modena, where thou slewst
Hirtius and Pansa, consuls, at thy heel
Did famine follow, whom thou fought’st against,
Though dauntly brought up, with patience more
Than savages could suffer; thou didst drink
The stale of horses and the gilded puddle
Which beasts would cough at; thy palate then did deign
The roughest berry on the rudest hedge;
Yea, like the stag, when snow the pasture sheets,
The banks of trees thou browsed’st; on the Alps
It is reported thou didst eat strange flesh,
Which some did die to look on; and all this,
It wounds thine honour that I speak it now,
Was borne so like a soldier, that thy cheek
So much as lank’d not.

Lep. ’Tis pity of him.

Ces. Let his shames quickly
Drive him to Rome. ’Tis time we twain
Did show ourselves ’t the field; and to that end Assemble we immediate council; Pompey
Thrive in our idleness.

Ant. To-morrow, Caesar, I shall be furnish’d to inform you rightly Both what by sea and land I can be able
To front this present time.

Ces. Till which encounter, so

Lep. Farewell, my lord. What you shall know meanwhile
Of stirs abroad, I shall beseech you, sir,
To let me be partaker.

Ant. Doubt not, sir; I knew it for my bond.

Exeunt.
SCENE V.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iris, and Mardian.

Cleo. Charmian!
Char. Madam!
Cleo. Ha, ha!

Give me to drink mandragora.

Char. Why, madam?
Cleo. That I might sleep out this great gap of time.

My Antony is away.

Char. You think of him too much.
Cleo. O! 'tis treason.

Char. Madam, I trust, not so.
Cleo. Thou, eunuch Mardian!

Mar. What's your highness' pleasure?
Cleo. Not now to hear thee sing; I take no pleasure

In aught an eunuch has. 'Tis well for thee, That being unseem'd, thy freer thoughts

May not fly forth of Egypt. Hast thou affections?

Mar. Yes, gracious madam.
Cleo. Indeed!

Mar. Not in deed, madam; for I can do nothing
But what indeed is honest to be done;
Yet have I fierce affections, and think
What Venus did with Mars.

Cleo. O Charmian!

Where think'st thou he is now? Stands he, or sits he?

Or does he walk? or is he on his horse?

O happy horse, to bear the weight of Antony!

Do bravely, horse, for wott'st thou whom thou movest?

The demi-Atlas of this earth, the arm
And burgonet of men. He's speaking now,
Or murrining 'Where's my serpent of old Nile?'

For so he calls me. Now I feed myself
With most delicious poison. Think on me,

That am with Phoebus' amorous pinches black,
And wrinkled deep in time! Broad-fronted Caesar,

When thou wast here above the ground I was A morsel for a monarch, and great Pompey
Would stand and make his eyes grow in my brow;

There would he anchor his aspect and die
With looking on his life.

Enter Alexas.

Alex. Sovereign of Egypt, hail!
Cleo. How much unlike art thou Mark Antony!

Yet, coming from him, that great medicine hath
With his tinct gilded thee,
How goes it with my brave Mark Antony?

Alex. Last thing he did, dear queen,
He kiss'd, the last of many doubled kisses, This orient pearl. His speech sticks in my heart.

Cleo. Mine ear must pluck it thence.
Alex. 'Good friend,' quoth he,

'Say, the firm Roman to great Egypt sends This treasure of an oyster; at whose foot,

To mend the petty present, I will piece Her opulent throne with kingdoms; all at east,
Say thou, shall call her mistress.' So I nodded,
And soberly did mount an arm-gaunt steed, Who neigh'd so high that what I would have spoke

Was beastly dumb'd by him.

Cleo. What! was he sad or merry?
Alex. Like to the time o' the year betwixt the extremes Of hot and cold; he was nor sad nor merry.

Cleo. O well-divided disposition! Note him Note him, good Charmian, 'tis the man, b

He was not sad, for he would shine on those That make their looks by his; he was no merry,

Which seem'd to tell them his remembrance In Egypt with his joy; but between both: O heavenly mingle! Be'st thou sad or merry.

The violence of either thee becomes,
So does it no man else. Melt'st thou my post

Alex. Ay, madam, twenty several messenger Why do you send so thick?

Cleo. Who's born that do

When I forget to send to Antony,
Shall die a beggar. Ink and paper, Charmian
Welcome, my good Alexas. Did I, Charmian Ever love Caesar so?

Char. O that brave Caesar.
Cleo. Be chok'd with such another emphasis,
Say, the brave Antony.

Char. The valiant Caesar!

Alex. By Isis, I will give thee bloody teeth,
If thou with Caesar paragon again
My man of men.

Char. By your most gracious pardo I sing but after you.

Cleo. My salad days,
When I was green in judgment, cold in blood,
To say as I said then! But come, away;
Get me ink and paper:
He shall have every day a several greeting,
Or I'll unpeople Egypt.

Exit.

ACT II.

Enter Pompey, Menecrates, and Menas.

Pom. If the great gods be just, they sha assist

The deeds of justest men.

Mene. Know, worthy Pompey
That what they do delay, they not deny.

Pom. Whiles we are suitors to their thron decays

The thing we sue for.

Mene. We, ignorant of ourselv

Beg often our own harms, which the wis
powers

Deny us for our good; so find we profit
By losing of our prayers.

Pom. I shall do well:
The people love me, and the sea is mine;
powers are crescent, and my auguring hope ys it will come to the full. Mark Antony 11 Egypt sits at dinner, and will make s wars without doors; Cæsar gets money
3 loses hearts; Lepidus flatters both, both is flattered; but he neither loves, or either cares for him.
Cæsar and Lepidus
in the field; a mighty strength they carry.
From Silvius, sir.
I know they are in Rome together, looking for Antony. But all the charms of love, Cleopatra, soften thy wan'd lip!
Witchcraft join with beauty, lust with both!
a up the libertine in a field of feasts, ep his brain fuming; Epicurean cooks
arpen with cloysless sauce his appetite, at sleep and feeding may procrase his honour
ren till a Lethë'd dulness!

Enter Varrius.
How now, Varrius!
Var. This is most certain that I shall deliver:
ark Antony is every hour in Rome pected; since he went from Egypt 'tis space for further travel.
I could have given less matter better ear. Menas, I did not think is amorous surfeiter would have donn'd his r such a petty war; his soldiery rice the other twain. But let us rear e higher our opinion, that our stirring n from the lap of Egypt's widow pluck ne'er-lust-wearied Antony.

I cannot hope
Cæsar and Antony shall well greet together;
wife that's dead did trespasses to Cæsar, brother warr'd upon him, although I think
'mov'd by Antony.
I know not, Menas,
w lesser enmities may give way to greater,
't not that we stand up against them all were pregnant they should square between themselves,
they have entertained cause enough draw their swords; but how the fear of us y cement their divisions and bind up e petty difference, we yet not know.
't as our gods will have 't! It only stands
't to seek and use our strongest hands, me, Menas.

Enter Enobarbus and Lepidus.
Lep. Good Enobarbus, 'tis a worthy deed, shall become you well, to entreat your captain
soft and gentle speech.
I shall entreat him
answer like himself: if Cæsar move him,
t Antony look over Cæsar's head,
'd speak as loud as Mars. By Jupiter,
Were we the wearers of Antonius' beard,
I would not shave 't to-day.
't is not a time
For private stomaching.
Every time
Serves for the matter that is then born in't.
Lep. But small to greater matters must give way.
Lep. Not if the small come first.
Lep. Your speech is passion;
But, pray you, stir no embers up. Here comes
The noble Antony.

Enter Antony and Ventidius.
And yonder, Cæsar.
Enter Cæsar, Mecenas, and Agrippa.
Ant. If we compose well here, to Parthia:
Hark ye, Ventidius.
I do not know,
Mecenas; ask Agrippa.
Noble friends,
That which combin'd us was most great, and let not
A leaner action rend us. What's amiss,
May it be gently heard; when we debate
Our trivial difference loud, we do commit
Murder in healing wounds; then, noble partners,
The rather for I earnestly beseech,
Touch you the sourest points with sweetest terms,
Nor curstness grow to the matter.
Ant.
'Tis spoken well.
Were we before our armies, and to fight,
I should do thus.
Welcome to Rome.
Ant. Thank you.
Sit.
Sit, sir.
Nay, then.
I learn, you take things ill which are not so,
Or being, concern you not.
I must be laugh'd at
If, or for nothing or a little, I Should say myself offended, and with you Chiefly 't the world; more laugh'd at that I should
Once name you derogately, when to sound your name
It not concern'd me.

My being in Egypt, Cæsar.
What's 't to you?
No more than my residing here at Rome
Might be to you in Egypt; yet, if you there
Did practise on my state, your being in Egypt
Might be my question.
How intend you, practis'd?
You may be pleas'd to catch at mine intent
By what did here befal me. Your wife and brother
Made wars upon me, and their contestation
Was theme for you, you were the word of war.
You do mistake your business; my brother never
Did urge me in his act: I did inquire it;
And have my learning from some true reports.
That drew their swords with you. Did he not rather
Discredit my authority with yours,
And make the wars alike against my stomach,
Having alike your cause! Of this my letters
Before did satisfy you. If you’ll patch a quarrel,
As matter whole you have not to make it with,
It must not be with this.

You praise yourself
By laying defects of judgment to me, but you patch’d up your excuses.

Not so, not so; 90
I know you could not lack, I am certain on’t,
Very necessity of this thought, that I,
Your partner in the cause ’gainst which he fought,
Could not with graceful eyes attend those wars
Which fronted mine own peace. As for my wife,
I would you had her spirit in such another:
The third o’ the world is yours, which with a snaffle
You may pace easy, but not such a wife.

Would we had all such wives, that the men might go to wars with the women! 70

So much uncurbable, her garbolls, Caesar,
Made out of her impatience, which not wanted
Shrewdness of policy too, I grieving grant
Did you too much disquiet; for that you must
But say I could not help it.

I wrote to you
When rioting in Alexandria; you
Did pocket up my letters, and with taunts
Did give my missive out of audience.

Sir,
He fell upon me ere admitted: then
Three kings I had newly feasted, and did want
Of what I was ’t the morning; but next day
I told him of myself, which was as much
As to have ask’d him pardon. Let this fellow
Be nothing of our strife; if we contend,
Out of our question wipe him.

You have broken
The article of your oath, which you shall never Have tongue to charge me with.

Soft, Caesar!
No

Lepidus, let him speak:
The honour’s sacred which he talks on now,
Supposing that I lack’d it. But on, Caesar; 90
The article of my oath.

To lend me arms and aid when I require’d them.

The which you both denied.

Neglected, rather;
And then when poison’d hours had bound me up
From mine own knowledge. As nearly as I may,
I’ll play the penitent to you; but mine honesty
Shall not make poor my greatness, nor my power
Work without it. Truth is, that Fulvia,
To have me out of Egypt, made wars here;
For which myself, the ignorant motive, do
So far ask pardon as befits mine honour
To stoop in such a case.

’Tis noble spoken.

If it might please you, to enforce no further
The griefs between ye: to forget them quite
Were to remember that the present need
Speaks to atone you.

Worthily spoken, Mecenas.

Or, if you borrow one another’s love for the instant, you may, when you hear no more words of Pompey, return it again: you shall have time to wrangle in when you have nothing else to do.

You are a soldier only; speak no more
That truth should be silent I had almost forgot.

You wrong this presence; therefore speak
no more.

Go to, then; your considerate stone.

I do not much dislike the matter, but
The manner of his speech; for ’tis not to be
We shall remain in friendship, our conditions
So differing in their acts. Yet, if I knew What hoop should hold us stanch, from edge
O’ the world I would pursue it.

Give me leave, Caesar.

Speak, Agrippa.

Thou hast a sister by the mother’s side
Admir’d Octavia; great Mark Antony
Is now a widower.

Say not so, Agrippa;
If Cleopatra heard you, your reproof
Were well deserv’d of rashness.

I am not married, Caesar; let me hear
Agrippa further speak.

To hold you in perpetual amity,
To make you brothers, and to knit your heart
With an unsliping knot, take Antony
Octavia to his wife; whose beauty claims
No worse a husband than the best of men,
Whose virtue and whose general graces speak
That which none else can utter. By tl marriage,

All little jealousies which now seem great,
And all great fears which now import the dangers,
Would then be nothing; truths would be told
Where now half tales be truths; her love to be
Would each to other and all loves to both Draw after her. Pardon what I have spoke,
For ’tis a studied, not a present thought,
By duty ruminated.

Will Caesar speak?

Not till he hears how Antony is touch’d
With what is spoke already.

What power is in Agrippa,
If I would say, ‘Agrippa, be it so,’
To make this good?

The power of Caesar, an
His power unto Octavia.

May I never
To this good purpose, that so fairly shows,
Dream of impediment! Let me have thy hand
Further this act of grace, and from this hour
The heart of brothers govern in our loves
And sway our great designs!

There is my hand
A sister I bequeath you, whom no brother
Did ever love so dearly; let her live
To join our kingdoms and our hearts, and never fly
Off our loves again!

Happily, amen!

I did not think to draw my sword ’gainst

Pompey,
For he hath laid strange courtesies and great
Of late upon me; I must thank him only,
Lest my remembrance suffer ill report;
At heel of that, defy him.

Time calls upon

Of us must Pompey presently be sought,
Or else he seeks us out.

Where lies he?
Ces. About the Mount Misenum.

Ant. What is his strength of land?

Ces. Great and increasing; but by sea he is an absolute master.

Ant. So is the fame. Would we had spoke together! Haste we for it; let, ere we put ourselves in arms, dispatch we the business we have talk’d of.

Ces. With most gladness; and do invite you to my sister’s view, Whither straight I’ll lead you.

Ant. Let us, Lepidus, not lack your company.

Lep. Noble Antony, let sickness should detain me.

Mec. Welcome from Egypt, sir.

Eno. Half the heart of Cæsar, worthy Mecenas! My honourable friend, Agrippa!

Agr. Good Enobarbus!

Mec. We have cause to be glad that matters are so well digested. You stayed well by’t in Egypt.

Eno. Ay, sir; we did sleep day out of countenance, and made the night light with drinking. Mec. Eight wild bears roasted whole at a reafkast, and but twelve persons there; is this true?

Eno. This was but as a fly by an eagle; we ad much more monstrous matter of feast, which worthily deserved noting.

Mec. She’s a most triumphant lady, if report square to her.

Eno. When she first met Mark Antony she urs’d up his heart, upon the river of Cydnus.

Agr. There she appeared indeed, or my reporter devised well for her.

Eno. I will tell you.

The barge she sat in, like a burnish’d throne, burn’d on the water; the poop was beaten gold, turples the sails, and so perfumed that the winds were love-sick with them, the ears were silver, Which to the tune of flutes kept stroke, and made the water which they beat to follow faster, as amorous of their strokes. For her own person, t beggar’d all description; she did lie in her pavilion, cloth-of-gold of tissue, per-picturing that Venus where we see the fancy outwork nature; on each side her stood pretty dimpled boys, like smiling Cupids, with divers-colour’d fans, whose wind did seem to glow the delicate cheeks which they did cool, and what they undid did.

Eno. Her gentlewomen, like the Nereides, so many mermaids, tending her the eyes, and made their bents adornments; at the helm seeming mermaid steers; the silken tackle well with the touches of those flower-soft hands, that rarely frame the office. From the barge a strange invisible perfume hits the sense of the adjacent wharfs. The city cast her people out upon her, and Antony, Enthron’d i’ the market-place, did sit alone, Whistling to the air; which, but for vacancy, Had gone to gaze on Cleopatra too And made a gap in nature.

Agr. Rare Egyptian!

Eno. Upon her landing Antony sent to her, Invited her to supper; she replied It should be better he became her guest, Which she entreated. Our courteous Antony, Whom ne’er the word of ‘No’ woman heard speak.

221 Being barber’d ten times o’er, goes to the feast, And for his ordinary pays his heart For what his eyes eat only.

‘Agr. Royal wench! She made great Cæsar lay his sword to bed; He plough’d her, and she crop’d.

Eno. I saw her once Hop forty paces through the public street; And having lost her breath, she spoke, and pant’d, That she did make defect perfection, And, breathless, power breathe forth.

Mec. Now Antony must leave her utterly.

Eno. Never; he will not.

Age cannot wither her, nor custom stale Her infinite variety; other women cloy The appetites they feed, but she makes hungry Where most she satisfies; for vilest things Become themselves in her, that the holy priests Bless her when she is riggish.

Mec. If beauty, wisdom, modesty, can settle The heart of Antony, Octavia is A blessed lottery to him.

Agr. Let us go.

Good Enobarbus, make yourself my guest Whilst you abide here.

Eno. Humbly, sir, I thank you. Exeunt.

Scene III.—The Same. A Room in Cæsar’s House.

Enter Cæsar, Antony, Octavia between them; Attendants.

Ant. The world and my great office will sometimes Divide me from your bosom.

Oct. All which time Before the gods my knee shall bow my prayers To them for you.

Ant. Good night, sir. My Octavia, Read not my blemishes in the world’s report; I have not kept my square, but that to come Shall all be done by the rule. Good night, dear lady.

Good night, sir.

Cæs. Good night.

Exeunt Cæsar and Octavia.

Enter Soothsayer.

Ant. Now, sirrah; you do wish yourself in Egypt!

Sooth. Would I had never come from thence, nor you Thither!

Ant. If you can, your reason?

Sooth. I see it in My motion, have it not in my tongue; but yet He to Egypt again.
ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

ACT IV.

Scene I.—The same. A Street.

Enter LEPIDUS, MECENAS, and AGrippa.

LEP. Trouble yourselves no further; pray you, hasten Your generals after.

AGR. Sir, Mark Antony Will e'en but kiss Octavia, and we'll follow.

LEP. Till I shall see you in your soldier's dress, Which will become you both, farewell.

Mec. We shall, As I conceive the journey, be at the Mount Before you, Lepidus.

LEP. Your way is shorter; My purposes do draw me much about: You'll win two days upon me.

Mec., AGR. Sir, good success! LEP. Farewell.

Scene V.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter CLEOPATRA, Charmian, Iras, and Alexas.

CLE. Give me some music; music, moody food Of us that trade in love. Attend.

The music, ho!

Enter MARDIAN.

CLE. Let it alone; let's to billiards: come, Charmian.

CHAR. My arm is sore; best play with Mardian.

CLE. As well a woman with an eunuch play As with a woman. Come, you'll play with my sir?

Mar. As well as I can, madam.

CLE. And when good will is show'd, though come too short,
The actor may plead pardon. I'll none now. Give me mine angle; we'll to the river: then My music playing far off, I will betray Tawny-finn'd fishes; my bended hook shall Pierce Their slimy jaws; and, as I draw them up, I'll think them every one an Antony, And say 'Ah, ha! you're caught.'

CHAR. Twas merry when You wager'd on your angling; when your dive Did hang a salt-fish on his hook, which he With fervency drew up.

CLE. That time—O times! I laugh'd him out of patience; and that night I laugh'd him into patience: and next morn, Ere the ninth hour, I drank him to his bed; Then put my tires and mantles on him, whilst I wore his sword Philippan.

Enter a Messenger.

MESS. O! from Italy; Ram thou thy fruitful tidings in mine ears, That long time have been barren.

CLE. Madam, madam.

CLE. Antony's dead! If thou say so, villain Thou kill'st thy mistress; but well and free, If thou so yield him, there is gold, and here My bluest veins to kiss; a hand that kings Have lipp'd, and trembled kissing.

MESS. First, madam, he is well.

CLE. Why, there's more gold But, sirrah, mark, we use To say the dead are well: bring it to that, The gold I give thee will I melt, and pour Down thy ill-uttering throat.

MESS. Good madam, hear me.

CLE. Well, go to, I will But there's no goodness in thy face; if Antony Be free and healthful, so tarm a favour To trumpet such good tidings! if not well, Thou should'st come like a Fury crown'd with snakes, Not like a formal man.

MESS. Will't please you hear me?

CLE. I have a mind to strike thee ere thou speakest:
Yet, if thou say Antony lives, is well, Or friends with Caesar, or not captive to him, I'll set thee in a shower of gold, and hail Rich pearls upon thee.

MESS. Madam, he's well.

CLE. Well said.

MESS. And friends with Caesar.

CLE. Thou'rt an honest man.

MESS. Caesar and hear great friends than ever Cesar Made thee a fortune from me.

MESS. But yet, madam,—

CLE. I do not like 'but yet,' it doth allay The good precedence; fie upon 'but yet'! 'But yet' is as a gnorin to bring forth Some monstrous malefactor. Prithole, friend, Pour out the pack of matter to mine ear, The good and bad together. He's friends with Caesar;
a state of health, thou say'st; and, thou say'st, free.

Mess. Free, madam! no; I made no such report: 'tis bound unto Octavia.

Cleo. For what good turn?

Mess. For the best turn i' the bed.

Cleo. I am pale, Charmian!

Mess. Madam, he's married to Octavia. 80

Cleo. The most infectious pestilence upon thee! Strikes him down.

Mess. Good madam, patience.

Cleo. What say you? Hence, Strikes him again.

orrible villain! or I'll burn thine eyes like balls before me; I'll unhair thy head: She hides him up and down.

hou shalt be whipp'd with wire, and strew'd in brine, marting in lingering pickle.

Mess. Gracious madam, that do bring the news made not the match.

Cleo. Say 'tis not so, a province I will give thee, and make thy fortunes proud; the blow thou hadst hall make thy peace for moving me to rage, and I will boot thee with what gift beside thy modesty can beg.

Mess. He's married, madam.

Cleo. Rogue! thou hast liv'd too long.

Draws a knife.

What mean you, madam? I have made no fault.

Exit.

Char. Good madam, keep yourself within yourself;

he man is innocent.

Cleo. Some innocents 'scape not the thunder-bolt.

Celt Egypt into Nile! and kindly creatures turn all to serpents! Call the slave again; though I am mad, I will not bite him. Call.

Char. He is afraid to come.

I will not hurt him.

Exit CHARMIAN.

These hands do lack nobility, that they strike meaner than myself; since I myself have given myself the cause.

Re-enter CHARMIAN and MESSENGER.

Come hither, sir.

though it be honest, it is never good to bring bad news; give to a gracious message at host of tongues, but let ill tidings tell themselves when they be felt.

Mess. I have done my duty.

Cleo. Is he married?

cannot hate thee worse than I do if thou again say 'Yes.'

Mess. He's married, madam.

Cleo. The gods confound thee! dost thou hold there still?

Mess. Should I lie, madam?

Cleo. O! I would thou didst, so half my Egypt were submerg'd and made a cistern for scald'd snakes. Go, get thee hence! hadst thou Narcissus in thy face, to me thou would'st appear most ugly. He is married?

Mess. I crave your highness' pardon.

Cleo. He is married?

Mess. Take no offence that I would not offend you.

To punish me for what you make me do Seems much unequal; he's married to Octavia.

Cleo. O! that his fault should make a knave of thee,

That art not what thou'rt sure of. Get thee hence;

The merchandise which thou hast brought from Rome Are all too dear for me; lie they upon thy hand, And be undone by 'em!

Exit MESSENGER.

Char. Good your highness, patience.

Cleo. In praising Antony I have disprais'd Caesar.

Char. Many times, madam.

Cleo. I am paid for not now. Lead me from hence.

I faint: O Iras! Charmian! 'Tis no matter. Go to the fellow, good Alexas; bid him Report the feature of Octavia, her years, Her inclination, let him not leave out The colour of her hair: bring me word quickly.

Exit ALEXAS.

Let him for ever go:—let him not—Charmian!—Though he be painted one way like a Gorgon, The other way's a Mars. To MARDIAN. Bid you Alexas Bring me word how tall she is. Pity me, Charmian, But do not speak to me. Lead me to my chamber.

Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—Near Misenum.

Flourish. Enter POMPEY and MENAS at one side, with drum and trumpet; at another, CESAR, ANTONY, LEPIDUS, ENOBARBUS, MECENAS, with Soldiers Marching.

Pom. Your hostages I have, so have you mine; And we shall talk before we fight.

Ces. Most meet That first we come to words, and therefore have we Our written purposes before us sent;

Which if thou hast consider'd, let us know If 'twill tie up thy discontented sword, And carry back to Sicily much tall youth That else must perish here.

Pom. To you all three. The senators alone of this great world, Chief factors for the gods, I do not know Wherefore my father should revengers want, Having a son and friends; since Julius Caesar, Who at Philippi the good Brutus ghosted, There saw you labouring for him. What was't That mov'd pale Cassius to conspire? and what Made the all-honour'd, honest Roman, Brutus, With the arm's rest, courtiers of beauteous freedom, To drench the Capitol, but that they would Have one man but a man! And that is it Hath made me rig my navy, at whose burden The anger'd ocean foams, with which I meant To scourge the ingratitude that despiteful Rome Cast on my noble father.

Ces. Take your time. Ant. Thou canst not fear us, Pompey, with thy sails;
We'll speak with thee at sea: at land, thou know'st
How much we do o'er-count thee.

Pom. At land, indeed,
Thou dost o'er-count me of my father's house;
But since the cuckoo builds not for himself,
Remain in't as thou may'st.

Lep. Be pleas'd to tell us,
For this is from the present, how you take
The offers we have sent you.

Ces. There's the point.

Ant. Which do not be entreated to, but weigh
What it is worth embrac'd.

Ces. And what may follow,
To try a larger fortune.

Pom. You have made me offer
Of Sicily, Sardinia; and I must Rid all the sea of pirates; then, to send Measures of wheat to Rome; this 'greed upon,
Part to unha'ck'd edges, and bear back
Our targes undinted.

Pom. Know then, I can do before you here a man prepar'd
To take this offer; but Mark Antony
Put me to some impatience. Though I lose
The praise of it by telling, you must know,
When Caesar and your brother were at blows,
Your mother came to Sicily and did find
Her welcome friendly.

Ant. I have heard it, Pompey;
And am well studied for a liberal thanks
Which I do owe you.

Pom. Let me have your hand:
I did not think, sir, to have met you here.

Ant. The beds i' the east are soft; and thanks
to you,
That call'd me timelier than my purpose hither,
For I have gain'd by't.

Ces. Since I saw you last
There is a change upon you.

Pom. Well, I know not
What counts harsh fortune casts upon my face,
But in my bosom shall she never come
To make my heart her vassal.

Lep. Well met here.

Pom. I hope so, Lepidus. Thus we are agreed.
I crave our composition may be written
And seal'd between us.

Ces. That's the next to do.

Pom. We'll feast each other ere we part;
and let's
Draw lots who shall begin.

Ant. That will I, Pompey.

Pom. No, Antony, take the lot:
But, first or last, your fine Egyptian cookery
Shall have the fame. I have heard that Julius Caesar Grew fat with feasting there.

Ant. You have heard much.

Pom. I have fair meanings, sir.

Ant. And fair words to them.

Pom. Then so much have I heard;
And I have heard Apollodorus carried—

Ene. No more of that: he did so.

Pom. What, I pray you?

Ene. A certain queen to Caesar in a mattress.

Pom. I know thee now; how far'st thou, soldier?

Ene. Well;

And well am I like to do; for I perceive
Four feasts are toward.

Pom. Let me shake thy hand;
I never hated thee. I have seen thee fight,
When I have envied thy behaviour.

Ene. Sir,
I never lov'd you much, but I ha' prais'd ye
When you have well deserv'd ten times as much
As I have said you did.

Pom. Enjoy thy plainness,
It nothing ill becomes thee.

Ant. Which do not be entreated to, but weigh
What it is worth embrac'd.

Pom. Know then, I can do before you here a man prepar'd
To take this offer; but Mark Antony

Eno. There's a strong fellow, Menas.

Men. Why?

Eno. A' bears the third part of the world, man; see'st not?

Men. The third part then is drunk; would it were all,

That it might go on wheels!

Eno. Drink thou; increase the reels.

Men. Come.

Pom. This is not yet an Alexandrian feast.

Ant. It ripens towards it. Strike the vessels, ho!

Here is to Caesar!

Ces. I could well forbear 't.

It's monstrous labour, when I wash my brain,

And it grows fouler.

Ant. Be a child o' the time.

Ces. Possess it, I'll make answer;

But I had rather fast from all four days

Than drink so much in one.

Eno. To Antony! Ha! my brave emperor;

Shall we dance now the Egyptian Bacchanals,

And celebrate our drink?

Pom. Let's ha't, good soldier.

Ant. Come, let us all take hands,

Till that the conquering wine hath steep'd our sense

In soft and delicate Lethe.

Eno. All take hands,

Make battery to our ears with the loud music;

The while I'll place you; then the boy shall sing.

The holding every man shall bear as loud

As his strong sides can volley.

Music plays. ENOBARBUS places them hand in hand.

SONG.

Come, thou monarch of the vine,
Plump Baecus with pink eye!
In thy vats our cares be drown'd,
With thy grapes our hair be crown'd:
Cup us, till the world go round,
Cup us, till the world go round!

Ces. What would you more? Pompey, good night. Good brother,
Let me request you off; our graver business
Frowns at this levity. Gentle lords, let's part;
You see we have burnt our cheeks; strong

Enobarb
Is weaker than the wine, and mine own tongue
Spits what it speaks; the wild disguise hath almost Antick'd us all. What needs more words?
Good night.

Good Antony, your hand.

Pom. I'll try you on the shore.

Ant. And shall, sir. Give your hand.

Pom. O Antony! You have my father's house,—But what? we are friends.

Come down into the boat.

Eno. Take heed you fall not.

Exeunt POMPEY, CESAR, ANTONY, and Attendants.

Menas. I'll not on shore.

Men. No, to my cabin.

These drums! these trumpets, flutes! what!

Let Neptune hear we bid a loud farewell
To these great fellows: sound and be hang'd sound out!

A flourish of trumpets, with drums.

Eno. Hoo! says a'. There's my cap.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Plain in Syria.

Enter VENTIDIIUS as it were in triumph, with SILIUS, and other Romans, Officers, and Soldiers, the dead body of PACORUS borne before him.

Ven. Now, darting Parthia, art thou struck
And now

Pleas'd fortune does of Marcus Crassus' death
Make me revenger. Bear the king's son's body
Before our army. Thy Pacorus, Orodes,

Pays this for Marcus Crassus.

Sil. Noble Ventidius!

Whilest yet with Parthian blood thy sword is warm,

The fugitive Parthians follow; spur through Media,

Mesopotamia, and the shelters whither

The routed fly; so thy grand captain Antony Shall set thee on triumphant chariots and Put garlands on thy head.

Ven. O Silius, Silius! I have done enough; a lower place, note well,

May make too great an act; for learn this, Silius
Better to leave undone than by our deed

Acquire too high a fame when he who serve away.

Cæsar and Antony have ever won
More in their officer than person; Sossius,
One of my place in Syria, his lieutenant,

For quick accumulation of renown,

Which he achiev'd by the minute, lost his favour
Who does it the wars more than his captain can,

Becomes his captain's captain; and ambition,

The soldier's virtue, rather makes choice of loss

Than gain which darkens him.

I could do more to do Antonius good,

But 'twould offend him; and in his offence

Should my performance perish.

Sil. Thou hast, Ventidius, the

Without the which a soldier, and his sword,

Grants scarce distinction. Thou wilt write

Antony?

Ven. I'll humbly signify what in his name,

That magical word of war, we have effected;

How, with his banners and his well-paid rank,

The ne'er-yet-beaten horse of Parthia

We have jaded o' the field.

Sil. Where is he now?

Ven. He purposeth to Athens; whither, wit what haste

The weight we must convey with 's will permit.

We shall appear before him. On, there; pass along.

Exeunt.

Enter AGrippa and Enobarbus, meeting.

Agr. What! are the brothers parted?

Eno. They have dispatch'd with Pompey; he is gone,
The other three are scaling. Octavia weeps: part from Rome; Caesar is sad; and Lepidus, ace Pompey's feast, as Menas says, is troubled with the green sickness.

Ant. Madam, She thou it fare part she hoo is lent 'Tis The Ces. How Cces. Come, Adieu! 10 keep Good thus Come be Half yet I Both kisses Sister, Farewell!

The lis: )r [Image 0x0 to 473x781] [0x0:)

Agr. A very fine one. O! how he loves Caesar, Agr. Nay, but how dearly he adores Mark Antony!

Agr. O Antony! O thou Arabian bird.

Eno. Would you praise Caesar, say 'Cesar'; go no further. Agr. Indeed, he plied them both with excellent praises.

Eno. But he loves Caesar best; yet he loves Antony.

Agr. Both he loves. Eno. They are his shards, and he their beetle. Trumpets within. So; his is to horse. Adieu, noble Agrippa. 21

Agr. Good fortune, worthy soldier, and farewell.

Cesar, Antony, Lepidus, and Octavia.

Ant. No further, sir.

Ces. You take from me a great part of myself; so me well in 't. Sister, prove such a wife; my thoughts make thee, and as my furthest band all pass on thy approbation. Most noble Antony, at not the piece of virtue, which is set twixt us as the cement of our love keep it builted, be the ram to batter 30 its fortress of it; for better might we lov'd without this mean, if on both parts is be not cherish'd.

Ant. Make me not offended your distrust.

Ces. I have said.

Ant. You shall not find, though you be therein curious, the least cause or what you seem to fear. So, the gods keep you, and make the hearts of Romans serve your ends! We will here part.

Ces. Farewell, my dearest sister, fare thee well.

Octa. Sir, look well to my husband's house; and—

Ces. What, stavia?

Octa. I'll tell you in your ear.

Ant. Her tongue will not obey her heart, nor can 'er heart inform her tongue; the swan's down-feather,

That stands upon the swell at full of tide,
And neither way inclines.

Eno. Aside to Agrippa. Will Caesar weep?

Agr. He has a cloud in 's face.

Eno. He weretheworse for that were hea horse; So is he, being a man.

Agr. Why, Enobarbus,

When Antony found Julius Caesar dead He cried almost to roaring; and he wept When at Philippi he found Brutus slain.

Eno. That year, indeed, he was troubled with a rheum;

What willingly he did confound he wall'd, Believe't, till I wept too.

Ces. No, sweet Octavia,

You shall hear from me still; the time shall not Out-go my thinking on you.

Ant. Come, sir, come: I I'll wrestle with you in my strength of love: Look, here I have you; thus I let you go, And give you to the gods.

Ces. Adieu; be happy!

LeP. Let all the number of the stars give light To thy fair way!

Ces. Farewell, farewell! Kisses OCTAVIA.

Ant. Farewell! Trumpets sound. Exeunt.

Scene III.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, and Alexas.

Cleo. Where is the fellow?

Alex. Half afeard to come.

Cleo. Go to, go to. Come hither, sir.

Enter the Messenger.

Alex. Good majesty, Herod of Jewry dare not look upon you But when you are well pleas'd.

Cleo. That Herod's head I have; but how, when Antony is gone Through whom I might command it? Come thou near.

Mess. Most gracious majesty!

Cleo. Didst thou behold Octavia?

Mess. Ay, dread queen.

Cleo. Where?

Mess. Madam, in Rome; I look'd her in the face, and saw her led Between her brother and Mark Antony.

Cleo. Is she as tall as me?

Mess. She is not, madam.

Cleo. Didst hear her speak? is she shrill-tongued or low?

Mess. Madam, I heard her speak; she is low-voiced.

Cleo. That's not so good. He cannot like her long.

Char. Like her! O Isis! 'tis impossible.

Cleo. I think so, Charmian: dull of tongue, and dwarfish!

What majesty is in her gait? Remember, If e'er thou look'dst on majesty,

Mess. She creeps; Her motion and her station are as one; She shows a body rather than a life, A statute than a breather.
Is this certain?

Mess. Or I have no observance.

Char. Three in Egypt

Cannot make better note.

Cleo. He's very knowing, I do perceive it. There's nothing in her yet. The fellow has good judgment.

Char. Excellent.

Cleo. Guess at her years, I prithee.

Mess. Madam, She was a widow,—

Cleo. Widow! Charmian, hark.

Mess. And I do think she's thirty.

Cleo. Bear'st thou her face in mind? Is't long or round?

Mess. Round even to faultiness.

Cleo. For the most part, too, they are foolish that are so.

Her hair, what colour?

Mess. Brown, madam; and her forehead As low as she would wish it.

Cleo. There's gold for thee:

Thou must not take my former sharpness ill.

I will employ thee back again; I find thee Most fit for business. Go make thee ready; Our letters are prepar'd.

Char. A proper man.

Cleo. Indeed, he is so; I repent me much

That so I hurried him. Why, methinks, by him, This creature's no such thing.

Char. Nothing, madam.

Cleo. The man has seen some majesty, and should know.

Char. Hath he seen majesty? Is else defend,

And serving you so long!

Cleo. I have one thing more to ask him yet,

Good Charmian:

But this no matter; thou shalt bring him to me

Where I will write. All may be well enough.

Char. I warrant you, madam.

Cleo. O my good lord! Be

Believe not all; or, if you must believe,

Stomach not all. A more unhappy lady,

If this division chance, ne'er stood between,

Praying for both parts:

The good gods will mock me presently,

When I shall pray, 'O! bless my lord and husband';

Undo that prayer, by crying out as loud,

'0! bless my brother.' Husband win, win

Cleo. Antony.

Gentle Octavia,

Let your best love draw to that point which

Best to preserve it. If I lose mine honour I lose myself; better I were not yours Than yours so branchless. But, as you request,

Yourself shall go between's; the mean time lady,

I'll raise the preparation of a war Shall stain your brother; make your soonest haste,

So your desires are yours.

Octa. Thanks to my lord.

The Jove of power make me most weak, most weak,

Your reconciler! Wars 'twixt you twain would be

As if the world should cleave, and that slain men

Should solder up the rift.

Ant. When it appears to you where this begins,

Turn your displeasure that way; for our fault

Can never be so equal that your love

Can equally move with them. Provide you going;

Choose your own company, and command what cost

Your heart has mind to.

Scene V.—The Same. Another Room.

Enter Enobarbus and Eros, meeting.

Eros. How now, friend Eros!

Eros. There's strange news come, sir.

Eros. What, man?

Eros. Caesar and Lepidus have made war upon Pompey.

Eno. This is old: what is the success?

Eros. Caesar, having made use of him in th wars 'gainst Pompey, presently denied his rivalry, would not let him partake in the glor of the action; and not resting here, accuse him of letters he had formerly wrote to Pompey; upon his own appeal, seiz'd him so the poor third is up, till death enlarge his confine.

Eno. Then, world, thou hast a pair of chap no more;

And throw between them all the food thou hast,

They 'll grind the one the other. Where Antony?

Eros. He's walking in the garden—thus: an spurns

The rush that lies before him; cries 'Foot Lepidus!'

And threatens the throat of that his officer

That murder'd Pompey.

Eno. Our great navy's rigg'd;

Eros. For Italy and Caesar. More, Domitius My lord desires you presently: my news I might have told hereafter.

Eno. 'Twill be naught.

But let it be. Bring me to Antony.

Eros. Come, sir.

Scene IV.—Athens. A Room in Antony's House.

Enter Antony and Octavia.

Ant. Nay, nay, Octavia, not only that,

That were excusable, that, and thousands more Of semblable import, but he hath wagg'd New wars 'gainst Pompey; made his will, and read it

To public ear:

Spoke scantly of me; when perforce he could not

But pay me terms of honour, cold and sickly

He vented them; most narrow measure lent me;

When the best hint was given him, he not took 't,

Or did it from his teeth.

Octa. O my good lord!

Believe not all; or, if you must believe,

Stomach not all. A more unhappy lady,

If this division chance, ne'er stood between,

Praying for both parts:

The good gods will mock me presently,

When I shall pray, 'O! bless my lord and husband';

Undo that prayer, by crying out as loud,

'0! bless my brother.' Husband win, win

Scene V.

A market-maid to Rome, and have prevented
The ostentation of our love, which, left unshown,
Is often left unlov’d: we should have met you
By sea and land, supplying every stage
With an augmented greeting

Octa. Good my lord,
To come thus was I not constrain’d, but did it
On my free will. My lord, Mark Antony,
Hearing that you prepar’d for war, acquainted
My grieved ear withal; whereon, I begg’d
His pardon for return.

Octa. Which soon he granted,
Being an obstruct ’tween his last and him.

Octa. Do not say so, my lord.

Octa. I have eyes upon him,
And his affairs come to me on the wind.
Where is he now?

Octa. My lord, in Athens.

Octa. No, my most wronged sister; Cleopatra Hath nodded him to her. He hath given his empire
Up to a whore; who now are levying
The kings of the earth for war. He hath assemled
Bocchus, the King of Libya; Archelaus,
Of Cappadocia; Philadelphos, King
Of Paphlagonia; the Thracian king, Adallas;
King Maleus of Arabia; King of Pont;
Herod of Jewry; Mithridates, King
Of Comagene; and Ptolemy and Amyntas,
The Kings of Mede and Lycaonia,
With a more larger list of sceptres.

Octa. Ay me, most wretched,
That have my heart parted betwixt two friends
That do afflict each other!

Octa. Welcome hither!
Your letters did withhold our breaking forth,
Till we perceiv’d both how you were wrong led
And we in negligent danger. Cheer your heart;
Be you not troubled with the time, which drives
O’er your content these strong necessities,
But let determin’d things to destiny
Hold unbaw’d their way. Welcome to Rome;
Nothing more dear to me. You are abus’d
Beyond the mark of thought, and the high gods,
To do you justice, make their ministers
Of us and those that love you. Best of comfort,
And ever welcome to us.

Agr. Welcome, lady.

Mec. Welcome, dear madam.

Each heart in Rome does love and pity you;
Only the adulterous Antony, most large
In his abominations, turns you off,
And gives his potent regiment to a trull,
That noises it against us.

Octa. Is it so, sir?

Octa. Most certain. Sister, welcome; pray you,
Be ever known to patience; my dear sister!

Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—ANTONY’S Camp, near the Promontory of Actium.

Enter Cleopatra and Enobarbus.

Cleo. I will be even with thee, doubt it not.

Eno. But why, why, why?

Cleo. Thou hast forsook my being in these wars,
And say’st it is not fit.

Eno. Well, is it, is it?
Cleo. If not denounç’d against us, why should not we
Be there in person?
Eno. Aside. Well, I could reply:
If we should serve with horse and mares together,
The horse were merely lost; the mares would bear
A soldier and his horse.
Cleo. What is ’t you say! Eno. Your presence needs must puzzle Antony;
Take from his heart, take from his brain, from ’s time,
What should not then be spar’d. He is already Tract’d for levity, and ’tis said in Rome
That Phoebus’ eunuchs and your maids
Manage this war.
Cleo. Sink Rome, and their tongues rot
That speak against us! A charge we bear in the war,
And, as the president of my kingdom, will Appear there for a man. Speak not against it; I will not stay behind.
Eno. Nay, I have done.
Here comes the emperor.

Enter Antony and Canidius.

Ant. Is it not strange, Canidius, that from Tarentum and Brundusium
He could so quickly cut the Ionian sea,
And take in Toryne? You have heard on’t, sweet?
Cleo. Celerity is never more admir’d
Than by the negligent.
Ant. A good rebuke,
Which might have well becom’d the best of men.
To taunt at slackness. Canidius, we Will fight with him by sea.
Cleo. By sea! What else?
Can. Why will my lord do so?
Ant. For that he dares us to.
Eno. So hath my lord dar’d him to single fight.
Can. Ay, and to wage this battle at Pharsalia,
Where Caesar fought with Pompey; but these offers,
Which serve not for his vantage, he shakes off;
And so should you.
Eno. Your ships are not well mann’d;
Your mariners are muleters, reapers, people
Ingross’d by swift impress; in Caesar’s fleet
Are those that often have ‘gainst Pompey fought:
Their ships are yare; yours, heavy. No disgrace
Shall fall you for refusing him at sea,
Being prepar’d for land.
Ant. By sea, by sea.
Eno. Most worthy sir, you therein throw away
The absolute soldiership you have by land;
Distract your army, which doth most consist
Of war-mark’d footmen; leave unexecuted
Your own renowned knowledge; quire forego
The way which promises assurance; and Give up yourself merely to chance and hazard
From firm security,
Ant. I’ll fight at sea.
Cleo. I have sixty sails, Caesar none better.
Ant. Our overplus of shipping will we burn.

And with the rest, full-mann’d, from the head of Actium
Beat the approaching Caesar. But if we fail,
We then can do’t at land.

Enter a Messenger.

Thy business?
Mess. The news is true, my lord; he descried;
Cesar has taken Toryne.
Ant. Can he be there in person? ’tis impossible;
Strange that his power should be. Canidius,
Our nineteen legions thou shalt hold by land,
And our twelve thousand horse. We’ll to our ship:
Away, my Thetis!

Enter a Soldier.

How now, worthy soldier!
Sold. O noble emperor! do not fight by sea;
Trust not to rotten planks: do you misdoubt
This sword and these my wounds? Let the Egyptians
And the Phoenicians go a-ducking; we Have used to conquer standing on the earth,
And fighting foot to foot.
Ant. Well, well: away!
Exeunt Antony, Cleopatra, and Enobarbus.

Sold. By Hercules, I think I am i’ the right.
Can. Soldier, thou art; but his whole actio grows
Not in the power on’t; so our leader’s led,
And we are women’s men.
Sold. You keep by land
The legions and the horse whole, do you not?
Can. Marcus Octavius, Marcus Justeius,
Publicola, and Caesius, are for sea;
But we keep whole by land. This speed of Cesar’s
Carries beyond belief.
Sold. While he was yet in Rome
His power went out in such distractions as Beguil’d all spies.
Can. Who’s his lieutenant, hear you?
Sold. They say, one Taurus.
Can. Well I know the man.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The emperor calls Canidius.
Can. With news the time’s with labour, au thorises forth
Each minute some.

Exeunt.

Scene VIII.—A Plain near Actium.

Enter Cesar, Taurus, Officers, and Others.

Ces. Taurus!
Taur. My lord?
Ces. Strike not by land; keep whole: pro
vok’d not battle,
Till we have done at sea. Do not exceed
The prescript of this scroll: our fortune lies
Upon this jump.

Exeunt.

Enter Antony and Enobarbus.

Ant. Set we our squadrons on yond side of the hill,
Enter CANDIUS, marching with his land army one way over the stage; and TAURUS, the Lieutenant of CAESAR, the other way. After their going in, is heard the noise of a sea-fight.

Alarum. Re-enter ENOBARBUS.

Eno. Naught, naught, all naught! I can behold no longer.

e Antoniad, the Egyptian admiral, ith all their sixty, fly, and turn the rudder; see't mine eyes are blasted.

Enter SCARUS.

Scar. Gods and goddesses, I the whole synod of them! Eno. What's thy passion? Scar. The greater canteel of the world is lost ith very ignorance; we have kiss'd away island and provinces.

Eno. How appears the fight? Scar. On our side like the token'd pestilence, here death is sure. Yon Ribaudred nag of Egypt, hom leprosy o'ertake! I the midst o' the fight, hen vantage like a pair of twins appear'd, th' as the same, or rather ours the elder, e breeze upon her, like a cow in June, sits sails and flies.

Eno. That I beheld; ne eyes did sicken at the sight, and could not dure a further view.

Scar. She once being loof'd, e noble ruin of her magic, Antony, ups on his sea-wing, and like a doting mallard, aving the flight in height, flies after her.

Eno. Never saw an action of such shame; perseverance, manhood, honour, ne'er before I violate so itself.

Eno. Alack, alack!

Enter CANDIUS.

Can. Our fortune on the sea is out of breath, 3 sinks most lamentably. Had our general en what he knew himself, it had gone well: he has given example for our flight irst grossly by his own.

Eno. Ay, are you thereabouts? May then good night indeed.

Can. Toward Peloponnesus are they fled. Scar. 'Tis easy to 't; and I there will attend nat further comes.

Can. To Caesar will I render legions and my horse; six kings already ow me the way of yielding.

Eno. I'll yet follow e wounded chance of Antony, though my reason s in the wind against me.

Exeunt.

ENE IX.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter ANTONY and Attendants.

Ant. Hark! the land bids me tread no more upon t; is ashamed to bear me. Friends, come hither: am so lated in the world that I

Have lost my way for ever. I have a ship Laden with gold; take that, divide it; fly, And make your peace with Caesar.

Act. Fly! not we.

Ant. I have fled myself, and have instructed cowards
To run and show their shoulders. Friends, be gone;
I have myself resolv'd upon a course
Which has no need of you; be gone:
My treasure's in the harbour, take it. O!
I follow'd that I blush to look upon:
My very hairs do mutiny, for the white Reprove the brown for rashness, and they them
For fear and doting. Friends, be gone; you shall Have letters from me to some friends that will Sweep your way for you. Pray you, look not sad,
Nor make replies of loathness; take the hint
Which my despair proclaims; let that be left
Which leaves itself; to the sea-side straightway;
I will possess you of that ship and treasure. Leave me, I pray a little; pray you now:
Nay, do so; for, indeed, I have lost command, Therefore I pray you. I'll see you by and by.

Sit down.

Enter CLEOPATRA led by CHARMIAN and IRAS; EROS following.

Eros. The queen, my lord, the queen. Iras. Go to him, madam, speak to him; He is unqualified with very shame. Cleo. Well then, sustain me: O! Eros. Most noble sir, arise; the queen approaches: Her head's declin'd, and death will seize her, but Your comfort makes the rescue. Ant. I have offended reputation, A most unnoble swerving.

Eros. Sir, the queen. Ant. O! whither hast thou led me, Egypt? See, How I convey my shame out of thine eyes By looking back on what I have left behind Stroy'd in dishonour.

Cleo. O my lord, my lord! Forgive my fearful sails: I little thought You would have follow'd.

Ant. — Egypt, thou knew'st too well My heart was to thy rudder tied by the strings, And thou should'st tow me after; o'er my spirit Thy full supremacy thou knew'st, and that Scene XVI.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Cleopatra, Enobarbus, Charmian, and Iras.

Cleo. What shall we do, Enobarbus?

Eno. Think, and do.

Cleo. Is Antony or we in fault for this?

Eno. Antony only, that would make his will.

Cleo. To Lord of his reason. What though you fled From that great face of war, whose several range Frighted each other, why should he follow? The itch of his affection shall not then Have nick’d his captainship; at such a point, When half to half the world oppos’d, he being The mered question. Twas a shame no less Than was his loss, to course your flying flags, And leave his navy gagging.

Cleo. Prithee, peace.

Enter Antony, with Euphrionius.

Ant. Is that his answer?

Eno. He says so.

Ant. Let her know To the boy Caesar send this grizzled head, And he will fill thy wishes to the brim With principalities.

Cleo. That head, my lord?

Ant. To him again. Tell him he wears the rose Of youth upon him, from which the world Should note Something particular; his coin, ships, legions, May be a coward’s, whose ministers would prevale Under the service of a child as soon As he the command of Caesar: I dare him therefor To lay his gay comparisons apart, And answer me declin’d, sword against sword, Ourselves alone. I’ll write it: follow me.

Cleo. Exit Antony and Euphrionius.

Eno. Aside. Yes, like enough, high-battle Caesar will Unstate his happiness, and be stag’d to the show Against a swordsman! I see men’s judgments are A parcel of their fortunes, and things outward Do draw the inward quality after them, To suffer all alike. That he should dream, Knowing all measures, the full Caesar will Answer his emptiness! Caesar, thou hast subdu’d His judgment too.

Enter an Attendant.

Att. A messenger from Caesar.

Cleo. What! no more ceremony! See! mine own women; Against the blown rose may they stop their nose That kneel’d unto the buds. Admit him, sir. Exit Attendant.

Eno. Aside. Mine honesty and I begin to square.

The loyalty well held to fools does make Our faith mere folly; yet he that can endure To follow with allegiance a fall’n lord,
Enter Attendants.

Take hence this Jack and whip him.

Thy. 'Tis better playing with a lion's whelp Than with an old one dying.

Ant. Moon and stars! Whip him. Were't twenty of the greatest tributaries That do acknowledge Caesar, should I find them So saucy with the hand of—she here, what's her name,

Thy. Mark Antony,—

Ant. Tag him away; being whipp'd, Bring him again; this Jack of Caesar's shall Bear us an errand to him.

Exeunt Attendants with THYREUS.

You were half blasted ere I knew you: ha! Have I my pillow left unpress'd in Rome, Forborne the getting of a lawful race, And by a gem of women, to be abus'd By one that looks on feeders?

Cleo. Good my lord,—

Ant. You have been a boggler ever:

But when we in our viciousness grow hard, O misery on 't! the wise gods seal our eyes; In our own filth drop our clear judgments; make us

Adore our errors; laugh at 's, while we strut To our confusion.

Cleo. O! is't come to this?

Ant. I found you as a morsel cold upon Dead Caesar's trencher; nay, you were a fragment Of Cneius Pompey's; besides what hotter hours, Unregister'd in vulgar fame, you have Luxuriously pick'd out; for I am sure, Though you can guess what temperance should be, You know not what it is.

Cleo. Wherefore is this?

Ant. To let a fellow that will take rewards And say 'God quit you!' be familiar with My playfellow, your hand; this kingly seal And plights of high hearts. O! that I were Upon the hill of Basan, to outroar The horned herd; for I have savage cause; And to proclaim it civilly were like A halter'd neck, which does the hangman thank For being yare about him.

Re-enter Attendants with THYREUS.

Is he whipp'd?

First Att. Soundly, my lord.

Ant. Cried he? and begg'd a' pardon?

First Att. He did ask favour.

Ant. If that thy father live, let him repent Thou wast not made his daughter; and be thou sorry

To follow Caesar in his triumph, since Thou hast been whipp'd for following him: henceforth

The white hand of a lady fever thee, Shake thou to look on 't. Get thee back to Caesar, Tell him thy entertainment; look, thou say He makes me angry with him; for he seems Proud and disdainful, harping on what I am, Not what he knew I was: he makes me angry;

Enter ANTONY and EOBARBUS.

Ant. Favours, by Jove that thunders! hat art thou, fellow?

Thy. One that but performs the bidding of the fullest man, and worthiest have command obey'd.

Ebo. Aside. You will be whipp'd.

Ant. Approach, there! Ay, you kith! Now, gods and devils! Authority melts from me: of late, when I cried 'Ho!'

ke boys unto a muss, kings would start forth, ad cry 'Your will? Have you no ears? I am Antony yet.
And at this time most easy 'tis to do 't.
When my good stars, that were my former guides,
Have empty left their orbs, and shot their fires
Into the abyss of hell. If he mistake
My speech and what is done, tell him he has Hipparchus, my enfranchised bondman, whom
He may at pleasure whip, or hang, or torture,
As he shall like, to quell me: urge it thou:
Hence! with thy stripes; be gone!

Exit THYREUS.

Cleo. Have you done yet?
Ant. Alack! our terrene moon
Is now eclips'd; and it portends alone
The fall of Antony.

Cleo. I must stay his time.

Ant. To flatter Caesar would you mingle eyes
With one that ties his points?

Cleo. Not know me yet?
Ant. Cold-hearted toward me?

Cleo. Ah! dear, if I be so,
From my cold heart let heaven engender hail,
And poison it in the source; and the first stone
Drop in my neck: as it determines, so
Dissolve my life. The next Cæsarion smile,
Till by degrees the memory of my womb,
Together with my brave Egyptians all,
By the discandying of this pelleted storm,
Lie graveless, till the flies and gnats of Nile
Have buried them for prey!

Ant. I am satisfied.
César sits down in Alexandria, where
I will oppose his fate. Our force by land
Hath nobly held; our sev'rd navy too
Have knit again, and fleet, threat'ning most sea-like.
Where hast thou been, my heart? Dost thou hear, lady?
If from the field I shall return once more
To kiss these lips, I will appear in blood;
I and my sword will earn my chronicle:
There's hope in 't yet.

Cleo. That's my brave lord!
Ant. I will be treble-sinew'd, hearted, breath'd,
And fight maliciously; for when mine hours
Were nice and lucky, men did ransom lives
Of me for jests; but now I'll set my teeth,
And send to darkness all that stop me. Come,
Let's have one other gandy night: call to me
All my sad captains; fill our bowls once more;
Let's mock the midnight bell.

Cleo. It is my birth-day:
I had thought to have held it poor; but since
my lord
Is Antony again, I will be Cleopatra.

Ant. We will yet do well.

Cleo. Call all his noble captains to my lord.
Ant. Do so, we'll speak to them; and to-night
The wine peep through their scars. Come on,
my queen;
There's sap in 't yet. The next time I do fight
I'll make death love me, for I will contend
Even with his pestilent scythe.

Execut ANTONY, CLEOPATRA, and Attendants.

Eno. Now he'll outstare the lightning. To be furious
Is to be frighted out of fear, and in that mood
The dove will peck the estridge; and I see still,
A diminution in our captain's brain
Restores his heart. When valour preys on reason It eats the sword it fights with. I will seek
Some way to leave him.

Exit.

ACT IV.

Enter Cæsar, reading a letter; AGRIPPA,
MECENAS, and Others.

Cæs. He calls me boy, and chides, as he has power
To beat me out of Egypt; my messenger
He hath whipp'd with rods; dares me to person combat,
Cæsar to Antony. Let the old ruffian know
I have many other ways to die; meantime
Laugh at his challenge.

Mec. Cæsar must think,
When one so great begins to rage, he's hunte
Even to falling. Give him no breath, but now
Make boot of his distraction: never anger
Made good guard for itself.

Cæs. Let our best heads
Know that to-morrow the last of many battle,
We mean to fight. Within our files there are,
Of those that serv'd Mark Antony but late,
Enough to fetch him in. See it done;
And feast the army; we have store to do 't,
And they have earn'd the waste. Poor Antony Exec.
Scene IV.—The Same. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Antony and Cleopatra; Charmian and Others attending.

Ant. Eros! mine armour, Eros!
Cleo. Sleep a little, Eros.
Ant. No, my chuck. Eros, come; mine armour, Eros!

Enter Eros with armour.

Come, good fellow, put mine iron on;
If fortune be not ours to-day, it is Because we brave her. Come.
Cleo. Nay, I'll help too.
What's this for?
Ant. Ah! let be, let be; thou art
The armourer of my heart: false, false; this, this.
Cleo. Sooth, In! I'll help: thus it must be.
Ant. Well, well; we shall thrive now. Seest thou, my good fellow?
Go put on thy defences.

Eros. Briefly, sir.
Ant. Rarely, rarely:
He that unbuckles this, till we do please
To doff 't for our repose, shall hear a storm.
Thou fumblest, Eros; and my queen's a squire
More tight at this than thou; dispatch. O love!
That thou could'st see my wars to-day, and knew'st
The royal occupation, thou should'st see
A workman in't.

Enter an armed Soldier.

Good morrow to thee; welcome;
Thou look'st like him that knows a war-like charge:
To business that we love we rise betime,
And go to 't with delight.

Sold. A thousand, sir,
Early though 't be, have on their riveted trim,
And at the port expect you.

Shout. Trumpets flourish.

Enter Captains and Soldiers.

Capt. The morn is fair. Good morrow, general.
All. Good morrow, general.
Ant. 'Tis well blown, lads.
This morning, like the spirit of a youth
That means to be of note, begins betimes.
So, so; come, give me that: this way; well said.
Fare thee well, dame, whate'er becomes of me;
This is a soldier's kiss.

Kisses her.

Kissed.

Rebekkable 20
And worthy shameful check it were, to stand
On more mechanic compliment; I'll leave thee
Now, like a man of steel. You that will fight, Follow me close; I'll bring you to't. Adieu.

Exit Antony, Eros, Captains, and Soldiers.

Char. Please you, retire to your chamber.

Cleo. Lead me.

He goes forth gallantly. That he and Caesar

Determine this great war in single fight!

Then Antony,—but now—Well, on.

Exit.

Scene V.—Alexandria. Antony's Camp.

Trumpets sound. Enter Antony and Eros; a Soldier meeting them.

Sold. The gods make this a happy day to Antony!

Ant. Would thou and those thy scars had once prevail'd

To make me fight at land!

Sold. Hadst thou done so,

The kings that have revolted, and the soldier

That has this morning left thee, would have

Still

Follow'd thy heels.

Ant. Who's gone this morning?

Sold. Who!

One ever near thee: call for Erobus,

He shall not hear thee; or from Caesar's camp

Say 'I am none of thine,'

Ant. What say'st thou?

Sold. Sir,

He is with Caesar.

Eros. Sir, his chests and treasure 10

He has not with him.

Ant. Is he gone?

Sold. Most certain.

Ant. Go, Eros, send his treasure after; do it;

Detain no jot, I charge thee. Write to him,

I will subscribe, gentle adieu and greetings;

Say that I wish he never find more cause
To change a master. O! my fortunes have Corrupted honest men. Dispatch. Erobus!

Exit.

Scene VI.—Alexandria. Caesar's Camp.

Flourish. Enter Cesar, Agrippa, Enobarbus,

and Others.

Ces. Go forth, Agrippa, and begin the fight:

Our will is Antony be took alive;

Make it so known.

Agri. Caesar, I shall.

Ces. The time of universal peace is near:

Prove this a prosperous day, the three-nook'd world

Shall bear the olive freely.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Antony

Is come into the field.

Ces. Go charge Agrippa

Plant those that have revolted in the van,

That Antony may seem to spend his fury

Upon himself.

Exit Cesar and his Train.

Enobarbus, Antony

Hath after thee sent all thy treasure, with

His bounty overplus: the messenger

Came on my guard; and at thy tent is now

Unloading of his mules.

Ero. I give it you.

Sold. Mock not, Enobarbus.

I tell you true: best you said the bringer

Out of the host; I must attend mine office

Or would have done't myself. Your emperor

Continues still a Jove.

Eno. I am alone the villain of the earth,

And feel I am so most. O Antony!

Thou mine of bounty, how wouldst thou have

My better service, when my turpitude

Thou dost so crown with gold. This blows my heart;

If swift thought break it not, a swifter mean

Shall outstrike thought; but thought will do't.

I feel,

I fight against thee! No: I will go seek

Some ditch wherein to die; the foulst best fit

My latter part of life.

Scene VII.—Field of Battle between the Camps.

Alarum. Drums and trumpets. Enter Agrippa

and Others.

Agr. Retire, we have engag'd ourselves to

Far

Caesar himself has work, and our oppression

Exceeds what we expected.

Exit.

Alarum. Enter Antony, and Scarpus wounded.

Scarp. O my brave emperor, this is fough

indeed!

Had we done so at first, we had droven them

home

With clouts about their heads.

Ant. Thou blest'st apaches.

Scarp. I had a wound here that was like a T,

But now 'tis made an H.

Ant. They do retire.

Scarp. We'll beat 'em into bench-holes: I have yet

Room for six scotches more.

Enter Eros.

Eros. They are beaten, sir; and our advan tage serves

For a fair victory.

Scarp. Let us score their backs,

And snatch 'em up, as we take hares, behind?

'Tis sport to maul a runner.

Ant. I will reward the ice for thy sprightly comfort, and ten-fold or thy good valour. Come thee on.
Sear. I'll halst after. Exeunt.

SCENE VIII.—Under the Walls of Alexandria.

Alarum. Enter Antony, marching; Scarus and Forces.

Ant. We have beat him to his camp; run one and let the queen know of our gists. To-morrow, before the sun shall see 's, we'll spill the blood at to-day escap'd. I thank you all;
or doughty-handed are you, and have fought as you serv'd the cause, but as 't had been ich man's like mine; you have shown all Hectors.

Enter the city, clip your wives, your friends, all them your feats; whilst they with joyful tears
ash the congealment from your wounds, and kiss
he honour'd gashes whole. Give me thy hand:

Enter Cleopatra, attended.

Ant. *This great fairy I'll commend thy acts, ake her thanks bless thee. O thou day o' the world!
ain mine arm'd neck; leap thou, attire and all,
rough proof of harness to my heart, and there de on the pants triumphing.

Cleo. Lord of lords!
infinite virtue! com'st thou smiling
he world's great snare uncaught?

Ant. My nightingale,
e have beat them to their beds. What, girl!
though grey something mingle with our younger brown, yet ha' we brain that nourishes our nerves, and can at goal for goal of youth. Behold this man; commend unto his lips thy favouring hand:
as it, my warrior: he hath fought to-day if a god, in hate of mankind, had stroy'd in such a shape.

Cleo. I'll give thee, friend, a armour all of gold; it was a king's.

Ant. He has deserv'd it, were it carbuncled ke holy Phæbus' car. Give me thy hand:
rough Alexandria make a jolly march;
our hack'd targets like the men that owe
them:
our great palace the capacity

camp this host, we all world sup together nd drink carouses to the next day's fate, hich promises royal peril. Trumpeters, ith brazen din blast you the city's ear,
ake mingle with our rattling tabourines, at heaven and earth may strike their sounds
together.

pplauding our approach. Exeunt.

SCENE IX.—Cæsar's Camp.

Sentinels at their Post.

First Sold. If we be not reliev'd within this hour,
o must return to the court of guard: the night
Is they, and they say we shall embattle
By the second hour i' the morn.
Second Sold. This last day was A shrewd one to's.

Enter Enobarbus.

Eno. O! bear witness, night,—
Third Sold. What man is this?
Second Sold. Stand close and list him.
Eno. Be witness to me, O thou blessed moon,
When men revoluted shall upon record
Bear hateful memory, poor Enobarbus did Before thy face repent!

First Sold. Exeunt.

Second Sold. Peace!
Hark further.

Eno. O sovereign mistress of true melancholy,
The poisonous damp of night dispone upon me,
That life, a very rebel to my will,
May hang no longer on me; throw my heart
Against the flint and hardness of my fault,
Which, being dried with grief, will break to powder,
And finish all foul thoughts. O Antony!
Nobler than my revolt is infamous,
Forgive me in thine own particular;
But let the world rank me in register
A master-leaver and a fugitive.

O Antony! O Antony! Dies.

Second Sold. Let's speak
To him.

First Sold. Let's hear him, for the things he speaks

May concern Cæsar.

First Sold. Swoons rather; for so bad a prayer as his
Was never yet for sleep.

Second Sold. Go we to him.

Third Sold. *Awake, sir, awake! speak to us.
Second Sold. Hear you, sir?*

Drums afar off.*

Hark! the drums
Demurely wake the sleepers. Let us bear him
To the court of guard; he is of note: our hour
Is fully out.

Third Sold. Come on then;
He may recover yet. Exeunt with the body.

SCENE X.—Between the two Camps.

Enter Antony and Scarus, with Forces, marching.

Ant. Their preparation is to-day by sea;
We please them not by land.

Sear. For both, my lord.

Ant. I would they 'd fight i' the fire or i' the air;
We'd fight there too. But this it is; our foot
Upon the hills adjoining to the city
Shall stay with us; order for sea is given,
They have put forth the haven,
Where their appointment we may best discover
And look on their endeavour. Exeunt.

Enter Caesar and his Forces, marching.

Cæs. But being charg'd, we will be still by land,
Which, as I take 't, we shall; for his best force
To the young Roman boy she hath sold me, and I fall
Under this plot; she dies for't. Eros, ho!
Exeunt.

SCENE XI.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iiras, and Mardian.

Cleo. Help me, my women! O! he is mad Than Telamon for his shield; the boar of Thessaly
Was never so emboss'd.
Char. To the monument! There lock yourself, and send him word you are dead.
The soul and body rive not more in parting
Than greatness going off.

Cleo. To the monument! Mardian, go tell him I have slain myself;
Say that the last I spoke was 'Antony,'
And word it, prithee, piteously. Hence, Mardian, and bring me how he takes my death To the monument!

Exeunt.

SCENE XII.—The Same. Another Room.

Enter Antony and Eros.

Ant. Eros, thou yet behold'st me?
Eros. Ay, noble lord.
Ant. Sometimes we see a cloud that's dragonish
A vapour sometime like a bear or lion,
A tower'd citadel, a pendent rock,
A forked mountain, or blue promontory
With trees upon't, that nod unto the world
And mock our eyes with air: thou hast seen these signs;
They are black vesper's pageants.

Eros. Ay, my lord.
Ant. That which is now a horse, even with thought
The rack dislimns, and makes it indistinct,
As water is in water.

Eros. It does, my lord.
Ant. My good knave Eros, now thy captain
Even such a body: here I am Antony;
Yet cannot hold this visible shape, my knave. I made these wars for Egypt; and the queen, Whose heart I thought I had, for she had mine Which whilst it was mine had annex'd unto 't
A million more, now lost; she, Eros, has pack'd cards with Caesar, and false-play'd my glory
Unto an enemy's triumph.
Nay, weep not, gentle Eros; there is left us Ourselves to end ourselves.

Enter Mardian.

'faith vile lady
She has robb'd me of my sword.

Mar. No, Antony.
My mistress lov'd thee, and her fortunes mingled With thine entirely.

Ant. Hence, saucy emuch; peace She hath betray'd me and shall die the death.

Mar. Death of one person can be paid but once:
id that she has discharge’d. What thou would’st do
done unto thy hand; the last she spake as ‘Antony! most noble Antony!’
en in the midst a tearing groan did break the name of Antony; it was divided tween her heart and lips. She render’d life, y name so buried in her.

Ant. Dead, then!

Mar. Dead.

Ant. Unarm, Eros; the long day’s task is done, and we must sleep. To Mardian. That thou depart’st hence safe, pay thy labour richly; go. Exit MARDIAN.

Off, pluck off; a seven-fold shield of Ajax cannot keep the battery from my heart. O! cleave, my sides;
art, once be stronger than thy continent,
ack thy frail case! Apace, Eros, apace.
more a soldier; bruised pieces, go;
not have been nobly borne. From me awhile, Exit EROS.

ill o’ertake thee, Cleopatra, and keep for my pardon. So it must be, for now
I length is torture; since the torch is out, down, and stray no further. Now all labour are what it does; yea, very force entangles self with strength; seal then, and all is done.
os!—I come, my queen.—Eros!—Stay for me;
here souls do couch on flowers, we’ll hand in hand, with our sprightly port make the ghosts gaze; do and her Æneas shall want troops, all the haunts be ours. Come, Eros! Eros!

Re-enter EROS.

Eros. What would my lord?

Ant. Since Cleopatra died, leave liv’d in such honour, that the godsest my baseness. I, that with my sword swear’d the world, and o’er green Neptune’s back ships made cities, condemn myself to lack courage of a woman; less noble mind she which by her death our Caesar tells the conqueror of myself.’ Thou art sworn,
Eros,
at when the exigent should come, which now come indeed, when I should see behind me the inevitable prosecution of grace and horror, that on my command ou then wouldst kill me: do’t; the time is
come.
om strik’st not me, ’tis Caesar thou defeat’st.
tag colour in thy cheek.

Eros. The gods withold me!
all I do that which all the Parthian darts, ough enemy, lost aim and could not?

Ant. Eros,
couldst thou be window’d in great Rome, and see my master thus with pleasch’d arms, bending down s corrigible neck, his face subdued penetrative shame, whilst the wheel’d seat fortune Caesar, drawn before him, branded baseness that ensued?

Eros. I would not see’t.

Ant. Come then; for with a wound I must be

Ant. Draw that thy honest sword, which thou hast worn
Most useful for thy country.

Eros. O, sir! pardon me.

Ant. When I did make thee free, swor’st thou not then
To do this when I bade thee? Do it at once,
Or thy precedent services are all
But accidents unpurpos’d. Draw, and come.

Ant. When did she send thee?
Now, my lord.

Where is she?

Of what hath come to pass; for when she saw,

Which never shall be found, you did suspect

She had disposed with Caesar, and that your rage

Would not be purged, she sent you word she was dead;

But, fearing since how it might work, hath sent

Me to proclaim the truth; and I am come, I dread, too late.

Too late, good Diomed. Call my guard, I prithee.

What, ho! the emperor’s guard! The guard, what, ho!

Come; your lord calls.

Enter four or five of the Guard of Antony.

Bear me, good friends, where Cleopatra bides;

’Tis the last service that I shall command you.

First Guard. Woe, woe are we, sir, you may not live to wear

All your true followers out.

Most heavy day!

To grace it with your sorrows; bid that welcome

Which comes to punish us, and we punish it

Seeming to bear it lightly. Take me up;

I have led you off; carry me now, good friends,

And have my thanks for all.

Exeunt, bearing Antony.

Enter Cleopatra and her maids, aloft, with Charmian and Iras.

O Charmian! I will never go from hence.

Be comforted, dear madam.

No, I will not.

All strange and terrible events are welcome,

But comforts we despise; our size of sorrow,

Proportion’d to our cause, must be as great

As that which makes it.

Enter, below, Diomedes.

How now! is he dead?

His death’s upon him, but not dead.

Look out, the other side your monument;

His guard have brought him thither.

Enter, below, Antony, borne by the Guard.

O sun!

Burn the great sphere thou mov’st in; darkling stand

The varying shore o’ the world. O Antony! Antony, Antony. Help! Charmian, help, Iras, help;

Help, friends below! let’s draw him hither.

Peace!

Not Caesar’s valour hath o’erthrown Antony,

But Antony’s hath triumph’d on itself.

So it should be, that none but Antony

Should conquer Antony; but woe ‘tis so!

I am dying, Egypt, dying; only

I here importune death awhile, until

Of many thousand kisses the poor last

I lay upon thy lips.

I dare not, dear,—

Dear my lord, pardon,—I dare not

Let I be taken; not the imperious show

Of the full-fort’ned Caesar ever shall

Be brooch’d with me; if knife, drugs, serpents have

Edge, sting, or operation. I am safe:

Your wife Octavia, with her modest eyes

And still conclusion, shall acquire no honour

Demurring upon me. But come, come, An tony,—

Help me, my women,—we must draw thee up.

Assist, good friends.

O! quick, or I am gone.

Here’s sport indeed! How heavy weigh

my lord!

Our strength is all gone into heaviness,

That makes the weight. Had I great Juno

power,

The strong-wing’d Mercury should fetch the up,

And set thee by Jove’s side. Yet come a little Wishers were ever fools. O! come, come, come.

They hear Antony aloft to Cleopatra

And welcome, welcome! die where thou hast

liv’d;

Quicken with kissing; had my lips that power

Thus would I wear them out.

A heavy sight!

I am dying, Egypt, dying:

Give me some wine, and let me speak a little.

No, let me speak; and let me rail so high

That the false housewife Fortune break he wheel,

Provoke’d by my offence.

One word, sweet queen

Of Caesar seek your honour with your safety.

They do not go together.

Gentle, hear me

None about Caesar trust but Proculeius.

My resolution and my hands I’ll trust

None about Caesar.

The miserable change now at my end

Lament nor sorrow at; but please your thought

In feeding them with those my former fortune

Wherein I liv’d, the greatest prince o’ the world

The noblest; and do now not basely die,

Not cowardly put off my helmet to

My countryman; a Roman by a Roman Valiantly vanquish’d. Now my spirit is going

I can no more.

Noblest of men, woot’ die?

Hast thou no care of me? shall I abide

In this dull world, which in thy absence is

No better than a sty? O! see, my women,

The crown o’ the earth doth melt. My lord!

O! wither’d is the garland of the war,

The soldier’s pole is fall’n: young boys and girl

Are level now with men; the odds is gone,

And there is nothing left remarkable

Beneath the visiting moon.

She is dead too, our sovereign.

Lady!

Madam

O madam, madam, madam!

Royal Egypt

Empress!

Peace, peace, Iras!
Cleo. No more, but e'en a woman, and commanded by such poor passion as the maid that milks and does the meanest chares. It were for me to throw my sceptre at the injurious gods; to tell them that this world did equal theirs all they had stol'n our jewel. All's but naught;

Ant. Patience is sottish, and impatience does become a dog that's mad; then is it sin to rush into the secret house of death, to die dare come to us? How do you, women?

What, what! good cheer! Why, how now, Charmian! My noble girls! Ah! women, women, look! Our lamp is spent, 'tis out. Good sir, take heart;

We'll bury him; and then, what's brave, what's noble, set's do it after the high Roman fashion, and make death proud to take us. Come, away;

This case of that huge spirit now is cold; Ah! women, women. Come; we have no friend but resolution, and the briefest end.

Ces. Go to him, Dolabella, bid him yield;
Being so frustrate, tell him he mocks
The pauses that he makes.

Dol. Caesar, I shall. Exit. Enter Dercetas, with the sword of Antony.

Ces. Wherefore is that? and what art thou that dar'st appear thus to us?

Der. I am call'd Dercetas; Mark Antony I serv'd, who best was worthy Best to be serv'd; whilst he stood up and spoke He was my master, and I wore my life To spend upon his haters. If thou please To take me to thee, as I was to him I'll be to Caesar; if thou pleasest not, I yield thee up my life.

Ces. What is't thou say'st?

Der. I say, O Caesar, Antony is dead.

Ces. The breaking of so great a thing should make A greater crack; the round world Should have shook lions into civil streets, And citizens to their dens. The death of Antony Is not a single doom; in the name lay A molety of the world.

Der. He is dead, Caesar; Not by a public minister of justice, Nor by a hired knife; but that self hand, Which writ his honour in the acts it did, Hath, with the courage which the heart did lend it, SCENE II.—The Same. The Monument.

Enter, aloft, Cleopatra, Charmian, and Iras.

Cleo. My desolation does begin to make A better life. 'Tis paltry to be Caesar; Not being Fortune, he's but Fortune's knife, A minister of her will; and it is great To do that thing that ends all other deeds, Which shackles accidents, and bolts up change, Which sleeps, and never palates more the dung, The beggar's nurse and Caesar's.

Enter, below, Proculeius, Gallus, and Soldiers.

Pro. Caesar sends greeting to the Queen of Egypt; And bids thee study on what fair demands Thou mean'st to have him grant thee.

Cleo. What's thy name?

Pro. My name is Proculeius.

Cleo. Antony Did tell me of you, bade me trust you; but I do not greatly care to be deceiv'd, That have no use for trusting. If your master Would have a queen his beggar, you must tell him That majesty, to keep decorum, must No less beg than a kingdom: if he please To give me conquer'd Egypt for my son, He gives me so much of mine own as I Will kneel to him with thanks.

Pro. Be of good cheer; You're fall'n into a princely hand, fear nothing. Make your full reference freely to my lord, Who is so full of grace that it flows over On all that need; let me report to him Your sweet dependency, and you shall find A conqueror that will pray in aid for kindness Where he for grace is kneel'd to.

Cleo. Pray you, tell him I am his fortune's vassal, and send him The greatness he has got. I hourly learn A doctrine of obedience, and would gladly Look him in the face.

Pro. This I'll report, dear lady: Have comfort, for I know your plight is pitied Of him that caus'd it.

Gal. You see how easily she may be surpriz'd, Proculeius and two of the Guard ascend the monument by a ladder, and come behind Cleopatra. Some of the Guard unbar and open the gates.

Drawing a dagger.

Pro. Hold, worthy lady, hold! Seizes and draws her.

Do not yourself such wrong, who are in this Reliev'd, but not betray'd. What, of death too, That rids our dogs of languish?

Pro. Cleopatra, Do not abuse my master's bounty by The undoing of yourself; let the world see His nobleness well acted, which your death Will never let come forth.

Cleo. Where art thou, death?

Come hither, come! come, come, and take a queen
Worthy many babes and beggars!

Cleo. Sir, I will eat no meat, I'll not drink, sir
If idle talk will once be necessary,
I'll not sleep neither. This mortal house I'll ruin Do Caesar what he can. Know, sir, that I Will not wait pinion'd at your master's court, Nor once be chastis'd with the sober eye Of dull Octavia. Shall they hoist me up And show me to the shouting varlety Of conquering Rome? Rather a ditch in Egypt Be gentle grave unto me! rather on Nilus' mud Lay me stark naked, and let the water-flies Blow me into abhorring! rather make My country's high pyramids my gibbet, And hang me up in chains!

Pro. You do extend These thoughts of horror further than you shall Find cause in Caesar.

Enter Dolabella.

Dol. Proculeius, What thou hast done thy master Caesar knows, And he hath sent for thee; for the queen, I'll take her to my guard.

Cleo. So, Dolabella, It shall content me best; be gentle to her.

To Cleopatra. To Caesar I will speak what you shall please, If you'll employ me to him.

Cleo. Say, I would die. Exeunt Proculeius and Soldiers.

Dol. Most noble empress, you have heard of me. Cleo. I cannot tell.

Dol. Assuredly you know me.

Cleo. No matter, sir, what I have heard or known. You laugh when boys or women tell their dreams; Is't not your trick?

Dol. I understand not, madam.

Cleo. I dream'd there was an Emperor Antony: O! such another sleep, that I might see But such another man.

Dol. If it might please ye,—

Cleo. His face was as the heavens, and therein stuck A sun and moon, which kept their course, and lighted The little O, the earth.

Dol. Most sovereign creature,—

Cleo. His legs bestrid the ocean; his rear'd arm Crested the world; his voice was proportioned As all the tuned spheres, and that to friends; But when he meant to quail and shake the orb He was as rattling thunder. For his bounty, There was no winter in 't, an autumn 'twas That grew the more by reaping; his delights Were dolphin-like, they show'd his back above The element they liv'd in; in his livery Walk'd crowns and crownets, realms and islands were As plates dropp'd from his pocket.

Cleo. Think you there was, or might be, such a man As this I dream'd of?

Dol. Gentle madam, no.

Cleo. You lie, up to the hearing of the gods. But, if there be, or ever were, one such, t's past the size of dreaming; nature wants stuff

o'v'rie strange forms with fancy; yet to imagine in Antony were nature's piece against fancy, domnarding shadows quite.

Dol. Hear me, good madam. our loss is as yourself, great; and you bear it answering to the weight: would I might never ertake pursu'd success, but I do feel,

y the rebound of yours, a grief that smites

very heart at root.

Cleo. I thank you, sir.

ow you what Caesar means to do with me?

Dol. I am loath to tell you what I would you.

Cleo. Nay, pray you, sir.

Cleo. He'll lead me then in triumph?

Dol. Madam, he will; I know 't.

Cry within. Make way there! — Caesar! 110

Enter CAESAR, GALLIUS, PROCULEIUS, MECE-

NAS, SELIECUS, and Attendants.

Ces. Which is the Queen of Egypt?

Dol. It is the emperor, madam.

CLEOPATRA kneels.

Ces. Arise, you shall not kneel: pray you, rise; rise, Egypt.

Cleo. Sir, the gods

Will have it thus; my master and my lord must obey.

Ces. Take to you no hard thoughts;

the record of what injuries you did us,

though written in our flesh, we shall remember as things but done by chance.

Cleo. Sole sir o' the world, cannot project mine own cause so well

'to make it clear; but do confess I have been laden with like frailties which before have often sham'd our sex.

Ces. Cleopatra, know,

ve will extenuate rather than enforce;

you apply yourself to our intents,

Which towards you are most gentle, you shall find benefit in this change; but if you seek lay on me a cruelty, by taking

Antony's course, you shall bereave yourself of my good purposes, and put your children

'to that destruction which I'll guard them from, thereon you rely. I'll take my leave.

Cleo. And may through all the world: 'tis yours;

and we,

our scutcheons and your signs of conquest, shall hang in what place you please. Here, my good lord.

Ces. You shall advise me in all for Cleopatra.

Cleo. This is the brief of money, plate, and jewels, am possess'd of: 'tis exactly valued;

Not petty things admitted. Where's Seleucus?

Sel. Here, madam.

Cleo. This is my treasurer; let him speak,

my lord,

Upon his peril, that I have reserv'd

For myself nothing. Speak the truth, Seleucus.

Sel. Madam, I had rather seal my lips, than, to my peril,

Speak that which is not.

Cleo. What have I kept back?

Sel. Enough to purchase what you have made known.

Ces. Nay, blush not, Cleopatra; I approve

Your wisdom in the deed.

Cleo. See! Caesar; O! behold,

How pomp is follow'd; mine will now be yours;

And, should we shift estates, yours would be mine.

The ingratitude of this Seleucus does

Even make me wild. O slave! of no more trust

Than love that's hir'd. What! goest thou back? thou shalt

Go back, I warrant thee; but I'll catch thine eyes

Though they had wings: slave, soulless villain, dog!

O rarely base!

Ces. Good queen, let us entreat you.

Cleo. O Caesar! what a wounding shame is this,

That thou, vouchsafing here to visit me,

Doing the honour of thy lordliness

To one so meek, that mine own servant should

Parcel the sum of my disgraces by

Addition of his envy. Say, good Caesar,

That I some lady trifles have reserv'd,

Inmommott toys, things of such dignity

As we greet modern friends withal; and say,

Some nobler token I have kept apart

For Livia and Octavia, to induce

Their mediation; must I be unfolded

With one that I have bred? The gods! it

smites me

Beneath the fall I have. To SELIECUS. Prithee, go hence;

Or I shall show the cinders of my spirits

Through the ashes of my chance. Wert thou a man,

Thou wou'dst have mercy on me.

Ces. Forbear, Seleucus. Exit SELIECUS.

Cleo. Be it known that we, the greatest, are mistruthed

For things that others do; and, when we fall,

We answer others' merits in our name,

Are therefore to be pitied.

Ces. Cleopatra,

Not what you have reserv'd, nor what acknowledg'd,

Put we 't the roll of conquest: still be 't yours,

Bestow it at your pleasure; and believe, 181

Caesar's no merchant, to make prize with you

Of things that merchants sold. Therefore be cheer'd;

Make not your thoughts your prisons: no, dear

queen;

For we intend so to dispose you as Youself shall give us counsel. Feed, and sleep:

Our care and pity is so much upon you,

That we remain your friend; and so, adieu.

Cleo. My master, and my lord!

Flourish. Exit CAESAR and his Train.

Cleo. He words me, girls, he words me, that

I should not

Be noble to myself: but hark thee, Charmian.

Whispers CHARMIAN.

Iras. Finish, good lady; the bright day is done,

And we are for the dark.

Cleo. Hie thee again:

I have spoke already, and it is provided;

Go, put it to the haste.

Char. Madam. I will.
Hast thou the pretty worm of Nilus there, That kills and pains not?

Clown. Truly I have him; but I would not be The party that should desire you to touch him, For his biting is immortal; those that do die of it do seldom or never recover.

Cleo. Rememberest thou any that have died on't?

Clown. Very many, men and women too. I heard of one of them no longer than yesterday A very honest woman, but something given to lie, as a woman should not do but in the way of honesty; how she died of the biting of it, what pain she felt. Truly, she makes a very good report o' the worm, but he that will believe all that they say shall never be saved by half that they do. But this is most fallible, the worm's an odd worm.

Cleo. Get thee hence; farewell.

Clown. I wish you all joy of the worm.

Sets down the basket.

Cleo. Farewell.

Clown. You must think this, look you, that the worm will do his kind.

Cleo. Ay, ay; farewell.

Clown. Look you, the worm is not to be trusted, but in the keeping of wise people; for indeed, there is no goodness in the worm.

Clown. Take thou no care; it shall be heeded.

Cleo. Very good. Give it nothing, I pray you, for it is not worth the feeding.

Cleo. Will it eat me?

Clown. You must not think I am so simple, but I know the devil himself will not eat a woman; I know that a woman is a dish for the gods, if the devil dress her not. But, truly, these same whoreson devils do the gods great harm in their women, for in every ten that they make the devils mar five.

Cleo. Well, get thee gone; farewell.

Clown. Yes, forsooth; I wish you joy o' the worm.

Re-enter IRAS with a robe, crown, etc.

Cleo. Give me my robe, put on my crown; I have Immortal longings in me; now no more The juice of Egypt's grape shall moist this lip. Yare, yare, good Iras; quick. Methinks I hear Antony call; I see him rouse himself To praise my noble act; I hear him mock The luck of Caesar, which the gods give men To excuse their after wrath; husband, I come: Now to that name my courage prove my title! I am fire and air; my other elements I give to baser life. So; have you done? Come then, and take the last warmth of my lips. Farewell, kind Charmian; Iras, long farewell. KISSES them. IRAS falls and dies.

Have I the aspic in my lips? Dost fall? If thou and nature can so gently part, The stroke of death is as a lover's pinch, Which hurts, and is desired. Dost thou lie still? If thou than vanishest, thou tell'st the world It is not worth leave-taking.

Char. Dissolve, thick cloud, and rain; that I may say, The gods themselves do weep.

Cleo. This proves me base: If she first meet the curled Antony,
To see perform'd the dreaded act which thou
So sought'st to hinder.
Within. A way there!—A way for Caesar!

Re-enter CAESAR and all his Train.

Dol. O! sir, you are too sure an augurer;
That you did fear is done.

Ces. Bravest at the last,
She levell'd at our purposes, and, being royal,
Took her own way. The manner of their deaths?
I do not see them bleed.

Dol. Who was last with them?
First Guard. A simple countryman that brought her fids:
This was his basket.

Ces. Poison'd then.
First Guard. O Caesar!
This Charmian liv'd but now; she stood and
spake:
I found her trimming up the diadem
On her dead mistress; tremulously she stood,
And on the sudden dropp'd.

Ces. O noble weakness!
If they had swallow'd poison 'twould appear
By external swelling; but she looks like sleep,
As she would catch another Antony
In her strong toil of grace.

Dol. Here, on her breast,
There is a vent of blood, and something blown;
The like is on her arm.

First Guard. This is an asp's trail; and these fig-leaves
Have slime upon them, such as the aspic leaves
Upon the caves of Nile.

Ces. Most probable
That so she died; for her physician tells me
She hath pursu'd conclusions infinite
Of easy ways to die. Take up her bed;
And bear her women from the monument.
She shall be buried by her Antony:
No grave upon the earth shall clip in it
A pair so famous. High events as these Strike those that make them; and their story is No less in pity than his glory which Brought them to be lamented. Our army shall
In solemn show attend this funeral,
And then to Rome. Come, Dolabella, see
High order in this great solemnity.

Exeunt.
Cymbeline.

Apparitions.

SCENE I.—Sometimes in Britain, sometimes in Italy.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Britain. The Garden of Cymbeline’s Palace.

Enter two Gentlemen.

First Gent. You do not meet a man but frowns; our bloods
No more obey the heavens than our courtiers
Still seem as does the king.

Second Gent. But what’s the matter?

First Gent. His daughter, and the heir of’s kingdom, whom
He purpos’d to his wife’s sole son, a widow
That late he married, hath refer’d herself
Unto a poor but worthy gentleman. She’s wedded,
Her husband banish’d, she imprison’d; all
Is outward sorrow, though I think the king
Be touch’d at very heart.

Second Gent. None but the king?

First Gent. He that hath lost her too; so is the queen,
That most desir’d the match; but not a courtier,
Although they wear their faces to the bent
Of the king’s looks, hath a heart that is not Glad at the thing they scowl at.

Second Gent. And why so?

First Gent. He that hath miss’d the princess
Is a thing
Too bad for bad report; and he that hath her,
I mean that married her, alack! good man,
I do air, fast as 'twas minister'd,
did's spring became a harvest; liv'd in court,
rich rare it is to do, most prais'd, most lov'd;
so to the youngest, to the more mature glass that feasted them, and to the graver child that guided dotards; to his mistress, so or whom he now is banish'd, her own price claims how she esteem'd him and his virtue;
her election may be truly read that kind of man he is.

First Gent.  I honour him en out of your report. But pray you, tell me, she sole child to the king?

First Gent.  His only child.
had two sons; if this be worth your hearing, ark it; the eldest of them at three years old,
the swathing-clothes the other, from their ere stol'n; and to this hour no guess in knowledge
hiph way they went.

First Gent.  How long is this ago?

First Gent.  Some twenty years.

Second Gent.  That a king's children should be so convey'd,
shackly guarded, and the search so slow,
at could not trace them!

First Gent.  Howsoever 'tis strange; that the negligence may well be laugh'd at,
et is true, sir.

Second Gent.  I do well believe you.

First Gent.  We must forbear. Here comes the gentleman,
the queen, and princess.

Enter the QUEEN, POSTHUMUS, and IMOGEN.

Queen.  No, be assur'd you shall not find me, doughter,
fter the slander of most stepmothers,
ily-eyes unto you; you're my prisoner,
but our gaoler shall deliver you the keys atlock up your restraint. For you, Posthumus, so soon as I can win the offended king, will be known your advocate; marry, yet the fire of rage is in him, and 'twere good a lean'd unto his sentence with what patience our wisdom may inform you.

Post.  Please your highness, will from hence to-day.

Queen.  You know the peril:
'll fetch a turn about the garden, pitying he pangs of barr'd affections, though the king ath charg'd you should not speak together.

Exit.  O!  Assembling courtesy. How fine this tyrant an tickle where she wounds! My dearest husband,
something fear my father's wrath; but nothing, always reserv'd my holy duty, what is rage can do on me. You must be gone; and I shall here abide the hourly shot
if angry eyes, not comforted to live, at that there is this jewel in the world that I may see again.

Post.  My queen! my mistress! A lady, weep no more, lest I give cause 'to be suspected of more tenderness han deth become a man. I will remain the loyal'st husband that did e'er plight troth.

Imo.  My residence in Rome at one Philario's;
Who to my father was a friend, to me
Known but by letter; thither write, my queen,
And with mine eyes I'll drink the words you send,
Though ink be made of gall.

Re-enter QUEEN.

Queen.  Be brief I pray you:
If the king come, I shall incur I know not How much of his displeasure. Aside. Yet I'll move him
To walk this way. I never do him wrong,
But he does buy my injuries to be friends,
Pays dear for my offences.

Post.  Should we be taking leave
As long a term as yet we have to live,
The loathness to depart would grow. Adieu!

Imo.  Nay, stay a little:
Were you but riding forth to air yourself
Such parting were too petty. Look here, love;
This diamond was my mother's; take it, heart,
But keep it till you woo another wife,
When Imogen is dead.

Post.  How! how! another! You gentle gods, give me but this I have,
And ear up my embraces from a next
With bonds of death! Putting on the ring.

Remain, remain thou here
While sense can keep it on. And, sweetest, fairest,
As I my poor self did exchange for you,
To your so infinite loss, so in our trifles
I still win of you; for my sake wear this;
It is a manacle of love; I'll place it
Upon this fairest prisoner.

Puting on a bracelet on her arm.

Imo.  O the gods!
When shall we see again?

Enter Cymbeline and Lords.

Post.  Alack! the king!

Cym.  Thou basest thing, avoid! hence from my sight!

If after this command thou franght the court
With thy unworthiness, thou diest! Away!
Thou'rt poison to my blood.

Post.  The gods protect you,
And bless the good remainders of the court!
I am gone.

Imo.  That should'st repair my youth, thou heap'st
A year's age on me.

Imo.  I beseech you, sir,
Harm not yourself with your vexation;
I am senseless of your wrath; a touch more rare
Subdues all pangs, all fears.

Cym.  Past grace! obedience!

Imo.  Past hope, and in despair; that way, past grace.

Cym.  That might'st have had the sole son of my queen!

Imo.  O bless'd, that I might not! I chose an eagle
And did avoid a pattock.

Cym.  Thou took'st a beggar; would'st have made my throne
A seat for baseness.
Ino. No; I rather added
A lustre to it.

Cym. O thou vile one!

Ino. Sir,
It is your fault that I have lov'd Posthumus;
You bred him as my playfellow, and he is
A man worth any woman, overbuys me
Almost the sum he pays.

Cym. What! art thou mad?

Ino. Almost, sir; heaven restore me! Would I were
A neat-herd's daughter, and my Leonatus
Our neighbour shepherd's son!

Cym. Thou foolish thing! 189

Re-enter QUEEN.

They were again together; you have done
Not after our command. Away with her,
And pen her up.

Queen. Beseech your patience. Peace!
Dear lady daughter, peace! Sweet sovereign,
Leave us to ourselves, and make yourself some Comfort
Out of your best advice.

Cym. Nay, let her languish
A drop of blood a day; and, being aged,
Die of this folly!

Exeunt Cymbeline and Lords.

Enter PISANIO.

Queen. Fie! you must give way.
Here is your servant. How now, sir! What news?
Pis. My lord your son drew on my master.

Queen. Ha! 189

No harm, I trust, is done?
Pis. There might have been,
But that my master rather play'd than fought,
And had no help of anger; they were parted
By gentlemen at hand.

Queen. I am very glad on't.
Ino. Your son's my father's friend; he takes his part.

To draw upon an exile! O brave sir!
I would they were in Afric both together,
Myself by with a needle, that I might prick
The goer-back. Why came you from your master?
Pis. On his command: he would not suffer me
To bring him to the haven; left these notes in
Of what commands I should be subject to,
When 't pleas'd you to employ me.

Queen. This hath been
Your faithful servant; I dare lay mine honour
He will remain so.
Pis. I humbly thank your highness.
Queen. Pray, walk awhile.
Ino. About some half-hour hence,
Pray you, speak with me. You shall at least
Go see my lord aboard; for this time leave me.

Exeunt.

Scene II.—The Same. A public Place.

Enter CLOTEN and two Lords.

First Lord. Sir, I would advise you to shift a shirt: the violence of action hath made you reek as a sacrifice. Where air comes out, air comes in;
there's none abroad so wholesome as that you vent.

Clo. If my shirt were bloody, then to shift it.
Have I hurt him?

Second Lord. Aside. No, faith; not so much as his patience.
First Lord. Hurt him! his body's a passable carcass if he be not hurt; it is a throughfall for steel if it be not hurt.

Second Lord. Aside. His steel was in debt; he went o' the backside the town.
Clo. The villain would not stand me.
Second Lord. Aside. No; but he fled forward still, toward your face.
First Lord. Stand you! You have land enough of your own; but he added to your having, gave you some ground.

Second Lord. Aside. As many inches as you have oceans. Puppies!
Clo. I would they had not come between us.
Second Lord. Aside. So would I till you had measured how long a fool you were upon the ground.
Clo. And that she should love this fellow and refuse me!

Second Lord. Aside. If it be a sin to make true election, she is damned.
First Lord. Sir, as I told you always, he beauty and her brain go not together; she's a good sign, but I have seen small reflection of her wit.

Second Lord. Aside. She shines not upon fools; lost the reflection should hurt her.
Clo. Come, I'll to my chamber. Would there had been some hurt done!
Second Lord. Aside. I wish not so; unless I had been the fall of an ass, which is no great hurt.

Clo. You'll go with us?
First Lord. I'll attend your lordship.
Clo. Nay, come, let's go together.
Second Lord. Well, my lord.

Exeunt.

Scene III.—A Room in Cymbeline's Palace.

Enter IMOGEN and PISANIO.

Imo. I would thou gav'st unto the shores of the haven,
And question'dst every sail: if he should write,
And I not have it, 'twere a paper lost,
As offer'd mercy is. What was the last
That he spake to thee?
Pis. It was his queen, his queen
Imo. Then wav'd his handkerchief!
Pis. And kiss'd it, madam.
Imo. Senseless linen, happier therein than I
And that was all!
Pis. No, madam; for so long
As he could make me with this eye or ear
Distinguish him from others, he did keep
The deck, with glove, or hat, or handkerchief,
Still waving, as the fits and stirs of his
Could best express how slow his soul sail'd on,
How swift his ship.

Imo. Thou should'st have made him
As little as a crow, or less, ere left
To after-eye him.
Pis. Madam, so I did.
Imo. I would have broke mine eye-strings,
Crack'd them, but
To look upon him, till the diminution
Of space had pointed him sharp as my needle,
Nay, follow'd him, till he had melted from 2

Enter Posthumus.

I beseech you all, be better known to this gentleman, whom I commend to you as a noble friend of mine; how worthy he is I will leave to appear hereafter, rather than story him in his own hearing.

French. Sir, we have known together in Orleans.

Post. Since when I have been debtor to you for courtesies, which I will be ever to pay and yet pay still.

French. Sir, you o'er-rate my poor kindness. I was glad I did atone my countryman and you: it had been pity you should have been put together with so mortal a purpose as then each bore, upon importance of so slight and trivial a nature.

Post. By your pardon, sir, I was then a young traveller; rather shunned to go even with what I heard than in my every action to be guided by others' experiences; but upon my mended judgment, if I offend not to say it is mended, my quarrel was not altogether slight.

French. Faith, yes, to be put to the arbitrement of swords, and by such two that would by all likelihood have confounded one the other, or have fallen both.

Iach. Can we, with manners, ask what was the difference?

French. Safely, I think. 'Twas a contention in public, which may, without contradiction, suffer the report. It was much like an argument that fell out last night, where each of us fell in praise of our country mistresses; this gentleman at that time voicing, and upon warrant of bloody affirmation, his to be more fair, virtuous, wise, chaste, constant, qualified, and less attempetable than any the rarest of our ladies in France.

Iach. That lady is not now living, or this gentleman's opinion by this worn out.

Post. She holds her virtue still and I my mind.

Iach. You must not so far prefer her fore ours of Italy.

Post. Being so far provoked as I was in France, I would abate her nothing, though I profess myself her adorer, not her friend.

Iach. As fair and as good, a kind of hand-in-hand comparison, had been something too fair and too good for any lady in Britain. If she went before others I have seen, as that diamond of yours outflusters many I have beheld, I could not but believe she excelled many; but I have not seen the most precious diamond that is, nor you the lady.

Post. I praised her as I rated her; so do I my stone.

Iach. What do you esteem it at?

Post. More than the world enjoys.

Iach. Either your unparagoned mistress is dead, or she's outprized by a trifle.

Post. You are mistaken; the one may be sold, or given; or if there were wealth enough for the purchase, or merit for the gift; the other is not a thing for sale, and only the gift of the gods.

Iach. Which the gods have given you?

Post. Which, by their graces, I will keep.

Iach. You may wear her in title yours, but you know strange fowl light upon neighbouring ponds. Your ring may be stolen too; so your brace of unprizable estimations, the one is but frail and the other casual; a cunning thief, or a that way accomplished courtier, would hazard
the winning both of first and last.
Post. Your Italy contains none so accomplished a courtier to convince the honour of my mistress, if, in the holding or loss of that, you term her frail. I do nothing doubt you have store of thieves; notwithstanding I fear not my ring. 110
Phi. Let us leave here, gentlemen.
Post. Sir, with all my heart. This worthy signior, I thank him, makes no stranger of me;
we are familiar at first.
Iach. With five times so much conversation
I should get ground of your fair mistress, make her go back, even to the yielding, had I admittance and opportunity to friend.
Post. No, no.
Iach. I dare thereupon pawn the moiety of my estate to your ring which, in my opinion,
"ervalues it something; but I make my wager rather against your confidence than her reputation; and, to bar your offence herein too, I durst attempt it against any lady in the world.
Post. You are a great deal abused in too bold a persuasion; and I doubt not you sustain what you're worthy of by your attempt.
Iach. What's that?
Post. A repulse; though your attempt, as you call it, deserve more,—a punishment too. 133 Phi. Gentlemen, enough of this; it came in too suddenly; let it die as it was born, and, I pray you, be better acquainted.
Iach. Would I had put my estate and my neighbour's on the approbation of what I have spoke!
Post. What lady would you choose to assail?
Iach. Yours; whom in constancy you think stands so safe. I will lay you ten thousand ducats to your ring, that, commend me to the court where your lady is, with no more advantage than the opportunity of a second conference, and I will bring from thence that honour of ers which you imagine so reserved. 145
Post. I will wage against your gold, gold to it:
my ring I hold dear as my finger; 'tis part of it.
Iach. You are afraid, and therein the wiser.
If you buy ladies' flesh at a million a dram, you cannot preserve it from tainting. But I see you have some religion in you, that you fear.
Post. This is but a custom in your tongue;
you bear a graver purpose, I hope.
Iach. I am the master of my speeches, and would undergo what's spoken, I swear.
Post. Will you? I shall but lend my diamond till your return. Let there be covenants drawn between's; my mistress exceeds in goodness the hugeness of your unworthy thinking; I dare you to this match. Here's my ring. 160
Phi. I will have it no lay.
Iach. By the gods, it is one. If I bring you no sufficient testimony that I have enjoyed the dearest bodily part of your mistress, my ten thousand ducats are yours; so is your diamond too; if I come off, and leave her in such honour as you have trust in, she your jewel, this your jewel, and my gold are yours; provided I have your commendation for my more free entertainment.
Post. I embrace these conditions; let us have articles betwixt us. Only, thus far you shall answer: if you make your voyage upon her and give me directly to understand you have prevailed, I am no further your enemy; she is no worth our debate: if she remain unseduced you not making it appear otherwise, for your opinion, and the assault you have made to her chastity, you shall answer me with your sword.
Iach. Your hand; a covenant. We will have these things set down by lawful counsel, and straight away for Britain, lest the bargain should catch cold and starve. I will fetch my gold and have our two wagers recorded.
Post. Agreed.

Exeunt POSTHUMUS and IACHIMO.

French. Will this hold, think you?
Phi. Signior Iachimo will not from it. Pray let us follow'em.

Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Britain. A Room in Cymbeline's Palace.

Enter QUEEN, Ladies, and CORNELIUS.

Queen. Whilest yet the dew's on ground, gather those flowers;
First Lady. Make haste; who has the note of them?
Queen. Dispatch.
Cor. Pleseth your highness, ay; here they are, madam;
Presenting a small box.
Cor. But I beseech your grace, without offence,
My conscience bids me ask, wherefore you have Commanded of me these most poisonous comounds,
Which are the movers of a languishing death,
But though slow, deadly?

Queen. I wonder, doctor,

Thou ask'st me such a question: have I not been Thy pupil long? Hast thou not learn'd me how To make perfumes? distil? preserve? y'ea, so
That our great king himself doth woe me oft
For my confections? Having thus far proceeded
Unless thou think'st me devilish, 'tis not meet
That I did amplify my judgment in Other conclusions? I will try the forces
Of these thy compounds on such creatures as We count not worth the hanging, but none human,

To try the vigour of them and apply
Allayments to their act, and by them gather
Their several virtues and effects.

Cor. Your highness,

Shall from this practice but make hard your

heart;
Besides, the seeing these effects will be
Both noisome and infectious.

Queen. O! content thee.

Enter PISANIO.

Aside. Here comes a flattering rascal; upon him
Will I first work: he's for his master,
And enemy to my son. How now, Pisanio!
Doctor, your service for this time is ended;
Take your own way.

Cor. Aside.

I do suspect you, madam
But you shall do no harm.

Queen. To Pisanio. Hark thee, a word.
Cor. Aside. I do not like her. She doth think she has range lingering poisons; I do know her spirit, and will not trust one of her malice with the drug of such damn'd nature. Those she has will staprify and dull the sense awhile; nch first, perchance, she'll prove on cats and dogs, ben afterward up higher; but there is o danger in what show of death it makes, o\n\nmore the locking-up the spirits a time, o\n\nbe more fresh, reviving. She is fool'd ith a most false effect; and I the truer, o\nto be false with her.

Queen. No further service, doctor, until I send for thee.

Cor. I humbly take my leave. Exit.

Queen. Weeps she still, say'st thou? Dost thou think in time \n\ne will not quench, and let instructions enter here folly now possesses? Do thow work: \n\nthen shalt bring me word she loves my son, \n\nI'll tell thee on the instant thou art then s\ngreat as is thy master; greater, for is fortunes all lie speechless, and his name: at last gasp; return he cannot, nor continue where he is; to shift his being to exchange one misery with another, and every day that comes to decay day's work in him. What shalt thou expect, o be depended on a thing that leans, oho cannot be new built, nor has no friends, o much as but to prop him?

The QUEEN drops the box; PISANIO takes it up.

Thou tak'st up what know'st not what; but take it for thy labour: is a thing I made, which hath the king's times redeem'd from death; I do not know that is more cordial: nay, I prithee, take it; is an earnest of a further good that I mean to thee. Tell thy mistress how the case stands with her; do 't as from thyself. Think what a chance thou changest on, but think thou hast thy mistress still, to boot, my son, Who shall take notice of thee. 'I'll move the king to any shape of thy preferment such as thou'lt desire; and then myself, I chiefly, that set thee on to this desert, am bound to load thy merit richly. Call my women; think on my words.

Exit PISANIO.

A sly and constant knave, Not to be shak'd; the agent for his master, and the remembrance of her to hold the hand-fast to her lord. I have given him that Which, if he take, shall quite unpeople her Of leigers for her sweet, and which she after, except she bend her humour, shall be assur'd to taste of too.

Re-enter PISANIO and Ladies.

So, so; well done, well done. The violets, cowslips, and the primroses Bear to my closet. Fare thee well, Pisanio; Think on my words.

EXECUT QUEEN and Ladies.

Pis. And shall do:

But when to my good lord I prove untrue, I'll choke myself; there's all I'll do for you.

Exit.

SCENE VI.—The Same. Another Room in the Palace.

Enter IMOGN.

Imo. A father cruel, and a step-dame false; A foolish suitor to a wedded lady, That hath her husband banish'd: O! that husband;

My supreme crown of grief! and those repeated vexations of it! Had I been thief-stol'n, As my two brothers, happy! but most miserable Is the desire that's glorious: bless'd be those, How mean soe'er, that have their honest wills, Which seasons comfort. Who may this be? Fie!

Enter PISANIO and IACHIMO.

Pis. Madam, a noble gentleman of Rome, Comes from my lord with letters.

Iach. Change you, madam? The worthy Leonatus is in safety, And greets your highness dearly.

Presents a letter. Imo. Thanks, good sir: You're kindly welcome.

Iach. Aside. All of her that is out of door most rich! If she be furnish'd with a mind so rare, She is alone the Arabian bird, and I Have lost the wager. Boldness be my friend! Arm me, audacity, from head to foot! Or, like the Partian, I shall flying fight; Rather, directly fly.

Imo. He is one of the noblest note, to whose kind-n esses I am most infinitely tied. Reflect upon him accordingly, as you value your trust—

LEONATUS.

So far I read aloud;

But even the very middle of my heart Is warm'd by the rest, and takes it thankfully. You are as welcome, worthy sir, as I Have words to bid you; and shall find it so In all that I can do.

Iach. Thanks, fairest lady.

What! are men mad? Hath nature given them eyes To see this vaulted arch, and the rich crop Of sea and land, which can distinguish 'twixt The fiery orb above and the twin'd stones Upon the number'd beach, and can we not Partition make with spectacles so precious 'Twixt fair and foul?

Imo. What makes your admiration?

Iach. It cannot be 't the eye; for apes and monkeys 'Twixt two such she's would chatter this way and Contemn with mows the other; nor 't the judgment, For idiots in this case of favour would Be wisely definite; nor 't the appetite. Sluttery to such neat excellence oppos'd Should make desire vomit emptiness, Not so allur'd to feed.

Imo. What is the matter, trow?

Iach. The cloyed will, That satiate yet unsatisfied desire, that tub
Both ill'd and running, ravening first the lamb,
Longs after for the garbage.

I MO. What, dear sir,
This raps you? Are you well?

IACH. Thanks, madam, well.

To PISANO. Beseech you, sir,
Desire my man's abode where I did leave him;
He's strange and peevish.

PIS. I was going, sir,
To give him welcome. Exit.

I MO. Continues well my lord his health.
beseech you!

IACH. Well, madam.

I MO. Is he dispos'd to mirth? I hope he is.
IACH. Exceeding pleasant; none a stranger there
So merry and so gamesome: he is call'd
The Briton reveller.

I MO. When he was here
He did incline to sadness, and oft-times
Not knowing why.

IACH. I never saw him sad.
There is a Frenchman his companion, one
An eminent monsieur, that, it seems, much loves
A Gallian girl at home; he furnaces
The thick sighs from him, whiles the jolly Briton,
Your lord, I mean, laughs from his free lungs, cries 'O! Can my sides hold, to think that man, who knows
By history, report, or his own proof,
What woman is, yea, what she cannot choose
But must be, will his free hours languish for Assured bondage?

I MO. Will my lord say so?

IACH. Ay, madam, with his eyes in flood with laughter:
It is a recreation to be by
And bear him mock the Frenchman; but,
heavens know,
Some men are much to blame.

I MO. Not he, I hope.

IACH. Not he; but yet heaven's bounty towards him might

Be us'd more thankfully. In himself, 'tis much;
In you, which I account his beyond all talents,
Whilst I am bound to wonder, I am bound
To pity too.

I MO. What do you pity, sir?

IACH. Two creatures, heartily.

I MO. Am I one, sir?

IACH. You look on me: what wreck discern you in me
Deserves your pity?

IACH. Lamentable! What!
To hide me from the radiant sun and solace
I the dungeon by a snuff?

I MO. I pray you, sir,
Deliver with more openness your answers
To my demands. Why do you pity me?

IACH. That others do,
I was about to say, enjoy your—But
It is an office of the gods to venge it,
Not mine to speak on't.

I MO. You do seem to know
Something of me, or what concerns me; pray you,
Since doubting things go ill often hurts more
Than to be sure they do; for certainties
Either are past remedies, or, timely knowing,
The remedy then born, discover to me
What both you spur and stop.

IACH. Had I this cheek
To bathe my lips upon; this hand, whose touch Whose every touch, would force the feele'r
soul
To the oath of loyalty; this object, which Takes prisoner the wild motion of mine eye,
Fixing it only here; should I, damn'd then,
Slaver with lips as common as the stairs
That mount the Capitol; join grips with hand, Made hard with hourly falsehood, falsehood as
With labour, then by-peeping in an eye
Base and infernous as the smoky light
That's fed with stinking tallow: it were fit
That all the plagues of hell should at some time
Encounter such revolt.

I MO. My lord, I fear,
Has forgot Britain,

IACH. And himself. Not I.
Inclin'd to this intelligence, pronounce
The beggary of his change; but 'tis your grace
That from my mutest conscience to my tongue
Charms this report out.

I MO. Let me hear no more.

IACH. O dearest soul! your cause doth strike
my heart
With pity, that doth make me sick. A lady
So fair, and fasten'd to an empery
Would make the great'st king double, to be partner'd
With tom-boys hir'd with that self-exhibition
Which your own coffers yield! with diseas'd ventures
That play with all infirmities for gold
Which rottenness can lend nature! such boil'd stuff
As well might poison poison! Be reveng'd!
Or she that bore you was no queen, and you
Recoil from your great stock.

I MO. Reveng'd!

IACH. How should I be reveng'd? If this be true:
As I have such a heart that both mine ears
Must not in haste abuse, if it be true,
How should I be reveng'd?

IACH. Should he make me
Live like Diann's priest, betwixt cold sheets,
Where he is vaulting variable rumps,
In your despite, upon yoururse! Revenge it.
I dedicate myself to your sweet pleasure,
More noble than that runagate to your bed,
And will continue fast to your affection,
Still close as sure.

I MO. What, ho, Pisanio!

IACH. Let me my service tender on your lips.

I MO. Away! I do condemn mine ears that have
So long attended thee. If thou wert honourable,
Thou would'st have told this tale for virtue, not
For such an end thou seek'st; as base as strange.
Thou wrong'st a gentleman, who is as far
From thy report as thou from honour, and Solicit'st here a lady that disdains
Thee and the devil alike. What, ho, Pisanio!
The king my father shall be made acquainted
Of thy assault; if he shall think it fit,
A saucy stranger in his court to mart
As in a Romish stew and to expound
His beastly mind to us, he hath a court
He little cares for and a daughter who
He not respects at all. What, ho, Pisanio!

IACH. O happy Leonatus! I may say:
The credit that thy lady hath of thee
ACT II.

SCENE I.—Britain. Before Cymbeline's Palace.

Enter Cloen and two Lords.

Clo. Was there ever man had such luck! I have kissed the jack, upon an up-cast to be shot! I had a hundred pound on 't; and then a whoreson jackanapes must take me up for swearing, as if I borrowed mine oaths of him and might not spend them at my pleasure.

First Lord. What got he by that? You have broke his pate with your bowl.

Second Lord. Aside. If his wit had been like him that broke it, it would have run all out.

Clo. When a gentleman is disposed to swear, it is not for any standers-by to curtail his oaths, ha?

Second Lord. No, my lord; Aside. nor crop the ears of them.

Clo. Whoreson dog! I give him satisfaction! Would he had been one of my rank!

Second Lord. Aside. To have smelt like a fool, I am not vexed more at any thing in the earth. A pox on't! I had rather not be so noble as I am. They dare not fight with me because of the queen my mother. Every Jack-salve hath his bellyful of fighting, and I must go up and down like a cock that nobody can match.

Second Lord. Aside. You are cock and capon too; and you crow, cock, with your comb on.

Clo. Sayest thou?

Second Lord. It is not fit your lordship should undertake every companion that you give offence to.

Clo. No, I know that; but it is fit I should commit offence to my inferiors.

Second Lord. Ay, it is fit for your lordship only.

Clo. Why, so I say.

First Lord. Did you hear of a stranger that's come to court to-night?

Clo. A stranger, and I not know on't.

Second Lord. Aside. He's a strange fellow himself, and knows it not.

First Lord. There's an Italian come; and 'tis thought one of Leonatus' friends.

Clo. Leonatus! a banished rascal; and he's another, whatsoever he be. Who told you of this stranger?

First Lord. One of your lordship's pages.

Clo. Is it fit I went to look upon him? Is there no derogation in 't?

First Lord. You cannot derogate, my lord.

Clo. Not easily, I think.

Second Lord. Aside. You are a fool granted; therefore your issues, being foolish, do not derogate.

Clo. Come, I'll go see this Italian. What I have lost to-day at bowls I'll win to-night of him. Come, go.

Second Lord. I'll attend your lordship.

Exeunt Cloen and First Lord.

That such a crafty devil as is his mother
Should yield the world this ass! a woman that Bears all down with her brain, and this her son Cannot take two from twenty for his heart
And leave eighteen. Alas! poor princess,
Thou divine Imogen, what thou endure'st,
Betwixt a father by thy step-dame govern'd,
A mother hourly coining plots, a wooer
More hateful than the foul expulsion is
Of thy dear husband, than that horrid act
Of the divorce he'd make. The heavens hold
The walls of thy dear honour; keep unshak'd
That temple, thy fair mind; that thou may'st
stand,
To enjoy thy banish'd lord and this great land!
Exit.

SCENE II.—A Bedchamber; in one part of it a Trunk.

IMOGEN reading in her bed; a Lady attending.

Im. Who's there? my woman Helen?

Lady. Please you, madam.

Im. What hour is it?

Lady. Almost midnight, madam.

Im. I have read three hours then; mine eyes are weak;
Fold down the leaf where I have left; to bed:
Take not away the taper, leave it burning,
And if thou canst awake by four o' the clock,
I prithee, call me. Sleep hath seiz'd me wholly.
Exit Lady.

To your protection I commend me, gods!
From fairies and the tempters of the night
Guard me, beseech ye!

Sleeps. IACHIMO comes from the trunk.

Iach. The crickets sing, and man's o'erlaboured sense Repairs itself by rest. Our Tarquin thus
Did softly press the rushes ere he waken'd
The chastity he wounded. Cytherea,
How bravely thou becom'st thy bed! fresh lily,
And whiter than the sheets! That I might touch!
But kiss; one kiss! Rubies unparagon'd,
How dearly they do t! 'Tis her breathing that Perfumes the chamber thus; the flame o' the taper
Bows toward her, and would under-peep her lids,
To see the enclosed lights, now canopied
Under these windows, white and azure lace'd
With blue of heaven's own tint. But my design,
To note the chamber: I will write all down:
Such and such pictures; there the window; such
The adornment of her bed; the arras, figures,
Why, such and such; and the contents o' the story.
Ah! but some natural notes about her body,
Above ten thousand meaner moveables
Would testify, to enrich mine inventory.
O sleep! thou age of death, lie dull upon her,
And be her sense but as a monument
Thus in a chapel lying. Come off, come off;
Taking off her bracelet.

As slippery as the Gordian knot was hard!
'Tis mine; and this will witness outwardly,
As strongly as the conscience does within,
To the madding of her lord. On her left breast
A mole cinque-spotted, like the crimson drops
To the bottom of a cowslip; here's a voucher
Stronger than ever law could make; this secret
Will force him think I have pick'd the lock and

ta'en

The treasure of her honour. No more. To what end?
Why should I write this down, that's riveted,
Screw'd to my memory? She hath been reading late.
The tale of Tenerus; here the leaf's turn'd down.
Where Philomel gave up. I have enough:
To the trunk again, and shut the spring of it.
Swift, swift, you dragons of the night, the dawning
May bare the raven's eye! I lodge in fear;
Though this a heavenly angel, hell is here.

One, two, three: time, time!

SCENE III.—An Antechamber adjoining IMOGEN'S Apartment.

Enter CLOTEN and Lords.

First Lord. Your lordship is the most pattern man in loss, the most coldest that ever turned up ace.

Clo. It would make any man cold to lose.
First Lord. But not every man patient after the noble temper of your lordship. You are most hot and furious when you win.

Clo. Winning will put any man into courage.
If I could get this foolish Imogen, I should have gold enough. It's almost morning, 's not?

First Lord. Day, my lord.

Clo. I would this music would come. I am advised to give her music o' mornings; the say it will penetrate.

Enter Musicians.

Hark! hark! the lark at heaven's gate sings,
And Phoebus' gins arise,
His steeds to water at those springs
On chalybeate waters that lies;
And winking Mary-buds begin
To ope their golden eyes;
With every thing that pretty is,
My lady sweet, arise

Aris, arise!

Clo. So, get you gone. If this penetrate, I will consider your music the better; if it do not, it is a vice in her ears, which horse-hairs and calves'- guts, nor the voice of unpaved eunuch to boot can never amend.

Exeunt Musicians.

Second Lord. Here comes the king.

Clo. I am glad I was up so late, for that's the reason I was up so early; he cannot choose but take this service I have done fatherly.

Enter Cymbeline and Queen.

Good morrow to your majesty and to my gracious
mother.

Cym. Attend you here the door of our stern daughter!

Will she not forth?
Cymbeline.

Clo. I have assailed her with musings, but she achscaves no notice.

Cym. The exile of her minion is too new, yet this is not yet forgot him; some more time must wear the print of his remembrance out, and then she's yours.

Queen. You are most bound to the king, so lets go by no vantages that may refer you to his daughter. Frame yourself orderly solicits, and be friended with aptness of the season; make denials increase your services; so seem as if you were inspir'd to do those duties which you tender to her; that you in all obey her, when command to your discretion tends,
and therein you are senseless.

Clo. Senseless! not so.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. So like you, sir, ambassadors from Rome;
one is Caius Lucius.

Cym. A worthy fellow, beit he comes on angry purpose now;
at that's no fault of his: we must receive him
according to the honour of his sender;
and towards himself, his goodness forspent on us, e must extend our notice. Our dear son, then you have given good morning to your
mistress,
tend the queen and us; we shall have need to employ you towards this Roman. Come, our queen.

Exeunt all but Cloten.

Clo. If she be up, I'll speak with her; if not, et her lie still and dream. By your leave, ho!

Knocks.

know her women are about her. What I do line one of their hands? 'tis gold hich buys admittance; oft it doth; yea, and makes ana's rangers false themselves, yield up
'ce heer to the stande' the stealer; and 'tis gold hich makes the true man kill'd and saves the thief;
zy, sometime hangs both thief and true man.

What
in it do not and undo? I will make her women lawyer to me, for yet not understand the case myself.
y your leave.

Knocks. 80

Enter a Lady.

Lady. Who's there that knocks?

Clo. A gentleman.

Lady. No more?

Clo. Yes, and a gentilwomans son.

Lady. That's more han some whose tailors are as dear as yours an justly boast of. What's your lordship's pleasure?

Clo. Your lady's person: is she ready?

Lady. Ay,

o keep her chamber.

Clo. There's gold for you; sell me your good report.

Lady. How! my good name? or to report of you that I shall think is good?—The princess!

Exit.

Enter Imogen.

Clo. Good morrow, fairest; sister, your sweet
hand.

Imo. Good morrow, sir. You lay out too much pains
For purchasing but trouble; the thanks I give
Is telling you that I am poor of thanks
And scarce can spare them.

Clo. Still, I swear I love you.

Imo. If you but said so, 'twere as deep with me:
If you swear still, your recompense is still
That I regard it not.

Clo. This is no answer.

Imo. But that you shall not say I yield being silent
I would not speak. I pray you, spare me: faith,
I shall unfold equal discourtesy
To your best kindness. One of your great knowing
Should learn, being taught, forbearance.

Clo. To leave you in your madness, 'twere my sin:
I will not.

Imo. Fools are not mad folks.

Clo. Do you call me fool?

Imo. As I am mad, I do:
If you'll be patient, I'll no more be mad;
That cures us both. I am much sorry, sir,
You put me to forget a lady's manners,
By being so verbal; and learn now, for all,
That I, which know my heart, do here pronounce
By the very truth of it, I care not for you;
And am so near the lack of charity,
To accuse myself, I hate you; which I had rather
You felt than make 't my boast.

Clo. You sin against Obedience, which you owe your father. For
The contract you pretend with that base wretch,
One bred of alms and foster'd with cold dishes,
With scraps o' the court, it is no contract, none;
And though it be allow'd in meaner parties,
Yet who than he more mean? to knit their souls
On whom there is no more dependency
But brats and beggary, in self-figur'd knot;
Yet you are curb'd from that enlargement by
The consequence o' the crown, and must not soil
The precious note of it with a base slave,
A hilding for a livery, a squire's cloth,
A pantler, not so eminent.

Imo. Profane fellow!
Wert thou the son of Jupiter, and no more
But what thou art besides, thou wert too base
To be his groom; thou wert dignified enough,
Even to the point of envy, if 'twere made
Comparative for your virtues, to be styl'd
The under-hangman of his kingdom, and hated
For being preferr'd so well.

Clo. The south-fog rot him!

Imo. He never can meet more miscarriage than
come
To be but nam'd of thee. His meanest garment,
That ever hath but clipp'd his body, is dearer
In my respect than all the hairs above thee.
Were they all made such men. How now,
Pisanio!

Enter Pisanio.

Clo. 'His garment!' Now the devil—

Imo. To Dorothy my woman lie there pre-
ently—

Clo. 'His garment!'

Imo. I am sprightled with a fool,
Frighted, and anger'd worse. Go bid my woman
Search for a jewel that too casually
Hath left mine arm; it was thy master's, shrew me
If I would lose it for a revenue
Of any king's in Europe. I do think
I saw 't this morning; confident I am
Last night 'twas on mine arm, I kiss'd it; I hope it be not gone to tell my lord
That I kiss aught but he.

Pis. 'Twill not be lost.

Imo. I hope so; go and search.

Exit PISANIO.

Clo. You have abus'd me:

His meaneast garment!' Ay, I said so, sir.
If you will make 't an action, call witness to 't.

Clo. I will inform your father.

Imo. Your mother too:
She's my good lady, and will conceive, I hope,
But the worst of me. So I leave you, sir,
To the worst of discontent.

Clo. I'll be reveng'd.

His meaneast garment!' Well. Exit. 160

Enter POSTHUMUS and PHILARIO.

Post. Fear it not, sir; I would I were so sure
To win the king as I am bold her honour
Will remain hers.

Phi. What means do you make to him?
Post. Not any, but abide the change of time,
Quake in the present winter's state and wish
That warmer days would come; in these scars'd hopes,
I barely gratify your love; they failing,
I must die much your debtor.

Phi. Your very goodness and your company
O'erpays all I can do. By this, your king
Hath heard of great Augustus; Caius Lucius
Will do's commission throughly, and I think He'll grant the tribute, send the arrarages,
Or look upon our Romans, whose remembrance
Is yet fresh in their grief.

Post. I do believe,
Statist though I am none, nor like to be,
That this will prove a war; and you shall hear
The legions now in Gallia sooner landed
In our not-fearing Britain, than have tidings
Of any penny tribute paid. Our countrymen
Are men more order'd than when Julius Cesar Smil'd at their lack of skill, but found their courage
Worthy his frowning at; their discipline,
Now mingled with their courage, will be known to their approvers they are people such
That mend upon the world.

Enter IACCHIMO.

Phi. See! Iachimo! Post. The swiftest harts have posted you by land,
And winds of all the corners kiss'd your sails.
To make your vessel nimble.

Phi. Welcome, sir.
Post. I hope the briefness of your answer made
The speediness of your return.

Iach. Your lady
Is one of the fairest that I have look'd upon.
Post. And therewithal the best; or let her beauty
Look through a casement to allure false hearts,
And be false with them.

Iach. Here are letters for you.
Post. Their tenour good, I trust.

Iach. 'Tis very likely.
Phi. Was Caius Lucius in the Britain court?
When you were there?

Iach. He was expected there.
But not approach'd.
Post. All is well yet.
Sparkles this stone as it was wont? or is not Too durl for your good wearing?

Iach. If I have lost it
I should have lost the worth of it in gold.
I'll make a journey twice as far to enjoy
A second night of such sweet shortness which
Was mine in Britain; for the ring is won.

Post. The stone's too hard to come by.

Iach. Not a whit.
Your lady being so easy.

Post. Make not, sir,
Your loss your sport: I hope you know that we Must not continue friends.

Iach. Good sir, we must
If you keep covenant. Had I not brought
The knowledge of your mistress home, I grant
We were to question further, but I now
Profess myself the winner of her honour,
Together with your ring; and not the wronger
Of her or you, having proceeded but
By both your wills.

Post. If you can make 't apparent
That you have tasted her in bed, my hand
And ring is yours; if not, the foul opinion
You had of her pure honour gains or loses
Your sword or mine, or masterless leaves both
To whom shall find them?

Iach. Sir, my circumstances,
Being so near the truth as I will make them,
Must first induce you to believe; whose strength
I will confirm with oath; which, I doubt not,
You'll give me leave to spare, when you shall find
You need it not.

Post. Proceed.

Iach. First, her bedchamber
Where I confess I slept not, but profess
Had that was well worth watching, it was hang
With tapestry of silk and silver; the story
Proud Cleopatra, when she met her Roman,
And Cydnus swell'd above the banks, or for
The press of boats or pride; a piece of work
So bravely done, so rich, that it did strive
In workmanship and value; which I wonder'd
Could be so rarely and exactly wrought,
Since the true life on't was—

Post. This is true;
And this you might have heard of here, by me
Or by some other.

Iach. More particulars
Must justify my knowledge.

Post. So they must.
Or do your honour injury.

Iach. The chimney
Is south the chamber, and the chimney-piece
Chaste Dian bathing; never saw I figures
So likely to report themselves; the cutter.
Was as another nature, dumb; outwent her, lition and breath left out.

Post. This is a thing Which you might from relation likewise reap, being, as it is, much spoke of. Iach. The roof o' the chamber With golden cherubins is fretted; her auditories, had forgot them, were two winking Cupids of silver, each on one foot standing; nicely depending on their bands.

Post. This is her honour! set it be granted you have seen all this, and praise be given to your remembrance, the description of what is in her chamber nothing saves the wager you have laid.

Iach. Then, if you can, be pale: I beg but leave to air this jewel; see! Showing the bracelet.

And now 'tis up again; it must be married to that your diamond; I 'll keep them.

Post. Once more let me behold it. Is it that Which I left with her?

Iach. Sir, I thank her, that: he stripp'd it from her arm; I see her yet; fer pretty action did outsell her gift, and yet enrich'd it too. She gave it me, and said he priz'd it once.

Post. May be she pluck'd it off to send it me.

Iach. She writes so to you, doth she? Post. O! no, no, no; 'tis true. Here, take this too; Gives the ring.

t is a basilisk unto mine eye, kills me to look on 't. Let there he no honour Where there is beauty; truth where semblance; love Where there's another man; the vows of women of no more bondage be to where they are made than they are to their virtues, which is nothing above measure false.

Phi. Have patience, sir, and take your ring again; 'tis not yet won: may be probable she lost it; or Who knows if one of her women, being corrupted, hath stolen it from her!

Post. Very true; And so, I hope, he came by 't. Back my ring. Tender to me some corporal sign about her, More evident than this; for this was stolen. Iach. By Jupiter, I had it from her arm.

Post. Hark you, he swears; by Jupiter he swears.

Tis true; may, keep the ring; 'tis true, I am sure She would not lose it; her attendants are All sworn and honourable; they induc'd to steal it! And by a stranger! No, he hath enjoy'd her; The cognizance of her incontinency is this; she hath bought the name of whore thus dearly. There, take thy hire; and all the fends of hell Divide themselves between you!

Phi. Sir, be patient. This is not strong enough to be believ'd Of one persuaded well of—

Post. Never talk on 't; She hath been colt by him.

Iach. If you seek For further satisfying, under her breast, Worthy the pressing, lies a mole, right proud Of that most delicate lodging: by my life, I kiss'd it, and it gave me present hunger To feed again, though full. You do remember This stain upon her?

Post. Ay, and it doth confirm Another stain, as big as hell can hold. Were there no more but it.

Iach. Will you hear more? Post. Spare your arithmetic; never count the turns; Once, and a million! Iach. I 'll be sworn,— Post. No swearing. If you will swear you have not done 't, you lie; And I will kill thee if thou dost deny Thou 'st made me cuckold.

Iach. I 'll deny nothing. Post. O! that I had her here, to tear her limb-meal. I will go there and do 't, i' the court, before Her father. I 'll do something—

Exit. Phi. Quite besides The government of patience! You have won: Let's follow him, and pervert the present wrath He hath against himself.

Iach. With all my heart. Exeunt.

SCENE V.—The Same. Another Room in the Same.

Enter POSTHUMUS.

Post. Is there no way for men to be but women Must be half-workers? We are all bawds; And that most venerable man which I Did call my father was I know not where When I was stamp'd; some coiner with his tools Made me a counterfeit; yet my mother seem'd The Dian of that time; so doth my wife The nonpareil of this. O! vengeance, vengeance; Me of my lawful pleasure she restrain'd And pray'd me oft forbearance; did it with A pudency so rosy the sweet view on't Might well have warm'd old Saturn; that I thought her As chaste as unsunn'd snow. O! all the devils! This yellow Iachimo, in an hour, was 't not? Or less, at first? or perchance he spoke not, but Like a full-scor'd boar, a German one, cried ' O!' and mounted; found no opposition But what he look'd for should oppose and she Should from encounter guard. Could I find out The woman's part in me! For there's no motion That tends to vice in man but I affirm It is the woman's part; be it lying, note it, The woman's; flattering, hers; deceiving, hers; Lust and rank thoughts, hers, hers; revenges, hers; Ambitions, coveting, change of prides, disdain, Nice longing, slanders, mutability. All faults that may be nam'd, nay, that hell knows, Why, hers, in part or all; but rather, all; For even to vice They are not constant, but are changing still One vice but of a minute old for one
Not half so old as that. I'll write against them, Detest them, curse them. Yet 'tis greater skill In a true hate to pray they have their will: The very devils cannot plague them better. Exeunt.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Britain.  A Room of State in Cymbeline's Palace.

Enter Cymbeline, Queen, Clooten, and Lords at one door, and at another Caius Lucius and Attendants.

Cym. Now say what would Augustus Caesar with us?
Luc. When Julius Caesar, whose remembrance yet Lives in men's eyes, and will to ears and tongues Be theme and hearing ever, was in this Britain, And conquer'd it, Cassibelan, thine uncle, Famous in Caesar's praises, no whit less Than in his feats deserving it, for him And his succession granted Rome a tribute, Yearly three thousand pounds, which by thee lately Is left untender'd. Queen. And, to kill the marvel, Shall be so ever. Clo. There be many Caesars Ere such another Julius. Britain is A world by itself, and we will nothing pay For wearing our own noses. Queen. That opportunity Which then they had to take from's, to resume We have again. Remember, sir, my liege, The kings your ancestors, together with The natural bravery of your isle, which stands As Neptune's park, ribbed and paled in With rocks unscaleable and roaring waters, With sands that will not bear your enemies' boats, But suck them up to the topmast. A kind of conquest Caesar made here, but made not here his brag Of 'came, and saw, and overcame'! with shame, The first that ever touch'd him, he was carried From off our coast, twice beaten; and his shipping, Poor ignorant babbles! on our terrible seas, Like egg-shells mov'd upon their surges, crack'd As easily 'gainst our rocks: for joy whereof The fam'd Cassibelan, who was once at point, O giglot fortune! to master Caesar's sword, Make Lud's town with rejoicing fires bright, And Britons strut with courage. Clo. Come, there's no more tribute to be paid. Our kingdom is stronger than it was at that time; and as I said, there is no more such Caesars; other of them may have crooked noses, but to owe such straight arms, none. Cym. Son, let your mother end. Clo. We have yet many among us can grieve as hard as Cassibelan; I do not say I am one, but I have a hand. Why tribute? why should we pay tribute? If Caesar can hide the sun from us with a blanket, or put the moon in his pocket, we will pay him tribute for light; else, sir, no more tribute, pray you now.

Cym. You must know, Till the injurious Romans did extort This tribute from us, we were free; Caesar's ambition, Which swell'd so much that it did almost stretch The sides o' the world, against all colour here Did put the yoke upon's; which to shake off Becomes a war-like people, whom we reckon Ourselves to be. We do say then to Caesar, Our ancestor was that Mulmutius which Ordain'd our laws, whose use the sword of Caesar Hath too many mangled; whose repair and franchise Shall, by the power we hold, be our good deed Though Rome be therefore angry. Mulmutius made our laws, Who was the first of Britain which did put His brows within a golden crown, and call'd Himself a king. Luc. I am sorry, Cymbeline, That I am to pronounce Augustus Caesar, Caesar, that hath more kings his servants than Thyself domestic officers, thine enemy. Receive it from me, then: war and confusion In Caesar's name pronounce I gainst thee: look For fury not to be resisted. Thus defied, I thank thee for myself. Cym. Thou art welcome, Caius Thy knighted me; my youth I spent Much under him; of him I gather'd honour; Which he to seek of me again, perforces, Behoves me keep at utterance. I am perfect That the Pannonians and Dalmatians for Their liberties are now in arms; a precedent Which not to read would show the Britons cold. So Caesar shall not find them. Luc. Let proof speak Clo. His majesty bids you welcome. Make, pastime with us a day or two, or longer; if you seek us afterwards in other terms, you shall find us in our salt-water girdle; if you beat us out of it, it is yours. If you fall in the adventure our crowns shall fare the better for you; and there's an end. Luc. So, sir. Cym. I know your master's pleasure and mine: All the remain is 'Welcome!' Eteuna.

SCENE II.—Another Room in the Same.

Enter Pisania, reading a letter.

Pis. How! of adultery! Wherefore write you not What monster's her accuser? Leonatus! O master! what a strange infection Is fall'n into thy ear! What false Italian, As poisonous tongue as had, hath prevail'd On thy too ready hearing! Disloyal! No; She's punish'd for her truth, and undergoes, More goddess-like than wife-like, such assaults As would take in some virtue. O my master! Thy mind to her is now as low as were Thy fortunes. How! that I should murder her! Upon the love and truth and vows which I Have made to thy command! I, her? her blood? If it be so to do good service, never t me be counted serviceable. How look I, at I should seem to lack humanity much as this fact comes to?

Do't. The letter
at I have sent her, by her own command all give their opportunity.

O damn'd paper!
ack as the ink that's on thee. Senseless bauble,
t thou a feodary for this act, and look'st virgin-like without? Lo! here she comes, ignornant in what I am commanded.

Enter Imogen.

Imo. How now, Pisario?
Pis. Madam, here is a letter from my lord.
Imo. Who? thy lord? that is my lord, Leonatus. I learn'd indeed were that astronomer at knew the stars as I his characters:
'd lay the future open. You good gods,
t what is here contain'd relish of love, 30 my lord's health, of his content, yet not at we two are asunder; let that grieve him:
I give freely, and med'cinsable; that is one of themselves
it doth physic love: of his content, but in that! Good wax, thy leave. Bless'd be a bees that make these locks of counsel! Lovers

d men in dangerous bonds pray not alike;
ough forfeits you cast in prison, clasp young Cupid's tables. Good news,
gods!

Justice, and your father's wrath, should he take in his dominion, could not be so cruel to me, as O the dearest of creatures, would even renew with your eyes. Take notice that I am in Camb.
at Milford-Haven; what your own love will of this advise you, follow. So he wishes you all piness, that remains loyal to his vow, and your, reason in love.

Leonatus Posthumus.

for a horse with wings. Hear'st thou, Pisano?
is at Milford-Haven; read, and tell me ow 'tis thither. If one of mean affairs plod it in a week, why may not I ide thither in a day? Then, true Pisano, ho long'st, like me, to see thy lord; who long'st,
le me 'bate; but not like me; yet long'st,
it in a fainder kind: O! not like me, or mine's beyond beyond; say, and speak thick;
we's counsellor should fill the bores of hearing, the smothering of the sense, how far it is this same blessed Milford; and, by the way, d me how Wales was made so happy as inherit such a haven; but first of all, now we may steal from hence, and for the gap at we shall make in time, from our hence-going id our return, to excuse; but first, how get hence.
hy should excuse be born or e'er begot?
e'll talk of that hereafter. Prithee, speak, ow many score of miles may we well ride
wixt hour and hour?

Pis. One score 'twixt sun and sun,
Madam, 's enough for you, and too much too.
Imo. Why, one that rode to 's execution, man, Could never go so slow: I have heard of riding
wagers,
Where horses have been nimbler than the sands
That run 't the clock's behalf. But this is foolery;
Go bid my woman feign a sickness; say
She 'll home to her father; and provide me presently
A riding-suit, no costlier than would fit
A franklin's housewife.
Pis. Madam, you're best consider.
Imo. I see before me, man; nor here, nor
here,
Nor what ensues, but have a fog in them,
That I cannot look through. Away, I prithee;
Do as I bid thee. There's no more to say; si Accessible is none but Milford way. Exeunt.

Scene III.—Wales. A mountainous Country, with a Cave.

Enter from the Cave Belarius, Guiderius and Arviragus.

Bel. A goodly day not to keep house with such Whose roof's as low as ours! Stoop, boys; this gate
Instructs you how to adore the heavens, and bows you
To a morning's holy office; the gates of monarchs
Are arch'd so high that giants may jet through
And keep their impious turbans on, without Good morrow to the sun. Hail, thou fair heaven!
We house i' the rock, yet use thee not so hardly
As prouder livers do.

Gui. Hail, heaven!

Arv. Hail, heaven!

Bel. Now for our mountain sport. Up to yond hill;
Your legs are young; I'll tread these flats.
Consider,
When you above perceive me like a crow,
That it is place which lessens and sets off;
And you may then revolve what tales I have told you
Of courts, of princes, of the tricks in war;
This service is not service, so being done,
But being so allow'd; to apprehend thus
Draws us a profit from all things we see,
And often, to our comfort, shall we find
The sharped beetle in a safer hold
Than is the full-wing'd eagle. O! this life
Is nobler than attending for a check,
Richer than doing nothing for a bribe,
Prouder than rustling in unpaid-for silk;
Such gain the cap of him that makes 'em fine,
Yet keeps his book uncross'd; no life to ours
Gui. Out of your proof you speak; we, poor unfed'd,
Have never wing'd from view o' the nest, nor know not
What air's from home. Haply this life is best,
If quiet life be best; sweeter to you
That have a sharper known, well corresponding With your stiff age; but unto us it is
A cell of ignorance, travelling a-bed,
A prison for a debtor, that not dares
To stride a limit.

Aud. What should we speak of
When we are old as you? when we shall hear
The rain and wind beat dark December, how
In this our pinching cave shall we discourse
The freezing hours away? We have seen nothing;
We are beastly, subtle as the fox for prey,
Like war-like as the wolf for what we eat;
Our valor is to chase what flies; our cage
We make a quire, as doth the prison’d bird,
And sing our bondage freely.

Bel. How you speak!
Did you but know the city’s sinsures
And felt them knowingly; the art o’ the court,
As hard as leave to as keep, whose top to climb
Is certain falling, or so slippery that
The fear’s as bad as falling; the toil o’ the war,
A pain that only seems to seek out danger
I’ the name of fame and honour; which dies i’ the search,
And hath as oft a slanderous epitaph
As record of fair act; nay, many times,
Doth ill deserve by doing well; what’s worse,
Must court’ry at the censure. O boys! this story
The world may read in me; my body’s mark’d
With Roman swords, and my report was once
First with the best of note; Cymbeline lov’d me,
And when a soldier was the theme, my name
Was not far off; then was I as a tree Whose boughs did bend with fruit, but in one night,
A storm or robbery, call it what you will,
Shook down my mellow hangings, nay, my leaves,
And left me bare to weather.

Gui. Uncertain favour!

Bel. My fault being nothing, as I have told you oft,
But that two villains, whose false oaths prevails’d
Before my perfect honour, swore to Cymbeline I was confederate with the Romans; so Follow’d my banishment, and this twenty years
This rock and these desmesnes have been my world,
Where I have liv’d at honest freedom, paid
More pious debts to heaven than in all
The fore-end of my time. But up to the mountains!
This is not hunters’ language. He that strikes
The venison first shall be the lord o’ the feast;
To him the other two shall minister;
And we will fear no poison which attends
In place of greater state. I’ll meet you in the valleys.

Enter Guiderius and Arviragus.

How hard it is to hide the sparks of nature!
These boys know little they are sons to the king;
Nor Cymbeline dreams that they are alive.
They think they are mine; and though train’d up thus meanly
I’ the cave wherein they bow, their thoughts do hit
The roofs of palaces, and nature prompts them in Simple and low things to prince it much
Beyond the trick of others. This Polydore,
The heir of Cymbeline and Britain, whom
The king his father call’d Guiderius.—Jove!
When on my three-foot stool I sit and tell
The war-like feats I have done, his spirits fly out Into my story: say! Thus mine enemy fell,
And thus I set my foot on ‘s neck;’ even then
The princely blood flows in his cheek, he sweats
Strains his young nerves, and puts himself to posture
That acts my words. The younger brother
Cadwal,
Once Arviragus, in as like a figure,
 Strikes life into my speech and shows much me
His own conceiving. Hark! the game is rous’d
O Cymbeline! heaven and my conscience know
Thou didst unjustly banish me; whereon,
At three and two years old, I stole these babbles Thinking to bar thee of succession, as Thou rest’st me of my lands. Euriphile, Thou wast their nurse; they took thee in their mother,
And every day do honour to her grave:
Myself, Belarius, that am Morgan call’d,
They take for natural father. The game is up.

Scene IV.—Near Milford-Haven.

Enter Pisania and Imogen.

Imo. Thou told’st me, when we came from horse, the place
Was near at hand: ne’er long’d my mother so
To see me first, as I have now. Pisania! may
That silver stream be Posthumus! What is in thy mind.
That makes thee stare thus? Wherefore seems that sigh
From the inward of thee? One, but painted thou
Would be interpreted a thing perplex’d
Beyond self-explication; put thyself into a hov’r of less fear, ere wildness Vanquish my staid senses. What’s the matter
Why tender’st thou that paper to me with
A look untender? If ’t be summer news,
Smile to ’t before; if winterly, thou need’st
But keep that countenance still. My husband
hand!
That drug-damn’d Italy hath outcramm’d him.
And he’s at some hard point. Speak, man; the
tongue
May take off some extremity, which to read
Would be even mortal to me.

Pis. Please you, read
And you shall find me, wretched man, a thing
The most disdain’d of fortune.

Imo. Thy mistress, Pisania, hath played a strumpet in my bed; the testimonies whereof Bleeding in me. I speak not out of weak surmis but from proof as strong as my grief and as certain as I expect my revenge. That part thou, Pisania, must act for me, if thy faith be not tainted with breach of hers. Let thine own hands take away life; I shall give thee opportunity at Milford-Haven
She hath my letter for the purpose; where, if fear to strike, and to make me certain it is do thou art the pandar to her dishonour and equal to me disposed.

Pis. What shall I need to draw my swor paper
Hath cut her throat already. No, ‘tis slander Whose edge is sharper than the sword, who tongue
Outvenoms all the worms of Nile, whose brea
Rides on the posting winds and doth belie
Believe false teachers; though those that are betray'd
Do feel the treason sharply, yet the traitor
Stands in worse case of woe.
And thou, Posthumus, thou that didst set up
My disobedience 'gainst the king my father,
And make me put into contempt the suits
Of princely fellows, shalt hereafter find
It is no act of common passage, but
A strain of rarereness; and I grieve myself
To think, when thou shalt be discedg'd by her
That now thou 'stir'st on, how thy memory
Will then be pang'd by me.
Fritteke, dispatch;
The lamb entertain the butcher; where's thy knife?
Thou art too slow to do thy master's bidding,
When I desire it too.

Pis. O gracious lady!
Since I receiv'd command to do this business
I have not slept one wink.

Imo. Do't, and to bed then.
Pis. I'll wake mine eyeballs blind first.

Imo. Wherefore then
Didst undertake it? Why hast thou abus'd
So many miles with a pretence? this place?
Mine action and thine own? our horses' labour?
The time inviting thee? the perturb'd court,
For my being absent? whereunto I never Purpose return. Why hast thou gone so far,
To be unbent when thou hast ta'en thy stand,
The elected deer before thee?

Pis. But to win time,
To lose so bad employment, in the which I have consider'd of a course. Good lady,
Hear me with patience.

Imo. Talk thy tongue weary; speak:
I have heard I am a strumpet, and mine ear,
Therein false struck, can take no greater wound,
Nor tent to bottom that. But speak.

Pis. Then, madam,
I thought you would not back again.
Most like,
Bringing me here to kill me.

Pis. Not so, neither?
But if I were as wise as honest, then
My purpose would prove well. It cannot be
But that my master is abus'd;
Some villain, ay, and singular in his art,
Hath done you both this cursed injury.

Imo. Some Roman courtezan.
Pis. No, on my life.
I'll give but notice you are dead and send him
Some bloody sign of it; for 'tis commanded
I should do so: you shall be miss'd at court,
And that will well confirm it.

Imo. Why, good fellow,
What shall I do the while? where bide? how live?
Or in my life what comfort, when I am
Dead to my husband?
Pis. If you'll back to the court,—
Imo. No court, no father; nor no more ado
With that harsh, noble, simple nothing,
That Clooten, whose love-suit hath been to me
As fearful as a siege.
Pis. If not at court,
Then not in Britain must you bide.

Imo. Where then?
Hath Britain all the sun that shines? Day, night,
Are they not but In Britain? I the world's volume
Our Britain seems as of it, but not in't;
In a great pool a swan's nest: prithee, think There's livers out of Britain.

Pis. I am most glad
You think of other place. The ambassador,
Lucius the Roman, comes to Milford-Haven
To-morrow; now, if you could wear a mind
Dark as your fortune is, and but disguise
That which, to appear itself, must not yet be
But by self-danger, you should tread a course Pretty and full of view; yea, haply, near
The residence of Posthumus; so nigh at least
That though his actions were not visible, yet
Report should render him hourly to your ear
As truly as he moves.

Imo. O! for such means:
Though peril to my modesty, not death on't,
I would adventure.

Pis. Well then, here's the point:
You must forget to be a woman; change
Command into obedience; fear and niceness,
The handmaids of all women, or more truly
Woman it pretty self, into a wagish courage;
Ready in gibes, quick-answer'd, saucy, and
As quarrellous as the wasel; nay, you must Forget that rarest treasure of your cheek,
Exposing it; but, O! the harder heart,
Alack! no remedy, to the greedy touch
Of common-kissing Titan, and forget
Your laboursome and dainty trims, wherein
You made great Juno angry.

Imo. Nay, be brief:
I see into thy end, and am almost
A man already.

Pis. First, make yourself but like one.
For thinking this, I have already fit,
'Tis in my cloak-bag, doublet, hat, hose, and
All that answer to them; would you in their serving,
And with what imitation you can borrow
From youth of such a season, 'fore noble
Lucius
Present yourself, desire his service, tell him
Wherein you're happy, which you'll make him know,
If that his head have ear in music, doubtless
With joy he will embrace you, for he's honourable,
And, doubling that, most holy. Your means,
You have me, rich; and I will never fail
Beginning nor supplyment.

Imo. Thou art all the comfort
The gods will diet me with. Prithee, away;
There's more to be consider'd, but we'll even
All that good time will give us; this attempt I'm soldier to, and will abide it with
A prince's courage. Away, I prithee.

Pis. Well, madam, we must take a short farewell,
Lest, being miss'd, I be suspected of
Your carriage from the court. My noble mistress,
Here is a box, I had it from the queen,
What's in't is precious; if you are sick at sea,
Or stomach-qualm'd at land, a dram of this
Will drive away distemper. To some shade,
And fit you to your manhood. May the gods
Direct you to the best!

he pray'd me to excuse her keeping close,
thereto constrain'd by her infirmity,
he should that duty leave unpaid to you,
'thich daily she was bound to proffer; this he wish'd me to make known, but our great court ade me to blame in memory.

Cym.

'Her doors lock'd! so ot seen of late! Grant, heavens, that which I fear
rove false! Exit.

Queen. Son, I say, follow the king.

Clo. That man of hers, Pisiano, her old servant, have not seen these two days.

Queen. Go, look after. Exit CLO.

isiano, thou that stand'st so for Posthumus!
hath a drug of mine; I pray his absence roceed by swallowing that, for he believes is a thing most precious. But for her, there is she gone? Haply despair hath seiz'd her, wing'd with fav'our of her love, she's flown her desir'd Posthumus: Gone she is death or to dishonour, and my end make good use of either; she being down, have the placing of the British crown.

Re-enter CLO.

ow now, my son!

Clo. 'Tis certain she is fled.
in and cheer the king; he rages, none are come about him.

Queen. Aside. All the better; may his night forestall him of the coming day! Exit.

Clo. I love and hate her; for she's fair and royal, and she has all courtly parts more exquisite an lady, ladies, woman; from every one she best she hath, and she, of all compounded, tells us all. I love her therefore; but maming and throwing favours on low Posthumus slanders so her judgment at what's else rare is chok'd, and in that point will conclude to hate her, nay, indeed, be reveng'd upon her, for when fools fall—

Enter PISANO.

Who is here? What! are you packing, sirrah?
me hither. Ah! you precious pandar. Villain, here is thy lady? In a word; or else are straightway with the fiends.

Pis. O! good my lord.

Clo. Where is thy lady? or, by Jupiter will not ask again. Close villain,
'll have this secret from thy heart, or rip thy heart to find it. Is she with Posthumus?
rom whose so many weights of baseness cannot dram of worth be drawn.

Pis. Alas! my lord, wan can she be with him? When was she is in Rome.

Clo. Where is she, sir? Come nearer, urther halting; satisfy me home hat is become of her.

Pis. O! my all-worthy lord.

Clo. All-worthy villain!
cover where thy mistress is at once the next word; no more of 'worthy lord!' peak, or thy silence on the instant is condemnation and thy death.

Pis. Then, sir,

This paper is the history of my knowledge.
Touching her flight,

Pis. Aside.

Clo. Let's see. I will pursue her.

Even to Augustus' throne.

Pis. Aside. Or this, or perish.
She's fair enough; and what he learns by this
May prove his travel, not her danger.

Clo.

Pis. Aside. I'll write to my lord she's dead.
O Imogen!

Safe may'st thou wander, safe return again.

Pis. Sirrah, is this letter true?

Pis. Sir, as I think.

Pis. It is Posthumus' hand; I know 't. Sirrah, if thou would'st not be a villain, but do me true service, undergo those employments wherein I should have cause to use thee with a serious industry; that, is what villany soe'er I bid thee do, to perform it directly and truly, I would thee an honest man; thou should'st neither want my means for thy relief nor my voice for thy preferment.

Pis. Well, my good lord.

Clo. Wilt thou serve me? For since patiently and constantly thou hast stuck to the bare fortune of that beggar Posthumus, thou canst not, in the course of gratitude, but be a diligent follower of mine. Wilt thou serve me?

Pis. Sir, I will.

Clo. Give me thy hand; here's my purse.
Hast any of thy late master's garments in thy possession?

Pis. I have, my lord, at my lodging, the same suit he wore when he took leave of my lady and mistrress.

Clo. The first service thou dost me, fetch that suit hither; let it be thy first service; go.

Pis. I shall, my lord.

Clo. Meet thee at Milford-Haven! I forgot ask him one thing; I'll remember 't anon.
Even there, thou villain Posthumus, will I kill thee. I would these garments were come. She said upon a time, the bitterness of it I now beheld from my heart, that she held the very garment of Posthumus in more respect than my noble and natural person, together with the adornment of my qualities. With that suit upon my back will I ravish her: first kill him, and in her eyes;
there shall she see my valour, which will then be a torment to her contempt. He on the ground, my speech of insultment ended on his dead body, and when my lust hath dined, which,
as I say, to vex her, I will execute in the clothes that she so praised, to the court I'll knock her back, foot her home again. She hath despised me rejoicingly, and I'll be merry in my revenge.

Re-enter PISANO, with the clothes.

Be those the garments?

Pis. Ay, my noble lord.

Pis. How long is since she went to Milford-Haven?

Pis. She can scarce be there yet.

Clo. Bring this apparel to my chamber; that is the second thing that I have commanded thee; the third is, that thou wilt be a voluntary mute to my design. Be but duteous, and true preferment shall tender itself to thee. My revenge is now at Milford; would I had wings to follow it! Come, and be true.
Scene VI.—Wales. _Before the Cave of Belarius._

_Enter Imogen, in boy's clothes._

Imo. I see a man's life is a tedious one; I have tir'd myself, and for two nights together Have made the ground my bed; I should be sick But that my resolution helps me. Milford, When from the mountain-top Pisanio show'd thee, Thou wast within a ken. O Jove! I think Foundations fly the wretched; such, I mean, Where they should be relied'v. Two beggars told me I could not miss my way; will poor folks lie, That have afflictions on them, knowing 'tis

_A Punishment or trial? Yes; no wonder,
When rich ones scarce tell true. To lapse in fulness
Is sorer than to lie for need, and falsehood
Is worse in kings than beggars. My dear lord! Thou art one o' the false ones. Now I think on thee,

My hunger's gone, but even before I was
At point to sink for food. But what is this?
Here is a path to 't; 'tis some savage hold;
I was best not call, I dare not call, yet famine,
Ere clean it o'erthrow nature, makes it valiant.
Plenty and peace breeds cowards, hardness ever Of hardness is mother. Ho! who's here? 22
If any thing that's civil, speak; if savage, Take or lend. Ho! No answer! Then I'll enter.
Best draw my sword; and if mine enemy
But fear the sword like me, he'll scarcely look on it. Such a foe, good heavens! _Enters the cave._

Enter Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.

Bel. You, Polydore, have prov'd best woodman, and Are master of the feast; Cadwal and I Will play the cook and servant, 'tis our match; The sweat of industry would dry and die But for the end it works to. Come; our stomachs Will make what's homely savoury; weariness Can snore upon the flint when resty sloth Finds the down pillow hard. Now peace be here, Poor house, that keep'st thyself!

Gui. I am throughly weary.

Arv. I am weak with toil, yet strong in appetite.

Gui. There is cold meat i' the cave; we'll browse on that. Whilst what we have kill'd be cook'd, _Bel._ Looking into the cave. Stay; come not in;

But that it eats our victuals, I should think Here were a fairy.

Gui. What's the matter, sir?

Bel. By Jupiter, an angel! or, if not, An earthily paragon! Behold divineness
No elder than a boy!

_Re-enter Imogen._

Imo. Good masters, harm me not:
Before I enter'd here, I call'd; and thought To have begg'd or bought what I have took Good truth,
I have stol'n nought, nor would not, though had found
Gold strew'd i' the floor. Here's money for my meat;
I would have left it on the board so soon As I had made my meal, and parted
With prayers for the provider.

Gu. Money, youth.

Arv. All gold and silver rather turn to dirt! As 'tis no better reckon'd but of those Who worship dirty gods.

Imo. I see you're angry.

Know, if you kill me for my fault, I should Have died had I not made it.

Bel. Two To Milford-Haven.

Bel. What's your name?

Imo. Fidele, sir. I have a kinsman who Is bound for Italy; he embark'd at Milford: To whom being going, almost spent with hunger I am fall'n in this offence.

Bel. Prithie, fair youth,

Think us no churls, nor measure our good mind By this rude place we live in. Well encounter'd 'Tis almost night; you shall have better cheer Ere you depart, and thanks to stay and eat it. Boys, bid him welcome.

Gu. Were you a woman, youth I should woo hard but be your groom. In honesty, I bid for you as I'd buy.

Arv. I'll make 't my comfort
He is a man; I'll love him as my brother; And such a welcome as I'd give to him After long absence, such is yours: most wel come! Be sprightly, for you fall 'mongst friends. _Imo._ 'Mongst friends If brothers. _Aside._ Would it had been so, that they Had been my father's sons; then had my prize Been less, and so more equal ballasting To thee, Posthumus.

Bel. He wrings at some distress

Gui. Would I could free 't!

Arv. Or I whate'er it be

What pain it cost, what danger. Gods!

Bel. Hark, boys. _Whispering._

Imo. Great men,
That had a court no bigger than this cave, That did attend themselves and had the virtue Which their own conscience seal'd them, lying by That nothing gift of differing multitudes, Could not out-peer these twain. Pardon me, gods! I'd change my sex to be companion with them, Since Leonatus' false.
Bel. It shall be so.
ys, we'll go dress our hunt. Fair youth, come in;
scourse is heavy, fasting; when we have supp'd, e'll mannerly demand thee of thy story, far as thou wilt seem it.
Gui. Pray, draw near.
Avr. The night to the owl and morn to the dark less welcome.
Ino. Thanks, sir.
Avr. I pray, draw near. Execunt.

SCENE VII.—Rome. A public Place.
Enter two Senators and Tribunes.

First Sen. This is the tenour of the emperor's writ:
at since the common men are now in action
first the Pannonians and Dalmatians, d that the legion now in Gallia are ll weak to undertake our wars against fall'n-off Britons, that we do incite gentry to this business. He creates ius proconsul; and to you the tribunes, this immediate levy, he commends absolute commission. Long live Caesar! 10
\text{Is Lucius general of the forces?}

Second Sen. istr. Remaining now in Gallia?

First Sen. With those legions rich I have spoke of, whereunto your levy be supplyant; the words of your commisll tie you to the numbers and the time their dispatch.
\text{Iri.} We will discharge our duty.
Exeunt.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Wales. The Forest, near the Cave of Belarius.
Enter Cloten.

No. I am near to the place where they should et, if Pisanio have mapped it truly. How fit garments serve me! Why should his mistress, was made by him that made the tailor, not fit too? the rather, saving reverence of the ld, for 'tis said a woman's fitness comes by Therein I must play the workman. I dare ak it to myself, for it is not vain-glory for a and his glass to confer in his own chamber, ean, the lines of my body are as well drawn is; no less young, more strong, not beneath fortunes, beyond him in the advantage of time, above him in birth, alike conversant in eral services, and more remarkable in single positions; yet this imperceiverant thing loves in my despi. What mortality is! Post-nus, thy head, which now is growing upon shouders, shall within this hour be off, thy tress enforced, thy garments cut to pieces thy face; and all this done, spurn her me to her father, who may haply be a little ly for my so rough usage, but my mother, ing power of his testiness, shall turn all into my commendations. My horse is tied up safe; out, sword, and to a sore purpose! Fortune, put them into my hand! This is the very description of their meeting-place; and the fellow dares not deceive me.

Exit.

SCENE II.—Before the Cave of Belarius.
Enter, from the cave, Belarius, Guiderius,
Arviragus, and Imogen.

Bel. To Imogen. You are not well; remain here in the cave;
We'll come to you after hunting.
Avr. To Imogen. Brother, stay here;
Are we not brothers?
Imo. So man and man should be,
But clay and clay differs in dignity,
Whose dust is both alike. I am very sick.
Gui. Go you to hunting; I'll abide with him.
Imo. So sick I am not, yet I am not well;
But not so citizen a wanton as
To seem to die ere sick. So please you, leave me.
Stick to your journal course; the breach of custom
Is breach of all. I am ill, but your being by me
Cannot amend me; society is no comfort
To one not sociable. I am not very sick, Since I can reason of it; pray you, trust me
here,
I'll rob none but myself, and let me die,
Stealing so poorly.
Gui. I love thee; I have spoke it;
How much the quantity, the weight as much,
As I do love my father.
Bel. What! how! how! 20
Avr. If it be sin to say so, sir, I yoke me
In my good brother's fault: I know not why
I love this youth; and I have heard you say, Love's reason's without reason: the bier at door,
And a demand who is't shall die, I'd say
'My father, not this youth.'
Bel. Aside. O noble strain!
O worthiness of nature! breed of greatness!
Cowards father cowards, and base things sire base:
Nature hath meal and bran, contempt and grace.
I'm not their father; yet who this should be,
Both miracle itself, lov'd before me.
'Tis the ninth hour o' the morn.
Avr. Brother, farewell. 30
Imo. I wish ye sport.
Avr. You health. So please you, sir.
Imo. Aside. These are kind creatures. Gods, what lies I have heard!
Our courtiers say all's savage but at court:
Experience, O! thou disprov'st report.
The imperious seas breed monsters, for the dish
Poor tributary rivers as sweet fish.
I am sick still, heart-sick. Pisanio,
I'll now taste of thy drug. Swallows some.
Gui. I could not stir him;
He said he was gentle, but unfortunate;
Dishonestly afflicted, but yet honest.
Avr. Thus did he answer me; yet said hereafter
I might know more.
Bel. To the field, to the field!
We'll leave you for this time; go in and rest.
Arr. We'll not be long away.

Bel. Pray, be not sick,
For you must be our housewife.

Imo. Well or ill,
I am bound to you.

Bel. And shall be ever. Exit Imogen.

This youth, how'er distress'd, appears he hath had Good ancestors.

Arr. How angel-like he sings!

Gui. But his neat cookery! He cut our roots
In characters,
And scoured our broth's as Juno had been sick
And his dieter.

Arr. Nobly he yokes
A smiling with a sigh, as if the sigh
Was that it was, for not being such a smile;
The smile mock'd the sigh, that it would fly
From so divine a temple, to commix
With winds that sailors rail at.

Gui. I do note
That grief and patience, rooted in him both,
Mingle their spurs together.

Arr. Grow, patience!
And let the Morning, grief, untwine
His perishing root with the increasing vine!

Bel. It is great morning. Come, away! Who's there?

Enter Cloten.

Clo. I cannot find those runagates; that villain
Hath mock'd me. I am faint.

Bel. 'Those runagates!'
Means he not us? I partly know him; 'tis Cloten, the son o' the queen. I fearsoamish, I Saw him not these many years, and yet
I know 'tis he. We are held as outlaws: hence!

Gui. He is but one. You and your brother search What companies are near; pray you, away; let Me alone with him.

Exeunt Belarius and Arviragus.

Clo. Soft! What are you That fly me thus? Some villain mountaineers? I have heard of such. What slave art thou?

Gui. A thing
More slavish did I ne'er than answering
A slave without a knock.

Clo. Thou art a robber,
A law-breaker, a villain. Yield thee, thief.

Gui. To who? to thee? What art thou? Have not I An arm as big as thine? a heart as big? Thy words, I grant, are bigger, for I wear not My dagger in my mouth. Say what thou art, why Should I yield to thee?

Clo. Thou villain base,
Know'st me not by my clothes?

Gui. No, nor thy tailor, rascal, Who is thy grandfather: he made those clothes, Which, as it seems, make thee.

Clo. Thou precious varlet, My tailor made them not.

Gui. Hence then, and thank The man that gave them thee. Thou art some fool; I am loath to beat thee.

Clo. Thou injurious thief, Hear but my name, and tremble.

Gui. What's thy name?

Clo. Cloten, thou villain.

Gui. Cloten, thou double villain, be thy name, I cannot tremble at it; were it toad, or adder,
'Twould move me sooner.

Clo. To thy further fear.

Nay, to thy mere confusion, thou shalt know I am son to the queen.

Gui. I am sorry for 't; not seeing Thy worthy as thy birth.

Clo. Art not afraid?

Gui. Those that I reverence, those I fear, to wise;

At fools I laugh, not fear them.

Clo. Die the death
When I have slain thee with my proper hand. I'll follow those that even now fled hence, And on the gates of Lud's town set your head.

Yield, rustic mountaineer.

Re-enter Belarius and Arviragus.

Bel. No companies abroad?

Arr. None in the world. You did mistake his sure.

Bel. I cannot tell; long is it since I saw him. But time hath nothing blur'd those lines of favor Which then he wore; the snatches in his voice And burst of speaking, were as his. I a absolute

'Twas very Cloten.

Arr. In this place we left them. I wish my brother make good time with him. You say he is so fell.

Bel. Being scarce made up,
I mean, to man, he had not apprehension Of roaring terrors; for defect of judgment Is oft the cease of fear. But see, thy brother

Re-enter Guiderius, with Cloten's head.

Gui. This Cloten was a fool, an empty purse. There was no money in 't. Not Hercules Could have knock'd out his brains, for he had none; Yet I not doing this, the fool had borne My head as I do his.

Bel. Gui. I am perfect what: cut off one Cloten head, Son to the queen, after his own report; Who call'd me traitor, mountaineer, and swor With his own single hand he 'd take us in, Displace our heads where, thank the gods! the grow,
And set them on Lud's town.

Bel. We are all undone.

Gui. Why, worthy father, what have we to los But that he swore to take, our lives? The law Protects not us; then why should we be tend To let an arrogant piece of flesh threat us, Play judge and executioner all himself, For we do fear the law? What company Discover you abroad?

Bel. No single soul Can we set eye on; but in all safe reason He must have some attendants. Though he humour Was nothing but mutation, ay, and that From one bad thing to worse; not frenzy, nor Absolute madness could so far have rav'd To bring him here alone. Although, perhaps, It may be heard at court that such as we Cave here, hunt here, are outlaws, and in time, ay make some stronger head; the which he

Day make some stronger head; the which he

'm it is like him, might break out, and swear

e'd fetch us in; yet 'tis not probable

0 come alone, either he so undertaketh, t they so suffering; then on good ground we fear, we do fear this body hath a tail ore perilous than the head.

Arr. Let ordinance

one as the gods foresay it; howsoe'er, y brother hath done well.

Bel. I had no mind

0 hunt this day; the boy Fidele's sickness

'd make my way long forth.

Guí. With his own sword, hich he did wave against my throat, I have

ta'en

is head from him; I'll throw 't into the creek

shind our rock, and let it to the sea,

'td tell the fishes he's the queen's son, Cloten:

at's all I reck.

Exit. Bel.

I fear 'twill be reveng'd.

ould, Polydore, thou hadst not done't! though valour

comes thee well enough.

Arr. Would I had done't,

't the revenge alone pursu'd me! Polydore, love thee brotherly, but envy much ou hast robb'd me of this deed; I would

revenge,

et possible strength might meet, would seek us through

'd put us to our answer.

Bel. Well, 'tis done.

'll hunt no more to-day, nor seek for danger

er here there's no profit. I prithee, to our rock;

ou and Fidele play the cooks; I'll stay

'hasty Polydore return, and bring him

'dinner presently.

Arr. Poor sick Fidele!

'llingally to him; to gain his colour

let a parish of such Clotens blood,

'd praise myself for charity.

Exit. Bel.

O thou goddess! these two princely boys. They are as gentle zephyrs, blowing below the violet, ot wagging his sweet head; and yet as rough,

ir royal blood enchant'd, as the rust'd wind,

ut by the top cloth take the mountain pine,

'd make him stoop to the vale. 'Tis wonder hat an invisible instinct should frame them

roiety unlearn'd, honour untaught, illity not seen from other, valour

at wildly grows in them, but yields a crop

if it had been sow'd! Yet still it's strange hat Cloten's being here to us portends,

't what his death will bring us.

Re-enter Guiderius.

Guí. Where's my brother?

have sent Cloten's clotpoll down the stream, embassy to his mother; his body's hostage or his return.

Solemn music.

Bel. My ingenious instrument!

ark! Polydore, it sounds; but what occasion ath Cadwal now to give it motion? Hark!

Guí. Is he at home?

Bel. He went hence even now.
As once our mother; use like note and words,
Save that Euriphisthe must be Fidele.

Gui. Cadwal, I cannot sing; I'll weep, and word it with thee;
For notes of sorrow out of tune are worse
Than priests and fances that lie.

Arr. We'll speak it then.
Bel. Great griefs, I see, medicine the less, for Clo-

Is quite forgot. He was a queen's son, boys,
And though he came our enemy, remember
He was paid for that; though mean and mighty, roting

Together, have one dust, yet reverence,
That angel of the world, doth make distinction
Of place 'tween high and low. Our foe was princely,
And though you took his life, as being our foe,
Yet bury him as a prince.

Gui. Pray you, fetch him hither.
Thersites' body is as good as Ajax,
When neither are alive.

Arr. If you'll go fetch him,
We'll say our song the whilst. Brother, begin.
Exit Belarius.

Gui. Nay, Cadwal, we must lay his head to the east;
My father hath a reason for't.

Arr. 'Tis true.
Gui. Come on then, and remove him.
Arr. So, begin.

Gui. Fear no more the heat o' the sun,
Nor the furious winter's rage;
Thou and th' worldly task hast done,
Home art gone, and 'tis en'thy wages;
Golden lads and girls all must,
As chimney-sweepers, come to dust.

Arr. Fear no more the frown o' the great,
Thou art past the tyrant's stroke;
Care no more to clothe and eat;
To thee the red is as the oak:
The sceptre, learning, physic, must
All follow this, and come to dust.

Gui. Fear no more the lightning-flash,
Nor the all-dreaded thunder-stone;
Gui. Fear not slander, censure rash;
Arr. Thou hast finish'd joy and mom;
Both, all lovers young, all lovers must
Consign to thee, and come to dust.

Gui. No exerciser harm thee!
Arr. Nor no witchcraft charin thee!
Gui. Ghost unaided forbear thee!
Arr. Nothing ill come near thee!
oth. Quiet consumption have;
And renowned be thy grave!

Re-enter Belarius, with the body of Clo-

We have done our obsequies. Come, lay him down.
Bel. Here's a few flowers, but 'bout midnight, more;
The herbs that have on them cold dew 'o' the night Are strewings fitt'st for graves. Upon their faces.
You were as flowers, now wither'd; even so
These herbs let shall, which we upon you strew.
Come on, away; apart upon our knees.

The ground that gave them first has them again.
Their pleasures here are past, so is their pain.

Exit Belarius, Guideius, and Im. Arvagus. Yes, sir, to Milford-Haven which is the way?

I thank you. By yond bush? Pray, how far therith?

'Od'seittikins! can it be six mile yet?
I have gone all night. Faith, I'll lie down and sleep.

But, soft! no bedfellow! O gods and goddesses

Seeing the body of Clo-

These flowers are like the pleasures of the world.
This bloody man, the care on't. I hope I dream
For so I thought I was a cave-keeper,
And cook to honest creatures; but 'tis not so,
'Twas but a bolt of nothing, shot at nothing.
Which the brain makes of fumes. Our very eye
Are sometimes like our judgments, blind.

Good faith,
I tremble still with fear; but if there be
Yet left in heaven as small a drop of pity
As a wren's eye, fear'd gods, a part of it!
The dream's here still; even when I wake, it is Without me, as within me; not imagin'd, felt.
A headless man! The garments of Posthumus
I know the shape of's leg, this is his hand,
His foot Mercurial, his Martial thigh,
The browns of Hercules; but his Jovial face—
Murther in heaven! How! 'Tis gone. Pisanio
All curses madding Hecuba gave the Greeks,
And mine to boot, be darted on thee! Thou,
Conspir'd with that irreligious devil, Clo-
Hast here cut off my lord. To write and read
Be henceforth t'cacherous! Damn'd Pisanio
Hath with his forged letters, damn'd Pisanio,
From this most bravest vessel of the world
Struck the main-top! O Posthumus! alas!
Where is thy head? where's that? Ay me
where's that!
Pisanio might have kill'd thee at the heart,
And left this head on. How should this be Pisanio?
'Tis he and Clo-; malice and lucre in them
Have slipt this woe here. 0! 'tis pregnant pregnant.
The drug he gave me, which he said was precious
And cordial to me, have I not found it Murderous to the senses? That confirms it home
This is Pisanio's deed, and Clo-; O!
Give colour to my pale cheek with thy blood,
That we the horrid may seem to those Which chance to find us. 0! my lord, my lord
Palls on the body.

Enter Lucius, a Captain and other Officers, and Soothsayer.

Cap. To them the legions garrison'd in Gallia
After your will, have cross'd the sea, attending
You here at Milford-Haven with your ships:
They are in readiness.
Luc. But what from Rome?
Cap. The senate hath stirr'd up the confiners
And gentlemen of Italy, most willing spirits,
That promise noble service; and they come
Under the conduct of bold Iachimo, Sienna's brother.

Luc. When expect you them?
Cap. With the next benefit o' the wind.
This forwardness
Makes our hopes fair. Command our present numbers
Be muster'd; bid the captains look to 't. Now,
sir,
What have you dream'd of late of this war's purpose?
Sooth. Last night the very gods show'd me a vision,
I fast and pray'd for their intelligence, thus:
I saw Jove's bird, the Roman eagle, wing'd
From the spongy south to this part of the west,
There vanish'd in the sunbeams; which portends,
Unless my sins abuse my divination,
Success to the Roman host.
Luc. Dream often so,
And never false. Soft, ho! what trunk is here Without his top? The ruin speaks that sometime
It was a worthy building. How! a page!
Or dead or sleeping on him? But dead rather;
For nature doth abhor to make his bed
With the defunct, or sleep upon the dead.
Let's see the boy's face.
Cym. He's alive, my lord.
Luc. He'll then instruct us of this body.
Young one,
Inform us of thy fortunes, for it seems
They crave to be demanded. Who is this Thou mak'st thy bloody pillow? Or who was he
That, otherwise than noble nature did, Hath alter'd that good picture? What's thy interest
In this sad wreck? How came it? Who is it?
What art thou?
Ino. I am nothing; or if not,
Nothing to be were better. This was my master,
A very valiant Briton and a good, 379
That here by mountaineers lies slain. Alas!
There is no more such masters; I may wander
From east to occident, cry out for service,
By many, all good, serve truly, never Find such another master.
Luc. Lack, good youth!
Thou mov'st no less with thy complaining than thy master in bleeding. Say his name good friend.
Ino. Richard du Champ. Aside. If I do lie and do
So harm by it, though the gods hear, I hope They'll pardon it. Say you, sir?
Luc. Thy name?
Ino. Fidele, sir.
Luc. Thou dost approve thyself the very same;
Thy name well fits thy faith, thy faith thy name.
Wilt take thy chance with me? I will not say
Thou shalt be so well mistrust'd, but be sure
So less belov'd. The Roman emperor's letters,
Sent by a consul to me, should not sooner
Than thine own worth prefer thee. Go with me.
Ino. I'll follow, sir. But first, an't please the gods,
I'll hide my master from the flies, as deep
As these poor pickaxes can dig; and when
With wild wood-leaves and weeds I ha' strew'd his grave,
And on it said a century of prayers,
Such as I can, twice o'er, I'll weep and sigh:
And leaving so his service, follow you,
So please you entertain me.
Luc. Ay, good youth,
And rather father thee than master thee.
My friends,
The boy hath taught us many duties; let us
Find out the prettiest daub'd plot we can,
And make him with our pikes and parissians
A grave; come, arm him. Boy, he is prefer'd
By thee to us, and he shall be inter'd
As soldiers can. Be cheerful; wipe thine eyes:
Some falls are means the happier to arise.
Exeunt.

Scene III.—A Room in Cymbeline's Palace.

Enter Cymbeline, Lords, Pisano, and Attendants.
Cym. Again; and bring me word how 'tis with her.
Exit an Attendant.
A fever with the absence of her son,
A madness, of which her life's in danger.
Heavens!
How deeply you at once do touch me. Imogen,
The great part of my comfort, gone; my queen
Upon a desperate bed, and in a time
When fearful wars point at me; her son gone,
So needful for this present: it strikes n.e. past
The hope of comfort. But for thee, fellow,
Who needs must know of her departure and Dost seem so ignorant, we'll enforce it from thee
By a sharp torture.
Pi. Sir, my life is yours,
I humbly set it at your will; but, for my mistress,
I nothing know where she remains, why gone, Nor when she purposes return. Beseech your highness,
Hold me your loyal servant.
First Lord. Good my liege,
The day that she was missing he was here;
I dare be bound he's true and shall perform
All parts of his subjection loyally. For Coten;
There wants no diligence in seeking him,
And will, no doubt, be found.
Cym. The time is troublesome.
To Pisano. We'll slip you for a season; but our jealousy
Does yet depend.
First Lord. So please your majesty,
The Roman legions, all from Gallia drawn,
Are landed on your coast, with a supply
Of Roman gentlemen, by the senate sent.
Cym. Now for the counsel of my son and queen!
I am amaz'd with matter.
First Lord. Good my liege,
Your preparation can afford no less Than what you hear of; come more, for more you're ready.
The want is but to put those powers in motion
That long to move.
Cym. I thank you. Let's withdraw,
And meet the time as it seeks us. We fear not What can from Italy annoy us, but We grieve at chances here. Away!
Exeunt all but Pisano,
Pis. I heard no letter from my master since I wrote him Imogen was slain; 'tis strange; Nor hear I from my mistress, who did promise To yield me often tidings; neither know I What is betid to Cloten; but remain Perplex’d in all: the heavens still must work. Wherein I am false I am honest; not true to be true. These present wars shall find I love my country, Even to the note o’ the king, or I’ll fall in them. All other doubts, by time let them be clear’d; Fortune brings in some boats that are not steer’d.

Exit.

Scene IV.—Wales. Before the Care of Belarius.
Enter Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.

Gui. The noise is round about us.

Bel. Let us from it.

Arc. What pleasure, sir, find we in life, to lock it From action and adventure?

Gui. Nay, what hope Have we in hiding us? This way, the Romans Must or for Britons slay us, or receive us For barbarous and unnatural revolts During their use, and slay us after.

Bel. Sons, We’ll higher to the mountains; there secure us, To the king’s party there’s no going; newness Of Cloten’s death, we being not known, not muster’d
Among the bands, may drive us to a render Where we have liv’d, and so extort from’s that Which we have done, whose answer would be death Drawn on with torture.

Gui. This is, sir, a doubt In such a time nothing becoming you, Nor satisfying us.

Arc. It is not likely That when they hear the Roman horses neigh, Behold their quarter’d fires, have both their eyes And cars so cloud’d importantly as now, That they will waste their time upon our note, To know from whence we are.

Bel. O! I am known Of many in the army; many years, Though Cloten then but young, you see, not wore him From my remembrance. And, besides, the king Hath not deserv’d my service nor your loves, Who find in my exile the want of breeding, The certainty of this hard life; ‘ye hopeless To have the courtesy your cradle promise’d, But to be still hot summer’s tanlings and The shrinking slaves of winter.

Gui. Than be so Better to cease to be. Pray, sir, to the army: I and my brother are not known; yourself So out of thought, and thereto so o’ergrown, Cannot be question’d.

Arc. By this sun that shines, I’ll thither: what thing is it that I never Did see man die! scarce ever look’d on blood But that of coward hares, hot goats, and venison! Never bestrid a horse, save one that had A rider like myself, who ne’er wore ravel Nor iron on his heel! I am ashamed! To look upon the holy sun, to have The benefit of his bless’d beams, remaining So long a poor unknown.

Gui. By heavens! I’ll go. If you will bless me, sir, and give me leave, I’ll take the better care; but if you will not, The hazard therefore due fall on me by The hands of Romans.

Arc. So say I. Amen.

Bel. No reason I, since of your lives you set So slight a valuation, should reserve My crack’d one to more care. Have with you, boys!
If in your country wars you chance to die, That is my bed too, lads, and there I’ll lie: Lead, lead. Aside. The time seems long; their blood thinks soon, Till it fly out and show them princes born.

Exeunt.

Act V.

Scene I.—Britain. The Roman Camp.
Enter Posthumus, with a bloody handkerchief.

Post. Yea, bloody cloth, I’ll keep thee, for I wish’d Thou shouldst be colour’d thus. You married ones, If each of you shall take this course, how many Must murder wives much better than themselves For wrying but a little! O Pisanio! Every good servant does not all commands; No bond but to do just ones. Gods! if you Should have ta’en vengeance on my faults, I never Had liv’d to put on this; so had you sav’d The noble Imogen to repent, and struck Me, wretch more worth your vengeance. But, alack! You snatch some hence for little faults; that’s love, To have them fall no more; you some permit To second ills with ills, each elder worse, And make them dread it, to the doers’ thrift, But Imogen is your own; do your best wills, And make me bless’d to obey. I am brought hither Among the Italian gentry, and to fight Against my lady’s kingdom; ‘tis enough That, Britain, I have kill’d thy mistress. Peace! I’ll give no wound to thee. Therefore, good heavens, Hear patiently my purpose: I’ll disrobe me Of these Italian weeds, and suit myself As does a Briton peasant; so I’ll fight Against the part I come with, so I’ll die For thee, O Imogen! even for whom my life Is every breath a death; and thus, unknown, Pity’d nor hated, to the face of peril Myself I’ll dedicate. Let me make men know More valour in me than my habits show. Gods! put the strength o’ the Leonati in me, To shame the guise o’ the world, I will begin The fashion, less without and more within.

Exit.
SCENE II.—Field of Battle between the British and Roman Camps.

Enter, at one side, Lucius, Iachimo, and the Roman Army; at the other side, the British Army; Leonatus Posthumus following, like a poor soldier. They march over and out. Alarums. Then enter again, in skirmish, Iachimo and Posthumus; he vanquished and disarmed Iachimo, and then leaves him.

Iach. The heaviness and guilt within my bosom
Takes off my manhood: I have belied a lady,
The princess of this country, and the air on't
Reverently enfeebles me; or could this carl,
A very drudge of nature's, have subdu'd me
In my profession? Knighthoods and honours, borne
As I wear mine, are titles but of scorn.
If that thy gentry, Britain, go before
This lout as he exceeds our lords, the odds
Is that we scarce are men and you are gods.

Exit.

The battle continues; the Britons fly; Cymbeline is taken; then enter, to his rescue, Belarius, Guidierius, and Arviragus.

Bel. Stand, stand! We have the advantage
Of the ground.
The lane is guarded; nothing routs us but
The villany of our fears.
Out, Arr. Stand, stand, and fight!

Re-enter Posthumus, and seconds the Britons;
They rescue Cymbeline, and execut. Then re-enter Lucius, Iachimo, and Imogen.

Luc. Away, boy, from the troops, and save thyself:
For friends kill friends, and the disorder's such
As war were hoodwink'd.
Iach. 'Tis their fresh supplies.
Luc. It is a day turn'd strangely; or betimes
Let's re-inforce, or fly.

SCENE III.—Another Part of the Field.

Enter Posthumus and a British Lord.

Lord. Can'st thou from where they made the stand?
Post. I did; Though you, it seems, come from the fliers.

Lord. I did. Post. No blame be to you, sir; for all was lost,
But that the heavens fought. The king himself
Of his wings destitute, the army broken,
And but the backs of Britons seen, all flying
Through a strait lane; the enemy full-hearted, Lolling the tongue with slaughtering, having
work
More plentiful than tools to do 't, struck down
Some mortally, some slightly touch'd, some falling Merely through fear; that the strait pass was damn'd
With dead men hurrying, and cowards living
To die with lengthen'd shame.

Lord. Where was this lane?
Post. Close by the battle, ditch'd, and wall'd with turf;

Which gave advantage to an ancient soldier,
An honest one, I warrant; who deserv'd
So long a breeding as his white beard came to,
In doing this for's country; athwart the lane,
He, with two striplings, lads more like to run
The country base than to commit such slaughter;
With faces fit for masks, or rather fairer
Than those for preservation's, or shame,
Made good the passage; cried to those that fled,
'Our Britain's harts die flying, not our men;
To darkness fleet souls that fly backwards.

Stand!

Or we are Romans and will give you that
Like beasts which you shun beastly, and may save,

But to look back in frown: stand, stand!'
These three,
Three thousand confident, in act as many,
For three performers are the file when all

The rest do nothing, with this word 'Stand, stand!'

Accommodated by the place, more charming
With their own nobleness, which could have turn'd
A distaff to a lance, gilded pale looks,
Part shame, part spirit renew'd; that some
For, by example, O! a sin in war,

Damn'd in the first beginners; gun to look
The way that they did, and to grin like lions
Upon the pikes o' the hunters. Then began
A stop i' the chaser, a retire, anon
A rout, confusion thick; forthwith they fly

Chickens, the way which they stoo'd eagles; slaves,
The mintries which they victors made. And now our cowards,

Like fragments in hard voyages, became
The life o' the need; having found the backdoor open
Of the unguarded hearts, heavens! how they wound;
Some slain before; some dying; some their friends

O'erborne i' the former wave; ten, chas'd by one,
Are now each one the slaughter-man of twenty;
Those that would die or ere resist are grown

The mortal bugs o' the field.

Lord. This was strange chance:
A narrow lane, an old man, and two boys!
Post. Nay, do not wonder at it; you are made
Rather to wonder at the things you hear
Than to work any. Will you ride upon't,
And vent it for a mockery? Here is one:
'Two boys, an old man twice a boy, a lane,
Preserv'd the Britons, was the Romans' bone.'

Lord. Nay, be not angry, sir.
Post. 'Lack! to what end?
Who dares not stand his foe, I'll be his friend;
For he'll do as he is made to do,
I know he'll quickly fly my friendship too.

You have put me into rime. Lord. Farewell; you're angry. Exit.
Post. Still going? This is a lord! O noble misery!
To be i' the field, and ask 'what news?' of me!
To-day how many would have given their honours
To have sav'd their carcasses! took heel to do't,
And yet died too! I, in mine own woe charm'd,
Could not find death where I did hear him
Nor feel him where he struck: being an ugly monster,
'Tis strange he hides him in fresh cups, soft beds,
Sweet words; or hath more ministers than we
That draw his knives 't the war. Well, I will find him;
For being now a favourer to the Briton,
No more a Briton, I have resum'd again
The part I came in; fight I will no more,
But yi'd me to the veriest hind that shall Once touch my shoulder. Great the slaughter is Here made by the Roman; great the answer be Britons must take. For me, my ransom's
death;
On either side I come to spend my breath,
Which neither here I'll keep nor bear again,
But end it by some means for Iomgen.

Enter two British Captains and Soldiers.

First Cap. Great Jupiter be prais'd! Lucius is taken.
'Tis thought the old man and his sons were angels.
Second Cap. There was a fourth man, in a silly habit,
That gave the affront with them.

First Cap. So 'tis reported;
But none of 'em can be found. Stand! who's there?

Post. A Roman,
Who had not now been drooping here if seconds
Had answer'd him.
Second Cap. Lay hands on him; a dog! a
A leg of Rome shall not return to tell What crows have peck'd them here. He brags his service
As if he were of note: bring him to the king.

Enter Cymbeline, attended; Belarius, Guiderius, Arviragus, Pisario, and Roman Capt.
vies. The Captains present Posthumus to Cymbeline, who delivers him over to a Gaoler;
then exit on sons.

Scene IV. — A British Prison.

Enter Posthumus and two Gaoler.s.

First Gaol. You shall not now be stol'n, you have locks upon you;
So graze as you find pasture.
Second Gaol. Ay, or a stomach.

Post. Most welcome, bondage! for thou art a
way,
I think, to liberty. Yet am I better Than one that's sick of the gout, since he had rather
Groan so in perpetuity than be cur'd.
By the sure physician, death, who is the key To unbar these locks. My conscience, thou art fetter'd
More than my shanks and wrists: you good gods, give me
The penitent instrument to pick that bolt;
Then, free for ever! Is't enough I am sorry?
So children temporal fathers do appease;
Gods are more full of mercy. Must I repent?

I cannot do it better than in gyves,
Desir'd more than constrain'd; to satisfy,
If of my freedom 'tis the main part, take
No stricter render of me than all my.
I know you are more clement than vile men,
Who of their broken debtors take a third, A sixth, a tenth, letting them thrive again
On their abatement; that's not my desire;
For Imogen's dear life take mine; and though
'Tis not so dear, yet 'tis a life; you coin'd it:
'Tween man and man they weigh not every
stamp;
Though light, take pieces for the figure's sake:
You rather mine, being yours; and so, great
powers,
If you will take this audit, take this life,
And cancel these cold bonds. O Imogen!
I'll speak to thee in silence.

Solemn music. Enter, as in an apparition, Sicilius Leonatus, father to Posthumus, an old man, threw a helmet; leading in his hand an ancient matron, his wife, and mother to Posthumus, with music before them. Then, after other music, follow the two young Leonati, brothers to Posthumus, with wounds as they died in the wars. They circle Posthumus round as he lies sleeping.

Sici. No more, thou thunder-master, show
Thy spite on mortal flies:
With Mars fall out, with Jovis chide,
That thy adulteries
Rates and revenges.
Ithath my poor boy done ought but well,
Whose face I never saw?
I died whilst in the womb he stay'd
Attending nature's law:
Whose father then, as men report
Thou orphans' father art,
Thou shouldst have been, and shielded him
From this earth-eating smart.

Mother. Lucina lent not me her aid,
But took me in my throes;
That from me was Posthumus ripe,
Came crying 'mongst his foes,
A thing of pity!

Sici. Great nature, like his ancestry,
Moulded the stuff so fair,
That he deserved the praise of the world,
As great Sicilius' heir.

First Bro. When once he was mature for man,
In Britain where was he
That could stand up his parallel,
Or fruitful object be
In eye of Imogen, that best
Could deem his dignity?

Mother. With marriage wherefor was he mock'd,
To be exil'd, and thrown
From Leonati seat, and cast
From her his dearest one,
Sweet Imogen!

Sici. Why did you suffer Iachino,
Slight thing of Italy,
To taint his nimmer heart and brain
With needless jealousy;
And to become the gnat and scorn
Of the other's villany?
Cymbeline.

Scene IV.

Second Bro. For this fromrules we come, Our parents and we twain, That striking in our country's cause Fell bravely and were slain: Our fealty and Taminus' right With honour to maintain.

First Bro. Like hardiment Posthumus hath To Cymbeline perform'd: Then, Jupiter thy king of gods, Why hast thou thus adjourn'd The graces for his merits due, Being all to disorders turn'd?

Sici. Thy crystal window ope; look out; No lower exercise Upon a valiant race thy harsh And potential injures.

Other. Since, Jupiter, our son is good, Take off his miseries.

Sici. Peep through thy marble mansion; help! Or we poor ghosts will cry To the shining synd of the rest Against thy deity.

Oth Bro. Help, Jupiter! or we appeal, And from thy justice fly.

UPITER descends in thunder and lightning, sitting upon an eagle: he throws a thunderbolt; the Ghosts fall on their knees.

up. No more, you petty spirits of region low, Offend our hearing; hush! How dare you ghosts cease the thunderer, whose bolt, you know, Sky-planted, batters all rebelling coasts! 'mid shadows of Elysium, hence; and rest.

Upon your never-withering banks of flowers: not with mortal accidents oppress.

No care of yours it is; you know 'tis ours. He best love I love I was born: to make my gift;

The more dear'v, delighted. Be content, Our low-had son our godhead will uplift:

His comforts thrive, his trials weil are spent.

Our temple was he married. Rise, and fade! He shall be lord of Lady Imogen,

And happier much by his affliction made.

This tablet lay upon his breast, wherein

Our pleasure his full fortune doth confine; and so, and away; no further with your din

Express impatience, lest you stir up mine.

Mount, eagle, to my palace crystalline.

Descends.

Sici. He came in thunder, his celestial breath Was sulphurous to smell; the holy eagle stole up, as to foot us; his ascension is more sweet than our blessed fields; his royal bird

Prunes the immortal wing and cloys his beak, As when his god is pleas'd.

All. Thanks, Jupiter!

Sici. The marble pavement closes; he is enter'd His radiant roof. Away! and, to be blest, Let us with care perform his great beshot.

The Ghosts vanish.

Post. Awaking. Sleep, thou hast been a grand- sire, and begot A father to me; and thou hast created A mother and two brothers. But, O scorn!

Gone! they went hence so soon as they were born: And so I am awake. Poor wretches that depend On greatness' favour dream as I have done; Wake, and find nothing. But, alas! I swerve: Many dream not to find, neither deserve,

And yet are steep'd in favours; so am I, That have this golden chance and know not why. What fairies haunt this ground? A book? O rare one!

Be not, as is our fangled world, a garment Nobler than that it covers: let thy effects So follow, to be most unlike our courtiers, As good as promise.

Whenas a lion's whelp shall, to himself unknown, without seeking food, and be embraced by a piece of tender air; and when from a stately cedar shall be lopped branches, which, being dead many years, shall after revive, be jointed to the old stock, and freshly grove, then shall Posthumus end his miseries, Britain be fortunate, and flourish in peace and plenty.

'Tis still a dream, or else such stuff as madmen Tongue and brain not; either both or nothing; Or senseless speaking, or a speaking Such as sense cannot untie. Be what it is, The action of my life is like it, which I'll keep, if but for sympathy.

Re-enter Goolers.

First Gool. Come, sir, are you ready for death?

Post. Over-roasted rather; ready long ago.

First Gool. Hanging is the word, sir; if you be ready for that, you are well cooked.

Post. So, if I prove a good repast to the spectators, the dish pays the shot.

First Gool. A heavy reckoning for you, sir; but the comfort is, you shall be called to no more payments, fear no more tavern-bills, which are often the sadness of parting, as the procuring of mirth. You come in fain for want of meat, depart reeling with too much drink, sorry that you have paid too much, and sorry that you are paid too much; purse and brain both empty; the brain the heavier for being too light, the purse too light, being drawn of heaviness: of this contradiction you shall now be quit. O the charity of a penny cord! it sums up thousands in a trice: you have no true debtor and creditor but it; of what's past, is, and to come, the discharge. Your neck, sir, is pen, book, and counters; so the acquaintance follows.

Post. I am merrier to die than thou art to live.

First Gool. Indeed, sir, he that sleeps feels not the toothache; but a man that were to sleep your sleep, and a hangman to help him to bed, I think he would change places with his officer; for, look you, sir, you know not which way you shall go.

Post. Yes, indeed do I, fellow.

First Gool. Your death has eyes in its head, then; I have not seen him so pictured: you must either be directed by some that take upon them to know, or take upon yourself that which I am sure you do not know, or jump the after inquiry on your own peril: and how you shall speed in your journey's end, I think you'll never return to tell one.

Post. I tell thee, fellow, there are none want eyes to direct them the way I am going but such as wink and will not use them.

First Gook. What an infinite mock is this, that a man should have the best use of eyes to see the way of blindness! I am sure hanging's the way of winking.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Knock off his manacles; bring your prisoner to the king.

Post. Thou bring'st good news; I am called to be made free.

First Gook. I'll be hanged then.

Post. Thou shalt be then freer than a gaoler; no bolts for the dead.

First Gook. Unless a man would marry a gallows and beget young gibbets, I never saw one so prone. Yet, on my conscience, there are verier knaves desire to live, for all he be a Roman; and there be some of them too that die against their wills; so should I, if I were one. I would we were all of one mind, and one mind good; O! there were desolation of gaullers and gallows.

I speak against my present profit, but my wish hath a preferment in't.

Exit.

SCENE V.—Cymbeline's Tent.

Enter Cymbeline, Belarius, Guiderius, Arviragus, Pisanio, Lords, Officers, and Attendants.

Cym. Stand by my side, you whom the gods have made Preservers of my throne. Woe is my heart That the poor soldier that so richly fought, Whose rags sham'd gilded arms, whose naked breast Stepp'd before targets of proof, cannot be found: He shall be happy that can find him, if Our grace can make him so.

Bel. I never saw Such noble fury in so poor a thing; Such precious deeds in one that promis'd nought But beggary and poor looks.

Cym. No tidings of him? Piz. He hath been search'd among the dead and living, But no trace of him.

Cym. To my grief, I am The heir of his reward; To Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus, which I will add To you, the liver, heart, and brain of Britain, By whom, I grant, she lives. 'Tis now the time To ask of whence you are: report it.

Bel. Sir, In Cambria are we born, and gentlemen: Further to boast we were neither true nor modest, Unless I add, we are honest.

Cym. Bow your knees. Arise, my knights o' the battle: I create you Companions to our person, and will fit you With dignities becoming your estates.

Enter Cornelius and Ladies.

There's business in these faces. Why so sadly Greet you our victory? you look like Romans, And not o' the court of Britain.

Cor. To sour your happiness, I must report The queen is dead.

Cym. Who worse than a physician? But I consider, By medicine life may be prolong'd, yet death Will seize the doctor too. How ended she? Cor. With horror, madly dying, like her life; Which, being cruel to the world, concluded Most cruel to herself. What she confess'd I will report, so please you: these her women Can trip me if I err; who with wet checks Were present when she finish'd.

Cym. Prithce, say.

Cor. First, she confess'd she never lov'd you, only Affected greatness got by you, not you; Married your royalty, was wife to your place; Abhor'd your person.

Cym. She alone knew this; And, but she spoke it dying, I would not Believe her lips in opening it. Proceed.

Cor. Your daughter, whom she bore in hand to love With such integrity, she did confess Was as a scorpion to her sight; whose life, But that her flight prevented it, she had Ta'en off by poison.

Cym. O most delicate fiend! Is 'tis can read a woman? Is there more? Cor. More, sir, and worse. She did confess she had For you a mortal mineral; which, being took, Should by the minute feed on life, and linger By inches waste you; in which time she purpos'd, By watching, weeping, tendance, kissing, to Overcome you with her show; and in time When she had fitted you with her craft, to work Her son into the adoption of the crown; But failing of her end by his strange absence, Grew shameless-desperate; open'd, in despite Of heaven and men, her purposes; repeat'd The evils she hatch'd were not effect'd: so Despairing died.

Cym. Heard you all this, her women and Lady. We did, so please your highness.

Cym. Mine eyes Were not in fault, for she was beautiful; Mine ears, that heard her flattery; nor my heart, That thought her like her seeming; it had been vicious To have mistrusted her; yet, O my daughter! That it was folly in me, thou may'st say, And prove it in thy feeling. Heaven mend all!

Enter Lucius, Iachimo, the Soothsayer, and other Roman Prisoners, guarded; Posthumus behind, and Imogen.

Thou com'st not, Cains, now for tribute; that The Britons have raz'd out, though with the loss Of many a bold one; whose kinsmen have made suit That their good souls may be appeas'd with slaughter Of you their captives, which ourself have granted: So, think of your estate.

Luc. Consider, sir, the chance of war: the day Was yours by accident; had it gone with us, We should not, when the blood was cool, have threaten'd prisoners with the sword. But since the ill have it thus, that nothing but our lives ay be call’d ransom, let it come; sufficeth 20
Roman with a Roman’s heart can suffer; 21 agustus lives to think on’t; and so much or my peculiar care. This one thing only will entreat; my boy, a Briton born, at him be ransom’d; never master had pace so kind, so duteous, diligent, tender over his occasions, true, feat, so nurse-like. Let his virtue join my request, which I’ll make bold your highness
not deny; he hath done no Briton harm, so ough he have serv’d a Roman. Save him, sir, ad spare no blood beside.
Cym. I have surely seen him; is favour is familiar to me. Boy, you hast look’d thyself into my grace, 40 art mine own. I know not why nor wherefore, say ‘live, boy’; ne’er thank thy master; live;
ask of Cymbeline what boon thou wilt, 41
ting my bounty and thy state, I’ll give it;
though thou do demand a prisoner,
 noblest ta’en. 42
Imo. I humbly thank your highness. 43
Luc. I do not bid thee beg my life, good lad, yet I know thou wilt. 44
Imo. No, no; alack! 45
ere’s other work in hand. I see a thing letter to me as death; your life, good master, ust shuffle for itself.
Luc. The boy distains me, leaves me, scorns me; briefly die their joys at place them on the truth of girls and boys,
y stands he so perplex’d? 46
Cym. What wouldst thou, boy? 47 love thee more and more; think more and fat’s best to ask. Know’st thou thou look’st on? speak? 48
it have him live? Is he thy kin? thy friend?
Imo. He is a Roman; no more kin to me an I to thy highness; who, being born your s, something nearer.
Cym. Wherefore eyest him so? 49
Imo. I’ll tell you, sir, in private, if you please give me hearing.
Cym. Ay, with all my heart, nd lend my best attention. What’s thy name? 50
Imo. Fidele, sir.
Cym. Thou’rt my good youth, my page;
’ll be thy master; walk with me; speak freely.
Cymbeline and Imogen converse apart. 51
Bel. Is not this boy rev’d from death? 52
Ir. One and another at more resembles; that sweet rosie lad, 53 ho died, and was Fidele. What think you?
Gui. The same dead thing alive.
Bel. Peace, peace! see further; he eyes us not; forbear; natures may be alike; were’t he, I am sure
I would have spoke to us.
Gui. But we saw him dead.
Bel. Be silent; let’s see further.
Pic. Aside. 54
It is my mistress!
Since she is living, let the time run on
To good or bad. 55
Cymbeline and Imogen come forward. 56
Cym. Come, stand thou by our side; 57
Make thy demand aloud. To Iachimo. Sir, step you forth; 58
Give answer to this boy, and do it freely,
Or, by our greatness and the grace of it,
Which is our honour, bitter torture shall Winnow the truth from falsehood. On, speak to him.
Iomo. My boon is, that this gentleman may render
Of whom he had this ring.
Post. Aside. What’s that to him?
Cym. That diamond upon your finger, say
How came it yours? 59
Iach. Thou’lt torture me to leave unspoken
that
Which, to be spoke, would torture thee.
Cym. How! me? 60
Iach. I am glad to be constrain’d to utter that
Which torments me to conceal. By villany
I got this ring; ’twas Leonatus’ jewel, Whom thou didst banish, and, which more may grieve thee,
As it doth me, a nobler sir ne’er liv’d
’Twixt sky and ground. Wilt thou hear more,
my lord?
Cym. All that belongs to this.
Iach. That paragon, thy daughter,
For whom my heart drops blood, and my false spirits
Quail to remember,—Give me leave; I faint.
Cym. My daughter! what of her? Renew thy strength; 61
I had rather thou shouldst live while nature
will,
Than die ere I hear more. Strive, man, and
speak.
Iach. Upon a time, unhappy was the clock
That struck the hour! it was in Rome; accrues’d
The mansion where! ’twas at a feast; O! would
Our viands had been poison’d, or at least
Those which I heav’d to head; the good Post-numus,
What should I say? he was too good to be
Where ill men were; and was the best of all
Amongst the rar’st of good ones; sitting sadly,
Hearing us praise our loves of Italy
Iam.
For beauty that made barren the swell’d boast
Of him that best could speak; for feature laming
The shrine of Venus, or straight-pight Minerva,
Postures beyond brief nature; for condition,
A shop of all the qualities that man
Loves woman for; besides that hook of wiving,
Fairness which strikes the eye.
Cym. I stand on fire.
Come to the matter.
Iach. All too soon I shall,
Unless thou would’st grieve quickly. This Posthumus,
Most like a noble lord in love, and one
That had a royal lover, took his hint;
And, not displeasing whom we please’d, therein
He was as calm as virtue, he began His mistress’ picture; which by his tongue being made,
And then a mind put in't, either our brags
Were crack'd of kitchen-trulls, or his description
Prov'd us unspeaking sots.

Cym. Nay, nay, to the purpose.

Iach. Your daughter's chastity, there it begins.
He spake of her as Dian had hot dreams, and
And she alone was cold; whereat I, wretch,
Made scruple of his praise, and wager'd with

Pieces of gold 'gainst this, which then he wore
Upon his honour'd finger, to attain
In the place of 's bad, and win this ring
By hers and mine adultery. He, true knight,
No lesser of her honour confident
Than I did truly find her, stakes this ring;
And would so, had it been a carbuncle
Of Phoebus' wheel; and might so safely, had it
Been all the worth of 's car. Away to Britain
Post I in this design. Well may you, sir,
Remember me at court, where I was taught
Of your chaste daughter the wide difference
'Twixt amorous and villainous. Being thus

Of hope, not longing, mine Italian brain
'Gan in your diller Britain operate
Most vilely; for my vantage, excellent:
And, to be brief, my practice so prevail'd,
That I return'd with similar proof, enough
To make the noble Leonatus mad,
By wounding his belief in her renown
With tokens thus, and thus; averring notes
Of chamber-hanging, pictures, this her bracelet;
O cunning! how I got it; nay, some marks
Of secret on her person, that he could not
But think her bond of chastity quite crack'd,
I having ta'en the forfeit. Whereupon,
Methinks I see him now.—

Post. Coming forward. Ay, so thou dost, Italian fiend! Ay me! most credulous fool, Eregious murderer, thief, any thing
That's due to all the villains past, in being,
To come. O! give me cord, or knife, or poison,
Some upright justice. Thou, king, send out
For torturers ingenious; it is I
That all the abhorred things o' the earth

By being worse than they. I am Posthumus,
That kill'd thy daughter; villain-like, I lie;
That cause's a lesser villain than myself,
A sacrilegious thief, to do't; the temple
Of virtue was she; yea, and she herself.

Spit, and throw stones, cast mire upon me, set
The dogs o' the street to bay me; every villain
Be call'd Posthumus Leonatus; and
Be villain less than twas! O Imogen!
My queen, my life, my wife! O Imogen,
Imogen, Imogen!

Imo. Peace, my lord! hear, hear!

Post. Shalt's have a play of this? Thou sorrowful page,
There lie thy part. Striking her; she falls.

Pis. O gentlemen! help

Mine and your mistress. O! my Lord Posthumus,

You ne'er kill'd Imogen till now. Help, help!

Mine honour'd lady!

Cym. Does the world go round?

Post. How comes these staggerers on me?

Pis. Wake, my mistress!
Let me end the story: I lew him there.

I have spoken it, and I did it. He was a prince.

A most incivile one. The wrongs he did me were nothing prince-like; for he did provoke me th' language that would make me spurn the sea, it could so roar to me. I cut off his head; I am right glad he is not standing here to tell this tale of mine.

I am sorry for thee: thine own tongue thou art condemn'd, and must dure our law. Thou'rt dead.

That headless man hought had been my lord.

Bind the offender, and take him from our presence.

Stay, sir king. Is man is better than the man he slew, well descended as thyself; and hath of thee merited than a band of Cloten's ever scar for. To the Guard. Let his arms alone; they were not born for bondage.

Why, old soldier, thou dost the worth thou art unpaid for, tasting of our wrath? How of descent good as we?

In that he spake too far.

And thou shalt die for't.

We will die all three: I will prove that two on's are as good I have given out him. My sons, I must mine own part unfold a dangerous speech, laugh, lapily, well for you, sir. Your danger's ours.

And our good his.

Have at it then. By leave; ou hast, great king, a subject who was call'd harius.

What of him? he is banish'd traitor.

He it is that hath sum'd this age: indeed, a banish'd man; now not how a traitor.

Take him hence: the whole world shall not save him.

Not too hot: first pay me for the nursing of thy sons; id let it be confiscate all so soon I have receiv'd it.

Nursing of my sons!

I am too blunt and saucy; here's my knee: e I arise I will prefer my sons; id not spare not the old father. Mighty sir, use two young gentlemen, that call me father id think they are my sons are none of mine; ye are the issue of your loins, my liege, id blood of your begetting.

How! my issue!

Bel. So sure as you your father's. I, old Morgan, Am that Belarius whom you sometime banish'd: Your pleasure was my mere offence, my punishment itself, and all my treason; that I suffer'd Was all the harm I did. These gentle princes, For such and so they are, these twenty years Have I train'd up; those arts they have as I Could put into them; my breeding was, sir, as Your highness knows. Their nurse, Europhile, Whom for the theft I wedded, stole these children Upon my banishment: I mov'd her to't, Having receiv'd the punishment before, For that which I did then; beaten for loyalty Excited me to treason. Their dear loss, The more of you 'twas felt the more it shap'd Unto my end of stealing them. But, gracious sir, Here are your sons again; and I must lose Two of the sweet'st companions in the world. The beneficence of these covering heavens Fall on their heads like dew! for they are worthy To inlay heaven with stars.

Bel. Be pleas'd awhile.

This gentleman, whom I call Polidore, Most worthy prince, as yours, is true Guiderius; This gentleman, my Cadwal, Arrivagus, Your younger princely son; he, sir, was lapp'd In a most curious mantle, wrought by the hand Of his queen mother, which for more probation I can with ease produce.

Guiderius had Upon his neck a mole, a sanguine star; It was a mark of wonder.

This is he, Who hath upon him still that natural stamp. It was wise nature's end in the donation, To be his evidence now.

O! what, am I A mother to the birth of three? Ne'er mother Rejoiced deliverance more. Bless'd pray you be, That, after this strange starting from your orbs, You may reign in them now. O Imogen! Thou hast lost by this a kingdom.

I must, No my lord; I have got two worlds by't. O my gentle brothers!

Have we thus met? O! never say hereafter But I am truest speaker: you call'd me brother, When I was but your sister; I you brothers, When ye were so indeed.

Did you e'er meet?

Ay, my good lord.

And at first meeting lov'd;

Continued so, until we thought he died.

Cor. By the queen's dram she swallow'd.

O rare instinct! When shall I hear all through? This fierce abridgement Hath to it circumstantial branches, which Distinction should be rich in. Where? how liv'd you? And when came you to serve our Roman captive? How parted with your brothers? how first met them?
Why fled you from the court, and whither? These,
And your three motives to the battle, with
I know not how much more, should be demanded,
And all the other by-dependencies,
From chance to chance, but nor the time nor place
Will serve our long interjubations. See,
Posthumus anchors upon Imogen,
And she, like harmless lightning, throws her eye
On him, her brothers, me, her master, hitting
Each object with a joy; the counterchange
Is severally in all. Let’s quit this ground,
And smoke the temple with our sacrifices.
To Belarius. Thou art my brother; so we’ll hold thee ever.

To this gracious season.
Cym. All o’erjoy’d,
Save these in bonds; let them be joyful too,
For they shall taste our comfort.

I will yet do you service.
Luc. Happy be you!
Cym. The forlorn soldier, that so nobly fought,
He would have well becom’d this place and grace’d
The thankings of a king.

I am, sir,
The soldier that did company these three
In poor besemiing; ‘twas a fitment for
The purpose I then follow’d. That I was he, Speak, Iachimo; I had you down and might Have made you finish.

Jack. Knelling.
I am down again;
But now my heavy conscience sinks my knee,
As then your force did. Take that life, beseech you,
Which I so often owe, but your ring first,
And here the bracelet of the truest princess
That ever swore her faith.

Kneel not to me:
The power that I have on you is to spare you;
The malice towards you to forgive you. Live,
And deal with others better.

Cym. Nobly doom’d.
We’ll learn our freeness of a son-in-law:
Pardon’s the word to all.
Arr. You holp us, sir,
As you did mean indeed to be our brother;
Joy’d are we that you are.

Post. Your servant, princes. Good my lord of Rome,
Call forth your soothsayer. As I slept, methought
Great Jupiter, upon his eagle back’d,
Appear’d to me, with other spiritly shows
Of mine own kindred: when I wak’d, I found
This label on my bosom; whose containing
Is so from sense in hardness that I can Make no collection of it; let him show
His skill in the construction.

Luc. Philarmonus!

GOWER, as Chorus.

SCENE. Dispersedly in various Countries.

ACT I.

Enter Gower.

Before the Palace of Antioch.

To sing a song that old was sung,
From ashes ancient Gower is come,
Assuming man's infirmities,
To glad your ear, and please your eyes.
It hath been sung at festivals,
On ember-eves and holy-ales;
And lords and ladies in their lives
Have read it for restoratives:
The purchase is to make men glorious;
Et bonum quo antiquius, co melius.

If you, born in these latter times,
When wit's more ripe accept my rimes,
And that to hear an old man sing
May to your wishes pleasure bring,
I life would wish, and that I might Waste it for you like taper-light.
This Antioch, then, Antiochus the Great
Built up, this city, for his chiefest seat,
The fairest in all Syria,
I tell you what mine authors say:
This king unto him took a faire,
Who died and left a female heir,
So buxom, blithe, and full of face
As heaven had lent her all his grace;
With whom the father liking took,
And her to incest did provoke.
Bad child, worse father! to entice his own
To evil should be done by none.

But custom what they did begin
Was with long use account no sin.
The beauty of this sinful dame
Made many princes thither frame,
To seek her as a belfellow,
In marriage-pleasures playfellow:
Which to prevent he made a law,
To keep her still, and men in awe,
That whoso ask'd her for his wife,
His riddle told not, lost his life:
So for her many a wight did die,
As you grim looks do testify.

What now ensues, to the judgment of your eye
I give, my cause who best can justify.

Exit.

SCENE I.—Antioch. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Antiochus, Pericles, and Attendants.

Ant. Young Prince of Tyre, you have at large receiv'd
The danger of the task you undertake.
Per. I have, Antiochus, and, with a soul
Embolden'd with the glory of her praise,
Think death no hazard in this enterprise.
Ant. Bring in our daughter, clothed like a bride,
For the embrazements even of Jove himself;
At whose conception, till Lucina reign'd,
Nature this dower gave, to glad her presence,
The senate-house of planets all did sit,
To knit in her their best perfections.
Music. Enter the Daughter of Antiochus.

Per. See, where she comes apparell'd like the spring,
Graces her subjects, and her thoughts the king
Of every virtue gives renown to men;
Her face the book of praises, where is read
Nothing but curious pleasures, as from thence Sorrow were ever raz'd, and testy wrath
Could never be her mild companion.
You gods, that made me man, and sway in love,
That have inflamed desire in my breast
To taste the fruit of you celestial tree
Or die in the adventure, be my helps,
As I am son and servant to your will,
To compass such a boundless happiness!

Ant. Prince Pericles,

Per. That would be son to great Antiochus.

Ant. Before thee stands this fair Hesperides,
With golden fruit, but dangerous to be touch'd;
For death-like dragons here affright the hard;
Her face, like heaven, enticeth thee to view;
Her countless glory, which desert must gain;
And which, without desert, because thine eye
Presumes to reach, all thy whole heap must die.
You sometime famous princes, like thyself,
Drawn by report, adventurous by desire,
Tell thee with speechless tongues and semblance pale,
That without covering, save you field of stars,
They here stand martyrs, slain in Cupid's wars;
And with dead cheeks advise thee to desist
For going on death's net, whom none resist.

Per. Antiochus, I thank thee, who hath taught
My frail mortality to know itself,
And by those fearful objects to prepare
This body, like to them, to what I must;
For death remember'd should be like a mirror,
Who tells us life's but breath, to trust it, error.
I'll make my will then; and as sick men do,
Who know the world, see heaven, but feeling woe,
Gripe not at earthly joys as erst they did:
So I bequeath a happy peace to you
And all good men, as every prince should do;
My riches to the earth from whence they came,
To the Daughter of Antiochus. But my unsotted fire of love to you.
Thus ready for the way of life or death,
I wait the sharpest blow.

Ant. Scorning advice, read the conclusion then;
Which read and not expounded, 'tis decreed,
As these before thee thou thyself shalt bleed.

Daughter of all say'd yet, may'st thou prove prosperous!
Of all say'd yet, I wish thee happiness.

Per. Like a bold champion, I assume the lists,
Nor ask advice of any other thought
But faithfulness and courage.

I am no viper, yet I feel
On mother's flesh which did me breed;
I sought a husband, in which labour
I found that kindness in a father,
He's father, son, and husband mild,
I mother, wife, and yet his child.
How they may be, and yet in two,
As you will live, resolve it you.

Sharp physic is the last: but, O you powers!
That give heaven countless eyes to view men,
Why cloud they not their sights perpetually,
If this be true, which makes man pale to read?
Fair glass of light, I lov'd you, and could still
Were not this glorious casket stor'd with ill,
But I must tell you, now my thoughts revolt;
For he's no man on whom perfections wait.
That, knowing sin within, will touch the gate.
You are a fair viol, and your sense the strings
Who, finger'd to make man his lawful music,
Would draw heaven down and all the gods hearken;
But being play'd upon before your time,
Hell only dance at so harsh a chime.
Good sooth, I care not for you.

Ant. Prince Pericles, touch not, upon thy life
For that's an article within our law,
As dangerous as the rest. Your time's expiring.
Either expound now or receive your sentence.

Per. Great king,

Few love to hear the sins they love to act;
'Twould braid yourself too near for me to tell!
Who has a book of all that monarchs do,
He's more secure to keep it shut than shown;
For vice repeated is like the wandering wind,
Blows dust in others' eyes, to spread itself;
And yet the end of all is bought thus dear,
The breath is gone, and the sore eyes see clear
To stop the air would hurt them. The blind mole casts Copp'd hills towards heaven, to tell the earth
Is throng'd by man's oppression; and the poor worm doth die for 't.
Kings are earth's gods; in vice their law's their will;
And if Jove stray, who dares say Jove doth ill?
It is enough you know; and it is fit,
What being more known grows worse, to smother it.
All love the womb that their first being bred,
Then give my tongue like leave to love my head,

Ant. Aside. Heaven! that I had thy head
he has found the meaning;
But I will groze with him. Young Prince of Tyre
Though by the tenour of our strict edict,
Your exposition misinterpreting,
We might proceed to cancel of your days;
Yet hope, succeeding from so fair a tree
As your fair self, doth tune us otherwise:
Forty days longer we do respite you;
If by which time our secret be undone,
This mercy shows we'll joy in such a son:
And until then your entertain shall be
As doth befit our honour and your worth.

Exeunt all but Pericles.

Per. How courtesy would seem to cover sin,
What when is done is like an hypocrite.
The which is good in nothing but in sight!
If it be true that I interpret false,
Then were it certain you were not so bad
As with foul incest to abuse your soul;
Where now you're both a father and a son,
By your untimely claspsings with your child,
Which pleasure fits a husband, not a father;
And she an eater of her mother's flesh,
By the defiling of her parent's bed;
And both like serpents are, who though they feed
n sweetest flowers, yet they poison breed.

Ant. That have their first conception by mis-dread,
Have after-nourishment and life by care;
And what was first but fear what might be done,
Grows elier now and cares it be not done.
And so with me: the great Antiochus,
'Gainst whom I am too little to contend,
Since he is so great can make his will his act,
Will think me speaking, though I swear to silence;
Nor boots it me to say I honour him,
If he suspect I may dishonour him;
And what may make him blush in being known,
He'll stop the course by which it might be known.
With hostile forces he'll o'er-spread the land,
And with the ostent of war will look so huge,
Amazement shall drive courage from the state,
Our men be vanquish'd ere they do resists,
And subjects punisht'd that ne'er thought offence:
Which care of them, not pity of myself,
Who am no more but as the tops of trees,
Which fence the roots they grow by and defend them,
Makes both my body pine and soul to languish,
And punish that before that he would punish.

Enter Helicanus and other Lords.

First Lord. Joy and all comfort in your sacred breast!

Second Lord. And keep your mind, till you return to us,
Peaceful and comfortable!

Hel. Peace, peace! and give experience tongue.
They do abuse the king that flatter him;
For flattery is the bellows blow up sin;
The thing which is flatter'd, but a spark,
To which that blast gives heat and stronger glowing;
Whereas reproof, obedient and in order,
Fits kings, as they are men, for they may err:
When Signior Sooth here does proclaim a peace,
He flatters you, makes war upon your life.
Prince, pardon me, or strike me, if you please;
I cannot be much lower than my knees.

Per. All leave us else; but let your cares o'look
What shipping and what lading's in our haven,
And then return to us.

Exeunt LordS.

Helicanus, thou

Hast mov'd us; what seest thou in our looks?

Hel. An angry brow, dread lord.

Per. If there be such a dart in princes' frowns,
How durst thy tongue move anger to our face?

Hel. How dare the plants look up to heaven,
From whence they have their nourishment?

Per. Thou know'st I have power
To take thy life from thee.

Hel. Kneeling. I have ground the axe myself;
Do you but strike the blow.

Per. Rise, prithee, rise; sit down; thou art no flatterer:
I thank thee for it; and heaven forbid
That kings should let their ears hear their faults hid!
Fit counsellor and servant for a prince,
Who by thy wisdom mak'st a prince thy servant,
What would'st thou have me do?

Hel. To bear with patience
Such griefs as you yourself do lay upon yourself.
PERICLES.

Thou speak'st like a physician, Helicanus, That minister'st a potion unto me. Therefore I went to Antioch, Where as thou know'st, against the face of death I sought the purchase of a glorious beauty, 71 From whence an issue I might propagate, Are arms to princes and bring joys to subjects; Her face was to mine eye beyond all wonder; But the hark in thine ear, as black as incest; Whereby my knowledge found, the sinful father Seem'd not to strike, but smooth; but thou know'st this,

'Tis time to fear when tyrants seem to kiss. Which fear so grew in me, I hither fled, Under the covering of a careful night, 83 Who seem'd my good protector; and, being here, Bethought me what was past, what might succeed. I knew him tyrannous; and tyrants' fears Decrease not, but grow faster than the years. And should he doubt it, as no doubt he doth, That I should open to the listening air How many worthy princes' bloods were shed, To keep his bed of blackness unlaid ope, To stop that doubt he'll fill this land with arms, And make pretence of wrong that I have done him; 99 When all, for mine, if I may call offence, Must feel war's blow, who spares not innocence: Which love to all, of which thyself art one, Who now reprovest me for it,—

Hel. Alas! sir

Per. Drew sleep out of mine eyes, blood from my cheeks, Musings into my mind, with thousand doubts How I might stop this tempest ere it came; And finding little comfort to relieve them, I thought it princely charity to grieve them. 100 Hel. Well, my lord, since you have given me leave to speak, Freely will I speak. Antiochus you fear, And justly too, I think, you fear the tyrant, Who either by public war or private treason Will take away your life. Therefore, my lord, go travel for a while, Till that his rage and anger be forgot, Or till the Destinies do cut his thread of life. Your rule direct to any; if to me, Day serves not light more faithful than I'll be. 110 Per. I do not doubt thy faith;

But should he wrong my liberties in my absence?

Hel. We'll mingle our bloods together in the earth, From whence we had our being and our birth.

Per. Tyre, I now look from thee then, and to Tarsus I intend my travel, where I'll hear from thee, And by whose letters I'll dispose myself. The care I had and have of subjects' good On thee I lay, whose wisdom's strength can bear it. I'll take thy word for faith, not ask thine oath; Who shuns not to break one will sure crack both. 120 But in our orbs we'll live so round and safe, That time of both this truth shall ne'er convince, Thou show'st a subject's shine, I a true prince.

Scene III.—The Same. An Antechamber in the Palace.

Enter Thaliard.

Thal. So this is Tyre, and this the court. Therefore I must I kill King Pericles; and if I do it not, I am sure to be hanged at home: 'tis dangerous. Well, I perceive he was a wise fellow, and had good discretion, that, being bid to ask what he would of the king, desired he might know none of his secrets; now do I see he had some reason for't; for if a king bid man be a villain, 's bound by the indention of his oath to be one. Hush! here come the lords of Tyre.

Enter Helicanus, Escan, and other Lords.

Hel. You shall not need, my fellow peers of Tyre, Further to question me of your king's departure. His seal'd commission, left in trust with me, Doth speak sufficiently he's gone to travel. Thal. Aside. How! the king gone! Hel. If further yet you will be satisfied, Why, as it were unlicensed of your loves, He would depart, I'll give some light unto your Being at Antioch—

Thal. Aside. What from Antioch? 2 Hel. Royal Antiochus, on what cause I know not, Took some displeasure at him, at least he judg'd so; And doubting lest that he had err'd or sinn'd, To show his sorrow he'd correct himself; So puts himself unto the shipman's toll, With whom each minute threatens life or death. Thal. Aside. Well, I perceive I shall not be hang'd now, although I would; But since he's gone, the king it sure must please He's escap'd the land, to perish at the sea. I'll present myself. Peace to the lords of Tyre. Hel. Lord Thaliard from Antiochus is well come.

Thal. From him I come With message unto princely Pericles; But since my landing I have understood Your lord has betook himself to unknown travels, My message must return from whence it came. Hel. We have no reason to desire it, Commended to our master, not to us: Yet, ere you shall depart, this we desire, As friends to Antioch, we may feast in Tyre.

Scene IV.—Tarsus. A Room in the Governor's House.

Enter Cleon, Dionyza, and Attendants.

Cleon. My Dionyza, shall we rest us here, And by relating tales of others' griefs, See if 'twill teach us to forget our own? Dio. That were to blow at fire in hope to quench it; For who digs hills because they do aspire Throws down one mountain to cast up a higher. O my distressed lord! even such our griefs are; Here they're but felt, and seen with mischief's eyes,

PERICLES.

Enter, with Attendants.

Per. Lord governor, for so we hear you are, Let not our ships and number of our men Be like a beacon fir'd to amaze your eyes. We have heard your miseries as far as Tyre, And seen the desolation of your streets: Nor come we to add sorrow to your tears, But to relieve them of their heavy load; And on these ships, you happily may think Are like the Trojan horse was stuff'd within With bloody veins, expecting overthrow, Are stord with corn to make your needy bread, And give them life whom hunger starv'd half dead.

All. The gods of Greece protect you! And we'll pray for you.

Per. Arise, I pray you, rise: We do not look for reverence, but for love, And harbourage for ourself, our ships, and men. Per. Which welcome we'll accept; feast here awhile, Until our stars that frown lend us a smile.

Exit.

ACT II.

Enter GOWER.

Here have you seen a mighty king His child, I wis, to incest bring; A better prince and benign lord, That will prove awful both in deed and word. Be quiet then as men should be, Till he hath pass'd necessity. I'll show you those in troubles reign, Losing a mite, a mountain gain.
The good in conversation,
To whom I give my benison,
Is still at Tarsus, where each man
Thinks all is writ he spoken can;
And, to remember what he does,
Build his statue to make him glorious:
But tidings to the contrary
Are brought your eyes; what need speak I?

Dumb show.

Enter at one door PERICLES, talking with CLEON; all the Train with them. Enter at another door a Gentleman, with a letter to PERICLES; PERICLES shows the letter to CLEON; then gives the Messenger a reward, and knight him. Exeunt PERICLES, CLEON, etc., severally.

Good Helicon, that stay'd at home, Not to eat honey like a drone From others' labours; for though he strive To kill bad, keep good alive; And to fulfill his prince's desire, Sends word of all that hap in Tyre: How Thaliard came full bent with sin And had intent to murder him; And that in Tarsus was not best Longer for him to make his rest. He, doing so, put forth to sea, Where when men been, there's seldom ease; For now the wind begins to blow; Thunder above and deeps below Make such unquiet, that the ship Should house him safe is wreck'd and split; And he, good prince, having all lost, By wars from coast to coast is lost. All perished of man, of pelf, Ne aught escape but himself; Till fortune, tir'd with doing bad, Threw him ashore, to give him glad: And here he comes. What shall be next, Pardon old Gover, this longs the text. Exit.

Scene I.—Pentapolis. An open Place by the Sea-side.

Enter PERICLES, etc.

Per. Yet cease your ire, you angry stars of heaven! Wind, rain, and thunder, remember, earthly man Is but a substance that must yield to you; And I, as fits my nature, do obey you. Alas! the sea hath cast me on the rocks, Wash'd me from shore to shore, and left me breath Nothing to think on but ensuing death: Let it suffice the greatness of your powers To have bereft a prince of all his fortunes; And having thrown him from your watery grave, Here to have death in peace is all he'll crave. Enter three Fishermen.

First Fish. What, ho, Pilch! Second Fish. Ha! come and bring away the nets.
First Fish. What, Patch-breech, I say! Third Fish. What say you, master? First Fish. Look how thou stirrest now! come away, or I'll fetch thee with a wannon. Third Fish. Faith, master, I am thinking of the poor men that were cast away before even now.

First Fish. Alas! poor souls; it grieved a heart to hear what pitiful cries they made to us to help them, when, well-a-day, we could scarce help ourselves.

Third Fish. Nay, master, said not I as much when I saw the porpus how he bonned a tumbled? they say they're half fish half flesh a plague on them! they ne'er come but I look to be washed. Master, I marvel how the fish live in the sea.

First Fish. Why, as men do a-land; the great ones eat up the little ones. I can compare a rich miser to nothing so fitly as to a whale plays and tumbles, driving the poor fry before him, and at last devours them all at a mouthful. Such whales have I heard on o' the land, we never leave gaping till they've swallowed a whole yardish, church, steeple, bells, and all.

Third Fish. But, master, if I had been a sexton, I would have been that day in the bell.

Second Fish. Why, man?

Third Fish. Because he should have swallowed me too; and when I had been in his belly, I would have kept such a jangling of the bells, that should never have left till he cast bells, steeples, church, and parish, up again. But if the good King Simonides were of my mind,—

Per. Aside. Simonides!

Third Fish. We would purge the land of these drones, that rob the bee of her honey.

Per. Aside. How from the finny subject of these Fishers tell the infirmities of men; And from their watery empire recollect All that may men approve or men detect! Peace be at your labour, honest fishermen.

Second Fish. Honest! good fellow, why, that? If it be a day fits you, search out of your calendar, and nobody look after it.

Per. Why may see the sea hath cast me up your coast.

Second Fish. What a drunken knave was I, to cast thee in our way?

Per. A man whom both the waters and the wind, In that vast tennis-court, have made the ball For them to play upon, entreats you pity him. He asks of you, that never us'd to beg.

First Fish. No, friend, cannot you beg? here them in our country of Greece gets more with begging than we can do with working.

Second Fish. Canst thou catch any fishes then? Per. I never practis'd it.

Second Fish. Nay, then thou wilt starve, sup for here's nothing to be got now-a-days unless thou canst fish for't.

Per. What have I been I have forgot to know But what I am want teaches me to think on A man throng'd with cold; my veins are chill And have no more of life than may suffice To give my tongue that heat to ask your help Which if you shall refuse, when I am dead, For that I am a man, pray see me buried.

First Fish. Die, quoth-a? Now gods forbid have a gown here; come, put it on; keep the warm. Now, afores me, a handsome fellow. Come, thou shalt go home, and we'll have fit for holidays, fish for fasting-days, and moreco
Where with it I may appear a gentleman:
And if that ever my low fortunes better,
I'll pay your bounties; till then rest your debtor.

First Fish. Why, wilt thou tourney for the lady?
Per. I'll show the virtue I have borne in arms.
First Fish. Why, do 'e take it; and the gods give thee good on 't.

Second Fish. Ay, but hark you, my friend;
'twas we that made up this garment through the rough seams of the waters: there are certain condolences, certain vails. I hope, sir, if you thrive, you'll remember from whence you had it.

Per. Believe 't, I will.

By your furtherance I am cloth'd in steel;
And spite of all the rapture of the sea,
This jewel holds his gilding on my arm:
Unto thy will I mount myself
Upon a courser, whose delightful steps
Shall make the gazer joy to see him tread.
Only, my friends, I yet am unprovided
Of a pair of basse.

Second Fish. We'll sure provide; thou shalt have my best gown to make thee a pair, and I'll bring thee to the court myself.

Per. Then honour be but equal to my will!
This day I'll rise, or else add ill to ill.

Exit.

SCENE II.—The Same. A public Way or Platform leading to the Lists. A Pavilion near it, for the reception of the KING, PRINCESS, Ladies, Lords, etc.

Enter Simonides, Thaisa, Lords, and Attendants.

Sim. Are the knights ready to begin the triumph?

First Lord. They are, my liege;
And stay your coming to present themselves.

Sim. Return them, we are ready; and our daughter,

In honour of whose birth these triumphs are,
Sits here, like beauty's child, whom nature
For men to see, and seeing wonder at.

Exit a Lord.

Thai. It pleaseth you, my royal father, to express
My commendations great, whose merit's less.

Sim. 'Tis fit it should be so; for princes are
A model, which heaven makes like to itself: in
As jewels lose their glory if neglected,
So princes their renown if not respected.
'Tis now your honour, daughter, to explain
The labour of each knight in his device.

Thai. Which, to preserve mine honour, I'll perform.

Enter a Knight; he passes over the stage, and his Squire presents his shield to the PRINCESS.

Sim. Who is the first that doth prefer himself?
Thai. A knight of Sparta, my renowned father;
And the device he bears upon his shield
Is a black Ethiop reaching at the sun;

The word, Lux tua vita mibi.

Sim. He loves you well that holds his life of you.

The Second Knight passes over.

Who is the second that presents himself!

Thai. A prince of Macedon, my royal father;
And the device he bears upon his shield
Is an arm'd knight that's conquer'd by a lady;

The motto thus, in Spanish, Pié por dixirn que por fuerza.
The Third Knight passes over.

Sim. And what's the third?
That. The third of Antioch;
And his device, a wreath of chivalry;
The word, Me pom;ae proexit apex.

The Fourth Knight passes over.
Sim. What is the fourth?
Thai. A burning torch that's turned upside down;
The word, Quod me altit me extinguil.
Sim. Which shows that beauty hath his power and will,
Which can as well inflame as it can kill.

The Fifth Knight passes over.
Thai. The fifth, a hand environed with clouds,
Holding out gold that's by the touchstone tried;
The motto thus, Sis spectanda fides.

The Sixth Knight, PERICLES, passes over.
Sim. And what's
The sixth and last, which the knight himself
With such a graceful courtesy deliver'd? 41
Thai. He seems to be a stranger; but his present is
A wither'd branch, that's only green at top;
The motto, In hac spe vivo.
Sim. A pretty moral;
From the dejected state wherein he is,
He hopes by your his fortunes yet may flourish.
First Lord. He had need mean better than his outward show
Can any way speak in his just commend;
For by his rusty outside he appears
To have practis'd more the whipstock than the lance.
Second Lord. He well may be a stranger, for he comes
To an honour'd triumph strangely furnished.
Third Lord. And on set purpose let his armour rust
Until this day, to scour it in the dust.
Sim. Opinion's but a fool, that makes us scan
The outward habit by the inward man.
But stay, the knights are coming; we'll withdraw
Into the gallery.

Exeunt.
Great shouts, and all cry, 'The mean knight!'

Enter SIMONIDES, THAIASA, Ladies, Lords, Knights from tilting, and Attendants.

Sim. Knights,
To say you're welcome were superfluous,
To place upon the volume of your deeds,
As in a title-page, your worth in arms,
Were more than you expect, or more than's fit,
Since every worth in show commends itself.
Prepare for mirth, for mirth becomes a feast:
You are princes and my guests.
Thai. But you, my knight and guest;
To whom this wreath of victory I give,
And crown you king of this day's happiness.

Per. 'Tis more by fortune, lady, than by merit.
Sim. Call it by what you will, the day is yours;
And here, I hope, is none that envies it.
In framing an artist art hath thus decreed,
To make some good, but others to exceed;
And you're her labour'd scholar. Come, quc
The feast.

For, daughter, so you are, here take your place
Marshall the rest, as they deserve their grace.

Knights. We are honour'd much by your Simoides.
Sim. Your presence glads our days; how we love,
For who hates honour hates the gods above.
Marshall. Sir, yonder is your place.
Per. Some other is more
First Knight. Contend not, sir; for we gentlemen
That neither in our hearts nor outward eyes
Envy the great nor do the low despise.
Per. You are right courteous knights.
Sim. Sit, sir;
Per. By Jove, I wonder, that is king of though
These cates resist me, she but thought upon
That. By Juno, that is queen of marriage,
All viands that I eat do seem unsavoury.
Wishing him my meat. Sure, he's a gallant gentleman.
Sim. He's but a country gentleman;
Has done no more than other knights have done.
Has broken a staff or so; so let it pass.
Thai. To me he seems like diamond to glass.
Per. You king's to me like to my faith picture,
Which tells me in that glory once he was;
Had princes sit, like stars, about his throne,
And he the sun for them to reverence.
None that beheld him, but like lesser lights
Did vail their crowns to his supremacy;
Where now his son's like a glow-worm in night,
The which hath fire in darkness, none in light.
Whereby I see that Time's the king of men;
He's both their parent, and he is their graver
And gives them what he will, not what they crave.

Sim. What, are you merry, knights?
First Knight. Who can be other in this royal presence?
Sim. Here, with a cup that's stor'd unto brim,
As you do love, fill to your mistress' lips,
We drink this health to you.

Knights. We thank your grace.
Sim. Yet pause awhile;
You knight doth sit too melancholy,
As if the entertainment in our court
Had not a show might counterbalance his worth.
Note it not you, Thaisa?
Thai. What is it
To me, my father?
Sim. O! attend, my daughter
Princes in this should live like gods above,
Who freely give to every one that comes
To honour them;
And princes not doing so are like to gnats,
Which make a sound, but kill'd are wonder'd
Therefore to make his entrance more sweet.
Here then we drink this standing-bowl of wine to him.

Thai. Alas! my father, it befits not me Unto a stranger knight to be so bold;
may my prouer take for an o'fence, ece men take women's gifts for impudence
im. How!
hat. Aside. Now, by the gods, he could not please me better.
im. And furthermore tell him, we desire to know of him,
whence he is, his name, and parentage.
hat. The king my father, sir, has drunk to you.
Ier. I thank him.
hat. Wishing it so much blood unto your life.
Ier. I thank both him and you, and pledge him freely.
hat. And further he desires to know of you, whence you are, your name and parentage.
Ier. A gentleman of Tyre; my name, Pericles; education been in arts and arms;
o, looking for adventures in the world,
as by the rough seas reft of ships and men, d after shipwreck driven upon this shore.
hat. He thanks your grace; names himself
Pericles,
gentleman of Tyre,
o only by misfortune of the seas left of ships and men, cast on this shore.
im. Now, by the gods, I pity his misfortune,
d will awake him from his melancholy.
me, gentlemen, we sit too long on trilles,
d waste the time which looks for other revels.
en in your armours, as you are address'd, ll very well become a soldier's dance, will not have excuse, with saying this music is too harsh for ladies' heads, se they love men in arms as well as beds.
The Knights dance.
this was well ask'd, 'twas so well perform'd.
me, sir;
re is a lady that wants breathing too:
I have heard, you knights of Tyre
excetant in making ladies trip, that their measures are as excellent.
er. In those that practise them they are, my lord.
im. O! that's as much as you would be denied your fair courtesy.
The Knights and Ladies dance.
Unclap, unclasp;
akns, gentlemen, to all; all have done well,
PERICLES. But you the best. Pages and ights, to conduct es knights unto their several lodgings!
Yours, sir,
e have given order to be next our own.
Per. I am at your grace's pleasure.
im. Princes, it is too late to talk of love, that's the mark I know you level at;
therefore each one betake him to his rest;
morrow all for speeding do their best.

EXECUT.

SCENE IV.—Tyre. A Room in the Governor's House.

Enter Helicanus and Escanes.

Hel. No, Escanes, know this of me,
Achilles from incest liv'd not free;
or which, the most high gods not minding longer withhold the vengeance that they had in store,
Due to this heinous capital offence,
Even in the height and pride of all his glory,
When he was seated in a chariot
Of an inestimable value, and his daughter with him,
A fire from heaven came and shrivell'd up
Their bodies, even to loathing; for they so stunk,
That all those eyes ador'd them ere their fall
Scorn now their hand should give them burial.
Esca. 'Twas very strange.
Hel. And yet but just; for though
This king were great, his greatness was no guard
To bar heaven's shaft, but sin had his reward.
Esca. 'Tis very true.

Enter two or three Lords.

First Lord. See, not a man, in private confercence
Or council has respect with him but he.
Second Lord. It shall no longer grieve without proof.

Third Lord. And cars'd be he that will not second it.
First Lord. Follow me then. Lord Helicane,
a word.
Hel. With me? and welcome. Happy day,
my lords.
First Lord. Know that our griefs are risen to the top,
And now at length they overflow their banks.
Hel. Your griefs! for what? wrong not the prince you love.
First Lord. Wrong not yourself then, noble
Helicane;
But if the prince do live, let us salute him,
Or know what ground's made happy by his breath.
If in the world he live, we'll seek him out;
If in his grave he rest, we'll find him there;
And be resolv'd he lives to govern us,
Or dead, gives cause to mourn his funeral,
And leaves us to our free election.
Second Lord. Whose death's indeed the strongest in our censure:
And knowing this kingdom is without a head,
Like goodly buildings left without a roof
Soon fall to ruin, your noble self,
That best know how to rule and how to reign,
We thus submit unto, our sovereign.
All. Live, noble Helicane!
Hel. For honour's cause forbear your suffrages:
If that you love Prince Pericles, forbear.
Take I your wish, I leap into the seas,
Where's hourly trouble for a minute's case.
A twelvemonth longer, let me entreat you
To forbear the absence of your king;
If in which time expir'd he not return,
I shall with aged patience bear your yoke.
But if I cannot win you to this love,
Go search like nobles, like noble subjects,
And in your search spend your adventurous
worth;
Whom if you find, and win unto return,
You shall like diamonds sit about his crown.
First Lord. To wisdom he's a fool that will not yield;
And since Lord Helicane unjoineth us,
We with our travels will endeavour it.
PERICLES.

I'll. Then you love us, we you, and we'll clasp hands:
When peers thus knit, a kingdom ever stands.

Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Pentapolis. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Simonides, reading a letter; the Knights meet him.

First Knight. Good morrow to the good Simonides.

Pericles. That never aim'd so high to love your daughter
But bent all offices to honor her.

Simonides. Thou hast bewitch'd my daughter, an

Thou art

A villain.

Per. By the gods, I have not:

Never did thought of mine levy offence;
Nor never did my actions yet commence

A deed might gain her love or your displeasure.

Simonides. Traitor, thou liest.

Per. Traitor!

Simonides. Ay, traitor.

Per. Even in his throat, unless it be the king

That calls me traitor, I return the lie.

Simonides. Aside. Now, by the gods, I do appall his courage.

Per. My actions are as noble as my thought.

That never relish'd of a base descent.

I came unto your court for honour's cause,

And not to be a rebel to her state;

And he that otherwise accounts of me,

This sword shall prove he's honour's enemy.

Simonides. No?

Here comes my daughter, she can witness it.

Enter Thaisa.

Per. Then, as you are as virtuous as fair,

Resolve your angry father, if my tongue

Did e'er solicit, or my hand subscribe

To any syllable that made love to you?

Thaisa. Why, sir, say if you had

Who takes offence at that would make me glad

Simonides. Yea, mistress, are you so peremptory?

Aside. I am glad on't with all my heart.

I'll make you; I'll bring you in subjection.

Will you, not having my consent,

Bestow your love and your affections

Upon a stranger! Aside who, for aught I know

May be, nor can I think the contrary,

As great in blood as I myself.

Therefore hear you, mistress; either frame

Your will to mine; and you, sir, hear you,

Either be ruled by me, or I will make you—

Man and wife.

Nay, come, your hands and lips must seal it too,

And being join'd, I'll thus your hopes destroy

And for a further grief.—God give you joy!

What! are you both pleased?

Thaisa. Yes, if you love me, sir.

Per. Even as my life, or blood that fosters it

Simonides. What! are you both agreed?

Thaisa. Per. Yes, if it please your majesty.

Simonides. It pleaseth me so well, that I will se you wed;

Then with what haste you can get you to bed.

Exeunt.

ACT III.

Enter Gower.

Now sleep y'asaked the rout;

No din but snores the house about,

Made louder by the o'er-fed breast

Of this most pompous marriage-feast.

The cat, with eyne of burning coal,

Now couches for the mouse's hole;

And crickets sing at the oven's mouth,

E'er the blither for their drouth.
Hymen hath brought the bride to bed, 10
Where, by the loss of maidenhead,
A babe is moulded. Be attend,
And time that is so briefly spent
With your fine functions quaintly echo;
What's dumb in show I'll plain in speech.

Dumb-show.

Enter PERICLES and SIMONIDES at one door, with attendants; a Messenger meets them, kneels, and gives PERICLES a letter; PERICLES shows it to SIMONIDES; the Lords kneel to PERICLES.

Then enter THAISIA with child, and LYCHORIDA:

SIMONIDES shows his daughter the letter; she chooses: she and PERICLES take leave of her ather, and all depart.

By many a deep and painful perch
Of Pericles the careful search
By the four opposing coigns,
Which the world together joins,
Is made with all due diligence,
That horse and sail and high expense,
Can stand the quest. At last from Tyre,
Fame answering; the most strange inquire,
To the court of King Simonides
Are letters brought, the tenor these:
Antiochus and his daughter dead;
The men of Tyres on the head
Of Heliocanus did set on
The crown of Tyre, but he will none:
The mutiny he there hastens to oppress;
Says to 'em, if King Pericles
Come not home in twice six moons,
He, obedient to their dooms,
Will take the crown. The sum of this,
Brought hither to Pentapolis,
Yravished the regions round,
And every one with claps can sound,
'Our heir-apparent is a king!
Who dream'd, who thought of such a thing?'
Brief, he must hence depart to Tyre:
His queen, with child, makes her desire,
Which he shall cross? along to go;
Omit we all their dole and woe:
Lychorida, her nurse, she takes,
And so to sea. Their vessel shakes
On Neptune's billow; half the flood
Hath their keel cut: but fortune's mood
Varies again; the gisled north
Disgorge such a tempest forth,
That, as a duck for life that dives,
So up and down the poor ship drives,
The lady shrieks, and well-a-near
Does fall in travail with her fear;
And what ensues in this fell storm
Shall for itself itself perform.
I will relate, action may Conveniently the rest convey,
Which might not what by me is told.
In your imagination hold
This stage the ship, upon whose deck
The sea-tost Pericles appears to speak. Exit.

Scene I.

Enter PERICLES, on shipboard.

Per. Thou god of this great vast, rebuke these surges,
Rush wash both heaven and hell; and thou, that hast

Upon the winds command, bind them in brass,
Having call'd them from the deep. O! still Thy deafening, dreadful thunders; gently quench Thy nimble, sulphurous flashes. O! how,
Lychorida,
How does my queen? Thou stormest venomously;
Wilt thou split all thyself? The seaman's whistle
Is as a whisper in the ears of death,
Unheard. Lychorida! Lucina, O!
Divinest patroness, and midwife gentle
To those that cry by night, convey thy deity
Aboard our dancing boat; make swift the pangs
Of my queen's travails.

Enter LYCHORIDA, with an Infant.

Now, Lychorida!

Lye. Here is a thing too young for such a place,
Who, if it had conceit, would die, as I Am like to do. Take in your arms this piece
Of your dead queen.

Per. How, how, Lychorida!

Lye. Patience, good sir; do not assist the storm.
Here's all that is left living of your queen,
A little daughter: for the sake of it,
Be manly, and take comfort.

Per. O you gods!
Why do you make us love your good gifts,
And snatch them straight away? We here below
Recall not what we give, and therein may Use honour with you.

Lye. Patience, good sir,
Even for this charge.

Per. Now, mild may be thy life!
For a more blust'rous birth had never babe:
Quiet and gentle thy conditions! for
Thou art the rudestist welcome to this world
That e'er was prince's child. Happy what follows!
Thou hast as chiding a nativity
As fire, air, water, earth, and heaven can make,
To herald thee from the womb; even at the first
Thy loss is more than can thy portage quit,
With all thou canst find here. Now the good gods
Throw their best eyes upon't!

Enter two Sailors.

First Sail. What courage, sir? God save you!
Per. Courage enough. I do not fear the flaw;
It hath done to me the worst. Yet for the love
Of this poor infant, this fresh new sea-fater,
I would it would be quiet.

First Sail. Slack the bulins there! Thou wilt not,
Wilt thou? Blow, and split thyself.

Second Sail. But sea-room, an the brine and cloudily billow kiss the moon, I care not.

First Sail. Sir, your queen must overboard;
the sea works high, the wind is loud, and will not lift till the ship be cleared of the dead.

Per. That's your superstition.

First Sail. Pardon us, sir; with us at sea it hath been still observed, and we are strong in custom. Therefore briefly yield her, for she must overboard straight.
PERICLES.

As you think meet. Most wretched queen!

Lye. Here she lies, sir.

Per. A terrible childbed hast thou had, my dear;

No light, no fire: the unfriendly elements

Forgot thee utterly; nor have I time

To give thee hallow'd to thy grave, but straight

Must cast thee, scarcely collid'd, in the coze; a

Where, for a monument upon thy bones,

And aye-remaining lamps, the belching whale

And numbing water must o'erwhelm thy corpse,

Lying with simple shells. O Lychorida!

Bid Nestor bring me spices, ink and paper,

My casket and my jewels; and bid Nicander

Bring me the satin coffer: lay the baby

Upon the pillow. Hie thee, whiles I say

A priestly farewell to her: suddenly, woman. 70

Exit LYCHORIDA.

Second Sail. Sir, we have a chest beneath the hatches, caulked and bitumined ready.

Per. I thank thee. Mariner, say what coast is this?

Second Sail. We are near Tarsus.

Per. Thither, gentle mariner,

Alter thy course from Tyre. When canst thou reach it?

Second Sail. By break of day, if the wind cease.

Per. O! make for Tarsus,

There will I visit Cleon, for the babe Cannot hold out to Tarsus; there I'll leave it At careful nursing. Go thy ways, good mariner;

I'll bring the body presently.

Exeunt

SCENE II.—Ephesus. A Room in Cerimon's House.

Enter Cerimon, with a Servant, and some Persons who have been shipwrecked.

Cer. Philemon, ho!

Enter PHILEMON.

Phil. Doth my lord call?

Cer. Get fire and meat for these poor men; 'T has been a turbulent and stormy night.

Serv. I have been in many; but such a night as this

Till now I ne'er endured,

Cer. Your master will be dead ere you return;

There's nothing can be minister'd to nature

That can recover him. To Philemon. Give this to the 'pothecary

And tell me how it works.

Exeunt all but Cerimon.

Enter two Gentlemen.

First Gent. Good morrow.

Second Gent. Good morrow to your lordship.

Cer. Gentlemen,

Why do you stir so early?

First Gent. Sir,

Our lodgings, standing bleak upon the sea,

Shook as the earth did quake;

The very principals did seem to rend,

And all to topple. Pure surprise and fear

Made me to quit the house.

Second Gent. That is the cause we trouble you so early;

'Tis not our husbandry.

First Gent. But I much marvel that you lordship, having Rich tire about you, should at these early hours

Shake off the golden slumber of repose.

'Tis most strange

Nature should be so conversant with pain,

Being thereto not compell'd.

Cer. I hold it ever,

Virtue and cuning were endowments greater

Than nobleness and riches; careless heirs

May the two latter darken and expend,

But immortality attends the former,

Making a man a god. 'Tis known I ever

Have studied physic, through which secret art,

By turning o'er authorities, I have,

Together with my practice, made familiar

To me and to my aid the best infusions

That dwell in vegetives, in metals, stones;

And I can speak of the disturbances

That nature works, and of her cures; which doth give me

A more content in course of true delight

Than to be thirsty after tittering honour,

Or tie my treasure up in silken bags,

To please the fool and death.

Second Gent. Your honour has through Ephesus poured forth

Your charity, and hundreds call themselves

Your creatures, who by you have been restor'd

And not your knowledge, your personal pain,

but even

Your purse, still open, hath built Lord Cerimon

Such strong renown as time shall ne'er decay.

Enter two or three Servants with a chest.

First Serv. So; let there.

Cer. What is that?

Serv. Sir, even now

Did the sea toss upon our shore this chest:

'Tis of some wreck;

Cer. Set it down; let's look upon't.

Second Gent. 'Tis like a coffin, sir.

Cer. Whate'er it be,

'Tis wondrous heavy. Wrench it open straight;

If the sea's stomach be o'ercharg'd with gold,

'Tis a good constraint of fortune it belches upon us.

Second Gent. 'Tis so, my lord.

Cer. How close 'tis caul'd and bitum'd

Did the sea cast it up?

First Serv. I never saw so huge a bilow, sir,

As toss'd it upon shore.

Cer. Come, wrench it open.

Soft! it smells most sweetly in my sense.

Second Gent. A delicate odour.

Cer. As ever hit my nostril. So, up with it.

O you most potent gods! what's here? a corse!

First Gent. Most strange!

Cer. Shrouded in cloth of state; balm'd and treasur'd

With full bags of spices! A passport too!

Apollo, perfect me 't the characters!

Here I give to understand,

If ever this coffin drive a-land,

I, King Pericles, have lost

This queen, worth all our mundane cost.
Who finds her, give her burying;
She was the daughter of a King:
Besides this treasure for a fee,
The gods require his charity!

If thou liv'st, Pericles, thou hast a heart
That even cracks for woe! This chanc'd to-night,

Second Gent. Most likely, sir.
Cer. Nay, certainly to-night;
Or look how fresh she looks. They were too rough
That threw her in the sea. Make fire within;
Etch hither all my boxes in my closet.

Exit a Servant.

Death may usurp on nature many hours,
And yet the fire of life kindle again
The o'erpress'd spirits. I heard
Of an Egyptian that had nine hours lien dead,
Who was by good appliance recovered.

Re-enter Servant, with boxes, napkins, and fire.

Vell said, well said; the fire and cloths
The rough and woeful music that we have,
Cause it to sound, beseech you.
He viol once more; how thou stir'st, thou block!

The music there! I pray you, give her air.

Gentlemen, this queen will live; nature awakes, a warmth
Breathes out of her; she hath not been encro'cd
Above five hours. See! how she 'gin to blow
Into life's flower again.

First Gent. The heavens,
Through you, increase our wonder and set up
Our fame for ever.

Cer. She is alive! behold,
Her eyelids, cases to those heavenly jewels
Which Pericles hath lost,
Begin to part their fringes of bright gold;
The diamonds of a most praised water
Appear, to make the world twice rich. Live,
And make us weep to hear your fate, fair creature,
Are as you seem to be!

Thaï. O dear Diana!

Where am I? Where's my lord? What world
Is this?

Second Gent. Is not this strange?

First Gent. Most rare.
Cer. Hush, gentle neighbours!

Send me your hands; to the next chamber bear her.

Set linen; now this matter must be look'd to,
For her relapse is mortal. Come, come;
And Escalusarius guide us!

Exeunt, carrying Thaïsa away.

SCENE III.—Tarsus. A Room in Cleon's House.

Enter PERICLES, CLEON, DIONYZA, LYCHORIDA, with MARINA in her arms.

Per. Most honour'd Cleon, I must needs be gone;
My twelve months are expir'd, and Tarsus stands
In a litigious peace. You and your lady
Take from my heart all thankfulness; the gods
Make up the rest upon you!

Cle. Your shafts of fortune, though they hurt
You mortally,
Yet glance full Wonderingly on us.

Dion. O your sweet queen!
That the strict fates had pleas'd you had brought Her hither,
To have bless'd mine eyes with her!

Per. We cannot but obey
The powers above us. Could I rage and roar
As doth the sea she lies in, yet the end
Must be as 'tis. My gentle babe Marina, whom,
For she was born at sea, I have nam'd so; here
I charge your charity withal, and leave her
The infant of your care, beseeching you
To give her princely training, that she may be Manner'd as she is born.

Cle. Fear not, my lord, but think
Your grace, that fed my country with your corn,
For which the people's prayers still fall upon you.

Must in your child be thought on. If negligence
Should therein make me vile, the common body,
By you reliev'd, would force me to my duty;
But if to that my nature need a spur,
The gods revenge it upon me and mine,
To the end of generation!

Per. I believe you;
Your honour and your goodness teach me to't,
Without your vows. Till she be married, madam,
By bright Diana, whom we honour, all
Uncissar'd shall this hair of mine remain,
Though I show ill in't. So I take my leave.

Good madam, make me blessed in your care
In bringing up my child.

Dion. I have one myself,
Who shall not be more dear to my respect
Than yours, my lord.

Per. Madam, my thanks and prayers.

Cle. We'll bring your grace e'en to the edge
Of the shore;
Then give you up to the mask'd Neptune and
The gentlest winds of heaven.

Per. I will embrace
Your offer. Come, dear'st madam. O! no tears,
Lychorida, no tears:
Look to your little mistress, on whose grace
You may depend hereafter. Come, my lord.

Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Epheus. A Room in Cerimon's House.

Enter CERIMON and THAÏSA.

Cer. Madam, this letter, and some certain jewels,
Lay with you in your coffer; which are now
At your command. Know you the character?

Thaï. It is my lord's;
That I was shipp'd at sea, I well remember,
Even on my ceasing time; but whether there
Deliver'd, by the holy gods,
I cannot rightly say. But since King Pericles,
My wedded lord, I ne'er shall see again,
A vestal livery will I take me to,
And never more have joy.

Cer. Madam, if this you purpose as ye speak,
Diana's temple is not distant far,
Where you may abide till your date expire
Moreover, if you please, a niece of mine
Shall there attend you.

Thy. My recompense is thanks, that's all;
Yet my good will is great, though the gift small.

ACT IV.

Enter GOWER.

Imagine Pericles arriv'd at Tyre,
Welcom'd and settled to his own desire.
His woeful queen we leave at Ephesus,
Unto Diana there a votaress.
Now to Marina bend your mind,
Whom our fast-growing scene must find
At Tarsus, and by Cleon train'd
In music, letters; who hath gained
Of education all the grace,
Which makes her both the heart and place
Of general wonder. But, aack!
That monster envy, oft the wreck
Of earned praise, Marina's life
Seeks to take off by treason's knife.
And in this kind hath our Cleon
One daughter, and a wench full grown,
Even ripe for marriage-rite; this maid
Hight Philotena, and it is said
For certain in our story, she Would ever with Marina be:

Be't when she wear'd the sleidened silk
With fingers long, small, white as milk;
Or when she would with sharp needl wound
The cambric, which she made more sound
By hurting it; or when to the late
She sung, and made the night-bird mute,
That still records with man; or when
She would with rich and constant pen
Vail to her mistress Dian; still
This Philotena contends in skill
With absolute Marina: so
With the dove of Paphos might the crow Victorious white. Marina gets
All praises, which are paid as debts,
And not as given. This so darks
In Philotena all graceful marks,
That Cleon's wife, with envy rore,
A present murderer does prepare
For good Marina, that her daughter
Might stand peerless by this slaughter.
The sooner her vile thoughts to steady,
Lychorida, our nurse, is dead;
And cursed Dionyz a hath
The pregnant instrument of wrath
Prep't for this blow. The unborn event
I do commend to your content:
Only I carry winged time
Post on the bane feet of my rime;
Which never could I so convey,
Unless your thoughts went on my way.
Dionyz a doth appear,
With Leonine, a murderer.

Thou canst not do a thing i' the world so soon,
To yield thee so much profit. Let not conscience,
Which is but cold, inflaming love i' thy bosom, Inflame too nicely; nor let pity, which Even women have cast off, melt thee, but be
A soldier to thy purpose.
Leon. I'll do't; but yet she is a goodly creature.
Dion. The fitter, then, the gods should have her. Here

She comes weeping for her only mistress' death.
Thou art resolv'd?
Leon. I am resolv'd.

Enter MARINA, with a basket of flowers.

Mar. No, I will rob Tellus of her weed,
To strew thy green with flower; the yellows,
blues,
The purple violets, and marigolds,
Shall as a carpet hang upon thy grave,
While summer-days do last. Ay me! poor maid,
Born in a tempest, when my mother died,
This world to me is like a lasting storm,
Whirring me from my friends.

Dion. How now, Marina! why do you keep alone?
How chance your daughter is not with you? Do not Consume your blood with sorrowing; you have
A nurse of me. Lord! how your fav'ring chang'd
With this unprofitable woe.
Come, Give me your flowers, ere the sea mar it.
Walk with Leonine; the air is quick there,
And it pierces and sharpens the stomach. Come,
Leonine, take her by the arm, walk with her.

Mar. No, I pray you;
I'll not bereave you of your servant.

Dion. Come, come,
I love the king your father, and yourself,
With more than foreign heart. We every day
Expect him here; when he shall come and find
Our paragon to all reports thus blasted,
He will repent the breadth of his great voyage;
Blame both my lord and me, that we have ta'en
No care to your best courses. Go, I pray you;
Walk, and be cheerful once again; reserve
That excellent complexion, which did steal
The eyes of young and old. Care not for me;
I can go home alone.

Mar. Well, I will go;
But yet I have no desire to it.

Dion. Come, come. I know 'tis good for you.
Walk half an hour, Leonine, at the least.
Remember what I have said.

Leon. I warrant you, madam.
Dion. I'll leave you, my sweet lady, for a while.
Pray you, walk softly, do not heat your blood:
What! I must have care of you.

Mar. My thanks, sweet madam.

Exit DIONYZA.

Is the wind westerly that blows?

Leon. South-west.

Mar. When I was born, the wind was north.
Leon. Was 't so?
Mar. My father, as nurse said, did never fear,
But cried ' Good seamen! ' to the sailors, galling
His kingly hands with haling of the ropes;
And, clasping to the mast, endur'd a sea
That almost burst the deck.

Leon. When was this?
Mar. When I was born:
PERICLES.

Never was waves nor wind more violent;
And from the ladder-tackle washes off
A canvas-climber. "Ha!" says one, "wilt out?"
And with a dropping industry they skip
From stem to stern; the boatswain's whistles, and
The master calls, and trebles their confusion.

Leon. Come; say your prayers.

Mar. If you require a little space for prayer,
I grant it. Pray; but be not tedious,
For the gods are quick of car, and I am sworn
To do my work with haste.

Mar. Why will you kill me?

Leon. To satisfy my lady.

Mar. Why would she have me kill'd?
Now, as I can remember, by my troth,
I never did her hurt in all my life.
I never spake bad word, nor did ill turn
To any living creature; believe me, la,
I never kill'd a mouse, nor hurt a fly;
I trod upon a worm against my will,
But I wept for it. How have I offended,
Wherein death might yield her any profit,
Or my life imply her any danger?

Leon. My commission
Is not to reason of the deed, but do't.

Mar. You will not do't for all the world, I hope.
You are well favour'd, and your looks foreshow
You have a gentle heart. I saw you lately,
When you caught hurt in parting two that fought;
Good sooth, it show'd well in you; do so now;
Your lady seeks my life; come you between,
And save poor me, the weaker.

Leon. I am sworn,
And will dispatch.

En' er Pirates.

First Pir. Hold, villain!

LEONINE runs away.

Second Pir. A prize! a prize!

Third Pir. Half-part, mates, half-part. Come, et's have her aboard suddenly.

Exeunt Pirates with MARINA.

Re-enter LEONINE.

Leon. These roguing thieves serve the great pirate Valdes;
And they have seiz'd Marina. Let her go;
There's no hope she'll return. I'll swear she's dead,
And thrown into the sea. But I'll see further;
Perhaps they will but please themselves upon her,
Not carry her aboard. If she remain,
Whom they have ravish'd must by me be slain.

Exit.

SCENE II.—Mitylene. A Room in a Brothel.

Enter PANDAR, BAWD, and BOULT.

Pand. Boult!

Boult. Sir?

Pand. Search the market narrowly, Mitylene is full of gallants; we lost too much money this mart by being too wenchless.

Bawd. We were never so much out of creatures. We have but poor three, and they can do no more than they can do; and they with continual action are even as good as rotten.

Pand. Therefore let's have fresh ones, whate'er we pay for them. If there be not a conscience to be used in every trade, we shall never prosper.

Bawd. Thou sayest true; 'tis not the bringing up of poor bastards, as I think I have brought up some eleven—

Boult. Ay, to eleven; and brought them down again. But shall I search the market?

Bawd. What else, man? The stuff we have a strong wind will blow it to pieces, they are so pitifully sodden.

Pand. Thou sayest true; they're too unwholesome, o' conscience. The poor Transylvanian is dead, that lay with the little baggage.

Boult. Ay, she quickly pooped him; she made him roast-meat for worms. But I'll go search the market.

Exit.

Pand. Three or four thousand chequins were as pretty a proportion to live quietly, and so give over.

Bawd. Why to give over, I pray you? is it a shame to get when we are old?

Pand. O! our credit comes not in like the commodity, nor the commodity wages not with the danger; therefore, if in our youths we could pick up some pretty estate, 'twere not amiss to keep our door hatched. Besides, the sord terms we stand upon with the gods will be strong with us for giving over.

Bawd. Come, other sorts offend as well as we.

Pand. As well as we! ay, and better too; we offend worse. Neither is our profession any trade; it's no calling. But here comes Boult.

Re-enter BOULT, with the Pirates and MARINA.

Boult. Come your ways. My masters, you say she's a virgin?

First Pir. O! sir; we doubt it not.
Boult. Master, I have gone through for this piece, you see; if you like her, so; if not, I have lost my earnest.

Bawd. Boult, has she any qualities?

Boult. She has a good face, speaks well, and has excellent good clothes; there's no further necessity of qualities can make her be refused.

Bawd. What's her price, Boult?

Boult. I cannot be bated one doit of a thousand pieces.

Pand. Well, follow me, my masters, you shall have your money presently. Wife, take her in; instruct her what she has to do, that she may not be raw in her entertainment.

Exeunt Pandar and Pirates.

Bawd. Boult, take you the marks of her, the colour of her hair, complexion, height, age, with warrant of her virginity, and cry 'He that will give most shall have her first.' Such a maidenhead were no cheap thing, if men were as they have been. Get this done as I command you.

Boult. Performance shall follow.

Pand. Alack! that Leonine was so slack, so slow.

He should have struck, not spoke; or that these pirates,

Not enough barbarous, had not o'erboard thrown me

For to seek my mother?

Bawd. Why lament you, pretty one?

Mar. That I am pretty.

Bawd. Come, the gods have done their part in you.
Mar. I accuse them not.

Bawd. You are light into my hands, where you are like to live.

Mar. The more my fault
To 'scape his hands where I was like to die.

Bawd. Ay, and you shall live in pleasure.

Mar. No.

Bawd. Yes indeed shall you, and taste gentlemen of all fashions. You shall have well; you shall have the difference of all complexions. What! do you stop your ears?

Mar. Are you a woman?

Bawd. What would you have me be, an I be not a woman?

Mar. An honest woman, or not a woman.

Bawd. Marry, whip thee, gosling! I think I shall have something to do with you. Come, you're a young foolish sapling, and must be bowed as I would have you.

Mar. The gods defend me!

Bawd. If it please the gods to defend you by men, then men must comfort you, men must feed you, men must stir you up. Bawd's returned.

Re-enter BAWD.

Now, sir, hast thou cried her through the market?

Bawd. I have cried her almost to the number of her hairs; I have drawn her picture with my voice.

Bawd. And I prithee tell me, how dost thou find the inclination of the people, especially of the younger sort?

Bawd. Faith, they listened to me as they would have hearkened to their father's testament. There was a Spaniard's mouth so watered, that he went to bed to her very description.

Bawd. We shall have him here to-morrow with his best ruff on.

Bawd. To-night, to-night. But, mistress, do you know the French knight that cowers i' th' huns?

Bawd. Who? Monsieur Veroles?

Bawd. Ay; he offered to cut a caper at the proclamation; but he made a groan at it, and swore he would see her to-morrow.

Bawd. Well, well; as for him, he brought his disease hitter: here he does but repair it. I know he will come in our shadow, to scatter his crowns in the sun.

Bawd. Well, if we had of every nation a traveller, we should lodge them with this sign.

Bawd. To MARINA. Pray you, come hither awhile. You have fortunes coming upon you. Mark me: you must seem to do that fearfully which you commit willingly; despise profit where you have most gain. To weep that you live as ye do makes petty in your lovers; seldom but that petty begets you a good opinion, and that opinion a mere profit.

Mar. I understand you not.

Bawd. O! take her home, mistress, take her home; these bluses of hers must be quenched with some present practice.

Bawd. Thou sayest true, i' faith, so they must; for your bride goes to that with shame which is her way to go with warrant.

Bawd. Faith, some do, and some do not. But, mistress, if I have bargained for the joint,— Bawd. Thou mayest cut a morzel off the spit.

Bawd. I may so?

Bawd. Who should deny it? Come, young one, I like the manner of your garments well.

Bawd. Ay, by my faith, they shall not be changed yet.

Bawd. Bawd, spend thou that in the town; report what a sojourner we have; you'll lose nothing by custom. When nature framed this piece, she meant thee a good turn; therefore say what a paragon she is, and thou hast the harvest out of thine own report.

Bawd. I warrant you, mistress, thunder shall not awake the beds of eels as my giving out her beauty stir up the lewdly-inclined. I'll bring home some to-night.

Bawd. Come your ways; follow me.

Mar. If fires be hot, knives sharp, or waters deep, Untied I still my virgin knot will keep Diana, aid my purpose!

Bawd. What have we to do with Diana? Pray you, will you go with us?

Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Tarsus. A Room in Cleopatra's House.

Enter CLEON and DIONYZI.

Dion. Why are you foolish? Can it be undone?

Cle. O Dionyza! such a piece of slaughter
The sun and moon ne'er look'd upon.

Dion. I think
You'll turn a child again.

Cle. Were I chief lord of all this spacious world,
I'd give it to undo the deed. O lady!

Much less in blood than virtue, yet a princess
To equal any single crown o' the earth
I' the justice of compare. O villain Leonine!

Whom thou hast poison'd too; 10
If thou hadst drank to him't had been a kindness

Becoming well thy fact; what caus't thou say
When noble Pericles shall demand his child?

Dion. That she is dead. Nurses are not the fates,
To foster it, nor ever to preserve.

She died at night; I'll say so. Who can cross it?

Unless you play the pious innocent,
And for an honest attribute cry out
'She died by foul play.'

Cle. O! go to. Well, well,
Of all the faults beneath the heavens, the gods

Do like this worst.

Dion. Be one of those that think
The petty wrens of Tarsus will lily hence,
And open this to Pericles. I do shame
To think of what a noble strain you are,
And of how coward a spirit.

Cle. To such proceeding
Who ever but his approbation added,
Though not his prime consent, he did not flow
From honourable sources.

Dion. Be it so, then;
Yet none does know but you how she came dead,
Nor none can know, Leonine being gone. 30
She did distain my child, and stood between
Her and her fortunes; none would look on her,
But cast their gazes on Marina's face,
Whilst ours was blurted at and held a malting
Not worth the time of day. It pierc'd me through:
And though you call my course unnatural,
You not your child well loving, yet I find
It greets me as an enterprise of kindness
Perform'd to your sole daughter.

Cle.
Heavens forgive it!

Dion. And as for Pericles, 40
What should he say? We wept after her hearse,
And yet we mourn; her monument
Is almost finish'd, and her epitaphs
In glittering golden characters express
A general praise to her, and care in us
At whose expense 'tis done.

Cle.
Thou art like the harpy,
Which, to betray, dost, with thine angel's face,
Seize with thine eagle's talons.

Dion. You are like one that superstitiously
Doth swear to the gods that winter kills the flies;
But yet I know you'll do as I advise.  Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Before the Monument of MARINA at Tarsus.

Enter GOWER.

Thus time we waste, and longest leagues make short;
Sail seas in cockles, have an wish but for 't;
Making, to take your imagination,
From bourn to bourn, region to region.
By you being pardon'd, we commit no crime
To use one language in each several clime
Where our scenes seem to live. I do beseech you
To learn of me, who stand i' the gaps to teach you,
The stages of our story. Pericles
Is now again thevar'ning the wayward seas, 10
Attended on by many a lord and knight,
To see his daugh'ter, all his life's delight.
Old Escanes, whom Helicanus late
Advanc'd in time to great and high estate,
Is left to govern. Bear you it in mind,
Old Helicanus goes along behind.
Well-sailing ships and bounteous winds have brought
This king to Tarsus, think his pilot thought,
So with his steereage shall your thoughts grow on,
To fetch his daugh'ter home, who first is gone. 20
Like notes and shadows see them move awhile;
Your ears unto your eyes I'll reconcile.

Dumb-show.

Enter PERICLES, with his Train, at one door;
CLEON and DIONYZA at the other. CLEON shows PERICLES the tomb of MARINA; whereas PERICLES makes lamentation, puts on sackcloth, and in a mighty passion departs. Then exeunt CLEON and DIONYZA.

See how belief may suffer by foul show!
This borrow'd passion stands for true old woe;
And Pericles, in sooth, all devour'd,
With sighs shot through his sighs, and biggest tears o'er-shower'd, Faith, there's no way to be rid on't but by the way to the pox. Here comes the Lord Lysimachus, disguised.

Bawd. We should have both lord and lown if the peevish baggad would but give way to customers.

Enter LYSIMACHUS.

Lys. How now! How a dozen of virginites?
Bawd. Now, the gods to bless your honour!
Lys. I am glad to see your honour in good health.
Lys. You may so; 'tis the better for you that your resorbers stand upon sound legs. How now! wholesome iniquity, have you that a man may deal withal, and defy the surgeon?
Bawd. We have here one, sir, if she would—but there never came her like in Mitylene.
Lys. If she'd do the deed of darkness, thou wou'dst say.
Bawd. Your honour knows what 'tis to say well enough.
Lys. Well; call forth, call forth.
Bawd. For flesh and blood, sir, white and red, you shall see a rose; and she were a rose indeed if she had but—
Lys. What, prithee?
Bawd. O! sir, I can be modest.
Lys. That dignifies the renown of a bawd no less than it gives a good report to a number to be chaste.

Exit BOULT.

Bawd. Here comes that which grows to the stalk; never plucked yet, I can assure you.

Re-enter BOULT with MARINA.

Is she not a fair creature?
Lys. Faith, she would serve after a long voyage at sea. Well, there's for you; leave us.
Bawd. I beseech your honour, give me leave; a word, and I've done presently.
Lys. I beseech you, so.
Bawd. To MARINA. First, I would have you note, this is an honourable man.
Mar. I desire to find him so, that I may worthily note him.
Bawd. Next, he's the governor of this country, and a man whom I am bound to.
Mar. If he govern the country, you are bound to him indeed; but how honourable he is in that I know not.
Bawd. Pray you, without any more virginal fencing, will you use him kindly? He will line your apron with gold.
Mar. What he will do graciously, I will thankfully receive.
Lys. Ha! you done?
Bawd. My lord, she's not paced yet; you must take some pains to work her to your manage. Come, we will leave his honour and her together.
Lys. Go thy ways.

Exit BAWD, PARDAR, and BOULT.

Now, pretty one, how long have you been at this trade?
Mar. What trade, sir?
Lys. Why, I cannot name 't but I shall offend.
Mar. I cannot be offended with my trade. Please you to name it.
Lys. How long have you been of this profession?
Mar. E'er since I can remember.

Lys. Did you go to 't so young? Were you a gamster at five or at seven?
Mar. Earlier too, sir, if now I be one.
Lys. Why, the house you dwell in proclaims you to be a creature of sale.
Mar. Do you know this house to be a place of such resort, and will come into't? I hear say you are of honourable parts, and are the governor of this place.
Lys. Why, hath your principal made known unto you who I am?
Mar. Who is my principal?
Lys. Why, your herb-woman; she that sets seed and roots of shame and iniquity. O! you have heard something of my power, and so stand aloof for more serious wooing. But I protest to thee, pretty one, my authority shall not see thee, or else look friendly upon thee. Come, bring me to some private place; come, come.
Mar. If you were born to honour, show it now; If put upon you, make the judgment good That thought you worthy of it.
Lys. How's this? how's this? Some more; be sage.
Mar. For me,
That am a maid, though most ungentle fortune Hath plac'd me in this sty, where, since I came,
Diseases have been sold dearer than physic,
O! that the gods Would set me free from this unhallow'd place,
Though they did change me to the meanest bird That flies i' the purer air.
Lys. I did not think
Thou could'st have spoke so well; never dream'd thou could'st.
Had I brought bitherto a corrupted mind,
Thy speech had alter'd it. Hold, here's gold for thee;
Persever in that clear way thou goest,
And the gods strengthen thee!
Mar. The gods preserve you!
Lys. For me, be you thoughten
That I came with no ill intent, for to me
The very doors and windows savour vilely.
Farewell. Thou art a piece of virtue, and
I doubt not but thy training hath been noble.
Hold, here's more gold for thee.
A curse upon him, die he like a thief,
That robs thee of thy goodness! If thou dost
Hear from me, it shall be for thy good.

Re-enter BOULT.

Boult. I beseech your honour, one piece for me.
Lys. Avant! thou damned door-keeper. Your house,
But for this virgin that doth prop it, would Sink and overwhelm you. Away!
Exit BOULT.

How's this? We must take another course with you. If your peevish chastity, which is not worth a breakfast in the cheapest country under the cope, shall undo a whole household, let me be gelded like a spaniel.

Come your ways.

Mar. Whither would you have me?
Boult. I must have your maidenhead taken off, or the common hangman will execute it. Come your ways. We'll have no 'em gentlemen driven away. Come your ways, I say.
PERICLES.

Re-enter Baudo.

Bawd. How now! what's the matter? 140
Bawd. Worse and worse, mistress; she has here spoken holy words to the Lord Lysimachus.
Bawd. O! abominable.
Bawd. She makes our profession as it were to stink afore the face of the gods.

Bawd. Marry, hang her up for ever!
Bawd. The nobleman would have dealt with her like a nobleman, and she sent him away as cold as a snowball; saying his prayers too.
Bawd. Bawd, take her away; use her at thy pleasure: crack the glass of her virginity, and make the rest malleable.
Bawd. An if she were a thornier piece of ground than she is, she shall be ploughed.

Mar. Hark, hark, you gods!

Bawd. She conjures: away with her! Would she had never come within my doors! Marry, hang you! She's born to undo us. Will you not go the way of women-kind? Marry, come up, my dish of chastity with rosemary and bays!
Exit.

Bawd. Come, mistress; come your ways with me.

Mar. Whither wilt thou have me?
Bawd. To take from you the jewel you hold so dear.

Mar. Prithee, tell me one thing first.
Bawd. Come now, your one thing.

Mar. What canst thou wish thine enemy to be?
Bawd. Why, I could wish him to be my master, or rather, my mistress.

Mar. Neither of these are so bad as thou art. Since they do better thee in their command. Thou hold'st a place, for which the pained'st field Of hell would not in reputation change; Thou art the damned door-keeper to every Covstril that comes inquiring for his Tib, To the choleric fistling of every rogue Thy car is like, thy food is such As hath been belch'd on by infected lungs.

Bawd. What would you have me do? go to he wars, would you? where a man may serve seven years for the loss of a leg, and have not money enough in the end to buy him a wooden one?

Mar. Do any thing but this thou dost. Empty Old receptacles, or common sewers, of filth; Serve by indenture to the common hangman: Any of these ways are yet better than this; For what thou professest, a baboon, could he speak, Would own a name too dear. O! that the gods Would safely deliver me from this place. Here, here's gold for thee.
If that thy master would gain by me, Proclaim that I can sing, weave, sew, and dance, With other virtues, which I'll keep from boast; And I will undertake all these to teach. I doubt not but this populous city will Yield many scholars.

Bawd. But can you teach all this you speak of?
Mar. Prove that I cannot, take me home again, And prostitute me to the basest groom That doth frequent your house.

Bawd. Well, I will see what I can do for thee; if I can place thee, I will.

Bawd. Faith, my acquaintance lies little amongst them. But since my master and mistress have bought you, there's no going but by their consent; therefore I will make them acquainted with your purpose, and I doubt not but I shall find them tractable enough. Come; I'll do for thee what I can; come your ways.

Exit.

ACT V.

Enter Gower.

Marina thus the brothel 'seapes, and chances Into an honest house, our story says. She sings like one immortal, and she dances As goddess-like to her admired lays; Deep clerks she dumb; and with her heed composes Nature's own shape, of bud, bird, branch, or berry, That even her art sisters the natural roses; Her inkle, silk, twine with the rubied cherry; That purlple lacks the none of noble race, Who pour their bounty o'er; and her gain She gives the cursed bawd. If we see her place, And to her father turn our thoughts again; Where we left him, on the sea. We there him lost Whereence, driven before the winds, he is arriv'd Here where her daughter dwells; and on this coast Suppose him now at anchor. The city striv'd God Neptune's annual feast to keep; from whence Lysimachus our Tyrian ship espies, His banners sable, trimm'd with rich expense; And to him in his barge with favour hies. In your supposing once more put your sight (Of heavy Pericles; think this his bark Where, what is done in action, more, if might, Shall be discover'd; please you, sit and hark.

Exit.

SCENE I.—On board Pericles's ship, off Mitylene. A Pavillion on deck, with a curtain before it; PERICLES within it, reclined on a couch. A barge lying beside the Tyrian vessel.

Enter two Sailors, one belonging to the Tyrian vessel, the other to the barge; to them HELICANUS.

Tyr. Sail. To the Sailor of Mitylene. Where is Lord Helicanus? he can resolve you. O! here he is. Sir, there's a barge put off from Mitylene And in it is Lysimachus, the governor, Who craves to come aboard. What is your will? Hel. That he have his. Call up some gentlemen. Tyr. Sail. Ho, gentlemen! my lord calls.

Enter two or three Gentlemen.

First Gent. Doth your lordship call?
Hel. Gentlemen, there's some of worth would come aboard; I pray ye, greet them fairly.

Gentlemen and Sailors descend, and go on board the barge.

Enter, from thence, LYSIMACHUS and Lords; the Tyrian Gentlemen and the two Sailors.

Tyr. Sal. Sir, This is the man that can, in aught you would Resolve you. Lys. Hail, reverend sir! the gods preserve you!
And die as I would do.

Lys. You wish me well.

Being on shore, honouring of Neptune's triumphs,
Seeing this goodly vessel ride before us,
I made to it to know of whence you are.

Hel. First, what is your place?

Lys. I am the governor of this place you lie before.

Hel. Sir,

Our vessel is of Tyre, in it the king;
A man who for this three months hath not spoken
To any one, nor taken sustenance
But to proverge his grief.

Lys. Upon what ground is his distemperature?

Hel. 'Twould be too tedious to repeat;
But the main grief springs from the loss
Of a beloved daughter and a wife.

Lys. May we not see him?

Hel. You may;
But bootless is your sight: he will not speak
To any.

Lys. Yet let me obtain my wish.

Hel. Behold him. PERICLES discovered.

This was a goodly person,
Till the disaster that, one mortal night,
Drove him to this,

Lys. Sir king, all hail! the gods preserve you!
Hail, royal sir!

Hel. It is in vain; he will not speak to you.

First Lord. Sir,

We have a maid in Mitylen, I durst wager,
Would win some words of him.

Lys. 'Tis well bethought.
She questionless with her sweet harmony
And other choice attractions, would allure,
And make a battery through his deafen'd ports
Which now are midway stop'd:
She is all happy as the fairest of all,
And with her fellow maidies is now upon
The leafy shelter that abuts against
The island's side.

Whispers a Lord, who goes off in the barge of LYSIMACHUS.

Hel. Sure, all effectless; yet nothing we'll omit
That bears recovery's name. But, since your kindness
We have stretch'd thus far, let us beseech you
That for our gold we may provision have,
Wherein we are not destitute for want,
But weary for the staleness.

Lys. O! sir, a courtesy
Which if we should deny, the most just gods
For every graff would send a caterpillar,
And so afflicit our province. Yet once more Let me entreat to know at large the cause
Of your king's sorrow.

Hel. Sit, sir, I will recount it to you;
But see, I am prevented.

Re-enter, from the barge, Lord, with MARINA and a young Lady.

Lys. O! here is
The lady that I sent for. Welcome, fair one!
Is 't not a goodly presence?

Hel. She's a gallant lady.

Lys. She's such a one, that, were I well assur'd
She came of gentle kind and noble stock,

I'd wish no better choice, and think me rarely wed.
Fair one, all goodness that consists in bounty
Expect even here, where is a kingly patient:
If that thy prosperous and artificial feat
Can draw him but to answer thee in anguish,
Thy sacred physic shall receive such pay
As thy desires can wish.

Mar. Sir, I will use
My utmost skill in his recovery,
Provided
That none but I and my companion maid
Be suffer'd to come near him.

Lys. Come, let us leave her;
And the gods make her prosperous!

MARINA sings.

Mark'd he your music?

Mar. No, nor look'd on us.

Lys. See, she will speak to him.

Mar. Hail, sir! my lord, lend ear.

Per. Hum! ha!

Mar. I am a maid,
My lord, that ne'er before invited eyes,
But have been gaz'd on like a comet; she speaks,
My lord, that, may be, hath endur'd a grief
Might equal yours, if both were justly weigh'd.
Though wayward fortune did malign my state,
My derivation was from ancestors
Who stood equivalent with mighty kings;
But time hath root'd out my parentage,
And to the world and awkward casualties
Bound me in servitude. Aside. I will desist;
But there is something glows upon my cheek,
And whispers in mine ear 'Go not till he speak.'

Per. My fortunes—parentage—good parent-age—
To equal mine!—was it not thus! what say you?

Mar. I said, my lord, if you did know my parentage
You would not do me violence.

Per. I do think so. Pray you, turn your eyes upon me.
You are like something that—What countrywoman?
Here of these shores?

Mar. No, nor of any shores;
Yet I was mortally brought forth, and am
No other than I appear.

Per. I am great with woe, and shall deliver weeping.
My dearest wife was like this maid, and such a one
My daughter might have been: my queen's square brows;
Her stature to an inch; as wand-like straight;
As silver-voic'd; her eyes as jewel-like,
And cas'd as richly; in pace another Juno;
Who stars the ears she feeds, and makes them hungry,
The more she gives them speech. Where do you live?

Mar. Where I am but a stranger; from the deck
You may discern the place.

Per. Where were you bred?
And how achiev'd you these endowments which
You make more rich to owe?

Mar. If I should tell my history, it would seem Like lies, disdain'd in the reporting.

Per. Prithee, speak;
PERICLES.

I'm she call'd thine tell but id speak 120
And make my senses credit thy relation
O points that seem impossible; for thou look'st like one I lov'd indeed. What were thy friends?
Idst thou not say when I did push thee back, which was when I perceive'd thee, that thou canst rom good descending?
Mar. So indeed I did. Per. Report thy parentage. I think thou said'st how hadst been toss'd from wrong to injury, and that thou thought'st thy griefs might equal mine, both were open'd.
Mar. Some such thing said, and said no more but what my thoughts id warrant me was likely.
Per. Tell thy story; thine consider'd prove the thousandth part of my endurance, thou art a man, and I save suffer'd like a girl; yet thou dost look like Patience gazing on kings' graves, and smiling extrémity out of act. What were thy friends? ow lost thou them? Thy name, my most kind virgin? ecount, I do beseech thee. Come, sit by me.
Mar. My name is Marina.
Per. O! I am mock'd, nd thou by some incensed god sent hither make the world to laugh at me.
Mar. Patience, good sir, r here I'll cease.
Per. Nay, I'll be patient. thou little know'st how thou dost stirrle me, call thyself Marina.
Mar. The name as given me by one that had some power; by father, and a king.
Per. How! a king's daughter? id call'd Marina?
Mar. You said you would believe me; ut, not to be a trouble of your peace, will end here.
Per. But are you flesh and blood? have you a working pulse? and are no fairy? fotion! Well; speak on. Where were you born? nd wherefore call'd Marina?
Mar. Call'd Marina or I was born at sea.
Per. At sea! what mother? Mar. My mother was the daughter of a king; who died the minute I was born, my good nurse Lychorida hath oft eliver'd weeping.
Per. O! stop there a little. side. This is the rarest dream that e'er dull sleep id mock sad fools withal; this cannot be. ny daughter's buried. Well; where were you bred?
I'll hear you more, to the bottom of your story, nd never interrupt you.

Mar. You scorn to believe me; 'twere best I did give o'er.
Per. I will believe you by the syllable. Of what you shall deliver. Yet, give me leave: How came you in these parts? where were you bred?
Mar. The king my father did in Tarsus leave me, Till cruel Cleon, with his wicked wife,
Did seek to murder me; and having woo'd
A villain to attempt it, who having drawn to do't,
A crew of pirates came and rescu'd me;
Brought me to Mitylene. But, good sir, Whither will you have me? Why do you weep? It may be
You think me an impostor; no, good faith, I am the daughter to King Pericles, If good King Pericles be.
Per. Ho, Helicanus!
Hel. Calls my lord?
Per. Thou art a grave and noble counsellor,
Most wise in general; tell me, if thou canst,
What this maid is, or what is like to be,
That thus hath made me weep?
Hel. I know not; but Here is the regent, sir, of Mitylene,
Speaks nobly of her.
Ly. She never would tell
Her parentage; being demanded that,
She would sit still and weep.
Per. O Helicanus! strike me, honour'd sir; Give me a gash, put me to present pain,
Lest this great sea of joys rushing upon me O'erbear the shores of my mortality.
And drown me with their sweetness. O! come hither,
Thou that begett'st him that did thee beget;
Thou that wast born at sea, buried at Tarsus,
And found at sea again. O Helicanus!
Down on thy knees, thank the holy gods as loud
As thunder threatens us; this is Marina.
What was thy mother's name? tell me but that.
For truth can never be confirm'd enough,
Though doubts did ever sleep.

Mar. What is your title?
Per. I am Pericles of Tyre; but tell me now My droun'd queen's name, as in the rest you said
Thou hast been god-like perfect;
Thee'ret heir of kingdoms, and another life
To Pericles thy father.
Mar. Is it no more to be your daughter than
To say my mother's name was Thaisa?
Thaisa was my mother, who did end
The minute I began.

Per. Now, blessing on thee! rise; thou art my child.
Give me fresh garments! Mine own, Helicanus;
She is not dead at Tarsus, as she should have been,
By savage Cleon; she shall tell thee all;
When thou shalt kneel, and justify in knowledge
She is thy very princess. Who is this?
Hel. Sir, 'tis the governor of Mitylene,
Who, hearing of your melancholy state,
Did come to see you.
Per. I embrace you.
Give me my robes; I am wild in my beholding.
O heavens! bless my girl. But hark! what music?
Tell Helicanus, my Marina, tell him
O'er, point by point, for yet he seems to doubt,
How sure you are my daughter. But what music?

3Q
Hel. My lord, I hear none.
Per. None!
The music of the spheres! List, my Marina.
Lys. It is not good to cross him; give him way.
Per. Rarest sounds! Do ye not hear?
Lys. My lord, I hear.
Music. Per. Most heavenly music: It nips me unto listing, and thick slumber Hangs upon mine eyes; let me rest. Sleeps.
Lys. A pillow for his head.
So, leave him all. Well, my companion friends, If this but answer to my just belief, I'll well remember you.
Exeunt all but PERICLES.

DIANA appears to PERICLES as in a vision.

Dia. My temple stands in Ephesus; hie thee thither,
And do upon mine altar sacrifice.
There, when my maiden priests are met together,
Reveal how thou at sea didst lose thy wife;
To mourn thy crosses, with thy daughter's call
And give them repetition to the life.
Perform my bidding, or thou liv'st in wo;
Do it, and happy; by my silver bow!
Awake, and tell thy dream! Disappears.
Per. Celestial Diana, goddess argentine,
I will obey thee! Helicanus!

Re-enter LYSIMACHUS, HELICANUS, and MARINA.

Hel. Sir?
Per. My purpose was for Tarsus, there to strike
The inhostable Cleon; but I am for other service first: toward Ephesus Turn our blown sails; eftsoons I'll tell thee why.
Shall we refresh us, sir, upon your shore,
And give you gold for such provision
As our intents will need?
Lys. Sir,
With all my heart; and when you come ashore,
I have another suit.
Per. You shall prevail,
Wro't to woo my daughter; for it seems
You have been noble towards her.
Lys. Sir, lend your arm.

SCENE II.—Before the Temple of DIANA at Ephesus.

Enter Gower.

Now our sands are almost run; More a little, and then dumb.
This, my last boon, give me,
For such kindness must relieve me,
That you aptly will suppose
What pageantry, what feats, what shows,
What minstrelsy, and pretty din,
The regent made in Mitylene
To greet the king. So he thriv'd,
That he is promis'd to be wise'd
To fair Marina; but in no wise
Till he had done his sacrifice,
As Diana bade: whereto being bount.
The interim, pray you, all confound.
In feather'd briefness sails are fill'd,
And wishes fall out as they're will'd.

At Ephesus, the temple see,
Our king and all his company.
That he can hither come so soon,
Is by your fancy's thankful doom. Exit.

SCENE III.—The Temple of DIANA at Ephesus.

THAISA standing near the altar, as high priestess
A number of Virgins on each side; CERIMON
And other Inhabitants of Ephesus attending.

Enter PERICLES, with his Train; LYSIMACHUS, HELCANUS, MARINA, and a Lady.

Per. Hail, Dia! to perform thy just command,
I here confess myself the King of Tyre;
Who, frighted from my country, did wed
At Pentapolis the fair Thaisa.
At sea in childbed died she, but brought forth
A maid-child call'd Marina; who, O goddess!
Wears yet thy silver livery. She at Tarsus
Was nurs'd with Cleon, whom at fourteen years
He sought to murder; but her better stars
Brought her to Mitylene, 'gainst whose shore
Riding, her fortunes brought the maid aboard us.
Where, by her own most clear remembrance, she Made known herself my daughter.

Tha. Voice and favour!
You are, you are—O royal Pericles! Faint!
Per. What means the sum? she dies; half gentlemen!
Cer. Noble sir, if you have told Diana's altar true,
This is your wife.
Per. Reverend appearer, no:
I threw her overboard with these very arms.
Cer. Upon this coast, I warrant you.
Per. Tis most certain.
Cer. Look to the lady. O! she's but o' erjoy'd Early in bust's ring morn this lady was Thrown on this shore. I op'd the coffin, Found there rich jewels; recover'd her, and place'd her
Here in Diana's temple.
Per. May we see them?
Cer. Great sir, they shall be brought to my house,
Whither I invite you. Look! Thaisa is recovered.

Tha. O! let me look.
If he be none of mine, my sanctity
Will to my sense bend no licentious ear,
But curb it, spite of seeing. O! my lord,
Are you not Pericles? Like him you speak,
Like him you are. Did you not name a temple
A birth, and death?
Per. The voice of dead Thaisa
Tha. That Thaisa am I, supposed dead
And drown'd.
Per. Immortal Dian!
Tha. Now I know you better.
When we with tears parted Pentapolis,
The king my father gave you such a ring.

Per. This; this: no more, you gods! you present kindness
Makes my past miseries sports: you shall do well.
That on the touching of her lips I may
This prince, the fair-betrothed of your daughter Shall marry her at Pentapolis. And now
This ornament
Makes me look dismal will I clip to form;
And what this fourteen years no razor touch'd,
To grace thy marriage-day I'll beautify.

That. Lord Cerimon hath letters of good credit, sir,
My father's dead.
Per. Heavens make a star of him! Yet there,
my queen,
We'll celebrate their nuptials, and ourselves
Will in that kingdom spend our following days;
Our son and daughter shall in Tyrus reign.
Lord Cerimon. we do our longing stay
To hear the rest untold. Sir, lead's the way.

Exeunt.

Enter Gower.

In Antiochus and his daughter you have heard
Of monstrous lust the due and just reward:
In Pericles, his queen, and daughter, seen,
Although assail'd with fortune fierce and keen,
Virtue preserved from fell destruction's blast,
Led on by heaven, and crowned with joy at last.

In Helicanus may you well desire
A figure of truth, of faith, of loyalty.
In reverend Cerimon there well appears
The worth that learned charity doth wear.
For wicked Cleon and his wife, when fame
Had spread their cursed deed, and honour'd name
Of Pericles, to rage the city turn,
That him and his they in his palace burn:
The gods for murder seemed so content
To punish them; although not done, but meant.
So on your patience evermore attending,
New joy wait on you! Here our play has ending.

Exit.
VENUS AND ADONIS.

TO THE

RIGHT HONOURABLE HENRY Wriothesly,
EARL OF SOUTHAMPTON, AND BARON
OF TICHFIELD.

Right Honourable,

I know not how I shall offend in dedicating my unpolished lines to your lordship, no
how the world will censure me for choosing so strong a prop to support so weak a burden: only, if you honour seem but pleased, I account myself highly praised, and vow to take advantage of all idle hours
'ill I have honoured you with some graver labour. But if the first heir of my invention prove deform
I shall be sorry it had so noble a godfather, and never after ear so barren a land, for fear it yield a still so bad a harvest. I leave it to your honourable survey, and your honour to your heart's conten which I wish may always answer your own wish and the world's hopeful expectation.

Your honour's in all duty,

- William Shakespeare.

'Vilia mine tur vulgus; mihi flavus Apollo
Pocula Castalia plena ministret aqua.'

Even as the sun with purple-colour'd face
Had ta'en his last leave of the weeping morn,
Rose-cheek'd Adonis hied him to the chase;
Hunting he lov'd, but love he laugh'd to scorn;
Sick-thoughted Venus makes amain unto him,
And like a bold-fac'd suitor 'gins to woo him.

'Thrice-fairer than myself,' thus she began,
The field's chief flower, sweet above compare,
Stain to all nymphs, more lovely than a man,
More white and red than doves or roses are; 10
Nature that made thee, with herself at strife,
Saith that the world hath ending with thy life.

'Vouchsafe, thou wonder, to alight thy steed,
And rein his proud head to the saddle-bow;
If thou wilt deign this favour, for thy need
A thousand honey secrets shalt thou know;
Here come and sit, where never serpent hisses;
And being set, I'll smother thee with kisses:

'And yet not cloy thy lips with loath'd satiety,
But rather famish them amid their plenty, 20
Making them red and pale with fresh variety;
Ten kisses short as one, one long as twenty:
A summer's day will seem an hour but short,
Being wasted in such time-beguiling sport.'

With this she seizeth on his sweating palm,
The precedent of pith and livelihood,

And trembling in her passion, calls it balm.

Earth's sovereign salve to do a goddess good:
Being so enrag'd, desire doth lend her force
Courageously to pluck him from his horse.

Over one arm the lusty courser's rein,
Under her other was the tender boy,
Who blush'd and pouted in a dull disdain,
With leaden appetite, unapt to toy;
She red and hot as coals of glowing fire,
He red for shame, but frosty in desire.

The studded bridle on a ragged bough
Nimbly she fastens; O! how quick is love:
The steed is stalled up, and even now
To tie the rider she begins to prove:
Backward she push'd him, as she would thrust,
And govern'd him in strength, though not in lust.

So soon was she along, as he was down,
Each leaning on their elbows and their hips:
Now doth she stroke his cheek, now doth she frown,
And 'gins to chide, but soon she stops his lips
And kissing speaks, with lustful language broken,

'If thou wilt chide, thy lips shall never open 980 burns with bashful shame; she with her tears quench the maiden burning of his cheeks;

then with her windy sighs and golden hairs fan and blow them dry again she seeks:
He saith she is immo'd, blames her miss;
What follows more she murders with a kiss.

If, as an empty eagle, sharp by fast,
res with her beak on feathers, flesh and bone,
aking her wings, devouring all in haste,
Il either gorge be stuff'd or prey be gone;
Even so she kiss'd his brow, his cheek, his chin,
And where she ends she doth anew begin.

o'd to content, but never to obey,
uting he lies, and breatheth in her face;
e feedeth on the steam as on a prey,
de calls it heavenly moisture, air of grace;
Wishing her cheeks were gardens full of flowers,
So they were dew'd with such distilling showers.

ok! how a bird lies tangled in a net,
FASTEN'd in her arms Adonis lies;
ere shame and aw'd resistance made him fret,
high bred more beauty in his angry eyes: 70
Rain added to a river that is rank
Perforce will force it overflow the bank.
ill she entreats, and prettily entreats,
or to a pretty ear she tunes her tale;
ill is he sullen, still he lours and frets,
wixt crimson shame and anger ashy-pale;
Being red, she loves him best; and being white,
Her best is better'd with a more delight.

ok how he can, she cannot choose but love;
Id by her fair immortal hand she swears, 80 on his soft bosom never to remove, he take truce with her contending tears,
Which long have rain'd, making her cheeks all wet;
and one sweet kiss shall pay this countless debt.

on this promise did he raise his chin, ke a dive-dapper peering through a wave,
o, being look'd on, ducks as quickly in;
offers he to give what she did crave;
But when her lips were ready for his pay,
He winks, and turns his lips another way.

ever did passenger in summer's heat ore thirst for drink than she for this good turn.
er help she sees, but help she cannot get;
bathes in water, yet her fire must burn:
"Oh! pity, 'gan she cry, 'flint-hearted boy:
"Tis but a kiss I beg; why art thou coy?
have been wo'd, as I entreat thee now,
ven by the stern and direful god of war,
ose newy neck in battle ne'er did bow,
ho conquers where he comes in every jar; 100
Yet hath he been my captive and my slave,
And begg'd for that which thou unask'd shalt have.

Over my altars hath he hung his lance,
batte'd shield, his uncontrolled crest,
And for my sake hath learn'd to sport and dance,
To toy, to wanton, daily, smile and jest;
Scorning his churlish drum and ensign red,
Making my arms his field, his tent my bed.

'Thus he that overrul'd I oversway'd,
Leading him prisoner in a red-rose chain:
Strong-temper'd steel his stronger strength obey'd.
Yet was he servile to my coy disdain.
O! be not proud, nor brag not of thy might.
For mastering her that foil'd the god of fight.

'Touch but my lips with those fair lips of thine,
Though mine be not so fair, yet are they red,
The kiss shall be thine own as well as mine.
What seest thou in the ground? hold up thy head:
Look in mine eyeballs, there thy beauty lies;
Then why not lips on lips, since eyes in eyes?

'Art thou ashamed to kiss? then wink again,
And I will wink; so shall the day seem night;
Love keeps his revels where there are but twain;
Be bold to play, our sport is not in sight:
These blue-vein'd violets whereon we lean
Never can blab, nor know not what we mean.

'The tender spring upon thy tempting lip
Shows thee unripe, yet may'st thou well be tasted.
Make use of time, let not advantage slip;
Beauty within itself should not be wasted:
Fair flowers that are not gather'd in their prime Rot and consume themselves in little time.

'Were I hard-favour'd, foul, or wrinkled-old.
Ill-nurtur'd, crooked, churlish, harsh in voice,
O'erworn, despised, rheumatic, and cold,
Thick-sighted, barren, lean, and lacking juice,
Then might'st thou pause, for then I were not for thee;
But having no defects, why dost abhor me?

'Thou canst not see one wrinkle in my brow;
Mine eyes are grey and bright, and quick in turning;
My beauty as the spring doth yearly grow;
My flesh is soft and plump, my marrow burning;
My smooth moist hand, were it with thy hand felt,
Would in thy palm dissolve, or seem to melt.

'Bid me discourse, I will enchant thine ear,
Or like a fairy trip upon the green,
Or like a nymph, with long dishevell'd hair,
Dance on the sands, and yet no footing seen:
Love is a spirit all compact of fire,
Not gross to sink, but light, and will aspire.

'Witness this primrose bank whereon I lie;
These forceless flowers like sturdy trees support me;
Two strengthless doves will draw me through the sky,
From morn till night, even where I list to sport me:
Is love so light, sweet boy, and may it be
That thou should'st think it heavy unto thee?
'Is thine own heart to thine own face affected?
Can thy right hand seize love upon thy left?
Then woo thyself, be of thyself rejected,' Steal thine own freedom, and complain on theft.
Narcissus so himself himself forsook, And died to kiss his shadow in the brook.
'Torches are made to light, jewels to wear,
Dainties to taste, fresh beauty for the use, Herbs for their smell, and sappy plants to bear;
Things growing to themselves are growth's abuse;
Seeds spring from seeds, and beauty breedeth beauty.
Thou wast begot; to get it is thy duty.

'Upon the earth's increase why should'st thou feed,
Unless the earth with thy increase be fed?
By law of nature thou art bound to breed,
That thine may live when thou thyself art dead;
And so in spite of death thou dost survive,
In that thy likeness still is left alive.'

By this the love-sick queen began to sweat,
For where they lay the shadow had forsook them,
And Titan, tired in the mid-day heat,
With burning eye did hotly overlook them;
Wishing Adonis had his team to guide,
So he were like him and by Venus' side.

And now Adonis, with a lazy spright,
And with a heavy, dark, disliking eye,
His louring brows overhwhelming his fair sight,
Like misty vapours when they blot the sky,
Souring his cheeks, cries 'Fie! no more of love: The sun doth burn my face; I must remove.'

'Ay me!' quoth Venus, 'young, and so unkind? What bare excuses mak'st thou to be gone;
I'll sigh celestial breath, whose gentle wind Shall cool the heat of this descending sun:
I'll make a shadow for thee of my hairs;
If they burn too, I'll quench them with my tears.
The sun that shines from heaven shines but warm,
And, lo! I lie between that sun and thee:
The heat I have from thence doth little harm,
Thine eye darts forth the fire that burneth me;
And were I not immortal, life were done
Between this heavenly and earthy sun.

'Art thou obdurate, flinty, hard as steel?
Nay, more than flint, for stone at rain relenteth, Art thou a woman's son, and canst not feel
What 'tis to love! how want of love tormenteth?
Oh! had thy mother borne so hard a mind,
She had not brought forth thee, but died unkind.

'What am I, that thou should'st contend me this?
Or what great danger dwells upon my suit?
What were thy lips the worse for one poor kiss?
Speak, fair; but speak fair words, or else be mute:
Give me one kiss, I'll give it thee again,
And one for interest, if thou wilt have twain.'

'Fie! lifeless picture, cold and senseless stone!
Well-painted idol, image dull and dead,
Statue contending but the eye alone,
Thing like a man, but of no woman bred:
Thou art no man, though of a man's complexion,
For men will kiss even by their own direction.

This said, impatience chokes her pleading tongue,
And swelling passion doth provoke a pause;
Red cheeks and fiery eyes blaze forth her wrong.
Being judge in love, she cannot right her cause,
And now she weeps, and now she fain would speak,
And now her sobs do her intimtions break.
Sometimes she shakes her head, and then her hand;
Now gazeth she on him, now on the ground:
Sometimes her arms infold him like a band:
She would, he will not in her arms be bound;
And when from thence he struggles to be gone She locks her lily fingers one in one.

'Fondling,' she saith, 'since I have hemm'd thee here Within the circuit of this ivory pale,
I'll be a park, and thou shalt be my deer;
Feed where thou wilt, on mountain or in vale.
Grave on my lips, and if those hills be dry,
Stray lower, where the pleasant fountains lie.

'Within this limit is relief enough,
Sweet bottom-grass and high delightful plain,
Round rising hillocks, brakes obscure and rough:
To shelter thee from tempest and from rain:
Then be my deer, since I am such a park;
No dog shall rouse thee, though a thousand bark.'

At this Adonis smiles as in disdain,
That in each cheek appears a pretty dimple:
Love made those hollows, if himself were slain He might be buried in a tomb so simple;
Foreknowing well, if there he came to lie, Why, there Love liv'd and there he could not die.

These lovely caves, these round enchanting pits
Open'd their mouths to swallow Venus' liking;
Being mad before, how doth she now for wits?
Struck dead at first, what needs a second striking?
Poor queen of love, in thine own law forlorn,
To love a check that smiles at thee in scorn!

Now which way shall she turn? what shall she say?
Her words are done, her woes the more increasing;
The time is spent, her object will away,
And from her twining arms doth urge releasing.
'Pity!' she cries, 'some favour, some remorse!' Away he springs, and hasteth to his horse.

But, lo! from forth a cope that neighbours by,
A breeding jennet, lusty, young, and proud,
Adonis' trampling courser doth espy,
And forth she rushes, snorts and neighs aloud:
The strong-neck'd steed, being tied unto a tree,
Breaketh his rein, and to her straight goes he.
Jealous of catching, swiftly doth forsake him,
With her the horse, and left Adonis there.
As they were mad, unto the wood they hie them,
Out-stripping crows that strive to over-fly them.

All swoln with chafing, down Adonis sits,
Banning his boisterous and unruly beast:
And now the happy season once more fits,
That love-sick Love by pleading may be blest;
For lovers say, the heart hath treble wrong
When it is barr'd the aidance of the tongue. 390

An oven that is stopp'd, or river stay'd,
Burneth more hotly, sweltheth with more rage:
So of concealed sorrow may be said,
Free vent of words love's fire doth assuage;
But when the heart's attorney once is mute,
The client breaks, as desperate in his suit.

He sees her coming, and begins to glow,
Even as a dying coal revives with wind,
And with his bonnet hides his angry brow;
Looks on the dull earth with disturbed mind, 340
Taking no notice that she is so nigh,
For all askance he holds her in his eye.

O! what a sight it was, wistly to view
How she came stealing to the wayward boy:
To note the fighting conflict of her hue,
How white and red each other did destroy:
But now her cheek was pale, and by and by
It flash'd forth fire, as lightning from the sky.

Now was she just before him as she sat,
And like a lowly lover down she kneels:
With one fair hand she heaveth up his hat,
Her other tender hand his fair cheek feels:
His tender cheek receives her soft hand's print,
As apt as new-fall'n snow takes any dint.

O! what a war of looks was then between them:
Her eyes petitioners to his eyes suing;
His eyes saw her eyes as they had not seen them:
Her eyes woo'd still, his eyes disdain'd the wooing:
And all this dumb play had his acts made plain
With tears, which, chorus-like, her eyes did rain.

Full gently now she takes him by the hand,
A lily prison'd in a gird of snow,
Or ivory in an alabaster band:
So white a friend entights so white a foe:
This beauteous combat, wilful and unwilling,
Show'd like two silver doves that sit a-billing.

Once more the engine of her thoughts began:
'O fairest mover on this mortal round,
Would thou Wert as I am, and I a man,
My heart all whole as thine, thy heart my wound;
For one sweet look thy help I would assure thee,
Though nothing but my body's bane would cure thee.'

'Give me my hand,' saith he, 'why dost thou feel it?'
'Give me my heart,' saith she, 'and thou shalt have it.'
O! give it me, lest thy hard heart do steel it,
And being steel'd, soft sighs can never grave it:
Then love's deep groans I never shall regard,
Because Adonis' heart hath made mine hard.'
VENUS AND ADONIS.

For shame! he cries, 'let go, and let me go; My day's delight is past, my horse is gone, And 'tis your fault I am bereft him so: I pray you hence, and leave me here alone: For all my mind, my thought, my busy care, Is how to get my palfrey from the mare.'

Thus she replies: 'Thy palfrey, as he should, Welcomes the warm approach of sweet desire: Affection is a coal that must be cool'd; Else, suffer'd, it will set the heart on fire. The sea hath bounds, but deep desire hath none; Therefore no marvel though thy horse be gone.

How like a judge he stood, tied to the tree, Servilely with a leathern rein! But when he saw his love, his youth's fair fee, He held such petty bondage in disdain; Throwing the base thong from his bending crest. Enfranchising his mouth, his back, his breast.

Who sees his true-love in her naked bed, Teaching the sheets a whiter hue than white, But, when his glutton eye so full hath fed, His other agents aim at like delight! Who is so faint, that dare not be so bold To touch the fire, the weather being cold? Let me excuse thy colourer, gentle boy, And learn of him, I heartily beseech thee, To take advantage on presented joy; Though I were dumb, yet his proceedings teach thee.

O! learn to love; the lesson is but plain, And once made perfect, never lost again.'

I know not love,' quoth he, 'nor will not know it, Unless it be a boar, and then I chase it; 'Tis much to borrow, and I will not owe it; My love to love is love but to disgrace it; For I have heard it is a life in death, That laughs, and weeps, and all but with a breath.

Who wears a garment shapeless and unfinish'd? Who plucks the bud before one leaf put forth? If springing things be any jot diminish'd, They wither in their prime, prove nothing worth: The colt that's back'd and burden'd being young Loseth his pride and never waxeth strong.

You hurt my hand with wringing; let us part, And leave this idle theme, this bootless chat: Remove your siege from my unyielding heart; To love's alarms it will not ope the gate: Dismiss your vows, your feigned tears, your flattery; For where a heart is hard, they make no battery.'

'What! canst thou talk?' quoth she, 'hast thou a tongue? O! would thou hadst not, or I had no hearing; Thy mermaid's voice hath done me double wrong; I had my load before, now press'd with bearing: Melodies discord, heavenly tune harsh-sounding. Ear's deep-sweet music, and heart's deep-sore wounding.

Had I no eyes but ears, my ears would love That inward beauty and invisible; Or were I deaf, thy outward parts would move Each part in me that were but sensible: Though neither eyes nor ears, to hear nor see. Yet should I be in love by touching thee.

'Say, that the sense of feeling were bereft me, And that I could not see, nor hear, nor touch, And nothing but the very smell were left me, Yet would my love to thee be still as much; For from the still?'tory of thy face excelling Comes breath perfum'd that breedeth love by smelling.

But O! what bouquet wert thou to the taste, Being nurse and feeder of the other four; Would they not wish the feast might ever last, And bid Suspicion double-lock the door, Lest Jealousy, that sour unwelcome guest, Should, by his stealing in, disturb the feast?

Once more the ruby-colour'd portal open'd, Which to his speech did honey passage yield; Like a red morn, that ever yet betoken'd Wreck to the sea-man, tempest to the field, Sorrow to shepherds, woe unto the birds, Gusts and foul flaws to herdmen and to herds.

This ill presage advisedly she marketh; Even as the wind is hush'd before it raineth, Or as the wolf doth grin before he barketh, Or as the berry breaks before it staineth, Or like the deadly bullet of a gun, His meaning struck her ere his words begun.

And at his look she flatly falleth down, For looks kill love and love by looks reviveth; A smile recures the wounding of a frown; But blessed bankrupt, that by love so thriveth The silly boy, believing she is dead, Claps her pale cheek, till clapping makes it red.

And all amaz'd brake off his late intent, For sharply he did think to reprehend her, Which cunning love did wittily prevent; Fair fall the wit that can so well defend her! For on the grass she lies as she were slain, Till his breath breatheth life in her again.

He wrings her nose, he strikes her on the cheeks, He bends her fingers, holds her pulses hard, He chaifes her lips; a thousand ways he seeks To mend the hurt that his unkindness marr'd: He kisses her; and she, by her good will, Will never rise, so he will kiss her still.

The night of sorrow now is turn'd to day: Her two blue windows faintly she up-heaveth, Like the fair sun, when in his fresh array He cheers the morn and all the earth relieveth: And as the bright sun glorifies the sky, So is her face illumin'd with her eye;

Whose beams upon his hairless face are fix'd. As if from thence they borrow'd all their shine, Were never four such lamps together mix'd, Had not his clouded with his brow's repine; But hers, which through the crystal tears gave light, Shone like the moon in water seen by night.
O! where am I? 'quoth she, 'in earth or heaven, or in the ocean drench'd, or in the fire?
What hour is this? or morn or weary even?
Do I delight to die, or life desire?
But now I liv'd, and life was death's annoy;
But now I died, and death was lively joy.
O! thou didst kill me; kill me once again:
By eyes' shrewed tutor, that hard heart of thine,
Iath taught them scornful tricks and such disdain
That they have murder'd this poor heart of mine;
And these mine eyes, true leaders to their queen,
But for thy piteous lips no more had seen.
Long may they kiss each other for this cure!
Never let their crimson liversies wear;
And as they last, their verdure still endure,
To drive infection from the dangerous year:
That the star-gazers, having writ on death,
May say, the plague is banish'd by thy breath.
Pure lips, sweet seals in my soft lips imprinted,
What bargains may I make, still to be sealing?
'Sell myself I can be well contented,
So thou wilt buy and pay and use good dealing;
Which purchase if thou make, for fear of slips
Set thy seal-manual on my wax-red lips.
A thousand kisses buys my heart from me;
And pay them at thy leisure, one by one.
What is ten hundred touches unto thee?
Are they not quickly told and quickly gone?
Say, for non-payment that the debt should double,
Is twenty hundred kisses such a trouble?
Fair queen,' quoth he, 'if any love you owe me,
Lesture my strangeness with my unripe years:
Before I know myself, seek not to know me;
'To fisher but the ungrown fry forbears:
The mellow plum doth fall, the green sticks fast.
Or being early pluck'd is sour to taste.
Look! the world's comforter, with weary gait,
His day's hot task hath ended in the west;
The owl, night's herald, shrieks, 'tis very late;
The sheep are gone to fold, birds to their nest,
And cool-black clouds that shadow heaven's light
Do summon us to part and bid good night.
Now let me say good night, and so say you;
If you will say so, you shall have a kiss.'
Good night,' quoth she; and ere he says adieu,
The honey fee of parting tender'd is:
Her arms do lend his neck a sweet embrace;
Incorporate then they seem, face grows to face.
Till, breathless, he disjoin'd, and backward drew
The heavenly moisture, that sweet coral mouth,
Whose precious taste her thirsty lips well knew,
Whereon they surfeit, yet complain on drouth:
He with her plenty press'd, she faint with death,
Their lips together glued, fall to the earth.
Now quick desire hath caught the yielding prey.
And glutton-like she feeds, yet never filleth;
Her lips are conquerors, his lips obey,
Paying what ransom the insuffer willleth;
Whose vulture thought doth pitch the price so high,
That she will draw his lips' rich treasure dry.
And having felt the sweetness of the spoil,
With blindfold fury she begins to forage;
Her face doth reek and smoke, her blood doth boil,
And careless lust stirs up a desperate courage;
Planting oblivion, beating reason back,
Forgetting shame's pure blush and honour's wrack.
Hot, faint, and weary, with her hard embracing,
Like a wild bird being tami'd with too much handling,
Or as the fleet-foot roe that's tir'd with chasing,
Or like the froward infant still'd with dandiling,
He now obeys, and now no more resisteth,
While she takes all she can, not all she listeth.
What wax so frozen but dissolves with tempering,
And yields at last to every light impression?
Things out of hope are compass'd oft with venturing,
Chiefly in love, whose leave exceeds commisision:
Affection fains not like a pale-fac'd coward,
But then woos best when most his choice is froward.

When he did frown, O! had she then gave over,
Such nectar from his lips she had not suck'd.
Foul words and frowns must not repel a lover;
What though the rose have prickles, yet 'tis pluck'd:
Were beauty under twenty locks kept fast,
Yet love breaks through and picks them all at last.
For pity now she can no more detain him;
The poor fool prays her that he may depart:
She is resolv'd no longer to restrain him,
Bids him farewell, and look well to her heart,
The which, by Cupid's bow she doth protest,
He carries thence incaged in his breast.
'Sweet boy,' she says, 'this night I'll waste in sorrow,
For my sick heart commands mine eyes to watch.
Tell me, Love's master, shall we meet to-morrow?
Say, shall we? shall we? wilt thou make the match?'
He tells her, no; to-morrow he intends
To hunt the boar with certain of his friends.
'The boar!' 'quoth she; whereat a sudden pale,
Like lawn being spread upon the blushing rose,
Usurps her cheek, she trembles at his tale,
And on his neck her yoking arms she throws:
She sinketh down, still hanging by his neck,
He on her belly falls, she on her back.
Venus and Adonis.

Now is she in the very lists of love,
Her champion mounted for the hot encounter:
All is imaginary she doth prove,
He will not manage her, although he mount her;
That worse than Tantalus' is her annoy,
To clip Elysium and to lack her joy. 690

Even as poor birds, deceiv'd with painted grapes,
Do surfeit by the eye and pine the maw,
Even so she languisheth in her misjudgments,
As those poor birds that helpless berries saw.
The warm effects which in him finds missing,
She seeks to kindle with continual kissing.
But all in vain; good queen, it will not be:
She hath assay'd as much as may be prov'd;
Her pleading hath deserv'd a greater fee;
She's Love, she loves, and yet she is not lov'd.
'Fie, fie!' he says, 'you crush me; let me go;
You have no reason to withhold me so.'

'Thou hast been gone,' quoth she, 'sweet boy, ere this,
But that thou told'st me thou would'st hunt the boar.
O! be advis'd; thou know'st not what it is
With javelin's point a churlish swine to gore,
Whose tushes never sheath'd he whetteth still,
Like to a mortal butcher, bent to kill.

'On his bow-back he hath a battle set
Of bristly pikes, that ever threat his foes;
His eyes like glow-worms shine when he doth fret;
His snout digs sepulchres where'er he goes;
Being mov'd, he strikes whate'er is in his way,
And whom he strikes his cruel tushes slay.

'His brawny sides, with hairy bristles arm'd,
Are better proof than thy spear's point can enter;
His short thick neck cannot be easily harm'd;
Being ired, on the lion he will venture:
The thorny brambles and embracing bushes,
As fearful of him, part, through whom he rushes.

'Alas! he nought esteems that face of thine,
To which Love's eyes pay tributary gazes;
Nor thy soft hands, sweet lips, and crystal eye,
Whose full perfection all the world amazes;
But having thee at vantage, wondrous dread!
Would root these beauties as he roots the mead.

'O! let him keep his loathsome cabin still;
Beauty hath nought to do with such foul fiends:
Come not within his danger by thy will;
They that thrive well take counsel of their friends.
When thou didst name the boar, not to dissemble,
I fear'd thy fortune, and my joints did tremble.

'Didst thou not mark my face? was it not white?
Saw'st thou not signs of fear lurk in mine eye?
Grew I not faint? and fell I not downright?
Within my bosom, whereon thou dost lie,
My birthing heart pants, beats, and takes no rest.
But, like an earthquake, shakes thee on my breast.

'For where Love reigns, disturbing Jealousy
Doth call himself Affection's sentinel;
Gives false alarms, suggesteth mutiny,
And in a peaceful hour doth cry 'Kill, kill!'
Distempering gentle Love in his desire,
As air and water do abate the fire.

'This sour informer, this bate-breeding spy,
This canker that eats up Love's tender spring,
This carry-tale, dissertious Jealousy,
That sometime true news, sometime false doth bring,
Knocks at my heart, and whispers in mine ear,
That if I love thee, I thy death should fear:

'And more than so, presenteth to mine eye
The picture of an angry-chafing boar,
Under whose sharp fangs on his back doth lie
An image like thyself, all stain'd with gore;
Whose blood upon the fresh flowers being shed
Doth make them droop with grief and hang the head.

'What should I do, seeing thee so indeed,
That tremble at the imagination?
The thought of it doth make my faint heart bleed,
And fear doth teach it divination:
I prophesy thy death, my living sorrow,
If thou encounter with the boar to-morrow.

'But if thou needs wilt hunt, be rul'd by me;
Uncouple at the timorous flying hare,
Or at the fox which lives by subtlety,
Or at the roe which no encounter dare:
Pursue these fearful creatures o'er the downs,
And on thy well-breath'd horse keep with thy hounds.

'And when thou hast on foot the purblind hare,
Mark the poor wretch, to overshot his troubles
How he outruns the wind, and with what care
He cranks and crosses with a thousand doubles:
The many musets through the which he goes
Are like a labyrinth to amaze his foes.

'Sometime he runs among a flock of sheep,
To make the cunning hounds mistake their smell,
And sometime where earth-delving conies keeps,
To stop the loud pursuers in their yell,
And sometime sorteth with a herd of dear:
Danger deviseth shifts; wit waits on fear:

'For there his smell with others being mingled,
The hot scent-snuffing hounds are driven to doubt,
Ceasing their clamorous cry till they have singled
With much ado the cold fault cleanly out:
Then do they spend their mouths: Echo replies,
As if another chase were in the skies.
By this, poor Wat, far off upon a hill,
Stands on his hinder legs with listening ear,
'Lo hearken if his foes pursue him still?
Then their loud alarms he doth hear;
And now his grief may be compared well
To one sore sick that hears the passing-bell.

Then shalt thou see the dew-bedabbled wretch
Turn, and return, indenting with the way;
Each envious briar his weary legs doth scratch,
Each shadow makes him stop, each murmur stay:
For misery is trodden on by many,
And being low never reliev'd by any.

Lie quietly, and hear a little more;
Say, do not struggle, for thou shalt not rise:
'tis not to make thee hate the hunting of the boar,
Like myself thou hear'st me moralize,
Applying this to that, and so to so;
For love can comment upon every woe.

Where did I leave? 'No matter where,'
Quoth he;
Leave me, and then the story aptly ends:
The night is spent. 'Why, what of that?'
Quoth she.
I am, quoth he, 'expected of my friends;
And now 'tis dark, and going I shall fall.'
'In night,' quoth she, 'desire sees best of all.
But if thou fall, 0! then imagine this,
The earth, in love with thee, thy footing trips,
And all is but to rob thee of a kiss.
Tich prey's make true men thieves; so do thy lips
Make modest Dian cloudy and forlorn.
Lest she should steal a kiss and die forsworn.

Now of this dark night I perceive the reason:
 Cynthia for shame obscures her silver shine,
'll forging Nature be condemn'd of treason,
Or stealing moulds from heaven that were divine;
Wherein she fram'd thee in high heaven's despite,
To shame the sun by day and her by night.

And therefore hast she brib'd the Destinies
'o cross the curious workmanship of nature,
'to mingle beauty with infirmities,
And pure perfection with impure defeature;
Making it subject to the tyranny
Of mad mischances and much misery.

As burning fevers, agnes pale and faint,
Life-poisoning pestilence and frenzy's wood,
The narrow-eating sickness, whose attain'd disorder breeds by heating of the blood;
Surfeits, imposthumes, grief, and damn'd despair,
Swear Nature's death for framing thee so fair.

And not the least of all these maladies
But in one minute's fight brings beauty under:
Sorh favour, savour, hue, and qualities.
Whereat the impartial gaze late did wonder,
Are on the sudden wasted, thaw'd and done,
As mountain-snow melts with the mid-day sun.

Therefore, despite of fruitless chastity,
Love-lacking vestals and self-loving nuns,
That on the earth would breed a scarcity,
And barren earth of daughters and of sons,
Be prodigal: the lamp that burns by night
Dries up his oil to lend the world his light.

What is thy body but a swallowing grave,
Seeming to bury that posterity
Which by the rights of time thou needs must have,
If thou destroy them not in dark obscurity?
If so, the world will hold thee in disdain,
Sith in thy pride so fair a hope is slain.

'So in thyself thyself art made away;
A mischief worse than civil home-bred strife,
Or theirs whose desperate hands themselves do slay,
Or butcher-sire that reaves his son of life.
Foul-cankerst rust the hidden treasure frets,
But gold that's put to use more gold begets.'

'Nay then,' quoth Adon, 'you will fall again
Into your idle over-handled theme;
The kiss I gave you is bestow'd in vain,
And all in vain you strive against the stream;
For this black-fac'd night, desire's foul nurse,
Your treatise makes me like you worse and worse.'

If love have lent you twenty thousand tongues,
And every tongue more moving than your own,
Bewitching like the wanton mermaid's songs,
Yet from mine ear the tempting tune is blown;
For know, my heart stands armed in mine ear,
And will not let a false sound enter there.

'Lest the deceiving harmony should run
Into the quiet closure of my breast;
And then my little heart were quite undone,
In his bed chamber to be bare'd of rest.
No, lady, no; my heart longs not to groan,
But soundly sleeps, while now it sleeps alone.

'What have you urg'd that I cannot reprove?
The path is smooth that leadeth on to danger;
I hate not love, but your device in love,
That lends embracements unto every stranger.
You do it for increase: O strange excuse!
When reason is the bawd to lust's abuse.'

'Call it not love, for Love to heaven is fled,
Since sweating Lust on earth usurp'd his name;
Under whose simple semblance he hath fed
Upon fresh beauty, blotting it with blame;
Which the hot tyrant stains and soon bereaves,
As caterpillars do the tender leaves.

Love comforteth like sunshine after rain.
But Lust's effect is tempest after sun;
Love's gentle spring doth always fresh remain.
Lust's winter comes ere summer half be done.
Love surfeits not. Lust like a gluton dies:
Love is all truth, Lust full of forged lies.

'More I could tell, but more I dare not say:
The text is old, the orator too green.
Therefore, in sadness, now I will away;
My face is full of shame, my heart of teen:
Mine ears, that to your wanton talk attended,
Do burn themselves for having so offended.'
With this he breaketh from the sweet embrace
Of those fair arms which bound him to her breast,
And homeward through the dark laund runs apace;
Leaves Love upon her back deeply distress'd.
Look, how a bright star shooteth from the sky,
So glides he in the night from Venus' eye;
Which after him she darts, as one on shore
Gazing upon a late-embarked friend,
Till the wild waves will have him seen no more.
Whose ridges with the meeting clouds contend:
So did the merciless and pitchy night
Fold in the object that did feed her sight.
Whereat amaz'd, as one that unaware
Hath dropp'd a precious jewel in the flood,
Or 'stoinish'd as night-wanderers often are,
Their light blown out in some mistrustful wood;
Even so confounded in the dark she lay,
Having lost the fair discovery of her way.
And now she beats her heart, whereat it groans,
That all the neighbour caves, as seeming troubled,
Make verbal repetition of her moans;
Passion on passion deeply is redoubled:
' Ay me! ' she cries, and twenty times ' Woe, woe,'
And twenty echoes twenty times cry so.
She marking them begins a wailing note,
And sings extemporally a woeful ditty;
How love makes young men thrill and old men cfe:
How love is wise in folly, foolish-witty:
Her heavy anthem still concludes in woe,
And still the choir of echoes answer so.
Her song was tedious, and outwore the night,
For lovers' hours are long, though seeming short:
If pleas'd themselves, others, they think, delight
In such-like circumstance, with such-like sport:
Their copious stories, oftentimes begun,
End without audience, and are never done.
For who hath she to spend the night withal,
But idle sounds resembling parasites,
Like shrill-tongu'd tapsters answering every call,
Soothing the humour of fantastic wits?
She says ' Tis so: ' they answer all ' Tis so;'
And would say after her, if she said ' No.'
Lo! here the gentle lark, weary of rest,
From his moist cabinet mounts up on high,
And wakes the morning, from whose silver breast
The sun ariseth in his majesty;
Who doth the world so gloriously behold,
That cedar-tops and hills seem burnish'd gold.
Venus salutes him with this fair good-morrow:
'O thou clear god, and patron of all light,' 869
From whom each lamp and shining star doth borrow
The beauteous influence that makes him bright,
There lives a son that suck'd an earthly mother,
'May lend thee light, as thou dost lend to other.' 870
This said, she hasteth to a myrtle grove,
Musing the morning is so much o'erworn,
And yet she hears no tidings of her love;
She hearkens for his hounds and for his horn:
Anon she hears them chant it lustily,
And all in haste she coasteth to the cry.
And as she runs, the bushes in the way
Some catch her by the neck, some kiss her face.
Some twine about her thigh to make her stay:
She wildly breaketh from their strict embrace.
Like a milch doe, whose swelling ugs do ache,
Hasting to feed her fawn hid in some brake.
By this she hears the hounds are at a bay;
Whereat she starts, like one that spies an adder,
Wreath'd up in fatal folds just in his way,
The fear whereof doth make him shake and shudder;
Even so the timorous yelping of the hounds
Appals her senses, and her spirit confounds.
For now she knows it is no gentle chase,
But the blunt boar, rough bear, or lion proud,
Because the cry remaineth in one place,
Where fearfully the dogs exclame aloud:
Finding their enemy to be so curt,
They all strain courtesy who shall cope him first.
This dismal cry rings sadly in her ear,
Through which it enters to surprise her heart:
Who, overcome by doubt and bloodless fear,
With cold-pale weakness nums each feeling part;
Like soldiers, when their captain once doth yield,
They basely fly and dare not stay the field.
Thus stands she in a trembling ecstasy,
Till, cheering up her senses all dismay'd,
She tells them ' tis a causeless fantasy,
And childish error, that they are afraid;
Bids them leave quaking, bids them fear no more:
And with that word she spied the hunted boar,
Whose frothy mouth bepainted all with red,
Like milk and blood being mingled both together,
A second fear through all her sinews spread,
Which madly hurries her she knows not whither:
This way she runs, and now she will no further,
But back retires to rate the boar for murther.
A thousand spleens bear her a thousand ways,
She treads the path that she untreads again;
Her more than haste is mated with delays,
Like the proceedings of a drunken brain:
Full of respects, yet nought at all respecting,
In hand with all things, nought at all effecting.
Here kennel'd in a brake she finds a hound,
And asks the weary catiff for his master,
And there another licking of his wound,
'Gainst venom'd sores the only sovereign plaster;
And here she meets another sadly scowling,
To whom she speaks, and he replies with howling:
When he hath ceased his ill-resounding noise,
Another flap-mouth'd mourner, black and grim,
Against the welkin volleys out his voice;
Clapping their proud tails to the ground below,
Shaking their scratch’d ears, bleeding as they go.

Look, how the world’s poor people are amaz’d
At apparitions, signs, and prodigies,
Whereon with fearful eyes they long have gaz’d,
Infusing them with dreadful prophecies;
So she at these sad signs draws up her breath,
And sighing it again, exclaims on Death.

Hard-favour’d tyrant, ugly, meagre, lean,
Hateful divorce of love, thence chides she Death,
Grim-grinning ghost, earth’s worm, what dost thou mean
To stifle beauty and to steal his breath,
Who when liv’d, his breath and beauty set
Gloss on the rose, smell to the violet?

If he be dead, O no! it cannot be,
Seeing his beauty, thou should’st strike at it;
O yes! it may; thou hast no eyes to see,
But hatefully at random dost thou hit.

Thy mark is feeble age, but thy false dart
Mistakes that aim and cleaves an infant’s heart.

Hadst thou but bid beware, then he had spoke,
And bearing him thy power had lost his power.
The Destinies will curse thee for this stroke;
They bid thee crop a weed, thou pluck’st a flower.

Love’s golden arrow at him should have fled,
And not Death’s ebon dart, to strike him dead.

Dost thou drink tears, that thou provok’st such weeping?
What may a heavy groan advantage thee?
Why hast thou cast into eternal sleeping
Those eyes that taught all other eyes to see?
Now Nature cares not for thy mortal vigour,
Since her best work is ruin’d with thy rigour.

Here overcome, as one full of despair,
She vail’d her eyelids, who, like sluices, stopp’d
The crystal tide that from her two cheeks fair
In the sweet channel of her bosom dropp’d;
But through the flood-gates breaks the silver rain,
And with his strong course opens them again.

O! how her eyes and tears did lend and borrow;
Her eyes seen in the tears, tears in her eye;
Both crystals, where they view’d each other’s sorrow,
Sorrow that friendly sights sought still to dry;
But like a stormy day, now wind, now rain,
Sighs dry her cheeks, tears make them wet again.

Variable passions throng her constant woe,
As striving who should best become her grief;
All entertain’d, each passion labours so,
That every present sorrow seemeth chief,
But none is best; then join they all together,
Like many clouds consulting for foul weather.

By this, far off she hears some huntsman holla;
A nurse’s song ne’er pleas’d her babe so well:

The dire imagination she did follow
This sound of hope doth labour to expel;
For now reviving joy bids her rejoice,
And flatters it is Adonis’ voice.

Whereat her tears began to turn their tide,
Being prison’d in her eye, like pearls in glass;
Yet sometimes falls an orient drop beside,
Which her cheek melts, as scorning it should pass,
To wash the foul face of the sluttish ground,
Who is but drunken when she seemeth drownd.

O hard-believing love! how strange it seems
Not to believe, and yet too credulous;
Thy weal and woe are both of them extremes;
Despair and hope make thee ridiculous:
The one doth flatter thee in thoughts unlikely,
In likely thoughts the other kills thee quickly.

Now she unwraps the web that she hath wrought,
Adonis lives, and Death is not to blame;
It was not she that call’d him all to naught,
Now she adds honours to his hateful name;
She clepes him king of graves, and grave for kings,
Imperious supreme of all mortal things.

‘No, no,’ quoth she, ‘sweet Death, I did but jest;
Yet pardon me I felt a kind of fear
Whenas I met the boar, that bloody beast,
Which knows no pity, but is still severe;
Then, gentle shadow, truth I must confess,
I call’d on thee, fearing my love’s decease.

‘Tis not my fault: the boar provok’d my tongue;
Be wreak’d on him, invisible commander;
‘Tis he, foul creature, that hath done thee wrong;
I did but act, he’s author of thy slander.
Grief hath two tongues, and never woman yet
Could rule them both without ten women’s wit.’

Thus hoping that Adonis is alive,
Her rash suspect she doth extenuate;
And that his beauty may the better thrive,
With Death she humbly doth insinuate;
Tells him of trophies, statues, tombs, and stories
His victories, his triumphs, and his glories.

‘O Jove!’ quoth she, ‘how much a fool was I
To be of such a weak and silly mind
To wail his death who lives and must not die
Till mutual overthrow of mortal kind;
For he being dead, with him is beauty slain.
And, beauty dead, black chaos comes again.

‘Fie, fie, fond love! thou art so full of fear!
As one with treasure laden, hemm’d with thieves;
Trifles, unwitnessed by eye or ear,
Thy coward heart with false bethinking griefs.
Even at this word she hears a merry horn,
Whereat she leaps that was but late forlorn.
As falcon to the lure, away she flies;
The grass stoops not, she treads on it so light;
And in her haste unfortunately spies
The foul boar’s conquest on her fair delight;
Which seen, her eyes, as murder’d with the view,
Like stars asham’d of day, themselves withdrew.
Venus and Adonis.

Or, as the snail, whose tender horns being hit,
Shrinks backward in his shelly cave with pain,
And there, all smother’d up, in shade doth sit,
Long after fearing to creep forth again;
So, at his bloody view, her eyes are fled
Into the deep dark cabins of her head:
Where they resign their office and their light
To the dispensing of her troubled brain; 1040
Who bids them still consort with ugly night,
And never wound the heart with looks again;
Who, like a king perplexed in his throne,
By their suggestion gives a deadly groan,
Whereat each tributary subject quakes;
As when the wind, imprison’d in the ground,
Struggling for passage, earth’s foundation shakes,
Which with cold terror doth men’s minds confound.
This mutiny each part doth so surprise
That from their dark beds once more leap her eyes;
And, being open’d, threw unwilling light
Upon the wide wound that the boar had trench’d
In his soft flank; whose wond’ring lily white
With purple tears, that his wound wept, was trench’d:
No flower was nigh, no grass, herb, leaf, or weed,
But stole his blood and seem’d with him to bleed.
This solemn sympathy poor Venus noteth,
Over one shoulder doth she hang her head,
Dumbly she passes, frantically she dothet;
She thinks he could not die, he is not dead; 1060
Her voice is stopp’d, her joints forget to bow,
Her eyes are mad that they have wept till now.
Upon his hurt she looks so steadfastly,
That her sight dazzling makes the wound seem three;
And then she reprehends her mangleing eye,
That makes more gashes where no breach should be;
His face seems twain, each several limb is doubled;
For oft the eye mistakes, the brain being troubled.

‘My tongue cannot express my grief for one, 1069
And yet,’ quoth she, ‘behold two Adonis slain!
My sighs are blown away, my salt tears gone,
Mine eyes are turn’d to fire, my heart to lead:
Heavy heart’s lead, melt at mine eyes’ red fire!
So shall I die by drops of hot desire.

‘Alas! poor world, what treasure hast thou lost?
What face remains alive that’s worth the viewing?
Whose tongue is music now? what canst thou boast
Of things long since, or any thing ensuing?
The flowers are sweet, their colours fresh and trim;
But true-sweet beauty liv’d and died with him.

‘Bonnet nor veil henceforth no creature wear!
Nor sun nor wind will ever strive to kiss you:
Having no fair to lose, you need not fear;
The sun doth scorn you, and the wind doth hiss you:
But when Adonis liv’d, sun and sharp air
Lurk’d like two thieves, to rob him of his fair:
‘And therefore would he put his bonnet on,
Under whose brim the gaudy sun would peep;
The wind would blow it off, and, being gone,
Play with his locks: then would Adonis weep;
And straight, in pity of his tender years, 1091
They both would strive who first should dry his tears.

‘To see his face the lion walk’d along
Behind some hedge, because he would not fear him;
To recreate himself when he bath sung,
The tiger would be tame and gently hear him;
If he had spoke, the wolf would leave his prey
And never fright the silly lamb that day.

‘When he beheld his shadow in the brook,
The fishes spread on it their golden gills; 1108
When he was by, the birds such pleasure took,
That some would sing, some other in their bills
Would bring him mulberries and ripe-red cherries;
He fed them with his sight, they him with berries.

‘But this foul, grim, and urchin-snouted boar,
Whose downward eye still looketh for a grave,
Ne’er saw the beauteous livery that he wore;
Witness the entertainment that he gave:
If he did see his face, why then I know
He thought to kiss him, and hath kill’d him so.

‘Tis true, ’tis true: thus was Adonis slain:
He ran upon the boar with his sharp spear,
Who did not whet his teeth at him again,
But by a kiss thought to persuade him there;
And muzzling in his flank, the loving swine
Sheath’d unaware the tusk in his soft groin.

‘Had I been tooth’d like him, I must confess,
With kissing him I should have kill’d him first;
But he is dead, and never did he bless
My youth with his; the more am I accurs’d.’ 1120
With this she falleth in the place she stood,
And stains her face with his concealed blood.
She looks upon his lips, and they are pale;
She takes him by the hand, and that is cold:
She whispers in his ears a heavy tale,
As if they heard the woeful words she told;
She lifts the coffer-lids that close his eyes,
Where, lo! two lamps, burnt out, in darkness lies;

Two glasses, where herself herself beheld
A thousand times, and now no more reflect; 1130
Their virtue lost, wherein they late excelled,
And every beauty rob’d of his effect:
‘Wonder of time,’ quoth she, ‘this is my spite,
That, thou being dead, the day should yet be light.
Since thou art dead, lo! here I prophesy,
Sorrow on love hereafter shall attend:
It shall be waited on with jealousy,
Find sweet beginning, but unsavoury end:
Ne’er settled equally, but high or low; 1139
That all love’s pleasure shall not match his woe.

‘It shall be fickle, false, and full of fraud,
Bud and be blasted in a breathing-while;
The bottom poison, and the top o'erstraw'd
With sweets that shall the truest sight beguile:
The strongest body shall it make most weak,
Strike the wise dumb and teach the fool to speak.

It shall be sparing and too full of riot,
Teaching decrepit age to tread the measures;
Pluck down the rich, enrich the poor with treasures;
It shall be raging mad, and silly mild,
Make the young old, the old become a child.

It shall suspect where is no cause of fear;
It shall not fear where it should most mistrust;
And most deceiving when it seems most just;
Put fear to valour, courage to the coward.

It shall be cause of war and dire events,
And set dissension 'twixt the son and sire:
Subject and servile to all discontents,
Sith in his prime Death doth my love destroy,
They that love best their loves shall not enjoy.

By this, the boy that by her side lay kill'd
Was melted like a vapour from her sight,
And in his blood that on the ground lay spill'd,
A purple flower sprung up, cheesker'd with white;
Which in round drops upon their whiteness stood.

She bows her head, the new-sprung flower to smell,
Comparing it to her Adonis' breath,
And says within her bosom it shall dwell,
Since he himself is reft from her by death:
She crops the stalk, and in the breach appears
Green dropping sap, which she compares to tears.

'Poor flower,' quoth she, 'this was thy father's guise.
Sweet issue of a more sweet-smelling sire,
For every little grief to wet his eyes:
To grow unto himself was his desire,
And so 'tis thine; but know, it is as good
To wither in my breast as in his blood.

Here was thy father's bed, here in my breast;
Thou art the next of blood, and 'tis thy right:
Lo! in this hollow cradle take thy rest,
My throbbing heart shall rock thee day and night:
There shall not be one minute in an hour
Wherein I will not kiss my sweet love's flower.'

Thus weary of the world, away she hies,
And yokes her silver doves; by whose swift aid
Their mistress mounted through the empty skies
In her light chariot quickly is convey'd:
Holding their course to Paphos, where their queen
Means to immure herself and not be seen.
THE RAPE OF LUCRECE.

TO THE

RIGHT HONOURABLE HENRY Wriothesly,
EARL OF SOUTHAMPTON, AND BARON
OF TICHFIELD.

The love I dedicate to your lordship is without end; whereof this pamphlet, without beginning, is but a superfluous moiety. The wearant I have of your honourable disposition, not the worth of my untutored lines, makes it assured of acceptance. What I have done is yours; what I have to do is yours; being part in all I have, devoted yours. Were my worth greater, my duty would show greater; meantime, as it is, it is bound to your lordship, to whom I wish long life, still lengthened with all happiness.

Your lordship's in all duty,

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE.

THE ARGUMENT.

LUCIUS TARQUINIUS, for his excessive pride surnamed Superbus, after he had caused his own father-in-law Servius Tullius to be cruelly murdered, and, contrary to the Roman laws and customs, not requiring or staying for the people's suffrages, had possessed himself of the kingdom, went, accompanied with his sons and other noblemen of Rome, to besiege Ardea. During which siege the principal men of the army meeting one evening at the tent of Sextus Tarquinius, the king's son, in their discourses after supper every one commended the virtues of his own wife: among whom Collatinus extolled the incomparable chastity of his wife Lucretia. In that pleasant humour they all posted to Rome; and intending, by their secret and sudden arrival, to make trial of that which every one had before avouched, only Collatinus finds his wife, though it were late in the night, spinning amongst her maids; the other ladies were all found dancing and revelling; or in several disports. Whereupon the noblemen yielded Collatinus the victory, and his wife the fame. At that time Sextus Tarquinius being inflamed with Lucrece's beauty, yet smothering his passions for the present, departed with the rest back to the camp; from whence he shortly after privily withdrew himself, and was, according to his estate, royally entertained and lodged by Lucrece at Collatium. The same night he treacherously stealeth into her chamber, violently ravished her, and early in the morning speedeth away. Lucrece, in this lamentable plight, hastily dispatcheth messengers, one to Rome for her father, another to the camp for Collatine. They came, the one accompanied with Junius Brutus, the other with Publius Valerius; and finding Lucrece attired in mourning habit, demanded the cause of her sorrow. She, first taking an oath of them for her revenge, revealed the actor, and whole manner of his dealing, and withheld suddenly stabbed herself. Which done, with one consent they all vowed to root out the whole hated family of the Tarquins; and bearing the dead body to Rome, Brutus acquainted the people with the door and manner of the vile deed, with a bitter invective against the tyranny of the king: wherewith the people were so moved, that with one consent and a general acclamation the Tarquins were all exiled, and the state government changed from kings to consuls.

From the besieged Ardea all in post,
Borne by the trustless wings of false desire,
Lust-breathed Tarquin leaves the Roman host,
And to Collatium bears the lightless fire
Which, in pale embers hid, lurks to aspire,
And girdle with embracing flames the waist
Of Collatine's fair love, Lucrece the chaste.

Haply that name of chaste unhappily set
This baseless edge on his keen appetite;
When Collatine unwisely did not let

To praise the clear unmatched red and white
Which triumph'd in that sky of his delight,
Where mortal stars, as bright as heaven's beauties,
With pure aspects did him peculiar duties.

For he the night before, in Tarquin's tent,
Unlock'd the treasure of his happy state;
What priceless wealth the heavens had him lent

In the possession of his beauteous mate;
teckoning his fortune at such high-proud rate,
That kings might be espoused to more fame,
But king nor peer to such a peerless dame. 20 happiness enjoy'd but of a few!

and, if possess'd, as soon decay'd and done is the morning's silver-melting dew against the golden splendour of the sun;
in expir'd date, cancel'd ere well begun:
Honour and beauty, in the owner's arms.
Are weakly fortress'd from a world of harms.

beauty itself doth of itself persuade the eyes of men without an orator;
What needeth then apologies be made
o set forth that which is so singular?
or why is Collatine the publisher
Of that rich jewel he should keep unknown
From tilevish ears, because it is his own?

'erchance his boast of Lucrece' sovereignty uggested this proud issue of a king;
or by our ears our hearts oft-tainted be:
erchance that envy of so rich a thing,
aving compare, disdainfully did sting
His high-pitch'd thoughts, that meaner men should vaunt
That golden hap which their superiors want.

at some untimely thought did instigate is all-too-timeless speed, if none of those:
his honour, his affairs, his friends, his state, eglected all, with swift intent he goes n quench the coal which in his liver glows.
Of rash false heat, wrapp'd in repentant cold,
Thy hasty spring still blasts, and ne'er grows old.

hen at Collatium this false lord arriv'd,
'all was he welcom'd by the Roman dame, thin whose face beauty and virtue striv'd ich of them both should underprop her fame:
hen virtue bragg'd, beauty would blush for shame;
When beauty boasted blushes, in despite Virtue would stain that or with silver white.

ut beauty, in that white intituled,
rom Venus' doves doth challenge that fair field;
hen virtue claims from beauty beauty's red,
Which virtue gave the golden age to gild heir silver cheeks, and call'd it then their shield;
Teaching them thus to use it in the fight,
When shame assail'd, the red should fence the white.

his heraldry in Lucrece' face was seen, rg'd by beauty's red and virtue's white
If either's colour was the other queen, rowing from world's minority their right;
et their ambition makes them still to fight;
The sovereignty of either being so great,
that off they interchange each other's seat.

his silent war of lilies and of roses,
Which Tarquin view'd in her fair face's field,
In their pure ranks his traitor eye encloses;
Where, lest between them both it should be kill'd,
The coward captive doth yield
To those two armies that would let him go,
Rather than triumph in so false a foe.

ow thinks he that her husband's shallow tongue,
The niggard prodigal that prais'd her so,
In that high task hath done her beauty wrong,
Which far exceeds his barren skill to show:
Therefore that praise which Collatine doth owe
Enchanted Tarquin answers with surmise,
In silent wonder of still-gazing eyes.

This earthly saint, adored by this devil,
Little suspecteth the false worshipper;
For unstain'd thoughts do seldom dream on evil.
Birds never lim'd no secret bushes fear:
So guiltless she securely gives good cheer
And reverent welcome to her princely guest.
Whose inward ill no outward harm express'd:
For that he colour'd with his high estate,
Hiding base sin in plait's of majesty;
That nothing in him seem'd inordinate,
Save sometime too much wonder of his eye,
Which, having all, all could not satisfy:
But, poorly rich, so wanteth in his store,
That, cloy'd with much, he pineth still for more.

But she, that never cop'd with stranger eyes,
Could pick no meaning from their parling looks,
Nor read the subtle-shining secrecy's
Writ in the glassy margents of such books.
She touch'd no unknown baits, nor fear'd no hooks;
Nor could she moralize his wanton sight,
More than his eyes were open'd to the light.

He stories to her ears her husband's fame,
Won in the fields of fruitful Italy;
And decks with praises Collatine's high name,
Made glorious by his manly chivalry.
With bruised arms and wreaths of victory:
Her joy with heav'd up hand she doth express,
And, wordless, so greets heaven for his success.

Far from the purpose of his coming thither,
He makes excuses for his being there:
No cloudy show of stormy blustering weather
Doth yet in his fair welkin once appear;
Till sable Night, mother of Dread and Fear,
Upon the world dim darkness doth display,
And in her vaulty prison stows the Day.

Far then is Tarquin brought unto his bed,
Intending weariness with heavy slumb'rt
For after supper long he question'd
With modest Lucrece, and wore out the night:
Now leaden slumber with life's strength doth fight,
And every one to rest themselves betake,
Save thieves, and cares, and troubled minds,
that wake.
As one of which doth Tarquin lie revolting
The sundry dangers of his will's obtaining ;
Yet ever to obtain his will resolving,
Though weak-built hopes persuade him to ab-staining:
Despair to gain doth traffic off for gaine;
And when great treasure is the need prosp'od,
Though death be adjunct, there's no death suppos'd.

Those that much covet are with gain so fond,
That what they have not that which they possess
They scatter and unloose it from their bond,
And so, by hoping more, they have but less;
Or, gaining more, the profit of excess
Is but to surfeit, and such griefs sustain,
That they prove bankrupt in this poor-rich

The aim of all is but to nurse the life
With honour, wealth, and ease, in waning age;
And in this aim there is such thwarting strife,
That one for all, or all for one we gage;
As life for honour in fell battle's rage;
Honour for wealth; and oft that wealth doth cost
The death of all, and all together lost.

So that in venturing ill we leave to be
The things we are for that which we expect;
And this ambitious foul infirmity,
In having much, torment us with defect.
Of that we have; so then we do neglect
The thing we have; and, all for want of wit,
Make something nothing by augmenting it.

Such hazard now must doting Tarquin make,
Pawning his honour to obtain his lust,
And for himself he must forsake;
Then where is truth, if there be no self-trust?
When shall he think to find a stranger just,
When he himself confounds, betrays
To slanderous tongues and wretched hateful days?

Now stole upon the time the dead of night,
When heavy sleep had clos'd up mortal eyes
No comfortable star did lend his light,
No noise but owls' and wolves' death-boding cries;
Now serves the season that they may surprise
The silly lambs; pure thoughts are dead and still,
While lust and murder wake to stain and kill.

And now this lustful lord leap'd from his bed,
Throwing his mantle rudely o'er his arm;
Is madly toss'd between desire and dread;
Th' one sweetly flatters, th' other feareth harm;
But honest fear, bewitch'd with lust's foul charm,
Doth too oft betake him to retire,
Beaten away by brain-sick rude desire.

His falchion on a flint he softly smiteth,
That from the cold stone sparks of fire do fly;
Whereat a waxen torch forthwith he lighteth,
Which must be lode-star to his lustful eye;
And to the flame thus speaks advisedly:

'As from this cold flint I enforc'd this fire,
So Lucrece must I force to my desire.'

Here pale with fear he doth premeditate
The dangers of his loathsome enterprise,
And in his inward mind he doth debate
What following sorrow may on this arise:
Then looking sorrowfully, he doth despire
His naked armour of still-slaughter'd lust,
And justly thus controls his thoughts unjust:

'Fair torch, burn out thy light, and lend it not
To darken her whose light excelleth thine;
And die, unhallow'd thoughts, before you blot
With your uncleanness that which is divine;
Offer pure incense to so pure a shrine:
Let fair humanity abhor the deed
That spots and stains love's modest snow-white weed.

'O shame to knighthood and to shining arms!
O foul dishonour to my household's grave!
O impious act, including all foul harms!
A martial man to be soft fancy's slave!
True valour still a true respect should have;
Then my digression is so vile, so base,
That it will live engraven in my face.

'Yea, though I die, the scandal will survive,
And be an eye-sore in my golden coat;
Some loathsome dash the herald will contrive,
To cipher me how fondly I did dote;
That my posterity, sham'd with the note,
Shall curse my bones, and hold it for no sin
To wish that I their father had not been.

'What win I if I gain the thing I seek?
A dream, a breath, a froth of fleeting joy.
Who buys a minute's mirth to wall a week?
Or sells eternity to get a toy?
For one sweet grape who will the vine destroy?
Or what fond beggar, but to touch the crown,
Would with the sceptre straight be strucken down?

'If Collatinus dream of my intent,
Will he not wake, and in a desperate rage
Post hither, this vile purpose to prevent?
This siege that hath engirt his marriage,
This blur to youth, this sorrow to the sage,
This dying virtue, this surviving shame,
Whose crime will bear an ever-during blame?

'O! what excuse can my invention make,
When thou shalt charge me with so black a deed?
Will not my tongue be mute, my frail joints shake,
Mine eyes forgo their light, my false heart bleed?
The gulf being great, the fear doth still exceed:
And extreme fear can neither fight nor fly,
But coward-like with trembling terror die.

'Had Collatinus kill'd my son or sire,
Or lain in ambush to betray my life,
Or were he not my dear friend, this desire
Might have excuse to work upon his wife,
As in revenge or quittal of such strife:
But as he is my kinsman, my dear friend,
The shame and fault finds no excuse nor end.
Shameful it is; ay, if the fact be known:
Fateful it is; there is no hate in loving:
I'll beg her love; but she is not her own:
He worst is but denial and reproving:
If will is strong, past reason's weak removing.
Who fears a sentence, or an old man's saw,
Shall by a painted cloth be kept in awe.'

hus, graceless, holds he disputation T'ween frozen conscience and hot-burning will,
nd with good thoughts makes dispensation, rging the worser sense for vantage still:
Which in a moment doth confound and kill.
All pure effects, and doth so far proceed,
That what is vile shows like a virtuous deed.

noth he, 'She took me kindly by the hand,
nd gaz'd for tidings in my eager eyes, earing some hard news from the war-like
Where her beloved Collatinus lies.

! how her fear did make her colour rise:
First red as roses that on lawn we lay,
Then white as lawn, the roses took away.

And how her hand, in my hand being lock'd,
'd it to tremble with her loyal fear!
Whch struck her sad, and then it faster rock'd, ntil her husband's welfare she did hear;
Thereat she smiled with so sweet a cheer,
That had Narcissus seen her as she stood,
Self-love had never drown'd him in the flood.

Why hunt I then for colour or excuses?
Il orators are dumb when beauty pleadeth;
or wretches have remorse in poor abuses;
ove thrives not in the heart that shadows

dreadeth:

fection is my captain, and he leadeth;
And when his gaudy banner is display'd,
The coward fights and will not be dismay'd.

Then, childish fear, avaunt! debating, die!
pect and reason, wait on wrinkled age!
My heart shall never countermand mine eye:
nd pause and deep regard beseech the sage;
by part is youth, and beats these from the stage.

Desire my pilot is, beauty my prize;
Then who fears sinking where such treasure lies?

s corn o'ergrown by weeds, so heedful fear's almost chok'd by unresisted lust.
way he steals with open listening ear,
all of foul hope and full of fond mistrust;
oth which, as servitors to the unjust,
So cross him with their opposite persuasion,
That now he vows a league, and now invasion.

Within his thought her heavenly image sits,
nd in the self-same seat sits Collatine:
hat eye which looks on her confounds his wits:
hat eye which him beholds, as more divine,
nto a view so false will not incline;
But with a pure appeal seeks to the heart,
Which once corrupted takes the worser part;
nd therein heartens up his servile powers,
Who, flatter'd by their leader's jovial powers,
duff up his lust, as minutes fill up hours;

And as their captain, so their pride doth grow,
Payng more slavish tribute than they owe.
By reprobate desire thus madly led,
The Roman lord marcheth to Lucrece' bed.

The locks between her chamber and his will,
Each one by him enforce'd, retires his ward;
But as they open they all rate his ill,
Which drives the creeping thief to some regard:
The threshold grates the door to have him heard;
Night-wandering weasels shriek to see him there;
They fright him, yet he still pursues his fear.

As each unwilling portal yields him way,
Through little vents and crannies of the place
The wind wars with his torch to make him stay,
And blows the smoke of it into his face,
Extinguishing his conduct in this case;
But his hot heart, which fond desire doth scorch,
Fuffs forth another wind that fires the torch:

And being lighted, by the light he spies
Lucretia's glove, wherein her needle sticks:
He takes it from the rushes where it lies,
And gripping it, he neeld his finger pricks;
As who should say, 'This glove to wanton tricks
Is not inur'd; return again in haste;
Thou see'st our mistress' ornaments are chaste.'

But all these poor forbiddings could not stay him;
He in the worst sense construes their denial:
The doors, the wind, the glove, that did delay him,
He takes for accidental things of trial;
Or as those bars which stop the hourly dial.
Who with a ling'ring stay his course doth let,
Till every minute pays the hour his debt.

'So, so,' quoth he, 'these lets attend the time.
Like little frosts that sometime threat the spring.
To add a more rejoicing to the prime,
And give the snaped birds more cause to sing.
Pain pays the income of each precious thing;
 Huge rocks, high winds, strong pirates, shelves ands
The merchant fears, ere rich at home he lands.'

Now is he come unto the chamber door,
That shuts him from the heaven of his thought,
Which with a yielding latch, and with no more,
Hath barr'd him from the blessed thing he sought.
So from himself impiety hath wrought,
That for his prey to pray he doth begin,
As if the heavens should countenance his sin.

But in the midst of his unfruitful prayer,
Having solicited the eternal power
That his foul thoughts might compass his fair fair,
And they would stand auspicious to the hour.
Even there he starts: quoth he, 'I must de-flower:
The powers to whom I pray abhor this fact,
How can they then assist me in the act?
'Then Love and Fortune be my gods, my guide!
My will is back'd with resolution:
Thoughts are but dreams till their effects be tried;
The blackest sin is clear'd with absolution;
Against love's fire fear's frost hath dissolution.
The eye of heaven is out, and misty night
Covers the shame that follows sweet delight.'

This said, his guilty hand pluck'd up the latch,
And with his knee the door he opens wide.
The dove sleeps fast that this night-owl will catch:

Thus treason works ere traitors be espied.
Who sees the lurking serpent steps aside;
But she, sound sleeping, fearing no such thing,
Lies at the mercy of his mortal sting.

Into the chamber wickedly he stalks,
And gazeth on her yet unstained bed.
The curtains close, about he walks,
Rolling his greedy eyeballs in his head:

By their high treason is his heart misled;
Which gives the watch-word to his hand full soon,

To draw the cloud that hides the silver moon.

Look, as the fair and fiery-pointed sun,
Rushing from forth a cloud, bereaves our sight;
Even so, the curtain drawn, his eyes begun
To wink, being blinded with a greater light:
Whether it is that she reflects so bright,
That dazzleth them, or else some shame supposed,

But blind they are, and keep themselves enclosed.

O! had they in that darksome prison died,
Then had they seen the period of their ill:
That Collatine again, by Lucrece' side,
In his clear bed might have repos'd still:
But they must ope, this blessed league to kill,
And holy-thoughted Lucrece to their sight
Must sell her joy, her life, her world's delight.

Her lily hand her rosy cheek lies under,
Coozening the pillow of a lawful kiss;
Who, therefore angry, seems to part in sunder,
Swelling on either side to want his bliss;
Between whose hills her head entombed is:

Where, like a virtuous monument, she lies,
To be admir'd of lewd unhallow'd eyes.

Without the bed her other fair hand was,
On the green coverlet; whose perfect white
Show'd like an April daisy on the grass,
With pearly sweat, resembling dew of night.
Her eyes, like marigolds, had sheath'd their light,
And canopied in darkness sweetly lay,
Till they might open to adorn the day.

Her hair, like golden threads, play'd with her breath;
O modest wantons! wanton modesty!
Shewing life's triumph in the map of death,
And death's dim look in life's mortality;
Each in her sleep themselves so beautify,
As if between them twain were no strife,
But that life liv'd in death, and death in life.

Her breasts, like ivory globes circled with blue,
A pair of maiden worlds unconquered,
Save of their lord no bearing yoke they knew,
And him by oath they truly honoured.

These worlds in Tarquin new ambition bred;
Who, like a soul usurper, went about
From this fair throne to heave the owner out.

What could he see but nightly he noted?
What did he note but strongly he desir'd?
What he beheld, on that he firmly doted,
And in his will his wilful eye he tir'd.
With more than admiration he admir'd

Her azure veins, her alabaster skin,
Her coral lips, her snow-white dimpled chin.

As the grim lion fawneth o'er his prey,
Sharp hunger by the conquest satisfied,
So o'er this sleeping soul doth Tarquin stay,
His rage of lust by gazing qualified;
Slack'd, not suppress'd; for standing by her side,

His eye, which late this mutiny restrains,
Unto a greater uproar tempts his veins:

And they, like straggling slaves for pillage fighting,
Obdurate vassals fell exploits effecting,
In bloody death and ravishment delightful,
Nor children's tears nor mothers' groans respecting.

Swell in their pride, the onset still expecting:
Anon his beating heart, alarum striking,
Gives the hot charge and bids them do their liking.

His drumming heart cheers up his burning eye,
His eye commends the leading to his hand;
His hand, as proud of such a dignity,
Smoking with pride, march'd on to make his stand
On her bare breast, the heart of all her land;
Whose ranks of blue veins, as his hand did scale,

Left their round turrets destitute and pale.

They, mustering to the quiet cabinet
Where their dear governess and lady lies,
Do tell her she is dreadfully beset,
And fright her with confusion of their cries;

She, much amaz'd, breaks ope her lock'd-up eyes,

Who, peeping forth this tumult to behold,
Are by his flaming torch dimm'd and controll'd.

Imagine her as one in dead of night
From forth dull sleep by dreadful fancy waking,
That thinks she hath beheld some ghastly sprite,
Whose grim aspect sets every joint a-shaking;

What terror 'tis! but she, in worse taking,
From sleep disturbed, heedfully doth view
The sight which makes supposed terror true.

Wrapp'd and confounded in a thousand fears,
Like to a new-kill'd bird she trembling lies;
She dares not look; yet, winking, there appears
Quick-shifting anticks, ugly in her eyes;

Such shadows are the weak brain's forgeries;
Who, angry that the eyes fly from their lights,
In darkness daunts them with more dreadful sights.
Then being 540

*So thy surviving husband shall remain
The scornful mark of every open eye;
Thy kinsmen hang their heads at this disdain,
Thy issue blurr'd with nameless bastardy:
And thou, the author of their obloquy,
Shalt have thy trespass cited in rites,
And sung by children in succeeding times.

But if thou yield, I rest thy secret friend:
The fault unknown is as a thought unacted;
A little harm done to a great good end
For lawful policy remains unacted.
The poisonous simple sometimes is compacted
In a pure compound; being so applied,
His venom in effect is purified.

Then for thy husband and thy children's sake,
Tender my suit: bequeath not to their lot
The shame that from them no device can take,
The blemish that will never be forgot;
Worse than a slavish wipe or birth-hour's blot:
For marks descried in men's nativity
Are nature's faults, not their own infamy.'

Here with a cockatrice's dead-killing eye
He rouseth up himself and makes a pause;
While she, the picture of pure piety,
Like a white hind under the grize's sharp claws.

Pleads in a wilderness where are no laws,
To the rough beast that knows no gentle right,
Nor aught obeys but his foul appetite.

But when a black-fac'd cloud the world doth threat
In his dim mist the aspiring mountains hiding,
From earth's dark womb some gentle gust doth got,
Which blows these pitchy vapours from their biding.

Hindering their present fall by this dividing;
So his unhallow'd haste her words delays,
And moody Plato winks while Orphians plays.

Yet, foul night-waking cat, he doth but daily,
While in his hold-fast foot the weak mouse panteth:
Her sad behaviour feeds his vulture folly,
A swallowing gulf that even in plenty wanteth:
His ear her prayers admits, but his heart granareth
No penetrable entrance to her plaining:
Tears harden lust though marble wear with raining.

Her pity-pleading eyes are sadly fix'd
In the remorseless wrinkles of his face;
Her modest eloquence with sighs is mix'd,
Which to her oratory adds more grace.
She puts the period often from his place;
And amidst the sentence so her accent breaks,
That twice she doth begin ere once she speaks.

She conjures him by high almighty Jove,
By knighthood, gentry, and sweet friendship's oath,
By her untimely tears, her husband's love,
By holy human law, and common trnth,
By heaven and earth, and all the power of both,
That to his borrow'd bed he make retire;
And stoop to honour, not to foul desire.
THE RAPe OF LUCRECI.

Quoth she, 'Reward not hospitality
With such black payment as thou hast pretended;
Mud not the fountain that gave drink to thee;
Mar not the thing that cannot be amended;
End thy ill aim before thy shoot be ended;
He is no woodman that doth bend his bow
To strike a poor unseasonable doe.

'My husband is thy friend, for his sake spare
me;
Thyself art mighty, for thine own sake leave me;
Myself a weakling, do not then ensnare me;
Thou look'st not like deceit, do not deceive me:
My sighs, like whirlwinds, labour hence to heave thee.
If ever man were mov'd with woman's moans,
Be moved with my tears, my sighs, my groans:

All which together, like a troubled ocean,
Beat at thy rocky and wreck-threatening heart,
To soften it with their continual motion;
For stones dissolve'd to water do convert.
O! if no harder than a stone thou art,
Melt at my tears and be compassionate;
Soft pity enters at an iron gate.

In Tarquin's likeness I did entertain thee;
Hast thou put on his shape to do him shame?
To all the host of heaven I complain me,
Thou wrong' st his honour, wound' st his princely
name:
Thou art not what thou seem' st; and if thesame,
Thou seem' st not what thou art, a god, a king;
For kings like gods should govern every thing.

How will thy shame be seeded in thine age,
When thus thy vices bud before thy spring?
If in thy hope thou dar' st do such outrage,
What dar' st thou not when once thou art a king?
O! be remember'd; no outrageous thing
From vassal actors can be wip'd away;
Then kings' misdeeds cannot be hid in clay.

This deed will make thee only lov'd for fear;
But happy monarchs still are fear'd for love:
With foul offenders thou perforce must bear,
When they in thee the like offences prove:
If but for fear of this, thy will remove;
For princes are the glass, the school, the book,
Whereas subjects' eyes do learn, do read, do look.

And wilt thou be the school where lust shall learn?
Must he in thee read lectures of such shame?
Wilt thou be glass wherein it shall discern
Authority for sin, warrant for blame?
To privilege dishonesty in thy name!
Thou back'st reproach against long-living land,
And mak'st fair reputation but a bawd.

Hast thou command? by him that gave it thee,
From a pure heart command thy rebel will:
Draw not thy sword to guard iniquity,
For it was lent thee all that brood to kill.
Thy princely office how canst thou fulfil,
When, pattern'd by thy fault, foul sin may say,
He learn'd to sin, and thou didst teach the
way?

Think but how vile a spectacle it were,
To view thy present trespass in another.
Men's faults do seldom to themselves appear;
Their own transgressions partially they smother;
This guilt would seem death-worthy in thy brother.
O! how are they wapp'd in with infamies
That from their own misdeeds askance their eyes.

'To thee, to thee, my heav'd-up hands appeal,
Not to seducing lust, thy rash reliever;
I sue for exil'd majesty's repeal;
Let him return, and flattering thoughts retire:
His true respect will prison false desire,
And wipe the dim mist from thy doting eyene,
That thou shalt see thy state and pity mine.

'Have done,' quoth he; 'my uncontrolled tide
Turns not, but swells the higher by this let.
Small lets are soon blown out, huge fires abide,
And with the wind in greater fury fret:
The petty streams that pay a daily debt
To their salt sovereign, with their fresh falls
haste
Add to his flow, but alter not his taste.'

'Thou art,' quoth she, 'a sea, a sovereign king;
And, lo! there falls into thy boundless flood
Black lust, dishonour, shame, mis-governing,
Who seek to stain the ocean of thy blood.
If all these petty ills shall change thy good,
Thy sea within a puddle's womb is hears'd,
And not the puddle in thy sea dispers'd.

So shall these slaves be king, and thou their slave;
Thou nobly base, they basely dignified;
Thou their fair life, and they thy fouler grave;
Thou losted in their shame, they in thy pride;
The lesser thing should not the greater hide;
The cedar stoops not to the base shrub's foot,
But low shrubs wither at the cedar's root.

'So let thy thoughts, low vassals to thy state'—
'No more,' quoth he; 'by heaven, I will not hear thee:
Yield to my love; if not, enforced hate,
Instead of love's coy touch, shall rudely tear
thee;
That done, despitefully I mean to bear thee
Unto the base bed of some rascal groom,
To be thy partner in this shameful doom.'

This said, he sets his foot upon the light,
For light and lust are deadly enemies:
Shame folded up in blind concealing night,
When most unseen, then most doth tyrannize.
The wolf hath seiz'd his prey, the poor lamb cries;
Till with her own white fleece her voice con-troll'd
Entombs her outcry in her lips' sweet fold:

For with the nightly linen that she wears
He pens her pitious labours in her head,
Cooling his hot face in the chistlest tears
That ever modest eyes with sorrow shed.
O! that prone lust should stain so pure a bed:
The spots whereof could weeping purify,
Her tears should drop on them perpetually.
He thence departs a heavy convertite,
She there remains a hopeless castaway;
He in his speed looks for the morning light,
She prays she never may behold the day;
'For day,' quoth she, 'night's scarpe doth open lay,
And my true eyes have never practis'd how
To cloak offences with a cunning brow.'

'They think not but that every eye can see
The same disgrace which they themselves behold;
And therefore would they still in darkness be,
To have their unseen sin remain untold;
For they their guilt with weeping will unfold,
And grave, like water that doth eat in steel,
Upon my cheeks what helpless shame I feel.'

Here she exclaims against repose and rest,
And bids her eyes hereafter still be blind.
She wakes her heart by beating on her breast,
And bids it leap from thence where it may find
Some purer chest to close so pure a mind.

Frantic with grief thus breathes she forth her spite
Against the unseen secrecy of night:
'O comfort-killing Night, image of hell!
Dim register and notary of shame!
Black stage for tragedies and murders fell!
Vast sin-concealing chaos! nurse of blame!
Blind muffled bawd! dark harbour for defame!
Grim cave of death! whispering conspirator
With close-tongu'd treason and the ravisher!

'O hateful, vaporous, and foggy Night!
Since thou art guilty of my careless crime,
Muster thy mists to meet the eastern light,
Make war against proportion'd course of time;
Or if thou wilt permit the sun to climb
His wonted height, yet ere he go to bed,
Knit poisonous clouds about his golden head.

'With rotten damps ravish the morning air;
Let their exhal'd unwholesome breaths make sick
The life of purity, the supreme fair,
Ere he arrive his weary noontide prick;
And let thy misty vapours march so thick,
That in their smoky ranks his smother'd light
May set at noon and make perpetual night.

'Were Tarquin Night, as he is but Night's child,
The silver-shining queen he would distain;
Her twinkling handmaids too, by him defil'd,
Through Night's black bosom should not peep again;
So should I have co-partners in my pain;
And fellowship in woe doth woe assuage,
As palmers' chat makes short their pilgrimage.

'Where now I have no one to blush with me,
To cross their arms and hang their heads with mine,
To mask their brows and hide their infamy;
But I alone alone must sit and pine,
Seasoning the earth with showers of silver brine,
Mingling my talk with tears, my grief with groans,
Poor wasting monuments of lasting moans.'
O Night! thou furnace of foul-reeking smoke,
Let not the jealous Day behold that face
Which underneath thy black all-hiding cloak
Immodestly lies martyr'd with disgrace:
Keep still possession of thy gloomy place,
That all the faults which in thy reign are made
M ay likewise be seepulchred in thy shade.

Make me not object to the tell-tale Day!
The light will show, character'd in my brow,
The story of sweet chastity's decay,
The impious breach of holy wedlock vow:
Yea, the illiterate, that know not how
To cipher what is writ in learned books,
Will quote my loathsome trespass in my looks.

The nurse, to still her child, will tell my story,
And fright her crying babe with Tarquin's name;
The orator, to deck his oratory,
Will couple my reproach to Tarquin's shame;
Feast-finding minstrels, tuning my defame,
Will tie the hearers to attend each line,
How Tarquin wronged me, I Collatine.

Let my good name, that senseless reputation,
For Collatine's dear love be kept unspotted:
If that be made a theme for disputation,
The branches of another root are rotted,
And undeserv'd reproach to him allotted
That is as clear from this attaint of mine,
As I ere this was pure to Collatine.

O unseen shame! invisible disgrace
O unfelt sore! crest-wounded, private scar!
Reproach is stamp'd in Collatines' face,
And Tarquin's eye may read the mot afar,
How he in peace is wounded, not in war.
Alas! how many bear such shamefull blows,
Which not themselves, but he that gives them knows.

If, Collatine, thine honour lay in me,
From me by strong assault it is bereft.
My honey lost, and I, a drone-like bee,
Have no perfection of my summer left,
But rob'd and ransack'd by injurious theft:
In thy weak hive a wandering wasp hath crept,
And stuck'd the honey which thy chaste bee kept.

Yet am I guilty of thy honour's wrack;
Yet for thy honour did I entertain him;
Coming from thee, I could not put him back,
For it had been dishonour to disdain him:
Besides, of weariness he did complain him,
And talk'd of virtue: O! unlook'd-for evil,
When virtue is profan'd in such a devil.

Why should the worm intrude the maiden bud?
Or hateful cuckoo hatch in sparrows' nests?
Or toads infect fair fountains with venom mud?
Or tyrant folly lurk in gentle breasts?
Or kings be breakers of their own behests?
But no perfection is so absolute,
That some impurity doth not pollute.

The aged man that coffers-up his gold
Is plagu'd with cramps and gouts and painful fits;
And scarce hath eyes his treasure to behold,
But like still-pining Tantalus he sits,
And useless barns the harvest of his wits;
Having no other pleasure of his gain
But torment that it cannot cure his pain.

So then he hath it when he cannot use it,
And leaves it to be master'd by his young;
Who in their pride do presently abuse it:
Their father was too weak, and they too strong;
To hold their cursed-blessed fortune long.
The sweets we wish for turn to loathed sour,
Even in the moment that we call them ours.

Unruly blasts wait on the tender spring;
Unwholesome weeds take root with precious flowers;
The adder hisses where the sweet birds sing;
What virtue breeds iniquity devours;
We have no good that we can say is ours,
But ill-annexed Opportunity
Or kills his life, or else his quality.

O Opportunity! thy guilt is great,
'Tis thou that execut'st the traitor's treason;
Thou set'st the wolf where he the lamb may get;
Whoever plots the sin, thou point'st the season;
'Tis thou that spurn'st at right, at law, at reason;
And in thy shadocore, where none may spy him,
Sits Sin to seize the souls that wander by him.

Thou mak'st the vestal violate her oath;
Thou blow'st the fire when temperance is thaw'd;
Thou smother'st honesty, thou murder'st troth;
Thou foul abettor! thou notorious bawd!
Thou plantest scandal and displaceth laud:
Thou ravisher, thou traitor, thou false thief,
Thy honey turns to gall, thy joy to grief!

Thy secret pleasure turns to open shame,
Thy private feasting to a public fast,
Thy smoothing titles to a ragged name,
Thy sugar'd tongue to bitter wormwood taste:
Thy violent vanities can never last.
How comes it then, vile Opportunity,
Being so bad, such numbers seek for thee?

When wilt thou be the humble suppliant's friend,
And bring him where his suit may be obtain'd?
When wilt thou sort an hour great striifes to end?
Or free that soul which wretchedness hath chain'd?
Give physic to the sick, ease to the pain'd?
The poor, lame, blind, halt, creep, cry out for thee;
But they ne'er meet with Opportunity.

The patient dies while the physician sleeps;
The orphan pines while the oppressor feeds;
Justice is feasting while the widow weeps;
Advice is sporting while infection breeds:
Thou grant'st no time for charitable deceds:
Wra th, envy, treason, rape, and murder's rages,
Thy heinous hours wait on them as their pages.

When Truth and Virtue have to do with thee,
A thousand crosses keep them from thy aid:
They buy thy help; but Sin ne'er gives a fee,
He gratis comes; and thou art well appaid
As well to hear as grant what he hath said.
My Collatine would else have come to me
When Tarquin did, but he was stay'd by thee.
Guilty thou art of murder and of theft,
Guilty of perjury and subornation,
Guilty of treason, forgery, and shift,
Guilty of incest, that abomination;
In accessory by thine inclination
To all sins past, and all that are to come,
From the creation to the general doom.

Missapen Time, copesmate of ugly Night,
Wilt in thine post, carrier of grisly care,
Latter of youth, false slave to false delight,
Last watch of woes, sin's pack-horse, virtue's
snare;
Hou runest all, and murder'st all that are;
O! hear me then, injurious, shifting Time,
Be guilty of my death, since of my crime.

Why hath thy servant, Opportunity,
Stray'd the hours thou gav'st me to repose?
Ance'll my fortunes, and enchain'd me
'0 endless date of never-ending woes?
Time's office is to fine the hate of foes;
To eat up errors by opinion bred,
Not spend the dowry of a lawful bed.

Time's glory is to calm contending kings,
O unmask falsehood and bring truth to light,
O stamp the seal of time in aged things,
O wake the morn and sentinel the night,
O wrong the wrangler till he render right,
To ruinate proud buildings with thy hours,
And smear with dust their glittering golden towers;

To fill with worm-holes stately monuments,
O feed oblivion with decay of things,
O blot old books and alter their contents,
O pinch the quills from ancient ravens' wings,
O dry the old oak's sap and cherish springs,
To spoil antiquities of hammer'd steel,
And turn the giddy round of Fortune's wheel;

To show the beldam daughters of her daughter,
O make the child a man, the man a child,
O slay the tiger that doth live by slaughter,
O tame the unicorn and lion wild,
O mock the subtle in themselves beguil'd,
To cheer the ploughman with increaseful crops,
And waste huge stones with little water-drops.

Why work'st thou mischief in thy pilgrimage,
Unless thou could'st return to make amends?
One poor retiring minute in an age
Would purchase thee a thousand thousand
friends,
Ending him wit, that to bad debtors lends:
O! this dread night, would'st thou one hour
come back,
I could prevent this storm and shun thy wrack.

Thou ceaseless lackey to eternity,
With some mischance cross Tarquin in his flight:
Devis extreme beyond extremity,
To make him curse this cursed crimeful night:
Let ghastly shadows his level eyes alight,
And the dire thought of his committed evil
Shape every bush a hideous shapeless devil.
Disturb his hours of rest with restless trances,
Afflict him in his bed with bedrid groans;
Let there bechance him pitiful mischances

To make him moan, but pity not his moans;
Stone him with harden'd hearts, harder than stones.
And let mild women to him lose their mildness,
Wildre to him than tigers in their wildness.

Let him have time to tear his curled hair,
Let him have time against himself to rave,
Let him have time of Time's help to despair,
Let him have time to live a loathed slave,
Let him have time a beggar's orts to crave,
And time to see one that by alms doth live
Disdain to him disdained scraps to give.

Let him have time to see his friends his foes,
And merry fools to mock at him resort;
Let him have time to mark how slow time goes
In time of sorrow, and how swift and short
His time of folly and his time of sport;
And ever let his unrecalling crime
Have time to wall the abusing of his time.

O Time! thou tutor both to good and bad,
Teach me to curse him that thou taught'st this ill;
At his own shadow let the thief run mad,
Himself himself seek every hour to kill:
Such wretched hands such wretched blood should spill;
For who so base would such an office have
As slanderous death'sman to so base a slave?

The baser is he, coming from a king,
The shame his hope with deeds degenerate:
The mightier man, the mightier is the thing
That makes him honour'd, or beget's him hate;
For greatest scandal waits on greatest state.
The moon being clouded presently is miss'd,
But little stars may hide them when they list.

The crow may bathe his coal-black wings in mire,
And unperceiv'd fly with the filth away;
But if the like the snow-white swan desire,
The stain upon his silver down will stay.
Poor grooms are sightless night, kings glorious
day.

Gnats are unnoted wheresoe'er they fly,
But eagles gazed upon with every eye.

Out, idle words! servants to shallow fools,
Unprofitable sounds, weak arbitrators!
Busy yourselves in skill-contending schools;
Debate where leisure serves with dull debaters;
To trembling clients be you mediators:
For me, I force not argument a straw,
Since that my case is past the help of law.

In vain I rail at Opportunity,
At Time, at Tarquin, and uncheerful Night;
In vain I cavil with mine infamy,
In vain I spurn at my confirm'd despite;
This helpless smoke of words doth me no right.
The remedy indeed to do me good
Is to let forth my foul-defiled blood.

Poor hand, why quiverest thou at this decree?
Honour thyself to rid me of this shame?
For if I die, my honour lives in thee,
But if I live, thou liv'st in my defiance.
Since thou could'st not defend thy loyal dame,
And wast afeard to scratch her wicked foe,
Kill both thyself and her for yielding so.'
This said, from her be-tumbled couch she starteth, 1097
To find some desperate instrument of death;
But this no slaughterhouse, no tool imparteth
To make more vent for passage of her breath;
Which, thronging through her lips, so vanisheth
As smoke from Ætna, that in air consumes,
Or that which from discharged cannon fumes.

\[ \text{In vain,' quoth she, 'I live, and seek in vain} \]
\[ \text{Some happy mean to end a hapless life:} \]
\[ \text{I fear'd by Tarquin's falchion to be slain,} \]
\[ \text{Yet for the same-said purpose seek a knife:} \]
\[ \text{But when I fear'd I was a loyal wife:} \]
\[ \text{So am I now: O no! that cannot be;} \] \[ \text{Of that true type hath Tarquin riffled me.} \]

\[ \text{O! that is gone for which I sought to live,} \]
\[ \text{And therefore now I need not fear to die.} \]
\[ \text{To clear this spot by death, at least I give} \]
\[ \text{A badge of fame to slander's livery;} \]
\[ \text{A dying life to living infamy,} \]
\[ \text{Poor helpless help, the treasure stol'n away,} \]
\[ \text{To burn the guiltless casket where it lay!} \]

\[ \text{Well, well, dear Collatine, thou shalt not know} \]
\[ \text{The stained taste of violated troth;} \]
\[ \text{I will not wrong thy true affection so,} \]
\[ \text{To flatter thee with an enfringed oath;} \]
\[ \text{This bastard graft shall never come to growth:} \]
\[ \text{He shall not boast who did thy stock pollute} \]
\[ \text{That thou art doting father of his fruit.} \]

\[ \text{Nor shall he smile at thee in secret thought,} \]
\[ \text{Nor laugh with his companions at thy state;} \]
\[ \text{But thou shalt know thy interest was not bought} \]
\[ \text{Basely with gold, but stol'n from forth thy gate,} \]
\[ \text{For me, I am the mistress of my fate,} \]
\[ \text{And with my trespass never will dispense,} \]
\[ \text{Till life to death acquit my fore'd offence.} \]

\[ \text{I will not poison thee with my attain't,} \]
\[ \text{Nor fold my fault in cleanly-coined excuses;} \]
\[ \text{My sable ground of sin I will not paint,} \]
\[ \text{To hide the truth of this false night's abuses:} \]
\[ \text{My tongue shall utter all;} \]
\[ \text{Mine eyes, like sluices,} \]
\[ \text{As from a mountain-spring that feeds a dale,} \]
\[ \text{Shall gush pure streams to purge my impure tale.} \]

By this, lamenting Philomel had ended
The well-tun'd warble of her nightly sorrow,
And solemn night with slow sad gait descended
To ugly hell; when, lo! the blushing morrow
Lends light to all fair eyes that light will borrow:
But cloudy Lucrece shames herself to see,
And therefore still in night would cloister'd be.
Revealing day through every cranny spies,
And seems to point her out where she sits weeping;
To whom she sobbing speaks: 'O eye of eyes! Why peepst thou through my window? leave thy peeping;
Mock with thy tickling beams eyes that are sleeping;
Brand not my forehead with thy piercing light,
For day hath nought to do what's done by night.'

Thus cavils she with every thing she sees:
True grief is fond and testy as a child,
Who wayward once, his mood with nought agrees:
Old woes, not infant sorrows, bear them mild;
Continuance tames the one; the other wild.
Like an unpractis'd swimmer plunging still,
With too much labour drowns for want of skill.

So she, deep-drenched in a sea of care,
Holds disputition with each thing she views,
And to herself all sorrow doth compare;
No object but her passion's strength renews,
And as one shifts, another straight ensues:
Sometimes her grief is dumb and hath no words;
Sometimes 'tis mad and too much talk affords.

The little birds that tune their morning's joy
Make her moans mad with their sweet melody
For mirth doth search the bottom of annoy;
Sad souls are slain in merry company;
Grief best is pleas'd with grief's society:
True sorrow then is feelingly suffic'd
When with like semblance it is sympathiz'd.

'Tis double death to drown in ken of shore;
He ten times pines that pines befuddling food;
To see the salve doth make the wound ache more;
Great grief gives most at that would do it good,
Deep woes roll forward like a gentle flood,
Who, being stopp'd, the bounding banks o'erflows;
Grief dallied with nor law nor limit knows.

'You mocking birds,' quoth she, 'your tunes entomb
Within your hollow-swelling feather'd breasts.
And in my hearing be you mute and dumb:
My restless discord loves no stops nor rests;
A woeful hostess brooks not merry guests:
Relish your nimble notes to pleasing ears;
Distress likes dumps when time is kept with tears.

'Come, Philomel, that sing'st of ravishment,
Make thy sad grove in my dishevell'd hair;
As the dank earth weeps at thy languishment,
So I at each sad strain will strain a tear;
And with deep groans the diapason bear;
For burden-wise I'll hum on Tarquin still,
While thou on Tereus descant'st better skill.

'And whiles against a thorn thou bear'st thy part
To keep thy sharp woes waking, wretched I,
To imitate thee well, against my heart
Will fix a sharp knife to affright mine eye,
Who, if it wink, shall thereon fall and die.
These means, as frets upon an instrument,
Shall tune our heart-strings to true languishment.

'And for, poor bird, thou sing'st not in the day,
As shaming any eye should thee behold,
Some dark deep desert, seated from the way,
That knows not parching heat nor freezing cold,
Will we find out; and there we will unfold
To creatures stern sad tunes, to change their kinds:
Since men prove beasts, let beasts bear gentle minds.'
s the poor frightened deer, that stands at gaze,
Warily determining which way to fly,
Our one compass'd with a winding maze,
That cannot tread the way out readily;
With herself is she in mutiny,
To live or die which of the twain were better,
When life is shan'd, and death reproach's debtor.

To kill myself, quoth she, 'alack! what were it,
Ut with my body my poor soul's pollution?
Bey that lose half with greater patience bear it
Than they whose whole is swallow'd in confusion.
That mother tries a merciless conclusion,
Who, having two sweet babes, when death takes one,
Will slay the other and be nurse to none.

My body or my soul, which was the dearer,
Then the one pure, the other made divine?
Those love of either to myself was nearer,
Then both were kept for heaven and Collatine?
Y me! the bark peel'd from the lofty pine,
His leaves will wither and his sap decay;
So must my soul, her bark being peel'd away.

Her house is sack'd, her quiet interrupted,
Her mansion batter'd by the enemy;
Her sacred temple spotted, spoil'd, corrupted,
Rossily engirt with daring infamy;
Hen let it not be call'd impiety,
If in this blemish'd fort I make some hole
Through which I may convey this troubled soul.

Yet die will not, till my Collatine
Ave heard the cause of my untimely death;
Hat he may vow, in that sad hour of mine,
Evenge on him that made stop my breath;
Y stained blood to Tarquin I'll bequeath,
Which by him tainted shall for him be spent,
And as his due writ in my testament.

My honour I'll bequeath unto the knife
That wounds my body so dishonoured:
My honour to deprive dishonour'd life;
The one will live, the other being dead:
Of shame's ashes shall my fame be bred;
For in my death I murder shameful scorn:
My shame so dead, mine honour is new-born.

Dear lord of that dear jewel I have lost,
That legacy shall I bequeath to thee?
By resolution, love, shall be thy boast,
Whose example thou reveng'd may'st be.
Ow Tarquin must be us'd, read it in me:
Myself, thy friend, will kill myself, thy foe,
And for my sake verandalone Tarquin so.

This brief abridgement of my will I make:
My soul and body to the skies and ground;
By resolution, husband, do thou take;
Fine honour be the knife's that makes my wound;
My shame be his that did my fame confound;
And all my fame that lives disbursed be
To those that live, and think no shame of me.

Thou, Collatine, shalt oversee this will;
Tow was I overseen that thou shalt see it!
By blood shall wash the slander of mine ill;

My life's foul deed, my life's fair end shall free it.
Faint not, faint heart, but stoutly say "So be it."
Yield to my hand; my hand shall conquer thee:
Thou dead, both die, and both shall victors be.

This plot of death when sadly she had laid,
And wip'd the bloodstain from her bright eyes,
With untun'd tongue she hoarsely calls her maid,
Whose swift obedience to her mistresse hies;
For fleet-wing'd duty with thought's feathers flies.

Poor Lucrece' cheeks unto her maid seem so
As winter meads when sun doth melt their snow.

Her mistress she doth give demure good-morrow,
With soft slow tongue, true mark of modesty,
And sorts a sad look to her lady's sorrow,
For why her face were sorrow's livery;
But durst not ask of her audaciously
Why her two suns were cloud-eclipsed so,
Nor why her fair cheeks over-wash'd with woe.

But as the earth doth weep, the sun being set,
Each flower mois'ten'd like a melting eye;
Even so the maid with swelling drops gan wet
Her circled eye, enforce'd by sympathy;
Of those fair suns set in her mistress' sky,
Who in a salt-way ocean quench their light,
Which makes the maid weep like the dewy night.

A pretty while these pretty creatures stand,
Like ivory conduits coral cisterns filling;
One justly weeps, the other takes in hand
No cause but company of her drops spilling;
Their gentle sex to weep are often willing,
Grieving themselves to guess at others' smarts,
And then they drown their eyes or break their hearts:

For men have marble, women waxen minds,
And therefore are they form'd as marble will;
The weak oppress'd, the impression strange kinds
Is form'd in them by force, by fraud, or skill:
Then call them not the authors of their ill,
No more than wax shall be accounted evil;
Wherein is stamp'd the semblance of a devil.

Their smoothness, like a kindly campaign plain,
Lays open all the little worms that creep;
In men, as in a rough-grown grove, remain
Cave-keeping evils that obsequiously sleep;
Through crystal walls each little mote will peep:
Though men can cover crimes with bold stern looks,
Poor women's faces are their own faults' books.

No man inveigh against the wither'd flower,
But chide rough winter that the flower hath kill'd:
Not that devour'd, but that which doth devour,
Is worthy blame. O! let it not be hold
For women's faults, that they are so fulfill'd
With men's abuses: those proud lords, to blame,
Make weak-made women tenants to their shame.
Besides, the life and feeling of her passion
She hoards, to spend when he is by to read her;
When sighs and groans and tears may grace this fashion
Of her disgrace, the better so to clear her 132
From that suspicion which the world may bear her.
To shun this blot, she would not blot the letter
With words, till action might become them better.

To see sad sights moves more than hear them told;
For then the eye interprets to the ear
The heavy motion that it doth behold,
When every part of a woe doth bear:
'Tis but a part of sorrow that we hear;
Deep sounds make lesser noise than shallow
fords,
And sorrow ebbs, being blown with wind of
words. 133

Her letter now is seal'd, and on it writ
'At Ardea to my lord, with more than haste.'
The post attends, and she delivers it,
Charging the sour-fac'd groom to he as fast
As lagging fowls before the northern blast:
Speed more than speed but dull and slow she deems:
Extremity still urgeth such extremes.

The homely villain court'sies to her low;
And, blushing on her, with a steadfast eye
Receives the scroll without or yea or no,
And forth with bashful innocence doth hie;
But they whose guilt within their bosoms lie
Imagine every eye beholds their blame;
For Lucrece thought he blush'd to see her
shame:

When, silly groom! God wot, it was defect
Of spirit, life, and bold audacity.
Such harmlesse creatures have a true respect
To talk in deeds, while others scantily
Promise more speed, but do it leisurely:
Even so this pattern of the worn-out age Pawn'd honest looks, but laid no words to gage.

This kindled duty kindled her mistrust,
That two red fires in both their faces blaz'd;
She thought he blush'd, as knowing Tarquin's lust,
And, blushing with him, wistly on him gaz'd;
Her earnest eye did make him more amaz'd:
The more she saw the blood his cheeks repleni,
The more she thought he spied in her some blemish.

But long she thinks till he return again,
And yet the duteous vassal scarce is gone.
The weary time she cannot entertain.
For now 'tis stale to sigh, to weep, and groan:
So woe hath wearied woe, mean tired mean,
That she her plaints a little while doth stay,
Pausing for means to mourn some newer
way.
For much imaginary work was there;
Conceit deceitful, so compact, so kind,
That for Achilles' image stood his spear,
Grip'd in an armed hand; himself behind
Was left unseen, to save to the eye of mind:
A hand, a foot, a face, a leg, a head,
Stood for the whole to be imagined.

And from the walls of strong-besieged Troy
When their brave hope, bold Hector, march'd to field,
Stood many Trojan mothers, sharing joy
To see their youthful sons bright weapons wield:
And to their hope they such odd action yield,
That through their light joy seemed to appear,
Like bright things stain'd, a kind of heavy fear.

And from the strand of Dardan, where they fought,
To Simois' reedy banks the red blood ran,
Whose waves to imitate the battle sought
With swelling ridges; and their ranks began
To break upon the galled shore, and than Retire again, till meeting greater ranks
They join and shoot their foam at Simois' banks.

To this well-painted piece is Lucrece come,
To find a face where all distress is stell'd.
Many she sees where cares have carved some,
But none where all distress and colur dwell'd,
Till she despairing Hecuba beheld,
Staring on Priam's wounds with her old eyes,
Which bleeding under Pyrrhus' proud footstiles.

In her the painter had anatomiz'd
Time's ruin, beauty's wreck, and grim care's reign:
Her cheeks with chaps and wrinkles were disguis'd;
Of what she was no semblance did remain;
Her blue blood chang'd to black in every vein,
Wanting the spring that those shrunk pipes had fed,
Show'd life imprison'd in a body dead.

On this sad shadow Lucrece spends her eyes,
And shapes her sorrow to the baldman's woes,
Who nothing wants to answer her but cries,
And bitter words to ban her cruel foes:
The painter was no god to lend her those;
And therefore Lucrece swears he did her wrong.

To give her so much grief and not a tongue.

'Poor instrument,' quoth she, 'without a sound,
I'll tune thy woes with my lamenting tongue,
And drop sweet balm in Priam's painted wound,
And roll on Pyrrhus that hath done him wrong,
And with my tears quench Troy that burns so long,
And with my knife scratch out the angry eyes
Of all the Greeks that are thine enemies.
'Show me the strumpet that began this stir,
That with my nails her beauty I may tear.
Thy heat of lust, foul Paris, did incur
This load of wrath that burning Troy doth bear:
Thine eye kindled the fire that burneth here;
And here in Troy, for trespass of thine eye,
The sire, the son, the dame, and daughter die.
"Why should the private pleasure of some one
Become the public plague of many moe?
Let sin, alone committed, light alone 1489
Upon his head that hath transgressed so;
Let guiltless souls be freed from guilty woe:
For one's offence why should so many fall,
To plague a private sin in general?

"Lo! here weeps Hecuba, here Priam dies,
Here manly Hector faints, here Troilus swounds,
Here friend by friend in bloody channel lies,
And friend to friend gives avised unwounds,
And one man's lust these many lives confounds:
Had doting Priam check'd his son's desire,
Troy had been bright with fame and not with fire."

Here feelingly she weeps Troy's painted woes;
For sorrow, like a heavy-hanging bell,
Once set on ringing, with his own weight goes,
Then little strength rings out the doleful knell:
So Lucrece, set a-work, sad tales doth tell
To pencil'd pensiveness and colour'd sorrow;
She lends them words, and she their looks Doth borrow.

She throws her eyes about the painting round,
And whom she finds forlorn she doth lament:
At last she sees a wretched image bound,
That piteous looks to Phrygian shepherds lent;
His face, though full of cares, yet show'd content;
Onward to Troy with the blunt swains he goes,
So mild, that Patience seem'd to scorn his woes.

In him the painter labour'd with his skill
To hide deceit, and give the harmless show
An humble gait, calm looks, eyes walling still,
A brow unbent that seem'd to welcome woe;
Cheeks neither red nor pale, but mingled so
That blushing red no guilty instance gave,
Nor ashy pale the fear that false hearts have.

But, like a constant and confirmed devil,
He entertain'd a show so seeming-just,
And therein so ensconc'd his secret evil,
That jealousy itself could not mistrust
False-keeping craft and perjury should thrust
Into so bright a day such black-fac'd storms,
Or blot with hell-born sin such saint-like forms.

The well-skil'd workman this mild image drew
For perjur'd Sinon, whose enchanting story
The credulous old Priam after slew;
Whose words like wildfire burnt the shining glory
Of rich-built Ilion, that the skies were sorry,
And little stars shot from their fixed places,
When their glass fell wherein they view'd their faces.

This picture she advisedly perus'd,
And chid the painter for his wondrous skill,
Saying, some shape in Sinon's was abus'd;
So fair a form lodg'd not a mind so ill:
And still on him she gaz'd, and gazing still,
Such signs of truth in his plain face she spied,
That she concludes the picture was belied.

"It cannot be," quoth she, "that so much guile-
She would have said 'can lurk in such a look'
But Tarquin's shape came in my mind the while,
And from her tongue 'can lurk' from 'cannot'
took:
"It cannot be," she in that sense forsook,
And turn'd it thus, "It cannot be, I find,
But such a face should bear a wicked mind;"

"For even as subtle Sinon here is painted,
So sober-sad, so weary, and so mild,
As if with grief or travail he had faint'd,
To me came Tarquin armed; so beguil'd
With outward honesty, but yet defil'd
With inward vice: as Priam him did cherish,
So did I Tarquin; so my Troy did perish.

"Look, look, how listening Priam wets his eyes,
To see those borrow'd tears that Sinon sheds!
Priam, why art thou old and yet not wise?"
For every tear he falls a Trojan bleeds:
His eye drops fire, no water thence proceeds;
Those round clear pearls of his, that move thy pity,
Are balls of quenchless fire to burn thy city.

"Such devils steal effects from lightless hell;
For Sinon in his fire doth quake with cold,
And in that cold hot-burning fire doth dwell;
These contraries such unity do hold,
Only to fatter fools and make them bold;
So Priam's trust false Sinon's tears doth flatter,
That he finds means to burn his Troy with water."

Here, all enrag'd, such passion her assaults,
That patience is quite beaten from her breast.
She tears the senseless Sinon with her nails,
Comparing him to that unhappy guest
Whose deed hath made herself herself detest:
At last she smilingly with this gives o'er;
"Fool! fool!" quoth she, "his wounds will not be sore."

Thus ebbs and flows the current of her sorrow,
And time doth weary time with her complaining.
She looks for night, and then she longs for morrow,
And both she thinks too long with her remaining:
Short time seems long in sorrow's sharp sustaining:
Though woe be heavy, yet it seldom sleeps;
And they that watch see time how slow it creeps.

Which all this time hath overslipp'd her thought,
That she with painted images hath spent;
Being from the feeling of her own grief brought
By deep surprise of others' detriments;
Losing her woes in shows of discontent.
It easeth some, though none it ever cur'd,
To think their doleur others have endur'd.

But now the mindful messenger, come back,
Brings home his lord and other company;
Who finds his Lucrece clad in mourning black;
And round about her tear-distained eye
Blue circles stream'd, like rainbows in the sky:
These water-galls in her dim element
Foretell new storms to those already spent.
THE RAPE OF LUCRECE.

Which when her sad-beholding husband saw,
1007 mazedly in her sad face he stares :
Eyes, though sod in tears, look'd red and raw,
Her lively colour kill'd with deadly cares.
He hath no power to ask her how she fares:
Both stood like old acquaintance in a trance,
Met far from home, wondering each other's chance.

't last he takes her by the bloodless hand,
And thus begins: 'What uncouth ill event
Athee befell'n, that thou dost trembling stand!
Weet love, what spite hath thy fair colour spent?
Thy art thou thus affir'd in discontent?
Unmask, dear dear, this moody heaviness,
And tell thy grief, that we may give redress.'

three times with sighs she gives her sorrow fire,
Re once she can discharge one word of woe:
't length address'd to answer his desire,
He modestly prepares to let them know
Her honour is ta'en prisoner by the foe;
While Collatine and his corted lords
With sad attention long to hear her words.

And now this pale swan in her watery nest
Egins the sad dirge of her certain ending:
Few words,' quoth she, 'shall fit the trespass best,
There no excuse can give the fault amending:
I me moe woes than words are now depending;
And my laments would be drawn out too long,
To tell them all with one poor tired tongue.

Then be this all the task it hath to say:
Ear husband, in the interest of thy bed
Stranger came, and on that pillow lay
There thou wast wont to rest thy weary head;
And what wrong else may be imagined
By foul enforcement might be done to me,
From that, alas! thy Lucrece is not free.

For in the dreadful dead of dark midnight,
With shining falchion in my chamber came
Creeping creature, with a flaming light,
Softly cried 'Awake, thou Roman dame,
Entertain my love; else lasting shame
On thee and thine this night I will inflict,
If thou my love's desire do contradict.

'For some hard-favour'd groom of thine,'
Quoth he,
Unless thou yoke thy liking to my will,
'Twill murder straight, and then I'll slaughter thee,
And swear I found you where you did fulfill
His loathsome act of lust, and so did kill
The lechers in their deed: this act will be
My fame, and thy perpetual immnity.'

With this I did begin to start and cry,
And then against my heart he set his sword,
Wearing, unless I took all patiently,
Should not live to speak another word;
Should my shame still rest upon record,
And never be forgot in mighty Rome.
The adulterate death of Lucrece and her groom.

'Mine enemy was strong, my poor self weak,
And far the weaker with so strong a feare;
My bloody judge forbade my tongue to speak;
No rightful plea might plead for justice there:
His scarlet lust came evidence to swear
That my poor beauty had purloined his eyes;
And when the judge is robb'd the prisoner dies.

'O! teach me how to make mine own excuse,
Or at the least this refuge let me find;
Though my gross blood be stain'd with this abuse,
Immaculate and spotless is my mind;
That was not for'd; that never was inclin'd
To necessary yieldings, but still pure
Doth in her poison'd closet yet endure.'

Lo! here the hopeless merchant of this loss,
With head declin'd, and voice damm'd up with woe,
With sad set eyes, and wretched arms across,
From lips new-waxen pale begins to blow
The grief away that stops his answer so:
But, wretched as he is, he strives in vain;
What he breathes out his breath drinks up again.

As through an arch the violent roaring tide
Outruns the eye that doth behold his haste,
Yet in the eddy boundeth in his pride
Back to the strait that forc'd him on so fast;
In rage sent out, recall'd in rage, being past:
Even so his sigus, his sorrows, make a saw,
To push grief on, and back the same grief draw.

Which speechless woe of his poor she attendeth,
And his untimly frenzy thus awaketh:
'Dear lord, thy sorrow to my sorrow lendeth
Another power; no flood by raining slaketh.
My woe too sensible thy passion maketh
More feeling-painful: let it then suffice
To drown one woe, one pair of weeping eyes.

'And for my sake, when I might charm thee so,
For she that was thy Lucrece, now attend me:
Be suddenly revenged on my foe,
Thine, mine, his own: suppose thou dost defend me
From what is past: the help that thou shalt lend me
Comes all too late, yet let the traitor die;
For sparing justice feeds iniquity.

'But ere I name him, you, fair lords,' quoth she,
Speaking to those that came with Collatine,
'Shall plight your honourable faiths to me,
With swift pursuit to venge this wrong of mine;
For 'tis a meritorious fair design
To chase injustice with revengeful arms:
Knights, by their oaths, should right poor ladies' harms.'

At this request, with noble disposition
Each present lord began to promise aid,
As bound in knighthood to her imposition.
Longing to hear the hateful foe bewray'd:
But she, that yet her sad task hath not said,
The protestation stops. 'O! speak,' quoth she,
How may this forced stain be wip'd from me?
Poor broken glass, I often did behold
In thy sweet semblance my old age new born;
Then but now that fair fresh mirror, dim and old,
Shows me a bare-bond death by time outworn.
O! from thy cheeks my image thou hast torn,
And shiver'd all the beauty of my glass,
That I no more can see what once I was.

'O Time! cease thou thy course, and last no longer,
If they surcease to be that should survive.
Shall rotten death make conquest of the stronger
And leave the faltering feeble souls alive?
The old bees die, the young possess their hive;
Then live, sweet Lucretia, live again and see
Thy father die, and not thy father thee.'

By this starts Collatine as from a dream,
And bids Lucretius give his sorrow place;
And then in key-cold Lucretius' bleeding stream
He falls, and bathes the pale fear in his face,
And counterfeits to die with her a space;
Till manly shame bids him possess his breath
And live to be revenged on her death.

The deep vexation of his inward soul
Hath serv'd a dumb arrest upon his tongue;
Who, mad that sorrow should his use control,
Or keep him from heart-easing words so long.
Begins to talk; but through his lips doth throm
Weak words so thick, come in his poor heart's aid,
That no man could distinguish what he said.

Yet sometime 'Tarquin' was pronounced plain,
But through his teeth, as if the name he tore.
This windy tempest, till it blow up rain,
Held back his sorrow's tide to make it more;
At last it rains, and busy winds give o'er:
Then son and father weep with equal strife
Who should weep most, for daughter or for wife.

The one doth call her his, the other his,
Yet neither may possess the claim they lay.
The father says 'She's mine.' 'O! mine she is,'
Replies her husband; 'do not take away
My sorrow's interest; let no mourner say
He weeps for her, for she was only mine,
And only must be wail'd by Collatine.'

'O! ' quoth Lucretius, 'I did give that life
Which she too early and too late hath spoil'd.'
'Woe, woe!' quoth Collatine, 'she was my wife,
I ow'd her, and 'tis mine that she hath kill'd.'
'My daughter' and 'my wife' with clamours fill'd
The dispers'd air, who, holding Lucretie's life,
Answer'd their cries, 'my daughter' and 'my wife.'

Brutus, who pluck'd the knife from Lucretie's side,
Seeing such emulation in their woe,
Began to clothe his wit in state and pride,
Burying in Lucretie's wond his folly's show.
He with the Romans was esteemed so
As silly-jerking idiots are with kings,
For sportive words and uttering foolish things:
Now, by the Capitol that we adore,
And by this chaste blood so unjustly stain'd,
By heaven's fair sun that breeds the fat earth's stercor.
By all our country rights in Rome maintain'd,
And by chaste Lucrece's soul, that late complain'd
Her wrongs to us, and by this bloody knife,
We will revenge the death of this true wife.

This said, he struck his hand upon his breast,
And kiss'd the fatal knife to end his vow;
And to his protestation urg'd the rest,
Who, wondering at him, did his words allow:
Then jointly to the ground their knees they bow;
And that deep vow which Brutus made before,
He doth again repeat, and that they swore.

When they had sworn to this advised doom,
They did conclude to bear dead Lucrece thence;
To show her bleeding body thorough Rome, and
And so to publish Tarquin's foul offence:
Which being done with speedy diligence,
The Romans plausibly did give consent
To Tarquin's everlasting banishment.

I.
FROM fairest creatures we desire increase,
That thereby beauty's rose might never die,
But as the riper should by time decease,
His tender heir might bear his memory:
But thou, contracted to thine own bright eyes,
Feed'st thy light's flame with self-substantial fuel,
Making a famine where abundance lies,
Thyself thy foe, to thy sweet self too cruel.
Thou that art now the world's fresh ornament
And only herald to the gaudy spring,
Within thine own bud buried thy content
And, tender churl, mak'st waste in niggarding.
Pity the world, or else this glutton be,
To eat the world's due, by the grave and thee.

II.
When forty winters shall besiege thy brow
And dig deep trenches in thy beauty's field,
Thy youth's proud livery, so gazed on now,
Will be a tatter'd weed, of small worth held:
Then being ask'd where all thy beauty lies,
Where all the treasure of thy lusty days,
To say, within thine own deep-sunken eyes,
Were an all-eating shame and thriftless praise.
How much more praise deserv'd thy beauty's use,
If thou could'st answer 'This fair child of mine
Shall sum my count and make my old excuse,'
Proving his beauty by succession thine!
This were to be new made when thou art old,
And see thy blood warm when thou feel'st it cold.

III.
Look in thy glass, and tell the face thou viewest
Now is the time that face should form another;
Whose fresh repair if now thou not renewest,
Thou dost beguile the world, unblesse some mother.
For where is she so fair whose unear'd womb
Disdains the tillage of thy husbandry?
Or who is he so fond will be the tomb
Of his self-love, to stop posterity?
Thou art Thy mother's glass, and she in thee
Calls back the lovely April of her prime;
So thou through windows of thine age shalt see,
Despite of wrinkles, this thy golden time.
But if thou live, rememb'red not to be,
Die single, and thine image dies with thee.

IV.
Unthrifty loveliness, why dost thou spend
Upon thyself thy beauty's legacy?
Nature's bequest gives nothing, but doth lend,
And being frank, she lends to those are free:
Then, beauteous niggard, why dost thou abuse
The bounteous largess given thee to give?
Profiteer usurer, why dost thou use
So great a sum of sums, yet canst not live?
For having traffic with thyself alone,
Thou of thyself thy sweet self dost deceive:
Then how, when Nature calls thee to be gone,
What acceptable audit canst thou leave?
 Thy unus'd beauty must be tomb'd with thee.
Which, used, lives the executor to be.
SONNETS.

V.

Howe hours, that with gentle work did frame
He lovely gaze where every eye doth dwell,
'll play the tyrants to the very same
And that unfair which fairly doth excel;
Or never-resting time leads summer on
To hideous winter, and confounds him there;
Ep check'd with frost, and lusty leaves quite gone,
Eauty's o'ersnow'd and bareness everywhere:
hen, were not summer's distillation left,
Liquid prisoner pent in walls of glass,
Eauty's effect with beauty were bereft,
For it, nor no remembrance what it was:
But flowers distill'd, though they with winter meet,
Loose but their show; their substance still Lives sweet.

VI.

Then let not winter's ragged hand deface
A thee thy summer, ere thou be distill'd:
ake sweet some vial; treasure thou some place
With beauty's treasure, ere it be self-kill'd:
hat use is not forbidden usury,
Which happen's those that pay the willing loan;
hat's for thyself to breed another thee,
Ten times happier, be it ten for one;
Ten times thyself were happier than thou art,
Ten of thine ten times refug'd thee:
hen what could death do, if thou should'st depart,
aving thee living in posterity?
Be not self-will'd, for thou art much too fair
To be death's conquest and make worms thine heir.

VII.

O! in the orient when the gracious light
Riseth up his burning head, each under eye
Both homage to his new-appearing sight, erving with looks his sacred majesty;
And having climb'd the steep-up heavenly hill,
sembling strong youth in his middle age,
Let mortal looks adore his beauty still,
TTending on his golden pilgrimage;
UT when from highest pitch, with weary ear,
ike feeble age, he reeleth from the day,
He eyes, fore duteous, now converted are
From his low tract, and look another way:
So thou, thyself outgoing in thy noon,
Unlook'd on diest, unless thou get a son.

VIII.

Music to hear, why hear'st thou music sadly?
Sweets with sweets war not, joy delights in joy:
Why lov'st thou that which thou receiv'st not gladly,
Or else receiv'st with pleasure thine annoy?
If the true concord of well-tune'd sounds,
By unions married, do offend thine ear,
They do but sweetly chide thee, who confounds
In singleness the parts that thou should'st bear.
Mark how one string, sweet husband to another,
Strikes each in each by mutual ordering:
Resembling sire and child and happy mother,
Who, all in one, one pleasing note do sing:
Whose speechless song, being many, seeming one,
Sings this to thee: 'Thou single wilt prove none.'

IX.

Is it for fear to wet a widow's eye
That thou consum'st thyself in single life?
Ah! if thou issueless shalt hap to die,
The world wilt wail thee, like a makeless wife;
The world will be thy widow, and still weep
That thou no form of thee hast left behind,
When every private widow well may keep
By children's eyes her husband's shape in mind.

Look! what an unthrift in the world doth spend Shifts but his place, for still the world enjoys it;
But beauty's waste hath in the world an end,
And, kept unused, the user so destroys it.
No love toward others in that bosom sits
That on himself such murderous shame commits.

X.

For shame! deny that thou bear'st love to any,
Who for thyself art so un provident.
Grant, if thou wilt, thou art belov'd of many;
But that thou none lovest is most evident;
For thou art so possess'd with murderous hate
That 'gainst thyself thou stick'st not to conspire,
Seeking that beantoes roof to ruinate
Which to repair should be thy chief desire.
O! change thy thought, that I may change my mind:
Shall hate be fairer lodging than gentle love?
Be, as thy presence is, gracious and kind,
Or to thyself at least kind-hearted prove:
Make thee another self, for love of me,
That beauty still may live in thine or thee.

XI.

As fast as thou shalt wane, so fast thou grow'st
In one of thine, from that which thou departest;
And that fresh blood which youngly thou bestow'st
Thou may'st call thine when thou from youth consortest.
Herein lives wisdom, beauty and increase;
Without this, folly, age and cold decay;
If all were minded so, the times should cease
And three-score year would make the world away.
Let those whom Nature hath not made for store,
Harsh, featureless and rude, barrenly perish:
Look, whom she best endow'd she gave the more;
Which bonounous gift thou should'st in bounty cherish:
She carv'd thee for her seal, and meant thereby
Thou should'st print more, nor let that copy die.

XII.

When I do count the clock that tells the time,
And see the brave day sunk in hideous night;
When I behold the violet past prime,
And sable curls all silver'd o'er with white;
When lofty trees I see barren of leaves,
Which erst from heat did canopy the herd,
And summer's green all girded up in sheaves,
Borne on the bier with white and bristly beard,
Then of thy beauty do I question make,
That thou among the wasters of time must go.
Since sweets and beauties do themselves forsake
And die as fast as they see others grow;
And nothing 'gainst Time's scythe can make defense
Save breed, to brave him when he takes thee hence.

O! that you were yourself; but, love, you are
No longer yours than you yourself here live:
Against this coming end you should prepare,
And your sweet semblance to some other give:
So should that beauty which you hold in lease
Find no determination; then you were Yourself again, after yourself's decease,
When your sweet issue your sweet form should bear.
Who lets so fair a house fall to decay,
Which husbandry in honour might uphold
Against the stormy gusts of winter's day
And barren rage of death's eternal cold?
O! none but unthrifts. Dear my love, you know
You had a father: let your son say so.

Not from the stars do I my judgment pluck;
And yet methinks I have astronomy,
But not to tell of good or evil luck,
Of plagues, of dearths, or seasons' quality;
Nor can I fortune to brief minutes tell,
Pointing to each his thunder, rain and wind,
Or say with princes if it shall go well,
By oft predict that I in heaven find:
But from thine eyes my knowledge I derive,
And, constant stars, in them I read such art
As 'Truth and beauty shall together thrive,
If from thyself to store thou would'st convert;
Or else of thee this I prognosticate:
'Thy end is truth's and beauty's doom and date.'

When I consider every thing that grows
Holds in perfection but a little moment,
That this huge stage presenteth nought but shows
Whereon the stars in secret influence comment;
When I perceive that men as plants increase,
Cheer'd and check'd even by the self-same sky,
Van't in their youthful sap, at height decrease,
And wear their brave state out of memory;
Then the conceit of this inconstant stay
Sets you most rich in youth before my sight,
Where wasteful Time debateth with Decay,
To change your day of youth to sullied night;
And all in war with Time for love of you,
As he takes from you, I engrave you new.

But wherefore do not you a mightier way
Make war upon this bloody tyrant, Time?
And fortify yourself in your decay
With means more blessed than my barren rime?

Now stand you on the top of happy hours,
And many maiden gardens, yet unset,
With virtuous wish would bear your living flowers
Much liker than your painted counterfeit:
So should the lines of life that life repair,
Which this, Time's pencil, or my pupil pen,
Neither in inward worth nor outward fair,
Can make you live yourself in eyes of men.
To give away yourself keeps yourself still;
And you must live, drawn by your own sweet skill.

Who will believe my verse in time to come,
If it were fill'd with your most high deserts!
Though yet, heaven knows, it is but as a tomb
Which hides your life and shows not half you parts.
If I could write the beauty of your eyes
And in fresh numbers number all your graces,
The age to come would say, 'This poet lies;
Such heavenly touches ne'er touched earthly faces.'
So should my papers, yellow'd with their age,
Be scorn'd, like old men of less truth to the tongue,
And your true rights be term'd a poet's rage
And stretched metre of an antique song:
But were some child of yours alive that time
You should live twice, in it and in my rime.

Shall I compare thee to a summer's day?
Thou art more lovely and more temperate;
Rough winds do shake the darling buds of May,
And summer's lease hath all too short a date:
Sometime too hot the eye of heaven shines,
And often is his gold complexion dimm'd;
And every fair from fair sometime declines,
By chance or nature's changing course untrimm'd;
But thy eternal summer shall not fade,
Nor lose possession of that fair thou ow'st,
Nor shall death brag thou wander'st in his shade,
When in eternal lines to time thou grow'st:
So long as men can breathe, or eyes can see,
So long lives this, and this gives life to thee.

Devouring Time, blunt thou the lion's paws,
And make the earth devour her own sweet brood;
Pluck the keen teeth from the fierce tiger jaws,
And burn the long-lived phœnix in her blood:
Make glad and sorry seasons as thou pleasest,
And do what 'er thou wilt, swift-footed Time,
To the wide world and all her fading sweets;
But I forbid thee one most heinous crime:
O! carve not with thy hours my love's fair brow
Nor draw no lines there with thine antique pen
Him in thy course untainted do allow
For beauty's pattern to succeeding men.
Yet do thy worst, old Time: despite thy wrong.
My love shall in my verse ever live young.
XX.
A woman's face with Nature's own hand painted
Hast thou, the master-mistress of my passion;
A woman's gentle heart, but not acquainted
With shifting change, as is false women's fashion;
An eye more bright than theirs, less false in rolling,
Gilding the object whereupon it gazeth;
A man in hue all hues in his controlling,
Which steals men's eyes and women's souls amazeth.
And for a woman wert thou first created;
Till Nature, as she wrought thee, fell a-doting,
And by addition of me thee defeated,
By adding one thing to my purpose nothing.
But since she prick'd thee out for women's pleasure,
Mine be thy love, and thy love's use their treasure.

XXI.
So is it not with me as with that Muse
Stirr'd by a painted beauty to his verse,
Who heaven itself for ornament doth use
And every fair with his fair doth rehearse,
Making a complement of proud compare,
With sun and moon, with earth and sea's rich gems,
With April's first-born flowers, and all things rare
That heaven's air in this huge rondeur hems.
O! let me, true in love, but truly write,
And then believe me, my love is as fair
As any mother's child, though not so bright
As those gold candles fix'd in heaven's air:
Let them say more that like of hear-say well;
I will not praise that purpose not to sell.

XXII.
My glass shall not persuade me I am old,
So long as youth and thou are of one date;
But when in thee time's furrows I behold,
Then look I death my days should expiate.
For all that beauty that doth cover thee
Is but the scemly raiment of my heart,
Which in thy breast doth live, as thine in me:
How can I then be elder than thou art?
O! therefore, love, be of thyself so wary
As I, not for myself, but for thee will;
Bearing thy heart, which I will keep so chary
As tender nurse her babe from faring ill.
Presume not on thy heart when mine is slain;
Thou gav'st me thine, not to give back again.

XXIII.
As an unperfect actor on the stage,
Who with his fear is put besides his part,
Or some fierce thing replete with too much rage,
Whose strength's abundance weakens his own heart;
So I, for fear of trust, forget to say
The perfect ceremony of love's rite,
And in mine own love's strength seem to decay,
O'ercharg'd with burden of mine own love's might.
O! let my books be then the eloquence
And dumb presagers of my speaking breast,
Who plead for love, and look for recompense,
More than that tongue that more hath more express'd.
O! learn to read what silent love hath writ;
To hear with eyes belongs to love's fine wit.

XXIV.
Mine eye hath play'd the painter and hath stell'd
Thy beauty's form in table of my heart;
My body is the frame wherein 'tis held,
And perspective it is best painter's art.
For through the painter must you see his skill,
To find where your true image pictur'd lies,
Which in my bosom's shop is hanging still,
That hath his windows glazed with thine eyes.
Now see what good turns eyes for eyes have done:
Mine eyes have drawn thy shape, and thine for me
Are windows to my breast, where-through the sun
Delights to peep, to gaze therein on thee;
Yet eyes this cunning want to grace their art,
They draw but what they see, know not the heart.

XXV.
Let those who are in favour with their stars
Of public honour and proud titles boast,
Whilst I, whom fortune of such triumph bars,
Unlock'd for joy in that I honour most.
Great princes' favourites their fair leaves spread
But as the marigold at the sun's eye,
And in themselves their pride lies buried,
For at a frown they in their glory die.
The painful warrior famou'd for fight,
After a thousand victories once fall'd,
Is from the book of honour razed quite,
And all the rest forgot for which he toil'd:
Then happy I, that love and am belov'd
Where I may not remove nor be remov'd.

XXVI.
Lord of my love, to whom in vassalage
Thy merit hath my duty strongly knit,
To thee I send this written embassage,
To witness duty, not to show my wit:
Duty so great, which wit so poor as mine
May make seem bare, in wanting words to show it,
But that I hope some good conceit of thine
In thy soul's thought, all naked, will bestow it;
Till whatsoever star that guides my moving
Points on me graciously with fair aspect,
And puts apparel on my tatter'd loving,
To show me worthy of thy sweet respect:
Then may I dare to boast how I do love thee;
Till then not show my head where thou may'st prove me.

XXVII.
Weary with toil, I haste me to my bed,
The dear repose for limbs with travel tir'd;
But then begins a journey in my head
To work my mind, when body's work's expir'd.
For then my thoughts, from far where I abide,
Intend a zealous pilgrimage to thee,
And keep my drooping eyelids open wide,
Looking on darkness which the blind do see:
Save that my soul's imaginary sight
Presents thine shadow to my sightless view,
Which, like a jewel hung in ghastly night,
Makes black night beautious and her old face new.

Lo! thus, by day my limbs, by night my mind,
For thee, and for myself no quiet find.

XXXVIII.
How can I then return in happy plight,
That am debarr'd the benefit of rest?
When day's oppression is not eas'd by night,
But day by day, and night by day, oppress'd;
And each, though enemies to either's reign,
Do in consent shake hands to torture me,
The one by toil, the other to complain
How far I toil, still farther off from thee?
I tell the day, to please him, thou art bright
And dost him grace when clouds do blot the heaven:
So flatter I the swart-complexion'd night;
When sparkling stars twire not thou gild'st the even.
But day doth daily draw my sorrows longer,
And night doth nightly make grief's length seem stronger.

XXXIX.
When, in di-grace with fortune and men's eyes,
I all alone beweep my outcast state,
And trouble deaf heaven with my bootless cries,
And look upon myself, and curse my fate,
Wishing me like to one more rich in hope,
Fatter'd like him, like him with friends posses'sd,
Desiring this man's art, and that man's scope,
With what I most enjoy contented least;
Yet in these thoughts myself almost despising,
Haply I think on thee, and then my state,
Like to the lark at break of day arising
From sullen earth, sings hymns at heaven's gate:
For thy sweet love rememb'red such wealth brings
That then I scorn to change my state with kings.

XXX.
When to the sessions of sweet silent thought
I summon up remembrance of things past,
I sigh the lack of many a thing I sought,
And with old woes new wail my dear time's waste:
Then can I drown an eye, unsu'd to flow,
For precious friends hid in death's dateless night,
And weep afresh love's long since cancell'd woe,
And moan the expense of many a vanish'd sight:
Then can I grieve at grievances foregone,
And heavily from woe to woe tell o'er
The sad account of fore-bemoaned moan,
Which I new pay as if not paid before.
But if the while I think on thee, dear friend,
All losses are restor'd and sorrows end.

XXXI.
Thy bosom is endeared with all hearts,
Which I by lacking have supposed dead;
And there reigns Love, and all Love's loving parts,
And all those friends which I thought buried.

How many a holy and obsequious tear
Hath dear religious love stol'n from mine eye,
As interest of the dead, which now appear
But things remov'd that hidden in thee lie!
Thou art the grave where buri'd love doth live,
Hung with the trophies of my lovers gone,
Who all their parts of me to thee did give;
That due of many now is thine alone:
Their images I lov'd I view in thee,
And thou, all they, hast all the all of me.

XXXII.
If thou survive my well-contented day,
When that churl Death my bones with dust shall cover,
And shalt by fortune once more re-survey
These poor rude lines of thy decased lover,
Compare them with the bettering of the time,
And though they be outstripp'd by every pen,
Reserve them for my love, not for their rime,
Exceeded by the height of happier men:
Oh! then vouchsafe me but this loving thought:
'Had my friend's Muse grown with this growing age,
A dearer birth than this his love had brought,
To march in ranks of better equipage:
But since he died, and poets better prove,
Theirs for their style I'll read, his for his love.'

XXXIII.
Full many a glorious morning have I seen
Flatter the mountain tops with sovereign eye,
Kissing with golden face the meadows green,
Gilding pale streams with heavenly alchemy;
Anon permit the basest clouds to ride
With ugly rack on his celestial face,
And from the forlorn world his visage hide,
Stealing unseen to west with this disgrace:
Even so my sun one early morn did shine
With all-triumphant splendour on my brow;
But, out, alack! he was but one hour mine,
The region cloud hath mask'd him from me now.
Yet him for this my love no whit disdainedeth;
Suns of the world may stain when heaven's sun staineth.

XXXIV.
Why did'st thou promise such a beauteous day,
And make me travel forth without my cloak,
To let base clouds o'ertake me in my way,
Hiding thy bravery in their rotten smoke?
'Tis not enough that through the cloud thou break,
To dry the rain on my storm-beaten face.
For no man well of such a salve can speak
That heals the wound and cures not the disgrace:
Nor can thy shame give physic to my grief;
Though thou repent, yet I have still the loss:
The offender's sorrow lends but weak relief
To him that bears the strong offence's cross.
Ah! but those tears are pearl which thy love sheds,
And they are rich and ransom all ill deeds.
XXXV.

No more be grie'd at that which thou hast done:
Roses have thorns, and silver fountains mud;
Clouds and eclipses stain both moon and sun,
And loathsome canker lives in sweetest bud.
All men make faults, and even I in this,
Authorizing thy trespass with compare,
Myself corrupting, salving thy amiss,
Excusing thy sins more than thy sins are;
For to thy sensual fault I bring in sense,
Thy adverse party is thy advocate,
And 'gainst myself a lawful plea commence:
Such civil war is in my love and hate,
That I an accessary needs must be
To that sweet thief which sourly robs from me.

XXXVI.

Let me confess that we two must be twain,
Although our undivided loves are one:
So shall those blot's that do with me remain,
Without thy help, by me be borne alone.
In our two loves there is but one respect,
Though in our lives a separable spite.
Which, though it alter not love's sole effect,
Yet doth it steal sweet hours from love's delight.
I may not evermore acknowledge thee,
Lest my bewailed guilt should do thee shame,
Nor thou with public kindness honour me,
Unless thou take that honour from thy name:
But do not so; I love thee in such sort
As, thou being mine, mine is thy good report.

XXXVII.

As a decrepit father takes delight
To see his active child do deeds of youth,
So I, made lame by fortune's dearest spite,
Take all my comfort of thy worth and truth;
For whether beauty, birth, or wealth, or wit,
Or any of these all, or all, or more,
Entitled in thy parts do crowned sit,
I make my love engraven to this store:
So then I am not lame, poor, nor despised,
Whilst that this shadow doth such substance give.
That I in thy abundance am sufficed
And by a part of all thy glory live.
Look, what is best, that best I wish in thee:
This wi'l I have; then ten times happy me!

XXXVIII.

How can my Muse want subject to invent,
While thou dost breathe, that pour'st into my verse
Thine own sweet argument, too excellent
For every vulgar paper to rehearse?
O! give thyself the thanks, if aught in me
Worthy perusal stand against thy sight;
For who's so dumb that cannot write to thee,
When thou thyself dost give invention light?
Be thou the tenth Muse, ten times more in worth
Than those old nine which rimes invocate;
And he that calls on thee, let him bring forth
Eternal numbers to outlive long date.
If my slight Muse do please these curious days,
The pain be mine, but thine shall be the praise.

XXXIX.

O! how thy worth with manners may I sing,
When thou art all the better part of me!
What can mine own praise to mine own self bring?
And what is 't but mine own when I praise thee?
Even for this let us divided live,
And our dear love lose name of single one,
That by this separation I may give
That due to thee which thou deserv'st alone.
O absence! what a torment would'st thou prove,
Were it not thy sour leisure gave sweet leave
To entertain the time with thoughts of love,
Which time and thoughts so sweetly doth deceive,
And that thou teachest how to make one twain,
By praising him here who doth hence remain.

XL.

Take all my loves, my love, yea, take them all;
What hast thou then more than thou hast'd before?
No love, my love, that thou may'st true love call;
All mine was thine before thou hast'd this more.
Then if for my love thou my love receivest,
I cannot blame thee for my love thou usest;
But yet be blamed, if thou thyself deceivest
By wilful taste of what thyself refusest.
I do forgive thy robberies, gentle thief,
Although thou steal thee all my poverty;
And yet love knows it is a greater grief
To bear love's wrong than hate's known injury:
Lascivious grace, in whom all ill well shows.
Kill me with spites; yet we must not be foes.

XLI.

Those pretty wrongs that liberty commits,
When I am sometime absent from thy heart,
Thy beauty and thy years full well befits,
For still temptation follows where thou art.
Gentle thou art, and therefore to be won,
Beauteous thou art, therefore to be assail'd;
And when a woman woos, what woman's son
Will souldy leave her till she have prevail'd?
Ay me! but yet thou might'st my seat forbear,
And chide thy beauty and thy straying youth,
Who lead thee in their riot even there
Where thou art forc'd to break a twofold truth;
Hers, by thy beauty tempting her to thee,
Thine, by thy beauty being false to me.

XLII.

That thou hast her, it is not all my grief,
And yet it may be said I lov'd her dearly;
That she hath thee, is of my wailing chief,
A loss in love that touches me more nearly.
Loving offenders, thus I will excuse ye:
Thou dost love her, because thou know'st I love her;
And for my sake even so doth she abuse me.
Suffering my friend for my sake to approve her.
If I lose thee, my loss is my love's gain,
And losing her, my friend hath found that loss;
SONNETS.

XLIV.

Both find each other, and I lose both twain,
And both for my sake lay on me this cross:
But here's the joy; my friend and I are one;
Sweet flattery! then she loves but me alone.

When most I wink, then do mine eyes best see,
For all the day they view things unrespected;
But when I sleep, in dreams they look on thee,
And, darkly bright, are bright in dark directed.
Then thou, whose shadow shadows doth make bright,
How would thy shadow's form form happy show
To the clear day with thy much clearer light,
When to unseeing eyes thy shade shines so!
How would, I say, mine eyes be blessed made
By looking on thee in the living day,
When in dead night thy fair imperfect shade
Through heavy sleep on sightless eyes go stay!
All days are nights to see till I see thee,
And nights bright days when dreams do show thee me.

XLV.

If the dull substance of my flesh were thought,
Injuries distance should not stop my way;
For then, despite of space, I would be brought,
From limits far remote, where thou dost stay.
No more then although my foot did stand
Upon the furthest earth remov'd from thee;
For nimble thought can jump both sea and land,
As soon as think the place where he would be,
But, ah! thought kills me that I am not thought,
To leap long lengths of miles when thou art gone,
But that, so much of earth and water wrought,
I must attend time's leisure with my soul;
Receiving nought by elements so slow
But heavy tears, badges of either's woe.

XLVI.

The other two, slight air and purging fire,
Are both with thee, wherever I abide;
The first my thought, the other my desire,
These present-absent with swift motion slide.
For when these quicker elements are gone
In tender embassy of love to thee,
My life, being made of four, with two alone
Sink's down to death, oppress'd with melancholy;
Until life's composition be recover'd
By those swiftmessengers return'd from thee,
Who even but now come back again, assur'd
Of thy fair health, recounting it to me:
This told, I joy; but then no longer glad,
I send them back again, and straight grow sad.

XLVII.

Mine eye and heart are at a mortal war,
How to divide the conquest of thy sight;
Mine eye my heart thy picture's sight would bar,
My heart mine eye the freedom of that right.
My heart doth plead that thou in him dost lie,
A closet never pierc'd with crystal eyes,
But the defendant doth that plea deny,
And says in him thy fair appearance lies.
To 'cide this title is impannelled
A quest of thoughts, all tenants to the heart;
And by their verdict is determined
The clear eye's moiety and the dear heart's part.
As thus; mine eye's due is thine outward part,
And my heart's right thine inward love of heart.

XLVIII.

Betwixt mine eye and heart a league is took,
And each doth good turns now unto the other:
When that mine eye is famish'd for a look,
Or heart in love with sighs himself doth smother
With my love's picture then my eye doth feast
And to the painted banquet bids my heart;
Another time mine eye is my heart's guest,
And in his thoughts of love doth share a part:
So, either by thy picture or my love,
Thyself away art present still with me;
For thou not further than my thoughts canst move,
And I am still with them and with thee;
Or, if they sleep, thy picture in my sight
Awakes my heart to heart's and eye's delight.

XLIX.

XLIX.

How careful was I, when I took my way,
Each trifle under trustest bars to thrust,
That to my use it might unused stay
From hands of falsehood, in sure wards of trust
But thou, to whom my jewels trilef are,
Most worthy comfort, now my greatest grief,
Thou, best of dearest and mine only care,
Art left the prey of every vulgar thief.
Thee have I not lock'd up in any chest,
Save where thou art not, though I feel thou art,
Within the gentle closure of my breast,
From whence at pleasure thou may'st come and part;
And even thence thou wilt be stol'n, I fear,
For truth proves thievish for a prize so dear.

L.

Against that time, if ever that time come,
When I shall see thee frown on my defects,
When as thy love hath cast his utmost sun,
Call'd to that audit by advis'd respects;
Against that time when thou shalt strangely pass,
And scarcely greet me with that sun, thine eye,
When love, converted from the thing it was,
Shall reasons find of settled gravity;
Against that time do I enconce me here
Within the knowledge of mine own desert,
And this my hand against myself uprear,
To guard the lawful reasons on thy part:
To leave poor me thou hast the strength of laws,
Since why to love I can allege no cause.

LI.

How heavy do I journey on the way,
When what I seek, my weary travel's end,
Dost teach that case and that repose to say,'Thus far the miles are measured from thy friend!'
The beast that bears me, tired with my woe,
Plods dully on, to bear that weight in me,
As if by some instinct the wretch did know
His rider loved not speed, being made from thee:
he bloody spur cannot provoke him on hat sometimes auger thrusts into his hide,
Which heavily he answers with a groan
lore sharp to me than spurring to his side;
For that same groan doth put this in my mind:
My grief lies onward, and my joy behind.

LI.
thus can my love excuse the slow offence
Of my dull bearer when from thee I spied :
from where thou art why should I haste me thence?
ill I return, of posting is no need.
1) what excuse will my poor beast then find,
When swift extremity can seem but slow?
then should I spur, though mounted on the wind,
in winged speed no motion shall I know:
then can no horse with my desire keep pace;
therefore desire, of perfect'st love being made,
shall neigh, no dull flesh in his fiery race;
but love, for love, thus shall excuse my jade;
'since from thee going he went wilful-slow,
Towards thee I'll run and give him leave to go.'

LII.
so am I as the rich, whose blessed key
Can bring him to his sweet up-locked treasure,
The which he will not every hour survey,
For blunting the fine point of seldom pleasure
Therefore are feasos so solemn and so rare,
Since, seldom coming, in the long year set,
like stones of worth they thinly placed are,
Or captain jewels in the carcanet.
So is the time that keeps you as my chest,
Or as the wardrobe which the robe doth hide,
To make some special instant special blest,
By new unfolding his imprison'd pride.
Blessed are you, whose worthiness gives scope,
Being had, to triumph; being lack'd, to hope.

LIII.
What is your substance, whereof are you made,
That millions of strange shadows on you tend?
Since every one hath, every one, one shade,
And you, but one, can every shadow lend.
Describe Adonis, and the counterfeit
Is poorly imitated after you;
On Helen's cheek all art of beauty set,
And you in Grecian tires are painted new:
Speak of the spring and folon of the year,
The one doth shadow of your beauty show,
The other as your bounty doth appear;
And you in every blessed shape we know.
In all external grace you have some part,
But you like none, none you, for constant heart.

LIV.
O! how much more doth beauty beanteous seem
But, for their virtue only is their show,
They live unwo'd and unrespected fade;
Die to themselves. Sweet roses do not so;
Of their sweet deaths are sweetest odours made:
And so of you, beanteous and lovely youth,
When that shall fade, by verse distils your truth.

LV.
Not marble, nor the gilded monuments
Of princes, shall outlive this powerful rime;
But you shall shine more bright in these contents
Than unswept stone, besmear'd with sluttish time.
When wasteful war shall statues overturn,
And broils root out the work of masonry,
Nor Mars his sword nor war's quick fire shall burn
The living record of your memory.
'Gainst death and all-oblivious enmity
Shall you pace forth; your praise shall still find room
Even in the eyes of all posterity
That wear this world out to the ending doom.
So, till the judgment that yourself arise,
You live in this, and dwell in lovers' eyes.

LVI.
Sweet love, renew thy force; be it not said
Thy edge should blunter be than appetite,
Which but to-day by feeding is allay'd,
To-morrow sharpen'd in his former might:
So, love, be thou; although to-day thou fill
Thy hungry eyes even till they wink with fulness,
To-morrow see again, and do not kill
The spirit of love with a perpetual dulness.
Let this sad interim like the ocean be
Which parts the shore, where two contracted new Come daily to the banks, that, when they see Return of love, more bless'd may be the view;
Or call it winter, which, being full of care,
Makes summer's welcome thrice more wish'd, more rare.

LVII.
Being your slave, what should I do but tend Upon the hours and times of your desire?
I have no precious time at all to spend,
Nor services to do, till you require.
Nor dare I chide the world-without-end hour
Whilst I, my sovereign, watch the clock for you,
Nor think the bitterness of absence sour
When you have bid your servant once adieu;
Nor dare I question with my jealous thought
Where you may be, or your affairs suppose,
But, like a sad slave, stay and think of nought
Save, where you are how happy you make those.
So true a fool is love that in your will,
Though you do any thing, he thinks no ill.

LVIII.
That god forbid that made me first your slave,
I should in thought control your times of pleasure,
Or at your hand the account of hours to crave,
Being your vassal, bound to stay your leisure!
O! let me suffer, being at your beck,
The imprison'd absence of your liberty;
And patience, tame to sufferance, bide each check,
Without accusing you of injury.
SONNETS.

Be where you list, your charter is so strong
That you yourself may privilege your time
To what you will; to you it doth belong
Yourself to pardon of self doing crime.
I am to wait, though waiting so be hell,
Not blame your pleasure, be it ill or well.

LIX.

If there be nothing new, but that which is Hath been before, how are our brains beguil'd,
Which, labouring for invention, bear amiss
The second burthen of a former child?
O! that record could with a backward look,
Even of five hundred courses of the sun,
Show me your image in some antique book,
Since mind at first in character was done:
That I might see what the old world could say
To this composed wonder of your frame;
Wh'er we are mended, or wh'er better they,
Or whether revolution be the same.
'O! sure I am, the wits of former days
To subjects worse have given admiring praise.

LX.

Like as the waves make towards the pebbled shore,
So do our minutes hasten to their end;
Each changing place with that which goes before,
In sequent toll all forwards do contend.
Nativity, once in the main of light,
Crawls to maturity, wherewith being crown'd,
Crooked eclipses 'gainst his glory fight,
And Time that gave doth now his gift confound.
Time doth transfix the flourish set on youth
And delves the parallels in beauty's brow,
Feeds on the rarities of nature's truth,
And nothing stands but for his scythe to cow:
And yet to times in hope my verse shall stand,
Praising thy worth, despite his cruel hand.

LXI.

Is it thy will thy image should keep open
My heavy eyelids to the weary night?
Dost thou desire my slumbers should be broken,
While shadows like to thee do mock my sight?
Is it thy spirit that thou send'st from thee
So far from home into my deeds to pry,
To find out shames and idle hours in me,
The scope and tenour of thy jealousy?
O, no! thy love, though much, is not so great:
It is my love that keeps mine eye awake;
Mine own true love that doth my rest defeat,
To play the watchman ever for thy sake:
For thee watch I whist thou dost wake elsewhere,
From me far off, with others all too near.

LXII.

Sin of self-love possesseth all mine eye
And all my soul and all my every part;
And for this sin there is no remedy,
It is so grounded inward in my heart.
Methinks no face so gracious is as mine,
No shape so true, no truth of such account;
And for myself mine own worth do define,
As I all other in all worths surmount.
But when my glass shows me myself indeed,
Beated and chopp'd with tann'd antiquity,
Mine own self-love quite contrary I read;
Self so self-loving were iniquity.
'Tis thee, myself, that for myself I praise,
Painting my age with beauty of thy days.

LXIII.

Against my love shall be, as I am now,
With Time's injurious handcrush'd and o'erworn
When hours have drain'd his blood and fill'd his brow
With lines and wrinkles; when his youthful morn
Hath travell'd on to age's steepy night;
And all those beauties whereof now he's king
Are vanishing or vanish'd out of sight,
Stealing away the treasure of his spring;
For such a time do I now forfify
Against confounding age's cruel knife,
That he shall never cut from memory
My sweet love's beauty, though my lover's life
His beauty shall in these black lines be seen.
And they shall live, and he in them still green.

LXIV.

When I have seen by Time's fell hand defac'd
The rich-proud cost of outworn buried age;
And sometime lofty towers I see down-raz'd,
And brass eternal slave to mortal rage;
When I have seen the hungry ocean gain
Advantage on the kingdom of the shore,
And the firm soil win of the watery main,
Increasing store with loss and loss with store;
When I have seen such interchange of state,
Or state itself confounded to decay;
Ruin hath taught me thus to ruminate,
That Time will come and take my love away.
This thought is as a death, which cannot choose
But weep to have that which it fears to lose.

LXV.

Since brass, nor stone, nor earth, nor boundless sea,
But sad mortality o'ersways their power,
How with this rage shall beauty hold a plea,
Whose action is no stronger than a flower?
O! how shall summer's honey breath hold out
Against the wreckful siege of bettering days,
When rocks impregnable are not so stont,
Nor gates of steel so strong, but Time decays?
O fearful meditation! where, alack!
Shall Time's best jewel from Time's chest lie hid?
Or what strong hand can hold his swift foot back?
Or who his spoil of beauty can forbid?
O! none, unless this miracle have might,
That in black ink my love may still shine bright.

LXVI.

Tir'd with all these, for restful death I cry
As, to behold desert a beggar born,
And needy nothing trimm'd in jollity,
And purest faith unhappily forsworn,
And gilded honour shamefully mispal'd,
And maiden virtue rudely strumpet'd,
And right perfection wrongfully disgrac'd,
And strength by limping sway disabled,
And art made tongue-tied by authority,
And folly, doctor-like, controlling skill,
And simple truth miscall’d simplicity,
And captive good attending captain ill:
’Tis with all these, from these would I be gone,
Save that, to die, I leave my love alone.

LXXI.

Ah! wherefore with infection should he live
And with his presence grace imploie,
That sin by him advantage should achieve
And lace itself with his society?
Why should false painting imitate his check,
And steal dead seeing of his living hue?
Why should poor beauty indirectly seek Roses of shadow, since his rose is true?
Why should he live, now Nature bankrupt is,
Begg’d of blood to blush through lively veins?
For she hath no exchequer now but his,
And, proud of many, lives upon his gains.
O! him she stores, to show what wealth she had
In days long since, before these last so bad.

LXXII.

Thus is his cheek the map of days outworn,
When beauty liv’d and died as flowers do now,
Before these bastard signs of fair were born,
Or durst inhabit on a living brow;
Before the golden tresses of the dead,
The right of sepulchres, were shorn away,
To live a second life on second head;
Ere beauty’s dead fleece made another gay;
In him those holy antique hours are seen,
Without all ornament, itself and true,
Making no summer of another’s green,
Robbing no old to dress his beauty new;
And him as for a map doth Nature store,
To show false Art what beauty was of yore.

LXXIII.

Those parts of thee that the world’s eye doth view
Want nothing that the thought of hearts can mend;
All tongues, the voice of souls, give thee that due,
Uttering bare truth, even so as foes commend.
Thy outward thus with outward praise is crown’d;
But those same tongues, that give thee so thine own,
In other accents do this praise confound
By seeing further than the eye hath shown.
They look into the beauty of thy mind,
And that, in guess, they measure by thy deeds;
Then, churl’s, their thoughts, although their eyes were kind,
To thy fair flower add the rank smell of weeds:
But why thy odour matcheth not thy show,
The soil is this, that thou dost common grow.

LXXIV.

That thou art blam’d shall not be thy defect,
For slander’s mark was ever yet the fair;
The ornament of beauty is suspect,
A crow that flies in heaven’s sweetest air.
So thou be good, slander doth but approve
Thy worth the greater, being woo’d of time;
For canker vice the sweetest buds doth love,
And thou present’st a pure, unstained prime.
Thou hast pass’d by the ambush of young days,
Either not assail’d, or victor being charg’d;
Yet this thy praise cannot be so thy praise,
To tie up envy evermore enlarg’d:
If some suspect of ill mask’d not thy show,
Then thou alone kingdoms of hearts shouldst owe.

LXXV.

No longer mourn for me when I am dead
Than you shall hear the surly sullen bell
Give warning to the world that I am fled
From this vile world, with vilest worms to dwell:
Nay, if you read this line, remember not
The hand that writ it; for I love you so,
That I in your sweet thoughts would be forgot,
If thinking on me then should make you woe.
O! if, I say, you look upon this verse
When I perhaps compound am with clay,
Do not so much as my poor name rehearse,
But let your love even with my life decay;
Lest the wise world should look into your mean,
And mock you with me after I am gone.

LXXVI.

O! lest the world should task you to recite
What me it lived in me, that you should love
After my death, dear love, forget me quite,
For you in me can nothing worthy prove;
Unless you would devise some virtuous lie
To do more for me than mine own desert,
And hang more praise upon deceased I
Than niggard truth would willingly impart:
O! lest your true love may seem false in this,
That you for love speak well of me untrue,
My name be buried where my body is,
And live no more to shame nor me nor you.
For I am sham’d by that which I bring forth,
And so should you, to love things nothing worth.

LXXVII.

That time of year thou mayst in me behold
When yellow leaves, or none, or few, do hang Upon those boughs which shake against the cold,
Bare rum’d choirs, where late the sweet birds sang.
In me thou see’st the twilight of such day
As after sunset fadeth in the west;
Which by and by black night doth take away,
Death’s second self, that seals up all in rest.
In me thou see’st the glooming of such fire,
That on the ashes of his youth doth lie,
As the death-bed whereon it must expire,
Consum’d with that which it was nourish’d by.
This thou perceiv’st, which makes thy love more strong,
To love that well which thou must leave ere long.

LXXVIII.

But be contented: when that fell arrest
Without all bail shall carry me away
My life hath in this line some interest,
Which for memorial still with thee shall stay.
When thou reviewest this, thou dost review
The very part was consecrate to thee:
The earth can have but earth, which is his due;
My spirit is thine, the better part of me:
SONNETS.

LXXV.

So are you to my thoughts as food to life,
Or as sweet-season'd showers are to the ground;
And for the peace of you I hold such strife
As 'twixt a miser and his wealth is found;
Now proud as an enjoyer, and anon
Doubting the fitching age will steal his treasure;
Now counting best to be with you alone,
Then better'd that the world may see my pleasure:
Sometimes, all full with feasting on your sight,
And by and by clean starved for a look;
Possessing or pursuing no delight,
Save what is had or must from you be took.
Thus do I pine and surfeit day by day,
Or gluttoning on all, or all away.

LXXXVI.

Why is my verse so barren of new pride,
So far from variation or quick change?
Why with the time do I not glance aside
To new-found methods and to compounds strange?
Why write I still all one, ever the same,
And keep invention in a noted weed,
That every word doth almost tell my name,
Showing their birth and where they did proceed?
O! know, sweet love, I always write of you,
And you and love are still my argument;
So all my best is dressing old words new,
Spending again what is already spent:
For as the sun is daily new and old,
So is my love still telling what is told.

LXXVII.

Thy glass will show thee how thy beauties wear,
Thy dial how thy precious minutes waste;
The vacant leaves thy mind's imprint will bear,
And of this book this learning may'st thou taste.
The wrinkles which thy glass will truly show
Of montheid graves will give thee memory;
Thou by thy dial's shady stealth may'st know
Time's thieves progress to eternity.
Look! what thy memory cannot contain Commit to these waste blanks, and thou shalt find
Those children nurs'd, deliver'd from thy brain,
To take a new acquaintance of thy mind.
These offices, so oft as thou wilt look,
Shall profit thee and much enrich thy book.

LXXVIII.

So oft have I invok'd thee for my Muse
And found such fair assistance in my verse
As every alien pen hath got my use
And under thee their poesy disperse,
Thine eyes, that taught the dumb to sing
And heavy ignorance aloft to fly,
Have added feathers to the learned's wing
And given grace a double majesty.

Yet be most proud of that which I compile,
Whose influence is thine and born of thee:
In others' works thou dost but mend the style,
And arts with thy sweet graces grace be;
But thou art all my art, and dost advance
As high as learning my rude ignorance.

LXXIX.

Whilst I alone did call upon thy aid,
My verse alone had all thy gentle grace;
But now my gracious numbers are decay'd,
And my sick Muse doth give another place.
I grant, sweet love, thy lovely argument
Deserves the travail of a worthier pen;
Yet what of thee thy poet doth invent
He robs thee of, and pays it thee again.
He lends thee virtue, and he stole that word
From thy behaviour; beauty doth he give,
And found it in thy cheek; he can afford
No praise to thee but what in thee doth live.
Then thank him not for that which he doth say,
Since what he owes thee thou thyself dost pay.

LXXX.

O! how I faint when I of you do write,
Knowing a better spirit doth use your name,
And in the praise thereof spends all his might,
To make me tongue-tied, speaking of your fame.
But since your worth, wide as the ocean is,
The humble as the proudest sail doth bear,
My saucy bark, inferior far to his,
On your broad main doth willfully appear.
Your shallowest help will hold me up afloat,
Whilst he upon your soundless deep doth ride;
Or, being wreck'd, I am a worthless boat,
He of tall building and of goodly pride:
Then if he thrive and I be cast away,
The worst was this; my love was my decay.

LXXXI.

Or I shall live your epitaph to make,
Or you survive when I in earth am rotten:
From hence your memory death cannot take,
Although in each part will be forgotten.
Your name from hence immortal life shall have,
Though I, once gone, to all the world must die:
The earth can yield me but a common grave,
When you entombed in men's eyes shall lie.
Your monument shall be my gentle verse,
Which eyes not yet created shall o'er-read;
And tongues be to your being shall rehearse,
When all the breathers of this world are dead;
You shall still live, such virtue hath my pen,
Where breath most breathes, even in the mouths of men.

LXXXII.

I grant thou wert not marri'd to my Muse,
And therefore may'st without attaint o'erlook
The dedicated words which writers use
Of their fair subject, blessing every book.
Thou art as fair in knowledge as in hue,
Finding thy worth a limit past my praise;
And therefore art enforc'd to seek anew
Some fresher stamp of the time-bettering days,
And do so, love; yet when they have devise'd
What strained touches rhetoric can lend,
SONNETS.

He, nor that affable familiar ghost
Which nightly gulls him with intelligence,
As victors, of my silence cannot boast;
I was not sick of any fear from thence:
But when your countenance fill'd up his line,
Then lack'd I matter; that enfeeb'd mine.

LXXXVII.

Farewell! thou art too dear for my possessing,
And like enough thou know'st thy estimate:
The charter of thy worth gives thee releasing;
My bonds in thee are all determinate.
For how do I hold thee but by thy granting?
And for that riches where is my deserving?
The cause of this fair gift in me is wanting,
And so my patent back again is swerving.
Thyself thou gav'st, thy own worth then not knowing,
Or me, to whom thou gav'st it, else mistaking;
So thy great gift, upon misprision growing,
Comes home again, on better judgment making.
Thus have I had thee, as a dream doth flutter,
In sleep a king, but waking no such matter.

LXXXVIII.

When thou shalt be dispos'd to set me light,
And place my merit in the eye of scorn,
Upon thy side against myself I'll fight,
And prove thee virtuous, though thou art sworn.

With mine own weakness being best acquainted,
Upon thy part I can set down a story
Of faults conceal'd, wherein I am attainted;
That thou in losing me shalt win much glory:
And I by this will be a gainer too;
For bending all my loving thoughts on thee,
The injuries that to myself I do,
Doing thee vantage, double-vantage me.
Such is my love, to thee I so belong,
That for thy right myself will bear all wrong.

LXXXIX.

Say that thou didst forsake me for some fault,
And I will comment upon that offence:
Speak of my lameness, and I straight will halt,
Against thy reasons making no defence.
Thou canst not, love, disgrace me half so ill,
To set a form upon desired change,
As I'll myself disgrace; knowing thy will,
I will acquaintance strangle and look strange;
Be absent from thy walks; and in my tongue
Thy sweet beloved name no more shall dwell.
Lest I, too much profane, should do it wrong,
And haply of our old acquaintance tell.
For thee, against myself I'll vow debate,
For I must ne'er love him whom thou dost hate.

LXXX.

Then hate me when thou wilt; if ever, now;
Now, while the world is bent my deeds to cross,
Join with the spite of fortune, make me bow,
And do not drop in for an after-loss:
Ah! do not, when my heart hath 'scap'd this sorrow,
Come in the rearward of a conquer'd woe;
Give not a windy night a rainy morrow,
To linger out a purpos'd overthrow.
SONNETS.

If thou wilt leave me, do not leave me last,
When other petty griefs have done their spite,
But in the onset come: so shall I taste
At first the very worst of fortune's might;
And other strains of woe, which now seem woe,
Compared with loss of thee will not seem so.

Some glory in their birth, some in their skill,
Some in their wealth, some in their body's force;
Some in their garments, though new-fangled ill;
Some in their hawks and hounds, some in their horse;
And every humour hath his adjunct pleasure,
Wherein it finds a joy above the rest:
But these particulars are not my measure;
All these I better in one general best.

Thy love is better than high birth to me,
Richer than wealth, prouder than garments' cost,
Of more delight than hawks or horses be;
And having thee, of all men's pride I boast:
Wretched in this alone, that thou may'st take
All this away and me most wretched make.

But do thy worst to steal thyself away,
For term of life thou art assured mine;
And life no longer than thy love will stay,
For it depends upon that love of thine.
Then need I not to fear the worst of wrongs,
When in the least of them my life hath end.
I see a better state to me belongs
Than that which on thy humour doth depend:
Thou canst not vex me with inconsistent mind,
Since that my life on thy revolts doth lie.
O! what a happy title do I find,
Happy to have thy love, happy to die:
But what's so blessed-fair that fears no blot?
Thou may'st be false, and yet I know it not.

So shall I live, supposing thou art true,
Like a deceived husband; so love's face
May still seem love to me, though alter'd new;
Thy looks with me, thy heart in other place:
For there can live no hatred in thine eye,
Therefore in that I cannot know thy change.
In many's looks the false heart's history
Is writ in moods and frowns and wrinkles strange,
But heaven in thy creation did decree
That in thy face sweet love should ever dwell;
Whate'er thoughts or thy heart's workings be,
Thy looks should nothing thence but sweetness tell.

How like Eve's apple doth thy beauty grow,
If thy sweet virtue answer not thy show!

They that have power to hurt and will do none,
That do not do the thing they most do show,
Who, moving others, are themselves as stone,
Unmoved, cold, and to temptation slow;
They rightly do inherit heaven's graces,
And husband nature's riches from expense;
They are the lords and owners of their faces,
Others but stewards of their excellence.
The summer's flower is to the summer sweet,
Though to itself it only live and die,
But if that flower with base infection meet,
The basest weed outbraves his dignity:
For sweetest things turn sourest by their deeds;
Lilies that fester smell far worse than weeds.

How sweet and lovely dost thou make the shame
Which, like a canker in the fragrant rose,
Doth spot the beauty of thy budding name!
O! in what sweets dost thou thy sins enclose;
That tongue that tells the story of thy days,
Making lascivious comments on thy sport,
Cannot dispraise but in a kind of praise;
Naming thy name blesses an ill report.
O! what a mansion have those vices got
Which for their habitation chose out thee,
Where beauty's veil doth cover every blot
And all things turn to fair that eyes can see.
Take heed, dear heart, of this large privilege;
The hardest knife ill-us'd doth lose his edge.

Some say, thy fault is youth, some wantoness;
Some say, thy grace is youth and gentle sport;
Both grace and faults are lov'd more and less:
Thou mak'st faults graces that to thee resort.
As on the finger of a throned queen
The basest jewel will be well esteem'd,
So are those errors that in thee are seen
To truths translated and for true things deem'd
How many lambs might the stern wolf betray,
If like a lamb he could his looks translate!
How many gazers might'st thou lead away,
If thou wouldst use the strength of all thy state!
But do not so; I love thee in such sort,
As thou being mine, mine is thy good report.

How like a winter hath my absence been
From thee, the pleasure of the fleeting year!
What freezings have I felt, what dark days seen!
What old December's bareness every where!
And yet this time remov'd was summer's time;
The teeming autumn, big with rich increase,
Bearing the wanton burden of the prime,
Like widow'd wombs after their lords' decease:
Yet this abundant issue seem'd to me
But hope of orphans and unfather'd fruit;
For summer and his pleasures wait on thee,
And, thou away, the very birds are mute:
Or, if they sing, 'tis with so dull a cheer
The leaves look pale, dreading the winter's near.

From you have I been absent in the spring,
When proud-pied April dress'd in all his trim,
Hath put a spirit of youth in every thing,
That heavy Saturn laugh'd and leapt with him.
Yet nor the laves of birds, nor the sweet smell
Of different flowers in odour and in hue,
Could make me any summer's story tell,
Or from their proud lap pluck them where they grew:
Nor did I wonder at the lily's white,
Nor praise the deep vermilion in the rose;
They were but sweet, but figures of delight,
Drawn after you, you pattern of all those.
Yet seem'd it winter still, and, you away,
As with your shadow I with these did play
Where art thou, Muse, that thou forget'st so long to speak of that which gives thee all thy might? For thy neglect of truth in beauty dy'd? Both truth and beauty on my love depends; So dost thou too, and therein dignified.

Make answer, Muse: wilt thou not haply say, 'Truth needs no colour, with his colour fix'd; Beauty no pencil, beauty's truth to lay; But best is best, if never intermix'd?' Because he needs no praise, wilt thou be dumb? Excuse not silence so; for 'tis lies in thee To make him much entitle a gilded tomb And to be prais'd of ages yet to be. Then do thy office, Muse; I teach thee how To make him seem long hence as he shows now.

My love is strengthen'd, though more weak in seeming; I love not less, though less the show appear; That love is merchandis'd whose rich esteeming The owner's tongue doth publish every where. Our love was new, and then but in the spring, When I was wont to greet it with my lays; As Philomel in summer's front doth sing, And stops her pipe in growth of riper days: Not that the summer is less pleasant now Than when her mournful hymns did hush the night, But that wild music burthen every bough, And sweets grown common lose their dear delight. Therefore, like her, I sometime hold my tongue, Because I would not dall you with my song.

Alack! what poverty my Muse brings forth, That having such a scope to show her pride, The argument, all bare, is of more worth Than when it hath my added praise beside. O! blame me not, if I no more can write; Look in your glass, and there appears a face That over-goes my blunt invention quite, Dulling my lines and doing me disgrace. Were it not sinful then, striving to mend, To mar the subject that before was well? For to no other pass my verses tend Than of your graces and your gifts to tell; And more, much more, than in my verse can sit, Your own glass shows you when you look in it.

To me, fair friend, you never can be old, For as you were when first your eye I eyed, Such seems your beauty still. Three winters cold Have from the forests shook three summers' pride. Three beauteous springs to yellow autumn turn'd In process of the seasons have I seen, Three April perfumes in three hot Junes burn'd, Since first I saw you fresh, which yet are green. Ah! yet doth beauty, like a dial-hand, Steal from his figure, and no pace receiv'd; So your sweet hue, which methinks still doth stand, Hath motion, and mine eye may be deceiv'd: For fear of which, hear this, thou age unbro't: Ere you were born was beauty's summer dead.

Let not my love be call'd idolatr'y, Nor my beloved as an idle show, Since all alike my songs and praises be To one, of one, still such, and ever so. Kind is my love to-day, to-morrow kind, Still constant in a wondrous excellence; Therefore my verse, to constancy confin'd, One thing expressing, leaves out difference. 'Fair, kind, and true,' is all my argument, 'Fair, kind, and true,' varying to other words; And in this change is my invention spent, Three themes in one, which wondrous scope affords. 'Fair, kind, and true,' have often liv'd alone, Which three till now never kept seat in one.

When in the chronicle of wasted time I see descriptions of the fairest wights, And beauty making beautiful old rime In praise of ladies dead and lovely knights, Then, in the blazon of sweet beauty's best, Of hand, of foot, of lip, of eye, of brow, I see their antique pen would have express'd Even such a beauty as you master now. So all their praises are but prophecies Of this our time, all you prefiguring;
And, for they look'd but with divining eyes,
They had not skill enough your worth to sing:
For we, which now behold these present
days,
Have eyes to wonder, but lack tongues to praise.

CVIII.
What's in the brain, that ink may character,
Which hath not figure'd to thee my true spirit?
What's new to speak, what new to register,
That may express my love, or thy dear merit?
Nothing, sweet boy; but yet, like prayers
divine,
I must each day say o'er the very same;
Counting no old thing old, thou mine, I thine,
Even as when first I hallow'd thy fair name.
So that eternal love in love's fresh case
Weighs not the dust and injury of age,
Nor gives to necessary wrinkles place,
But makes antiquity for aye his page;
Finding the first conceit of love there bred,
Where time and outward form would show it dead.

CIX.
O! never say that I was false of heart,
Though absence seem'd my flame to qualify.
As easy might I from myself depart
As from my soul, which in thy breast doth lie:
That is my home of love: if I have rang'd,
Like him that travels, I return again;
Just to the time, not with the time exchang'd,
So that myself bring water for my stain.
Never believe, though in my nature reign'd
All frailties that besiege all kinds of blood,
That it could so preposterously be stain'd,
To leave for nothing all thy sum of good;
For nothing this wide universe I call,
Save thou, my rose; in it thou art my all.

CX.
Alas! 'tis true I have gone here and there,
And made myself a motley to the view,
Gored mine own thoughts, sold cheap what is most dear,
Made old offences of affections new;
Most true it is that I have look'd on truth
Askeance and strangely; but, by all above,
These blenches gave my heart another youth,
And worse essays prov'd thee my best of love.
Now all is done, have what shall have no end:
Mine appetite I never more will grind
On newer proof, to try an older friend,
A god in love, to whom I am confin'd.
Then give me welcome, next my heaven the
best,
Even to thy pure and most most loving breast.

CXI.
Your love and pity doth the impression fill
Which vulgar scandal stamp'd upon my brow;
For what care I who calls me well or ill,
So you o'er-green my bad, my good allow?
You are my all the world, and I must strive
To know my shames and praises from your
tongue;
None else to me, nor I to none alive,
That my steel'd sense or changes right or wrong.
In so profound abyss I throw all care
Of others' voices, that my adder's sense
To critic and to flatterer stopped are.
Mark how with my neglect I do dispense:
You are so strongly in my purpose bred
That all the world besides methinks they're dead.

CXII.
Since I left you mine eye is in my mind,
And that which governs me to go about
Doth part his function and is partly blind,
Seems seeing, but effectually is out;
For it no form delivers to the heart
Of bird, of flower, or shape, which it doth latch
Of his quick objects hath the mind no part,
Nor his own vision holds what it doth catch;
For if it see the rad'rt or gentlest sight,
The most sweet favour or deformed'st creature
The mountain or the sea, the day or night,
The crow or dove, it shapes them to your features:
Incapable of more, replete with you,
My most true mind thus maketh mine untrue.

CXIII.
On whether doth my mind, being crown'd with
you,
Drink up the monarch's plague, this flattery?
Or whether shall I say, mine eye saith true,
And that your love taught it this alchemy,
To make of monsters and things indigest
Such cherubins as your sweet self resemble,
Creating every bad a perfect best,
As fast as objects to his beams assemble?
O! 'tis the first; 'tis flattery in my seeing,
And my great mind most kindly drinks it up:

CXIV.
SONNETS.

CXXI.

I

and to his palate doth prepare the cup:
If it be poison'd, 'tis the lesser sin.
That mine eye loves it and doth first begin.

CXV.

Those lines that I before have writ do lie,
Even those that said I could not love you dearer:
Yet then my judgment knew no reason why
My most full flame should afterwards burn clearer.
But reckoning Time, whose million'd accidents
Creep in 'twixt vows, and change decrees of kings,
Fan sacred beauty, blunt the sharpest intents,
Divert strong minds to the course of altering things;
Alas! why, fearing of Time's tyranny,
Might I not then say 'Now I love you best,'
When I was certain o'er incertainty,
Crowning the present, doubting of the rest?
Love is a babe; then might I not say so,
To give full growth to that which still doth grow?

CXVI.

Let me not to the marriage of true minds
Admit impediments. Love is not love
Which alters when it alteration finds,
Or bends with the remover to remove: O, no! it is an ever-fixed mark,
That looks on tempests and is never shaken;
It is the star to every wandering bark, Whose worth's unknown, although his height be taken.
Love's not Time's fool, though rosy lips and cheeks
Within his bending sickle's compass come;
Love alters not with his brief hours and weeks,
But bears it out even to the edge of doom.
If this be error and upon me prov'd,
I never writ, nor no man ever lov'd.

CXVII.

Accuse me thus: that I have scented all
Wherein I should your great deserts repay,
Forgot upon your dearest love to call,
Whereeto all bonds do tie me day by day;
That I have frequent been with unknown minds,
And giv'n to time your own dear-purchas'd right;
That I have hoisted sail to all the winds
Which should transport me furthest from your sight.
Book both my wilfulness and errors down,
And on just proof surmise accumulate;
Bring me within the level of your frown,
But shoot not at me in your waken'd hate;
Since my appeal says I did strive to prove
The constancy and virtue of your love.

CXVIII.

Like as, to make our appetites more keen,
With eager compounds we our palate urge;
As, to prevent our maladies unseen,
We sicken to shun sickness when we purge;
Even so, being full of your ne'er-cloying sweet-

Even so, being full of your ne'er-cloying sweet-

To bitter sauces did I frame my feeding;
And sick of welfare found a kind of meetness
To be diseas'd, ere that there was true need-

Thus policy in love, to anticipate
The ills that were not, grew to faults assur'd,
And brought to medicine a healthful state,
Which, rank of goodness, would by ill be cur'd:
But thence I learn, and find the lesson true,
Drugs poison him that so fell sick of you.

CXIX.

What potions have I drunk of Siren tears,
Distill'd from limbeck's foul as hell within,
Applying fears to hopes and hopes to fears,
Still losing when I saw myself to win!
What wretched errors hath my heart committed,
Whilst it hath thought itself so blessed never!
How have mine eyes out of their spheres been fitted,
In the distraction of this maddening fever!
O benefit of ill! now I find true
That better is by evil still made better;
And ruin'd love, when it is built anew,
Grows fairer than at first, more strong, far greater.
So I return rebuk'd to my content,
And gain by ills thrice more than I have spent.

CXX.

That you were once unkind befriended me now,
And for that sorrow which I then did feel
Needs must i under my transgression bow,
Unless my nerves were brass or hammer'd steel.
For if you were by my unkindness shaken,
As I by yours, you've pass'd a hell of time;
And I, a tyrant, have no leisure taken
To weigh how once I suffer'd in your crime.
O! that our night of woe might have remember'd
My deepest sense, how hard true sorrow hits,
And soon to you, as you to me, then tender'd
The humble salve which wounded bosoms fits:
But that your trespass now becomes a fee;
Mine ransoms yours, and yours must ransom me.

CXXI.

'Tis better to be vile than vile esteem'd,
When not to be receives reproach of being;
And the just pleasure lost, which is so deem'd
Not by our feeling, but by others' seeing:
For why should others' false adulterate eyes
Give salutation to my sportive blood?
Or on my frailties why are trailer spies,
Which in their wills count bad what I think good?
No, I am that I am, and they that level
At my abuses reckon up their own:
SONNETS.

CXXV.

I may be straight, though they themselves be bevel;
By their rank thoughts my deeds must not be shown;
Unless this general evil they maintain,
All men are bad and in their badness reign.

CXXIII.

Thy gift, thy tables, are within my brain
Full character’d with lasting memory,
Which shall above that idle rank remain,
Beyond all date, even to eternity:
Or, at the least, so long as brain and heart
Have faculty by nature to subsist;
Till each to raz’d oblivion yield his part
Of thee, thy record never can be miss’d.
That poor retention could not so much hold,
Nor need I tallies thy dear love to score;
Therefore to give them from me was I bold,
To trust those tables that receive thee more:
To keep an adjunct to remember thee
Were to import forgetfulness in me.

CXXVIII.

No, let me be obsequious in thy heart,
And take thou my oblation, poor but free,
Which is not mix’d with seconds, knows no art
But mutual render, only me for thee.
Hence, thou suborn’d informer! a true soul
When most impeach’d stands least in thy control.

CXXVI.

O thou, my lovely boy, who in thy power
Dost hold Time’s fickle glass, his sickle, hour;
Who hast by waing grown, and therein show’st
Thy lovers withering as thy sweet self grow’st;
If Nature, sovereign mistress over wrack,
As thou go’st onwards, still will pluck thee back,
She keeps thee to this purpose, that her skill
May time disgrace and wretched minutes kill.
Yet fear her, O thou minion of her pleasure!
She may detain, but not still keep, her treasure;
Her audit, though delay’d, answer’d must be,
And her quietus is to render thee.

CXXVII.

In the old age black was not counted fair,
Or if it were, it bore not beauty’s name;
But now is black beauty’s successive heir,
And beauty slander’d with a bastard shame:
For since each hand hath put on nature’s power,
Fairing the soul with art’s false borrow’d face,
Sweet beauty hath no name, no holy bower,
But is profan’d, if not lives in disgrace.
Therefore my mistress’ eyes are raven black,
Her eyes so suited, and they mourners seem,
At such who, not born fair, no beauty lack,
Sland’ring creation with a false esteem:
Yet so they mourn, becoming of their woe,
That every tongue says beauty should look so.

CXXIX.

How oft, when thou, my music, music play’st
Upon that blessed wood whose motion sounds
With thy sweet fingers, when thou gently sway’st
The wavy concord that mine ear confounds,
Do I envy those jacks that nimble leap
To kiss the tender inward of thy hand,
Whilst my poor lips, which should that harvest reap,
At the wood’s boldness by thee blushing stand!
To be so tickl’d, they would change their state
And situation with those dancing chips,
O’er whom thy fingers walk with gentle gait,
Making dead wood more bless’d than living lips.
Since saucy jacks so happy are in this,
Give them thy fingers, me thy lips to kiss.

CXXIV.

If my dear love were but the child of state,
It might for Fortune’s bastard be unfather’d,
As subject to Time’s love or to Time’s hate,
Weeds among weeds, or flowers with flowers garner’d.
No, it was builded far from accident;
It suffers not in smiling pining, nor falls
Under the blow of thrall’d discontent,
Where’er the inviting time our fashion calls:
It fears not policy, that heretic,
Which works on leases of short number’d hours,
But all alone stands hugely politic,
That it nor grows with heat nor drowns with showers.
To this I witness call the fools of time,
Which die for goodness, who have liv’d for crime.

CXXV.

Wanted’st me to me I bore the canopy,
With my extern the outward honouring,
Or laid great bases for eternity,
Which prove more short than waste or ruining?
Have I not seen dwellers on form and favour
Lose all, and more, by paying too much rent,
For compound sweet foregoing simple savour,
Pitiful thrivers, in their gazing spent?
SONNETS.

CXXX.

My mistress' eyes are nothing like the sun;
Coral is far more red than her lips' red;
If snow be white, why then her breasts are dun;
If hairs be wires, black wires grow on her head.
I have seen roses damask'd, red and white,
But no such roses see I in her cheeks;
And in some perfumes is there more delight
Than in the breath that from my mistress reeks.
I love to hear her speak, yet well I know
That music hath a far more pleasing sound:
I grant I never saw a goddess go,
My mistress, when she walks, treads on the ground:
And yet, by heaven, I think my love as rare
As any she belied with false compare.

CXXXI.

Thou art as tyrannous, so as thou art,
As those whose beauties proudly make them cruel;
For well thou know'st to my dear doting heart
Thou art the fairest and most precious jewel.
Yet, in good faith, some say that thee behold,
Thy face hath not the power to make love groan:
To say they err I dare not be so bold,
Although I swear it to myself alone.
And to be sure that is not false I swear,
A thousand groans, but thinking on thy face,
One on another's neck, do witness bear
Thy black is fairest in my judgment's place.
In nothing art thou black save in thy deeds,
And thence this slander, as I think, proceeds.

CXXXII.

Thine eyes I love, and they, as pitying me,
Knowing thy heart torments me with disdain,
Have put on black and loving mourners be,
Looking with pretty ruth upon my pain.
And truly not the morning sun of heaven
Better becomes the gray cheeks of the east,
Nor that full star that ushers in the even Doth half that glory to the sober west,
As those two mourning eyes become thy face:
O! let it then as well beseech thy heart
To mourn for me, since mourning doth thee grace,
And suit thy pity like in every part.
Then will I swear beauty herself is black,
And all they foul that thy complexion lack.

CXXXIII.

Beshrew that heart that makes my heart to groan
For that deep wound it gives my friend and me!
Is't not enough to torture me alone,
But slave to slavery my sweet'st friend must be!

Me from myself thy cruel eye hath taken,
And my next self thou harder hast engross'd:
Of him, myself, and thee. I am forsaken;
A torment thrice threefold thus to be cross'd:
Prison my heart in thy steel bosom's ward,
But then my friend's heart let my poor heart ball;
Woo'er keeps me, let my heart be his guard;
Thou canst not then use rigour in my gaol;
And yet thou wilt; for I, being pent in thee,
Perforce am thine, and all that is in me.

CXXXIV.

So, now I have confess'd that he is thine,
And I myself am mortgag'd to thy will,
Myself I'll forfeit, so that other mine
Thou wilt restore, to be my comfort still:
But thou wilt not, nor he will not be free,
For thou art covetous and he is kind;
He learn'd but surety-like to write for me,
Under that bond that him as fast doth bind.
The statue of thy beauty thou wilt take,
Thou usurer, that put'st forth all to use,
And sue a friend came debtor for my sake;
So him I lose through my unkind abuse.
Him have I lost; thou hast both him and me:
He pays the whole, and yet am I not free.

CXXXV.

Whoever hath her wish, thou hast thy Will,
And Will to boot, and Will in overplus;
More than enough am I that vex thee still,
To thy sweet will making addition thus:
Wilt thou, whose will is large and spacious,
Not once vouchsafe to hide my will in thine?
Shall will in others seem right gracious,
And in my will no fair acceptance shine?
The sea, all water, yet receives rain still,
And in abundance addeth to his store:
So thou, being rich in Will, add to thy Will
One will of mine, to make thy large Will more.
Let no unkind, no fair beseechers kill;
Think all but one, and me in that one Will.

CXXXVI.

If thy soul check thee that I come so near,
Swear to thy blind soul that I was thy Will,
And will, thy soul knows, is admitted there;
Thus far for love, my love-suit, sweet, fulfil.
Will will fulfil the treasure of thy love,
Ay, fill it full with wills, and my will one.
In things of great receipt with ease we prove
Among a number one is reckon'd none:
Then in the number let me pass untold,
Though in thy store's account I one must be;
For nothing hold me, so it please thee hold
That nothing me, a something sweet to thee:
Make but my name thy love, and love that still,
And then thou lov'st me, for my name is Will.

CXXXVII.

Thou blind fool, Love, what dost thou to mine eyes,
That they behold, and see not what they see?
They know what beauty is, see where it lies,
Yet what the best is take the worst to be.
If eyes, corrupt by over-partial looks,
Be anchor’d in the bay where all men ride,
Why of eyes’ falsehood hast thou forged hooks,
Where to the judgment of my heart is tied?
Why should my heart think that a several plot
Which my heart knows the wide world’s common place?
Or mine eyes seeing this, say this is not,
To put fair truth upon so foul a face?
In thing might true my heart and eyes have err’d,
And to this false plague are they now transferred.

CXXXVIII.

When my love swears that she is made of truth,
I do believe her, though I know she lies,
That she might think me some untutor’d youth,
Unlearned in the world’s false subtilities.
Thus vainly thinking that she thinks me young,
Although she knows my days are past the best,
Simply I credit her false-speaking tongue:
On both sides thus is simple truth suppress’d,
But wherefore says she not she is unjust?
And wherefore say not I that I am old?
O! love’s best habit is in seeming trust,
And age in love loves not to have years told:
Therefore I lie with her, and she with me,
And in our faults by lies we flatter’d be.

CXXXIX.

O! call not me to justify the wrong
That thy unkindness lays upon my heart;
Wound me not with thine eye, but with thy tongue;
Use power with power, and slay me not by art.
Tell me thou lov’st elsewhere; but in my sight,
Dear heart, forbear to glance thine eye aside:
What need’st thou wound with cunning, when
Thy pretty looks have been mine enemies;
And therefore from my face she turns my foes,
That they elsewhere might dart their injuries:
Yet do not so; but since I am near slain,
Kill me outright with looks, and rid my pain.

CXL.

Be wise as thou art cruel; do not press
My tongue-tied patience with too much disdain;
Lest sorrow lend me words, and words express
The manner of my pity-wanting pain.
If I might teach thee wit, better it were,
Though not to love, yet, love, to tell me so;
As testy sick men, when their deaths be near,
No news but health from their physicians know;
For, if I should despair, I should grow mad,
And in my madness might speak ill of thee:
Now this ill-wrestling world is grown so bad,
Mad slanderers by mad ears believed be.
That I may not be so, nor thou belf’d,
Bear thine eyes straight, though thy proud heart go wide.

CXL.

In faith, I do not love thee with mine eyes,
For they in thee a thousand errors note;
But ’tis my heart that loves what they despise,
Who, in despite of view, is pleas’d to dote;
Nor are mine ears with thy tongue’s tune delighted;
Nor tender feeling, to base touches prone,
Nor taste, nor smell, desire to be invited
To any sensual feast with thee alone:
But my five wits nor my five senses can
Disuade one foolish heart from serving thee,
Who leaves unwary’d the likeness of a man,
Thy proud heart’s slave and vassal wretch to be:
Only my plague thus far I count my gain,
That she that makes me sin awards me pain.

CXLII.

Love is my sin, and thy dear virtue hate,
Hate of my sin, grounded on sinful loving:
O! but with mine compare thou thine own state,
And thou shalt find it merits not reproving;
Or, if it do, not from those lips of thine,
That have profan’d their scarlet ornaments
And seal’d false bonds of love as oft as mine,
Robb’d others’ beds’ revenues of their rents.
Be it lawful I love thee, as thou lov’st those Whom thine eyes woo as mine importune thee:
Root pity in thy heart, that, when it grows,
Thy pity may deserve to pitied be.
If thou dost seek to have what thou dost hide,
By self-example may’st thou be denied!

CXLIII.

Lo, as a careful housewife runs to catch
One of her feather’d creatures broke away,
Sets down her babe, and makes all swift dispatch
In pursuit of the thing she would have stay;
Whilst her neglected child holds her in chase,
Cries to catch her whose busy care is bent
To follow that which flies before her face,
Not pricing her poor infant’s discontent:
So runn’st thou after that which flies from thee,
Whilst I thy babe chase thee afar behind;
But if thou catch thy hope, turn back to me,
And play the mother’s part, kiss me, be kind:
So will I pray that thou may’st have thy Will,
If thou turn back and my loud crying still.

CXLIV.

Two loves I have of comfort and despair,
Which like two spirits do suggest me still:
The better angel is a man, right fair,
The worser spirit a woman, colour’d ill.
To win me soon to hell, my female evil
Tempteth my better angel from my side,
And would corrupt my saint to be a devil,
Wooing his purity with her foul pride.
And whether that my angel be turn’d fiend
Suspect I may, yet not directly tell;
But being both from me, both to each friend,
I guess one angel in another’s hell:
Yet this shall I ne’er know, but live in doubt,
Till my bad angel fire my good one out.
SONNETS.

CXLV.
Those lips that Love's own hand did make,
Breath'd forth the sound that said 'I hate,'
'Fo me that languish'd for her sake;
But when she saw my woeful state,
Straight in her heart did mercy come,
Chiding that tongue that ever sweet
Was us'd in giving gentle doon;
And taught it thus anew to speak;
'That hate' she alter'd with an end,
That follow'd it as gentle day
Doth follow night, who, like a fiend,
From heaven to hell is flown away;
'That hate' from hate away she threw,
And sav'd my life, saying 'Not you.'

CXLVI.
Poor soul, the centre of my sinful earth,
Press'd by these rebel powers that thee array,
Why dost thou pine within and suffer death,
Painting thy outward walls so costly gay?
Why so large cost, having so short a lease,
Dost thou upon thy labours thus spend life?
Shall worms, inheritors of this excess,
Eat up thy charge? Is this thy body's end?
Then, soul, live thou upon thy servant's loss,
And let that pine to aggravate thy store;
Buy terms divine in selling hours of dross;
Within be fed, without be rich no more:
So shalt thou feed on Death, that feeds on men,
And Death once dead, there's no more dying then.

CXLVII.
My love is as a fever, long'ning still
For that which longer nurseth the disease;
Feeding on that which doth preserve the ill,
The uncertain sickly appetite to please.
My reason, the physician to my love,
Angry that his prescriptions are not kept,
Hath left me, and I desperate now approve;
Desire is death, which physic did except.
Past cure I am, now reason is past care,
And frantic-mad with evermore unrest;
My thoughts and my discourse as madmen's are,
At random from the truth, vainly express'd;
For I have sworn thee fair, and thought thee bright,
Who art as black as hell, as dark as night.

CXLVIII.
O me! what eyes hath Love put in my head,
Which have no correspondence with true sight;
Or, if they have, where is my judgment fled,
That censures falsely what they see aright?
If that be fair whereof my false eyes dote,
What means the world to say it is not so?
If it be not, then love doth well denote
Love's eye is not so true as all men's: no,
How can it? O! how can Love's eye be true,
That is so vex'd with watching and with tears?
No marvel then, though I mistake my view;
The sun itself sees not till heaven clears.
O cunning Love! with tears thou keep'st me blind,
Lest eyes well-seeing thy foul faults should find.

CXLIX.
Const thou, O cruel! say I love thee not,
When I against myself with thee partake?
Do I not think on thee, when I forget
Am of myself, all tyrant, for thy sake?
Who hateth thee that I do call my friend?
On whom frown'st thou that I do fawn upon?
Nay, if thou lour'st on me, do I not spend Revenge upon myself with present moan?
What merit do I in myself respect,
That is so proud thy service to despise,
When all my best doth worship thy defect,
Commanded by the motion of thine eyes?
But, love, hate on, for now I know thy mind;
Those that can see thou lov'st, and I am blind.

CL.
O! from what power last thou this powerful night
With insufficiency my heart to sway?
To make me give the lie to true sight,
And swear that brightness doth not grace the day?
Whence hast thou this becoming of things ill,
That in the very refuse of thy deeds
There is such strength and warrantise of skill,
That, in my mind, thy worst all best exceeds?
Who taught thee how to make me love thee more,
The more I hear and see just cause of hate?
O! though I love what others do abhor,
With others thou should'st not abhor my state:
If thy unworthiness rais'd love in me,
More worthy I to be belov'd of thee.

CLI.
Love is too young to know what conscience is;
Yet who knows not conscience is born of love?
Then, gentle cheater, urge not my amiss,
Lest guilty of my faults thy sweet self prove;
For, thou betraying me, I do betray
My nobler part to my gross body's treason;
My soul doth tell my body that he may Triumph in love; flesh stays no further reason,
But rising at thy name doth point out thee
As his triumphant prize. Proud of this pride,
He is contented thy poor drudge to be,
To stand in thy affairs, fall by thy side.
No want of conscience hold it that I call
Her 'love' for whose dear love I rise and fall.

CLII.
In loving thee thou know'st I am forsworn,
But thou art twice forsworn, to me love swearing;
In act thy bed-vow broke, and new faith torn,
In vowing new hate after new love bearing,
But why of two oaths' breach do I accuse thee,
When I break twenty? I am perjur'd most;
For all my vows are oaths but to misuse thee,
And all my honest faith in thee is lost;
For I have sworn deep oaths of thy deep kindness,
Oaths of thy love, thy truth, thy constancy;
And, to enlighten thee, gave eyes to blindness,
Or made them swear against the thing they see;
For I have sworn thee fair; more perjur'd I,
To swear against the truth so foul a lie!
CLIII.

Cupid laid by his hand and fell asleep;
A maid of Dan's this advantage found,
And her love-kindling fire did quickly steep
In a cold valley-fountain of that ground;
Which borrow'd from this holy fire of Love
A dateless lively heat, still to endure,
And grew a seething bath, which yet men prove Against strange maladies a sovereign cure.

But at my mistress' eye Love's brand new-fir'd,
The boy for trial needs would touch my breast;
I, sick withal, the help of bath desir'd,
And thither hied, a sad dismester'd guest,
But found no cure: the bath for my help lies.

Where Cupid got new fire, my mistress' eyes.

A LOVER'S COMPLAINT.

From off a hill whose concave womb re-worded
A plaintive story from a sistering vale,
My spirits to attend this double voice accorded,
And down I laid to list the sad-tun'd tale;
Ere long espied a fickle maid full pale,
Tearing of papers, breaking rings a-twain,
Storming her world with sorrow's wind and rain.

Upon her head a platted hive of straw,
Which fortified her visage from the sun,
Whereon the thought might think sometime it saw
The carcass of a beauty spent and done:
Time had not scythed all that youth begun,
Nor youth all quit; but, spite of heaven's fell rage,
Some beauty peep'd through lattice of sarc'd age.

Oft did she heave her napkin to her eyene,
Which on it had conceited characters,
Lauding the silken figures in the brine
That season'd woe had pelleted in tears,
And often reading what content it bears;
As often shrieking undistinguish'd woe
In clamours of all size, both high and low.

Sometimes her levell'd eyes their carriage ride,
As they did battery to the spheres intend;
Sometime, diverted, their poor balls are tied
To the orb'd earth; sometimes they do extend
Their view right on; anon their gazes lend
To every place at once, and nowhere fix'd,
The mind and sight distractedly commix'd.

Her hair, nor loose nor tied in formal plat,
Proclaim'd in her a careless hand of pride;
For some, untuck'd, descended her sheev'd hat,
Hanging her pale and pined cheek beside;

Some in her threaden fillet still did bide,
And true to bondage would not break from thence
Though shuckly braided in loose negligence.

A thousand favours from a maund she drew
Of amber, crystal, and of beaded jet,
Which one by one she in a river threw,
Upon whose weeping margin she was set;
Like usury, applying wet to wet,
Or monarchs' hands that let not bounty fall
Where want cries some, but where excess begs all.

Of folded schedules had she many a one,
Which she perus'd, sigh'd, tore, and gave the flood;
Crack'd many a ring of posied gold and bone,
Bidding them find their sepulchres in mud;
Found yet more letters sadly penn'd in blood,
With sleeled silk feat and affectedly
Ensawth'd, and seal'd to curious secrecy.

These often bath'd she in her fluxive eyes,
And often kiss'd, and often 'gan to tear;
Cried 'Of false blood! thou register of lies,
What unapproved witness dost thou bear;
Ink would have seem'd more black and damned here.'
This said, in top of rage the lines she rents,
Big discontent so breaking their contents.

A reverend man that graz'd his cattle high,
Sometimes a blusterer, that the ruffle knew
Of court, of city, and had let go by
The swiftest hours, observed as they flew,
Towards this afflicted fancy fastly drew;
And, privileged by age, desires to know
In brief the grounds and motives of her woe.
So slides he down upon his grained bat,
And comely-distant sits he by her side;
When he again desires her, being sat,
Her grievance with his hearing to divide:
If that from him there may be aught applied
Which may her suffering ecstasy assuage,
'Tis promis'd in the charity of age.

'Father,' she says, 'though in me you behold
The injury of many a blasting hour,
Let it not tell your judgment I am old;
Not age, but sorrow, over me hath power:
I might as yet have been a spreading flower,
Fresh to myself, if I had self-applied
Love to myself and to no love beside.

'But woe is me! too early I attended
A youthful suit, it was to gain my grace,
Of one by nature's outwards so commended,
That maidens' eyes stuck over all his face.
Love lack'd a dwelling, and made him her place;
And when in his fair parts she did abide,
She was new lodg'd and newly defined.

'His browny locks did hang in crooked curls,
And every light occasion of the wind:
Upon his lips their silken parcels hurl.
What's sweet to do, to do will aptly find:
Each eye that saw him did enchant the mind,
For on his visage was in little drawn
What largeness thinks in Paradise was sawn.

'Small show of man was yet upon his chin;
His phoenix down began to appear
Like unshorn velvet on that tallow skin.
Whose bare out-brag'd the web it seemed to wear;
Yet show'd his visage by that cost more dear,
And nice affections waiving stood in doubt
If best were as it was, or best without.

'His qualities were beantious as his form,
For maiden-tongued he was, and thereof free;
Yet, if men mov'd him, was he such a storm
As oft'twixt May and April is to see,
When winds breathe sweet, unruly though they be.
His rudeness so with his authoriz'd youth
Did livery falseness in a pride of truth.

'Well could he ride, and often men would say
"That horse his mettle from his rider takes:
Proud of subjection, noble by the way,
What rounds, what bounds, what course, what stop he makes!"
And controversy hence a question takes,
Whether the horse by him became his deed,
Or he his manage by the well-doing steed.

'But quickly on this side the verdict went:
His real habitude gave life and grace
To appartainings and to ornament,
Accomplisht' in himself, not in his case:
All aids, themselves made fairer by their place,
Came for additions; yet their purpos'd trim
Piece'd not his grace, but were all grac'd by him.

'So on the tip of his subduing tongue
All kind of arguments and question deep,
All replication prompt, and reason strong.
For his advantage still did wake and sleep:
To make the weeper laugh, the laugher weep,
He had the dialect and different skill,
Catching all passions in his craft of will:

'That he did in the general bosom reign
Of young, of old; and sexes both enchanted,
To dwell with him in thoughts, or to remain
In personal duty, following where he haunts:
Consents bewitch'd, ere he desire, have granted;
And dialogu'd for him what he would say,
Ask'd their own wills, and made their wills obey.

'Many there were that did his picture get,
To serve their eyes, and in it put their mind;
Like fools that in the imagination set
The goodly objects which abroad they find
Of lands and mansions, theirs in thought assign'd;
And labouuring in more pleasures to bestow
Than the true gouty landlord which doth owe them.

'So many have, that never touch'd his hand,
Sweetly suppos'd them mistress of his heart.
My woeful self, that did in freedom stand,
And was my own fee-simple, not in part,
What with his art in youth, and youth in art,
Threw my affections in his charmed power,
Reserv'd the stalk and gave him all my flower.

'Yet did I not, as some my equals did,
Demand of him, nor being desire'd yielded;
Finding myself in honour so forbid,
With safest distance I mine honour shielded.
Experience for me many bulwarks builded
Of proofs new-bleeding, which remain'd the foil
Of this false jewel, and his amorous spoil.

'But, ah! who ever shunn'd by precedent
The destin'd ill she must herself assay?
Or forc'd examples, 'gainst her own content,
To put the by-pass'd perils in her way?
Counsel may stop awhile what will not stay;
For when we rage, advice is often seen
By blunting us to make our wits more keen.

'Nor gives it satisfaction to our blood,
That we must curb it upon others' proof;
To be forbid the sweets that seem so good,
For fear of harms that preach in our behalf.
O appetite! from judgment stand aloof;
The one a palate hath that needs will taste,
Though Reason weep, and cry "It is thy last."

'For further I could say "This man's untrue,
And knew the patterns of his foul beguiling;
Heard where his plants in others' orchards grew,
Saw how deceits were gilded in his smiling;
Knew vows were ever brokers to faking;
Thought characters and words merely but art,
And bastards of his foul adulterate heart.
A LOVER’S COMPLAINT.

‘And long upon these terms I held my city,
Till thus he 'gan besiege me: “Gentle maid,
Have of my suffering youth some feeling pity,
And be not of my holy vows afraid:
That's to ye sworn to none was ever said;
For feasts of love I have been call'd unto,
Till now did ne'er invite, nor never woo.

‘All my offences that abroad you see
Are errors of the blood, none of the mind;
Love made them not: with acture they may be,
Where neither party is nor true nor kind:
They sought their shame that so their shame did find,
And so much less of shame in me remains,
By how much of me their reproach contains.

‘Among the many that mine eyes have seen,
Not one whose flame my heart so much as waru'd,
Or my affection put to the smallest teen,
Or any of my pleasures ever charm'd:
Harm have I done to them, but ne'er was harm'd;
Kept hearts in liveries, but mine own was free,
And reign'd, commanding in his monarchy.

‘Look here, what tributes wounded fancies sent me,
Of pale pearls and rubies red as blood;
Figuring that their passions likewise lent
me
Of grief and blushes, aptly understood
In bloodless white and the encrimson'd mood;
Effects of terror and dear modesty,
Encamp'd in hearts, but fighting outwardly.

‘And, lo! behold these talents of their hair,
With twisted metal amorously impalest,
I have receiv'd from many a several fair,
Their kind acceptance weepingly beseech'd,
With the annexions of fair gems enrich'd,
And deep-brain'd sonnets, that did amplify
Each stone's dear nature, worth, and quality.

‘The diamond; why, 'twas beautiful and hard,
Where to his invis'd properties did tend;
The deep-green emerald, in whose fresh regard
Weak sighs their sickly radiance do amend;
The heaven-hued sapphire and the opal blend
With objects manifold: each several stone,
With wit well blazon'd, smil'd or made some mourn.

‘Lo! all these trophies of affections hot,
Of sensibl'd and subdued desires the tender,
Nature hath charg'd me that I heard them not,
But yield them up where I myself must render,
That is, to you, my origin and ender;
For these, of force, must your oblations be,
Since I their altar, you enpatron me.

‘O! then, advance of yours that phraseless
hand,
Whose white weighs down the airy scale of praise;
Take all these similes to your own command,
Hallow'd with sighs that burning lungs did raise;

What me your minister, for you obeys,
Works under you; and to your audit comes
Their distract parcels in combined sums.

‘Lo! this device was sent me from a nun,
Or sister sanctified, of holiest note;
Which late her noble suit in court did shun,
Whose rarest havings made the blossoms dote;
For she was sought by spirits of richest coat,
But kept cold distance, and did thence remove,
To spend her living in eternal love.

‘But, O my sweet! what labour's t't leave
The thing we have not, mastering what not strives,
Paling the place which did no form receive,
Playing patient sports in unconstrained gyves?
She that her fame so to herself contrives,
The scars of battle 'scapeth by the flight,
And makes her absence valiant, not her might.

‘O! pardon me, in that my boast is true;
The accident which brought me to her eye
Upon the moment did her force subdue,
And now she would the caged cloister fly;
Religious love put out religion's eye;
Not to be tempted, would she be immur'd,
And now, to tempt, all liberty procur'd.

‘How mighty then you are, O! hear me tell:
The broken bosoms that to me belong
Have emptied all their fountains in my well,
And mine I pour your ocean all among:
I strong o'er them, and you o'er me being strong,
Must for your victory us all congest,
As compound love to physic your cold breast.

‘My parts had power to charm a sacred nun,
Who, disciplin'd, ay, dictated in grace,
Believ'd her eyes when they to assured began,
All vows and consecrations giving place,
O most potential love! vow, bond, nor space,
In thee hath neither sting, knot, nor confine,
For thou art all, and all things else are thine.

‘When thou impressest, what are precepts
worth
Of stale example? When thou wilt inflame,
How coldly those impediments stand forth
Of wealth, of filial fear, law, kindred, fame!
Love's arms are peace, 'gainst rule, 'gainst sense,
'gainst shame,
And sweetens, in the suffering pants it bears,
The alos of all forces, shocks, and fears.

‘Now all these hearts that do on mine depend,
Feeling it break, with bleeding groans they pine;
And suppliant their sighs to you extend,
To leave the battery that you made 'gainst mine,
Lending soft audience to my sweet design,
And credent soul to that strong-bonded oath
That shall prefer and undertake my truth.

‘This said, his watery eyes he did dismount,
Whose sights till then were level'd on my face;
Each cheek a river running from a font
With brinish current downward flow'd apace.
O! how the channel to the stream gave grace;
Who gaz'd with crystal gate the glowing roses
That flame through water which their hue encloses.
A LOVER'S COMPLAINT.

O father! what a hell of witchcraft lies in the small orb of one particular tear, but with the inundation of the eyes What rocky heart to water will not wear? What breast so cold that is not warmed here? d cleft effect! cold modesty, hot wrath, both fire from hence and chill extinture hath.

For, lo! his passion, but an art of craft, Even there resolv'd my reason into tears; There my white stole of chastity I affidavit, shook off my sober guards and civil fears; And to him, as he to me appears, All melting; though our drops this difference bore, His poison'd me, and mine did him restore.

In him a plenitude of subtle matter, Applied to cautels, all strange forms receives, Of burning blushes, or of weeping water, Or swounding paleness; and he takes and leaves, In every aptness, as it best deceives, To blush at speeches rank, to weep at woes, Or to turn white and swoon at tragic shows:

That not a heart which in his level came Could 'scape the hail of his all-hurting aim, Shewing fair nature is both kind and tame; And, veil'd in them, did win whom he would main: Against the thing he sought he would exclaim: When he most burn'd in heart-wish'd luxury, He preach'd pure maid, and prais'd cold chastity.

Thus merely with the garment of a Grace The naked and concealed fiend he cover'd; That the unexperient gave the temperet place, Which like a cherubin above them hover'd. Who, young and simple, would not be so lover'd? Ay me! I fell; and yet do question make What should I do again for such a sake.

O! that infected moisture of his eye, O! that false fire which in his cheek so glow'd, O! that foro'd thunder from his heart did fly, O! that sad breath his spongy lungs bestow'd, O! all that borrow'd motion seeming ow'd, Would yet again betray the fore-betray'd, And new pervert a reconciled maid.'

THE PASSIONATE PILGRIM.

I.

When my love swears that she is made of truth, I do believe her, though I know she lies, That she might think me some untutor'd youth, Unskilful in the world's false forgeries. Thus vainly thinking that she thinks me young, Although I know my years be past the best, I smiling credit her false-speaking tongue, Outfacing faults in love with love's ill rest. But wherefore says my love that she is young? And wherefore say not I that I am old? O! love's best habit is a soothing tongue, And age, in love, loves not to have years told. Therefore I'll lie with love, and love with me, Since that our faults in love thus smoother'd be.

II.

Two loves I have of comfort and despair, Which like two spirits do suggest me still; The better angel is a man, right fair, The worser spirit a woman, colour'd ill. To win me soon to hell, my female evil Tempteth my better angel from my side, And would corrupt a saint to be a devil, Wooling his purity with her fair pride; And whether that my angel be turn'd fiend Suspect I may, but not directly tell;

For being both to me, both to each friend, I guess one angel in another's hell. The truth I shall not know, but live in doubt, Till my bad angel fire my good one out.

III.

Did not the heavenly rhetoric of thine eye, 'Gainst whom the world could not hold argu- ment, Persuade my heart to this false perjury? Vows for thee broke deserve not punishment. A woman I forswore; but I will prove, Thou being a goddess, I forswore not thee: My vow was earthly, thou a heavenly love; Thy grace being gain'd eues all disgrace in me. My vow was breath, and breath a vapour is; Then thou, fair son, that on this earth dost shine, Exhale this vapour vow; in thee it is: If broken, then it is no fault of mine. If by me broke, what fool is not so wise To break an oath, to win a paradise?

IV.

Sweet Cytherea, sitting by a brook With young Adonis, lovely, fresh, and green, Did court the lad with many a lovely look, Such looks as none could look but beauty's queen.
She told him stories to delight his ear;
She show'd him favours to allure his eye;
To win his heart, she touch'd him here and there:
Toches so soft still conquer chastity.
But whether unripen years did want conceit,
Or he refus'd to take her figur'd proffer,
The tender nibbler would not touch the bait,
But smile and jest at every gentle offer:
Then fell she on her back, fair queen, and toward:
He rose and ran away; ah! fool too froward.

V.
If love make me forsworn, how shall I swear to love?
O! never could faith hold, if not to beauty vow'd:
Though to myself forsworn, to thee I'll constant prove;
Those thoughts, to me like oaks, to thee like osiers bow'd.
Study his bias leaves, and makes his book thine eyes,
Where all those pleasures live that art can comprehend.
If knowledge be the mark, to know thee shall suffice;
Well learned is that tongue that well can thee commend;
All ignorant that soul that sees thee without wonder;
Which is to me some praise, that I thy parts admire:
Thine eye Jove's lightning seems, thy voice his dreadful thunder,
Which, not to anger bent, is music and sweet fire.
Celestial as thou art, O! do not love that wrong.
To sing heaven's praise with such an earthly tongue.

VI.
Scarce had the sun dried up the dewy morn,
And scarce the herd gone to the hedge for shade,
When Cytherea, all in love forlorn,
A longing tarriance for Adonis made
Under an osier growing by a brook,
A brook where Adon us'd to cool his spleen:
Hot was the day; she hotter that did look
For his approach, that often there had been.
Anon he comes, and throws his mantle by,
And stood stark naked on the brook's green brim:
The sun look'd on the world with glorious eye,
Yet not so wistly as this queen on him:
He, spying her, bounc'd in, whereas he stood:
'O Jove,' quoth she, 'why was not I a flood!'

VII.
Fair is my love, but not so fair as fickle;
Mild as a dove, but neither true nor trusty;
Brighter than glass, and yet, as glass is, brittle;
Softer than wax, and yet, as iron, rusty:
A lily pale, with damask dye to grace her;
None fairer, nor none falser to deface her.
Her lips to mine how often hath she join'd,
Between each kiss her oaths of true love swearing!
How many tales to please me hath she coin'd,
Dreading my love, the loss thereof still fearing!
Yet in the midst of all her pure protestings,
Her faith, her oaths, her tears, and all were jestings.
She burn'd with love, as straw with fire flameth;
She burn'd out love, as soon as straw out burneth;
She fram'd the love, and yet she foil'd the framing;
She bade the love last, and yet she fell a-turning.
Was this a lover, or a lecher whether?
Bad in the best, though excellent in neither.

VIII.
If music and sweet poetry agree,
As they must needs, the sister and the brother,
Then must the love be great 'twixt thee and me,
Because thou lov'st the one, and I the other.
Dowland to thee is dear, whose heavenly touch
Upon the lute doth ravish human sense;
Spenser to me, whose deep conceit is such
As, passing all conceit, needs no defence.
Thou lov'st to hear the sweet melodious sound
That Phoebus' lute, the queen of music, makes;
And I in deep delight am chiefly drown'd
Whenas himself to singing he betakes.
One god is god of both, as poets feign;
One knight loves both, and both in thee remain.

IX.
Fair was the morn when the fair queen of love,

Fairer for sorrow than her milk-white dove,
For Adon's sake, a younger proud and wild;
Her stand she takes upon a steep-up hill:
Anon Adonis comes with horn and hounds;
She, silly queen, with more than love's good will,
Forbade the boy he should not pass those grounds:
'Once,' quoth she, 'did I see a fair sweet youth
Here in these brakes deep-wounded with a boar,
Deep in the thigh, a spectacle of ruth!
See, in my thigh,' quoth she, 'here was the sore.'
She showed hers; he saw more wounds than one,
And blushing fled, and left her all alone.

X.
Sweet rose, fair flower, untimely pluck'd, soon vaded,
Pluck'd in the bad, and vaded in the spring!
Bright orient pearl, allack! too timely shaded;
Fair creature, kill'd too soon by death's sharp sting!
Like a green plum that hangs upon a tree,
And falls, through wind, before the fall should be.
I weep for thee, and yet no cause I have;
For why thou leftst me nothing in thy will:
nd yet thou left'st me more than I did crave;
or why I craved nothing of thee still:
O yes, dear friend, I pardon crave of thee,
Thy discontent thou didst bequeath to me.

XI.

Enus, with young Adonis sitting by her under a myrtle shade, began to woo him:
he told the youngling how god Mars did try
her,
and as he fell to her, so fell she to him.
Even thus, 'quoth she, 'the war-like god
embrac'd me,'
and then she clipp'd Adonis in her arms;
Even thus, 'quoth she, 'the war-like god unlac'd me,'
as if the boy should use like loving charms.
Even thus, 'quoth she, 'he seized on my lips,'
and with her lips on his did act the seizure;
and as she fetched breath, away he skips,
and would not take her meaning nor her pleasure.
Ah! that I had my lady at this bay,
To kiss and clip me till I ran away.

XII.

Crabbed age and youth cannot live together;
Youth is full of pleasance, age is full of care;
Youth like summer morn, age like winter weather;
Youth like summer brave, age like winter bare.
Youth is full of sport, age's breath is short;
Youth is nimble, age is lame;
Youth is hot and bold, age is weak and cold;
Youth is wild, and age is tame.
Age, I do abhor thee; youth, I do adore thee;
O! my love, my love is young;
Age, I do defy thee; O! sweet shepherd, lie thee,
For methinks thou stay'st too long.

XIII.

Beauty is but a vain and doubtful good;
A shining gloss that vadeth suddenly;
A flower that dies when first it 'gins to bud;
A brittle glass that's broken presently;
A doubtful good, a gloss, a glass, a flower,
Lost, vaded, broken, dead within an hour.

And as goods lost are seld or never found,
As vaded gloss no rubbing will refresh,
As flowers dead lie wither'd on the ground,
As broken glass no cement can redress,
So beauty blemish'd once's for ever lost,
In spite of physic, painting, pain, and cost.

XIV.

Good night, good rest. Ah! neither be my share:
She bade good night that kept my rest away;
And daff'd me to a cabin hang'd with care,
To descend on the doubts of my decay.
'Farewell,' quoth she, 'and come again tomorrow.'
Fare well I could not, for I supp'd with sorrow.

Yet at my parting sweetly did she smile,
In scorn or friendship, nil I construe whether:
'T may be, she joy'd to jest at my exile,
'T may be, again to make me wander thither:
'Wander,' a word for shadows like thyself,
As take the pain, but cannot pluck the pelf.

Lord! how mine eyes throw gazes to the east;
My heart doth charge the watch; the morning rise
Doth cite each moving sense from idle rest.
Not daring trust the office of mine eyes,
While Philomela sits and sings, I sit and mark,
And wish her lays were tuned like the lark;

For she doth welcome daylight with her ditty,
And drives away dark dismal-dreaming night:
The night so pack'd, I post unto my pretty;
Heart hath his hope, and eyes their wished sight;
Sorrow chang'd to solace, solace mix'd with sorrow;
For why, she sigh'd and bade me come tomorrow.

Were I with her, the night would post too soon;
But now are minutes added to the hours;
To spite me now, each minute seems a moon;
Yet not for me, shine sun to succour flowers!
Pack night, peep day; good day, of night
now borrow:
Short, night, to-night, and length thyself tomorrow.

I.

It was a lording's daughter, the fairest one of three,
That liked of her master as well as well might be,
Till looking on an Englishman, the fair'st that eye could see,
Her fancy fell a-turning.

Long was the combat doubtful that love with love did fight,
To leave the master loveless, or kill the gallant knight:
To put in practice either, alas! it was a spite
Unto the silly damsel.

But one must be refused; more mickle was the pain
That nothing could be used to turn them both to gain,
For of the two the trusty knight was wounded with disdain:
Alas! she could not help it.

Thus art with arms contending was victor of the day,
Which by a gift of learning did bear the maid away;
Then lullaby, the learned man bath got the lady gay;
For now my song is ended.

II.

On a day, alack the day!
Love, whose month was ever May,
Spied a blossom passing fair,
Playing in the wanton air:
Through the velvet leaves the wind,
All unseen, 'gan passage find;
That the lover, sick to death,
Wish'd himself the heaven's breath.
'Air,' quoth he, 'thy cheeks may blow;
Air, would I might triumph so!
But, alas! my hand hath sworn Ne'er to pluck thee from thy thorn:
Vow, alack! for youth unmeet:
Youth, so apt to pluck a sweet.
Thou for whom Jove would swear
Juno but an Ethiop were;
And deny himself for Jove,
Turning mortal for thy love.'

III.

My flocks feed not,
My ewes breed not,
My rams speed not,
All is amiss:
Love's denying,
Faith's defying,
Heart's reining,
Causer of this.
All my merry jigs are quite forgot,
All my lady's love is lost, God wot:
Where her faith was firmly fix'd in love,
There a nay is plac'd without remove,
One silly cross
Wrought all my loss:
O! frowning Fortune, cursed, fickle dame;
For now I see
Inconstancy
More in women than in men remain,

In black mourn I,
All fears scorn I,
Love hath forlorn me,
Living in thrall:
Heart is bleeding,
All help needing,
O! cruel speeding,
Fraughted with gail,
My shepherd's pipe can sound no deal,
My wether's bell rings doleful knell;
My curtail dog, that wont to have play'd,
Plays not at all, but seems afraid;
My sighs so deep
Procure to weep,
In howling wise, to see my doleful plight.
How sighs resound
Through heartless ground,
Like a thousand vanquish'd men in bloody fight!

Clear wells spring not,
Sweet birds sing not,
Green plants bring not
Forth their dye;
Herds stand weeping,
Flocks all sleeping,
Nymphs back peeping
Fearfully:
All our pleasure known to us poor swains,
All our merry meetings on the plains,
All our evening sport from us is fled,
All our love is lost, for Love is dead.
arewell, sweet lass,
by like ne'er was
For a sweet content, the cause of all my moan:
or Corydon
Just live alone;
Other help for him I see that there is none.

IV.
Whenas thine eye hath chose the dame,
And stall'd the deer that thou should'st strike,
Yet reason rule things worthy blame,
as well as fancy partial wight:
Take counsel of some wiser head,
Neither too young nor yet unwed.

And when thou com'st thy tale to tell,
Smooth not thy tongue with filed talk,
lest she some subtle practice smell;
A cripple soon can find a halt:
But plainly say thou lov'st her well,
And set thy person forth to sell.

What though her frowning brows be bent,
Her cloudy looks will clear ere night;
And then too late she will repent
That thus dissembled her delight;
And twice desire, ere it be day;
That which with scorn she put away.

What though she strive to try her strength,
And ban and bawl, and say thee nay,
Her feeble force will yield at length,
When craft hath taught her thus to say,
"Had women been so strong as men,
In faith, you had not had it then."

And to her will frame all thy ways;
Spare not to spend, and chiefly there
Where thy desert may merit praise,
By ringing in thy lady's ear:
The strongest castle, tower, and town,
The golden bullet beats it down.

Serve always with assured trust,
And in thy suit be humble true;
Unless thy lady prove unjust,
Seek never thou to change anew.
When time shall serve, be thou not slack
To proffer, though she put thee back.

The widows and grills that women work,
Dissembled with an outward show,
The tricks and toys that in them lurk,
The cock that trends them shall not know.
Have you not heard it said full oft,
A woman's nay doth stand for nought?

Think, women love to match with men
And not to live so like a saint:
Here is no heaven; they holy then
Begin when age doth them attain.
Were kisses all the joys in bed,
One woman would another wed.

But, soft! enough! too much, I fear;
For if my mistress hear my song,
She will not stick to ring my ear,
To teach my tongue to be so long:
Yet will she blush, here be it said,
To hear her secrets be bewray'd.

V.
Live with me, and be my love,
And we will all the pleasures prove
That hills and valleys, dales and fields,
And all the craggy mountains yields.

There will we sit upon the rocks,
And see the shepherds feed their flocks,
By shallow rivers, by whose falls
Melodious birds sing madrigals.

There will I make thee a bed of roses,
With a thousand fragrant posies,
A cap of flowers, and a kirtle
Embroider'd all with leaves of myrtle.

A belt of straw and ivy buds,
With coral clasps and amber studs;
And if these pleasures may thee move,
Then live with me and be my love.

LOVE'S ANSWER.
If that the world and love were young,
And truth in every shepherd's tongue,
These pretty pleasures might me move
To live with thee and be thy love.

VI.
As it fell upon a day
In the merry month of May,
Sitting in a pleasant shade
Which a grove of myrtles made,
Beasts did leap, and birds did sing,
Trees did grow, and plants did spring;
Every thing did banish moan,
Save the nightingale alone:
She, poor bird, as all forlorn,
Lean'd her breast up-till a thorn,
And there sung the dolefull'st ditty,
That to hear it was great pity:
"Fie, fie, fie! now would she cry;
'Teren, Teren!' by and by;
That to hear her so complain,
Searce I could from tears refrain;
For her griefs, so lively shown,
Made me think upon mine own.
Ah! thought I, thou mourn'st in vain,
None takes pity on thy pain:
Senseless trees they cannot hear thee,
Ruthless beasts they will not cheer thee:
King Pandion he is dead,
All thy friends are lapp'd in lead,
All thy fellow birds do sing
Careless of thy sorrowing.
Even so, poor bird, like thee,
None alive will pity me.
Whilst as fickle Fortune smil'd,
Thou and I were both beguil'd.
Every one that flatters thee
Is no friend in misery.
Words are easy, like the wind;
Faithful friends are hard to find:
Every man will be thy friend
Whilst thou hast wherewith to spend;
But if store of crowns be scant,
No man will supply thy want.
If that one be prodigal,
Bountiful they will him call
SONNETS TO SUNDRY NOTES OF MUSIC.

And with such-like flattering,
'Pity but he were a king,' If he be addict to vice, Quickly him they will entice; If to women he be bent, They have him at commandement: But if Fortune once do frown, Then farewell his great renown; They that fawn'd on him before

Use his company no more. He that is thy friend indeed, He will help thee in thy need: If thou sorrow, he will weep; If thou wake, he cannot sleep: Thus of every grief in heart He with thee does bear a part. These are certain signs to know Faithful friend from flattering foe.

THE PHŒNIX AND THE TURTLE.

LET the bird of loudest lay On the sole Arabian tree, Herald sad and trumpet be, To whose sound chaste wings obey,

But thou shrieking harbinger, Foul precurrer of the fiend, Augur of the fever's end, To this troop come thou not near,

From this session interdict Every fowl of tyrant wing, Save the eagle, feather'd king: Keep the obsequy so strict.

Let the priest in surplice white That defunctive music can, Be the death-divining swan, Lest the requiem lack his right,

And thou treble-dated crow, That thy sable gender mak'st With the breath thou giv'st and tak'st, 'Mongst our mourners shalt thou go.

Here the anthem doth commence: Love and constancy is dead; Phænix and the turtle fled In a mutual flame from hence.

So they lov'd, as love in twain Had the essence but in one; Two distincts, division none: Number there in love was slain.

Hearts remote, yet not asunder; Distance, and no space was seen 'Twixt the turtle and his queen: But in them it were a wonder.

So between them love did shine, That the turtle saw his right Flaming in the phænix' sight; Either was the other's vine.

Property was thus appall'd, That the self was not the same; Single nature's double name Neither two nor one was call'd.

Reason, in itself confounded, Saw division grow together; To themselves yet either neither, Simple were so well compounded,

That it cried, 'How true a twain Seemeth this concordant one! Love hath reason, reason none, If what parts can so remain.'

Whereupon it made this threne To the phænix and the dove, Co-supremes and stars of love, As chorus to their tragic scene.

THRENOS.

Beauty, truth, and rarity, Grace in all simplicity, Here enclos'd in cinders lie.

Death is now the phœnix' nest; And the turtle's loyal breast To eternity doth rest, Leaving no posterity: 'Twas not their infirmity, It was married chastily.

Truth may seem, but cannot be; Beauty brag, but 'tis not she; Truth and beauty buried be.

To this urn let those repair That are either true or fair; For these dead birds sigh a prayer.
